Proposals and substantive amendments shall normally be submitted in writing to the Secretary-General of the Conference, who shall circulate copies to all delegations. Unless the Conference decides otherwise, substantive proposals shall be discussed or put to a decision no earlier than 24 hours after copies have been circulated in all languages of the Conference to all delegations. The President may, however, permit the discussion and consideration of amendments, even though these amendments have not been circulated or have only been circulated the same day.

Withdrawal of proposals and motions

Rule 30

A proposal or a motion may be withdrawn by its sponsor at any time before a decision on it has been taken, provided that it has not been amended. A proposal or a motion thus withdrawn may be reintroduced by any representative.

Decisions on competence

Rule 31

Subject to rule 28, any motion calling for a decision on the competence of the Conference to adopt a proposal submitted to it shall be put to the vote before a decision is taken on the proposal in question.

Permission to speak on a motion to reconsider shall be accorded only to two speakers opposing reconsideration, after which the motion shall be immediately put to the vote.

VII. DECISION-MAKING

General agreement

Rule 33

Voting rights

Rule 34

Each State participating in the Conference shall have one vote.

Majority required

Rule 35

1. Subject to rule 33, decisions of the Conference on all matters of substance shall be taken by a two-thirds majority of the representatives present and voting.
2. Except as otherwise provided in these rules, decisions of the Conference on all matters of procedure shall be taken by a majority of the representatives present and voting.
3. If the question arises whether a matter is one of procedure or of substance, the President of the Conference shall rule on the question. An appeal against this ruling shall be put to the vote immediately, and the President's ruling shall stand unless overruled by a majority of the representatives present and voting.
4. If a vote is equally divided, the proposal or motion shall be regarded as rejected.

Meaning of the phrase "representatives present and voting"

Rule 36

For the purpose of these rules, the phrase "representatives present and voting" means representatives casting an affirmative or negative vote. Representatives who abstain from voting shall be regarded as not voting.

Method of voting

Rule 37

1. Except as provided in rule 44, the Conference shall normally vote by show of hands, except that a representative may request a roll-call, which shall then be taken in the English alphabetical order of the names of the States participating in the Conference, beginning with the delegation whose name is drawn by lot by the President. The name of each State shall be called in all roll-calls, and its representative shall reply "yes", "no" or "abstention".

2. When the Conference votes by mechanical means, a non-recorded vote shall replace a vote by show of hands and a recorded vote shall replace a roll-call. A representative may request a recorded vote, which shall, unless a representative requests otherwise, be taken without calling out the names of the States participating in the Conference.

3. The vote of each State participating in a roll-call or a recorded vote shall be inserted in any record of or report on the meeting.

Conduct during voting

Rule 38

After the President has announced the commencement of voting, no representative shall interrupt the voting except on a point of order in connection with the process of voting.

Explanation of vote

Rule 39

Representatives may make brief statements consisting solely of explanations of vote, before the voting has commenced or after the voting has been completed. The President may limit the time to be allowed for such explanations. The representative of a State sponsoring a proposal or motion shall not speak in explanation of vote thereon, except if it has been amended.

Division of proposals

Rule 40

A representative may move that parts of a proposal be decided on separately. If a representative objects, the motion for division shall be voted upon. Permission to speak on the motion shall be accorded only to two representatives in favour of and to two opposing the division. If the motion is carried, those parts of the proposal that are subsequently approved shall be put to the Conference for decision as a whole. If all operative parts of the proposal have been rejected, the proposal shall be considered to have been rejected as a whole.

Amendments

Rule 41

A proposal is considered an amendment to another proposal if it merely adds to, deletes from or revises part of that proposal. Unless specified otherwise, the word "proposal" in these rules shall be considered as including amendments.

Order of voting on amendments

Rule 42

When an amendment is moved to a proposal, the amendment shall be voted on first. When two or more amendments are moved to a proposal, the Conference shall vote first on the amendment furthest removed in substance from the original proposal and then on the amendment next furthest removed therefrom and so on until all the amendments have been put to the vote. Where, however, the adoption of one amendment necessarily implies the rejection of another amendment, the latter shall not be put to the vote. If one or more amendments are adopted, the amended proposal shall then be voted upon.

Order of voting on proposals

Rule 43

1. If two or more proposals, other than amendments, relate to the same question, they shall, unless the Conference decides otherwise, be voted on in the order in which they were submitted. The Conference may after each vote on a proposal, decide whether to vote on the next proposal.
2. Revised proposals shall be voted on in the order in which the original proposals were submitted, unless the revision substantially departs from the original proposal. In that case the original proposal shall be considered as withdrawn and the revised proposal shall be treated as a new proposal.

3. A motion requiring that no decision be taken on a proposal shall be put to the vote before a decision is taken on the proposal in question.

Elections

Rule 44

All elections shall be held by secret ballot unless, in the absence of any objection, the Conference decides to proceed without taking a ballot when there is an agreed candidate or slate.

Rule 45

1. When one or more elective places are to be filled at one time under the same conditions, those candidates, in a number not exceeding the number of such places, obtaining in the first ballot a majority of the votes cast and the largest number of votes, shall be elected.

2. If the number of candidates obtaining such majority is less than the number of places to be filled, additional ballots shall be held to fill the remaining places, the voting being restricted to the candidates obtaining the greatest number of votes in the previous ballot to a number not more than twice the places remaining to be filled.

VIII. SUBSIDIARY BODIES

Main Committee

Rule 46

The Conference may establish a Main Committee as required which may set up subcommittees or working groups.

Representation on the Main Committee

Rule 47

Each State participating in the Conference may be represented by one representative on the Main Committee established by the Conference. It may assign to these Committees such alternate representatives and advisers as may be required.

1. Non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council which express their wish to attend the Conference and its Preparatory Committee meetings shall be accredited for participation. Others wishing to be accredited may apply to the secretariat of the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction for this purpose.

The Yokohama Strategy for a Safer World

Guidelines for (natural) disaster prevention, preparedness and mitigation

The States participating in the World Conference on Natural Disaster
Reduction, convened at Yokohama, Japan, from 23 to 27 May 1994,

Recognizing the rapidly rising world-wide economic and human toll of economic losses due to natural disasters,

Recalling the decision of the General Assembly in its resolution 44/236 of 22 December 1989 to launch a far-reaching global undertaking for the 1990s to save human lives and reduce the impact of natural disasters,

Recalling the forward-looking decision of the General Assembly in its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 to adopt an integrated approach for disaster management in all its aspects and to initiate a process towards a global culture of prevention,

Recognizing that sustainable development cannot be achieved in many countries without adequate measures to reduce disaster losses, and that there are close linkages between disaster losses and environmental degradation, as emphasized in Agenda 21, 1/

Reaffirming the relevance of the Rio Declaration on the Environment, 2/ in particular Principle 18, which stresses the need for the international community to assist States afflicted by natural disasters and other emergencies that are likely to produce sudden harmful effects in the environment of those States,

1/ Report of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, Rio de Janeiro, 3-14 June 1992, vol. I, Resolutions Adopted by the Conference (United Nations publication, Sales No. E.93.I.8), resolution 1, annex II.

2/ Ibid., annex I.

Emphasizing the need for the United Nations system to pay special attention to the least developed, land-locked and island developing countries, and recalling in this regard that the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the 1990s called for giving priority attention to least developed countries in the activities of the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction,

Responding to the request of the General Assembly in its resolution 48/188 of 23 December 1993 to:

- (a) Review the accomplishments of the Decade at national, regional and international levels;
- (b) Chart a programme of action for the future;
- (c) Exchange information on the implementation of Decade programmes and policies;
- (d) Increase awareness of the importance of disaster reduction policies;

The States, participants in the World Conference on Natural Disaster Reduction,

At the time of reaching the mid-point of the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction, reaffirming our commitment to pursuing, through national and international efforts, the transformation of the International Framework of Action for the Decade into a decisive intersectoral Plan of Action,

In a new spirit of partnership to build a safer world, based on common interest, sovereign equality and shared responsibility to save human lives, protect property and ensure progress and stability,

While generally recognizing that each country bears the primary responsibility of protecting its own people, infrastructure and other national assets from the impact of natural disasters, and accepting at the same time that, in the context of increasing global interdependence, an enabling international environment is vital to the success of these national efforts,

Adopt the following principles, strategy and plan of action.

I. PRINCIPLES

(Executive summary of the World Conference)

Explanatory note

The informal preparatory process has shown that if the Yokohama document is to reach both the political decision makers and the private sector of society with an attractive and sellable message that creates interest and generates will for action, it should comprise a declaratory part and a well-defined set of recommendations and activities (plan of action); the document could be used as a whole or each section separately. This section (I) will be the declaratory part and its text should be based on the following points.

1. Risk assessment is a required step for the adoption of adequate and successful disaster reduction policies and measures.
2. Disaster prevention and preparedness are of primary importance in reducing the need for disaster relief.
3. Disaster prevention, preparedness and mitigation should be considered as important aspects of development policy and planning at the national, bilateral, multilateral and international levels.
4. Early warnings and the effective dissemination of such information are the keys to disaster prevention and reduction.
5. Preventive measures are most effective when they involve participation at all levels, from the local community through the national government to the international level.
6. Vulnerability can be reduced by the application of proper design and patterns of development focused on target groups, by appropriate education and training of the whole community, and by transfer of technology.
7. Environmental protection as a component of sustainable development consistent with poverty alleviation is imperative in the prevention and mitigation of natural disasters.
8. Each country bears the primary responsibility for protecting its people, infrastructure, and other national assets from the impact of natural disasters. The international community should demonstrate strong political determination required to mobilize adequate resources and make use of existing resources, including financial, scientific and technological means, in the field of natural disaster reduction, bearing in mind the needs of the developing countries, particularly the least developed countries.

A. Basis for the Strategy

Explanatory note

This chapter should get the message across primarily to political decision makers and the general public that the basic principles of the Decade are as valid as ever, and that urgent, concerted action is required if the Decade's implementation is to succeed during its second half. Therefore, the principles must be restated in the light of the experience gained since 1989.

1. Natural disasters continue to strike and increase in magnitude, complexity, frequency and economic impact; urgent action is required.
2. The phenomena causing natural disasters are in most cases beyond human control. Society, therefore, must recognize and strengthen traditional ways and explore new ways to live with such risk, and take actions to prevent as well as to reduce the effects of such disasters.
3. The least developed countries, small island and land-locked countries are the most vulnerable countries, as they are the least equipped to mitigate the effects of disasters.
4. Developing countries affected by desertification, drought and other types of natural disasters are also equally vulnerable and least equipped to mitigate the effects of natural disasters.
5. In all countries the poor and socially disadvantaged groups suffer most from natural disasters and are least equipped to cope with them.
6. Disasters contribute to social, economic, cultural and political disruption in urban and rural contexts, each in its specific way. Large-scale urban concentrations are particularly fragile because of their complexity and the accumulation of population and infrastructures in limited areas.
7. Some patterns of consumption, production and development have the potential for increasing the vulnerability to natural disasters, particularly of the poor and socially disadvantaged groups. Sustainable development can contribute to the reduction of this vulnerability, if it is so planned and managed that it ameliorates the social and economic conditions of the affected groups and communities.
8. Vulnerable developing countries should be enabled to revive, apply and share traditional methods to reduce the impact of natural disasters, supplemented and reinforced by access to modern scientific and technical knowledge. Nevertheless, one must study and learn from the existing knowledge and know-how and try to ameliorate, develop and better apply them today.

9. Global social stability has become more fragile and reduction of natural disasters would reduce this fragility.

10. In disaster management the full continuum from relief through rehabilitation, reconstruction and development to prevention must be the underlying concept towards the reduction of human and physical losses as the ultimate objective. Disaster prevention is better than disaster response.

11. Achieving the goals, objectives and targets of the Decade, as adopted by the General Assembly in its relevant resolutions, would result in greatly reducing disaster losses.

12. Maximum participation at the community level mobilizes considerable potential and traditional expertise in the application of preventive measures.

B. Assessment of the status of disaster reduction mid-way into the Decade

Explanatory note

The assessment should provide the readers of the "Declaration" with an overview of the Decade results compared with the original recommendations, in order to lay the basis for a renewed strategic approach (comprising the Decade) which will justify and enforce the specific plan of action contained in Part II.

1. Awareness about the potential of disaster reduction is still limited to specialized circles and has not yet been successfully communicated to all sectors of society, in particular policy makers and the general public.

2. At the same time, however, activities at the local, national and international levels in training, technical applications and research, and in regional cooperation, in the first years of the Decade have had positive benefits in some regions in reducing disaster losses.

3. Equally, frameworks at the national level (national Decade Committees and Focal Points) and at the international level (the Decade secretariat, the Scientific and Technical Committee and the Special High-Level Council) have been established, which have laid the basis for intensified preventive and preparedness efforts in the second half of the Decade.

4. Education and training programmes and facilities for people professionally involved and the public at large have not been sufficiently developed with regard to potential disaster reduction.

5. The potential of the information media, industry, the scientific community and the private sector at large has not been sufficiently mobilized.

6. These new efforts have not systematically been part of multilateral and bilateral policies.

7. It must be noted that not all bodies of the United Nations system have contributed to the implementation of the Decade to the extent possible and as expressed by the General Assembly in the adoption of its resolution 44/236. It must also be noted that, during recent years, emphasis has again been placed primarily on disaster response both within the United Nations system and beyond. That has slowed down the momentum of the Decade's initial phase, as based on the consensus on the importance of action before disasters strike.

8. Achievements have been made during the first five years of the Decade, although they have been uneven and not in a concerted and systematic way as envisaged by the General Assembly. Only if those achievements are recognized, consolidated and accelerated will the Decade be able to reach its goals and objectives and, as such, to contribute to the development of a global culture of prevention.

9. The existing tools for improvements in disaster response, as part of a comprehensive approach towards disaster management, are not always made use of in a sufficient way.

10. There is a need to strengthen the resilience and self-confidence of local communities to cope with natural disasters through recognition and propagation of their traditional knowledge, practices and values in development activities.

11. Experience has demonstrated that, although not included in the original mandate of the Decade, the focus of disaster reduction should be enlarged to cover natural and other disaster situations, including environmental and technological disasters and their interrelationship, which can have a significant impact on social, economic, cultural, and environmental systems, in particular in developing countries.

C. Strategy for the Year 2000 and beyond

Explanatory note

The broad principles to be affirmed by the Conference in chapter I.A., and the assessment of achievements and gaps during the first half of the Decade call for a redefined strategy based on the reconfirmation of the objectives of the Decade and an improved and accelerated approach. This strategy is the basis for the Plan of Action contained in Part II, and will be developed under the following headings.

The following elements should be included in the Strategy:

1. Development of a global culture of prevention.
2. A policy of self-reliance in each vulnerable country and community with capacity-building, allocation and efficient use of resources.
3. Education and training in disaster prevention, preparedness and mitigation.
4. Improvement of awareness in vulnerable communities, including a more active and constructive role of the media with regard to disaster reduction.
5. Involvement and active participation of the people, which is essential for disaster reduction, prevention and preparedness and is also conducive to improved risk management.
6. Improved risk assessment, broader monitoring and communication of forecasts and warnings.
7. Integrated policies for reduction of, preparedness for and response to natural disasters and other disaster situations, including environmental and technological hazards.
8. Coordination and cooperation among ongoing national and international disaster research activities and at universities and other technical and scientific institutions, having in mind that links between causes and effects, inherent to all types of disaster, should be investigated through interdisciplinary research.
9. Effective national legislation and administrative action, and placing higher priority at the political decision-making level.
10. Placing higher priority on the compilation and exchange of information on natural disaster reduction, especially at the regional and subregional levels through the strengthening of existing mechanisms and improved use of communication techniques.
11. Promotion of regional/subregional cooperation between countries exposed to the same natural hazards through exchange of information, joint disaster reduction activities and other formal or informal means, including the establishment or strengthening of regional and subregional centres.
12. Making available existing technology for broader application.
13. Integration of the private sector through promotion of business opportunities.
14. Promotion of the involvement of non-governmental organizations, including indigenous non-governmental organizations, in natural hazard management, in particular those dealing with environmental and related issues.

15. Strengthening the capacity of the United Nations system to assist in the reduction of losses from natural and related technological disasters, including coordination and evaluation of activities through the Decade and other mechanisms.

II. PLAN OF ACTION

Explanatory note

The Plan of Action will be presented as a series of concrete recommendations relating to the key points of the strategy. Each action recommended should take into consideration technical and resource-related feasibility and respond to a recognized requirement.

A. Recommendations for action

Explanatory notes

The recommendations in chapter II.A. will be structured in a way to define generally accepted broad-based activities, required and implementable at all levels involved, starting from the community level towards global activities. This is to be endorsed by the World Conference with the aim of providing a basis for evaluating concrete improvements by the end of the Decade.

All recommendations grouped in relation to the levels mentioned below should answer the questions what should be done, why it should be done, how it should be done and when it should be done and by whom.

1. Activities at the community and national levels

During the remaining part of the Decade all countries are called upon:

1. To express in a formal way the political will to reduce their vulnerability, through legislation or policy decisions at the highest level, which would require the progressive implementation of disaster assessment and reduction plans at the national and community levels.
2. To develop a risk assessment programme and emergency plans in order to focus efforts on disaster preparedness, response and mitigation, and to design projects for subregional, regional and international cooperation, as appropriate.

3. To develop a documented National Disaster Management Plan with an emphasis on disaster reduction.
4. As appropriate, to establish and/or strengthen National Committees for the Decade.
5. To encourage the taking of measures to upgrade the resistance of important infrastructure and lifelines.
6. To give due consideration to the role of local authorities in the enforcement of safety standards and rules and to strengthen the institutional capacities of natural disaster management at all levels.
7. To consider making use of non-governmental organizations' support for improved disaster reduction at the local level.
8. To incorporate disaster reduction prevention or mitigation in the development planning based on risk assessment.
9. To clearly identify specific aspects of disaster prevention that could use the knowledge or expertise that may be available from other countries or from the United Nations system.
10. To endeavour to document all disasters.
11. To incorporate cost-effective technologies in mitigation programmes, including forecasting and warning systems.
12. To establish and implement educational and information programmes generating public awareness in order to ensure support for and effectiveness of disaster reduction programmes.
13. To integrate the media as a contributing sector in awareness raising, education and opinion building for the recognition of the potential of disaster reduction to save human lives and protect property.
14. To set targets that specify how many distinct (i.e. local) disaster scenarios can reasonably be given systematic attention by the end of the Decade.
15. To aim at genuine community involvement and empowerment at all stages of disaster management programmes, and give due consideration to the active participation of women in order to facilitate capacity-building, which is an essential precondition for reducing vulnerability of communities to natural disasters.
16. To aim at the application of traditional knowledge, practices and values of local communities for disaster reduction, thereby recognizing these traditional coping mechanisms as a valuable contribution to the empowerment of local communities and the enabling of their spontaneous cooperation in all programmes of disaster prevention and mitigation.

2. Activities at the regional and subregional levels

Considering the many common aspects of disaster vulnerability among countries of a same region or subregion, cooperation among them should be strengthened by implementing the following actions:

1. Establishment or strengthening of subregional or regional centres for disaster reduction and prevention, which, in cooperation with international organizations and with a view to enhancing national capabilities, would perform one or more of the following functions:

(a) Collection and dissemination of documentation and information to improve public awareness of natural disasters and the potential to reduce their impact;

(b) Formulation of education and training programmes and technical information exchange aimed at human resource development;

(c) Support to and strengthening of natural disaster reduction mechanisms.

2. Given the importance of vulnerability of developing countries, particularly least developed countries, technical, material and financial resources should be made available in support of concerned subregional or regional centres to strengthen regional and national capacities to reduce natural disasters.

3. Improvement of communication on natural disasters among the countries of the region in the context of preparedness and early warning systems.

4. Establishment and/or strengthening of early warning mechanisms for disaster reduction at the subregional or regional level.

5. Commemoration of the International Day for Natural Disaster Reduction at these levels.

6. Establishment of mutual assistance agreements and joint projects for disaster reduction within and between regions.

7. Periodic review of progress made on disaster reduction at political level in regional forums.

8. Regional organizations should play an effective role in the implementation of concerned regional plans and programmes on natural disaster reduction.

9. The international community should give highest priority and special support to activities and programmes relating to natural disaster reduction at the subregional or regional level in order to promote cooperation between countries exposed to the same risks.

10. As decided by the General Assembly, special attention should be given to the least developed countries in support of their activities in the field of natural disaster reduction.

11. Regional arrangements should be carried out in close coordination with and should supplement the national programmes for disaster reduction.

12. The international community should assist the developing countries in establishing measures to integrate disaster prevention and reduction within the existing machinery and strategies at the national, regional and subregional levels for poverty eradication in order to achieve sustainable development.

3. Activities at the international level, in particular through bilateral arrangements and multilateral cooperation

To be considered:

1. In the spirit of international cooperation, the encouragement of all activities to reduce disasters, in particular those laid down by the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction.

2. It is recommended that extrabudgetary resources be provided for implementation of the Decade and, therefore, that voluntary contributions from Governments, international organizations and other sources, including the private sector, be strongly encouraged. To this end, the Secretary-General is urged to ensure an effective and efficient administration of the Trust Fund for the Decade, as established in line with General Assembly resolution 44/236.

3. Integration of natural disaster reduction into development assistance programmes.

4. Development projects should be designed to reduce, and not increase, vulnerability.

5. Exchange of information on disaster reduction policies and technologies.

6. Reaffirmation of the roles of the Special High-level Council and the Scientific and Technical Committee in promoting Decade activities, in particular the awareness of the benefits of disaster reduction.

7. Enhancement of the functions of and cooperation between the United Nations, governmental, non-governmental and private sector organizations related to disaster reduction, including more efficient use of existing resources.

8. Wider support for the existing mechanism within the United Nations system to expand its advice and practical assistance, as required, to countries facing natural disasters and other disaster situations, including environmental and technological hazards.

9. The need for adequate coordination of international activities in the field of disaster reduction should be emphasized and mechanisms established for this purpose should be strengthened. Such coordination should relate, in particular, to the formulation of development projects which provide assistance for disaster reduction and their evaluation.

10. Priority should be given to the establishment, or improvement, of warning systems and the effective dissemination of warnings.

11. Effective coordination of international disaster management, in particular by the United Nations system, is paramount for an integrated approach to disaster reduction and should, therefore, be strengthened.
