AGENDA ITEM 25

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF THE ISLAMIC CONFERENCE

- (a) REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL (A/45/526 and Add.1)
- (b) DRAFT RESOLUTION (A/45/L.8)

The PRESIDENT: I call on the representative of Egypt, who wishes to introduce draft resolution A/45/L.8.

Mr. GALAL (Egypt) (interpretation from Arabic): It gives me great pleasure, on behalf of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, to introduce draft resolution A/45/L.8, of 16 October 1990, entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference".

It is natural that there should be co-operation between the two organizations and that their co-operation should be strengthened from one day to the next. All the members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference are Members of the United Nations. The principles of Islam which advocate peace among nations and peoples and call for the development of the individual, respect for his dignity and a recognition that he is the corner-stone of society are the very principles enunciated in the Charter, which sets out the guidelines and the approach that the United Nations adopted when it emerged from the agony of the Second World War.

I take this opportunity to express the appreciation of the members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference for the ongoing co-operation between the two organizations in the areas enumerated in document A/45/526/Add.1 and call for more co-operation in the interest of the States members of both organizations. Let me express our appreciation for the role played in this area by the Secretary-General and his associates.

(Mr. Wahid, Egypt)

I wish to draw attention to the fact that the Organization of the Islamic Conference has not lagged behind the emerging world political thinking which is now basing itself on the principles of human rights, individual freedom and the dignity of the individual. Thus, the regular ministerial meeting of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, held at Cairo from 30 July to 4 August 1990, adopted a document containing the Declaration of Human Rights in Islam. The Declaration highlights in legal terms the rights which have been advocated by Islam for centuries even before they were adopted as motto for the United Nations and States of the world in the latter part of the twentieth century.

The Ministers also took unequivocal positions on aggression, the occupation of the territory of others and the violation of the rights of nations and peoples. They addressed the question of co-operation in the economic, political, cultural and social fields.

The delegation of Egypt, current Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, has conveyed a copy of the Declaration of Human Rights in Islam together with the Conference's resolutions to the United Nations for distribution as official documents of the World Organisation so that their contents and the views expressed therein can be of use to all the world's peoples.

The co-ordination meeting of Foreign Ministers of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, held in New York early in October 1990, crystalized the positions of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference on a number of the issues now on the United Nations agenda.

(Mr. Galal, Egypt)

As for the draft resolution before the General Assembly, contained in document A/45/L.8, my delegation does not wish to dwell upon it in detail because it was submitted to the Assembly some time ago. It is similar to the resolution adopted last session. Therefore, and on behalf of all States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, I call upon all Members of the United Nations to support the draft resolution, which is designed to promote co-operation between the two organizations, within the limits of their financial resources, for the attainment of their noble objectives. My delegation hopes that the draft resolution will be adopted by consensus.

The PRESIDENT: I call now on the Permanent Observer of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 3369 (XXX), of 10 October 1975.

Mr. ANSAY (Organization of the Islamic Conference): It is a privilege for me to address the General Assembly on a matter of particular significance to the Organisation of the Islamic Conference and to the United Nations, namely, co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference.

Since this is the first time I have spoken at this session, I should like to begin by congratulating you, Sir, on your election to the high office of President of the General Assembly. Your election is a tribute to your personal qualities and vast experience and to your country.

I should like to take this opportunity to pay a tribute to your predecessor, Mr. Joseph Garba of Nigeria, who served in an exemplary manner as President of the Assembly during its forty-fourth session. I also take this opportunity to express our deep appreciation of the significant contribution being made by the

(Mr. Ansary, Organization of the Islamic Conference)

Secretary-General, Mr. Javier Perez de Cuellar, to the effectiveness and smooth functioning of the world body, of his devotion to the cause of humanity and peace, and of his untiring efforts to promote a climate of international peace, security and co-operation.

From the beginning, the Organisation of the Islamic Conference has been fully dedicated to the realization of the objectives and principles of the United Nations Charter. The charter of the Organisation of the Islamic Conference underlines the determination of its membership of 46 States to make effective contributions towards the enrichment of mankind and the achievement of progress, freedom and justice all over the world by promoting global peace and security. The Organisation of the Islamic Conference derives its inspiration from the eternal, noble message of Islam. Its establishment was predicated on the principles of peace and harmony, tolerance, equality and justice for all.

Since its inception in 1969 the Organisation of the Islamic Conference has adopted numerous resolutions and declarations both at the summit level and at the level of Foreign Ministers, addressing the issues that confront the Islamic world as well as important global developments related to international peace and security, disarmament, human rights, minorities and decolonization, and issues related to socio-economic development and the establishment of the new economic order. The speaker before me highlighted one of those efforts, represented by the document adopted in Cairo on human rights in Islam. The position of the Organisation of the Islamic Conference on the topics I have mentioned was reflected in the resolutions of the Nineteenth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers, which was held in Cairo from 31 July to 5 August 1990, and in the Final Communiqué adopted following its annual Ministerial co-ordination meeting, which was held in New York on 1 October 1990.

(Mr. Ansary, Organization of
the Islamic Conference)

All members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference are, as we know, also Members of the United Nations. It is natural, therefore, that the two organizations should work closely together to promote the ideals, principles and objectives that they share.

Co-operation between the two organizations received an important boost in 1975 when the Organization of the Islamic Conference was granted observer status by the United Nations. By the late 1970s it was felt that the ever-increasing interaction of the two organizations should be given an institutional framework whereby the secretariats and the specialized agencies, organs and bodies of the two organizations could hold regular consultations to review their ongoing work and examine the possibilities of expanding and enlarging their areas of co-operation.

Since the adoption in 1980 of General Assembly resolution 35/36, which was the first resolution on co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, a number of co-operation agreements have been concluded by our organization with specialized agencies and other bodies of the United Nations system, such as the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, and the bodies concerned with technical co-operation for development.

The co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference has been mutually satisfactory and is developing in a meaningful manner. Ever since the first meeting between the representatives of the secretariats of our organization and its specialized institutions and those of the United Nations system, which was held in 1983, the two organizations have been

(Mr. Ansay, Organization of

collaborating on a number of important projects in the seven priority areas of co-operation discussed in the Secretary-General's report (A/45/526).

The representatives of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference have also met periodically since then. Their last meeting was held in Vienna from 12 to 14 September this year to make a critical review of the progress in co-operation as well as to evaluate the implementation of the recommendations adopted by the general meeting of the two organizations. The report of the last meeting is contained in the Secretary-General's report (A/45/526/Add.1).

We have discerned a keen desire on the part of all United Nations offices and specialized agencies to develop concrete projects to strengthen the ongoing areas of co-operation and to include in their co-operation such projects as would benefit the member States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference. We are very happy to note that the co-ordinating department of the joint meeting in Vienna prepared that meeting adequately and efficiently. All participants contributed in an exemplary manner to the successful conclusion of the Vienna meeting.

Let me assure the Assembly, in the meantime, that we are fully conscious of the financial constraints on both sides and therefore our co-operation process takes into account that factor. As usual, the 1991 co-operation meeting is subject to consultations as to time and place between the Secretary-Generals of the two organizations.

The draft resolution (A/45/L.8) before the Assembly, which has been introduced by the deputy to the Permanent Representative of Egypt, the representative of the current Chairman of the Nineteenth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers, takes into consideration the recommendations of the joint meeting of the focal points of the lead agencies of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic

(Mr. Ansary, Organization of
the Islamic Conference)

Conference held last September in Vienna and reflects the firm determination of the two organisations to co-operate in various fields. Recognizing that draft resolution A/45/L.8 has no additional financial implications, I am confident that it will have the unanimous approval of the General Assembly.

The PRESIDENT: The Assembly will now take a decision on draft resolution A/45/L.8. I have to inform members that the Secretary-General does not foresee programme budget implications in the implementation of this draft resolution.

May I take it that the General Assembly adopts draft resolution A/45/L.8?

Draft resolution A/45/L.8 was adopted (resolution 45/9).

The PRESIDENT: I call on the representative of India, who wishes to explain his position on the resolution just adopted.

Mr. JAIN (India): My delegation had occasion to express our views on the subject of co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference when the item was first introduced, at the thirty-fifth session of the General Assembly, and again when it was considered during the next few sessions.

India has the second largest population of Muslims in the world, next only to Indonesia. The people of India, including the Muslims, have chosen for themselves a secular State, where different religions flourish in harmony and contribute to the enrichment of the composite culture of the country. Our ties with the world of Islam have been close, multifarious and mutually beneficial.

Our own approach to many issues of crucial importance to international peace and security, such as the question of Palestine and questions concerning West Asia and Africa, as well as on a wide range of economic, social and humanitarian questions, coincides to a large extent with that of the Islamic countries.

We in India have always sought to discourage a sectarian or denominational approach in dealing with political, economic, social, cultural or humanitarian questions, or the use of religious sentiments for promoting sectarian interests. The teachings of all religions subserve the same end and should unite, rather than divide, peoples. Groupings of nations on the basis of religious sentiments or beliefs need to be particularly mindful of these considerations.

(Mr. Jain, India)

The increasing co-operation between the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the United Nations is viewed as an indication of the former's acceptance of the United Nations Charter as a principal repository of the ideals and principles that should guide global interaction and promote the progress of humankind. We believe that, like other bodies that have such co-operation, the Organization of the Islamic Conference will strive for a progressive, tolerant and just society and for a world order based on freedom, equality, justice and brotherhood.

We have taken note of the fact that the proposals contained in the Secretary-General's report (A/45/526 and Add.1) are aimed at increasing the interaction between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the economic, social, humanitarian and environmental fields. As India is not a member of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, we shall not be in a position to judge the extent and value of such interaction. We would stress, however, that co-operation between the United Nations and any intergovernmental organizations represented on an observer basis in the United Nations should be along the same lines and on terms of complete equality.

The PRESIDENT: We have concluded our consideration of agenda item 26.

AGENDA ITEM 25

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE LEAGUE OF ARAB STATES

- (a) REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL (A/45/481 and Add.1)
- (b) DRAFT RESOLUTION (A/45/L.11/Rev.1)

The PRESIDENT: I call on the representative of Kuwait, who wishes to introduce draft resolution A/45/L.11/Rev.1.

Mr. ABULHASAN (Kuwait) (interpretation from Arabic): It gives me pleasure, on behalf of my delegation and on behalf of the States members of the Arab League, and speaking in my capacity as Chairman, for this month, of the Arab Group, to introduce draft resolution A/45/L.11/Rev.1 on behalf of all members of the Arab Group. The draft resolution deals with co-operation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States.

As in the case of resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at previous sessions, this draft resolution, in its objectives and content, aims to promote co-operation and to strengthen the ties of co-operation and co-ordination between the United Nations and the League of Arab States, on the basis of the principles and objectives of the United Nations and the League's Charters. It is being put forward also in pursuance of the resolutions of the Arab Summit, which express the Arab States' aspiration after co-operation and harmony with all members of the United Nations as well as the achievement of peace, security and stability in the Middle East region and in the world at large.

The League of Arab States gives special priority to strengthening the existing co-operation between the two organizations in all areas, especially the economic, political, social and cultural fields. This is expressed very clearly, for example, in operative paragraphs 4, 5 and 6 of the draft resolution. To achieve this objective and proceed even further in the field of co-operation and implementation of the relevant conclusions and plans, the joint meeting held in Geneva from 18 July to 20 July this year adopted a two-year plan of action. Operative paragraph 9 calls for the holding of such meetings once every two years and the holding of the meeting of the sectoral co-ordinators in 1991.

Operative paragraph 12 of the draft resolution recommends the holding of a joint meeting in 1992 in order to review the progress in the implementation of the plan of action. The purpose is to ensure the continued review and appraisal of the projects and recommendations that could be implemented within the disposable resources of the two organizations, and to make sure that such projects address the areas of priority and wide importance to the national and regional plans of Arab development.

It is noteworthy that the draft resolution in its preambular and operative paragraphs, highlights the collective Arab efforts to strengthen ties of international co-operation and interaction in a way that takes into account and respects the shouldering by every individual member State of the fundamental responsibilities regarding the maintenance of international peace and security.

It is no secret that States' undertakings and commitments that arise from their membership of the United Nations include the obligation to protect, respect and defend human rights, to repudiate racism and racial discrimination in every shape and form, to bring about the end of hated colonialism with all its consequences and thus ensure the right of peoples to self-determination.

The elements and general orientation of the draft resolution confirm that the Arab States look to the achievement of the objectives and principles of the Charter and respect for United Nations resolutions in order for the Members' duties to be discharged and for the collective responsibility of all States under the Charter regarding collective security and détente to be fully shouldered by every State.

In the light of all this I call upon the Members to vote for the draft resolution.

Let me draw attention to an amendment in operative paragraph 4, namely the deletion of the words "to Lebanon and" from the said paragraph. Operative paragraph 4, as amended, now reads as follows:

(Mr. Abulhasan, Kuwait)

"Requests the Secretary-General to continue to strengthen co-operation with the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States for the purpose of implementing United Nations resolutions relating to the question of Palestine and the situation in the Middle East in order to achieve a just, comprehensive and durable solution to the Middle East conflict and the question of Palestine, the core of the conflict."

(Mr. Abulhasan, Kuwait)

The draft resolution before you calls, in the first instance, for progress to be made and strengthened in all fields of co-operation and in the existing ties between the two organisations in order to attain the lofty goals and objectives of the Charter. The peoples of the world look forward to the realization of those goals in order for them to be able to live together in a world where right and justice prevail and international legitimacy is upheld in a climate of co-operation, accord and international peace and security.

The PRESIDENT: In accordance with General Assembly resolution 477 (V), of 1 November 1950, I now call on the Observer of the League of Arab States.

Mr. ISMAIL (League of Arab States) (interpretation from Arabic): As I now stand at this rostrum for the first time in a very long time allow me to extend to you and to your country, the sincere congratulations of the League of Arab States, on the confidence placed in you by the international community in electing you to preside over this session. This confidence stems from the great respect and appreciation in which you are held by the international community, which highly values your outstanding expertise in international politics. Your country has given proof of that same comprehension for us as Arabs in its responsible, fair and just treatment of the questions of the Middle East region. Allow me to take this opportunity to convey to the people and Government of your friendly country, Malta, the respect and appreciation of the League of Arab States for their constructive stance and the strengthening of Maltese-Arab relations on a basis of mutual respect.

We have before us report A/45/481/Add.1 of 28 September 1990 on Co-operation Between the United Nations and the League of Arab States. Before taking up the matter of this report, I would like first to express my appreciation for this responsible, scientifically accurate and far-sighted report and commend the adherence by the Secretariat to the letter and spirit of the United Nations Charter in preparing it. Experience has demonstrated, since the signing of the co-operation agreement between the United Nations and the League of Arab States, the Secretariat's effectiveness in promoting that co-operation which is beginning to bear fruit in several areas despite its short duration.

(Mr. Ismail, League of Arab States)

There is no doubt that this Organization is presided over by a man of profound beliefs, wisdom and sincerity. I speak of our Secretary-General, Mr. Perez de Cuellar, who continues to demonstrate that he is the true mirror of the United Nations Charter and of international co-operation in every field. Our thanks go to him and all his associates.

A short while ago, the Chairman of the Arab Group, the Ambassador and Permanent Representative of the State of Kuwait introduced the draft resolution before you. I have nothing much to add to his useful, concise introduction.

The draft resolution on Co-operation Between the United Nations and the League of Arab States is yet another aspect of the ongoing consolidation of co-operation between international and regional organizations. It embodies the principles of the Charter of the League of Arab States and of the United Nations Charter, aims at strengthening further the role and effectiveness of the United Nations, and consolidating and developing the existing co-operation with the United Nations in the area of international peace and security. It adopts the approach of constructive, multifaceted dialogue with a view to strengthening comprehensive international security in the interest of all.

Thanks to its inveterate cultural history, the Arab nation and its Governments have been aware, over the ages, of the importance of international co-operation in creating a better world, and ensuring a better future for all men. Therefore, it is no wonder that all the Constitutions of the Arab States should affirm in their preambles a commitment to the Charter and resolutions of the United Nations. Such a commitment is consonant with the aspirations of the Arab nation and consistent with its religious beliefs, especially in Islam, whose holy book, the Koran, in more than one place, advocates respect for, and co-operation with all races, religions and beliefs on the basis of human brotherhood. Hence, it is no wonder that the League of Arab States is an enthusiastic supporter of enhanced co-operation with the United Nations. We believe in this goal most sincerely, and expect there to be major and constructive steps towards its achievement.

Since I participate for the first time in the General Assembly's consideration of this item, I have made a point of perusing all the relevant documents prepared by the Secretariat. Although aspirations tend to outstrip achievements, one must admit that, under the circumstances and in view of the relatively short history of this co-operation between the two organizations, a considerable deal has been achieved, and much more will be achieved through the sincere efforts that are being made, towards the attainment of the desired objectives. Allow me quickly to review the areas of this co-operation and some of the achievements that have been made.

(Mr. Ismail, League of Arab States)

On reading the report we find at the very beginning mention of the question of consultations and exchanges of information on matters of mutual concern to the two organizations, in particular the question of Palestine and the developments in the Middle East.

Indeed, the report stresses from the outset that co-operation is the key which is impossible to ignore, contrary to what some States, especially Israel, seem to believe. Its belief is that that key should be ignored, that any entrance that may lead to any sort of co-operation should be avoided and that the point of access must be the broken down door of selective dealings.

The report then takes up, inter alia, the item of population, to which the funds specified in the report have been allocated with a view to making the Population Research and Study Unit a permanent institution within the League of Arab States to respond to the needs of the various bodies of the League for population data collection, research and study.

Then under the heading "Technical Co-operation with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)" there is mention of the establishment of an Arab Regional Information System Network.

The report then takes up the question of technical co-operation with the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat). During 1989, the Centre executed 42 country-level projects.

In the area of food and agriculture, projects are under way for producing maps delineating the gypsiferous soils in the Middle East region and there is mention of an effective role in the activities of the International Information System for the Agricultural Sciences and Technology and the Current Agricultural Research Information System within the region.

(Mr. Ismail, League of Arab States)

In the area of economic co-operation, mention is made of co-operation between the League of Arab States and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and their achievements.

The report goes on to mention other extremely vital spheres of co-operation such as IFAD loans to Arab countries and the role played by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) in co-operation with the Arab Organisation for Agricultural Development (AOAD).

As regards industrial development, the report mentions some notable accomplishments achieved jointly by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), the League of Arab States, through the Arab Industrial Development and Mining Organization (AIDMO), the Arab Railway Union (ARU), the Arab Union for Cement and Building Materials (AUCBM) and the Arab Iron and Steel Union (AISU), particularly with regard to the development of a human resources strategy for Arab countries in the field of industrialisation, the organization of regional seminars, the preparation of studies and programmes, industrial standardization, and the updating of the Feasibility Studies Manual.

There are also other areas of co-operation, such as maritime training, maritime transport, combating oil pollution, child care, outer space affairs, apartheid, disarmament matters, human settlements, the environment, the role of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) in population activities, education, science, culture, information programmes and services, health, refugees, civil aviation, postal service, telecommunications and meteorological services. There are other projects and achievements which we are confident, as I noted at the beginning of my statement, will progress and grow more effective with the support and assistance of the Assembly and the Arab League.

(Mr. Ismail, League of Arab States)

The Arab nation has made a considerable contribution to humanity's progress and, in turn, has benefited from the achievements of other nations. The Arab nation has a great deal to contribute in the give and take and interaction with other nations. However, its striving after a better future, development, justice, welfare, scientific progress and the discharge of international duties continues to come up against certain fixed obstacles and some temporary impediments, few of which are of its own making and most of which are imposed from outside. It is impossible to separate the internal from the external in this respect.

In this respect, and in the historic context which is well known to every Arab official and every Arab citizen, we find that Israel's expansionist settler-colonialism under the wing of foreign Powers, and more specifically a super-Power that bears a major responsibility for the protection of international peace and security, is the major obstacle that blocks the region's progress and prosperity. It is the main reason for making the region a hotbed of strife and destruction through its blatant disregard and rejection of every initiative, resolution or logic, its detachment from the international realities of the age and its ignorance of the meaning of peace. The Arabs, for their part, have continued to reiterate their desire for a just peace and their full commitment to the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council in all their resolutions and conferences, and the decisions of the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, The Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO). Israel's response to all this has been insincere. It has opted for manoeuvring, ignoring the call for peace, insisted on regressing to outdated positions and continued to try to accuse the Arabs of not wanting peace.

We have only one question which we want to put to Israel. Does Israel or does it not accept the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council in letter and spirit? Is it ready to adopt the civilized approach and enter into meaningful international negotiations under United Nations auspices? Is it prepared to concede the reality of the existence of the Palestinian people and recognize the fact that is recognized by all, namely that the representative of the Palestinian people is the PLO? It would be well if Israel were to answer, but I do not think that it will.

As for the Arabs, their position is clear enough in the resolutions of the Fez Arab Summit Meeting and in the resolutions of the Palestine National Council, the essence of which is a clear-cut commitment to international legitimacy as embodied in United Nations resolutions.

When we speak of co-operation in the sphere of science, technology and comprehensive development, we naturally do not speak of first aid, but of the healing of wounds so that the people of our region may live in an environment of peace, security and confidence now and have hope in the future.

It has been customary - and I do not know if this will be repeated - when the representative of Israel makes a statement for him to denounce the General Assembly and Security Council resolutions and to consider co-operation with the Arab League as futile, and in doing so he enumerates the States of the Arab League while fully realizing that all States Members of the League of Arab States abide by international law and comply with the provisions of the Charter as a means of resolving by peaceful means the Middle East question - the core of which is the question of Palestine. If this is the case, we must assure him that the gamble on differing views among the Arab nations, if such differences exist, is a losing gamble. This has been proved by events.

The PRESIDENT: At the request of a number of delegations I shall suspend the meeting briefly.

The meeting was suspended at 4.10 p.m. and resumed at 4.25 p.m.

The PRESIDENT: I should like to inform members that, at the request of a number of members, continuance of consideration of item 25, entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States", is postponed to a later date, to be announced.

AGENDA ITEM 21

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

- (a) REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL (A/45/499)
- (b) DRAFT RESOLUTION (A/45/L.12)

The PRESIDENT: I call on the representative of Honduras to introduce draft resolution A/45/L.12.

Mr. BERMUDEZ (Honduras) (interpretation from Spanish): Sir, it is a great pleasure for my delegation to take part in the proceedings of this session under your skilful presidency. It is a double pleasure in the case of this item in view of your wide range of experience of the work of the Organization.

I have the honour to address delegations to the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly to submit a draft resolution under agenda item 21, entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of American States".

(Mr. Bermudez, Honduras)

The inter-American system, whose institutional origins can be traced back to the last century, finds its most eloquent expression today in the Organization of American States, a regional organization completely identified with the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

The charter of the Organization of American States stipulates that none of its provisions should be interpreted as impairing the rights or obligations of its member States under the Charter of the United Nations. For its part, Chapter VIII of the United Nations Charter sets forth the concept of regional arrangements, with particular reference to the peaceful settlement of disputes, which has been for a long time and continues to be an essential subject for the inter-American system. The complementarity of the two organizations is obvious, particularly in the current circumstances, in which regionalism is called upon to play an important role in the new international order.

The Secretary-General, in his report in document A/45/499, dated 14 September 1990, describes the activities that the United Nations has been engaged in during the past two years in the field of co-operation between the United Nations and the Organisation of American States. The account given of those activities attests to hard work that has yielded practical and highly satisfactory results.

The report focuses on the co-operation between the two organizations in regard to Central America. The urgency of achieving an early solution for the political crisis and security for that region provides sufficient reason for concentrating the efforts, at this stage of relations between the two organizations, on the quest for a negotiated settlement of that crisis.

(Mr. Bermudez, Honduras)

Thus the report emphasizes the role that has been played in the implementation of the Joint Plan for the voluntary demobilization, repatriation or relocation in Nicaragua or third countries of the members of the Nicaraguan resistance and their families, as well as assistance for the demobilization of all those involved in armed actions in the countries of the region when such persons voluntarily request it. As representatives will recall, that Joint Plan was adopted by the Presidents of the countries of the region in August 1989 at the summit meeting held in Tela, Honduras. The successful conclusion of the demobilization of the members of the Nicaraguan resistance was not only a contribution to the regional peace process in itself but also an indication of the success of the international endeavours complementing the procedure defined by the Central Americans for the achievement of firm and lasting peace.

Similarly, the Secretary-General has described in the report the work that has been done in the verification of the electoral process in Nicaragua. The significance of that work transcends national borders, as it has become a dynamic factor for a new Central America, identified with democracy, freedom and social justice.

However, beyond the areas related to political and legal matters and security, opportunities for international institutional co-operation encompass the social sphere and co-operation for development. In this connection, the report of the Secretary-General makes reference to the joint action by the two organizations regarding the special plan of economic co-operation for Central America, established under General Assembly resolution 42/231, adopted on 12 May 1988.

(Mr. Bermudez, Honduras)

The criteria and references I have mentioned are included in the draft resolution I have the honour to submit to the General Assembly. Similarly, the draft reflects the consultations that have been held between the two organizations with a view to facilitating enhanced co-ordination of complementary activities. The general meeting in this regard between representatives of the Organization of American States and representatives of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system has still not been held. The purpose of that meeting is to consider projects, measures and procedures for facilitating and expanding co-operation between them. It would be of mutual benefit to both organizations if the general meeting were to be held before the next regular session of the General Assembly of the Organization of American States, scheduled for next June.

We are quite confident that the natural complementarity between the two organizations will be reflected in the machinery for consultation and co-ordination, which will be refined in the course of the increasing joint activities in matters of mutual interest.

I should like to inform the Assembly that Ecuador, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago have become sponsors of the draft resolution I have the honour to introduce.

In the light of what I have said in this statement, I propose that the draft resolution be adopted without a vote.

The PRESIDENT: The Assembly will now take a decision on draft resolution A/45/L.12. I should like to inform members that the Secretary-General does not foresee programme budget implications in the implementation of this draft resolution.

May I take it that the Assembly adopts the draft resolution?

Draft resolution A/45/L.12 was adopted (resolution 45/10).

The PRESIDENT: We have concluded our consideration of agenda item 21.

AGENDA ITEM 13

REPORT OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE (A/45/4)

The PRESIDENT: The report of the International Court of Justice (A/45/4) covers the period 1 August 1989 to 31 July 1990.

I call on the representative of Denmark, who will speak on behalf of the Nordic countries.

Mr. MORTENSEN (Denmark): On behalf of the Nordic countries, I wish to express our appreciation of the report before us concerning the activities of the International Court of Justice during the past year.

The increasing role of the highest legal authority of the world community in settling disputes between States is a matter of great satisfaction. This increase in the number of cases submitted to the Court coincides with the start of the United Nations Decade of International Law. A major theme of the Decade is, precisely, the peaceful settlement of disputes, including the use of the United Nations judicial organ, the International Court of Justice in The Hague.

The Nordic countries welcome this trend towards using the Court to solve inter-State disputes. It would be in line with one of the basic aims of the United Nations for the role of the International Court of Justice gradually to become a part of normal business in international affairs in the same way as court proceedings are used in national societies. This means that bringing a dispute to the Court in The Hague should be regarded not as an unfriendly act, if an issue cannot be solved through negotiations, but as a constructive step towards solving a difficult issue.

In this context, it is important to find ways and means of reducing the costs involved in carrying out proceedings before the Court. To this end the Secretary-General has taken a most valuable initiative by establishing a Trust Fund through which to reimburse countries, which otherwise, for financial reasons, would be prevented from bringing a case before the International Court of Justice, for some of the costs accumulated through court proceedings. It is a pleasure for me, on behalf of the Nordic countries, to announce a contribution of $100,000 to the Fund.

The PRESIDENT: May I take it that the General Assembly takes note of the report of the International Court of Justice?

It was so decided.

The PRESIDENT: We have concluded our consideration of agenda item 13.
