PREFACE

Background

1. The Central Product Classification (CPC) Version 1.0, which was considered and approved by the United Nations Statistical Commission at its twenty-ninth session, in 1997,¹ replaces the Provisional Central Product Classification (Provisional CPC).² In developing CPC Version 1.0, the main intention was to revise and update those parts of the provisional document that needed further refinement in order to change its provisional status. Particular attention was paid to the services part of the classification.
2. The work on developing CPC Version 1.0 consisted of the following stages, leading to its approval by the Statistical Commission at its twenty-ninth session. The members of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics, an informal consultative forum of experts, used and tested the services part of the classification in the important area of business services and reported on their experience at the annual meetings of the Group. In the light of their experience, they formulated recommendations for changes to the services part of the Provisional CPC and presented a report to the Statistical Commission at its twenty-eighth session, in 1995. Subsequently, at the request of the Commission, the Voorburg Group undertook the task of preparing a draft revision of those parts of the Provisional CPC that related to services, on the understanding that the entire CPC Version 1.0 would be subject to further revisions which would be conducted at regular intervals.
3. The members of the classifications subgroup of the Voorburg Group made significant contributions to the preparation of CPC Version 1.0, with Statistics Canada playing the key role of coordinator in the process. Without the valuable voluntary contributions of the statistical agencies of Australia, Austria, Canada, France, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the United States of America and the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat), it would not have been possible to complete CPC Version 1.0. Particular acknowledgements go to the members of the classifications subgroup of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics - Shaila Nijhowne, Coordinator (Canada), Michel Beekman (Netherlands), Lyn Blair (Australia), Michel Boeda (France), Pamela Powell Hill (United States), David Knight (United Kingdom), Niels Langkjaer (Eurostat) and Norbert Rainer (Austria) - and to Cathy Connors (Canada) for administrative support.
4. The final review and completion phase of CPC Version 1.0 was also a cooperative effort, which was further supported by the collaboration of additional persons who participated in activities of the classifications subgroup of the Voorburg Group. They include Carol Ambler (United States), Emile Bruneau (France), Mary Chamie (United Nations Statistics Division), Pierre Latrille (World Trade Organization), Mark Pollard (United Kingdom) and John Struik (Australia). The United Nations Statistics Division and the Voorburg Group established close working relationship with the World Trade Organization secretariat for the purpose of conducting a thorough technical review of changes between the Provisional CPC and CPC Version 1.0, owing to the fact that CPC was used as a source in the context of the preparation of the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS).³ In addition to those persons already mentioned, thanks are due to many staff members of the contributing national and international agencies for their substantive assistance and the important work conducted. Finally, Virgilio Castillo, Magdolna Csizmadia and Sonia Rose of the United Nations Statistics Division and Robert Smith of Statistics Canada deserve recognition for their contribution to finalizing CPC Version 1.0 and preparing it for publication.

5. The focus of attention in this round of revisions was the part of the classification relating to services. Thus, the overwhelming majority of changes introduced from the Provisional CPC to CPC Version 1.0 were made in sections 5 to 9, dealing with services. However, some changes were also made to other sections of the classification. The Voorburg Group took the initiative of bringing the goods part of the Provisional CPC up to date with the 1996 edition of the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (HS)⁴ and the United Nations Statistics Division brought it up to date with the latest version of the Standard International Trade Classification (SITC Rev.3).⁵ These changes, together with necessary corrections in the corresponding International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC Rev. 3),⁶ were incorporated into CPC in sections 0 to 4 and are summarized in part five (Correspondence tables) below. However, apart from these limited changes, no overall review or revision of sections 0 to 4 of the Provisional CPC relating to goods has been undertaken for Version 1.0.

6. The present publication consists of six parts. Part one contains the introduction, which provides basic information on the conceptual background, purpose, principles and applications of this classification. Part two shows the broad structure of CPC Version 1.0 at the one- and two-digit levels. Part three contains the detailed classification structure, showing, for sections 0 to 4, the correspondence with HS96 and SITC Rev.3 in separate columns for each subclass (five-digit category) of CPC Version 1.0; the principal industry of origin in terms of ISIC Rev.3 is indicated throughout. Part four consists of the explanatory notes for categories in sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0 that have been significantly revised from the provisional version. Part four also contains an annex presenting an alternative classification for division 71 (Financial intermediation, insurance and auxiliary services). Part five comprises correspondence tables showing the linkage in both directions between sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0 and the Provisional CPC, as well as a table of changes in sections 0 to 4 of CPC Version 1.0, providing a list of categories affected by changes from the Provisional CPC. Part six contains an English alphabetical index to sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0. The detailed structure of CPC Version 1.0, the explanatory notes, correspondence tables and alphabetical index of sections 5 to 9 are also available in electronic format, upon request, from the United Nations Statistics Division.

Summary of main changes

7. The revision has concentrated mainly on improving the detail in sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0. However, certain changes have been made in the structure of the classification.

Intangible assets; land; constructions; construction services (section 5)

8. "Intangible assets" and "Land" have been moved and placed before "Constructions", which in turn have been placed before "Construction services". The types of construction listed under division 53 (Constructions), can be regarded as non-transportable goods and as assets. In this version, "Constructions" have been treated as they were in the Provisional CPC. Thus, the types of assets that were included in the Provisional CPC have been left as part of CPC Version 1.0.

9. "Construction services" describe the services provided by general contractors or the special trade construction services that are provided at the request of a client. For general contractors, they are listed in terms of the type of construction put in place, a list that can be related to that of "Constructions". Special trade construction services are described in terms of the type of service provided.

Wholesale and retail trade services (divisions 61 and 62)

10. Divisions 61 and 62 cover distributive trades that offer a service related to the sale of goods. The output of wholesale and retail trade is measured in terms of margins by product and margins may differ depending upon the kind of business and the bundle of services provided with the sale of the good. The transaction in this case is the sale of a good. It is clear, however, that there are two dimensions to the sale. There are the different types of wholesaling or retailing services offered and there are different types of goods sold. Two kinds of wholesale trade services are distinguished in CPC Version 1.0 and five kinds of retail trade services.

11. As it is evident that there is equal interest in measuring output in terms of the type of goods sold, a grouping of goods is also provided, so that data on goods sold can be collected and compared across all the different forms of wholesale and retail trade services. This list of goods is presented in such a way that it can be used to collect information from any of the types of trade services. It can be used as the first breakdown of wholesale and retail trade or it can be cross-classified with the seven different types of trade. Although a common list of goods is provided, not all the goods listed are handled by both wholesalers and retailers. Users must choose the appropriate products and product groupings when associating them with the different forms of wholesale and retail trade services. The combinations of goods associated with each form of wholesale and retail trade services are likely to vary from country to country. The list of goods provided in the classification can be used as a reference list and the categories are shown with asterisks (1 to 99). They may be used either as the only breakdown of division 61 (Wholesale trade services) and division 62 (Retail trade services) or with any of the three-digit CPC groups under wholesale or retail trade services. In the correspondence tables, however, all possible combinations have been listed and the correspondences with the Provisional CPC identified.

Transport services (divisions 64-67)

12. The same two-dimensional issue of types of services provided and goods transported arises in the case of transportation. In this case, however, no list of goods has been provided. In this version only different types of transportation services are listed.

Electricity distribution services; gas and water distribution services through mains (division 69)

13. A new division has been created for the distribution of electricity, gas and water, which is now treated as a service separate from their production.

Financial intermediation, insurance and auxiliary services (division 71)

14. There is as yet no international agreement on how the output of financial intermediation services should be defined and measured. For this reason no detailed subclasses are shown in CPC Version 1.0. However, an alternative, more detailed classification of these services has been provided in the annex to part four of the present publication for users who may wish to estimate their output. In this alternative version, the classification of financial services has been simplified and the imbalance between deposit and loan services found in the Provisional CPC has been corrected.

Other professional, scientific and technical services (division 83)

15. Computer services, which were grouped together in division 84 of the Provisional CPC (Computer and related services) have now been assigned to separate parts of CPC Version 1.0. All computer consultancy (including the development of customized software), computer facilities management and systems maintenance have been moved to "Consulting and management services" within division 83. Data processing has been moved to "Other support services" (group 859) and is described under subclass 85960 (Data processing services). The development of packaged software products is to be regarded as an activity of the computer services industry that results in the production of a good (CPC 47520, HS 8524).

16. It is possible to consider "Engineering services" (group 833) from two points of view. First, the different types of engineering services offered to clients can be distinguished. Second, it is possible to distinguish engineering services in terms of the kind of project for which the services are required. Both types of engineering services are important. It is possible to regard either dimension as primary. In CPC Version 1.0, the types of engineering services offered to clients are each shown detailed by type of project. In principle, the same applies to architectural services, but, in collecting information, the same need to associate architectural services with the project does not seem to arise, so the project dimension has not been articulated under "Architectural services" (class 8321).

Telecommunications services; information retrieval and supply services (division 84)

17. These two sets of services have been brought together into one division and a separate group for on-line access services such as the Internet has been created (group 842). With respect to telecommunications services, the goods and services being provided are undergoing such rapid change that the classes of the Provisional CPC were regarded as outdated. However, because the work required to propose a detailed alternative could not yet be undertaken, only a broad structure of telecommunications services is provided, under which countries can formulate a more detailed structure.

Support services (division 85)

18. A new division consisting largely of support services has been created from division 87 of the Provisional CPC.

Production services, on a fee or contract basis (division 86)

19. The goods produced by businesses primarily engaged in the activities of agriculture, forestry, fishing, hunting, mining and manufacturing are shown in sections 0 to 4 of CPC. Division 86 lists production services provided by the same businesses on a fee or contract basis or as custom work, generally using materials owned by the client. The division also includes production services, such as metal casting, where manufacturers produce goods on order, using material that is not necessarily owned by the client, and where it is not possible to identify the individual products produced, for classification to sections 0 to 4 of CPC. The production services in this division are those described as "services incidental to ..." in division 88 of the Provisional CPC, with the exception of maintenance and repair services, which are now part of division 87 of CPC Version 1.0.

Maintenance and repair services (division 87)

20. All maintenance and repair services have been brought together into one division.

Correspondence tables

21. For further information on changes to the Provisional CPC, correspondence tables have been provided that relate the detailed subclasses, classes, groups and divisions of sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0 to the Provisional CPC and vice versa (see part five below). In these tables an asterisk (*) beside a code indicates partial correspondence.

Explanatory notes

22. Explanatory notes are provided for sections 5 to 9 of CPC Version 1.0. In the revision process, the description of the content of many subclasses was clarified and improved. Furthermore, the notes have been changed from descriptive text into lists of products providing illustrative examples of what is included and what is not included in a certain CPC code. As these lists are not exhaustive, users may wish to request guidance from the United Nations Statistics Division on interpreting the content of CPC subclasses. The problems that are referred to the Statistics Division will provide the basis for the expansion and refinement of the explanatory notes in future revisions. Users of CPC Version 1.0 should be aware that the classification and its explanatory notes were developed solely for statistical purposes. Therefore, if reference is made to this classification in a legal text, such as a contract, those who prepared the text are responsible for interpreting and explaining their use of the classification.

Future work

23. As with any product classification, particularly in the early years of its development, CPC will need to be revised at relatively frequent intervals as further experience is gained with its use. It is expected that the detail of the goods part of the classification will be further examined and that the higher level structure of the whole classification will be further reviewed. It should be possible to produce a reference list of goods for transportation, as has been done for wholesale and retail trade. It is also hoped that in the next few years, after countries have undertaken further work, it will be possible to develop the classification in greater detail for financial intermediation services and telecommunication services. The area of public administration will be revised in the light of ongoing revisions to the United Nations Classification of the Functions of Government (COFOG).⁷

Part One

INTRODUCTION TO THE CENTRAL PRODUCT CLASSIFICATION

I. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

1. The need for the development of the Central Product Classification originated from initiatives in the early 1970s to harmonize international classifications, in which a standard classification of all products was perceived as a key element. At the seventeenth session of the Statistical Commission, in 1972,¹ the twenty-first session of the Conference of European Statisticians, in 1973, and meetings of members of both bodies with the secretariats of international organizations, there was general agreement on the need to improve harmonization among the various classifications in the economic and other fields that had been prepared under the auspices of the United Nations and other international bodies.

2. With regard to the preconditions of creating a comprehensive classification of all goods and services, an important development took place in the 1970s. The Customs Cooperation Council (CCC) undertook the revision of its nomenclature (CCCN) and its extension from a four-digit system to a six-digit system. As a result, a new nomenclature, called the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (HS) was adopted in 1983 and entered into force on 1 January 1988.² The Statistical Office of the United Nations Secretariat participated in the development of HS, mainly in order to ensure that the disaggregations applied in HS were, to the extent possible, consistent with the Standard International Trade Classification (SITC)³ of the United Nations and the industrial origin of the goods.

3. Based on the recommendations of an Expert Group convened by the United Nations Secretariat, the Statistical Commission at its nineteenth session, in 1976,⁴ approved a programme to harmonize the existing activity classifications of the United Nations, the European Communities and the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance and to simultaneously develop a system of different, but interrelated, classifications of economic activities and goods and services. Development of a new classification covering both goods and services (products) - the Central Product Classification (CPC) - was intended to provide a basic tool in this programme. The proposed product classification was to use the detailed subheadings of HS as building blocks for the part dealing with transportable goods and to take into account the basic categories of economic supply and use as specified in the System of National Accounts (SNA), such as intermediate consumption, final consumption, capital formation and imports and exports.⁵ The Statistical Commission endorsed the programme and supported its continuation at subsequent sessions, with the provision that existing systems maintain their essential character.⁶

4. During the period 1977-1987, the Statistical Office of the United Nations Secretariat and the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat) convened six meetings of the Joint Working Group on World Level Classifications for the purpose of developing an Integrated System of Classifications of Activities and Products (SINAP) to serve as an interim classification. It was intended that categories of SINAP be used as building blocks for the second revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC),⁷ the General Industrial Classification of Economic Activities within the European Communities (NACE),⁸ and for related classifications of goods and services. The joint Working Group also contributed proposals on the relationship between SITC and CPC.

5. During the period 1983-1988, the Statistical Office of the United Nations Secretariat organized a series of related expert group meetings dealing with economic classifications. Countries from different parts of the world and at various stages of development were represented in the meetings, as were regional commissions and international organizations. The main task of the meetings was to review the drafts of ISIC Rev.3 and CPC prepared by the Statistical Office.⁹

6. The first complete draft of CPC was reviewed by the Statistical Commission at its twenty-fourth session, in 1987.¹⁰ On the Commission's recommendation, work on CPC continued in conjunction with international organizations, in particular Eurostat and the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). The development of service classifications and related explanatory notes for service products was the main item on the agenda at the early meetings of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics.¹¹ In 1987 and 1988 the Joint Working Group on World Level Classifications and a United Nations expert group meeting reviewed subsequent drafts of CPC. The Expert Group on Harmonization of Economic Classifications recommended that the abbreviation CPC for Central Product Classification be included in the title, regardless of language, to facilitate international recognition when referring to the classification.¹²

7. The Statistical Commission at its twenty-fifth session, in 1989, considered the final draft and approved its publication as a provisional document.¹³ The Commission recommended that Member States start testing the Provisional CPC in order to gain experience in obtaining internationally comparable data on goods and services.

8. The Provisional CPC was published by the United Nations in 1991.¹⁴ The experience of national and international users provided a sound basis for its subsequent revision. In the revision of CPC, account was also taken of the experience gained in the development of the European Union's Classification of Products by Activity (CPA).¹⁵

9. Details of the revision process leading to the completion of the Central Product Classification Version 1.0 are contained in the preface above.

II. UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES OF THE CLASSIFICATION

A. Purpose and nature of the classification

10. The main purposes of CPC are to provide a framework for the international comparison of statistics dealing with goods, services and assets and to serve as a guide for developing or revising existing classification schemes of products in order to make them compatible with international standards. CPC was developed primarily to enhance harmonization among various fields of economic and related statistics and to strengthen the role of national accounts as an instrument for the coordination of economic statistics. It provides a basis for recompiling basic statistics from their original classifications into a standard classification for analytical use.

11. CPC constitutes a comprehensive classification of all goods and services. With regard to services, no international classification covering the whole spectrum of outputs of the various service industries and serving the different analytical needs of statistical and other users was available before the development of CPC. As a general-purpose classification, CPC provides less detail than other specific classification systems in areas or applications for which such systems are available, for example HS for international commodity trade statistics.

12. CPC includes categories for all products that can be the object of domestic or international transactions or that can be entered into stocks. It presents products that are an output of economic activity, including transportable goods, non-transportable goods and services. It also presents certain non-produced assets, such as land. CPC also includes legal instruments providing ownership over intangible assets, such as patents, licences, trademarks and copyrights. Although non-produced assets are not regarded as products in the System of National Accounts, they are included in the balance sheet.¹⁶ There is substantial national and international trade in land, intangible assets and related services, and a demand for such data. It was therefore considered useful to include these categories in CPC. While CPC covers selected assets, it was not the intention to include a comprehensive list of assets that would consist of land, constructions, machinery and equipment, or various other categories of assets, tangible and intangible, financial and non-financial, produced and non-produced, as described in SNA 1993.¹⁷

13. CPC, as a standard central product classification, was developed to serve as an instrument for assembling and tabulating all kinds of statistics requiring product detail. Such statistics may cover production, intermediate and final consumption, capital formation, foreign trade or prices. They may refer to commodity flows, stocks or balances and may be compiled in the context of input-output tables, balance of payments and other analytical presentations.

14. It is hoped that, in the long run, CPC will contribute to a reduction in the number of product classifications used internationally. As a general-purpose product classification, it serves as a guideline for future product-type classifications for specific areas of the economy. Such specific classifications should be compatible with the general framework of CPC so as to ensure comparability of data.

B. Principles used in constructing CPC

15. CPC, covering all goods and services as well as certain types of assets, is a system of categories that are both exhaustive and mutually exclusive. This means that if a product does not fit into a CPC category, it must automatically fit into another category. Consistent with the other principles used, homogeneity within categories is maximized. CPC classifies products into categories based on the physical properties and the intrinsic nature of the products as well as the principle of industrial origin.

16. Each subclass in sections 0 to 4 of CPC is defined as the equivalent of one or the aggregation of several headings or subheadings of the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (HS), a classification of the World Customs Organization.¹⁸ HS itself uses primarily the physical property criterion for classifying goods. With HS in use in many countries for international trade statistics and in some countries for production statistics, the introduction of CPC in those countries is thereby facilitated.

17. The physical properties and intrinsic nature of products are distinguishing characteristics that are proper to the products themselves. These include, for example, the raw materials of which goods are made, the stage of production or the way in which goods are produced or services rendered, the purpose or user category for which products are intended and the prices at which they are sold.

18. The importance of the industrial origin of goods and services was recognized by the attempt to group into one CPC subclass mainly the products that are the output of a single industry. Through their linkage to the industrial origin criteria, the input structure, technology and organization of production characteristics of products are also reflected in the structure of CPC. The industrial origin of products criterion is one of the classification principles applied by another United Nations classification, the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities.

19. In the construction of CPC, both criteria (i.e., the nature of the product and the industry of origin) were taken into account. However, practical difficulties had to be resolved. Some industries produce goods of very different nature. For example, meat and hides are both produced by slaughterhouses. These products are not put together in one category or even in the same section of CPC. Since unprocessed hides are considered raw animal materials, they are classified in section 0 (Agriculture, forestry and fishery products), whereas meat is classified in section 2, among food products.

20. In some cases, goods of different industrial origin are included in a single CPC category, particularly where HS does not follow the industrial origin criterion. For instance, rarely does HS distinguish between metal products of cast iron and other metal products. Moreover, many products made by casting are classified in HS as parts of machinery or other goods. As a result, CPC does not have a separate category of cast iron products, and therefore no reference is made to ISIC group 273 (Casting of metals).

21. Similar problems concerning industrial origin arise when industries produce both goods and services. Examples of such services are repair, maintenance and manufacturing on a fee or contract basis. Although the industrial origin of these services is often the same as the origin of the goods themselves, it should be clear that the nature of the services involved may be markedly different from that of the goods, so that the goods and services should be classified under different parts of CPC. Therefore, "Production services on a fee or contract basis", presented in division 86 of CPC Version 1.0, are distinguished from the manufactured goods classified in sections 2 to 4.

C. Goods and services in CPC

22. Among the variety of criteria generally used for distinguishing between goods and services (tangible versus intangible, storable versus non-storable or transportable versus non-transportable), none provides a valid, practical and unambiguous distinction between goods and services in all cases. While the product content of most CPC subclasses can be identified as being goods or services, in some cases this cannot be resolved easily. Examples of borderline cases are photographs, computer tapes and meals or drinks in restaurants. In these cases, as well as others, a bundle, that is, a combination or mixture of products, is sold and, more often than not, this bundle consists of both goods and services components. In the case of meals or drinks consumed in a restaurant, for example, the food and beverages consumed are goods and the cooking and serving components are services, as are the seating and the locality of the restaurant, constituting an intangible component. The purchaser of such a "mixed product" usually does not give much thought to whether a good or a service is purchased. The customer in a bookshop wants to buy a good and is probably not aware of the individual services provided by the author, the publisher and the retail salesperson. On the other hand, the person who has a pair of shoes resoled probably regards the transaction as a purchase of a service and does not think of the pieces of repair material involved. In the case of a restaurant meal, the situation is even more ambiguous and varied with respect to the goods portion of the transaction compared with the service portion.

23. Although a precise distinction between goods and services may be interesting from a theoretical point of view and may even be relevant for the compilation and analysis of certain economic statistics, there is no need to embody such a distinction into a classification of products such as CPC. CPC was developed to classify everything that can be the object of a transaction, covering goods and services (products), certain produced assets and even non-produced assets such as land.

D. Goods and services in SNA

24. The 1993 SNA provides a definition of products. It states that goods and services (products) are the result of production; they are exchanged and used for various purposes - as inputs in the production of other goods and services, as final consumption or for investment. In the 1993 SNA the term products is a synonym for goods and services. In order to study transactions in goods and services in detail, SNA uses the Central Product Classification.¹⁹ Further, the production boundary of SNA excludes the provision of services by households for own final consumption within the same household. These SNA definitions are essentially those embodied in the characteristics of CPC categories.

25. For international trade statistics, the 1993 SNA also encompasses the concepts of goods and services, rather than the concepts of merchandise and non-merchandise trade as described in the previous SNA. This further enhances the conceptual integrity of CPC.

E. Coding system of the classification

26. The coding system of CPC is hierarchical and purely decimal. The classification consists of sections (identified by the first digit), divisions (identified by the first and second digits), groups (identified by the first three digits), classes (identified by the first four digits) and subclasses (identified by all five digits, taken together). The codes for the sections range from 0 to 9 and each section may be divided into nine divisions. At the third digit of the code each division may, in turn, be divided into nine groups which may then be further divided into nine classes and then again into nine subclasses. In theory, this allows for 65,610 categories. In practice, however, there are 10 sections, 71 divisions, 294 groups, 1,162 classes and 2,093 subclasses. The code numbers in CPC consist of five digits without separation of any kind between digits. This coding system was chosen to avoid possible confusion with code numbers of another United Nations classification, the Standard International Trade Classification, which also has five-digit codes but uses a point to the right of the third digit.

27. Where a given level of classification is not further subdivided, a "0" is used in the position for the next more detailed level. For example, the code for the subclass "Clays" is 15400, since group 154 (Clays) is not divided into classes or subclasses. Similarly, the subclass "Bituminous or oil shale and tar sands" is coded 12030, as division 12 (Crude petroleum and natural gas) is not divided into groups but directly into classes, of which class 1203 (Bituminous or oil shale and tar sands) is not further subdivided.

28. For computerized applications the "0" can also indicate that the code is used for a total of all, more detailed, categories. Thus, the code 2610 could indicate the total of all categories 2611 through 2619, while 34600 could represent the total of all categories 34611 through 34620. Whenever possible, the "9" is reserved to designate residual categories. For example, class 0119 (Other cereals) contains all cereals not elsewhere classified in group 011 (Cereals). However, this approach does not apply to every case in which "9" is used in a code.

¹⁹ Commission of the European Communities, International Monetary Fund, Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, United Nations and World Bank, System of National Accounts, 1993 (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.94.XVII.4), paras. 2.30 and 2.49.

III. APPLICATION OF THE CLASSIFICATION

A. Use of different levels of the classification

29. Different uses and types of statistics are best served by presenting statistics in terms of different levels of aggregation. Thus, it may be necessary or desirable to use different levels of detail of CPC for different purposes. For example, for national accounting purposes, it may be necessary to classify data at a different level of detail from that required for industrial statistics purposes. Similarly, data on production obtained from establishments can usually be classified in far more detail than data on capital formation obtained from administrative reporting systems. The hierarchical structure of CPC provides a framework for comparable classifications of data at differing levels of detail.

B. Using CPC in establishing national classifications of products

30. Many countries that do not have the experience or resources to develop their own national product classifications or that want their national product classifications to be related to relevant international classifications as closely as possible may choose to use CPC as their national classification. In such cases CPC may be used as is. It may also be expanded or contracted, depending on the needs and possibilities of each country.

31. For a national product classification to be compatible with CPC, the most detailed categories of classification in the national scheme should coincide with, or be aggregations or dissections of the individual subclasses of CPC. In other words, each of the most detailed categories of the national product classification should either have the same scope as a CPC subclass, or be dissections of a CPC subclass, or be composed of two or more CPC subclasses, preferably from the same CPC class and group. The first two options are the preferred methods, as they provide the maximum opportunity for correspondence at the detailed level of CPC, while the third option allows for correspondence at a more aggregated level. Provided these requirements are met, the compatibility of national product classifications with CPC would not necessarily be affected by their structure or the position of the categories at their most detailed level.

32. It is preferable that additional subdivisions of expanded classifications be part of the same class of the international classification. If so desired, classifications based on CPC may be constructed by subdividing each subclass into as many as nine subcategories. This may be done by appending one decimal place to the CPC five-digit code. Alternatively, the subdivision of classes into subclasses in CPC may, in some cases, be expanded by replacing the subclasses with a greater number of more detailed categories. Where this approach is employed, the more detailed subclasses may be identified by means of five digits, provided that no more than nine subclasses are required for each class of CPC. To preserve comparability with the subclasses of CPC, the more detailed subcategories should be so delineated that they can be aggregated back to CPC subclasses.

33. Some countries may need to reduce the level of CPC detail in their national classifications. Some CPC categories may well be relatively unimportant in certain countries while other data concerning other CPC categories may simply be unavailable. For example, some countries may not find it practical to establish categories in their national classifications similar to the individual categories of divisions 43 to 46 (Machinery). They may find it more appropriate to combine some, or all, of the subclasses or classes in each of these divisions into single categories at the most detailed level of their classification. In so doing, one should take into account the principles described in paragraph 31 above.

C. Support for users of CPC

34. The United Nations Statistics Division is responsible for the development and maintenance of CPC. The developers of national product classifications and other institutions using CPC may find it in their interest to establish contact with the Statistics Division. Users of CPC may thus receive notification about plans for updates or revisions, information concerning interpretations and rulings and, in general, technical support in applying the classification. Users are encouraged to bring to the attention of the Statistics Division any difficulties they encounter in the implementation of CPC, request clarification and share their experience and remarks with regard to its adequacy and provide ideas or proposals for enhancing its usefulness. It is hoped that better awareness of the scope and needs of CPC users may facilitate the improvement of the classification of products. Communications may be sent to the Director, United Nations Statistics Division, Attention: Statistical Classifications Section, by mail (address: 2 United Nations Plaza, Room DC2-1420, New York, NY 10017, USA; fax: 1-212-963-1374) or through the Classification Hotline by e-mail: chl@un.org.

IV. RELATIONSHIP OF CPC TO OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS

A. Relationship to ISIC

35. CPC and ISIC are both general-purpose classifications, with ISIC representing the activity side of these two interrelated United Nations classifications. Each subclass of CPC consists of goods or services that are predominantly produced in a specific class or classes of ISIC Rev.3.²⁰ With a view to accommodating users of CPC wishing to identify the relationship between CPC and ISIC, each CPC subclass has a reference to the ISIC Rev.3 industry or industries in which most of the goods or services in question are generally produced. The predominant ISIC class is shown by listing the corresponding four-digit ISIC Rev.3 codes next to the relevant CPC subclass in the tables presenting the detailed structure of CPC. Information on correspondences between CPC and ISIC Rev.3 categories is contained in part three below. By rearranging the CPC subclasses according to their ISIC references, one can find the main goods or services that are outputs of certain industries.

36. It should be noted, however, that there is no intention of establishing one-to-one correspondence between CPC and ISIC. Such effort is considered neither practical nor desirable as it might lead to an inadequate description of CPC categories, especially at the higher levels, and it would also make harmonization with SITC difficult. The relationship between industries and their products is a complex and changing one. Furthermore, CPC is meant to be used in various kinds of statistics and should not be regarded as a mere extension of ISIC, as it is not limited to listing goods and services produced according to ISIC industries.

B. Relationship to HS

37. With regard to transportable goods, a very close relationship exists between CPC and HS, as CPC subclasses in sections 0 to 4 constitute groupings and rearrangements of complete categories of HS96.²¹ As a result, 1,143 CPC subclasses were created by using over 5,000 headings and subheadings of HS96 as building blocks. The corresponding HS96 codes are shown next to each CPC subclass of sections 0 to 4 in the tables presenting the detailed structure of CPC. Information on correspondences between CPC and HS96 categories is included in part three below.

38. There are, however, a few exceptions to the rule that each CPC subclass in sections 0 to 4 corresponds to one or more HS headings and subheadings. For example, CPC subclass 17300 (Steam and hot water) has no equivalent in HS. Another exception is CPC group 333 and its classes concerning refined petroleum products. The entire CPC group equals HS heading 2710, which is not further subdivided into subheadings as no practical agreement could be reached and no definitions could be devised to satisfy customs requirements. CPC, however, has subdivided this group into eight non-divided classes. These classes are the same as those existing in SITC Revs. 2 and 3. Apart from this case, HS96 subheadings are not split between CPC subclasses and each HS96 code corresponds to only one CPC subclass.

39. CPC subclasses for transportable goods (sections 0 to 4) are defined in such a way that each consists of one or more six-digit subheadings of the Harmonized System (HS). In view of its important role in the construction of CPC, general information on HS is provided in paragraphs 40-43 below.

40. HS is an exhaustive nomenclature of internationally traded commodities (goods) classified according to the following criteria: classification according to raw or basic material, classification according to the degree of processing, classification by use or function and classification according to economic activities. These principles were maintained in all subsequent revisions of the nomenclature. The Customs Cooperation Council, which changed its name to World Customs Organization (WCO) in 1994, also agreed, in principle, to introduce the industrial origin criterion in the construction of HS. However, the principle that each subheading of HS should contain only goods that are normally produced by a single industry could not be strictly followed for various reasons. In some cases it was not possible for customs authorities to make a distinction concerning industrial origin on the basis of the physical properties of a good. Another reason was that the distinction would lead to categories that were insignificant in international trade. In other cases the historical and legal distinctions inherent in administering customs and trade requirements took precedence over the criterion of industrial origin. In some instances it was not clear where products of a certain industry would fall in HS. The fact that countries have different economic structures by industry, added to the difficulty of adhering to this principle.

41. HS evolved from the original customs tariff nomenclature of the Customs Cooperation Council, the 1955 Brussels Tariff Nomenclature (BTN). In 1974 it was renamed the Customs Cooperation Council Nomenclature (CCCN). Efforts to harmonize BTN/CCCN and SITC led to a perfect accord with SITC Rev.2 by 1978. HS entered into force in 1988, modifying existing four-digit headings of CCCN and introducing subheadings identified by a six-digit code. Plans of WCO allow for updating HS every three or four years through meetings of a Review Subcommittee. Statisticians from Member States and the United Nations Statistics Division are represented in the work on updating HS to ensure that the relationship between this nomenclature and other international classifications is maintained. The Harmonized System contains 21 sections, 97 chapters (although Chapter 77 is reserved for unspecified future use) and 1,241 headings at the four-digit level, 935 of which are further divided into 5,113 subheadings. The latest amendment (HS96) came into effect on 1 January 1996.

42. Besides the commodity nomenclature itself, HS contains legal rules of interpretation and the principles agreed to by contracting parties for administering the System. In addition, HS provides a very elaborate set of explanatory notes and an alphabetical index to assist in its use and interpretation.²²

43. The universal implementation and wide use of HS is ensured by the International Convention on the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System, article 3.1 (b) of which requires that "each Contracting Party shall ... make publicly available its import and export trade statistics in conformity with the six-digit codes of the Harmonized System, or, on the initiative of the Contracting Party, beyond that level, to the extent that publication is not precluded for exceptional reasons such as commercial confidentiality or national security".²³

C. Relationship to SITC

44. The relationship between CPC and SITC is similar to that between CPC and HS because SITC Rev.3 also used the HS subheadings as building blocks to create commodity groupings that are more suitable for the economic analysis of trade.²⁴ The commodity groupings of SITC reflect (a) the materials used in production, (b) the processing stage, (c) market practices and uses of the products, (d) the importance of the commodities in terms of world trade and (e) technological changes. Regarding the correspondence of SITC Rev.3 with CPC for transportable goods, all five-digit items of SITC Rev.3 are contained wholly within single CPC subclasses in sections 0 to 4. As such, CPC subclasses consist of one or more SITC Rev.3 items. Correspondences between CPC and SITC Rev.3 are shown in the tables presenting the detailed structure of CPC included in part three below. Since SITC, like HS, deals only with transportable goods, no correspondence between CPC and SITC Rev.3 or between CPC and HS96 exists for CPC categories in sections 5 to 9.

D. Relationship to other classifications and standards

45. In addition to ISIC, HS and SITC, there are a number of other classifications and standards interrelated with CPC, owing to its role as a general-purpose classification of goods and services.

46. The United Nations Classification by Broad Economic Categories (BEC)²⁵ is related to CPC through its close correlation with SITC. BEC is designed to serve as a means for converting external trade data compiled by using SITC into end-use categories that are meaningful within the SNA framework. It is generally possible to rearrange whole CPC subclasses into BEC categories through the correspondence between CPC and SITC Rev.3 and between SITC and BEC.

47. Since CPC provides the product dimension to many of the SNA tables, SNA takes CPC into consideration in the development of the classifications of expenditures by purpose.²⁶ This will be reflected in the forthcoming United Nations publication relating to SNA classifications of expenditure according to purpose, including the Classification of Individual Consumption by Purpose (COICOP), the Classification of the Functions of the Government (COFOG), the Classification of the Purposes of the Non-profit Institutions Serving Households (COPNI) and the Classification of Outlays of Producers by Purpose (COPP). In particular, correspondences between COICOP and CPC have been elaborated. In addition, as noted in the preface above, CPC will ultimately be revised in the area of public administration, in the light of ongoing revisions to COFOG.

48. Since the beginning of 1988, the European Communities (now the European Union) has been using the Combined Nomenclature (CN) as its international trade classification. CN is an extension of HS with two extra digits, serving the particular customs and statistical needs of States members of the European Union. There is a straightforward relationship between CPC and CN, as whole categories of the latter can always be rearranged into CPC subclasses.

49. Through the joint efforts of the United Nations and the European Union for the harmonization of economic classifications, the structure and content of the revised General Industrial Classification of Economic Activities within the European Communities (NACE) and the related product classifications of the European Union were developed to be consistent with ISIC and CPC. The Classification of Products by Activity (CPA) is based on NACE and has links to CPC at the detailed level. PRODCOM, the list of industrial products of Eurostat,²⁷ can also be linked to CPC through the HS correspondences of both the PRODCOM nomenclature and CPC.

50. The United Nations list of industrial materials and products used in industrial production statistics²⁸ is currently being reviewed in the light of its relationship to CPC Version 1.0.

51. In the course of the initial development work on CPC, with regard to the structure and content of the Provisional CPC categories corresponding to subclasses in division 53 (Constructions), use was made of the United Nations International Recommendations for Construction Statistics.²⁹ Similarly, in the development of the structure and content of CPC categories in division 52 (Land), use was made of the Standard Statistical Classification of Land Use,³⁰ a recommendation of the Economic Commission for Europe.

52. The Provisional CPC was utilized as a source by the secretariat of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in the preparation of the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS). Under the GATS agreements, texts with legal standing were drafted, which embodied extensive references to CPC, referred to by GATS as the "GNS/120 list".³¹ In anticipation of the next round of GATS negotiations and continued use of CPC as a source, a detailed technical review was conducted by the World Trade Organization secretariat, the United Nations Statistics Division and the Central Product Classification Subgroup of the Voorburg Group, in order to provide detailed explanations and interpretations of the changes that were made to the CPC. This extensive review process has led to a series of editorial corrections to and interpretations of CPC that are now documented in the United Nations CPC database and that have been incorporated in the present publication. Collaboration in the area of trade in services is expected to continue during future updating and revision of CPC.

53. The Statistical Commission, at its twenty-ninth session, in 1997, requested that activities be coordinated to maintain consistency between the fifth edition of the Balance of Payments Manual of the International Monetary Fund (IMF),³² CPC Version 1.0, SNA 1993 and the manual on trade-in-services statistics proposed by the United Nations Inter-agency Task Force on Service Statistics.³³ The manual proposed by the Task Force will contain a classification of trade in services that is an extension of and is consistent with that prescribed for international trade in services in the fifth edition of the IMF Balance of Payments Manual. Full consideration would be provided to CPC codes as the fundamental building blocks to describe internationally traded service products. The balance of payments categories and services are linked to the Provisional CPC, and a draft correspondence has been prepared between the balance of payments services classification and CPC Version 1.0.³⁴

V. INTERPRETATION OF THE CPC SYSTEM

A. Rules of interpretation

54. As is often the case with any widely used statistical classification, numerous situations can be expected to arise when it will be unclear which CPC category a particular good or service should be assigned to. When classifying and coding products according to CPC, the following rules shall apply, depending on whether the considered output of a transaction involves transportable goods (see para. 55) or products other than transportable goods (see paras. 56-58).

55. The classification of goods in the categories of sections 0 to 4 shall be determined according to the terms of the corresponding categories in the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (hereinafter referred to as the "Harmonized System"), which is governed by the rules reproduced below.³⁵

"General rules for the interpretation of the Harmonized System

"Classification of goods in the Nomenclature shall be governed by the following principles:

- "1. The titles of Sections, Chapters and sub-Chapters are provided for ease of reference only; for legal purposes [of the Harmonized System], classification shall be determined according to the terms of the headings and any relative Section or Chapter Notes and, provided such headings or Notes do not otherwise require, according to the following provisions:*
- "2. (a) Any reference in a heading to an article shall be taken to include a reference to that article incomplete or unfinished, provided that, as presented, the incomplete or unfinished article has the essential character of the complete or finished article. It shall also be taken to include a reference to that article complete or finished (or falling to be classified as complete or finished by virtue of this Rule), presented unassembled or disassembled.*
- "(b) Any reference in a heading to a material or substance shall be taken to include a reference to mixtures or combinations of that material or substance with other materials or substances. Any reference to goods of a given material or substance shall be taken to include a reference to goods consisting wholly or partly of such material or substance. The classification of goods consisting of more than one material or substance shall be according to the principles of Rule 3.*

³⁵ World Customs Organization, The Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System, 1996 version (Brussels, 1996).

- "3. When by application of Rule 2(b) or for any other reason, goods are, prima facie, classifiable under two or more headings, classification shall be effected as follows:
- "(a) The heading which provides the most specific description shall be preferred to headings providing a more general description. However, when two or more headings each refer to part only of the materials or substances contained in mixed or composite goods or to part only of the items in a set put up for retail sale, those headings are to be regarded as equally specific in relation to those goods, even if one of them gives a more complete or precise description of the goods.
 - "(b) Mixtures, composite goods consisting of different materials or made up of different components, and goods put up in sets for retail sale, which cannot be classified by reference to 3(a), shall be classified as if they consisted of the material or component which gives them their essential character, insofar as this criterion is applicable.
 - "(c) When goods cannot be classified by reference to 3(a), or 3(b), they shall be classified under the heading which occurs last in numerical order among those which equally merit consideration.
- "4. Goods which cannot be classified in accordance with the above Rules shall be classified under the heading appropriate to the goods to which they are most akin.
- "5. In addition to the foregoing provisions, the following Rules shall apply in respect of the goods referred to therein:
- "(a) Camera cases, musical instrument cases, gun cases, drawing instrument cases, necklace cases and similar containers, specially shaped or fitted to contain a specific article or set of articles, suitable for long-term use and presented with the articles for which they are intended, shall be classified with such articles when of a kind normally sold therewith. This Rule does not, however, apply to containers which give the whole its essential character.
 - "(b) Subject to the provisions of Rule 5(a) above, packing materials and packing containers presented with the goods therein shall be classified with the goods if they are of a kind normally used for packing such goods. However, this provision is not binding when such packing materials or packing containers are clearly suitable for repetitive use.
- "6. For legal purposes [of the Harmonized System], the classification of goods in the subheadings of a heading shall be determined according to the terms of those subheadings and any related subheading notes and, mutatis mutandis, to the above Rules, on the understanding that only subheadings at the same level are comparable. For the purposes of this Rule the relative Section and Chapter Notes also apply, unless the context otherwise requires."

56. The classification of products other than transportable goods, mainly services, shall be determined according to the terms of the categories as described in the divisions, groups, classes or subclasses in sections 5 to 9 of CPC. When services are, prima facie, classifiable under two or more categories, classification shall be effected as follows, on the understanding that only categories at the same level (sections, divisions, groups, classes or subclasses) are comparable:

- (a) The category which provides the most specific description shall be preferred to categories providing a more general description;
- (b) Composite services consisting of a combination of different services which cannot be classified by reference to (a) shall be classified as if they consisted of the service which gives them their essential character, in so far as this criterion is applicable;
- (c) When services cannot be classified by reference to (a) or (b), they shall be classified under the category which occurs last in numerical order among those which equally merit consideration.

57. Services which cannot be classified in accordance with the above rules shall be classified under the category appropriate to the services to which they are most akin.

58. Products making up a bundle (combination) of goods and services shall be classified according to their main component (value added), in so far as the criterion is applicable.

B. Explanatory notes

59. In addition to the interpretative rules, the explanatory notes of HS also apply to sections 0 to 4 of CPC as the transportable goods in CPC are defined in terms of HS. The notes of HS are well elaborated and their use reduces the confusion that might result if new reference material associated with CPC were drawn up. The explanatory notes of HS are not reproduced in the present publication but they are available in the original source.³⁶ The title descriptions of CPC categories in sections 0 to 4 are also based on HS, although they might have been somewhat shortened. Regarding the content of CPC subclasses in sections 0 to 4, the reference to HS96 heading codes and related explanatory notes should provide a clear understanding about their coverage.

60. Explanatory notes for CPC categories in sections 5 to 9, mainly covering service products, are included in part four of the present publication. The explanatory notes provide descriptions of services that are included in each subclass and those that are excluded, for reference purposes. In some cases explanatory notes are also available for categories of higher aggregated levels of the CPC structure. Whenever an exclusion is provided, it is accompanied by an exact cross-reference to indicate the code of the subclass where the service in question is actually classified. Although the title description should define the boundary of the subclass, the explanatory notes clarify further the border and content of the class. The explanatory notes are not intended to present an exhaustive list of all the services under each heading; they should be regarded only as lists of illustrative examples of the subclass content.

61. The explanatory notes provided for sections 5 to 9 of CPC were developed for statistical purposes. Although these notes intend to provide clarification, as the lists are not exhaustive, users may need further guidance from the United Nations Statistics Division on the interpretation of the exact content of CPC subclasses. It should be noted that if CPC categories are utilized for purposes other than statistical ones, for example as a source for the preparation of legal documents or for such purposes as procurement, those who prepared the legal document in which reference is made to CPC categories, not the developers of the classification, are responsible for explaining the use of those categories in the legal document.

C. Indexes to the classification

62. Part six of the present publication contains a newly developed alphabetical index of service products based on the CPC subclasses in sections 5 to 9. The alphabetical index is currently available in English only and is included as part six in all language versions of the publication. The index consists of 12,374 items linked to 950 CPC subclass codes. For sections 0 to 4, as a reference tool for finding the CPC subclasses and codes of transportable goods, users may consult the alphabetical indexes developed by HS, and/or the Commodity Indexes for SITC Rev. 3.³⁷ Users can then map back to CPC via the correspondences provided in part three below (Detailed structure and correspondences of CPC Version 1.0 subclasses to ISIC Rev.3, HS96 and SITC Rev.3).

63. The alphabetical index contained in part six below provides a practical tool for finding particular products included in the various CPC categories in sections 5 to 9 and also for locating services not specifically mentioned in category descriptions. In addition to its search and coding functions, the alphabetical index assists users in applying the classification and helps them to understand its structure.

D. Correspondence between revisions

64. Minor refinements of CPC Version 1.0 (updating language, correcting and amending explanatory notes through interpretation and rulings) will be made as needed and will be widely disseminated. Major revisions are not expected to occur more frequently than every five years.

65. Changes that have been made in CPC are reflected in the correspondence tables between the Provisional CPC and CPC Version 1.0 and vice versa; however, further detailed explanations may be required in certain circumstances. The extent of changes between CPC revisions indicates full or partial correspondence to one or several categories of the previous version. Codes of partially corresponding categories are marked with an asterisk. It should be noted that some of the changes in the wording of explanatory notes or title descriptions have been made for clarification purposes only, without any implications for the content of the category. Sometimes changes in codes are simply technical consequences of the overall change in the structure of the classification owing to related recoding of categories. Therefore it is advisable to check the correspondence tables, contained in part five below, for verification and confirmation of actual changes. Interpretations and rulings on classification problems, including application issues related to the implementation of CPC, may be requested from the United Nations Statistics Division (see para. 34 above concerning support for users of CPC).

This subclass does not include:
- book-keeping services related to tax returns, cf. 823
- payroll services, including payroll computation and ledgers, cf. 85990
- 823 Advisory services related to taxation
This group includes:
- advice to companies and private individuals for the purpose of minimizing taxes
- drawing-up and defending taxation statements
- services consisting of assisting enterprises in tax planning and control, other than for income tax, and preparing all documentation required by law
- 8231 Corporate tax planning and consulting services
- 82310 Corporate tax planning and consulting services
- 8232 Corporate tax preparation and review services
- 82320 Corporate tax preparation and review services
This subclass includes:
- preparation of returns for all kinds of taxes (e.g. VAT)
- 8233 Individual tax preparation and planning services
- 82330 Individual tax preparation and planning services
This subclass includes:
- tax preparation and planning services for unincorporated business
- tax preparation and planning services for individuals
- 824 Insolvency and receivership services
- 8240 Insolvency and receivership services

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

82400	Insolvency and receivership services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- providing advice and assistance to the management and/or creditors of insolvent businesses and/or to act as receiver or trustee in bankruptcy
Division 83	OTHER PROFESSIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL SERVICES
831	Consulting and management services
8311	Management consulting services
83111	General management consulting services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- advisory, guidance and operational assistance services concerning business policy and strategy and the overall planning, structuring and control of an organisation. More specifically, general management consulting assignments may deal with one or a combination of the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- policy formulation- determination of the organisational structure (decision-making system) that will most effectively meet the objectives of the organisation- legal organisation- strategic business plans- defining a management information system- development of management reports and controls- business turnaround plans- management audits- development of profit improvement programmes- and other matters that are of particular interest to the higher management of an organisation

83113 Human resources management consulting services

This subclass includes:

- advisory, guidance and operational assistance services concerning the human resources management of an organisation. Human resources consulting assignments may deal with one or both of the following:
 - audit of the personnel function
 - development of a human resource

83114 Marketing management consulting services

This subclass includes:

- advisory, guidance and operation assistance services concerning the marketing strategy and marketing operation of an organisation. Marketing consulting assignments may deal with one or a combination of the following:
 - analysis and formulation of a marketing strategy
 - formulation of customer service and pricing policies
 - sales management and staff training
 - organisation of distribution channels (sale to wholesalers or directly to retailers, direct mail, franchise, etc.)
 - organisation of the distribution process, package design and other matters related to the marketing strategy and operations of an organisation

This subclass does not include:

- public relations services, cf. 83121
- advertising services, cf. 836

83115 Production management consulting services

This subclass includes:

- advisory, guidance and operational assistance services concerning methods for improving productivity, reducing production costs and improving the quality of production. Production consultation assignments may deal with one or a combination of the following:
 - effective utilisation of materials in the production process
 - inventory management and control
 - quality control standards
 - time and motion studies
 - job and work methods
 - performance standards
 - safety standards
 - office management
 - planning and design and other matters related to production management
 - services provided by agronomists and agricultural economists

83119 Other management consulting services

This subclass includes:

- logistic consulting services

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

83142

Software consultancy services

This subclass includes:

- development (analysis, design and programming) of software
- adaptation of existing software
- provision of advice and assistance on matters related to computer software:
 - conducting feasibility studies on the implementation of a system
 - providing specifications for a database design
 - providing technical expertise for the integration of hardware and software
 - providing guidance and assistance during the start-up phase of a new system
 - providing specifications to secure a database and so on
 - providing advice on proprietary software

This subclass does not include:

- retail sales of packaged software, cf. 62184, 62284, 62384, 62484 and 62584
- consultancy services in connection with retail sales, cf. 62184, 62284, 62384, 62484 and 62584

83149

Other computer consultancy services

This subclass includes:

- provision of computer-related professional services not elsewhere classified:
 - development of service-level agreements services
 - disaster recovery services (software)
 - implementation planning services
 - quality assurance planning and review services
 - system implementation support services
 - system quality assurance services
 - system integration services
- provision of computer services not elsewhere classified

This subclass does not include:

- provision of accounting (e.g. pay-roll accounting), statistical (e.g. tabulating and analysing results of a market research survey), administrative (e.g. billing services from a computerised list supplied by the client), services where the supplier uses computers to deliver the service are not classified here but according to the nature of the service rendered
- provision of computer facilities management services, cf. 83150
- reproduction services of computer media, cf. 86922

8315

Computer facilities management services

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

83150	Computer facilities management services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- provision of personnel to manage and operate client-owned (leased) computer facilities on an on-going basis whether these facilities are located on the client's or supplier's site. The incidental development of software may form an integral component of this service This subclass does not include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- provision of computing resources, cf. 85960
8316	Systems maintenance services
83160	Systems maintenance services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- provision of assistance to keep computer systems (software) in good working condition. The maintenance may be corrective or preventive and include services such as:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- testing to detect, locate and remove faults- improving existing programs- providing up-to-date user manuals- providing proper advice on the proper use of a system This subclass does not include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- such services provided as an integral component of a custom software development contract or a computer facilities management contract, cf. the appropriate service category
8319	Other management services, except construction project management services
83190	Other management services, except construction project management services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- coordination and supervision services for resources in preparing, running and completing a project on behalf of the client- project management services can involve budgeting, accounting and cost control, procurement, planning of time scales and other operating conditions, co-ordination of subcontractors' work, inspection and quality control, etc.- these services include management and office management services with or without the provision of their own staff This subclass does not include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- construction project management services, cf. 8332
832	Architectural services and urban planning and landscape architectural services

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

8321 Architectural services

83211 Architectural advisory and pre-design services

This subclass includes:

- assistance, advisory and recommendation services concerning architectural and related matters
 - services such as undertaking preliminary studies addressing issues such as site philosophy, intent of development, climatic and environmental concerns, occupancy requirements, cost constraints, site selection analysis, design and construction scheduling
 - any other issues affecting the nature of the design and construction of a project.
- The provision of these services is not necessarily related to a new construction project. For example, it may consist of advice concerning the means of carrying out maintenance, renovation, restoration services of buildings, of an appraisal of the quality for buildings or of advice on any other architectural matter

83212 Architectural design and contract administration services

This subclass includes:

- architectural design services for buildings and other structures. Design services may consist of one or a combination of the following:
 - schematic design services which consist of determining, with the client, the essential character of the project, defining intent, space requirements, budget limitations and time scheduling
 - preparation of sketches including floor plans, site plans and exterior views
 - design development services, which consists of a more precise illustration of the design concept in terms of the siting plan, form, material to be used, structural, mechanical and electrical systems and probable construction costs
 - final design services, which consists of drawings and written specifications sufficiently detailed for tender submission and construction, and of expert advice to the client at the time of calling for and accepting tenders

83219 Other architectural services

This subclass includes:

- all other services requiring the expertise of architects, such as:
 - preparation of promotional material and presentations
 - preparation of as-built drawings
 - provision of operating manuals, etc.

This subclass does not include:

- project management services, cf. 8332

8322 Urban planning and landscape architectural services

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

83221 Urban planning services

This subclass includes:

- development services for programmes concerning land use, site selection, control and utilisation, road systems and servicing of land with a view to create and maintain systematic, coordinated urban development
- feasibility studies
- studies of environmental impact and economic assessments of urban development programmes are also included

83222 Landscape architectural services

This subclass includes:

- plan and design services for the aesthetic landscaping of parks, commercial and residential land, etc.
- preparing site plans, working drawings, specifications
- cost estimates for land development
- showing ground contours
- cost estimates for vegetation to be planted, and facilities such as walks, fences and parking areas
- inspection services for the work during construction

833 Engineering services

8331 Integrated engineering services

This class includes:

- integrated engineering services composed of project management services concerning construction, engineering advisory and pre-design services, engineering design services, engineering services during the construction and installation phase and other engineering services

83311 Integrated engineering services for buildings

This subclass includes:

- integrated engineering services for residential buildings
- integrated engineering services for non-residential buildings, such as industrial, commercial or agricultural buildings

83312 Integrated engineering services for civil engineering works

This subclass includes:

- integrated engineering services for:
 - highways, streets, roads, railways, airfield runways
 - bridges, elevated highways, tunnels and subways
 - harbours, waterways, dams, irrigation and other waterworks
 - long distance pipelines, communication and power lines (cables)
 - local pipelines and cables and related works
 - outdoor sport and recreation facilities

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

- 83313 Integrated engineering services for industrial plant and processes
This subclass includes:
- integrated engineering services for:
 - mining constructions
 - power plant constructions
 - chemical and related facilities
 - constructions for manufacturing
 - automation of industrial processes
- 83319 Integrated engineering services for other projects
This subclass includes:
- integrated engineering services for traffic control systems
- 8332 Project management services concerning construction
This class includes:
- services of assuming overall responsibility for the successful completion of a construction project on behalf of a client including organizing the financing and the design, requesting tenders, and performing management and control functions
- project management services provided by engineers or architects

This class does not include:
- installation services of turnkey projects, cf. 86510
- general construction services, cf. 541, 542
- 83321 Project management services concerning construction of buildings
This subclass includes:
- project management services concerning the construction of residential buildings
- project management services concerning the construction of non-residential buildings, such as industrial, commercial or agricultural buildings
- 83322 Project management services concerning construction of civil engineering works
This subclass includes:
- project management services concerning the construction of:
 - highways, streets, roads, railways, airfield runways
 - bridges, elevated highways, tunnels and subways
 - harbours, waterways, dams, irrigation and other waterworks
 - long distance pipelines, communication and power lines (cables)
 - local pipelines and cables and related works
 - outdoor sport and recreation facilities

- 83323 Project management services concerning construction of industrial plant and processes
This subclass includes:
- project management services concerning the construction of:
- mining constructions
- power plant constructions
- chemical and related facilities
- constructions for manufacturing
- automation of industrial processes
- 83329 Project management services concerning construction of other projects
This subclass includes:
- project management services concerning the construction of traffic control systems
- 8333 Engineering advisory and pre-design services
This class includes:
- assistance, advisory and recommendation services concerning engineering matters
- undertaking preparatory technical feasibility studies and project impact studies
- advisory and consultative engineering services prior to the drawing-up of a project
- feasibility studies, studies of environmental impact, economic assessment of a project, etc
- technical advice concerning existing installations or when disputes occur
- appraisal services for the structural, mechanical and electrical installations
- expert testimony in litigation cases
- assistance to government bodies in drafting law, etc
- 83331 Engineering advisory and pre-design services for buildings
This subclass includes:
- engineering advisory and pre-design services for residential buildings
- engineering advisory and pre-design services for non-residential buildings, such as industrial, commercial or agricultural buildings

Engineering advisory and pre-design services for industrial plant and processes

This subclass includes:

- engineering advisory and pre-design services for:
 - mining constructions
 - power plant constructions
 - chemical and related facilities
 - constructions for manufacturing
 - automation of industrial processes

83339

Engineering advisory and pre-design services for other projects

This subclass includes:

- engineering advisory and pre-design services for traffic control systems

8334

Engineering design services

This class includes:

- structural engineering design services
- drawing-up of preliminary drafts, project development, specification of plans of execution or exact specifications on behalf of the contracting
- partial engineering design services
- mechanical and electrical engineering design services for:
 - power system, lighting system, fire alarm system, communication system and other electrical installations
 - heating, ventilating, air conditioning, refrigeration and other mechanical installations
- other specialty engineering design services:
 - acoustical and vibration engineering designs
 - prototype development and detailed engineering designs
 - any other specialty engineering design services

This class does not include:

- aesthetic design of products and the complete design of products that do not require complex engineering (e.g. furniture), cf. 83490
- technical inspection of work during the construction phase of industrial projects, cf. 83353
- integrated engineering design services for industrial projects, cf. 83313
- design and assembly services for industrial process control equipment and for automated production plants, cf. 86449

Engineering design services for buildings

83561	Composition and purity testing and analysis services This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- testing and analysis services for the chemical and biological properties of materials such as air, water, waste (municipal and industrial), fuels, metal, soil, minerals, food and chemicals- testing and analysis services in related scientific fields such as microbiology, biochemistry, bacteriology, etc. This subclass does not include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- medical and dental testing services, cf. 93199
83562	Testing and analysis services of physical properties This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- testing and analysis services of physical properties such as strength, ductility, electrical conductivity and radioactivity of materials such as metals, plastics, textiles, woods, glass, concrete and other materials- tests for tension, hardness, impact resistance, fatigue resistance and high-temperature effects
83563	Testing and analysis services of integrated mechanical and electrical systems This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- testing and analysis services for the mechanical and electrical characteristics of complete machinery, motors, automobiles, tools, appliances, communication equipment and other equipment incorporating mechanical and electrical components. The results of the testing and analysis generally take the form of an assessment of the performance and behavioural characteristics of the object tested. Tests may be performed using models or mock-ups of ships, aircraft, dams, etc.
83564	Technical inspection services of road transport vehicles This subclass includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- periodical technical inspection services for automobiles, motorcycles, buses, lorries, trucks and other road transport vehicles This subclass does not include: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- damage assessment services, cf. 71620- maintenance and repair services for motor vehicles and motorcycles, cf. 8714

- 83569 Other technical testing and analysis services
This subclass includes:
- testing and analysis services of a technical or scientific nature that do not alter the object being tested
- radiographic, magnetic, and ultrasonic testing of machine parts and structures in order to identify defects. These tests are often conducted on site
- certification of ships, aircraft, dams, etc.
- certification and authentication of works of art
- radiological inspection of welds
- all other technical testing and analysis services not elsewhere classified

This subclass does not include:
- assessment of damages services on behalf of insurance companies, cf. 71620
- technical inspection services for automobiles, cf. 83564
- medical analyses and testing services, cf. 93199
- 836 Advertising services
- 8361 Planning, creating and placement services of advertising
- 83610 Planning, creating and placement services of advertising

- advertising mailing services, cf. 85950

837

Market research and public opinion polling services

8370

Market research and public opinion polling services

83700

Market research and public opinion polling services

This subclass includes:

- market analysis, analysis of competition and the behaviour of consumers
- use of research monographs, statistics, econometric models, surveys, etc.
- investigation services designed to secure information on public opinions regarding social, economic, political and other issues

838

Photographic services and photography processing services

8381

Photographic services

83811

Portrait photography services

This subclass includes:

- services consisting of photographing persons or other subjects in studios or other locations such as clients' offices or homes. The pictures must represent as faithfully as possible the subject's physical features and personality
- generally included with these services is the development and printing of such pictures according to customer specifications
- passport or identification photographs, infant and child portraits, family or military portraits, studio fashion photos, and corporate pictures
- portrait photography services by self-service coin-operated machines

CPC VERSION 1.0: EXPLANATORY NOTES

- 83812 Advertising and related photography services
This subclass includes:
- services consisting of photographing:
 - merchandise, industrial products
 - fashion clothes and other apparel
 - machinery, buildings
 - persons and other subjects for use in public relations
- photographic services for:
 - advertising displays, brochures, newspaper advertisements
 - catalogues
- 83813 Action photography services
This subclass includes:
- services consisting of photographing or videotaping live events, such as weddings, graduations, conventions, receptions, fashion shows, sports and news events and any other events of current interest

This subclass does not include:
- news agency services, cf. 844
- 83814 Specialty photography services
This subclass includes:
- services consisting of photographing landscapes, structures and other surfaces from aircraft or helicopters
- services consisting of photographing persons, objects or scenery using special apparatus and techniques. Examples of such services are:
 - underwater photography
 - medical and biological photography
 - photomicrography

This subclass does not include:
- photogrammetric recordings and collection of data by satellites, cf. 83530
- photographs intended for the press, cf. 844
- 83815 Restoration, copying and retouching services of photography
This subclass includes:
- services consisting of old photograph restoration
- copying from a picture, retouching and other special photographic effects
- 83819 Other photographic services
This subclass does not include:
- photocopying services, cf. 85940

Metal waste and scrap recycling services, on a fee or contract basis

This subclass includes:

- processing services of metal waste and scrap and of metal articles, whether or not used, into secondary raw material. Typical input consists of waste and scrap being sorted or unsorted but always unfit for further direct use in an industrial process, whereas the output is made fit for further processing and is to be considered then as an intermediate good. A process is required, either mechanical or chemical.

Examples are:

- mechanical crushing of metal waste such as used cars, washing machines, bikes, etc. with subsequent sorting and separation,
- mechanical reduction of large iron pieces such as railway wagons,
- stripping of used goods such as cars in order to obtain re-usable parts,
- stripping of used goods such as cars or refrigerators to strip them of harmful waste (oil, cooling liquid, fuel etc.)

This subclass does not include:

- wholesale trade services in waste and scrap including collecting, sorting, packing, dealing, etc. without an industrial process, cf. 61295
- reprocessing services of depleted thorium or uranium, cf. 86350

86932

Non-metal waste and scrap recycling services, on a fee or contract basis

This subclass includes:

- processing services of non-metal waste and scrap and of non-metal articles, whether or not used, into secondary raw material. Typical input consists of waste and scrap being sorted or unsorted but always unfit for further direct use in an industrial process, whereas the output is made fit for further processing and is to be considered then as an intermediate good. A process is required, either mechanical or chemical. Examples are:

- reclaiming of rubber such as used tires to produce secondary raw material
- sorting and pelleting of plastics to produce secondary raw material for tubes, flower pots, pallets and the like
- reclaiming of chemicals from chemical waste
- crushing, cleaning and sorting of glass
- crushing, cleaning and sorting of other waste such as demolition waste to obtain secondary raw material
