Item 2

The Least Developed Countries Report 2012: Harnessing Remittances and Diaspora Knowledge to Build Productive Capacities

2. The Least Developed Countries Report 2012: Harnessing Remittances and Diaspora Knowledge to Build Productive Capacities (UNCTAD/LDC/2012 and Overview) will be presented to the Board. This year, the Report will review the recent economic performance of the least developed countries (LDCs) and examine how to enhance the developmental impact of remittances and diaspora knowledge. Given the increasing magnitude of remittances in LDCs, the Report explores both the beneficial and possible adverse impacts of this type of private external flows. While remittances are the most visible effect of migration, there are other forms of diaspora engagement with the home country, such as diaspora knowledge networks that can facilitate technological catch-up in LDCs and therefore enhance the development of productive capacities. Through innovative forms of network-based industrial policy, LDCs could offset some of the adverse impacts of brain drain on their economies. The Report concludes with a policy review section containing lessons from international experiences in this area of interest to LDCs.
