INTRODUCTION

In recent years great importance has come to be attached to the issue of economic co-operation among developing countries (ECDC). This concern has been steadily voiced in international fora seized with accelerating the development process in developing countries and ensuring a stable and expanding world economy. Thus, one of the main objectives of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade in the field of trade is the promotion and expansion of trade among developing countries. The developing countries, themselves, have also become increasingly aware of the need to pursue collective self-reliance to promote the growth and development of their economies and reduce their historically excessive dependence on the developed market economies and export of primary commodities. In these endeavours, the expansion of mutual trade is assigned a leading, if not the main, role.

This report focuses on the evolution of trade of the countries of Western Asia (ECWA) with other developing countries and regions in the world. It attempts to examine recent trends and patterns of trade and to highlight the major sectors and commodity groups in which mutual trade has been growing most. It is based on extensive and analytical tabulations on overall flows, geographical distribution and commodity structure of trade of the ECWA countries with developing countries elsewhere for the period 1973-1982 contained in the Statistical Annex. This Statistical Annex has been computed with the assistance of the ECE/UNCTAD Joint Data Processing Section in Geneva. Furthermore, and on the basis of information contained in this Annex, eight working tables were prepared and are given at the end of this report.

The report consists of four sections. Section "A" surveys the evolution of trade between the ECWA member countries and other developing countries in terms of overall trade flows, trends, and shares, including and excluding mineral fuels (SITC 3). Section "B" examines the geographical distribution/concentration of trade between the ECWA member countries, on the one hand, and other developing countries in other regions, on the other hand. The commodity structure of trade is reviewed in section "C". Section "D" deals with the relative importance of developing countries as sources and outlets for the ECWA region's trade in major commodity groups.

In order to ascertain whether the evolving trade patterns between the ECWA region and other developing regions suggest and/or confirm a conscious effort on the part of these countries to apply the principle of collective self-reliance, or that traditional trading patterns have been perpetuated, a thorough examination is needed of the existing co-operation mechanism, particularly the bilateral trade and payments agreements and preferential arrangements. This, however, has not been attempted in this report, given the complexity of the issues involved and the extensive qualitative information which is needed.

A. Overall Trade Flows

The trade of the ECWA region with the other developing regions <sup>1/</sup> has shown considerable expansion since 1973. This trend became more pronounced in the early eighties, notably in 1981. Thus, aggregate imports (valued in current United States dollars) grew from $ 1.1 billion in 1973 to over $ 9.3 billion in 1981, while exports grew from $ 3 billion to over $ 34 billion. However, in 1982, and affected by the economic recession in the developed countries and the universal slump, the ECWA region's trade with other developing countries experienced a setback, with imports and exports falling to $ 7.3 billion and $ 27.8 billion, respectively. The region's non-fuel exports to other developing countries, however, grew from over $ 300 million in 1973 to $ 1 billion in 1980 and declined thereafter to reach less than $ 600 million in 1982. A comparison between the absolute growth witnessed in total exports and that in non-fuel exports during the period 1973-1982 highlights the dominance of fuels in the ECWA region's exports to the other developing countries.

1/ The term "Other developing regions" refers to all developing countries other than those in the ECWA region, i.e. those falling in Asia, America, Africa and the Oceania.

Impressive growth rates recorded in the ECWA region's trade with other developing countries between 1973 and 1975. The region's exports to these developing countries grew more rapidly than its exports to the world, recording an average annual rate of growth of 97 per cent compared to 78 per cent for the latter flow. Excluding trade in mineral fuels, exports to the developing countries grew at the rate of 61 per cent per annum, while those to the world rose at an average of 52 per cent. In contrast, the region's imports from the other developing countries grew at a slower pace than its imports from the world, with an annual rate of 38 per cent as opposed to 56 per cent, respectively, between 1973 and 1975.

The rapid expansion in the ECWA region's trade witnessed during 1973-1975 was not maintained during the second half of the seventies. Thus, between 1975 and 1980, the growth of the region's total exports and of its exports to the developing countries sharply decelerated to 26 per cent and 24 per cent per annum, respectively. The corresponding growth rates in the region's non-fuel exports were 16 per cent and 5 per cent. The region's imports also lost momentum as growth slowed down to 30 per cent for total imports and to 31 per cent for imports from other developing regions.

The early eighties were marked by a severe economic recession in the developed countries which adversely affected the external sector of the developing countries. The slackening in world demand in general, and depressed demand for exports of developing countries in particular, exerted a downward pressure on prices and quantities of primary commodities exported by them leading to a contraction in their export earnings. The ECWA region was not spared and its overall trade performance was adversely affected. The fall in the region's total exports by 6 per cent in 1981 was accompanied by a virtual cessation in the growth of exports destined to the other developing regions. In contrast, non-fuel exports to the world grew by 12 per cent above their 1980 level, while those to the other developing regions declined by 15 per cent. At the same time, the region's total imports and its imports from other developing countries grew by 27 per cent and 16 per cent, respectively, above their 1980 level - a marked slow-down from the peak performance in 1973-1975. This was largely a reflection of the sharp decline in the region's imports from developing countries, in general, except those in Asia where a growth rate of 28 per cent was recorded. Similarly, the stagnation in the region's exports to the other developing regions in 1981 reflected the limited growth in its fuel exports to "Developing Asia" and the sharp decline in those destined to "Developing America". While the region's exports to North Africa continued expanding, this was not sufficient to counterbalance the corresponding decline in its non-fuel exports to the other developing regions.

Preliminary statistics for 1982 point to a severe setback in the trade performance of the ECWA region. The region's total exports to and imports from other developing countries fell by around one-fifth each, and its non-fuel exports by 37 per cent, below their level in 1981. The ECWA region's trade with other developing regions registered sharp declines in 1982 except for "Developing America" where exports to them remained virtually unchanged. An examination of the trade balances of the ECWA region with other developing regions reveals a growing surplus from $ 1.9 billion in 1973 to $ 20.5 billion in 1982; the largest surplus recorded was $ 25.1 billion in 1981. During this period, the trade balance of the ECWA region with each of the developing regions under consideration, was favourable and growing. Excluding trade in fuels, however, the ECWA region becomes a net importer from the other developing regions with a persistent and widening deficit, from $ 0.7 billion in 1973 to $ 6.5 billion in 1982. This deficit peaked in 1981 to reach $ 7.9 billion.

per annum, respectively. The corresponding growth rates in the region's non-fuel exports were 16 per cent and 5 per cent. The region's imports also lost momentum as growth slowed down to 30 per cent for total imports and to 31 per cent for imports from other developing regions.

This deficit peaked in 1981 to reach $ 7.9 billion.

The growth witnessed between 1973 and 1982 in the absolute level of trade between the ECWA region and the other developing regions was hardly accompanied by any growth in their relative shares, particularly in the case of imports and non-fuels exports, leaving these shares generally to deteriorate or fluctuate considerably without a discernable trend. In effect, the share of developing countries in the imports of the ECWA region diminished from 13 per cent in 1973 to an average of 10 per cent throughout the period ending in 1981, before falling again to 8 per cent in 1982. And while in 1973 developing countries absorbed 24 per cent of the region's non-fuel exports, their share fluctuated sharply thereafter to average around 12 per cent in 1981-1982. <sup>1/</sup> By contrast, the share of developing countries in the aggregate dollar value of the region's exports went up from 16 per cent in 1973 to 24 per cent in 1982, having averaged 19 per cent until 1981. This could be largely attributed to increased fuel exports <sup>2/</sup>, the share of which in the total exports of the ECWA region to other developing regions grew from 89 per cent to 98 per cent during the period reviewed.

1/ In this context it is worth noting that the bulk of the region's non-fuel export trade is being increasingly carried out inside the region as evidenced by the rise in the share of the regional market from 36 per cent to 59 per cent between 1973 and 1982.

2/ In absolute terms, the value of fuel exports from the region to developing countries grew by an average of 43 per cent per annum between 1973 and 1980. These exports declined slightly in 1981 (by 1 per cent) and sharply in 1982 by over 19 per cent, resulting in an average growth rate in fuel exports between 1973 and 1982 of 30 per cent per annum.

At the level of individual ECWA countries, the share of developing countries grew in the case of exports originating in the oil economies and in Yemen; notably in the case of Iraq (from 17 to 52 per cent), Bahrain (from 40 to 44 per cent), Saudi Arabia (from 16 to 25 per cent) and Kuwait (from 18 to 30 per cent). Excluding mineral fuels, the share of developing countries increased mostly in the case of exports from Saudi Arabia (largely re-exports of machinery and, to a lesser extent, fertilizers) from 12 per cent to 32 per cent, and from Qatar (mainly fertilizers) from 2 per cent to 19 per cent; while their share declined in the remaining ECWA countries and notably in Lebanon (from 38 per cent to 1 per cent), Oman (from 32 per cent to 11 per cent) and Kuwait (from 28 per cent to 10 per cent). Their share in imports diminished for all ECWA countries with the exception of Saudi Arabia where it was roughly maintained at an average of 10 per cent during the period 1973-1982.

B. Geographical Distribution of Trade

During the period 1973-1982, the bulk of trade between the ECWA region and the other developing regions was carried out between the oil economies (mainly Saudi Arabia and, to a lesser extent, Iraq and Kuwait) and the developing countries in Asia (mainly Singapore, Korea, Turkey and India). In Latin America, Brazil was also a significant trading partner, particularly as the largest single developing country consumer of the region's oil. Until recently, India was an important source of goods and Iran a significant outlet for the region's non-fuel exports.

Between 1973 and 1982, the oil economies were predominantly responsible for a growing share of the region's trade with other developing countries, accounting for 70 to 88 per cent of aggregate imports, 92 to 99 per cent of total exports and 43 to 82 per cent of non-fuel exports. More specifically, in 1973 Iraq was responsible for about 29 per cent of the ECWA region's imports from the other developing countries. It was followed by Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, accounting for 17 per cent, 15 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively. As of 1976, however, Saudi Arabia emerged as the main importer and its share gradually expanded from one-fifth to more than half of the region's imports from developing countries in 1982. At the same time, Iraq's share fell to 13 per cent in 1976 and fluctuated thereafter to stand at 16 per cent in 1982, while Lebanon's share became negligible. Meanwhile, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait exchanged third and fourth places on the list of main importers, as their shares fluctuated in a declining trend between 1976 and 1982, from 15 per cent to 7 per cent, and from 17 per cent to 6 per cent, respectively.

The oil economies became also increasingly responsible for the region's exports to the other developing regions during the past decade. Thus, Saudi Arabia dominated the region's exports to developing countries as evidenced by the pronounced expansion in its share from 50 per cent in 1973 to 70 per cent in 1982. The balance of the region's exports to the other developing regions was largely accounted for by Iraq and Kuwait. Iraq's share jumped from 11 per cent in 1973 to 28 per cent in 1979 before diminishing to 15 per cent in 1982; while Kuwait's share slightly fluctuated between 23 per cent in 1973 and 19 per cent in 1979, before sharply dropping to 5 per cent in 1982. At the outset of the eighties, however, the United Arab Emirates emerged as a significant supplier, accounting for between 4 and 5 per cent of total exports. The share of Lebanon, which was 7 per cent of the region's total exports to the other developing countries in 1973 became negligible, as fuels gained in relative importance following the upward adjustments of oil prices, and the country's ability to export weakened by the civil disturbances and hostilities.

Excluding fuels, almost one-half of the region's exports to the other developing countries in 1973 originated in Lebanon and one-fourth in Kuwait. In 1975, these two countries were about equally responsible for 70 per cent of the region's non-fuel exports to the developing world. In 1976, Lebanon's share fell sharply to 13 per cent and fluctuated thereafter to reach 8 per cent in 1981, and Kuwait assumed first position during this period, despite considerable fluctuation in its share, which ranged from 37 per cent in 1976 to 28 per cent in 1981. By 1982, the shares of both countries had steeply fallen (to 1 per cent in the case of Lebanon, and less than 5 per cent for Kuwait). Meanwhile, the share of Saudi Arabia in the region's non-fuel exports to developing countries had considerably expanded from 1 per cent in 1973 to emerge in 1981, on equal footing with Kuwait, as its contribution rose to 27 per cent of the total. In 1982, Saudi Arabia emerged as the main supplier of non-fuel exports from the region (mainly re-exports and fertilizers) accounting for 54 per cent, followed by Jordan (mainly phosphates), the latter having supplied only 3 per cent in 1973.

During the period reviewed, the bulk of trade between the ECWA countries and the other developing countries was increasingly being carried out with developing countries in Asia. The share of "Developing Asia" in this trade increased, between 1973 and 1982 from 51 to 68 per cent of the region's exports; from 45 per cent to 61 per cent of non-fuel exports; and from 71 to 81 per cent of imports. During the first half of the seventies, the main suppliers of the ECWA countries among this group were India, Turkey and Pakistan. By the late seventies and early eighties, Turkey, Korea and Singapore became more significant as suppliers, followed by Hong Kong, Pakistan then India. Throughout the period 1973-1982, the main consumers of the region's exports were Singapore and Korea followed, at a distance, by Turkey and India. Thailand, Pakistan, Indonesia and the Philippines were also significant consumers. The major outlets for the region's non-fuel exports in "Developing Asia" were India and until recently Iran. Pakistan and Singapore emerged in the early eighties as important consumers; while during the early seventies Turkey represented an important market for the region's non-fuel exports.

The balance of trade exchanged between the ECWA region and other developing countries was conducted mainly with Brazil, in Latin America, and the North African Arab States. The share of "Developing America" in the region's imports from developing countries fell from 16 per cent in 1973 to 12 per cent in 1982 in the case of imports, and from 39 per cent to 26 per cent in the case of exports, which consisted almost entirely of oil. At the same time, the contribution of developing countries in Africa to reciprocal trade also diminished from 13 per cent to 7 per cent, in imports, and from 10 per cent to 6 per cent, in exports. And while in 1973, the developing countries in Asia and those in North Africa almost equally absorbed 90 per cent of the region's non-fuel exports to developing countries, the share of the North African Arab States (predominantly re-exports of manufactured goods) dropped to less than 32 per cent of the total in 1982 (half the share of "Developing Asia").

C. Commodity Structure of Trade

The structural pattern of imports of the ECWA region has undergone two significant changes between 1973 and 1982. The first was the progressive growth in the share of machinery and transport equipment in total imports, from 32 per cent to 44 per cent. The second was the gradual decline in the share of imports of food items from 20 per cent to 12 per cent. The former change could be largely attributed to the region's efforts to speed up the pace of development through increased imports of capital goods, the latter could be related partly to better harvests in recent years and to expanded domestic production. Exogenous factors such as the decline in international prices of primary and agricultural products, including foodstuffs, since 1980 also contributed to reducing the aggregate value of these imports which dropped in 1982 by 5 per cent below their level in 1980.

While a different structural pattern characterizes the region's total imports and its imports from other developing countries, in some respects the two flows underwent a number of similar changes. In 1973, more than half of the region's imports from other developing countries was accounted for by food items (mainly from Turkey and Brazil followed by India and Pakistan) and over one-fourth by manufactured goods other than machinery and transport equipment (mainly from Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore). Thereafter, a progressive growth in the share of the latter category was accompanied by a gradual decline in that of the former, until by 1982, each category accounted for about 38 per cent of the ECWA region's imports from developing countries. At the same time, the share of agricultural raw materials fell from 9 per cent in 1973 to 3 per cent in 1982; while, that of ores and metals more than doubled to 7 per cent.

The structural changes in the region's imports from other developing countries, as a whole, closely mirrored those of its imports from the developing countries in Asia, which have been the principal suppliers throughout the period reviewed, accounting for four-fifths of imports in 1982. In 1973, the region's imports from "Developing Asia" were also dominated by food items (42 per cent), followed by manufactured goods other than machinery and transport equipment (33 per cent). Subsequently, a gradual shift in concentration occurred as these two categories exchanged positions; by 1982, their respective shares stood at 30 per cent and 46 per cent of the total.

In 1973, imports of the ECWA region from the developing countries in America (mainly from Brazil), consisted almost entirely of food items which accounted for over 92 per cent of the total. In the ensuing period, however, the share of food items, gradually diminished to reach two-thirds of the total in 1982. This was offset by a rise in the share of manufactured goods, from 5 per cent to 17 per cent, and of ores and metals from less than one per cent to 13 per cent. Imports of the ECWA region from Developing Africa (predominantly foodstuffs) and the Oceania have remained relatively insignificant.

2. Exports

(a) Fuels (SITC 3)

The exports of the ECWA region are heavily weighted by oil, a concentration which deepened after 1973, before it started falling slightly during the early eighties as a result of reduced world demand. Thus, the share of mineral fuels in the aggregate dollar value of exports grew from less than 93 per cent in 1973 to over 97 per cent in 1980 and then declined to 96 per cent in 1982.

The region's exports to other developing regions also consisted predominantly of oil, the share of which in the total grew steadily from 89 per cent to 98 per cent between 1973 and 1982. This was associated with an expansion in the already significant share of the developing regions in ECWA's fuel exports from 15 per cent in 1973 to 19 per cent in 1981 and up to over 24 per cent in 1982, highlighting the growing importance of developing countries as alternative markets for crude oil and products.

The dominance of oil is evident in the region's exports to all developing regions. For example, between 1973 and 1982, the share of mineral fuels in ECWA's exports to "Developing Asia" grew from 91 per cent to 98 per cent, to "Developing America" from 99 to almost 100 per cent and to "Developing Africa" from 44 per cent to 86 per cent. The bulk of the region's fuel exports to the other developing countries was largely consumed by those in Asia (mainly, Singapore and Korea, followed by Turkey) <sup>1/</sup>, the combined share of which in the total grew from 52 per cent in 1973 to 68 per cent in 1982. This represented more than doubling of their share in ECWA's fuel exports to around 17 per cent over this period. "Developing America" (mainly Brazil) accounted for most of the balance, though their share in ECWA's fuel exports to other developing regions dropped from 43 per cent in 1973 to 27 per cent in 1982. However, among the developing countries, Brazil remains the single largest consumer of the ECWA region's fuels, accounting for an average of one-fourth of the total during 1973-1982. In relative terms, this represented a growth of Brazil's share in the region's total fuel exports from 4 per cent in 1973 to 6 per cent in 1982.

1/ India, Thailand, Pakistan, Indonesia and the Philippines were also significant consumers of ECWA's fuel exports during the period reviewed.

(b) Non-fuel exports

In relative terms, non-fuel exports have generally remained of limited significance in the trade of the ECWA region, consisting largely of primary and agricultural commodities (mainly cotton and phosphates) and, to a lesser extent indigenous semi-manufactured and manufactured products <sup>1/</sup> in some instances. Despite efforts aimed at export diversification, the share of non-fuel exports in the region's aggregate exports declined from 7 per cent in 1973 to 3 per cent in 1980 before rising to 4 per cent in 1982. <sup>2/</sup>

During this period, manufactured goods apparently replaced traditional primary agricultural commodities as the leading non-fuel export category. This should be viewed against the fact that re-exports constitute a large proportion of non-fuel exports in a number of ECWA countries, and to that extent cannot be taken as an indication of export diversification. The only category among exports of non-fuel primary goods <sup>3/</sup> which exhibited growth was ores and metals <sup>4/</sup>, the share of which in the total grew from 9 per cent in 1973 to 15 per cent in 1982. At the same time, the share of manufactured goods other than machinery and transport equipment rose from 25 per cent to 30 per cent.

<sup>2/</sup> Reflecting more the changes in relative importance of fuels than the growth in traditional exports and new product lines. The limited growth witnessed is largely linked to petroleum and its derivatives including manufactured fertilizers and petrochemical products.

Despite the absolute growth witnessed in the region's non-fuel exports to developing countries between 1973 and 1982, its share in the total diminished drastically from over 10 per cent in 1973 to a meager 2 per cent in 1982. This largely reflected the growing predominance of fuels in exports to developing countries, while the share of all primary products, with the exception of the category of ores and metals, and manufactured goods other than machinery and transport equipment, diminished considerably.

The share of machinery and transport equipment, destined mainly to Egypt and Sudan and Iran upto 1980, grew from 13 per cent in 1973 to account for one-third of the region's non-fuel exports to the other developing regions in 1982. Disregarding such exports which are largely re-export items, some of the region's indigenous exports have come to occupy a significant position in its non-fuel exports to developing countries; notably fertilizers mainly from Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Qatar to India and up to 1981 Iran; phosphates from Jordan to India and until recently Turkey; and, to a much lesser extent, aluminium from Bahrain to Pakistan. Notwithstanding the considerable fluctuation in the share of chemicals (mainly fertilizers), between 1973 and 1982, this product category maintained a dominant position in the region's indigenous non-fuel exports to developing countries; by 1982 its share had regained its 1973 level at 30 per cent of the total. The corresponding share for ores and metals (mainly phosphates and some aluminium) moved up from 7 per cent to 17 per cent, thus being the only product category among the primary goods which experienced growth in relative terms during 1973-1982. Exports of food items (mainly to Egypt and until the early eighties to Iran) lost considerable ground as their share in the region's non-fuel exports to developing countries fell from 17 per cent to less than 6 per cent between 1973 and 1982. The corresponding share for agricultural raw materials, mainly Syrian cotton to North Africa, dropped from 5 per cent to less than 2 per cent. Similarly, the share of manufactured goods other than machinery and transport equipment (mainly from Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Egypt and until the early eighties to Iran) shrank from 29 per cent in 1973, to 11 per cent in 1982.

D. Relative Importance of Developing Countries by Major Product Categories

Between 1973 and 1982, the share of developing countries in total exports of the ECWA region grew from 16 per cent to 24 per cent, largely because of increased fuel exports. In contrast, their relative importance in non-fuel exports declined from 24 per cent to 13 per cent over the same period of time. Moreover, after having supplied the region with 13 per cent of its imports in 1973, the share of developing countries shrank to 8 per cent in 1982.

Developments in the ECWA region's trade with other developing regions closely reflected those of its oil exporting members' trade with the developing countries in Asia, since they accounted for the bulk of mutual trade during the past decade. The share of "Developing Asia" in the ECWA region's exports doubled to 16 per cent between 1973 and 1982; whereas, it declined from 11 per cent to 8 per cent in the case of non-fuel exports and from 9 per cent to 7 per cent in the case of imports. "Developing America" absorbed a fluctuating share of the region's exports (almost entirely oil), ranging between 8 per cent and 4 per cent and averaging 6 per cent in the period 1973-1982. And while the North African Arab States consumed in 1973 around 11 per cent of the region's non-fuel exports (mainly re-exports of manufactured goods), their share declined thereafter to stand at a little over 4 per cent in 1982.

Measured in relative terms, the importance of developing countries as a source of imports dwindled between 1973 and 1982. Thus, after having supplied the ECWA region in 1973 with 34 per cent of its needs of food items (mainly from Turkey and Brazil followed by India and Pakistan) and 45 per cent of its agricultural raw materials, their share, though still significant, gradually diminished to reach in 1982 about one-fourth of the region's imports of each of these two product categories.

During the same period, their (mainly Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore) share in the region's imports of manufactured goods, other than machinery and transport equipment remained virtually unchanged at around 13 per cent. Thus, the developing regions continued to be marginal suppliers of the other major product categories imported by the ECWA region, particularly of machinery and transport equipment.

Regarding exports, the relative importance of developing countries grew only in the case of fuels, as their consumption of the region's fuel exports increased from 15 per cent to over 24 per cent between 1973 and 1982. Oil aside, however, their relative importance as outlets for the region's other major export categories declined from 24 per cent to 13 per cent. Nevertheless, developing countries remained significant consumers of the region's exports of chemicals (mainly fertilizers), despite sharp fluctuations in the share going to them. Thus, after having absorbed almost half of the region's exports of chemicals in 1973, the share of developing countries dropped sharply after 1975 to 17 per cent in 1981. In 1982, developing countries regained their earlier dominant position. Their share in the region's exports of ores and metals went up from 17 per cent in 1973 to 25 per cent in 1979, and diminished thereafter to average 15 per cent during 1980-1982. Meanwhile, the region's exports of food items lost considerable ground in the developing countries as their share dropped from 16 per cent in 1973 to 5 per cent in 1982, in favour of a growing share going to the regional market (from 46 per cent in 1973 up to 85 per cent in 1982). Similarly, the share of developing countries in the region's exports of machinery and transport equipment (mainly re-exports) declined from 26 per cent in 1973 to 17 per cent in 1982; while their share in exports of other manufactured goods fell sharply from 28 per cent to 5 per cent, as these were being increasingly absorbed within the region (e.g. 80 per cent in 1982). And while the share of developing countries in the region's exports of agricultural raw materials (mainly Syrian cotton to Algeria) tripled to 24 per cent between 1973 and 1981, it fell sharply to less than 7 per cent in 1982.

Thus, during 1973-1982, the other developing regions constituted a significant and growing market for the ECWA region's exports of fuels, fertilizers and phosphates, although their share in the latter two products fluctuated considerably in recent years. As an outlet for the region's exports of foodstuffs and raw cotton, they lost considerably in significance.

Their relative importance as a source of food items and agricultural raw materials dwindled, though remaining significant; while they continued to be marginal suppliers of machinery and transport equipment and their share in other manufactured goods imported by the region virtually stagnated. Thus, one-fourth of the ECWA region's exports of fuels, half of its exports of chemicals and 15 per cent of its ores and metals were consumed by other developing regions in 1982. At the same time, around one-fourth of its needs of food items and agricultural raw materials, and 12 per cent of its imports of manufactured goods, other than machinery and transport equipment, were supplied by other developing countries.

Oil aside, the decline in relative importance of developing countries in the trade of the ECWA region could probably be viewed against the universal recession in recent years; problems of market access and penetration, including tariff and non-tariff barriers to trade and policies to protect domestic industries; and the inadequacy of the institutional structure, including preferential trade and payments arrangements.

STATISTICAL ANNEX

The Annex is divided into four main parts comprising eight basic series of tabulations. These tabulations cover the various aspects of the trade of the ECWA countries with other developing countries and regions and are detailed at the country, sub-groupings and regional levels for the years 1973-1982.

Part I covers the overall trade flows (in current United States dollars), and contains two main series of tabulations. Series I.A provides a regional picture of the overall trade flows, including and excluding trade in mineral fuels (SITC 3) with each of the other developing regions (in Asia, America, Africa and the Oceania). Series I.B gives a detailed picture of the trade flows for each of the ECWA countries with the other developing countries and regions.

Part II depicts trade trends in terms of average annual compound rates of growth for 1973-1975, 1975-1980, 1980-1981 and 1981-1982. It comprises two series of tabulations; the first at the regional and subregional levels and the second at the individual ECWA country level. The average rates of growth are given for total trade as well as for trade excluding mineral fuels.

Parts III and IV are concerned with the relative importance of developing countries and regions in the trade of the ECWA region, its sub-groupings and individual member countries. Part III consists of a single series of tabulations showing the percentage shares of other developing countries and regions in total and non-fuel trade of the ECWA region. Part IV gives a breakdown of the commodity structure of trade between the ECWA countries and other developing regions and the relative importance of the latter as sources and outlets for the region's trade in terms of Major SITC Product Categories. This part is composed of four series of tabulations: Series IV.A. and IV.B are in percentage terms; while Series IV.C and IV.D give the value of these product categories in current United States dollars.

General and explanatory notes

1. The trade statistics provided in this Annex are based on the United Nations Statistical Office data derived from the Commodity Trade Statistics According to SITC Statistical Papers Series - D. The data base was constructed from officially reported statistics and, in their absence, complemented from partner countries' trade data. The sources of data used for each of the ECWA member countries were as follows:

2. The classification used is intended for statistical convenience and does not necessarily imply any judgement regarding the stage of development of any particular country or region. Thus,

- DVLPG ASIA (-ECWA) stands for the developing countries in Asia, excluding the ECWA region; i.e. Cyprus, Iran, Turkey plus South and South-East Asia;
- DVLPG AMERICA covers the developing countries in America;
- DVLPG AFRICA comprises the developing countries in Africa including the North African Arab countries;
- DVLPG OCEANIA covers the developing countries in Oceania;
- TOTAL DVLPG (-ECWA) represents the sum of the four developing regions listed above other than the ECWA region;
- ECWA Oil economies cover Bahrain, Iraq, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.
- ECWA Non-oil economies cover Democratic Yemen, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen.

3. The Major SITC Product Categories are defined as follows:

Food items: SITC (0 + 1 + 22 + 4)
Agricultural raw materials: SITC (2 - 22 - 27 - 28)
Ores and metals: SITC (27 + 28 + 67 + 68)
Fuels : SITC (3)
Chemicals : SITC (5)
Machinery and transport equipment: SITC (7)
Other manufactures: SITC (6 + 8 - 67 - 68)
All commodities: SITC (0 to 9)

4. Data for 1982 are preliminary;

5. Zero (0) or (0.0) denotes nil or negligible;

6. The ($) is the United States dollar;

(000) US $ stands for thousand United States dollars; and

7. Details may not add up to totals due to rounding.
