COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS
Forty-ninth session
Item 11 of the provisional agenda

FURTHER PROMOTION AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF HUMAN RIGHTS AND FUNDAMENTAL FREEDOMS, INCLUDING THE QUESTION OF THE PROGRAMME AND METHODS OF
WORK OF THE COMMISSION

Regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights

Report of the Secretary-General submitted in accordance with paragraph 12 of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1992/52

Introduction

1. In its resolution 1992/52 of 3 March 1992, entitled "Regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights", the Commission on Human Rights, "reaffirming that regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights may make a major contribution to the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms and that the exchange of information and experience in this field among the regions, within the United Nations system, may be improved", noted with interest "that various contacts between regional bodies and commissions and the United Nations have continued to be pursued and strengthened through advisory services and technical assistance activities, with a view to the exchange of information and experience in the field of human rights".

2. In the same resolution, the Commission on Human Rights invited "States in areas where regional arrangements in the field of human rights do not yet exist to consider agreements with a view to the establishment within their respective regions of suitable regional machinery for the promotion and protection of human rights". It endorsed "the efforts of the Centre for Human Rights to enhance cooperation between the United Nations and regional and national institutions, particularly in the field of advisory services and technical assistance, public information and education in the field of human rights".

GE.93-10091 (E)

3. The Commission stressed "the importance of the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights and renewed its appeal to all Governments to consider making use of the possibilities offered by the United Nations under this programme of organizing information and/or training courses at the national level for government personnel on the application of international human rights standards and the experience of relevant international bodies". It also stressed "the importance of continuing to pay special attention to the most appropriate ways of assisting, at their request, countries of the different regions under the programme of advisory services and to make, where necessary, the relevant recommendations".

4. The Commission further requested the Secretary-General, as foreseen in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, "to continue to strengthen exchanges between the United Nations and regional intergovernmental organizations dealing with human rights and welcomed, in this connection, the fact that the Centre for Human Rights will continue to organize national, regional and subregional workshops and training courses for government officials engaged in the administration of justice and in the implementation of the international human rights instruments". The Commission invited "the organizers of regional meetings convened in preparation for the World Conference on Human Rights to promote further ratification of and accession to United Nations human rights treaties and the implementation of those universally accepted human rights standards". It requested "the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its forty-ninth session a report on the state of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights and to include the results of action taken in pursuance of the present resolution". The present report is submitted in response to that request. Information on the status of ratifications of States parties by region of the world with regard to the international human rights instruments is annexed to this report.

I. COOPERATION AND FURTHER ENCOURAGEMENT OF CONTACTS BETWEEN REGIONAL BODIES AND THE UNITED NATIONS

5. In accordance with directives of relevant United Nations organs that regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights should contribute to the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the Centre for Human Rights pursued and consolidated, throughout 1992, its contacts and cooperation with the established regional human rights intergovernmental organizations, namely the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights of the Organization of African Unity (OAS) and the Inter-American Commission on and Court of Human Rights.

6. The Centre for Human Rights is aware of the importance of exchanging information with these organizations. One central theme of regular information exchanges concerns the status of ratifications of international and regional human rights instruments developed under the respective systems. The Centre is currently preparing a new compilation of international and regional human rights instruments to replace Human Rights: A Compilation of International Instruments. Another new volume, incorporating information on instruments contained in the revised compilation, is also being prepared and will replace Human Rights: Status of International Instruments.

7. Collaboration and information exchange also take place between the Centre and a wide variety of institutions and organizations operating in different regions of the world. These include the Human Rights Unit of the Commonwealth Secretariat; the International Institute of Human Rights at Strasbourg, France; the Institute of Humanitarian Law at San Remo, Italy; the Inter-American Institute of Human Rights at San José, Costa Rica; the Andean Commission of Jurists at Lima, Peru; the African Centre for Democracy and Human Rights Studies at Banjul, the Gambia; the Arab Institute for Human Rights at Tunis, Tunisia; the International Centre for Sociological, Penal and Penitentiary Research and Studies at Messina, Italy; the International Institute for Higher Studies in Criminal Science at Siracusa, Italy; the Institute Henri Dunant at Geneva, Switzerland; the Raoul Wallenberg Institute of the University of Lund, Sweden and the United Nations regional economic and social commissions.

8. During 1992, the Centre for Human Rights continued to pursue and strengthen, through its advisory services and technical assistance programme, the promotion of human rights at the regional level particularly through information and experience exchange. These activities, which included training courses, seminars, workshops, the award of fellowships and the provision of specialist advice on legal matters and institution-building, are described in detail in the report of the Secretary-General to the Commission on advisory services in the field of human rights (E/CN.4/1993/61). Additional information may also be found in the report of the Secretary-General on regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights in the Asian and Pacific region, prepared pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1992/40 (E/CN.4/1993/31). The information contained in these reports will not be repeated in the present document apart from brief references, where necessary, under the various sections below which deal with specific regions.

9. The Centre, in cooperation with the Department of Public Information (DPI), continued its efforts to ensure that the libraries of United Nations information centres in various regions of the world contain comprehensive documentation and reference services in the field of human rights. The mechanisms by which the Centre's own publications are distributed is currently under review. Efforts are being made to develop a system of precisely targeted and effective dissemination by which all regions of the world will have ready access to information and reference materials on human rights. A full overview of the Centre's information programme and of the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights which was launched by the General Assembly in 1988 may be found in the report of the Secretary-General (E/CN.4/1993/29).

A. Africa

10. Within the framework of the Organization of African Unity, the African system for the protection of human rights is laid down in the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights. In accordance with the Charter, the supervisory organ of the system is the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights.

11. Cooperation between the United Nations and the African regional system was promoted through a number of seminars, training courses and workshops organized by the Centre for Human Rights in collaboration with several organizations based both within and outside the region including the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, the Raoul Wallenberg Institute, the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute, the Centre Against Apartheid, the International Institute of Humanitarian Law and the International Institute of Human Rights at Strasbourg.

12. In Namibia, Sao Tome and Principe and Benin, the Centre conducted needs assessment missions. Electoral assistance was provided in Lesotho. In Swaziland, training courses were delivered. The Centre organized a seminar on human rights and democratic elections in Angola. In South Africa, assistance consisted in the development of a country programme framework, fellowships and meetings of fellows on priorities for human rights assistance. The Centre also provides financial support to the Arab Institute for Human Rights at Tunis and the African Centre for Democracy and Human Rights Studies at Banjul for training courses and documentation.

13. In addition to these specific projects, the Centre also continued its programme of technical cooperation with the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights. Several components of this programme are specifically directed towards providing the Commission with the human and logistical support it requires in its work of protecting and promoting human rights in the African region. Other components are aimed at providing institution-building support for the establishment of the necessary infrastructure to assist the African Commission in the conduct of its activities.

B. Asia and the Pacific

14. There are 49 States in the Asian and Pacific region. The region is without formal, intergovernmental human rights infrastructure although the question of regional intergovernmental institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights has been the subject of continuing consultations. Further details in this regard may be found in the separate report to the Commission (E/CN.4/1993/31).

15. In 1992, the Centre for Human Rights continued its cooperation with the Executive Secretary of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) for the establishment of a depository centre for United Nations human rights materials within the Commission's headquarters at Bangkok. In this connection, the Centre notified member States of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1992/40. The views expressed in replies received from Governments and the views of the Commission itself, as well as those of other United Nations bodies active in the region, may be found in the above-mentioned report. In cooperation with the Government of Indonesia, the Centre is organizing an Asia-Pacific Workshop in Jakarta from 26 to 28 January 1993 on Human Rights Issues: National Institutions and Regional Arrangements.

16. During the period under review, the Centre also continued its activities in the region under the advisory services and technical assistance programme. Technical assistance was provided to Mongolia in order to assist the Government of that country in the democratization process. Assistance was also provided to the Government of Nepal and a training course on preparing reports to the various committees established under the international human rights conventions was organized in the Islamic Republic of Iran following a request from that country.

C. Europe

17. The Council of Europe's regional system for the protection of human rights includes the European Commission of Human Rights and the European Court of Human Rights, each of which performs a specific, complementary function under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

18. Collaboration between the Centre for Human Rights and the Council of Europe continued to develop in both directions. The Centre participated in a number of meetings organized by the Council of Europe and is exploring further possibilities for cooperation, particularly with regard to human rights projects in Central and Eastern Europe.

19. In Albania, the Centre conducted a needs assessment mission and training courses for police, prison and military officials on human rights and the administration of criminal justice. In Bulgaria and Hungary, financial assistance is provided for the translation and publication of Human Rights: A Compilation of Human Rights Instruments and for a manual for teaching human rights in primary and secondary schools. In Romania, the Centre provided electoral assistance and organized training courses for police, prison and military officials, as well as seminars for judges, lawyers and procurators on human rights in the administration of criminal justice. Financial support was provided to Poland for training, documentation and equipment needs in the field of human rights.

D. The Americas

20. The Inter-American system of human rights includes the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, both of which have been established as regional bodies for the promotion and protection of human rights and have been accorded specific functions and powers in accordance with the American Convention on Human Rights, and consistent with the principles of the American Declaration on the Rights and Duties of Man. The Centre for Human Rights is involved on a number of levels with these and other Organization of American States (OAS) agencies and is working towards continuing and expanding cooperation. Within that context, in November 1992, in cooperation with OAS, the Centre held at United Nations Headquarters in New York a workshop on the situation of human rights in Haiti. The workshop was directed at Haitian human rights non-governmental organizations.

21. The Centre also organizes a number of activities in the region under its programme of advisory services and technical assistance. A conference on practical experience gained by indigenous peoples in achieving self-sufficient, lasting and environmentally sustainable development was held in Santiago in May 1992 in cooperation with the Chilean Government. A number of specific country projects were also initiated or continued in 1992. In Colombia and Paraguay, since 1990, in cooperation with UNDP, the Centre has been providing consultants, lecturers, fellowships and relevant documentation and assistance in both the organization of national workshops and training courses on human rights and in conducting a national promotion and awareness campaign. Assistance has also been provided to Uruguay since 1990, including training courses for law enforcement officers (in 1992). In Guatemala, the Centre organized two field missions for the Independent Expert on Guatemala, Professor Christian Tomuschat (Germany), who visited the country in February, September and October 1992, to examine the human rights situation. In addition, it provided the services of a consultant to the Guatemalan Congress to assist in the elaboration of a law on indigenous populations.

22. Within the framework of the World Conference on Human Rights, scheduled for 1993, the Latin American Group decided to organise, at San José, Costa Rica, in January 1993, a preparatory meeting to discuss issues which will be raised at the conference.

II. CONCLUSION

23. During the period covered by the medium-term plan 1992-1997, the Secretary-General will continue to strengthen exchanges between the United Nations and regional intergovernmental organizations dealing with human rights. These organizations are in a valuable position to strengthen human rights norms and cooperation between the international and regional systems can only be mutually beneficial. For these reasons, the Centre for Human Rights will continue to organize national, regional and subregional workshops, training courses and seminars for specialized target audiences involved directly or indirectly in the implementation of the standards contained in the international human rights instruments.

24. The Centre recognizes that the core component of any human rights promotional programme must inevitably be the instruments themselves and for this reason it fully intends to continue and, where possible, to expand production and dissemination of local language versions of the Universal Declaration and the two International Covenants on Human Rights. Where resources permit, the Centre will also continue to support projects aimed at translating and disseminating comprehensive compilations of human rights instruments into local and regional languages. The Commission on Human Rights may wish to continue to encourage States parties to the major international human rights covenants to disseminate these in appropriate languages, as widely as possible. States parties could also be encouraged to cooperate with local non-governmental organizations in ensuring that the national community is aware of the standards to which its Government has subscribed at the international level.
