COMPLETION OF THE COMMITTEE'S WORK

CORRIGENDUM

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 3415 (XXX) of 8 December 1975, the records of the meetings of the Main Committees of the Assembly and of the General Committee - which were issued first in provisional mimeographed form and, after being edited, reissued in printed form - have, since the thirty-first session, been issued only once, in final form, the text being subject to correction.

The corrigendum that follows contains delegation and Secretariat corrections to the English text of the records of the meetings held by the Sixth Committee during the thirty-ninth session (A/C.6/39/SR.1-66).

With the issuance of this corrigendum, the records of the above-mentioned meetings are to be considered final.

Note. As a rule, corrections to the following have not been included in the corrigendum:

- (a) The headings and tables of contents of individual meetings;
- (b) The symbols of documents pertaining to the agenda item under consideration;
- (c) The spelling of proper names.

For these, see the contents of meetings above, the relevant annex fascicles, and the List of Delegations, respectively.

116. The attempts to justify Turkey's actions made a mockery of the Charter, in particular of Article 2, paragraph 4, and Article 103, as well as of the relevant articles of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties pertaining to treaty provisions conflicting with pre-emptory norms of international law. The representative of Turkey was wrong in stating that the Treaty of Guarantee conferred upon a guarantor power the right of military action in Cyprus. Accordingly, his delegation was more convinced than ever of the need to close every loophole which could possibly be used to justify the illegal use of force and the occupation of the territory of others.

Paragraph 11

At the end of the paragraph add

That Declaration reaffirmed the obligation to settle disputes by peaceful means, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter. It was based on the principle of free choice of means while taking into account the realities in the international community with regard to compulsory jurisdiction, meaning that it was hardly likely that a third party could play a positive role in the settlement of a dispute without the express agreement of the parties directly concerned. The Declaration took duly into account experience gained in the peaceful settlement of disputes, which had shown that some procedures were more suitable than others and that sovereign States were free to choose the peaceful means that they deemed appropriate. It made it possible in any case to reach an early and equitable solution. It gave guidance in the sense that, whatever procedure was used, the solution had to be based on equitable principles and therefore had to be aimed at increasing respect for fairness and justice in the exercise of rights. Solutions likely to be considered by the parties as inequitable were difficult to implement, did not survive the test of time and could give rise to further disputes. Finally, the Declaration emphasized the supreme importance of direct and meaningful negotiations between the parties to a dispute as a flexible and effective means of peaceful settlement; since they were bound to enter into them with an agreement in view, not simply hold formal negotiations to resolve their differences. The parties were compelled to conduct themselves in such a way as to make negotiation meaningful, which it was not when one of them persisted in its own position without considering the possibility of any change.

25th meeting

Paragraph 29

The second sentence should read Certain elements which had, over the years, become bones of bitter symbolic contention, had been abandoned and replaced by new material, so that a higher degree of consensus than would even have seemed possible in the past had been achieved.

Paragraph 30

The second sentence should read The three-point structure of the Special Committee's mandate had to be maintained; the United Kingdom delegation was therefore not in favour of dropping the question of the rationalization of United Nations procedures, as had been proposed during the debate.

Paragraph 31

The last sentence should read Those who made a life-and-death political issue out of proposed procedural improvements showed thereby that what they wanted was not an effective United Nations but an ineffective one.

24. Mr. DE PAIVA (Brazil) noted that, according to General Assembly resolution 38/139, the Sixth Committee was expected to take a decision on the date and place for the convening of the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations. In the opinion of his delegation, since the results of the work of the International Law Commission had been submitted two years earlier and since informal consultations had taken place in 1984, the Conference could be held in 1986 on a date agreed upon with the host country. The Sixth Committee was also asked in resolution 38/139 to take a decision on the question of participation in the Conference. In that connection, his delegation considered that invitations should be addressed to a certain number of organizations, those traditionally invited to submit comments on drafts prepared by the International Law Commission.

Paragraph 25

Line 7: for decision read final decision

Lines 9 to 13 should read continue the consultations, they should be open to all interested delegations. He doubted that formal meetings would be useful at the current stage. Informal meetings also had limitations, but the idea was to allow a dialogue to be started. The Conference itself would take the final decisions.

7. Mr. BERMAN (United Kingdom) said that, although the conclusions of the Working Group's report were modest, they were none the less useful. It was a pity that the Working Group had not been able to make the determination called for in resolution 36/112, though it was clear that there was no single rule and that the treaty-making processes in the United Nations were effective enough to the extent that the initiative for a given treaty met the needs of the international community. With regard to the final document, he felt that the language was awkward and that, for example, the English text had to be read with the word "should" so as to make proper sense of the recommendations to States. Since draft resolution A/C.6/39/L.16 represented the joint view of the States which had participated in the Working Group, his delegation had no difficulty in accepting it and felt that the Committee should adopt it by consensus.
