ANNEX

CONCLUSIONS OF THE INFORMAL MEETINGS OF THE FOURTH COMMITTEE

As a follow-up to the proposal made by the Chairman of the Fourth Committee during the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly that a Working Group should be established by the Fourth Committee in response to comments made by a number of delegations on its work, the Acting Chairman of the Fourth Committee convened four meetings of the Committee to consider those issues.

The first meeting was held on 5 March 1991. The 2nd, 3rd and 4th meetings took place, respectively, on 10 and 17 April and 4 June. More than a third of the United Nations membership, including most administering Powers, participated in each of those meetings. Items discussed included:

- (a) the language of decolonization resolutions submitted to the General Assembly;
- (b) the practice of references to extraneous issues;
- (c) the question of selective name-calling;
- (d) the form and content of resolutions submitted to the General Assembly;
- (e) the streamlining of work, procedure and structure; and
- (f) the restoration of full co-operation with the administering Powers with a special emphasis on the question of United Nations visiting missions.

The meetings were generally attended at a high level.

The Bureau of the Fourth Committee, after reviewing the extensive exchange of views that took place during those meetings, would like to propose the following conclusions:

I: Language of Resolutions

The overwhelming majority of delegations that attended the informal meetings were of the view that the language of the resolutions on decolonization issues should reflect the positive trends which now prevail in international relations, while highlighting as accurately as possible the realities and circumstances that prevail in the Territories. In this connection, reference should be made in those resolutions to all the options that are available to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories. It was also suggested by some delegations that statements on the activities of foreign economic and other interests should be more balanced, in order to take into account those activities which undoubtedly contribute to the economic and social development of those Territories. Generally speaking, the language should aim at restoring confidence among all concerned and not at generating confrontation.

II: Extraneous Issues

Delegations concluded that references to extraneous issues should be excluded or reduced to the minimum, and that United Nations decolonization activities should concentrate on the remaining Territories to which the Declaration applies. In this connection, every effort should be made to avoid selective name-calling.

III: Question of apartheid

On the relevance of the question of apartheid in the context of the Fourth Committee, various views were expressed. Some of the speakers suggested that the apartheid question should not cloud consideration of the issues confronting the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories. A number of delegations felt that it was proper and within the mandate of the Fourth Committee to continue to consider the question of apartheid.

IV: Resolutions

Resolutions should be concise and focus on the subject under consideration in order to avoid overlapping and repetition. It is hoped that decolonization resolutions would henceforth give the highest priority to the situation in the remaining Territories, most of them islands in the Caribbean and the Pacific which need special consideration. In this connection, the Fourth Committee informal meetings took note with satisfaction of the progress made in that respect by the Special Committee of 24 in adopting a format for an "omnibus" resolution for 10 Territories considered by the Sub-Committee on Small Territories.

V: Special Committee of 24 Structure

The Fourth Committee informal meetings also noted with appreciation the decision taken by the Special Committee of 24 to merge the Sub-Committee on Small Territories and the Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance effective

1 January 1992. It considered such a decision a very important streamlining step which will benefit the future work of the Fourth Committee.

VI: Cooperation of Administering Powers

The Fourth Committee informal meetings attach great importance to the cooperation of all the administering Powers in the decolonization process.

The participants recommended that every effort be made to restore full confidence and cooperation between the administering Powers and the United Nations decolonization organs. In this connection, particular emphasis was placed on 3 aspects of cooperation between the administering Powers and the United Nations:

(a) The question of visiting missions: The participants called upon the administering Powers to resume full cooperation in that respect by inviting regular United Nations visiting missions to the Territories under their administration.

(b) The regular provision of timely and up-to-date information on Non-Self-Governing Territories to the Secretary-General of the United Nations as prescribed by Article 73 g of the Charter.

(c) The participation of the administering Powers in the work of the United Nations decolonization organs.

VII: Fourth Committee Informal Meetings

Some delegations considered that more discussions and consultations should take place on draft resolutions and decisions in the Fourth Committee before they are recommended to the plenary meeting of the General Assembly for adoption.

Comment

The Bureau of the Fourth Committee suggests that this paper serve as the basis for the Chairman's on-going consultations with the Special Committee of 24. The Chairman would propose to draw on this paper at the organizational meeting of the Fourth Committee at the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly.

The Bureau would like to record the spirit of cooperation among delegations that characterized these informal meetings, as well as the harmonious and productive way in which these meetings and those of the Special Committee worked together to similar ends.
