(e) Special events organized by young people to draw attention to days designated for commemoration by the United Nations and other events widely observed, for example, International Women's Day (8 March), World Health Day (7 April), World Environment Day (5 June), International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking (26 June), World Population Day (11 July), International Day of Peace (third Tuesday in September), United Nations Day (24 October), World AIDS Day (1 December), International Day of Disabled Persons (3 December) and Human Rights Day (10 December).

B. Activities at the international level

The General Assembly decided, in its resolution 45/103 of 14 December 1990, to devote a plenary meeting at its fiftieth session to youth questions, as 1995 would mark the tenth anniversary of International Youth Year, which will also be the fiftieth anniversary of the Charter of the United Nations. The Assembly may wish to mark these events in some special manner, for example:

(a) By agreeing to a United Nations statement of intent on youth in conjunction with the adoption in 1995 of a world youth programme of action for youth;

(b) By designating, in 1995, an international youth day.

Ageing persons

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁾ the Commission for Social Development, at its February 1993 session,⁽²⁾ established an ad hoc informal working group for the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the 1982 International Plan of Action on Ageing.⁽³⁾

The working group had before it a report on the Plan, submitted by the Secretary-General.⁽⁴⁾ The report stated that the third review was taking place in the midst of a demographic revolution, characterized by unprecedented growth in the numbers and proportions of elderly people in society. It noted that the world's elderly population had grown by 100 million since 1982 and was expected to increase by another 125 million by 2001, with some 70 per cent of that increase in developing countries. The Secretary-General reviewed global initiatives to meet the challenges of ageing as well as national and international activities to implement the Plan of Action in the areas of infrastructure, ageing and development, health and nutrition, housing and environment, family, social welfare, income security and employment and education. The report identified the priorities for international cooperation in ageing as: the exchange of knowledge and experience, research and policy analysis on the implications of ageing for development, training of health-care providers for the elderly, data collection and processing, the establishment of income-generating projects for the elderly, health-care services, formulation and evaluation of policies and programmes on ageing, training of indigenous scholars on ageing, and the establishment of volunteer programmes and educational and training projects for the elderly.

In conclusion, the Secretary-General summarized global targets on ageing for the year 2001, adopted by the Assembly in 1992,⁽¹⁾ and provided a set of corresponding national targets in the priority areas developed in consultation with Governments, United Nations bodies and NGOs.

Acting on the report, the Commission for Social Development recommended a resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council.

Coordination in the UN system

The fifth Inter-agency Meeting on Ageing (Vienna, 18-19 February)⁽⁵⁾ reviewed United Nations activities in that area, examined implications of the third review of the Plan of Action, discussed system-wide programmes of cooperation for reaching selected targets on ageing by 2001 and identified mechanisms for strengthening the Trust Fund for Ageing. The meeting recommended that United Nations bodies and agencies identify areas for future international cooperation on ageing in the areas set out in the Secretary-General's report (see above), publicize the targets on ageing and incorporate them into their work programmes, and establish a monitoring and evaluation mechanism. It also recommended that the regional commissions assist Member States in setting regional targets and urged UNDP and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to include a component on ageing in their country-programming exercises. United Nations bodies were invited to cooperate in organizing an expert group meeting to propose indicators for measuring progress in reaching the global targets on ageing, called for by the Assembly in 1992.(1) Other recommendations dealt with maintaining and strengthening the inter-agency consultative mechanism during the United Nations restructuring process, preparations for the International Year of Older Persons (1999), the mobilization of funds for programmes on ageing, and electronic mail as a cost-effective means of inter-agency communication.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/22 without vote.

Implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing

The Economic and Social Council,

Mindful that the ageing of populations presents all countries with the major challenge of identifying and supporting new opportunities for older persons and their potential benefits for society,

Convinced that the United Nations remains the inter-governmental organization best equipped to provide leadership to the international community in dealing with the challenges presented by the ageing of individuals and populations,

Noting with satisfaction the deliberations of the International Conference on Ageing convened on 15 and 16 October 1992 by the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the International Plan of Action on Ageing by the World Assembly on Ageing,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 46/91 of 16 December 1991, by which the Assembly adopted the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, based on the Plan of Action,

Recalling that the States gathered in the World Assembly on Ageing reaffirmed their belief that the fundamental and inalienable rights enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights should apply fully and undiminishedly to the ageing,

Taking note of General Assembly resolution 47/5 of 16 October 1992, by which the Assembly adopted the Proclamation on Ageing and decided to observe the year 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons,

Taking note also of General Assembly resolution 47/86 of 16 December 1992, in which the Assembly adopted the global targets on ageing for the year 2001, as a practical strategy on ageing, and urged Member States to support that strategy and to consult the guide for setting national targets on ageing,

Aware of the expanded activities and initiatives of the United Nations programme on ageing,

Noting that, in General Assembly resolution 47/86, the Assembly requested the Commission for Social Development to convene an ad hoc informal working group at its thirty-third session for the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing and for proposing measures in support of setting national targets on ageing in the decade ahead,

Acknowledging with satisfaction the active participation of Member States, specialized agencies and bodies of the United Nations system and interested non-governmental organizations in the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the Plan of Action,

Taking note of the conclusions of the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the Plan of Action, which indicate that although some progress has been made in implementing the Plan of Action, much remains to be done to implement its recommendations fully, particularly in developing countries,

1. Notes with appreciation the innovative and forward-looking approach employed in the preparation of the report of the Secretary-General on the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing;

2. Endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General, in the form of global and national targets on ageing for the year 2001, which provide a pragmatic focus for the broad and ideal goals of the Plan of Action and accelerate its implementation into the next millennium;

3. Welcomes the new conceptual framework and operational nature of the United Nations programme on ageing, provided by the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, the Proclamation on Ageing and the global targets on ageing for the year 2001, to further the implementation of the Plan of Action in the current decade;

4. Reaffirms the recommendation made in the Plan of Action and reiterated in numerous General Assembly resolutions, in which the Secretary-General was requested, within the existing regular budget and extra-budgetary resources of the United Nations, to give due consideration to the provision of appropriate increased resources for the implementation of the Plan of Action, particularly in the light of recent and projected developments within the field of ageing;

5. Calls upon the Secretary-General to maintain the integrity and the identity of the United Nations programme on ageing, as well as the United Nations Trust Fund for Ageing, in order to assist Member States in fully implementing the recommendations of the Plan of Action;

6. Urges Governments, specialized agencies and bodies of the United Nations system and interested non-governmental organizations to explore new approaches to supporting, through partnerships, the activities of the United Nations programme on ageing in the current decade, aimed at assisting Member States in selecting and reaching national targets and implementing the United Nations Principles for Older Persons;

7. Takes note with interest of the preliminary findings of the United Nations research project on developmental implications of population ageing, presented at the Expert Group Meeting on Population Growth and Demographic Structure, held in Paris from 16 to 20 November 1992, expresses its appreciation to the Government of Sweden for supporting this project, and invites the United Nations Population Fund to continue its support for it;

8. Invites interested Member States, non-governmental organizations and research centres to support the activities of the United Nations programme on ageing, particularly research activities aimed at suggesting policy options to enhance contributions of the elderly to development;

9. Urges the Secretary-General to strengthen, within existing resources, the research component of the United Nations programme on ageing in order to enable it, on the basis of approaches of the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the Plan of Action and the project on developmental implications of population ageing, to develop policy and programme options for assisting Member States in achieving their national targets on ageing for the year 2001 and in implementing the United Nations Principles for Older Persons;

10. Commends the United Nations Postal Administration for issuing, on 5 February 1993, a set of six commemorative stamps on the theme "Ageing: Dignity and Participation";

11. Reiterates the appeal made by the General Assembly, in the Proclamation on Ageing in the annex to resolution 47/5, to the international community to highlight ageing at major forthcoming events, including the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, the International Year of the Family to be observed in 1994, the International Conference on Population and Development, to be held at Cairo from 5 to 13 September 1994, the Fourth World Conference on Women: Action for Equality, Development and Peace, to be held at Beijing from 4 to 15 September 1995, the tenth anniversary of International Youth Year, to be observed in 1995, and the World Summit for Social Development, to be held at Copenhagen on 11 and 12 March 1995;

12. Welcomes the decision of the General Assembly, in its resolution 47/5, to observe 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons;

13. Invites Member States to strengthen their national mechanisms on ageing, inter alia, to enable them to serve as national focal points for the preparations for and observance of the Year;

14. Appeals to Governments and non-governmental organizations to make known to the Secretary-General their views on the preparations for and observance of the Year in order to ensure an adequate basis for formulating the programme for the Year;

15. Invites the regional commissions to take an active part in the preparations for and observance of the Year, focusing on the specific needs and requirements of each region;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to draft a conceptual framework of a programme, at the national, regional and international levels, for the preparations for and observance of the Year, and to submit it for consideration by the Commission for Social Development at its thirty-fourth session in 1995, and by the General Assembly at its fiftieth session, in 1995.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/22

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/106) without vote, 14 July (meeting 10); draft by Commission for Social Development (E/1993/24); agenda item 20.

In other action, the Council, by decision 1993/238 of 27 July, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development, requested the General Assembly to redesignate the International Year of Older Persons as the International Year of the Elderly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of its Third Committee, adopted resolution 48/98 without vote.

Implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the growing concern of the international community with the issues related to population and individual ageing,

Noting with satisfaction the clear conceptual framework of the United Nations programme on ageing, revealed in the United Nations Principles for Older Persons, the global targets on ageing for the year 2001 and the Proclamation on Ageing, to further the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing,

Recalling that, in the Proclamation on Ageing, it decided to observe the year 1999 as the International Year of Older Persons,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/22 of 27 July 1993, in which the Council invited Member States to strengthen their national mechanisms on ageing, inter alia, to enable them to serve as national focal points for the preparation for and observance of the International Year of Older Persons,

Noting the recent measures aimed at consolidating the social and economic activities of the United Nations,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the third review and appraisal of the implementation of the International Plan of Action on Ageing;

2. Endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General, in the form of global and national targets on ageing for the year 2001, aimed at streamlining the implementation of the Plan of Action in its second decade;

3. Calls upon the Secretary-General to maintain the integrity and the identity of the United Nations programme on ageing;

4. Commends the International Institute on Ageing on its training programme and related activities, and invites national, regional and international organizations to cooperate closely with the Institute;

5. Urges the United Nations, Member States and non-governmental organizations to support the African Society of Gerontology in developing and implementing a regional programme of activities on ageing;

6. Invites interested Member States, non-governmental organizations and research centres to support the activities of the United Nations programme on ageing, particularly research activities aimed at suggesting policy options to enhance contributions by the elderly to development;

7. Invites Governments, non-governmental organizations and United Nations organizations and bodies concerned with ageing to submit to the Secretary-General their proposals for the preparation for and observance of the International Year of Older Persons;

8. Calls upon the Secretary-General to draft a conceptual framework of a programme for the preparation for and observance of the International Year of Older Persons and to submit it, through the Commission for Social Development at its thirty-fourth session in 1995, to the General Assembly for consideration at its fiftieth session, in 1995.

20 December 1993 Meeting 85 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/48/627) without vote, 12 November (meeting 32); 3-nation draft (A/C.3/48/L.6), orally revised; agenda item 109. Sponsors: Austria, Dominican Republic, Malta. Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 3rd Committee 11-19, 21, 32; plenary 85.

By decision 48/433 of 20 December, the Assembly redesignated the International Year of Older Persons as the International Year of the Elderly.

Chapter XV

Refugees and displaced persons

During 1993, the world's refugee population, including internally displaced persons, increased from 18.9 million to 23 million, severely taxing the capacity of the international community to respond.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) continued to deal with complex and protracted refugee crises through assistance and protection while pursuing a strategy aimed at prevention, preparedness and voluntary repatriation. Although heavily burdened by new refugee populations, UNHCR assisted some 1.8 million refugees to return home voluntarily in 1993, at a total cost of $191 million. It endeavoured to secure asylum for those compelled to flee and to respond rapidly to their emergency needs, complementing these efforts with prevention and solution-oriented activities in their countries of origin.

Some 469,000 Afghan refugees were repatriated from Iran and Pakistan during 1993, with UNHCR assistance, and an additional 400,000 returned spontaneously. Approximately 155,000 persons returned to Cambodia during the year, completing the repatriation operation there. For some 250,000 refugees from Myanmar in Bangladesh, the signing of two Memoranda of Understanding paved the way for large-scale voluntary repatriation. UNHCR commenced the complex operation of repatriating some 1.5 million refugees to Mozambique from six neighbouring countries. It provided protection and assistance to internally displaced populations in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Caucasus and parts of Africa and Central Asia. In the former Yugoslavia, UNHCR addressed the largest single group of persons in need of international protection.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee considered the international protection of refugees, the question of internally displaced persons, the implementation of its Policy on Refugee Women, refugee situations in Afghanistan and the former Yugoslavia, the follow-up to the 1989 International Conference on Central American Refugees, the Comprehensive Plan of Action for Indo-Chinese Refugees, and increased coordination between UNHCR and non-governmental organizations.

The General Assembly expressed its deep concern at serious threats to the security of refugees and called on States to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection as well as the humane treatment of asylum-seekers, to uphold asylum as an indispensable instrument for the international protection of refugees, and to respect scrupulously the fundamental principle of non-refoulement (resolution 48/116).

Programme and finances of UNHCR

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its forty-fourth session (Geneva, 4-8 October 1993),⁽¹⁾ the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme expressed concern at the inadequacy of international protection for various groups of refugees. It noted the size and complexity of the refugee problem, the risk of new refugee situations developing and challenges to refugee protection, including the denial of UNHCR access to people in need of assistance, expulsion, refoulement and unjustified detention. The Committee called on States to uphold asylum as an indispensable instrument for international refugee protection and to respect the fundamental principle of non-refoulement. It stressed the importance of international burden-sharing and supported further exploration by the High Commissioner and States of various asylum strategies, including temporary protection for persons compelled to flee their countries in large numbers and who were in need of international protection.

The Executive Committee expressed concern at the alarming frequency of incidents in which refugees and asylum-seekers, including women and children, were subjected to violence and mistreatment, including killing, torture, military or armed attacks, rape, beatings, intimidation, forced military recruitment and arbitrary or inhumane conditions of detention. It deplored all violations of the right of refugees and asylum-seekers to personal security and condemned persecution through sexual violence. The Committee called on the High Commissioner to pursue the protection of refugee women and girls and supported refugee status for persons whose claim was based on a well-founded fear of persecution, through sexual violence, for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion. It called on the High Commissioner to make every effort to ensure that the needs of refugee children, particularly unaccompanied minors, were covered by UNHCR's activities in cooperation with Governments, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and intergovernmental organizations, and with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) in particular. It asked the High Commissioner for a concerted effort to implement UNHCR's Policy on Refugee Women and to reinforce the role of the Senior Coordinator for Refugee Women.

The Committee welcomed increased consultation between UNHCR and NGOs through the Partnership in Action (PARINAC) process, which was jointly launched by the High Commissioner and the International Council on Voluntary Agencies, with a view to establishing a common agenda for field activities.

In her opening statement to the Committee, the High Commissioner stated that humanitarian assistance could make an important contribution to the peace-keeping and peacemaking efforts of the United Nations. However, the situation in the former Yugoslavia had clearly demonstrated that humanitarian endeavours were not a substitute for peace settlements or political negotiations.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July, by decision 1993/333, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's report for 1992/93.⁽²⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted resolution 48/116 without vote.

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of her Office, as well as the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner on the work of its forty-fourth session, and taking note of the statement made by the High Commissioner on 4 November 1993,

Recalling its resolution 47/105 of 16 December 1992,

Reaffirming the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner, as well as the crucial importance of the High Commissioner's functions of providing international protection to refugees and seeking solutions to refugee problems,

Welcoming the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of the World Conference on Human Rights, particularly as it reaffirms the right to seek and enjoy asylum and the right to return to one's country,

Commending the High Commissioner and her staff for the dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, and paying special tribute to those staff members who have lost their lives in the course of their duties,

Noting with satisfaction that one hundred and twenty-three States are now parties to the 1951 Convention and/or the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees,

Also noting with satisfaction the participation of the High Commissioner in the commemoration of the anniversaries of the Cartagena Declaration on Refugees of 1984 and the Organization of African Unity Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, concluded at Addis Ababa on 10 September 1969,

Welcoming the continuing strong commitment of States to provide protection and assistance to refugees and the valuable support extended by Governments to the High Commissioner in carrying out her humanitarian tasks,

Commending those States, particularly the least developed and those serving as host to millions of refugees, that, despite severe economic and development challenges of their own, continue to admit large numbers of refugees into their territories, and emphasizing the need to share the burden of those States to the maximum extent possible through international assistance, including development-oriented assistance,

Noting with concern that the number of refugees and other persons to whom the Office of the High Commissioner is called upon to provide assistance and protection has continued to increase and that their protection continues to be seriously jeopardized in many situations as a result of denial of admission, unlawful expulsion, refoulement, unjustified detention, other threats to their physical security, dignity and well-being and failure to respect and ensure their fundamental freedoms and human rights,

Recognizing that, in certain regions, the misuse by individuals of asylum procedures jeopardizes the institution of asylum and adversely affects the prompt and effective protection of refugees,

Emphasizing the need for States to assist the High Commissioner in seeking durable and timely solutions to the problems of refugees, as well as to take part in efforts to prevent conditions that might give rise to the flight of refugees, and to address the root causes of refugee outflows, and underlining, in this connection, State responsibility, particularly as it relates to countries of origin,

Welcoming the continuing efforts of the High Commissioner to meet the protection and assistance needs of refugee women and refugee children, who constitute the majority of the world's refugee population and who are often exposed to serious threats to their safety and well-being,

Recognizing the increased demands faced by the Office of the High Commissioner worldwide and the need for all available resources to be fully and effectively mobilized to meet those demands,

1. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental importance of the function of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of providing international protection to refugees and the need for States to cooperate fully with her Office in order to facilitate the effective exercise of this function;

2. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so, including Governments of newly independent States, to accede to or to declare succession to and to implement fully the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees and relevant regional instruments for the protection of refugees;

3. Calls upon all States to uphold asylum as an indispensable instrument for the international protection of refugees and to respect scrupulously the fundamental principle of non-refoulement;

4. Urges States to ensure access, consistent with relevant international and regional instruments, for all asylum-seekers to fair and efficient procedures for the determination of refugee status and the granting of asylum to eligible persons;

5. Expresses deep concern regarding serious threats to the security or the well-being of refugees, including incidents of refoulement, unlawful expulsion, physical attacks and detention under unacceptable conditions, and calls upon States to take all measures necessary to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection as well as the humane treatment of asylum-seekers in accordance with internationally recognized human rights norms;

6. Endorses, in this connection, the conclusions on the personal security of refugees and on refugee protection and sexual violence adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner at its forty-fourth session;

7. Welcomes the High Commissioner's policy on refugee children and the activities undertaken to ensure its implementation, aimed at ensuring that the specific needs of refugee children, including in particular unaccompanied minors, are fully met within the overall protection and assistance activities of the Office, in cooperation with Governments and other relevant organizations;

8. Acknowledges with appreciation the further progress made in the implementation of measures within the framework of the High Commissioner's programme to ensure the protection and to meet the assistance needs of refugee women and girls, in accordance with the High Commissioner's policy on refugee women;

9. Stresses the importance of international solidarity and burden-sharing in reinforcing the international protection of refugees, and urges all States, as well as non-governmental organizations, in conjunction with the Office of the High Commissioner, to cooperate in efforts to lighten the burden borne by States that have received large numbers of asylum-seekers and refugees;

10. Urges all States and relevant organizations to support the High Commissioner's search for durable solutions to refugee problems, including voluntary repatriation, integration in the country of asylum and resettlement in a third country, as appropriate, and welcomes in particular the ongoing efforts of her Office to pursue wherever possible opportunities to promote conditions conducive to the preferred solution of voluntary repatriation;

11. Encourages the High Commissioner, on the basis of her broad humanitarian experience and expertise, to continue to explore and to undertake protection and assistance activities aimed at preventing conditions that give rise to refugee outflows, bearing in mind fundamental protection principles, in close coordination with the Governments concerned, and within an inter-agency, intergovernmental and non-governmental framework, as appropriate;

12. Reaffirms its support for the High Commissioner's efforts, on the basis of specific requests from the Secretary-General or the competent principal organs of the United Nations and with the consent of the concerned State, and taking into account the complementarities of the mandates and expertise of other relevant organizations, to provide humanitarian assistance and protection to persons displaced within their own country in specific situations calling for the particular expertise of the Office, especially where such efforts could contribute to the prevention or solution of refugee problems;

13. Reaffirms the importance of incorporating environmental considerations into the programmes of the Office of the High Commissioner, especially in the least developed countries, in view of the impact on the environment of the large numbers of refugees and displaced persons of concern to the High Commissioner;

14. Recognizes the need for the international community to explore methods and means better to address within the United Nations system the protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons, and calls upon the High Commissioner to engage actively in further consultations on this priority issue with the Department of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and the representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons, and with other appropriate international organizations and bodies, including the International Committee of the Red Cross;

15. Also recognizes the value of addressing prevention, protection and solutions on a comprehensive regional basis, and encourages the High Commissioner to consult with States, other relevant United Nations bodies and governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, concerning possibilities for additional measures and initiatives in areas affected by complex humanitarian problems involving coerced population movements;

16. Reaffirms the importance of promoting and disseminating refugee law and principles for the protection of refugees as well as of facilitating the prevention of and solutions to refugee problems, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue to strengthen the promotion and training activities of her Office, inter alia, through increased cooperation with bodies and organizations concerned with human rights and humanitarian law;

17. Urges States, the Office of the High Commissioner and non-governmental organizations to pursue their efforts to foster greater public understanding and acceptance of people of different backgrounds and cultures, with a view to dispelling hostile, racist or xenophobic attitudes and other forms of intolerance towards foreigners, including refugees and asylum-seekers, displaced people and persons belonging to minorities;

18. Notes the relationship between safeguarding human rights and preventing refugee problems, and reiterates its support for the High Commissioner's efforts to increase cooperation between her Office and the Commission on Human Rights, the Centre for Human Rights of the Secretariat and other relevant international bodies and organizations;

19. Welcomes the further progress made by the High Commissioner in enhancing the capacity of her Office to respond to humanitarian emergencies, and encourages her to provide full support to the coordination role of the Emergency Relief Coordinator, especially in major and complex emergencies;

20. Encourages the High Commissioner to continue to cooperate fully, including within the framework of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee, with United Nations agencies, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations, in order to ensure an effective response to complex emergency situations;

21. Welcomes the establishment by the High Commissioner of the Partnership in Action Process in conjunction with the International Council of Voluntary Agencies as a means of strengthening and improving collaboration between the Office of the High Commissioner and non-governmental organizations in meeting greatly increased demands, expresses its support for the process of consultations through regional preparatory meetings as well as for the global conference at Oslo in June 1994 and invites Governments to provide financial support to this important initiative;

22. Expresses deep concern at conditions in a number of countries and regions that seriously endanger the delivery of humanitarian assistance and the security of the staff of the High Commissioner and other relief workers, deplores the recent loss of lives among personnel involved in humanitarian operations, urges support for initiatives taken by the High Commissioner and within the General Assembly and the Security Council concerning the safety of United Nations and associated personnel, in particular the consideration of new measures to enhance the safety of such personnel, and calls upon States and all parties to conflicts to take all necessary measures to ensure safe and timely access for humanitarian assistance and the security of international and local staff undertaking humanitarian work in the countries concerned;

23. Calls upon all Governments and other donors to contribute to the programmes of the High Commissioner and, taking into account the need to achieve greater burden-sharing among donors, to assist the High Commissioner in securing additional and timely income from traditional governmental sources, other Governments and the private sector in order to ensure that the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner are met.

Programme policy evaluation

The Secretary-General, in March,⁽³⁾ submitted to the Committee on Programme and Coordination (CPC) an in-depth evaluation of the UNHCR programme on international protection of and assistance to refugees. The report presented findings and recommendations on: protection, durable solutions, assistance, early warning, contingency planning, training, dissemination, publicity, finance, management and human resources, with the aim of strengthening protection and the search for durable solutions and further delegating operational responsibility for assistance.

In May,⁽⁴⁾ CPC endorsed the evaluation and its recommendations and decided that the evaluation, along with the section of CPC's report containing observations by delegations on it, should be transmitted to the UNHCR Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee, in October,⁽⁵⁾ requested the High Commissioner to keep the Subcommittee of the Whole on International Protection informed of progress and constraints in implementing the evaluation's protection-related recommendations. It asked UNHCR to present to the Subcommittee on Administrative and Financial Matters its views on the evaluation's recommendations and CPC's comments, paying particular attention to the definition of a proper accountability framework for UNHCR, strategic planning and result-based management.

In April, the High Commissioner established the Working Group on Programme Management and Operational Capacity, which met during May and June and analysed UNHCR's programme management system and procedures, identified problems and suggested ways to improve programme delivery by simplifying procedures, delegating authority to the field and ensuring accountability for activities undertaken by programme managers. The High Commissioner endorsed the Working Group's recommendations in July, and a follow-up group composed of Headquarters staff was charged with their implementation.

UNHCR's evaluation activities during 1992/93 were outlined in a July report⁽⁶⁾ to its Executive Committee. UNHCR initiated a number of studies relating to durable solutions to refugee problems, including reviews of the repatriation and reintegration programmes for Cambodian and Nicaraguan refugees and studies on the follow-up to the 1989 International Conference on Central American Refugees and UNHCR's role in formulating and implementing returnee aid and development programmes. In addition, UNHCR commenced a review of its operations in the former Yugoslavia in order to identify the principal lessons learned and examine the broader impact of the emergency on UNHCR activities. Other evaluations covered UNHCR's policy on refugee women, its role in protecting and assisting internally displaced persons, and its policy and practice with regard to refugee enumeration and statistics.

The evaluation strategy introduced at the beginning of 1993 consisted of four principal elements: contracting a greater amount of work to professional evaluation consultants; developing working relationships with research and policy institutes; identifying and training UNHCR staff members with demonstrated aptitude in the evaluation function; and establishing arrangements for seconding experienced staff from governmental evaluation agencies.

Enlargement of UNHCR Executive Committee

By a 3 June note verbale,⁽⁶⁾ Spain, noting the growing wave of refugees and displaced persons, particularly in Africa and Europe, and Spain's growing participation in UNHCR's operations and programmes, expressed the view that it should be included in the Executive Committee. It requested the Economic and Social Council to consider the question.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 July, the Economic and Social Council by decision 1993/315, took note of Spain's request⁽⁶⁾ and recommended that the General Assembly take a decision at its forty-eighth (1993) session on the question of increasing the membership of the Committee from 46 to 47 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly on 20 December adopted resolution 48/115 without vote.

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decision 1993/315 of 29 July 1993 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the note verbale dated 3 June 1993 from the Permanent Representative of Spain to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General relating to the enlargement of the Executive Committee,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from forty-six to forty-seven States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect an additional member at its resumed organizational session in 1994.

General Assembly resolution 48/115

20 December 1993 Meeting 85 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/48/631) without vote, 19 November (meeting 38); 6-nation draft (A/C.3/48/L.24); agenda item 113.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 3rd Committee 23-28, 33, 34, 38; plenary 85.

Financial and administrative questions

Contributions to UNHCR declined slightly in 1993 as funding needs swelled to unprecedented levels. Donors provided $1.13 billion in cash and kind, compared with $1.18 billion in 1992.⁽⁷⁾ The United Nations regular budget contribution to UNHCR was also down slightly from $21.2 million in 1992⁽⁸⁾ to $20.5 million.

UNHCR struggled during the year to meet a target of $413 million for General Programmes, which represented core activities for refugees and provided flexibility to deal with emergencies and voluntary repatriations. At 31 December, the Office had received $311 million for General Programmes compared with $354 million the previous year. The shortfall was partially offset, however, by a carry-over of $55 million from secondary income in the form of cancelled obligations from previous years, interest earnings and various transfers.

UNHCR's expenditures for 1993 amounted to $1.3 billion; disbursements under the General Programme totalled $392 million and those under Special Programmes $915 million. Regional apportionments were as follows: Europe, $585 million; Africa, $325 million; Asia and Oceania, $144 million; South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, $115 million; and the Americas and Caribbean, $38 million.

Special operations accounted for almost two thirds of UNHCR's activities in 1993. Appeals were launched in conjunction with the United Nations Department of Humanitarian Affairs (DHA) for operations in the former Yugoslavia, the Afghan and Liberian repatriation programmes, and programmes in the Horn of Africa and the republics of the former USSR (for DHA activities, see PART THREE, Chapter III). The humanitarian relief operation in the former Yugoslavia accounted for some 40 per cent ($533 million) of UNHCR's total assistance budget.

UNHCR issued its own appeals for Central America, the Mozambican repatriation, the Myanmar repatriation from Bangladesh (in conjunction with WFP), and a number of other emergency operations. By the end of 1993, the refugee crisis in Burundi had stretched the Office's emergency capacities to the limit. UNHCR was able to mobilize a $13 million three-country emergency response for life-saving operations in Rwanda, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zaire in a matter of days, and in the course of the year it mobilized more than $800 million for special operations, repatriations and emergencies, in addition to sums raised under General Programmes.

In October,⁽¹⁾ the Executive Committee approved country and area programmes and overall allocations for 1994 General Programmes amounting to $418.5 million (including $25 million for the Emergency Fund and $20 million for the General Allocation for Voluntary Repatriation). It recognized that overall estimated financial requirements for Special Programme activities during 1994, subject to the availability of funds, would amount to some $1.2 billion. It requested the Subcommittee on Administrative and Financial Matters to review the financial and programmatic implications of current UNHCR activities, including information related to internally displaced persons.

A General Programmes budget target of $418.5 million was set for 1994, with Special Programmes requirements conservatively estimated at $780 million—a figure that covered only six-months of requirements for the former Yugoslavia.⁽⁷⁾

The audited financial statements on funds administered by UNHCR for the year ended 31 December 1992 showed total expenditures of $1,072 million and total income of $1,158 million, with a reserve balance of $299,283.⁽⁸⁾

(For the Board of Auditors' recommendations, see PART FIVE, Chapter I.)

In resolution 48/216 D of 23 December, the General Assembly accepted the financial report of the Board of Auditors on UNHCR and a summary of its principal findings, conclusions and recommendations for remedial action,⁽¹⁰⁾ and approved the Board's recommendations and conclusions. It requested the Office of UNHCR to implement better financial management systems that would permit an effective and economic delivery of its programme and reduce a persistent over-obligation of funds.

Subcommittee on Administrative and Financial Matters

The Executive Committee's Subcommittee on Administrative and Financial Matters (Geneva, 1 October)⁽¹¹⁾ considered a broad range of issues, including an update on UNHCR programmes and funding; voluntary repatriation; specific programme-related issues, including the summary report of the Working Group on Programme Management and Operational Capacity, UNHCR's emergency response capacity; the environmental management of refugee sites; UNHCR/World Food Programme (WFP) cooperation; evaluation activities; financial and management questions, including a proposal to create a position of Inspector of Operational Activities; and matters related to human resources.

Refugee assistance and protection

Proposed conference on refugees

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 48/113 without vote.

Convening of a United Nations conference for the comprehensive consideration and review of the problems of refugees, returnees, displaced persons and migrants

The General Assembly,

Recalling the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees,

Taking into consideration the complexity and urgency of the global refugee crisis and the need for the international community to adopt a comprehensive approach for the coordination of action with regard to refugees, returnees, displaced persons and migrants,

Noting that the International Conference on Population and Development, to be held at Cairo from 5 to 13 September 1994, will address matters related to refugees, displaced persons and migrants,

Welcoming the continued work of the representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons,

Recognizing the need to develop innovative strategies, mechanisms and decisions in this field,

1. Takes note of the proposal to convene a United Nations conference for the comprehensive consideration and review of the problems of refugees, returnees, displaced persons and migrants;

2. Invites all Member States, the specialized agencies, other international organizations, concerned United Nations bodies, regional organizations and non-governmental organizations concerned to undertake reviews and submit recommendations to the Secretary-General with regard to the appropriateness of convening such a conference, taking into consideration, inter alia, the deliberations of the Cairo Conference, as well as the work of the representative of the Secretary-General;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session a report on the recommendations received pursuant to paragraph 2 above.

Assistance

During 1993, UNHCR's pursuit of a preventive and solution-oriented strategy resulted in its direct engagement in acute crisis or open conflict situations, with attendant risks to its staff and implementing partners. The sheer magnitude of these operations also stretched the capacity of the High Commissioner's Office to the limit, said a report to the General Assembly covering UNHCR activities in 1992/93.⁽¹⁾ It was noted that the ultimate success of the High Commissioner's three-pronged strategy of prevention, preparedness and solutions to refugee problems would depend on the United Nations' ability to develop comprehensive and integrated responses that linked humanitarian action and the protection of human rights with peacemaking, peace-keeping and peace building through governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental partnerships.

While responding to refugee situations in countries of asylum during the year, UNHCR also focused on activities in countries of origin, seeking to prevent and contain refugee movements.

UNHCR began to provide assistance not only to refugees, returnees and displaced persons, but also, in the case of the former Yugoslavia, to people under direct threat of expulsion or persecution in the form of "ethnic cleansing". The Office addressed the needs of entire communities rather than focusing on individuals. Invoking the human right to remain in one's country of origin, it sought to ensure that people were not forced to flee in the first place.

A major lesson learned during this period of activity was the importance of political initiatives to resolve the causes of refugee problems and the link between refugees and international peace and stability. It was noted that humanitarian assistance could make an important contribution to reducing tensions and promoting reconciliation, but could not be a substitute for political solutions.

UNHCR's activities comprised emergency assistance, care and maintenance, voluntary repatriation, local settlement and resettlement.

The Office's emergency measures facilitated a timely response to an unprecedented number of new, and often concurrent, refugee emergencies around the globe. Emergency activities were financed from UNHCR's Emergency Fund and by special appeals. During 1993, expenditures under the Emergency Fund amounted to $24.9 million, and Special Appeals were issued to cover emergency situations in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Benin, Burundi, Ghana and Tajikistan. In certain instances, UNHCR initially made recourse to the Central Emergency Revolving Fund (CERF), administered by the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs on behalf of the Secretary-General, in anticipation of funding from its own Special Appeals. Recourse was made to CERF for $5 million to cover initial expenditures for the emergency in Tajikistan, $2 million for Georgia and $5 million for the Burundi emergency.

Following the emergency phase of an operation, the basic needs of refugees were met through care and maintenance assistance. Expenditures on such assistance in 1993 amounted to $850.5 million, of which $215.7 million came from General Programmes and $634.9 million from Special Programmes. Large-scale care and maintenance programmes were administered in the former Yugoslavia and neighbouring countries ($551 million); Ethiopia ($12.4 million); Guinea ($16.4 million); Kenya ($54.7 million); and Malawi ($26.3 million). In South-East Asia, a major programme for refugees from Myanmar was implemented in Bangladesh ($17.8 million). Other care and maintenance programmes continued for Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong ($14.7 million) and for refugees from the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar in Thailand ($13 million). Expenditures for a programme established in 1993 for Afghan refugees in Pakistan totalled $18.5 million.

UNHCR continued its efforts to provide durable solutions for refugees through voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement. In 1993, $190.6 million was spent on voluntary repatriation, with more than 800,000 persons returning to their countries of origin under UNHCR-assisted programmes, most notably to Afghanistan, Cambodia, Ethiopia, Myanmar and Somalia. Repatriations included 747,600 persons returning to Afghanistan from India, Iran and Pakistan (479,600 of them assisted by UNHCR), 431,600 persons from Malawi, the United Republic of Tanzania and other countries of asylum to Mozambique (18,000 assisted) and 239,800 persons from Iran and Turkey to Iraq (1,800 assisted). Expenditures on voluntary repatriation under both General and Special Programmes totalled $190.6 million.

The Office supported the local settlement of refugees within host countries, either with a view to promoting local integration or self-sufficiency pending eventual repatriation. Some $97.7 million was obligated for these purposes under General and Special Programmes combined. Organized settlements were supported in Benin, the Central African Republic, China, the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Mexico, Papua New Guinea, Senegal, Swaziland, Uganda, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire and Zambia. Assistance included the promotion of agricultural activities, small-enterprise development, employment in public works projects, legal advice, counselling, education, vocational training and job placement.

More than 43,700 persons were registered by UNHCR for resettlement in third countries during the year. The main focus of resettlement activity was South-East Asia, where more than 19,000 people, mainly Vietnamese and Lao, were resettled under the Comprehensive Plan of Action, in Australia, Canada and the United States in particular. A number of refugees from the Middle East/South-West Asia (9,734) and Africa (9,406) were also resettled in third countries. A total of 13,375 citizens of Bosnia and Herzegovina departed for resettlement or temporary protection. The United States received the highest number (21,137) of resettlement cases, followed by Canada (6,271) and Australia (3,648). Global expenditures on resettlement were estimated at $11.5 million.

To address the environmental dimensions of refugee programmes in a systematic manner, the High Commissioner appointed a Senior Environmental Coordinator in 1993.

The High Commissioner was a member of the United Nations Inter-Agency Standing Committee, established to ensure greater coordination of humanitarian assistance in the face of complex and protracted emergencies, as well as a stronger link between emergency relief, rehabilitation and development (see PART THREE, Chapter III).

Refugee/returnee aid and development

In 1993, UNHCR endeavoured to increase its cooperation with multilateral and bilateral development agencies and financial institutions. The High Commissioner observed⁽²⁾ that UNHCR's activities in support of local settlement and reintegration in particular, could only achieve sustainable results if they were integrated with, or complementary to, development activities.

A joint UNHCR/African Development Bank (AfDB) project, resulting from project identification missions in Mozambique in 1992,⁽³⁾ was expected to commence in 1995, and UNHCR continued to support the AfDB-financed South East Rangeland Rehabilitation Project in Ethiopia, for Ethiopian returnees from Somalia. The joint UNHCR/International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) South Khorasan Rangeland Rehabilitation and Refugee Income-generating Project in Iran was in its final year and the third phase of the UNHCR/World Bank Income-generating Project for Refugee Areas in Pakistan continued to emphasize training relevant to repatriation.

A significant aspect of UNHCR's attempt to link its assistance to longer-term development activities was its use of Quick Impact Projects (QIPs) to consolidate voluntary repatriation in returnee-impacted areas. They were also used to support the local integration of refugees in asylum countries when possible, to prevent or ease tensions between refugees and the local population. In 1993, QIPs were implemented in Belize, Cambodia, Ethiopia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nepal, Somalia and Sri Lanka.

Refugee women

An external evaluation of UNHCR's Policy on Refugee Women confirmed that progress had been made in different field offices. The evaluation stressed the importance of additional resources for refugee women, the integration of refugee women's issues into emergency response procedures, the development of a gender-based needs assessment, an increased focus on physical protection and expanded gender training.

A gender training course, "People Oriented Planning", was offered to UNHCR staff and implementing partners in various countries. NGO staff trained by UNHCR conducted their own training, thereby increasing course coverage. Some 500 people attended 22 training sessions during the year and a new programme handbook was made available to help staff use the gender analytic framework in their daily duties.

An extensive network was developed among Headquarters and field personnel to coordinate preparations for the 1995 World Conference on Women. Staff were asked to contribute information on refugee women for national reports and to ensure that relevant issues were raised in the preparatory conferences and in discussion of the Platform for Action.

Refugee children

Since about half the world's refugees were children in 1993, UNHCR was concerned that their special needs were met through appropriate protection and assistance. The importance of the 1989 United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child⁽⁴⁾ was stressed as a framework for protecting their best interests. In all actions concerning refugee children, UNHCR continued to give primary consideration to the preservation or restoration of family unity. The approach had three elements: direct services to the child; help for the child through help for the family; and community services for families and children. The UNHCR Guidelines on Refugee Children, introduced in 1988,⁽⁵⁾ were reviewed in 1993 and a new version was scheduled for distribution in 1994.

Two areas of particular concern to UNHCR remained the nutritional well-being of refugee children and their access to education. A new Memorandum of Understanding between UNHCR and WFP aimed to improve their health and nutritional status and UNHCR's education budget for the year stood at $45 million, including $12 million funded through Special Appeals and the Emergency Fund. UNHCR collaborated with UNICEF, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and other organizations in support of primary and secondary schooling for displaced and refugee children in the former Yugoslavia. Teaching materials developed for UNESCO's Education for Peace initiative were used for Somali refugees in countries of asylum, as well as in UNHCR's cross border operations. UNHCR had established special stand-by arrangements with the NGO Radda Barnen whereby, with the assistance of trained community service workers, the needs of refugee children, especially the unaccompanied, were being addressed. In 1993, community workers participated in emergencies in Liberia, Rwanda, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania.

Regional assistance

Africa

During 1993, successive emergencies affected millions of drought victims, refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons in the Horn of Africa, Angola, Benin and Ghana, Guinea, Kenya, Liberia, Malawi, Mozambique, Sierra Leone and the Sudan. According to a report on UNHCR activities in Africa, submitted by the High Commissioner in August,⁽⁶⁾ the vast majority of refugees being protected and assisted by UNHCR were, as in previous years, destitute women and children, mainly of rural background. Among the reasons for increasing numbers of refugees in Africa were human rights violations, internal conflict and ethnic strife, extreme poverty caused by political and economic instability, famine, drought and environmental degradation.

The refugee situation in sub-Saharan Africa was characterized by conflict-induced displacements, many of which were exacerbated by adverse environmental conditions. As at 31 December, some 5.9 million Africans were refugees and another 15 million were internally displaced. Principal countries of asylum included the Sudan, which hosted some 745,200 refugees, mainly from Ethiopia and Eritrea; Malawi, with some 713,600, mainly Mozambican, refugees; Guinea, with 656,700, mainly Liberian, refugees; and the United Republic of Tanzania, which had refugees from Burundi, Mozambique, Rwanda and Zaire.

Upheavals in Burundi provoked the most dramatic exodus of the year, with some 580,000 people driven to seek refuge in Rwanda, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zaire. UNHCR administered refugee assistance programmes in all three countries, as well as in Burundi for a limited number of returnees from the United Republic of Tanzania and Rwanda. Elsewhere in eastern Africa, Sudanese continued to flow into Uganda, while Ethiopians and Somalis repatriated from Kenya. Some 3,000 new Sudanese refugees entered northern Uganda during the first quarter of 1993, and 18,000 Chadian refugees fled to the Central African Republic. There was however, encouraging progress as some 50,000 refugees were repatriated from Kenya to Ethiopia in the first quarter of the year, and a tripartite agreement was signed in February concerning the voluntary repatriation of Ethiopian refugees from the Sudan. Preparations for the voluntary repatriation of some 10,000 Ethiopians from camps in Djibouti were completed in December, but the repatriation of Ethiopians and Eritreans from the Sudan met with limited success and only 15,000 out of 50,000 Ethiopians returned.

The political crisis that affected Togo in 1992 resulted in the flight of some 250,000 refugees to Benin and Ghana during 1993 and, in May, UNHCR launched an appeal for $9.9 million for an emergency relief programme. In the Upper Lofa area of Liberia where UNHCR operated an assistance programme for some 175,000 Sierra Leonean refugees and internally displaced persons, all activities were suspended in mid-December 1993 after a major assault by rebel forces. However, the Peace Agreement between the warring Liberian factions (Cotonou, Benin, 25 July⁽⁷⁾) improved prospects for the eventual return of 700,000 refugees (see PART TWO, Chapter I). Although conditions in Liberia and Sierra Leone were not yet conducive to the promotion of a large-scale voluntary repatriation exercise, UNHCR assisted in the repatriation of 6,413 Sierra Leoneans and 19,098 Liberians between October 1992 and January 1993 and provided emergency relief assistance to Sierra Leoneans in the country's interior.

Spontaneous, as well as organized, repatriation to Mozambique continued. At the end of 1993, some 500,000 Mozambicans had returned home following the General Peace Agreement of October 1992.⁽⁸⁾ Most returned from Malawi. A basic agreement with South Africa permitted UNHCR assistance to Mozambicans and the repatriation operation was expected to be completed in 1995.

In May, UNHCR launched a $203.4 million appeal for the repatriation and reintegration of Mozambican refugees, of which $55 million was needed for 1993.

In Angola, where continuing insecurity bedevilled efforts to deliver humanitarian assistance, UNHCR managed to assist 112,000 returnees and internally displaced persons. United Nations agencies were granted access for assistance purposes throughout Angola as of September, following efforts by the Secretary-General's Special Envoy. The UNHCR South African Repatriation Operation was concluded successfully in 1993, with more than 17,000 people having returned with UNHCR assistance.

Total 1993 expenditures in Africa amounted to $325.1 million, of which $188.5 million was spent under General Programmes and $136.6 million under Special Programmes.

Report of the Secretary-General. In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽⁹⁾ the Secretary-General presented an October report⁽¹⁰⁾ describing assistance by six bodies of the United Nations system—the Department of Humanitarian Affairs, WFP, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), UNHCR, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and IFAD—for African refugees, returnees and displaced persons.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 48/118 without vote.

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 47/107 of 16 December 1992, Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and that of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Bearing in mind that most of the affected countries are least developed countries,

Convinced of the necessity of strengthening the capacity within the United Nations system for the implementation and overall coordination of relief programmes for refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Welcoming the prospects for voluntary repatriation and durable solutions across the continent,

Recognizing the need for States to create conditions conducive to the prevention of flows of refugees and displaced persons and to voluntary repatriation,

Bearing in mind that the majority of refugees and displaced persons are women and children,

Noting with appreciation the commitment of the countries concerned to do their utmost to facilitate the provision of assistance to the affected populations and to take the necessary measures in this regard,

Realizing the importance of assisting the host countries, in particular those countries that have been hosting refugees for a long time, in remedying environmental deterioration and the negative impact on public services and the development process,

Recognizing the mandate of the High Commissioner to protect and assist refugees and returnees and the catalytic role she plays, together with the international community and development agencies, in addressing the broader issues of development relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Bearing in mind the necessity of facilitating the work of humanitarian organizations, in particular the supply of food, medicine and health care to refugees, returnees and displaced persons, deploring acts of aggression against personnel of humanitarian organizations, particularly those acts that have led to the loss of life, and stressing the need to guarantee the safety of the personnel of those organizations,

Deeply concerned about the continuing critical humanitarian situation in African countries, in particular in the Horn of Africa, caused by persistent drought, conflict and population movements,

Conscious of the situation of the refugees, returnees and displaced persons in East and Central Africa,

Welcoming regional efforts, such as the mechanism for conflict prevention, management and resolution adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its twenty-ninth ordinary session, held at Cairo from 28 to 30 June 1993,

Taking into account resolution CM/Res.1448(LVIII) on refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its fifty-eighth ordinary session, held at Cairo from 21 to 26 June 1993,

Deeply concerned by the massive presence of refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti, which represents 25 per cent of the total population of the country, and by their uninterrupted influx due to the tragic situation in Somalia,

Deeply concerned also by the serious consequences of the presence of refugees and externally displaced persons for the already difficult economic and social situation in Djibouti, which is suffering from prolonged drought and the negative impact of the critical situation in the Horn of Africa,

Recognizing that more than half of the refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti are located in Djibouti City in most serious difficulties and without direct international assistance, exerting intolerable pressure on the limited resources of the country and the social infrastructure and causing, in particular, serious problems of security,

Also recognizing the need for cooperation between the Government of Djibouti and the High Commissioner and relevant organizations to find alternative solutions for the problem of refugees in Djibouti City and to be able to mobilize the necessary external assistance to meet their specific needs,

Aware that the refugee population in the refugee camps throughout Djibouti is in a precarious situation, facing the threat of famine, malnutrition and disease, and that it needs adequate external assistance for the provision of foodstuff, medical assistance and the necessary infrastructure for shelter,

Aware also that Eritrea has been devastated by a thirty-year war, which ended in May 1991, and repeated droughts over the years, that its economy and resources have been destroyed and that it is starting anew,

Recognizing the massive task facing Eritrea of repatriating over half a million refugees, particularly from the Sudan, through its Programme for Refugee Reintegration and Rehabilitation of Resettlement Areas in Eritrea, and resettling voluntary returnees already in the country, internally displaced persons and demobilized former combatants, and the enormous burden that this has placed on the Government of Eritrea,

Recognizing also the need for cooperation between the Government of Eritrea and the Department of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and relevant organizations to enable the mobilization of the necessary international assistance to put the programmes of human resettlement into action in Eritrea,

Deeply concerned about the massive presence of refugees, voluntary returnees, displaced persons and demobilized soldiers in Ethiopia and the enormous burden that this has placed on the country's infrastructure and meagre resources of the country,

Deeply concerned also about the grave consequences this has entailed for Ethiopia's capability to grapple with the effects of the prolonged drought and rebuild the country's economy,

Aware of the heavy burden placed on the Government of Ethiopia and of the need for immediate and adequate assistance to refugees, voluntary returnees, displaced persons, demobilized soldiers and victims of natural disasters,

Deeply concerned about the burden that has been placed on the Government and people of Kenya because of the influx of refugees fleeing the strife and famine that have stricken neighbouring countries and the infiltration of armed bandits and highly dangerous and illegal weapons from the situation obtaining in Somalia,

Aware of the need to improve the security situation in the region, particularly in the border areas, for the safety of the refugees, local community and personnel involved in humanitarian activities,

Recognizing the great contribution and sacrifices that the Government of Kenya has made and continues to make in dealing with this situation, while facing deteriorating conditions caused by the impact of the persistent drought that has affected and continues to affect its own population,

Emphasizing the importance and necessity of continuing assistance to the refugees and displaced persons in Kenya, until such time as this situation has changed,

Deeply concerned about the tragic impact that the civil war in Somalia continues to have on the lives of its people, affecting four to five million people who are either refugees in neighbouring countries or internally displaced and are in need of urgent humanitarian assistance,

Aware that the voluntary repatriation of large numbers of Somali refugees in neighbouring countries and elsewhere, as well as the return of internally displaced persons to their original homes, will still require a planned and integrated international assistance programme designed to cover their basic needs, ensure adequate reception arrangements and facilitate their smooth integration into their respective communities,

Convinced that it is necessary that humanitarian assistance to Somali refugees, returnees and displaced persons be mobilized urgently and delivered without delay in view of the deteriorating situation of the displaced persons and returnees and the mounting pressure the refugees continue to place on the host countries,

Appealing to the Somalis to implement the Addis Ababa Agreement concerning national reconciliation which the Somali leaders signed on 27 March 1993 in order to create an environment conducive to the repatriation of Somali refugees from the neighbouring countries,

Recognizing that the Sudan has been hosting large numbers of refugees over an extended period of time,

Aware of the economic difficulties facing the Government of the Sudan and the need for adequate assistance for the refugees and displaced persons in the Sudan and the rehabilitation of the areas in which they are located,

Commending the Government of the Sudan and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the efforts they have undertaken for the voluntary repatriation of the large numbers of refugees to their homelands,

Deeply concerned about the plight of Sudanese refugee children, particularly the problem of unaccompanied minors, and emphasizing the need for their protection, well-being and reunification with their families,

Considering that the repatriation and reintegration of returnees and the relocation of displaced persons are aggravated by natural disasters and that the process poses serious humanitarian, social and economic problems for the Government of Chad,

Cognizant of the appeal to Member States and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to provide the necessary assistance to the Government of Chad to alleviate its problems and improve its abilities to implement the programme of repatriation, reintegration and relocation of voluntary returnees and displaced persons,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the Economic Community of West African States and the Organization of African Unity to restore peace, security and stability in Liberia, and the signing at Cotonou, Benin, on 25 July 1993, of the peace agreement between the Interim Government of National Unity of Liberia, the National Patriotic Front of Liberia and the United Liberation Movement of Liberia for Democracy, as well as the establishment of the United Nations Observer Mission in Liberia, aimed at bringing an end to the conflict,

Deeply concerned about the influx of internally displaced persons, returnees and refugees to Monrovia and the enormous burden this has placed on the infrastructure and fragile economy of the country,

Also deeply concerned that, despite the efforts made to provide the necessary material and financial assistance for the refugees, returnees and displaced persons, the situation remains unsettled and has serious implications for the long-term national development of Liberia, as well as for those West African countries hosting Liberian refugees,

Bearing in mind the continuing need to provide emergency humanitarian assistance to Liberian refugees, returnees and displaced persons, since the security situation is not yet propitious for the conduct of large-scale voluntary repatriation and reintegration,

Recognizing the heavy burden placed on the people and Government of Malawi and the sacrifices they are making in caring for refugees, given the country's limited social services and infrastructure, and the need for adequate international assistance to Malawi to enable it to continue its efforts to provide assistance to the refugees,

Gravely concerned about the continuing serious social, economic and environmental impact of the massive presence of refugees in Malawi, as well as its far-reaching consequences for the long-term development process and environmental effects,

Bearing in mind the findings and recommendations of the 1991 inter-agency mission to Malawi, particularly on the need to strengthen the country's socio-economic infrastructure in order to enable it to provide for the immediate humanitarian relief requirements of the refugees as well as on the long-term national development needs of the country,

Convinced that, because of the serious economic situation and, in particular, because of the effect of devastating drought in southern Africa, there is continued need for the international community to extend maximum and concerted assistance to southern African countries sheltering refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Welcoming with appreciation the ongoing activities of the High Commissioner for the voluntary repatriation and reintegration of South African returnees, and hoping that the obstacles to the return of all refugees and exiles in conditions of safety and dignity will be removed without delay,

Recognizing the need to integrate refugee-related development projects in local and national development plans,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and that of the High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Commends the Governments concerned for their sacrifices, for providing assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and for their efforts to promote voluntary repatriation and other measures taken in order to find appropriate and lasting solutions;

3. Expresses deep concern at the serious and far-reaching consequences of the presence of large numbers of refugees and displaced persons in the countries concerned and the implications for the security environment and their long-term socio-economic development;

4. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General, the High Commissioner, the specialized agencies, the International Committee of the Red Cross, donor countries and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations for their assistance in mitigating the plight of the large number of refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

5. Expresses the hope that additional resources will be made available for general refugee programmes to keep pace with refugee needs;

6. Appeals to Member States, international organizations and non-governmental organizations to provide adequate and sufficient financial, material and technical assistance for relief and rehabilitation programmes for the large number of refugees, voluntary returnees and displaced persons and victims of natural disasters and to the affected countries;

7. Requests all Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to pay particular attention to the protection of special needs of refugee women and children;

8. Calls upon the Secretary-General, the High Commissioner, the Department of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and United Nations humanitarian agencies to continue their efforts to mobilize humanitarian assistance for the relief, repatriation, rehabilitation and resettlement of refugees, returnees and displaced persons, including those refugees in urban areas;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize adequate financial and material assistance for the full implementation of ongoing projects in rural and urban areas affected by the presence of refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

10. Requests the High Commissioner to continue her efforts with the appropriate United Nations agencies, the Organization of African Unity and intergovernmental, governmental and non-governmental organizations in order to consolidate and increase essential services to refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive and consolidated report on the situation of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons, and humanitarian questions", and an oral report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994.

The Americas and the Caribbean

The High Commissioner reported⁽¹⁾ continued improvements in the refugee situation in the Americas during 1993, due to the success of regional peace initiatives and the follow-up process to the 1989 International Conference on Central American Refugees (CIREFCA). The consolidation of durable solutions for Central American refugees included the first organized return of several thousand Guatemalan refugees from Mexico; a decline in the number of Haitian refugee-seekers; and steady progress with the voluntary repatriation of Chilean and Surinamese refugees. UNHCR was, however, increasingly concerned at the arrival of asylum-seekers from outside the region, particularly from Africa and China.

In Canada, the introduction of a Bill in February 1993 laid the foundation for significant changes in refugee determination procedures, while in the United States, intense efforts were made to amend the Asylum Act, including measures to expedite exclusion procedures.

UNHCR expanded its activities in Brazil following an accelerated influx of asylum-seekers from Africa, mainly from Angola and Zaire. Democratic reforms in Chile continued to inspire the repatriation of refugees. UNHCR assisted the return of some 1,945 Chileans in 1993.

Despite ongoing problems, UNHCR assisted in the repatriation of 1,796 Haitians from the Bahamas and Cuba. In February, 208 Haitians repatriated with the assistance of the Cuban Red Cross. Cuban authorities provided asylum to all Haitians who opted to remain in the country and a local integration programme for 46 Haitians in Isla de la Juventud was implemented by the Government. In the same period, 177 Chileans and 281 Salvadorians repatriated from Cuba. Also in February, the United States began in-country processing in Haiti for those who considered that their life or liberty was jeopardized by the country's political situation, but UNHCR did not consider this to be an alternative to the right to seek asylum and was monitoring the situation closely.

In Central America, UNHCR implemented QIP's in Belize, El Salvador and Guatemala and the first collective repatriation of 2,466 Guatemalan refugees was accomplished in January. UNHCR also supported the revision of CIREFCA projects to enhance their impact on refugee, returnee and displaced women in Central America and the implementation of an executive decree by Costa Rica that allowed 10,200 refugees to obtain residence status in the country. UNHCR's direct involvement in a $12 million QIP programme in Nicaragua ended on 30 June.

Arrangements for the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) to assume the lead-agency role in CIREFCA on 1 July were confirmed at a high-level meeting between UNHCR, UNDP and the Office of the Secretary-General. UNHCR's component of the overall CIREFCA package for 1993/1994 was budgeted at some $40 million.

In 1993, total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas and the Caribbean amounted to $38.1 million, of which $21.1 million was under General Programmes and $16.9 million under Special Programmes.

Follow-up to the International Conference on Central American Refugees

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹²⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a September report on the CIREFCA follow-up process.⁽¹³⁾ He stated that, as a result of the Central American peace agreements and the CIREFCA process, almost 100,000 persons had been repatriated to El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua and the number of Central American refugees receiving international assistance had decreased by 50 per cent since 1989 to some 75,000.

Through CIREFCA programmes in the first quarter of 1993, UNHCR supported the local integration of Nicaraguans and Salvadorians in their countries of asylum (Belize and Costa Rica) as well as reintegration programmes in their countries of origin. The largest of those programmes was a $12 million QIP which was concluded in Nicaragua in June. It directly benefited 70,000 returnees, demobilized combatants and local populations.

Since the QIP's inception in 1991, a total of 350 micro-projects had been implemented.

The Ninth Ministerial Conference between the European Community (EC) and Central American States (San Salvador, El Salvador, 22 and 23 February), issued a final communique that voiced support for CIREFCA by calling for increased resources for refugee and sustainable development programmes in the region.

A total of 153 projects, with total external funding requirements of $335.7 million, had been recorded in seven countries since CIREFCA's inception in 1989. As at January 1993, $240.1 million had been mobilized, of which 38 per cent was contributed through NGOs, 32 per cent through Governments of the region, 24 per cent through UNHCR and 6 per cent through other channels.

In October,⁽¹⁴⁾ the UNHCR Executive Committee reaffirmed its support for the efforts of Belize and Mexico in favour of uprooted populations, especially in the area of human rights. It urged the international community to develop innovative approaches that emphasized social programmes to combat extreme poverty in the transition from repatriation assistance to development cooperation. It reiterated its support for UNDP's lead-agency role, since July, and emphasized the importance of incorporating the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced populations into UNDP's post-CIREFCA strategy. It requested UNHCR and UNDP to convene jointly an informal technical meeting with this objective.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 48/117 without vote.

International Conference on Central American Refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/1 of 7 October 1987, 42/110 of 7 December 1987, 42/204 of 11 December 1987, 42/231 of 12 May 1988, 43/118 of 8 December 1988, 44/139 of 15 December 1989, 45/141 of 14 December 1990, 46/107 of 16 December 1991 and 47/103 of 16 December 1992,

Bearing in mind that the International Conference on Central American Refugees is related to the initiative of the Central American Presidents expressed in the procedures for the establishment of a firm and lasting peace in Central America, signed at the Esquipulas II summit meeting on 7 August 1987,

Also bearing in mind that the Central American Presidents, at the fourteenth summit meeting, held at Guatemala City from 27 to 29 October 1993, expressing the need to continue the transition from humanitarian assistance to development cooperation, decided to call upon the international community, especially the International Conference on Central American Refugees, which has carried out valuable work in that area, to continue its support for humanitarian and development programmes benefiting uprooted populations,

Recognizing the importance and validity of the Declaration and the Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons, adopted at the International Conference on Central American Refugees held at Guatemala City in May 1989, and the Declarations of the First and Second International Meetings of the Follow-Up Committee of the Conference,

Recalling of the outcome of the meetings of the Follow-Up Committee of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, held at San Jose in April 1991, at San Pedro Sula, Honduras, in June 1991, at Tegucigalpa in August 1991, at Managua in October 1991, at San Salvador in April 1992 and at Managua in September and October 1992,

Taking note of the report of the Follow-Up Committee of the Conference, submitted to the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its forty-fourth session, concerning the implementation of the Concerted Plan of Action,

Noting with satisfaction the efforts being made by the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico to find lasting solutions to the problems of the refugees, returnees and displaced persons in implementing the aims and objectives of the Concerted Plan of Action as an integral part of efforts to achieve a firm and lasting peace and democratization of the region,

Welcoming with satisfaction the progress made in El Salvador in achieving the consolidation of peace in that country, in accordance with the peace agreements and the National Reconstruction Plan, the efforts to achieve peace and reconciliation in Guatemala and the efforts made in Nicaragua to achieve the objectives of national reconciliation and to assist the uprooted populations, all of which continue to encourage movements of voluntary repatriation and settlement of internally displaced persons,

Bearing in mind the joint political and economic communique adopted at the ninth Ministerial Conference by the States members of the European Community and Central America, the San Jose IX Summit held at San Salvador on 22 and 23 February 1993, and the joint declaration of the fourteenth summit meeting of Central American Presidents, held at Guatemala City from 27 to 29 October 1993, in which the need for international support for the programmes carried out within the framework of the International Conference on Central American Refugees was reaffirmed,

Recognizing the substantial support that, inter alia, the Secretary-General, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme, the donor community and national and international non-governmental organizations have given the Conference since its inception,

Also recognizing that the extension of the duration of the Concerted Plan of Action until May 1994 has enabled substantial progress to be made in the efforts to achieve the proposed objectives and aims,

Taking note of the transfer, on 10 July 1993, of the lead-agency role from the Office of the High Commissioner to the United Nations Development Programme in order to strengthen the Concerted Plan of Action,

Convinced that peace, development and democracy are essential in order to solve the problems of uprooted populations in the region,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and that of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Notes with satisfaction the progress achieved in the implementation of programmes and projects within the framework of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, and expresses its appreciation to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Development Programme for their substantial support to the process, and for the invaluable contribution of non-governmental organizations;

3. Urges the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico to continue to implement and follow up the programmes benefiting refugees, returnees and displaced persons in accordance with their national development plans;

4. Reaffirms its conviction that the voluntary repatriation of refugees and the return of displaced persons to their countries or communities of origin continue to be a positive sign of the progress of peace in the region;

5. Also reaffirms its conviction that the processes of return to and reintegration in the countries and communities of origin should continue to take place in conditions of dignity and security and with the necessary guarantees to ensure that the affected populations are included in the respective national development plans;

6. Supports the special attention that the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico are giving to the particular needs of refugee, repatriated and displaced women and children and to the measures being adopted to protect and improve the environment and to preserve ethnic and cultural values;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, the Office of the High Commissioner, the United Nations Development Programme and other organs of the United Nations system to continue their support for and involvement in the follow-up, implementation and evaluation of the humanitarian programmes developed within the framework of the Conference process;

8. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring, upon the conclusion of the Conference process in May 1994, that the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons are specifically reflected in a comprehensive and sustained concept of human development and that the United Nations Development Programme, with the collaboration of the High Commissioner, continues to support this approach in the post-Conference strategy;

9. Expresses its conviction that the work carried out through the integrated Conference process could serve as a valuable lesson to be applied in other regions of the world;

10. Calls upon the international community, particularly the donor countries, to continue to strengthen their generous support for the Conference so as to consolidate the aims and objectives set at the Conference, and to continue to provide their valuable cooperation in the financing and implementation of the social and humanitarian programmes proposed for the period of transition to development, their own development programmes and those programmes relating to environmental protection which are designed to meet the needs of the uprooted populations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session a report on the process of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, including an analysis of achievements, obstacles and pending tasks.

East and South Asia and Oceania

Significant progress was made in repatriating refugees in the Asian subregions during 1993.

In South Asia, the signing of two Memoranda of Understanding between Bangladesh and Myanmar, at Dhaka on 12 May and at Yangon on 5 November, paved the way for the voluntary repatriation of some 250,000 refugees from Myanmar who had sought refuge in Bangladesh in 1991-1992. More than 50,000 had already returned spontaneously and preparations for a large-scale organized return movement of the remainder were at an advanced stage. The unsettled situation in northern Sri Lanka prevented UNHCR from actively promoting repatriation from India; however, it facilitated the return of those refugees who expressed a desire to go back and a total of 6,927 Sri Lankan refugees were repatriated during the year. The influx into Nepal of ethnic Nepalese from Bhutan had risen to 82,219 asylum-seekers in six camps in the south-eastern part of the country by 20 March, but scant progress was made towards a solution.

In South-East Asia, 132,000 Cambodians repatriated between January and April, bringing the number who had returned from Thailand and other countries since the start of the operation in March 1992 to some 387,000. Another 1,000 were repatriated from Indonesia. The reintegration effort was generally successful although problems were encountered with land-mines, the acquisition of land, and the attainment of self-sufficiency. As a result of renewed conflict between the Government and Khmer Rouge forces, thousands of Cambodian nationals were displaced within the country. Some 35,000 ethnic Vietnamese Cambodians escaping ethnic persecution were granted refuge in Viet Nam in early 1993, but some 6,000 persons remained stranded along the Cambodian/Vietnamese border despite negotiations to resolve the issue.

The implementation of the Comprehensive Plan of Action for Indo-Chinese Refugees (CPA) continued with considerable success. Under CPA resettlement operations for Vietnamese and Lao refugees, 5,691 persons resettled during the first quarter of 1993. An understanding was reached on 2 October between Indonesia, Viet Nam and UNHCR regarding the return, without the use of force, of all Vietnamese non-refugees from Indonesia. Following the successful completion of refugee status determinations for some 20,000 UNHCR-assisted Lao refugees in Thailand in October, efforts to voluntarily repatriate and resettle the remaining caseload were promoted vigorously. The Sixth Tripartite Meeting between the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Thailand and UNHCR (Savannakhet, Lao People's Democratic Republic, July) reviewed progress and obstacles towards repatriation, including a shortage of suitable rural sites to absorb repatriation volunteers. According to information provided by the High Commissioner in August,⁽¹⁵⁾ all CPA parties agreed during the first half of 1993 to the repatriation of unaccompanied minors from Indonesia and Hong Kong to Viet Nam. The first of these children left Indonesia and Hong Kong under this family reunion operation in April and June, respectively.

In October,⁽¹⁴⁾ the Executive Committee expressed support for the continued voluntary repatriation programme to Viet Nam and urged all the parties concerned to reinforce their efforts for the return and reintegration of Lao refugees and asylum-seekers from Thailand and neighbouring countries. It called on the international community to continue to contribute generously to CPA until all its objectives had been achieved.

During 1993, total expenditures in Asia and Oceania amounted to $144.4 million, of which $58.4 million came under General Programmes and $85.9 million under Special Programmes.

Europe

In Western Europe, the number of new asylum-seekers declined for the first time since 1987. The estimated number of new requests in 1993 was close to 550,000, compared with 680,000 in 1992. Refugee status was granted to some 50,000 asylum-seekers, while more than 400,000 applicants were rejected. Some 60,000 individual claimants were allowed to stay on humanitarian grounds. Member States of the European Union (formerly EC) persevered in their efforts to harmonize their asylum laws and policies. UNHCR continued to provide advice on the implementation of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees⁽¹⁶⁾ and its 1967 Protocol,⁽¹⁷⁾ and expressed concern whenever new legislative and administrative measures inclined towards a departure from Western Europe's liberal asylum traditions. While States increasingly relied on measures such as stricter border controls, visa obligations, air carrier sanctions and safe country of origin and first asylum concepts, UNHCR emphasized that such measures did not offer solutions to the refugee problem, but made it increasingly difficult for persons in need of international protection to gain admission to safety and access to asylum procedures.

By April, seminars to promote refugee law and institution-building had been held in 11 countries for officials of the Ministries of Justice, Interior, Labour and Social Affairs, as well as for NGO representatives. The seminars were organized in cooperation with the International Organization for Migration and included representatives of the United Nations Human Rights Centre, the Council of Europe, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, as well as national experts from Western European refugee and immigration offices.

In Central and Eastern Europe, UNHCR continued to focus its activities on protection, the promotion of refugee law and institution-building, and the operation of limited assistance programmes. National Officer posts were created in cooperation with concerned Governments to pursue in-country legal and training activities, to counter xenophobic trends and to encourage a more positive approach to refugees. Meanwhile, Governments of the region sought to control migratory flows in transit through their territories. Most were seriously affected by events in the former Yugoslavia and provided temporary protection to substantial numbers of persons fleeing conflict areas.

UNHCR extended life-sustaining assistance in Armenia to some 140,000 ethnic Armenians fleeing Nagorny Karabakh, Sumgait and Baku. In Azerbaijan, more than 900,000 persons were displaced by the Nagorny Karabakh conflict. UNHCR's target population in Azerbaijan increased in less than a year from 53,000 to 300,000, including 185,000 Azeri refugees from Armenia. In Georgia, with a displaced population of some 300,000, UNHCR provided limited care and assistance programmes to internally displaced persons from Abkhazia and South Ossetia, as well as to a small number of returnees from North to South Ossetia.

According to an August report of the High Commissioner,⁽¹⁸⁾ the total affected population in the former Yugoslavia was more than 3.6 million at the end of June. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, UNHCR provided assistance to 2.74 million people, about 65 per cent of the total population. During 1993, 11 staff and staff associated with UNHCR lost their lives assisting victims of the conflict. The scope and magnitude of the emergency operation in Bosnia and Herzegovina reached unprecedented levels during the year. UNHCR launched appeals on 9 March for $767.1 million to benefit an estimated 3.8 million people, and on 8 October for $696.5 million to benefit 4.3 million people. Airlifts to Gorazde, Maglaj, Sarajevo, Srebrenica and Zepa delivered thousands of metric tonnes of humanitarian relief supplies, food and medicine, and the medical evacuation programme from Sarajevo was a lifeline for serious cases. UNHCR's financial obligations for the Special Operation in the former Yugoslavia totalled $284.6 million in 1993.

Expressing grave concern at the magnitude of the emergency in the former Yugoslavia, particularly in Bosnia and Herzegovina (see PART TWO, Chapter IV), the UNHCR Executive Committee, in October,⁽¹⁴⁾ urged all Governments and concerned parties to ensure implementation of the Comprehensive Response to the Humanitarian Crisis in the former Yugoslavia and to continue to contribute generously to the United Nations Consolidated Inter-Agency Programme of Action.

During 1993, UNHCR's total expenditure in Europe amounted to $585.5 million, of which $25 million was under General Programmes and $560.4 million was under Special Programmes.

Azerbaijan refugee situation

In two communications dated 15 November,⁽¹⁹⁾ Azerbaijan informed the Secretary-General that, as a result of an intensified offensive by Armenia in the south-west of Azerbaijan, more than 37,000 persons had fled their homes since 1 November, in addition to the one million people already displaced from territory occupied by Armenian armed forces. Many refugees had been forced to cross the Araks river into Iran, while others had settled in an overcrowded refugee camp in the Imisli district of Azerbaijan. Azerbaijan noted that snow had fallen throughout the country and temperatures had reached freezing point, creating a desperate need for shelter and food so that the refugees could survive the winter. The Azerbaijani authorities appealed for foreign aid to avoid a catastrophe.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 48/114 without vote.

Emergency international assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Azerbaijan

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions regarding humanitarian assistance to refugees and displaced persons,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Recognizing the catalytic role that the High Commissioner plays, together with the international community and development agencies, in the promotion of humanitarian aid and development with a view to finding durable and lasting solutions for refugees and displaced persons,

Expressing its grave concern at the continuing deterioration of the humanitarian situation in Azerbaijan owing to the displacement of large numbers of civilians,

Welcoming the efforts made by the United Nations interim office and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Azerbaijan to coordinate the needs assessment and the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Welcoming also the consolidated United Nations inter-agency humanitarian programme for Azerbaijan for the period 1 July 1993 to 31 March 1994,

Expressing its appreciation to the States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations that have responded positively and continue to respond to the humanitarian needs of Azerbaijan, and to the Secretary-General and United Nations bodies for mobilizing and coordinating the delivery of appropriate humanitarian assistance,

Also expressing its appreciation to the Governments of the neighbouring States that provide the necessary humanitarian assistance, including the provision of accommodation and transit routes through their territories for the displaced persons from Azerbaijan,

Noting with alarm that the humanitarian situation in Azerbaijan has continued to deteriorate seriously since the adoption of the programme in June 1993 and that the number of refugees and displaced persons in Azerbaijan has recently exceeded one million,

Aware that the refugees and displaced persons are in a precarious situation, facing the threat of malnutrition and disease, and that appropriate external assistance is needed for the provision of foodstuffs, medical aid and the necessary shelter for the winter,

Deeply concerned about the enormous burden that the massive presence of refugees and displaced persons has placed on the country's infrastructure,

Affirming the urgent need to continue international action to assist Azerbaijan in providing shelter, medication and food to the refugees and displaced persons, especially to the most vulnerable groups,

1. Welcomes with appreciation the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General in drawing the attention of the international community to the acute problems of the Azerbaijani refugees and displaced persons and in mobilizing assistance for them;

2. Urgently appeals to all States, organizations and programmes of the United Nations, specialized agencies and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to provide adequate and sufficient financial, medical and material assistance to the Azerbaijani refugees and displaced persons;

3. Invites the international financial institutions and the specialized agencies, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, where appropriate, to bring the special needs of the Azerbaijani refugees and displaced persons to the attention of their respective governing bodies for their consideration and to report on the decisions of those bodies to the Secretary-General;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to continue to monitor the overall situation of refugees and displaced persons in Azerbaijan and to make available his good offices as required;

5. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue her efforts with the appropriate United Nations agencies and intergovernmental, governmental and non-governmental organizations, in order to consolidate and increase essential services to refugees and displaced persons in Azerbaijan;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

South-West As/a, North Africa and the Middle East

In South-West Asia, over 4 million Afghans remained in exile (2.5 million in Iran and 1.5 million in Pakistan) at the beginning of 1993 as internecine conflict in Afghanistan continued to undermine efforts to form a broad-based central Government and clouded prospects for a full-scale repatriation. The return of Afghan refugees from Iran and Pakistan slowed during the year, with 468,894 individuals repatriating with UNHCR assistance and an additional 400,000 returning spontaneously. The Afghan refugee population in Iran declined from 2.7 million to 1.8 million between December 1992 and the end of 1993. UNHCR was the lead agency in northern Afghanistan, coordinating assistance to 15,000 displaced persons from the capital who resided in five camps and numerous public locations. Some 23,000 Afghan repatriates who returned from Pakistan during January and February benefited from a UNHCR assistance package consisting of a cash grant and wheat provided by WFP. The number of camp administration units operating in Pakistan was more than halved from 347 before the 1992 mass repatriation⁽²⁰⁾ to 145. UNHCR expenditure in 1993 for voluntary repatriation of Afghan refugees came to $31.7 million.

The UNHCR Executive Committee, in October,⁽¹⁴⁾ urged the international community to contribute generously to humanitarian programmes in Afghanistan and to the ongoing repatriation operation from Pakistan and Iran.

The easing of the civil war in Tajikistan, which in 1992 had led to the displacement of some 500,000 persons (over 60,000 of whom fled to Afghanistan), enabled about half of the refugees and 80 per cent of the displaced persons to return home. The spontaneous and assisted repatriation of Tajik refugees began shortly after an amnesty agreement and the first meeting of the Quadripartite Commission on Repatriation comprising Afghanistan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan and UNHCR. Some 13,000 refugees returned spontaneously to Tajikistan and an additional 17,000 returned with UNHCR assistance, primarily to Piandj and Gorno-Badakhshan.

In an 11 January letter,⁽²¹⁾ Afghanistan advised the Secretary-General of an exodus of people from Tajikistan to Afghanistan where they were living under very difficult circumstances. Faced with an extremely difficult financial situation after 14 years of war, the Government of Afghanistan sought emergency United Nations assistance for the Tajik refugees in the form of food, clothing, medicines and shelter. The High Commissioner reported⁽²²⁾ that, following a November 1992 United Nations assessment mission, a joint appeal was launched in January 1993 for $7.8 million—a figure that was later increased to $19.5 million. UNHCR dispatched its first emergency teams to Tajikistan and Uzbekistan in January and launched an emergency operation aimed at preventing further population movements and at assisting the return of internally displaced persons and refugees to their places of origin. The first phase of the emergency assistance programme, involving the transportation of relief supplies by air from Pakistan and Turkey, was completed by June. The second phase involved the regional procurement of building materials for the repair and reconstruction of some 17,000 houses and the provision of supplementary food, fuel and other non-food items. In 1993, expenditures for Tajik refugees in Afghanistan came to $3.9 million. Total UNHCR obligations for Central Asia amounted to $8.7 million.

In January, Iraqi authorities formally requested UNHCR to increase its assistance to 22,500 Iranian refugees at the Al-Tash camp to hasten the voluntary repatriation of approximately 13,000 persons and to provide resettlement opportunities for those unable or unwilling to return to their homeland. UNHCR also continued its assistance programme for some 67,000 Iraqi Kurds and 42,000 Iraqi Shiites. Some 7,000 Iraqis from the southern marshes had sought asylum in Iran since June. When fighting erupted in Azerbaijan in August, Iran helped to transport some 50,000 Azerbaijanis, who crossed into its northern border areas, to take refuge in the safer eastern part of Azerbaijan where seven camps were established. UNHCR provided limited assistance to the group during transportation. In September, the Office initiated a pilot project that covered food, shelter and economic integration for the return of up to 10,200 Iraqi Kurds from neighbouring countries. Some 7,000 individuals were repatriated under the project. UNHCR continued to assist 3,800 Iranian refugees in Iraq's three northern governorates; 20,690 Iranian refugees in the Al-Tash camp in the Al Anbar governorate; 20,000 Iranian Ahwazi refugees in the Wasit and Misan governorates and some 1,200 urban refugees of various nationalities. Saudi Arabia hosted and provided a range of assistance to 24,025 Iraqi refugees located in Rafha camp and, at year's end, the Syrian Arab Republic was hosting a refugee population of 37,100 persons, comprising 35,250 Iraqis, 1,250 Somalis, 300 Eritreans and 300 nationals of other countries. Since the influx to Syria from Iraq began, some 3,000 persons had repatriated voluntarily. UNHCR assisted 3,850 persons in the El Hol refugee camp and to needy urban refugees in Damascus through the Syrian Red Crescent Society.

In Yemen, some 11,300 Somali refugees were moved with UNHCR assistance in May from the Madinat Al Shaab camp (Aden) to the newly constructed Al Khoud camp in the Abyan governorate. Another 1,500 Somalis, who received monthly WFP food rations, were located in the Shihir and Sacar camps at Mukallah. While 512 Somalis from areas other than Mogadishu registered for repatriation, the prevailing insecurity in Somalia prevented their return. Among the 1,025 Ethiopian refugees in Yemen, 262 civilian and ex-navy personnel repatriated in 1993. Total UNHCR obligations in 1993 for Yemen amounted to $3.5 million.

At the request of the Algerian Government, UNHCR began an assistance programme on 1 January for the neediest 9,000 of some 50,000 refugees from Mali and Niger in the southern Algerian provinces of Adrar, Illizi and Tamanrasset. Total 1993 obligations for Algeria, including assistance to Sahraoui refugees, amounted to $4.3 million.

During the first six months of the year, the caseload of Malian refugees entering Mauritania reached 42,000 people. Within the framework of the "Pacte national", signed in April 1992 between Mali and the Mouvements et Fronts unifiés de l'AZAWAD, the Office commenced work in March on a comprehensive plan for the repatriation of Malians willing to return to their homeland. A first group of 6,500 refugees was registered for repatriation at year's end. Allocations for some 38,000 Malian refugees in Mauritania totalled $4.3 million.

Total expenditure in 1993 in South West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East amounted to $115.4 million, of which $57.6 million were disbursed under General Programmes and $57.8 million under Special Programmes.

Refugee protection

UNHCR's main functions on behalf of refugees were to provide international protection and promote durable solutions to their plight. In cases where direct or indirect obstacles were placed in the way of refugee safety and recognition, UNHCR intervened with the authorities to secure the immediate safety of the refugee or asylum-seeker and to interpret certain doctrines enshrined in the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees⁽¹⁶⁾ and other instruments. The Office's promotional activities sought to strengthen knowledge and understanding of refugee issues, as well as to foster the effective implementation of international legal standards on behalf of refugees, returnees and other persons. The development of model legislation on refugees was at the core of a cooperation project between UNHCR, the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee. UNHCR participated actively in the World Conference on Human Rights in June (see PART THREE, Chapter X) to ensure that the Vienna Declaration noted the close link between human rights and refugee protection.

In an August note on international protection,⁽²³⁾ the High Commissioner presented a detailed review and analysis of current issues relating to refugee protection, including principles and other aspects of asylum and non-refoulement; respect for human rights; protection of the internally displaced; protection in situations of conflict; and voluntary repatriation. It concluded that the international protection of refugees would be impossible without the cooperation of States in a spirit of international solidarity and burden-sharing, both in providing asylum to those in need and in fostering solutions to refugee problems.

The UNHCR Executive Committee noted with appreciation the continued observance of international protection principles, and commended, in particular, developing countries with limited resources, which hosted the majority of the world's refugees. The Committee⁽¹⁴⁾ underlined the importance of establishing and ensuring access for all asylum-seekers to fair and efficient procedures for the determination of their refugee status and stressed the importance of adopting common criteria, in consultation with UNHCR, to determine responsibility for considering an application for asylum.

The Committee adopted a general conclusion on the personal security of refugees which deplored violence, intimidation, military or armed attacks, forced recruitment and arbitrary or inhumane conditions of detention. It called on States to adopt measures to prevent or remove such threats. In addition to the need to site refugee settlements securely and to ensure unhindered access by UNHCR and other organizations, States were called on to investigate abuses.

The UNHCR Centre for Documentation on Refugees, which provided authoritative and relevant refugee literature and legal and country information, expanded its services and responded to more than 1,700 information requests. All databases were updated and transferred to the UNHCR local area network for easy access. A pilot project was initiated to test the possibilities for granting external access in the near future. Publication of the quarterly Refugee Abstracts was suspended temporarily for revision. Collaboration continued with the International Journal of Refugee Law, published by Oxford University Press.

International instruments

As at 31 December 1993, the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees⁽¹⁶⁾ had 121 States parties. Armenia, Azerbaijan, the Bahamas, Bulgaria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Russian Federation, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Slovakia and Tajikistan became parties in 1993. The 1967 Protocol⁽¹⁷⁾ to the Convention also had 121 States parties, with the same States, with the exception of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, becoming parties in 1993.⁽²⁴⁾

Other intergovernmental legal instruments of benefit to refugees included the 1969 OAU Convention governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen and its 1973 Protocol, the 1959 European Agreement on the Abolition of Visas to Refugees, the 1980 European Agreement on Transfer of Responsibility for Refugees, and the 1969 American Convention on Human Rights, Pact of San Jose, Costa Rica.

As at 31 December 1993,⁽²⁴⁾ there were 40 States parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons⁽²⁵⁾ and 16 States parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.⁽²⁶⁾

Nansen Medal

The Nansen Medal for 1993—presented since 1954 in honour of Fridtjof Nansen, the first League of Nations High Commissioner for Refugees—was awarded to the NGO, Médecins sans Frontières, in recognition of its exceptional service to refugees.

Chapter XVI

International drug control

The globalization of drug abuse remained a major problem for Governments and United Nations drug control bodies in 1993. With the rising economic and political influence of drug cartels, more and more Governments realized the urgent need for international cooperation in drug control, not only as an expression of solidarity but also as a matter of self defence. Drug trafficking syndicates were becoming increasingly involved in other forms of organized and violent crime.

The International Narcotics Control Board continued to supervise the implementation of drug control treaties and to survey the drug control situation worldwide, while the United Nations International Drug Control Programme provided leadership and coordination for United Nations drug control activities. The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main policy-making body of the United Nations on drug control questions—made recommendations on issues ranging from the treatment of drug abusers to cooperation among States against drug trafficking. The Economic and Social Council adopted nine resolutions based on the Commission's recommendations.

The General Assembly called for international action against drug abuse and illicit trafficking within the framework of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control (resolution 48/112). It stressed the importance of national and international action to implement existing drug control treaties and called on States to adopt adequate laws, strengthen judicial systems and carry out effective drug control activities in cooperation with other States (48/12).

Drug abuse and international controlUN International Drug Control Programme

During 1993, its second full year of operation, the United Nations Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) carried out its activities on the basis of a three-tiered strategy.⁽¹⁾ At all three levels—national, regional or subregional and global—UNDCP, established in 1991,⁽²⁾ sought to act as a catalyst for and to coordinate international efforts within the framework of the international drug control instruments. Ensuring a balance between efforts to reduce illicit drug demand and supply was another prominent goal.

As at June 1993, UNDCP was funding more than 150 projects. At the country level, it assisted Governments in formulating and adopting drug control master plans. Major emphasis was placed on strengthening institutional and legislative frameworks for planning and effective implementation of drug control initiatives. At the regional or subregional level, UNDCP concentrated on developing and reinforcing intercountry arrangements with a view to enhancing joint planning and implementation of drug control interventions. It also expanded its working ties with regional organizations. At the global level, UNDCP promoted legal activities aimed at universal adherence and application of the international drug control treaties; intensified its role in demand reduction efforts; adopted measures to enhance inter-agency cooperation; and strengthened its research capabilities, including the expansion of its links with major research institutes.

During the course of the year, UNDCP evaluation policy and procedures underwent a process of fine-tuning in order to, inter alia, differentiate between project evaluations and thematic evaluations. Fund-raising and public information activities took on added significance.

UNDCP continued to provide support and services to the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB), supplying substantive and analytical input for its report and assisting it in the publication of three annual technical reports. It organized and funded two regional INCB seminars for drug control administrators (Beijing, China, June; Warsaw, Poland, September).

UNDCP's 1992 activities were described in a February 1993 report of the Programme's Executive Director,⁽³⁾ which also outlined UNDCP's policy framework, strategic direction and coordination with other bodies.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In April,⁽⁴⁾ the Commission invited UNDCP to coordinate all drug-related activities by entities and agencies within the United Nations system. It decided, in particular, to maintain active cooperation with the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and coordination with the Commission for Social Development, the Commission on Transnational Corporations and other intergovernmental bodies.

The Commission requested the Executive Director to coordinate the activities of UNDCP and those of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch, and to report to the Commission in 1994 on the most appropriate ways to achieve effective and efficient coordination and cooperation.

In other action,⁽⁵⁾ the Commission requested the Executive Director to propose in 1994 ways for the Commission to cooperate effectively with the Preparatory Committee for the 1995 World Summit for Social Development.

Fund of UNDCP

In a January report on the Fund of UNDCP,⁽⁶⁾ the Executive Director presented a revised programme budget for the 1992-1993 biennium and a proposed outline for 1994-1995.

The Fund was established on 1 January 1992, under a 1991 General Assembly resolution,⁽⁷⁾ under the direct responsibility of the Executive Director, to finance operational activities mainly in developing countries, helping them comply with their treaty obligations and cope with illicit drug production, trafficking and abuse. The financial resources of the former United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control were transferred to the Fund. Its programme budget, based on the Executive Director's proposals, was approved by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, which reported to the Assembly through the Economic and Social Council.

Activities supported under the Fund were implemented by UNDCP within a network of cooperating organizations, including the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), other United Nations entities, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

For 1992-1993, UNDCP's total requirements were estimated at $186,662,000, i.e., $7,221,500 over the amount of $179,440,500 initially approved, to cover requirements for policy-making organs, executive direction and management, the programme of work and programme support. Total requirements for 1994-1995 were estimated at $197 million.

The Executive Director outlined three options for synchronization of the UNDCP budget cycle with the rest of the United Nations system and presented a financial report on operational activities in 1992.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a March 1993 report,⁽⁸⁾ said, with regard to the budget estimates for 1992-1993, that it did not believe that at the present time additional posts, especially at Headquarters, should be created on a permanent basis. Welcoming the Executive Director's initiative in presenting the proposed outline for 1994-1995, it noted that it should reflect current and projected income and expenditure and a broad allocation of resources in terms of programme priorities. Overall, ACABQ believed that a better defined link as to relationship and interaction between regular budget resources, Fund resources and related activities should be reflected in the budget document.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In April,⁽⁹⁾ the Commission approved revised budget estimates totalling $186,662,000 for 1992-1993 for the Fund of UNDCP and took note of the proposed outline for 1994-1995, including total requirements estimated at $197 million.

In other action,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Commission noted the new programme budget presentation and approved, as a temporary procedure starting in 1993, a revised budget cycle, including the holding of a reconvened biennial session of the Commission in December to approve the programme budget, as recommended by ACABQ.

At its resumed session (Vienna, 16 and 17 December), the Commission adopted a resolution⁽¹¹⁾ in which it approved the final budget estimates for 1992-1993, totalling $158,876,900, and the performance report for 1992-1993, totalling $149,012,500, for the Fund. It also approved the initial programme budget for 1994-1995, totalling $187,889,300 for the Fund. The Executive Director was asked, in view of the potential difficulties in fully financing the proposed programme in 1994-1995, to report to the Commission in 1994 on how he intended to balance the financial situation by the end of the 1994-1995 biennium within the resources available.

Illicit traffic

Responding to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹²⁾ the Secretary-General submitted an August 1993 report⁽¹³⁾ on international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking. The report discussed the involvement of children in drug-related criminal activities; cooperation between UNDCP and the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch; global trends in illicit drug traffic and transit; the implementation of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances,⁽¹⁴⁾ and the development of the international drug abuse assessment system (IDAAS), the collection of data on illicit traffic, and technical cooperation with developing countries.

The Secretary-General noted that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs had, in 1992 and 1993, considered trends in illicit drug traffic through reports from subsidiary bodies, namely, the Meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEAs) in each region and the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East. He said that the development of IDAAS had encountered difficulties related to definitional inconsistencies and insufficient data from countries, but a long-term programme was being prepared to improve the quality and quantity of information entering the IDAAS data bank. Another development was the launching of a Rapid Abuse Assessment System, designed to provide developing countries with a reasonably inexpensive means of determining the nature and extent of their drug abuse problems.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/36 without vote.

Frequency of and arrangements for meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Europe

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the conclusions of the report of the Second Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Europe, held at Vienna from 22 to 26 February 1993,^a

Convinced that it is essential for the heads of all national drug law enforcement agencies in Europe to meet annually to discuss trends in the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and the action they may take to combat it,

1. Invites the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to convene the Third Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Europe, in 1995, and thereafter to convene such meetings every three years under the auspices of the Programme;

2. Also invites the Executive Director of the Programme to continue to develop cooperation between the Programme, the Customs Cooperation Council and the International Criminal Police Organization, in order to determine how they might cooperate to organize future annual meetings, and how each meeting might consider progress made in the implementation of recommendations adopted by previous meetings, and to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-seventh session, in 1994;

3. Encourages Governments to send representatives of law enforcement agencies involved in the investigations of drug trafficking to the annual meetings.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/36

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

Tehran Declaration

In January,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East reported to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on its twenty-ninth session (Tehran, Iran, 24-28 October 1992), including the Ministerial-level Conference held at that session. Annexed to the report was the Tehran Declaration adopted at the Conference, which committed member States of the Subcommission to draft comprehensive national and regional drug control strategies. The Declaration outlined policies and action to eliminate illicit cultivation; suppress drug trafficking; confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking; prevent the diversion of precursors and essential chemicals used in illicit drug manufacture; and to reduce illicit demand.

On 27 July, by decision 1993/246, the Economic and Social Council noted the Subcommission's report on its twenty-ninth session, including the Ministerial-level Conference. It also approved the applications by Azerbaijan and Uzbekistan for membership in the Subcommission.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs.

In April,⁽¹⁶⁾ the Commission on Narcotic Drugs encouraged States, by entering into arrangements similar to the Tehran Declaration, to take action to combat the abuse of, and illicit trafficking in, narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. It invited more States to associate themselves with the Declaration and requested the Secretary-General to bring it to the notice of all Governments.

Implementation of the 1988 UN Convention

In 1993, implementation of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances⁽¹⁴⁾ was considered by several bodies reporting to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs.

Efforts to curb maritime trafficking in narcotic drugs were discussed, among other matters, at the Second Meeting of HONLEA, Europe (Vienna, 22-26 February) and at the International Meeting on Preventive Activities against Illicit Drug Trafficking at Sea (Tokyo, 8-13 February). Discussions focused on how to implement article 17 of the 1988 Convention, dealing with illicit traffic on the high seas.

An Expert Working Group on Mutual Legal Assistance and Related International Confiscation (Vienna, 15-19 February)⁽¹⁷⁾ discussed the implementation of article 7 (on mutual legal assistance in investigations, prosecutions and judicial proceedings in relation to a criminal offence) and relevant parts of article 5 of the Convention, and recommended ways to overcome legal and operational problems.

In April,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Commission requested the UNDCP Executive Director to convene a group of experts to examine the possible mandate, activities and funding of a working group on maritime cooperation to promote universal implementation of the relevant provisions of the 1988 Convention. Among other things, the working group was to develop a comprehensive set of principles for consideration by States adopting laws and policies to implement those provisions and to prepare recommendations, tailored to the needs of especially vulnerable regions, to promote information-sharing and law enforcement against illicit traffic by sea. The Executive Director was requested to prepare for submission to the Commission in 1994 a report based on the conclusions of the group of experts and containing specific recommendations for the establishment of the working group.

In other action,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Commission urged States to consider how, in accordance with article 5 of the Convention, proceeds confiscated from convicted drug traffickers might be shared with their countries of origin or domicile if they had provided assistance leading to the conviction and confiscation. The Commission once more invited Member States to consider contributing confiscated property or proceeds to the Fund of UNDCP to help the Programme fulfil its mandate and invited UNDCP to report to it in 1994 on the confiscation issue.

In related action,⁽²⁰⁾ the Commission requested UNDCP to help the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch to coordinate efforts against the laundering of drug money and to continue developing technical cooperation programmes that included assistance in drafting or revising legislation, training for investigative and financial personnel, intercountry collaboration, and advice on strategies and techniques. Member States were invited to review national legislation and bring it into conformity with the 1988 Convention, and the Executive Director of UNDCP was invited to report on follow-up to the resolution.

Also in April,⁽²¹⁾ the Commission requested the Executive Director of UNDCP to report on the implementation of a 1992 Commission request⁽²²⁾ that States adopt legislation to facilitate mutual legal assistance and establish internal mechanisms for the transfer of evidence used in investigations, prosecutions, and judicial proceedings connected with illicit drug trafficking. States were requested to respond promptly to requests for mutual legal assistance and, where appropriate, to supply technical assistance for such purposes.

Taking note of article 3 of the Convention, the Commission, in a resolution on the relationship between illicit traffic in arms and explosives and illicit drug trafficking,⁽²³⁾ recommended that States that had not already done so consider establishing or improving controls on transfers of explosives, munitions and armaments.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/42 without vote.

Measures to assist in the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the Commentary on the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, the Commentary on the Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961 and the Commentary on the Convention on Psychotropic Substances were of considerable value to a number of Governments as a guide in framing legislative and administrative measures for the application of those Conventions in their territories,

Bearing in mind that the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 is a comprehensive document embracing many and varied aspects of combating illicit trafficking in and demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Noting the continuing calls on States that have not already done so to ratify or accede to the 1988 Convention and, to the widest possible extent, to apply its provisions on an interim basis, pending its entry into force for each of them,

Convinced of the great need for and value of a uniform interpretation and application of the 1988 Convention,

Requests the Secretary-General, within existing regular budgetary resources, to prepare a commentary on the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, drawing upon the official records of the Conference for the adoption of the Convention and other relevant materials that may be of assistance to States in their interpretation and effective implementation of the Convention.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/42

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

Also on that date, the Council, again on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/41 without vote.

Promoting the use of memoranda of understanding to facilitate cooperation between customs authorities and other competent administrations and the international trading community, including commercial carriers

The Economic and Social Council,

Deeply concerned about the unlawful use of commercial carriers for the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and in precursor and essential chemicals, as specified in Tables I and II of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, as well as other substances frequently used in the illicit manufacture of drugs,

Recalling that article 15 of the Convention provides that parties to the Convention shall take appropriate measures to ensure that means of transport operated by commercial carriers are not used for illicit trafficking, and that each Party shall require commercial carriers to take reasonable precautions to prevent the use of their means of transport for the purpose of illicit trafficking,

Recognizing the need constantly to improve the capacity of law enforcement agencies to target and intercept illicit drug trafficking, without hindering the free movement of innocent persons and legitimate international trade,

Welcoming the Declaration on the Further National Development of Memoranda of Understanding between Customs and the Trading Community aimed at Cooperation to prevent Drug Smuggling, which was adopted by the Customs Cooperation Council at Brussels in June 1992, and which recognizes and supports the principle of achieving cooperation between customs and other competent authorities and the international trading community, including commercial carriers, through memoranda of understanding,

Recognizing the significance of the use of memoranda of understanding concluded between the Customs Cooperation Council and international trade and transport organizations for the improvement of cooperation to combat illicit trafficking,

Convinced that such an international initiative needs to be enhanced by agreements at the national level, where the joint development and implementation of cooperative agreements can be most effective,

Believing that manufacturers, traders, shippers, carriers, port and airport authorities and others involved in the international supply chain can significantly cooperate with customs and other competent authorities in the gathering of information for risk assessment and targeting purposes,

Believing also that such a partnership should lead to the improvement of physical security, the streamlined clearance of persons and goods and the specialized training of both official and trade personnel,

Recognizing that the cooperation arising from memoranda of understanding may facilitate the use of controlled delivery, to the extent permitted by the basic principles and legal systems of the parties concerned,

Noting that a number of States have already implemented memoranda of understanding at national and local levels,

Convinced of the urgent need to accelerate the process of concluding memoranda of understanding,

1. Urges all States which have not already done so to implement fully article 15 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, by taking appropriate measures to prevent the use of commercial means of transport for illicit traffic;

2. Commends the Customs Cooperation Council for the progress that it has made in developing the programme of memoranda of understanding, and for the memoranda that it has already concluded with major transport and trading organizations;

3. Commends also those Governments which have introduced national programmes of memoranda of understanding, and invites them to share their experiences with other Governments within regional drug cooperation groups and with the Customs Cooperation Council, the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and other appropriate international bodies;

4. Invites the Programme, in consultation with the Customs Cooperation Council and other appropriate international bodies, to monitor the effectiveness of programmes of memoranda of understanding developed at the national, regional and international levels in combating illicit traffic;

5. Also invites the Programme to promulgate details of memoranda of understanding or measures which have been taken at the international or regional level to implement article 15 of the Convention, and which have been particularly effective;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to draw up model texts to assist those countries which require legislation in order to cooperate in controlled deliveries;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation as appropriate;

8. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its thirty-eighth session, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/41

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

Implementation of the Global Programme of Action

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽²⁴⁾ the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in February 1993 an interim report⁽²⁵⁾ on the implementation by Member States of the Global Programme of Action on international cooperation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, adopted by the Assembly at its seventeenth special session in 1990.⁽²⁶⁾

In September 1993,⁽²⁷⁾ the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a more elaborate and updated report on the same issue, taking into account new information from 29 Governments and the discussion of the subject in the Commission. The report discussed each of the main topics dealt with in the Global Programme of Action, including the prevention and reduction of drug abuse; treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug abusers; control of the narcotic drug supply; suppression of illicit drug trafficking; measures against the effects of drug money associated with illicit drug trafficking, illegal financial flows and illegal use of the banking system; strengthening of judicial and legal systems, including law enforcement; measures against the diversion of arms and explosives and illicit traffic by vessels, aircraft and vehicles; the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse, 1991-2000; and the structure of and resources necessary for UNDCP.

The Secretary-General mentioned concrete examples of measures pursued by Governments and brought to the Assembly's attention recommendations for improving national approaches and international cooperation.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In April,⁽²⁸⁾ the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's interim report⁽²⁵⁾ and recommended that the General Assembly pay particular attention to the recommendations in his final report, as well as to reviewing the implementation of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control (see below); strengthening coordination between regional and international priority themes; drug demand reduction, including the prevention and reduction of drug abuse, and treatment, rehabilitation and social integration of drug addicts; the effectiveness of international efforts to eradicate illicit cultivation; and the leadership and coordinating role of UNDCP.

United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse

In his September report on the implementation of the Global Programme of Action,⁽²⁷⁾ the Secretary-General urged Member States to fulfil the Programme's recommendations within the time-frame of the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse (1991-2000) by enlisting the support of national organizations, personalities and the media to publicize the Decade's objectives; establishing national focal points or coordinating committees to ensure effective promotion of the Decade; and by allocating adequate resources to the Fund of UNDCP.

At its seventeenth special session in 1990,⁽²⁶⁾ the General Assembly proclaimed 1991-2000 as the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse to highlight the need for sustained national, regional and global action to implement the Global Programme of Action.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 28 October, at the end of its five high-level plenary meetings to examine the status of international cooperation against drug abuse and illicit trafficking, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/12 without vote.

Measures to strengthen international cooperation against the illicit production, sale, demand, traffic and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and related activities

The General Assembly,

Profoundly alarmed by the magnitude of the rising trend in drug abuse, illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances that threaten the health and well-being of millions of persons, in particular the youth, in all the countries of the world,

Deeply concerned by the growth of the drug problem which entails increasing economic costs for those Governments which seek to combat it, causes irreparable loss of human lives and threatens the economic, social and political structures of the countries affected by acts of violence,

Deeply alarmed by the growing violence and economic power of the criminal organizations that engage in the production, trafficking and distribution of drugs, arms and precursors and essential chemicals, which at times place them beyond the reach of the law,

Bearing in mind the provisions of its resolution 47/99 of 16 December 1992, in which it decided to hold four high-level plenary meetings to improve international cooperation in the fight against drugs, in accordance with the international treaties on drug control, the Comprehensive and Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, the Global Programme of Action adopted at its seventeenth special session, on 23 February 1990, and other relevant documents,

Reaffirming that action against drug abuse and illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances should be accorded a higher priority by Governments, the United Nations and all other relevant national, regional and international organizations,

Taking note of the existing drug conventions, the Global Programme of Action and the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, which contain a sound and comprehensive framework for drug control activities by States and all relevant international organizations, and stressing the need for consistency in efforts to implement these instruments,

Welcoming the efforts of the international community and the unflinching commitment assumed at the highest level by heads of State and/or Government to increase substantially efforts to achieve coordinated action and set priorities in the international fight against abuse, illicit production and trafficking in drugs,

Convinced that, given the magnitude and the global nature of the drug problem, it is indispensable for Governments to increase efforts in order to intensify concerted action and international cooperation based on the principle of shared responsibility,

Acknowledging that there are obvious links, under certain circumstances, between poverty and the increase in the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and that the promotion of the economic development of countries affected by the illicit drug trade requires appropriate measures, including strengthened international cooperation in support for alternative development activities in the affected areas in those countries,

Acknowledging also the responsibility of Governments in alleviating poverty, reducing the dependency of their citizens on narcotics and narcotics production and enforcing legal measures against narcotics,

Recognizing that the magnitude of the drug menace requires the formulation of new strategies, approaches, objectives and enhanced international cooperation that, respectful of the sovereignty of States, deal more effectively with the international operations of those who get rich through the illegal traffic in drugs, arms and precursors and essential chemicals, threatening the stability of many societies in the world,

1. Renews its commitment further to strengthen international cooperation and increase substantially efforts against the illicit production, sale, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, based on the principle of shared responsibility and taking into account experience gained;

2. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to ratify and to implement fully all provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

3. Calls upon all States to adopt adequate national laws and regulations, to strengthen national judicial systems and to carry out effective drug control activities in cooperation with other States in compliance with those international instruments;

4. Underlines the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues;

5. Reaffirms the leadership role of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as the main focus for concerted international action for drug abuse control and as international coordinator of drug control activities, especially within the United Nations system;

6. Calls upon States to take all necessary steps to implement the recommendations contained in the Global Programme of Action at the national, regional and international levels;

7. Reaffirms that the contribution of United Nations programmes and agencies to the implementation of the Global Programme of Action should continue to be coordinated in accordance with the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, and that States represented in the governing bodies of the programmes and agencies concerned should ensure that their agendas consistently reflect and accord adequate priority to drug control activities;

8. Requests the Economic and Social Council at its coordination segment in 1994 to examine the status of international cooperation within the United Nations system against the illicit production, sale, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in order to recommend ways and means to improve such cooperation, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

9. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the support of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and in cooperation with the International Narcotics Control Board, to monitor and evaluate action at the national and international level in implementing the international drug control instruments, with a view to identifying areas of satisfactory progress and weakness, and to recommend to the high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council in 1995 appropriate adjustments of drug control activities whenever required;

10. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Economic and Social Council, with the assistance of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the International Narcotics Control Board, to consider and make recommendations on the following issues, on the basis of the principle of shared responsibility and a balanced, comprehensive and multidisciplinary approach, and without excluding any other aspects that could be addressed:

(a) Reinforcement of policies and strategies for the prevention, reduction and elimination of illicit demand, with particular emphasis on the need for each Government to place a higher priority on treatment, rehabilitation, information and educational campaigns to reduce demand;

(b) Consideration of ways to strengthen and enhance international anti-drug cooperation in programmes of alternative development in order to eliminate illicit drug production and trafficking within the framework of sustainable development, with a view to improving living conditions and contributing to the eradication of extreme poverty;

(c) Careful review of the different aspects of the problem and recommendation to Governments of those areas in which updating and harmonizing national laws and regulations may be appropriate;

(d) Strengthening of the international fight against international criminal drug organizations, which pose serious threats to the efforts to build and strengthen democracy, maintain sustainable economic growth and protect the environment;

(e) Taking into account the situation of transit and producing countries and the crucial role they play in this struggle, with a view to assisting their efforts;

(f) Strengthening of international cooperation to eradicate the growing and dangerous links between terrorist groups, drug traffickers and their paramilitary gangs and other armed criminal groups, which have resorted to all types of violence, thus undermining the democratic institutions of States and violating basic human rights;

(g) Examination of the question of penalties for offences related to drug trafficking, including money-laundering and traffic in arms, and making recommendations thereon;

(h) Increasing attention to implementing all provisions of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, with special emphasis on targeting the profits and money-laundering operations of drug traffickers, strengthening interdiction procedures by land, sea and air and enforcing the control of precursors and essential chemicals;

(i) Promotion and intensification of human resources development, including the implementation of training programmes to deal with illicit demand, supply and trafficking;

(j) Promotion and encouragement of the active involvement of non-governmental organizations and the private sector in the various aspects of the drug problem;

(k) Taking into consideration, in the course of their work, the recommendations contained in the final report of the Secretary-General on the implementation by Member States of the Global Programme of Action;

11. Invites the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its next session to take the necessary measures to implement the present resolution, including consideration of the convening of an ad hoc expert group to contribute to the examination of the issues above and to the identification of concrete action-oriented recommendations, and to report on its findings to the General Assembly at its fiftieth session, through the Economic and Social Council.

28 October 1993 Meeting 42 Adopted without vote

Draft by Assembly President (A/48/L.12); agenda item 112.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: plenary 37-40, 42.

On 20 December, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 48/112 without vote.

International action to combat drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/98, 47/100, 47/101 and 47/102 of 16 December 1992 and 48/12 of 28 October 1993,

Gravely concerned that the illicit demand for, production of and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances continue to threaten seriously the socio-economic and political systems and the stability, national security and sovereignty of an increasing number of States,

Fully aware that the international community is confronted with the dramatic problem of drug abuse and the illicit cultivation, production, demand, processing, distribution and trafficking of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and that States need to work at the international and national levels to deal with this scourge, which has a strong potential to undermine development, economic and political stability and democratic institutions,

Emphasizing that the problem of drug abuse and illicit trafficking has to be considered within the broader economic and social context,

Emphasizing also the need for an analysis of transit routes used by drug traffickers, which are constantly changing and expanding to include a growing number of countries and regions in all parts of the world,

Alarmed by the growing connection between drug trafficking and terrorism in various parts of the world,

Recognizing the efforts of countries that produce narcotic drugs for scientific, medicinal and therapeutic uses to prevent the channelling of such substances to illicit markets and to maintain production at a level consistent with licit demand,

Reaffirming that a comprehensive framework for international cooperation in drug control is provided by the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, the Political Declaration and Global Programme of Action adopted on 23 February 1990, at the seventeenth special session of the General Assembly, and the Declaration adopted by the World Ministerial Summit to Reduce the Demand for Drugs and to Combat the Cocaine Threat, held in London in April 1990, together with the international drug control treaties,

Stressing the important role of the United Nations and its specialized agencies in supporting concerted action in the fight against drug abuse at the national, regional and international levels,

Underlining the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues,

Reaffirming the importance of the role of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as the main focus for concerted international action for drug abuse control and commending its performance of the functions entrusted to it,

Affirming the proposals set out in the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, and recognizing that further efforts are needed to implement and update it,

Inviting the relevant agencies of the United Nations system to make greater progress in incorporating within their programmes and activities action aimed at dealing with drug-related problems,

I

Respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking

1. Reaffirms that the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking should continue to be based on strict respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, particularly respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States and non-use of force or the threat of force in international relations;

2. Calls upon all States to intensify their actions to promote effective cooperation in the efforts to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking, so as to contribute to a climate conducive to achieving this end, and to refrain from using the issue for political purposes;

3. Reaffirms that the international fight against drug trafficking should not in any way justify violation of the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law;

II

International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking

1. Reiterates its condemnation of the crime of drug trafficking in all its forms, and urges continued and effective international action to combat it, in keeping with the principle of shared responsibility;

2. Supports the focus on national and regional strategies for drug abuse control, particularly the master-plan approach, and urges the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to keep in mind that these should be complemented with effective interregional strategies;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the arrangements made by the Programme to promote and monitor the United Nations Decade Against Drug Abuse, 1991-2000, under the theme, "A global response to a global challenge", and on the progress made in attaining the objectives of the Decade by Member States, the Programme and the United Nations system;

4. Welcomes the trend towards ratification and implementation of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

5. Requests the Programme to include in its report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances a section on experience gained to date in implementing the Convention, which should contain recommendations and strategies for its further implementation, and invites Member States to cooperate with the Programme in this regard;

6. Encourages all countries to take action to prevent the illicit arms trade by which weapons are provided to drug traffickers;

7. Expresses its satisfaction with the efforts of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to improve the functioning and impact of the meetings of heads of national drug law enforcement agencies;

8. Requests the Programme in its report on illicit traffic in drugs to analyse world-wide trends in illicit traffic and transit in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, including methods and routes used, and to recommend ways and means for improving the capacity of States along those routes to deal with all aspects of the drug problem;

9. Emphasizes the link between the illicit production of, demand for and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and the economic and social conditions in the affected countries and the differences and diversity of the problems in each country;

10. Calls upon the international community to provide increased economic and technical support to Governments that request it in support of programmes of alternative development that take fully into account the cultural traditions of peoples;

11. Takes note of the initiative of the Programme to study the concept of swapping debt for alternative development in the area of international drug abuse control, and requests the Executive Director of the Programme to inform the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of any progress made in this area;

12. Encourages Governments to nominate experts for the roster maintained by the Programme, to ensure that the Programme and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs may draw from the widest pool of expertise and experience in implementing its policies and programmes;

13. Stresses the need for effective action to prevent the diversion for illicit purposes of precursors and essential chemicals, materials and equipment frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

14. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its valuable work in monitoring production and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances so as to limit their use to medical and scientific purposes, and for the effective manner in which it has implemented its additional responsibilities, under article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, concerning the control of precursors and essential chemicals;

15. Expresses its satisfaction with efforts being made by the Programme and other United Nations bodies to obtain reliable data on drug abuse and illicit trafficking, including the development of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System;

16. Recommends to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs that it consider, at its thirty-seventh session, the worldwide research study on the economic and social consequences of drug abuse and illicit trafficking prepared by the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development in conjunction with the report of the Executive Director of the Programme on the economic and social consequences of drug abuse and illicit trafficking, and that it consider including this issue as an item on its agenda;

III

Global Programme of Action

1. Reaffirms the importance of the Global Programme of Action as a framework for national, regional and international action to combat the illicit production of, demand for and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and its commitment to implementing the mandates and recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls upon States individually and in cooperation with other States to promote the Global Programme of Action and to implement its mandates and recommendations, with a view to translating it into practical action for drug abuse control;

3. Calls upon the relevant bodies of the United Nations, the specialized agencies, the international financial institutions and other concerned intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to cooperate with and assist States in their efforts to promote and implement the Global Programme of Action;

4. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in discharging its mandate to monitor the Global Programme of Action, to take into account the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation by Member States of the Global Programme of Action;

5. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to consider ways and means to facilitate reporting by Governments on the implementation of the Global Programme of Action, so as to increase the level of responses;

IV

Implementation of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control: action by agencies of the United Nations system

1. Reaffirms the role of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to coordinate and provide effective leadership for all United Nations drug control activities, in order to ensure coherence of actions within the Programme as well as coordination, complementarity and non-duplication of such activities across the United Nations system;

2. Calls for completion of the updated United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, as was requested in resolution 47/100, in full cooperation with the Administrative Committee on Coordination, in time for the review and recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-seventh session and for the consideration of the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994 and of the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

3. Reiterates that the following should be included in the updated System-Wide Action Plan:

(a) An annex containing agency-specific implementing plans;

(b) A reference to the important role of the international financial institutions, as noted in chapter II of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, and the ability of such institutions to promote economic stability and undermine the drug industry;

4. Calls upon all relevant United Nations agencies to complete their agency-specific implementation plans for inclusion in the updated System-Wide Action Plan and to incorporate fully into their programmes all the mandates and activities contained in the Action Plan and its annex;

5. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to pay particular attention to reviewing the agency-specific implementing plans of the System-Wide Action Plan for consideration by the Economic and Social Council at its coordination segment in 1994;

6. Requests the Economic and Social Council, at its coordination segment, to pay due attention to the role of the international financial institutions in supporting international drug control efforts, particularly in the field of alternative development;

7. Calls upon the governing bodies of all United Nations agencies associated with the System-Wide Action Plan to include the issue of drug control in their agendas with a view to examining the need for a mandate on drug control, assessing the activities taken to comply with the Action Plan and, as appropriate, reporting on how the issue of drug control is taken into account in the relevant programmes;

8. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in cooperation with the relevant agencies, particularly the United Nations Children's Fund, to report on the efforts to study the impact of drug abuse and related crime on children and to recommend measures that may be taken to address this problem;

9. Recommends that the United Nations International Drug Control Programme cooperate and coordinate with the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat on activities to counter drug-related criminality, including money-laundering, to ensure complementary and non-duplication of efforts;

10. Requests that the System-Wide Action Plan be reviewed and updated on a biennial basis;

V

United Nations International Drug Control Programme

1. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to implement its mandates within the framework of the international drug control treaties, the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, the Global Programme of Action and relevant consensus documents;

2. Urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in particular by increasing voluntary contributions to the Programme, to enable it to expand and strengthen its operational and technical cooperation activities;

3. Welcomes also the work of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on the consideration of the programme budget of the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in accordance with the mandate contained in section XVI, paragraph 2, of the General Assembly resolution 46/185 C of 20 December 1991;

4. Takes note of the note of the Secretary-General on the administrative and financial arrangements of the United Nations Drug Control Programme submitted pursuant to section XVI of resolution 46/185 C;

5. Notes with appreciation the efforts made by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to comply with the approved format and methodology of the programme budget of the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in particular with the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

6. Encourages the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to continue his efforts to improve the presentation of the budget of the Fund;

VI

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General presented under the item entitled "International drug control";

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 48/112

20 December 1993 Meeting 85 Adopted without vote

Implementation of the System-Wide Action Plan

The review and updating of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, requested by the General Assembly in 1992,⁽²⁹⁾ was discussed at two meetings in 1993 by a subsidiary body of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC). That body, the Inter-Agency Meeting on Coordination in Matters of International Drug Abuse Control, met at Vienna (7 and 8 April)⁽³⁰⁾ and again—renamed the ACC Subcommittee on Drug Control—in Paris (6-8 September).⁽³¹⁾ ACC was to review and update the Plan with a view to simplifying and streamlining its presentation for consideration by the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly in 1993.

An update of the Plan was presented to the Council and the Assembly by the Secretary-General, as Chairman of ACC, in June.⁽³²⁾ The Council took note of it on 27 July, by decision 1993/251.

At its September meeting, the Subcommittee reviewed a draft of the Secretary-General's report⁽³³⁾ on implementation of the Plan, which outlined action during 1992 by legislative bodies in the United Nations system and described the activities of UNDCP, specialized agencies, regional commissions and other United Nations organs with regard to: drug demand reduction; treatment and rehabilitation of drug abusers; control of narcotic drug supply including licit production, manufacture and supply and prevention of the diversion of precursors; suppression of illicit trafficking; strengthening of judicial and legal systems, including law enforcement; money-laundering and measures to be taken against the diversion of arms and explosives; and illicit traffic by vessels, aircraft and vehicles. Finally, the report discussed cooperation and coordination of those activities. It was agreed that the 1994 report should be consolidated to include the Plan's update and to encompass a system-wide strategy, summary reports of implementation of the strategy by individual agencies and organizations, and agency-specific plans.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/43 without vote.

Implementation of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions 44/141 of 15 December 1989, 45/179 of 21 December 1990 and 47/100 of 16 December 1992 concerning the establishment, adjustment and updating of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control,

Recalling in particular that the General Assembly, in its resolution 47/100, expressed concern at the limited progress made by the agencies and organizations of the United Nations system towards the implementation of the System-Wide Action Plan, and called on them to incorporate fully into their programmes all the mandates and activities contained in the System-Wide Action Plan,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/179, the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme has the exclusive responsibility for coordinating and providing effective leadership for all United Nations drug control activities, and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs is the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues,

Convinced that the efficiency and effectiveness of international cooperation in the field of drug abuse control depends on the full implementation of all the mandates and activities contained in the System-Wide Action Plan,

1. Reaffirms the necessity, in view of the limited resources at the disposal of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, for all relevant agencies of the United Nations system, as well as other international institutions, to actively contribute, each in its own field of activity, to the effective implementation of the Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, devoted to the question of international cooperation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and to fully cooperate with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to that effect;

2. Calls upon all entities and agencies of the United Nations system associated with the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control, including the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the World Food Programme, the United Nations Environment Programme, the International Labour Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to establish agency-specific implementation plans for their activities related to drug abuse control, and to fully incorporate the implementation of the System-Wide Action Plan into their planning instruments;

3. Calls upon Member States represented in the entities and agencies concerned to consistently emphasize the importance of drug abuse control within the broader context of development, and to ensure that activities and concerns relating to drug abuse control are appropriately reflected, as matters of priority, in their agendas;

4. Calls upon the governing bodies of the entities and agencies concerned to facilitate the implementation of the System-Wide Action Plan by designating an agenda item under which it may be considered at their next regular meeting;

5. Notes that, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 47/100, the Administrative Committee on Coordination gave due attention, under the direction of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, to the updating of the System-Wide Action Plan for the consideration of the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1993 and of the Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

6. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, through its network of field offices, to ensure coordination of all operational activities relating to drug abuse control at the field level, in collaboration with field representatives of other bodies within the United Nations system;

7. Invites the Joint Consultative Group on Policies, consisting of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Population Fund, the World Food Programme and the International Fund for Agricultural Development, to further develop its cooperation with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme in order to improve the coordination of activities relating to drug abuse control within the United Nations system;

8. Requests the Commission to promote and monitor the implementation of the updated System-Wide Action Plan, and requests the Programme to submit an annual report thereon to the Commission, starting with its thirty-seventh session.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/43

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 48/112, the General Assembly called for completion of the updated Plan, in full cooperation with ACC, in time for review by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and consideration by the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly in 1994.

Supply and demand

Demand reduction

In 1993,⁽¹⁾ UNDCP carried out various initiatives aimed at reinforcing the conceptual, statistical and operational foundations for concerted demand reduction efforts. Many of its activities in the second half of the year were in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/35 of 27 July (see below), such as meetings and training courses to assist government officials in assessing the extent and patterns of domestic and regionally shared drug abuse problems. As the first in a series of regional initiatives, UNDCP organized an expert forum on demand reduction in eastern and southern Africa (Nairobi, Kenya, 1-5 November).

Considerable progress was made in 1993 in making the International Drug Abuse Assessment System fully operational and over 100 country profiles were prepared. UNDCP financed numerous demand reduction projects at the country level, promoting community involvement and the development of approaches tailored to target group and project location. It worked particularly closely with the World Health Organization (WHO) in a number of country projects, in addition to working on a 13-city investigation of the linkage between intravenous drug use and human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infection. A new project was launched to examine worldwide knowledge on the effects of drug abuse on fetuses. In collaboration with WHO, UNDCP completed a project on prevention of the abuse of performance-enhancing drugs in sports, to be followed up by a project to develop practical guidelines on drug abuse prevention for use by sports clubs.

Among other activities, UNDCP assisted the international NGO community in organizing the World Forum on the Role of NGOs in Drug Demand Reduction, to be held at Bangkok, Thailand, in December 1994. In preparation for the Forum, four regional consultations were held. In close cooperation with two Governments, UNDCP organized the First International Private Sector Conference on Drugs in the Workplace and the Community (Seville, Spain, 13-15 October), attended by 120 representatives of companies, trade unions, NGOs, educational institutions and international organizations.

Aware of growing substance abuse among children and youth in many developing countries, UNDCP cooperated in the field with the United Nations Children's Fund in defining preventive programmes. UNDCP favoured integrated projects providing immediate assistance to youth at risk from drug abuse and emphasizing education and training.

The International Narcotics Control Board (INCB), in its report for 1993,⁽³⁴⁾ cited examples of successful demand reduction activities, often at relatively low cost; countries carrying out those activities included Bolivia, Colombia, India, Myanmar, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. The Board noted that community-based detoxification and treatment in Myanmar had led to a considerable reduction in drug-related crime and that Bolivia had achieved good results with strategies to protect street children through education, counselling, the creation of employment and the promotion of alternative lifestyles. The Board noted, however, that demand reduction could not succeed without substantially reducing illicit drug supply. It noted with satisfaction UNDCP's balanced approach in that regard, by assisting in the development of national legal instruments, strengthening law enforcement services, supporting alternative economic development, and assisting in the improvement of social, educational and health conditions. It stated that at the national level, however, the reduction of supply and demand could not be separated and that demand reduction could not be codified or standardized by international legal documents.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In April,⁽³⁵⁾ the Commission invited Governments to promote treatment and social rehabilitation programmes for drug abusers and to enhance the exchange of information and experience in that field. It requested UNDCP to cooperate closely with the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch and other relevant entities and organizations in implementing the resolution.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/35 without vote.

Demand reduction as part of balanced national strategic plans to combat drug abuse

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming the Political Declaration and Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, in which Member States proclaimed their intention to strengthen policies aimed at the prevention, reduction and elimination of illicit demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Recalling the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, and its previous resolutions on reduction of the demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, particularly resolution 1991/46 of 21 June 1991,

Acknowledging the work that has been and is being undertaken in demand reduction by a variety of organizations and bodies, including the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, specialized agencies of the United Nations system, in particular the World Health Organization, through the establishment of its Programme on Substance Abuse, and other regional intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations,

Noting the rising trend in and the vast scale of illicit demand for and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and the illicit supply, production and distribution of such products,

Deeply concerned about the continuing threat posed by the abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances to the health and welfare of mankind, to the political, economic, social and cultural structure of communities, and to the stability of States and nations,

Noting the important role that programmes to control supply have been playing, and will continue to play, in the effort to reduce the illicit availability of drugs,

Stressing the importance of the development, by States, of comprehensive strategic plans to combat drug abuse and provide a focus for controlling the supply of, demand for and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Noting the role that Governments play in facilitating the development of demand reduction programmes which can be implemented by either governmental or non-governmental organizations,

Believing that in seeking to combat drug abuse, the effectiveness of programmes to control supplies would be enhanced by complementing and integrating them with appropriate demand reduction strategies,

Noting the importance of developing demand reduction strategies which are specifically targeted and culturally appropriate, and which recognize the social context of the target groups,

Noting that voluntary and non-governmental organizations can play a very important role in the development and implementation of demand reduction strategies,

Recognizing that, as drug abusers are often polydrug abusers, national responses need to be comprehensive, addressing a range of drugs,

Also recognizing that there is no single measure sufficient to address the problem of substance abuse, and that a multidisciplinary and integrated strategy involving the application of measures to counter drug abuse would constitute a more relevant and balanced response,

Noting the links between drug abuse and a wide range of adverse health consequences, including the transmission of the hepatitis viruses and the human immunodeficiency virus,

Acknowledging the importance and benefits of regular evaluation of demand reduction strategies and programmes, and of sharing experiences and information on their evaluation and effectiveness,

1. Urges all Governments and competent regional organizations, particularly Governments of countries where serious problems of substance abuse exist or are likely to emerge, to develop a balanced approach within the framework of comprehensive demand reduction activities, giving adequate priority to prevention, treatment, research, social reintegration and training of professional staff in the context of national strategic plans to combat drug abuse;

2. Calls for the involvement by governmental and non-governmental organizations, including those concerned with health, education, law enforcement, the private sector and the community, in developing a range of demand reduction strategies;

3. Emphasizes the importance of collaborative arrangements between international organizations working in the field of drug abuse control, such as the proposed memoranda of understanding to be drawn up between the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and such organizations as the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organization, which will enhance effective cooperation between the bodies concerned, while fully reflecting their respective mandates;

4. Encourages the Programme to continue developing demand reduction strategies within the context of national strategic plans to combat drug abuse, taking into account regional and local needs, particularly in countries where more dangerous forms of consumption are appearing;

5. Requests the Programme to give priority to assisting countries in the development and implementation of national strategic plans to combat drug abuse, fully integrating efforts to reduce supply and demand;

6. Encourages countries which have expertise in demand reduction to make their experiences and knowledge available to countries wishing to develop a demand reduction strategy;

7. Encourages the establishment of a regional and international system for the regular exchange of information, experiences, training programmes and new ideas on demand reduction programmes and policies;

8. Urges Governments to promote national, sub-regional, regional and international cooperation in order to facilitate improved coordination, at the policy and operational levels, of personnel dealing with the reduction of both demand and supply;

9. Stresses the importance of targeting potential and actual groups of drug abusers and developing programmes designed to reduce demand and tailored to their needs, including prevention, treatment, rehabilitation and social integration;

10. Requests the Programme to assist non-governmental organizations in preparing for the World Forum on Drug Demand Reduction, to be held in 1994;

11. Emphasizes the necessity of taking into account the existing social and cultural environments when developing strategies to control drug abuse or reduce demand;

12. Urges all Governments to provide and support programmes of prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, particularly for youth and those most at risk from substance abuse;

13. Recognizes that the use of illicit products may be linked to the abuse of licit substances, and encourages all Governments to give due attention to programmes designed to reduce the abuse of licit substances;

14. Encourages the development of strategies of early intervention, especially by primary health-care workers, to prevent and discourage substance abuse;

15. Reaffirms the need for Governments to take all appropriate measures to give substance abusers, particularly those who use injections, access to the care of treatment services and agencies;

16. Urges all Governments to address the problems raised by hepatitis, the human immunodeficiency virus and acquired immunodeficiency syndrome, and, where appropriate, to take steps, including increased accessibility to treatment and other approaches, to reduce their harmful effects;

17. Stresses the importance of collecting appropriate statistical data that could be used in the development of demand reduction strategies, and that should be, as far as possible, reliable, valid and comparable, and encourages the Programme to further elaborate guidelines for collecting statistical data and, in particular, data on drug-related deaths;

18. Urges the Programme to facilitate access to and disseminate information received from Governments regarding the development, implementation and evaluation of national strategies and programmes to control substance abuse;

19. Encourages the Programme to integrate its annual reports questionnaire into a single simplified document, which should be coordinated, when appropriate, with other international bodies in order to facilitate timely and complete replies by all Member States;

20. Reaffirms the request to the Programme to disseminate, through the database of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System, the information on demand reduction received from Governments, specialized agencies of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, in such a way as to assist Governments and the organizations concerned in developing their policies to reduce demand, in providing technical support to Member States in the submission of data, and in implementing quality-control measures;

21. Invites the Executive Director of the Programme to place special emphasis on demand reduction strategies and initiatives in his report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-seventh session;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/35

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

Legalization of drugs of abuse

In its 1993 report,⁽³⁴⁾ INCB reiterated its strong position against the legalization of drugs of abuse. It expressed appreciation for the overall support of Governments for that position at the 1993 sessions of the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. It noted that the legalization option was rejected by all those who spoke on the subject at the 1993 General Assembly session. The Board expressed the hope that Italy would reverse a decree issued in June repealing the prohibition of the non-medical use of drugs, a step not in the spirit of international drug control treaties. It expressed appreciation that both Portugal and Spain had recently enacted legislation to strengthen measures against the non-medical use of drugs.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/39 without vote.

Control of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the history of the international drug control treaties and the reasons for their development and adoption, in particular the experience of States confronted with an alarming increase in the abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Mindful of the factors which have led individual States and the international community to rely increasingly on prohibition of the illicit use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances as an important element in drug abuse control,

Seriously concerned about the adverse implications for international drug abuse control if such prohibitions were abandoned,

1. Endorses the view of the International Narcotics Control Board on the question of legalization of the non-medical use of drugs as expressed in paragraphs 13 to 24 of the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1992 and, in particular, the conclusions contained in paragraph 23 of the report;

2. Urges all Governments not to derogate from full implementation of the international drug control treaties;

3. Also urges all Governments to continue strictly to limit the use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances to medical and scientific purposes and other special purposes permitted under the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988.

Control of illicit supply

Action by Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In April,⁽³⁶⁾ the Commission urged its States members and UNDCP to support the development of crop survey systems in areas vulnerable to illicit cultivation, using technologies such as satellite imagery for monitoring. The Programme was requested to call on States to promote the necessary research and scientific and technological cooperation to that end.

Diversion of chemicals for illicit drug production

In a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs,⁽³⁷⁾ INCB discussed the implementation of article 12 of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances.⁽¹⁴⁾ The report outlined action by Governments and competent international bodies to prevent the diversion of chemical precursors used in the manufacture of narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances. As at 1 November 1992, a total of 82 Governments out of 193 countries and territories had submitted information to INCB on their implementation of article 12 and, for 1991, 18 countries and territories had reported seizures of substances listed in the Convention.

INCB proposed that the international community consider providing technical assistance for the enactment of basic legislation and the establishment of administrative and enforcement mechanisms to prevent the diversion of precursors, particularly in Asian countries where chemicals for the illicit manufacture of heroin were produced and trafficked. The Board noted that Africa also merited attention before there was any serious diversion of precursors in the region. Different types of assistance were needed to establish drug control administrations.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/40 without vote.

Implementation of measures to prevent the diversion of precursor and essential chemicals to illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances

The Economic and Social Council,

Concerned about the diversion of precursor and essential chemicals, as specified in Tables I and II of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, as well as other substances frequently used in the illicit manufacture of drugs, from commercial channels to the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Recalling its resolution 1992/29 of 30 July 1992, in which it invited all Governments that had not already done so to establish effective legislative, procedural and cooperative measures to implement the provisions of article 12 of the Convention in order to prevent the diversion of precursor and essential chemicals to the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Noting the effective work of the Chemical Action Task Force, established by the heads of State or Government of the seven major industrialized countries and the President of the Commission of the European Communities, with the participation of representatives of concerned developing countries and other countries, and its practical recommendations for preventing the diversion of precursor and essential chemicals, which build upon the provisions of the Convention,

Noting also the need for the provision of financial, technical and material assistance, including training, to assist Governments in implementing chemical control regimes,

Commending the international cooperation which has resulted from the work of the various international, regional and subregional groups and organizations dealing with issues relating to the control of precursors and essential chemicals,

Noting with approval the dissemination by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme of guidelines for use by national authorities in verifying the authenticity of applications for the export and import of precursor and essential chemicals, identifying suspicious transactions and preventing their diversion to the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Noting the good progress made by the Programme, the International Criminal Police Organization and the Customs Cooperation Council in the establishment of mechanisms for sharing information held in their databases,

Noting that in the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1992, it was stressed that the effectiveness of an international network of databases would depend entirely on the data provided to them by Governments,

Commending the effective work of the Programme in developing and deploying a field testing kit incorporating safe methods of testing and identifying designated chemicals,

Acknowledging the central role of the International Narcotics Control Board and the Programme in the implementation of international chemical control regimes, as well as the intention expressed by the Board and the Programme to strengthen their efforts to promote implementation of articles 12, 13 and 22 of the Convention,

1. Calls upon all Governments, which were invited by the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1992/29, to establish effective measures to implement article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, to take fully into consideration the recommendations contained in the final report of the Chemical Action Task Force;

2. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board, in the course of monitoring the implementation of articles 12 and 13 of the Convention, to assist in identifying new diversion techniques, new chemicals that should be regulated and changes that may be required to counter new illicit methods of using chemicals;

3. Calls upon Governments to submit promptly to the Board all information required under article 12, paragraph 12, of the Convention;

4. Urges Governments that have not already done so to contribute the information necessary for the Board to prepare a directory of administrative and law enforcement authorities and a summary of regulatory controls, in accordance with Council resolution 1992/29;

5. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, drawing on voluntary contributions, to provide financial, technical and material assistance, including training, and to coordinate assistance that international and regional organizations or Governments may provide, in the implementation of chemical control regimes;

6. Urges Governments to support training and assistance activities by the Programme, and to coordinate bilateral assistance through the Programme in order to prevent duplication;

7. Calls upon Governments to contribute fully to and utilize the databases that are being established to prevent the diversion of chemicals, subject to their domestic law;

8. Requests the Customs Cooperation Council, the International Criminal Police Organization, the International Narcotics Control Board and appropriate regional organizations to prepare a memorandum of understanding regarding the exchange of information between their databases;

9. Urges Governments to consider fully and, where appropriate, to apply the guidelines disseminated by the Programme, which have been prepared for use by national authorities in preventing the diversion of precursor and essential chemicals;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to allocate adequate funds, within existing resources, to enable the Board to discharge its functions under articles 12, 13 and 22 of the Convention, and in accordance with Council resolution 1992/29 and the present resolution;

11. Calls upon Governments to provide voluntary resources to enable the Programme to increase technical cooperation and assistance in implementing chemical control measures.

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/107) without vote, 16 July (meeting 12); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1993/29/Rev.1), agenda item 21.

Diversion of psychotropic drugs for illicit use

In its 1993 report,⁽³⁴⁾ INCB welcomed the fact that, in response to its request, worldwide stocks of psychotropic substances listed in Schedule II of the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances,⁽³⁸⁾ including methaqualone and fenetyl-line, had been reduced in keeping with declining medical requirements.

The Board stated that it had also repeatedly drawn the attention of Governments to large diversions of stimulants, sedative-hypnotics and tranquillizers, included in Schedules III and IV of the 1971 Convention, for illicit use in developing countries. It suggested that Governments apply additional control measures to international trade in those substances and that they report annually to INCB on their import and export.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/38 without vote.

Measures to prevent substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 from being diverted from international trade into illicit channels

The Economic and Social Council,

Alarmed by the continuing diversion of large quantities of substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 from licit manufacture and trade into illicit channels,

Recalling targets 8 and 10 of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control,

Recognizing that action to prevent such diversion requires a global response by exporting, transit and importing States,

Bearing in mind the Political Declaration and Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, particularly the paragraphs on control of supply of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Reiterating its request, contained in its resolutions 1985/15 of 28 May 1985 and 1987/30 of 26 May 1987, to all Governments, to the extent possible, voluntarily to extend the system of import and export authorizations provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the Convention to cover international trade in substances listed in Schedules III and IV,

Reiterating its invitation, contained in its resolution 1991/44 of 21 June 1991, to all Governments to extend the system of voluntary assessments of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedule II to include also substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention,

Taking note with satisfaction of the recommendations of the Conference on Control of International Trade in Psychotropic Substances, held at Strasbourg, France, from 3 to 5 March 1993, which was organized jointly by the International Narcotics Control Board and the Pompidou Group of the Council of Europe,

Having considered the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1992, in particular paragraph 59, concerning the successful operation of the system of import and export authorizations and the simplified estimate system with regard to substances listed in Schedule II of the Convention,

Noting with satisfaction that more than ninety Governments have already communicated to the International Narcotics Control Board their assessments of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention, and that those assessments have been published by the Board with a view to providing guidance for manufacture and export,

1. Invites all Governments that have not yet done so to accede to the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971;

2. Also invites all Governments that have not yet done so to communicate to the International Narcotics Control Board their assessments of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention;

3. Invites importing States to take more frequent advantage of the provisions of article 13 of the Convention to prohibit the import of psychotropic substances not needed for legitimate use but frequently diverted into illicit channels;

4. Calls upon all Governments that do not yet control exports of all substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention by using the system of export authorizations to urgently consider the establishment of such a system;

5. Calls upon all Governments for which the control of exports of substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention using the system of export authorizations is not immediately feasible to utilize, in the meantime, other mechanisms, such as the system of pre-export declarations, to ensure that exports of psychotropic substances are in line with the assessments of importing States and that other control requirements in importing States such as import prohibitions under article 13 of the Convention and import authorization requirements are respected;

6. Invites all Governments to exercise continuing vigilance to ensure that operations of brokers and transit operators are not used for the diversion of psychotropic substances into illicit channels;

7. Calls upon Governments of States with experienced national drug control administrations and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to provide support such as training and information systems to States that require assistance in establishing effective control mechanisms for international trade in psychotropic substances;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments and to invite them to bring it to the attention of their competent authorities in order to ensure the implementation of its provisions.

Narcotic raw material for licit use

Global production of opiate raw materials decreased to about 183 tonnes in morphine equivalent in 1993. INCB, which monitored the global supply and demand of opiates for medical and scientific needs, reported(34) that this fluctuation from the 200 tonne range was due to reductions in the areas harvested and amounts produced in Australia, India and Turkey. Australia, which until 1993 had steadily increased its production of opiate raw materials, accepted a Board recommendation to reduce its area under opium cultivation from 8,030 hectares in 1992 to 6,500 in 1993 and to maintain that level in the coming years. Based on estimates from the five main producer countries—Australia, France, India, Spain and Turkey—INCB projected an increase in global production in 1994 to about 192 tonnes in morphine equivalent.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/37 without vote.

Demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1979/8 of 9 May 1979, 1980/20 of 30 April 1980, 1981/8 of 6 May 1981, 1982/12 of 30 April 1982, 1983/3 of 24 May 1983, 1984/21 of 24 May 1984, 1985/16 of 28 May 1985, 1986/9 of 21 May 1986, 1987/31 of 26 May 1987, 1988/10 of 25 May 1988, 1989/15 of 22 May 1989, 1990/31 of 24 May 1990, 1991/43 of 21 June 1991 and 1992/30 of 30 July 1992,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes is central to the international strategy and policy of drug abuse control,

Noting the fundamental need for international cooperation and solidarity with the traditional supplier countries in drug abuse control in general and in the universal application of the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, in particular,

Having considered the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1992, in particular paragraphs 44 to 52 on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs,

Having also considered the valuable recommendations made by the International Narcotics Control Board in its special report for 1989 on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs,

1. Urges all Governments to contribute to the establishment and maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiates for medical and scientific needs, keeping in mind the efforts to solve the problems involved, in particular the problem of excess stocks of opiate raw materials held by the traditional supplier States, and the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions;

2. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions and, in particular:

(a) In urging the Governments concerned to restrict global production of opiate raw materials to a level corresponding to the actual licit needs and to avoid any proliferation of production;

(b) In convening meetings, during sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the main States importing and producing opiate raw materials;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation.

Regional issues

Africa

According to INCB,(34) cannabis remained the most abused drug in Africa, where its abuse had become endemic in some countries. Illicit cannabis markets were supplied mainly from local and regional sources. Illicit poppy cultivation was reported only in Egypt and Kenya, but illicit trafficking and abuse of opiates, mainly heroin, had increased in several parts of the region. Although the amount of cocaine seized in Africa had decreased, more and more countries were reporting illegal transactions in their territories, and African transit routes and couriers from western Africa were increasingly used by international criminal organizations to transport cocaine from South America to Europe. Cocaine abuse was reported to have spread in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, Lesotho, Nigeria and Senegal. The abuse of methaqualone continued to be a major problem in southern and eastern Africa.

INCB suggested that the time was ripe for international consultations on trafficking in khat, following reported links between trade in this stimulant drug and the procurement of weapons in the Horn of Africa.

Technical missions of UNDCP and INCB visited Cameroon and Ethiopia in May to study their systems for controlling licit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

The Sixth Meeting of HONLEA, Africa, was held at Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire (24-28 May).

Asia

East and South-East Asia

South-East Asia remained a major producer of illicit opium,⁽³⁴⁾ most of which was grown in the border areas of Myanmar. A yield study in February 1993 attempted to assess the magnitude of poppy cultivation. Other producers included the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Thailand and Viet Nam. Illicit heroin laboratories continued to operate in the so-called Golden Triangle of South-East Asia where, in the opinion of Thai authorities, about 10 tonnes of heroin were produced annually in some 25 clandestine laboratories along the Myanmar and Thai borders. Illicit opium poppy cultivation was reported to be increasing in the Republic of Korea where about 50,000 opium poppy plants were eradicated in the first half of 1993 compared with about 13,000 plants in the same period of 1992. China (mainland and Taiwan Province), Hong Kong, Japan, Malaysia, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Viet Nam were increasingly used as transit points for illicit consignments of heroin destined for Australia, Canada and the United States, as well as to countries in Europe.

There was a significant increase in cocaine seizures in Hong Kong, Japan, the Philippines and the Republic of Korea, which, according to INCB, could indicate that South American cartels had targeted the region. The illicit manufacture of, traffic in and abuse of amphetamines was identified as a major problem in several countries, including Japan and the Republic of Korea. Illicit traffic in cannabis and the size of cannabis consignments were also on the rise since 1992. Large-scale plantations were detected in the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand. Cannabis was the most abused drug in countries such as Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines, and an increase in its abuse was observed in Japan and the Republic of Korea.

South Asia

During 1993,⁽³⁴⁾ all the South Asian countries were improving their national narcotics legislation and strengthening their drug control administration, law enforcement, treatment programmes and preventive education, with UNDCP assistance.

Transit traffic in heroin from South-West and South-East Asia was reported to be a big and growing problem. Heroin seizures almost doubled in India between 1991 and 1992, a trend that continued in 1993. Heroin abuse was reported to be increasing in Bangladesh, Maldives and Sri Lanka, and remained a major problem in Nepal and in India.

In March, an INCB mission reviewed controls on India's licit cultivation of opium poppy and the production and processing of raw opium and its alkaloids, which it found to be in conformity with the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs,⁽³⁹⁾ although some opium was being diverted into illicit channels. INCB noted that India was a major source of illicit methaqualone, most of which was smuggled to South Africa. In January 1993, Indian authorities seized 3,200 kilograms of methaqualone bound for South Africa.

The Eighteenth Meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific, was held at Seoul, Republic of Korea (13-17 September).

Western Asia

The cultivation of and illicit traffic in cannabis remained a major problem in the region in 1993.⁽³⁴⁾ Systematic eradication of cannabis and illicit poppy plantations continued in Lebanon in 1993, but there was considerable illicit traffic in cannabis resin from Afghanistan through Pakistan to Europe, and from newly independent States in Central Asia to other parts of the Commonwealth of Independent States. Afghanistan also remained one of the largest producers of illicit opium and a rise in illicit poppy cultivation was observed in Pakistan. The eradication of a number of small poppy fields was reported in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan, but many plots, especially those cultivated in inaccessible mountain areas, went undetected. Illicit traffic in opium, morphine and heroin within the region and the smuggling of heroin, mainly to Europe, remained major problems. Illicit traffic in fenetylline from Europe to large markets in the Arabian Peninsula continued.

The thirtieth session of the Subcommittee on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East was rescheduled for budgetary reasons.

Europe

The abolition of border controls within the European Union (formerly the European Community), the opening of borders between East and West, and turmoil in the former republics of Yugoslavia presented major challenges to drug control and law enforcement during the year.⁽³⁴⁾

In the former USSR, international trade by road, rail and air was growing steadily with virtually no control mechanisms in place and a rise in crime in Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine was associated with drug trafficking. Controls on licit drug manufacture, trade and distribution were complicated in eastern European countries by a large number of new companies that manufactured and dealt in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors.

UNDCP assisted central and eastern European countries in updating or developing new legal instruments related to drug control. In 1993, proposals for new legislation were made in Belarus, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, the Russian Federation and Ukraine. National drug control systems were strengthened in several countries, including the Czech Republic, Norway and Slovakia, by creating coordinating bodies.

UNDCP organized the First International Private Sector Conference on Drugs in the Workplace and the Community (Seville, Spain, 13-15 October), and INCB sent missions to Bulgaria and Poland. The Second Meeting of HONLEA, Europe, was held at Vienna (22-26 February).

Latin America and the Caribbean

Drug traffickers continued to take advantage of the strategic position of the Caribbean subregion to transship considerable quantities of cannabis and cocaine, and even heroin, to North America and Europe.⁽³⁴⁾ Transit traffic in cocaine continued to be the biggest drug-related problem in the region, but cannabis smoking and the inhalation of organic solvents remained the most common forms of drug abuse.

Peru remained the world's largest producer of coca leaf and although interdiction operations intensified, drug law enforcement was complicated by terrorist activity. Authorities were forced to fight not only illicit crop growers but also guerilla forces, which drew a large portion of their income from "war taxes" on illicit plantations and trafficking routes.

Colombia remained the world's largest supplier of cocaine hydrochloride, manufactured from coca paste smuggled from Bolivia and Peru. Some 224 clandestine laboratories were dismantled in Colombia in 1992 and 109 in the first four months of 1993. INCB noted that Venezuela had become a major transit country for Colombian drug cartels. Argentina, Brazil and Chile were identified as increasingly important transit countries for consignments to Asia and Africa, as well as to North America and Europe. Cocaine abuse was reported in most countries of the region. In the Andean subregion, poppy plantations were reported to have expanded on Colombian territory and were detected in Ecuador and Peru. Governments in the eastern Caribbean were planning to establish a regional drug intelligence centre based in Saint Lucia. Also under consideration was a Caribbean Community drug intelligence centre.

During 1993, INCB sent missions to Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Peru and Uruguay.

The Sixth Meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean, was rescheduled for budgetary reasons.

On 27 July, by decision 1993/247, the Economic and Social Council decided that the Sixth

Meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean, should be held in the Dominican Republic.

North America

With drug policy under review by the new Administration of the United States, INCB noted that there appeared to have been a change whereby anti-drug resources were shifted from foreign intervention to domestic education, treatment and law enforcement programmes.⁽³⁴⁾ Canada's drug control strategy had been renewed in 1992 with an 18 per cent funding increase, and Mexico also continued to pursue a vigorous anti-drug policy.

Cannabis remained the most commonly abused drug. Although it was increasingly grown indoors in the United States, substantial amounts were smuggled into the country from Colombia, Jamaica and Mexico. In Mexico, a crop control programme had reduced illicit poppy cultivation to its lowest level in 10 years and opium production had declined. Mexican heroin was produced almost exclusively for smuggling into the United States, where it accounted for approximately 23 per cent of the illicit market in 1992, down from over 33 per cent in 1988.

Heroin and cocaine abuse remained a significant cause for concern. Cocaine, particularly crack, was the main challenge to drug law enforcement in the United States, where hard-core drug abuse remained a serious problem, particularly among youth in lower-income, inner-city areas.

Applying a comprehensive control system to international trade in precursors, the United States routinely advised INCB of shipments that were stopped or suspended because of suspicious circumstances. Most cases involved the export to Latin America of solvents used for manufacturing cocaine.

Oceania

Although Oceania had not yet become a focus of major international concern, INCB reported⁽³⁴⁾ increasing cannabis abuse in Australia, Fiji, New Zealand, Samoa and especially Papua New Guinea, where severe health problems were attributed to a potent locally grown hybrid variety. The Board noted that the Pacific Islands were increasingly used as transit points for drug traffic and that a number of countries had made themselves vulnerable to money-laundering by developing off-shore banking operations. The capacity of police and customs services was also inadequate to control the increasing illicit drug trade. INCB welcomed intensified cooperation with the 15 member States and Territories of the South Pacific Forum and with the 27-member South Pacific Commission, which, it said, played an important role in developing legislation and cooperation between police and customs services. It noted that legal instruments were being drafted on extradition and mutual assistance in legal matters, and on the confiscation of proceeds of crime.

Conventions

As at 31 December 1993,⁽⁴⁰⁾ 122 States were parties to the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs,⁽³⁹⁾ as amended by the 1972 Protocol,⁽⁴¹⁾ and an additional 23 were parties to the Convention only. During the year, 13 States—Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Dominica, the Dominican Republic, Latvia, Poland, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Zimbabwe—became parties. This brought the number of parties to the Convention in its original or amended form to 145.

The number of States parties to the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances⁽³⁸⁾ stood at 127 as at 31 December.⁽⁴⁰⁾ Eighteen States became parties in 1993: Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Croatia, Czech Republic, Dominica, Fiji, Israel, Latvia, the Netherlands, Romania, Slovakia, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Zambia and Zimbabwe. While most parties to the Convention regularly submitted their mandatory annual statistical reports, INCB noted with concern that several countries had failed for over three years to provide annual statistics on psychotropic substances.⁽³⁴⁾

As at 31 December, 94 States and the European Union were parties to the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances,⁽¹⁴⁾ which entered into force in 1990. Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brunei Darussalam, Burundi, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Dominica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Fiji, Germany, Guyana, Malaysia, Mauritania, the Netherlands, Romania, Slovakia, the Sudan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Zambia and Zimbabwe ratified or acceded to the Convention during the year. INCB noted with concern that only about 50 per cent of the parties had reported to it for 1993.

To encourage ratification and the establishment of effective drug control structures, UNDCP and other relevant international bodies continued to provide States with legal assistance.

Organizational questions

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its thirty-sixth session at Vienna from 29 March to 7 April 1993.⁽⁴²⁾

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1993/250, took note of the Commission's report on that session and, by decision 1993/245, approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's thirty-seventh (1994) session. By decision 1993/248 of the same date, the Council decided that a reconvened session of the Commission should take place in December to approve the programme budget for 1994-1995 and the second and final revision of the programme budget for 1992-1993 for the Fund of UNDCP.

The Commission's reconvened thirty-sixth session took place at Vienna on 16 and 17 December.

International Narcotics Control Board

In 1993, INCB held its fifty-fourth and fifty-fifth sessions (Vienna, 4-14 May and 1-18 November).

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1993/249, took note of the 1992 report of INCB.⁽⁴³⁾ Also on that date, by decision 1993/252, the Council took note of the summary of the report,⁽⁴⁴⁾ as well as of a note by the Executive Director of UNDCP⁽⁴⁵⁾ on administrative arrangements to ensure INCB's full technical independence.

Chapter XVII

Statistics

In 1993, the statistical work of the United Nations was marked by the completion by the Statistical Commission of the revised System of National Accounts (SNA). The revised SNA was the culmination of a 10-year effort—in which 50 experts in national accounting from 40 countries, as well as international and non-governmental organizations, participated—to improve the basis of national accounts, to extend the scope of the national accounting framework and to harmonize different statistical systems. When adopting SNA in July (resolution 1993/5), the Economic and Social Council recommended that it be widely used in compiling national accounts statistics and in comparing national accounting data.

On the basis of a two-year review carried out by an independent review group and the Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination, the Commission adopted an action plan to strengthen international statistical cooperation and statistical development.

UN statistical bodies

Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its twenty-seventh session in New York from 22 February to 3 March 1993.⁽¹⁾ Its major action was the recommendation to the Economic and Social Council that it adopt the revised SNA. It also made recommendations with respect to SNA's implementation and publication. Other action was taken on strengthening international statistical cooperation; international economic classifications; industrial, service and price statistics; demographic and social statistics; and environment and tourism statistics. Other matters considered were the general development and integration of methodological work, including development indicators; technical cooperation; coordination and integration of international statistical programmes; programme questions; and the fundamental principles of official statistics.

The Commission recommended that it meet in special session in 1994.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1993/6 without vote.

Special session of the Statistical Commission

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting that the Statistical Commission has completed a fundamental review of the structure and operation of the international statistical system and, as a result, has made recommendations and decisions for strengthening the international statistical system, including the following:

(a) A more active Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination to monitor progress in coordination and cooperation within the international statistical system between sessions of the Statistical Commission;

(b) Strengthened statistical divisions of the United Nations regional commissions and strengthened regional conferences of national chief statisticians in all five regions in terms of their responsibilities for statistical development in their regions;

(c) More effective working relationships between the Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and the Statistical Commission and the Working Group;

(d) The establishment of six task forces as mechanisms for developing a more integrated work programme among international organizations in the following subject areas: national accounts, industrial and construction statistics, international trade statistics, finance statistics, price statistics and environment statistics,

Noting also that the Statistical Commission, at its twenty-seventh session, held from 22 February to 3 March 1993, stressed the importance of implementing the revised System of National Accounts in all parts of the world and unanimously recommended that it be adopted, and endorsing the intention to pursue research into the unresolved issues and to work on future aspects of the accounts,

Aware that the twenty-eighth session of the Commission is scheduled to be held in 1995,

1. Decides that a special session of the Commission, of four or five days' duration, shall be held in 1994 for the following purposes:

(a) To review progress made in the implementation of the recommendations and decisions for strengthening the international statistical system in general;

(b) To monitor progress made in implementing the revised System of National Accounts and review plans for the further essential research work already identified;

2. Also decides that the provisions of the present resolution should be implemented within the approved budget limit set by the General Assembly for the biennium 1994-1995.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/6

12 July 1993 Meeting 30 Adopted without vote

Draft by Statistical Commission (E/1993/26); agenda item 12 (b).

Also on 12 July, by decision 1993/223, the Council approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's 1994 special session and, by decision 1993/222, it took note of the report of the Commission on its 1993 session⁽¹⁾ and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its 1995 session.

Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination

The Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination of the Statistical Commission held its sixteenth session at Geneva from 13 to 16 September 1993,⁽²⁾ as decided by the Economic and Social Council on 16 July (decision 1993/229).

The Working Group discussed implementation of the 1993 SNA and plans for further research for updating international standards on national accounts and related statistics; the work of the inter-agency task forces (dealing with national accounts, industrial and construction statistics, international trade statistics, pricing statistics, environment statistics and finance statistics); its methods of work and those of the Commission; aspects of the Commission's recommendations on strengthening international statistical cooperation; fundamental principles of official statistics; coordination of the statistical data-collection activities of international organizations; the medium-term plan of the United Nations Statistical Division; and the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's 1994 and 1995 sessions.

The Working Group recommended that its next session be held in New York in early September 1994.

By decision 1993/224 of 12 July, the Economic and Social Council, bearing in mind the fact that, at its 1993 session, the Commission had discussed strengthening international statistical cooperation (see below), decided that the Working Group should hold four-day sessions in both 1994 and 1995.

ACC Subcommittee

The Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) held its twenty-seventh session at Geneva from 6 to 8 September.⁽³⁾ It discussed its own future role and functioning; coordination of data-collection activities; issues related to the work of the Statistical Commission's task forces; its own Technical Working Group on Statistical Databases; directories, inventories and other tools and reporting mechanisms for promoting coordination of international statistical work; resources available for statistical work in international organizations; and coordination of statistical programmes.

With regard to its role and functioning, the Subcommittee noted that many changes had occurred in recent years which had an impact on international statistical work and which called for improvements in its own functioning. It made a number of recommendations in that regard.

The Subcommittee established parameters for the functioning of the Commission's six task forces and requested specific actions, including the setting of priorities and timetables for their tasks to be completed. It established guidelines for establishing new task forces and agreed to the establishment of task forces for services statistics and the measurement of poverty. The work of the Technical Working Group on Statistical Databases was suspended.

As to tools and reporting mechanisms for promoting statistical coordination, the Subcommittee decided that a number of products, including a new edition of the Directory of International Statistics, would be issued during 1994-1995. Suggestions were made to raise awareness at the regional and government levels of the coordination measures being implemented.

International statistical cooperation and coordination

In February/March 1993,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission adopted a plan identifying 19 actions for strengthening international statistical cooperation and statistical development. The action plan was the result of a two-year review carried out by an independent review group and the Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination. The Commission had before it the Working Group's recommendations and decisions on the subject, adopted at its 1992 session.⁽⁴⁾ Also before the Commission was a January report of the Secretary-General⁽⁵⁾ containing the Secretariat's comments on those recommendations and decisions and a summary of work done and additional action required to implement them. The Commission further considered a report of the Secretary-General⁽⁶⁾ on the proposed programme of work of the Statistical Division for the 1994-1995 biennium and revisions to the medium-term plan for 1992-1997.

Following a review of the Working Group's recommendations and decisions, the Commission revised and adopted 10 recommendations and revised and took note of nine decisions. The recommendations dealt with: the Commission's institutional arrangements, including the possibility of more frequent meetings; the Working Group's institutional arrangements, including that it meet annually; increased emphasis on coordination matters; adherence to United Nations classifications; future topics for discussion by the Commission; and the work of the Statistical Division, the ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities and its own task forces.

The Commission recommended that it hold a special session in 1994, with a possible consequent reduction of its regular session scheduled for 1995 (see above).

In September,⁽²⁾ the Working Group reviewed progress achieved in relation to the Commission's plan of action. It considered that the mandate of the regional commissions in respect of their statistical activities should be specified in operational terms to enable them to play a role in strengthening international statistical coordination; decided that there was a need for wider dissemination of its report, particularly to regional statistical conferences; and adopted decisions on its own functioning, agenda and documentation and on new documentation for the Commission on plans for methodological development in statistics.

Economic statistics

National accounts and balances

In February/March 1993,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission had before it the final draft of the revised SNA.⁽⁷⁾ The new draft SNA—revision of which had taken 10 years—was intended to extend the scope of the national accounting framework and harmonize different statistical systems. It was flexible enough to be applied in different circumstances and to be extended to alternative analyses, such as social accounting matrices and environmental accounting. Also before the Commission was a report on work done on the revision by the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts (ISWGNA) in 1992⁽⁸⁾ and a note by the International Labour Office concerning statistics of employment in the informal sector.⁽⁹⁾

The Commission unanimously recommended the adoption of the revised SNA and urged ISWGNA to ensure its publication in English before the end of 1993 and to expedite the publication of other language versions. It agreed that the United Nations regional commissions should play a major role in implementing the revised SNA in their respective regions.

ISWGNA submitted to the Commission in January a report on implementation of SNA.⁽¹⁰⁾ It outlined areas where a coordinated international effort was critical: basic data development; handbooks, guidelines, manuals and special studies; training; and technical assistance. It also discussed its own role in the implementation process.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1993/5 without vote.

1993 System of National Accounts

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing that the 1993 System of National Accounts updates, clarifies and simplifies the previous System of National Accounts and is more completely harmonized with other international standards in statistics,

Affirming that the 1993 System of National Accounts is a conceptual and accounting framework that is applicable to all countries,

Recognizing also that the 1993 System of National Accounts emphasizes flexibility, so as to encourage its use in economies that differ widely and to facilitate international comparisons,

Noting that the 1993 System of National Accounts completes the integration of balance sheets, thus providing a fuller picture of the resources at an economy's disposal, consolidates hitherto separate presentations of important elements of an economy, lays the groundwork for dealing with interaction between the economy and the environment, and elaborates an analytical approach to the assessment of poverty through the application of the Social Accounting Matrices,

1. Expresses its deep appreciation to the members of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts—the Statistical Division of the Secretariat, the United Nations regional commissions, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development and the Statistical Office of the European Communities—and to non-governmental organizations, a number of Member States and many individual experts in national accounting for contributing human and financial resources, for more than ten years, to the development of the 1993 System of National Accounts;

2. Recommends that Member States consider using the 1993 System of National Accounts as the international standard for the compilation of their national accounts statistics, in order to promote the integration of economic and related statistics, and as an analytical tool;

3. Recommends also that Member States use the 1993 System of National Accounts in the international reporting of comparable national accounting data;

4. Recommends further that international organizations consider the 1993 System of National Accounts and the concepts therein when they review standards for particular fields of economic statistics and endeavour to achieve consistency with the 1993 System of National Accounts and, when differences remain, explain the rationale for those differences and provide a full reconciliation with the 1993 System of National Accounts to the extent possible;

5. Requests the Secretary-General and the members of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts to proceed with publication of the 1993 System of National Accounts in all six languages of the United Nations as rapidly as possible and to promote its wide dissemination;

6. Requests the members of the Intersecretariat Working Group to continue to be involved in coordinating the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts;

7. Requests Member States and regional and international organizations to support all aspects of the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts, namely, basic data development, the issuance of handbooks, guidelines, manuals and special studies, training activities among both users and producers and technical cooperation activities;

8. Further requests Member States and regional and international organizations to provide assistance and support in refining and updating the 1993 System of National Accounts in areas identified in the research agenda, including further developmental work on methodologies, research on conceptual enhancements and emerging or unresolved issues, and refinement of current recommendations in the light of experience gained in implementation;

9. Agrees that the United Nations regional commissions should play a major role in the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts in their respective regions and urges the Secretary-General to coordinate, at a high level, the mobilization of bilateral and multilateral resources for the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts, including the necessary support for countries and the regional commissions.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/5

12 July 1993 Meeting 30 Adopted without vote

Draft by Statistical Commission (E/1993/26); agenda item 12 (b).

Tourism statistics

In a report prepared by the World Tourism Organization (WTO) in collaboration with the United Nations Statistical Division,⁽¹¹⁾ a number of draft recommendations on tourism statistics were presented to the Statistical Commission. The issue had been discussed at the 1991 International Conference on Travel and Tourism Statistics, jointly organized by WTO and Canada. The report outlined the development of and need for tourism statistics, described the concepts and forms of tourism, defined basic tourism units and proposed possible classifications of tourism demand and supply. It also addressed the subject of statistics on tourism expenditure, noting that they were important indicators required by policy makers, planning officials, marketers and researchers. The report described further work to be carried out by WTO in cooperation with other organizations and proposed that the Commission might wish to: consider developments and statistical requirements related to the growing role of tourism in the national economy; consider WTO's draft recommendations on concepts, definitions and classifications of tourism statistics; and consider the Standard International Classification of Tourism Activities (SICTA)⁽¹²⁾ and adopt it as a provisional classification.

At its February/March session,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission adopted both WTO's recommendations and SICTA as a provisional classification, and requested that they be published and widely distributed. It emphasized the need for technical cooperation to assist countries to implement WTO's recommendations on tourism statistics.

Price statistics

In a February report on the work of the Statistical Division,⁽¹³⁾ the Secretary-General stated that an expert group meeting was held on the methodology of the International Comparison Programme (ICP) and implementation of the 1993 comparison programme (Philadelphia, United States, 27-29 January 1993). The expert group agreed on a plan of future activities: a new direction for the programme would depart from the costly practice of launching benchmark year comparisons every five years and move towards integration with work on national accounts and consumer price indexes.

Also before the Commission was a report of the Secretary-General concerning developments in ICP through 1992.⁽¹⁴⁾

The Commission took note of the increasing number of countries participating in ICP, stressed its importance and endorsed its continuation. It endorsed the results of the Philadelphia meeting and suggested that priority be given to activities agreed on at the meeting, particularly the preparation and dissemination of harmonized technical documents. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to submit to it in 1995 a progress report on developments in ICP.

Service statistics

At its February/March session,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission discussed work done by national and international agencies and by the Statistical Division in the field of service statistics during 1992.⁽¹⁵⁾

The Commission welcomed the work of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics (a cooperative effort by volunteer statistical agencies to address problems associated with data gaps and conceptual issues) and requested the Statistical Division to facilitate dissemination of technical materials, including those of the Voorburg Group. It welcomed the initiatives of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the Statistical Division, in cooperation with the International Monetary Fund, to carry out further methodological development work with respect to international trade in services. The Commission stressed the need to enhance technical cooperation related to service statistics through advisory services and regional seminars.

International economic classifications

The Secretary-General, in a January report,⁽¹⁶⁾ reviewed progress in implementing revision 3 of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC, Rev. 3) and the provisional Central Product Classification (CPC), including the preparation of computerized correspondence tables between ISIC, Rev. 3, CPC, revision 3 of the Standard International Trade Classification (SITC, Rev. 3) and the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (HS). Some problematic areas in preparing the indexes to ISIC were discussed. The report also summarized the results of a survey conducted among national statistical offices regarding the uses of ISIC, CPC and SITC. Further work on classifications that could be carried out in various international agencies was proposed.

In February/March,⁽¹⁾ the Commission requested the Statistical Division, in cooperation with organizations and countries concerned, to finalize work on the provisional CPC, taking into account the fact that a revised version could not be submitted to the Commission before 1997. The Division was asked to: compile information on country practices regarding the implementation of ISIC, Rev. 3; continue work on computerized correspondence tables, resulting in the linking of a large number of national and international classifications; undertake work on the functional classifications of expenditures, in cooperation with other organizations and countries; and report on those issues and submit drafts of the revised Classification of the Functions of Government and the Classification of Individual Consumption to the Commission in 1995.

For its consideration of international economic classifications, the Commission also had before it a report of the International Labour Office on the revision of the International Classification of Status in Employment (ICSE).⁽¹⁷⁾ The report provided a historical background on ICSE and described its current structure and the need for revision. It also contained proposals for the revision, including a draft resolution on the subject that was adopted by the Fifteenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians (Geneva, 19-28 January 1993).

The Statistical Commission endorsed the revised ICSE adopted by the Conference, welcomed future work called for in the Conference's resolution, and noted that major new technical cooperation in implementing the revised ICSE was not currently required.

Industrial statistics

Following consideration of the Secretary-General's report on preparatory work carried out in 1992 relating to the 1993 World Programme of Industrial Statistics,⁽⁸⁾ the Statistical Commission, at its February/March 1993 session,⁽¹⁾ welcomed steps taken to re-orient the Statistical Division's industrial statistics programme. It stressed the importance of measures to contribute to the change-over from ISIC, Rev. 2 to Rev. 3 (see above) and the need to identify and address impediments to the change-over. The Division was asked to carry out further studies of national experiences in the use of ISIC, Rev. 3, and the provisional CPC to understand better how countries were using those classifications, the problems they were encountering in their use and their experiences in relating such classifications to existing national or regional classifications. The Commission emphasized the importance of maintaining continuity in collecting and disseminating general industrial statistics at the international level regardless of institutional arrangements for that activity, and requested that the question of industrial statistics be included in its 1995 agenda.

Environment statistics

In 1993,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission, having considered a report of the Secretary-General covering 1992 activities in environment statistics,⁽¹⁵⁾ welcomed the preparation of an interim SNA Handbook on Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting, which, in accordance with a request of the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development,⁽¹⁵⁾ should be widely distributed and further developed by the Statistical Division, in cooperation with other international organizations and national experts. The Commission stressed the need to build national capacities in developing countries in all areas of environment statistics, by means of handbooks, training seminars, workshops and country projects, and requested that the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Advancement of Environment Statistics continue its work, incorporating the development of environment and sustainable development indicators and relevant aspects of environmental accounting.

Social and demographic statistics

Population and housing censuses

In February/March 1993,⁽¹⁾ the Statistical Commission, having considered a report of the Secretary-General on work undertaken during 1992 in connection with the 1990 World Population and Housing Census Programme,⁽¹⁸⁾ requested the Statistical Division, in collaboration with the regional commissions, to prepare for the 2000 round of population and housing censuses. The Commission emphasized the importance of census methodological studies on issues such as census cartography, the improved measurement of economic activity, including the revised economic classifications, the use of modern technology, sampling, census pre-testing and quality control, as well as the publication of subject-matter handbooks and technical reports. The Secretary-General was requested to report in 1995 on preparations for the 2000 round of censuses and the Division was asked to review the current recommendations on international migration statistics, in cooperation with the regional commissions, EUROSTAT (the Statistical Office of the European Communities) and other organizations.

In 1993, two subregional workshops were held on strategies for accelerating the improvement of civil registration and vital statistics systems, at Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic (20-24 June) and Beijing (29 November-3 December).

Statistics on women

The Statistical Commission in 1993(1) had before it a report containing information on the Statistical Division's work during 1991-1992 on statistics on the advancement of women.⁽¹⁸⁾ The Commission expressed its appreciation of the Division's work on gender statistics and strongly supported its continuation. It called on the Division to act as a focal point to ensure continued coordination and integration of international work in that field and called on international statistical services to provide maximum support to preparations for the Fourth World Conference on Women, to be held in 1995.

Other statistical activities

Development and integration of methodological work

The Secretary-General submitted to the 1993 session of the Statistical Commission⁽¹⁾ a report on the general development and integration of methodological work in certain areas,⁽¹⁹⁾ particularly energy statistics and international trade and transport statistics. In an addendum,⁽²⁰⁾ he and GATT presented their views on the future relationship between SITC and HS (see above).

The Commission asked the Statistical Division to revise the existing United Nations concepts and definitions on international trade statistics to ensure their adequacy and clarity in relation to current circumstances and to ensure their harmonization with the revised SNA and balance of payments. The Division was also asked to publish the results of the research into country practices for international trade statistics, carried out by various international organizations, and make them available to countries, and to revise SITC, Rev. 3, in full correlation with the revised HS and to issue the revision to be effective 1 January 1996, the date of introduction of the revised HS. The Commission recommended that countries adopt HS for compilation and dissemination of their international trade statistics, should they intend to change their commodity classification for their own purposes, and that the Customs Cooperation Council take fully into account the statistical implications of any changes proposed for HS and the statistical needs and capacities of developing countries. It decided to consider the use of CPC in place of SITC, Rev. 3, for analytical purposes as soon as the provisional CPC was revised and evaluated.

Also before the Commission was a report by the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) on patterns of consumption and qualitative aspects of development.⁽²¹⁾ The report focused mainly on developments and experience in monitoring the achievement of social goals and objectives and related human development concerns by means of qualitative indicators. It described UNRISD activities under the Patterns of Consumption project since it reported to the Commission in 1991,⁽²²⁾ reviewed the major lessons and findings of a 1991 expert meeting on qualitative indicators of development and listed the recommendations of that meeting, including action and activities to be undertaken by United Nations organizations.

The Commission agreed that indicator programmes should aim at limited, practical objectives and be closely linked to user needs and asked the Statistical Division to act as focal point to promote full collaboration and coordination at the international level in work on development indicators. The Commission recommended the intensive continuation of planned research work on sound statistical methodology for derived indicators on complex social topics such as poverty and cautioned against the use of complex indicators and indices without a clear understanding and statement of their limitations. It agreed that priority should be assigned to selecting and compiling appropriate indicators to support preparations for the 1995 World Summit for Social Development (see PART THREE, Chapter XII) and agreed to consider the question of development indicators at its 1995 session.

In other action, the Commission emphasized the utmost need for inter-agency collaboration in further development of social-goal monitoring and measurement work and urged that the work of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) be reflected in future development of the programme at the global level. ECLAC was invited to submit in 1995 a paper on its work in developing poverty profiles.

Programme questions

Having considered reports of the Secretary-General in which he reviewed the statistical work of international organizations and the Statistical Division for the period January 1990 to December 1991,⁽²³⁾ and provided updated information on the work of the Division during 1992,⁽¹³⁾ the Statistical Commission, in 1993(1) endorsed the new format of the report on the work of international organizations. It requested its Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination to consider further improvements in the report as an overall reference tool and asked the ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities also to consider those improvements and others, including the classification of the subject areas and functional areas used. The Statistical Division was asked to prepare, in cooperation with international and regional organizations, a similar report for the Commission's 1995 session.

The Commission also considered a report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme of work of the Statistical Division for 1994-1995 and revisions to the medium-term plan for 1992-1997.⁽⁶⁾ It approved both the proposed work programme and the following elements as priority items for 1994-1995: work on coordination of the global statistical system and services to national statistical offices; implementation of the revised SNA; environment statistics, indicators and accounting; strengthening computer processing systems and support; preparations for the 1995 World Conference on Women and other work related to improving gender statistics; preparations for the 1995 World Summit for Social Development; and preparations and support for the 1995-2004 Population and Housing Census Decade.

Technical cooperation

The Statistical Commission considered a report of the Secretary-General on technical cooperation in statistics during 1989-1992.⁽²⁴⁾ At its February/March 1993 session,⁽¹⁾ it stressed the importance of technical cooperation programmes and endorsed the activities carried out by the Statistical Division and other international and regional organizations. It emphasized the importance of technical cooperation related to national accounts and other types of economic statistics and urged that resources allocated to that component be increased. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 1995 on technical cooperation in statistics.

During 1993,⁽²⁵⁾ the United Nations spent some $14.9 million on technical cooperation projects in the area of statistics. Of that amount, $7.1 million was provided by UNFPA, $5.2 million by UNDP, $482,000 by the United Nations regular programme of technical cooperation, and the remainder came from trust funds.

Chapter XVIII

Institutional arrangements

In 1993, the General Assembly continued to adopt measures for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields. In view of the enlarged role of the Economic and Social Council, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to strengthen the secretariat of the Council (resolution 48/162).

The Council established a new subsidiary body, the Commission on Sustainable Development, and created a working group to review the arrangements for consultations with non-governmental organizations.

The Administrative Committee on Coordination and the Committee for Programme and Coordination continued to harmonize system-wide work programmes and activities. Their twenty-seventh series of Joint Meetings was held in October to discuss the results of the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development and their implications for the United Nations.

Restructuring questions

In the continuing process of the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, the General Assembly had before it in June, at its resumed forty-seventh session, a draft resolution⁽¹⁾ prepared by a working group on the topic, proposing further measures for adoption by the Assembly. Also before the Assembly were draft resolutions on the programme of work for the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee for 1993-1994⁽²⁾ and on world food security.⁽³⁾ The chairman of the working group, in an oral report to the Assembly, said that the proposed restructuring and revitalization measures related to the strengthening of the coordination functions and authority of the Economic and Social Council, rationalizing work among the Assembly, the Council and subsidiary bodies, and rationalizing and harmonizing their agendas. If adopted, the proposed measures would enter into force on 1 January 1994. The chairman orally revised the draft resolution to take into account the concerns of some Member States. He also indicated that, due to a lack of time, the working group was unable to consider the other draft resolutions, but he suggested that the Secretariat review the Second Committee's programme of work for 1993-1994 and that the draft on world food security be considered during the forty-eighth session of the Assembly.

On 25 June, by a recorded vote of 70 to 37, with 14 abstentions, the Assembly postponed action on the draft resolution on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations, as orally revised.

In a July letter to the Assembly President,⁽⁴⁾ the President of the Economic and Social Council expressed the disappointment of the Council membership over the Assembly's action and urged that a decision be taken before the forty-eighth session of the Assembly so as to expedite further the revitalization and restructuring process.

In September, the Assembly agreed to continue negotiations, with a view to finalizing the revised draft resolution⁽⁵⁾ and to defer consideration of the item to its forty-eighth session.

On 20 September, by decision 47/478, the Assembly included the item "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields" in the draft agenda of its forty-eighth session.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in response to a 1991 Assembly request,⁽⁶⁾ submitted in November 1993 a second progress report⁽⁷⁾ on the implementation of the results of the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields. The report discussed issues relating to the coordination and operational activities segments of the Economic and Social Council and the Joint Meetings of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) and the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC). The Secretary-General suggested that the Assembly postpone its proposed review of the reforms so far agreed upon until the outcome of the ongoing negotiations on measures to clarify the functional responsibilities of the Assembly and the Council, to streamline their agendas and to enhance the authority of the Council in respect of operational activities for development. He also suggested that the Council should, during its substantive session, determine the themes for its coordination segment and that the institution of Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC, if maintained, should be organized along the lines of the twenty-seventh series of Joint Meetings, held on 27 October.

On 20 December, by decision 48/439, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 48/162.

Further measures for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

Reaffirming its resolutions 45/264 of 13 May 1991 and 46/235 of 13 April 1992,

Recalling its resolutions 57(I) of 11 December 1946, 304(IV) of 16 November 1949, 417(V) of 1 December 1950, 1240(XIII) of 14 October 1958, 1714(XVI) of 19 December 1961, 2029(XX) of 22 November 1965, 2211(XXI) of 17 December 1966, 2688(XXV) of 11 December 1970, 2813(XXVI) and 2815(XXVI) of 14 December 1971, 3019(XXVII) of 18 December 1972, 3404(XXX) of 28 November 1975, 31/170 of 21 December 1976, 34/104 of 14 December 1979 and 36/244 of 28 April 1982, and Economic and Social Council resolutions 1084(XXXIX) of 30 July 1965, 1763(LIV) of 18 May 1973 and 1986/7 of 21 May 1986, and other relevant resolutions,

1. Adopts the texts contained in the annexes to the present resolution;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the further measures for restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, as set out in annex I to the present resolution, starting in 1994;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994, on the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in view of the decision to enlarge the role of the Economic and Social Council, to strengthen the Council secretariat in order to enable it to provide the necessary support to the Council;

5. Invites the specialized agencies, organizations and other bodies of the United Nations system to implement the measures for restructuring within their respective areas of competence, as appropriate;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields".

ANNEX I

Further measures for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

I. Introduction

1. The United Nations has a unique and paramount role in the promotion of international cooperation for development. In the present historical context—the end of the cold war, the increasing interdependence of nations, the increasing globalization of the world economy and the growing linkages between economic, social and related issues—the need for an enhanced role for the United Nations in international cooperation for development has multiplied manifoldly. This entails, on one hand, strengthening the role of the United Nations in promoting international economic cooperation for development as envisaged in the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and, on the other, restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields.

2. The United Nations has established goals, targets and programmes for action in the economic, social and related fields. Important milestones of global consensus to promote international economic cooperation include the Declaration on International Economic Cooperation, in particular the Revitalization of Economic Growth and Development of the Developing Countries, adopted by the General Assembly at the eighteenth special session, held in April and May 1990, the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade, the final documents adopted by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development at its eighth session, held at Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, in February 1992, in particular the Declaration and the document entitled "A New Partnership for Development: the Cartagena Commitment", the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s, and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the 1990s, adopted at the Second United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Paris in September 1990. The various conventions and consensus agreements, especially Agenda 21, which were adopted at the level of heads of State and Government at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, held at Rio de Janeiro in June 1992, mark the beginning of a new global partnership for sustainable development. All these landmarks together provide the overall framework of international cooperation for development.

3. Each country is responsible for its own economic policies for development, in accordance with its specific situation and conditions. Reactivation of economic growth and development in all countries requires concerted efforts by the international community. In this context, particular attention should be given to the growth and development needs of developing countries. Concerns of countries with economies in transition should also be addressed. The policies and actions of the major industrialized countries profoundly influence world economic growth and the international economic environment. Those countries should continue to make efforts to promote sustained and sustainable growth and to narrow imbalances in a manner that should benefit other countries, particularly the developing countries.

4. The coordination of macroeconomic policies should take full account of the interests and concerns of all countries. In this context, efforts should be made to enhance the effectiveness of multilateral surveillance aimed at correcting external and fiscal imbalances, promoting non-inflationary sustained and sustainable growth, lowering real rates of interest and making exchange rates more stable and markets more accessible.

5. The United Nations is a unique forum where, based on the principle of sovereign equality of all States and the universality of its membership, the community of nations can address all issues in an integrated manner. The organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system have a vital role to play in furthering the analytical work of relevance to the implementation of global consensus on international economic cooperation, in promoting and securing the international cooperation needed and in providing technical assistance. The international development system should be given greater coherence by closer inter-agency cooperation and coordination and by organizational measures, including guidelines on reporting, that strengthen the contribution of the system to development. There is also an urgent need to discuss ways of enabling the specialized agencies, which make an indispensable contribution to development, to perform better their mandated functions on the basis of enhanced coordination guidance from the Economic and Social Council. Efforts should be made to promote greater coordination and cooperation among the various components of the United Nations system.

6. The United Nations has also a substantial programme of operational activities through which it provides technical and other assistance for development. There is a continuing need to improve the quality and impact of these activities of the United Nations.

II. Principles for restructuring and revitalization

7. The basic principles and guidelines for restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields were established by the General Assembly in resolution 45/264 of 13 May 1991 and reaffirmed in resolution 46/235 of 13 April 1992. This effort should also take into account the thrust and principles of the Declaration on International Economic Cooperation, in particular the Revitalization of Economic Growth and Development of the Developing Countries, and Assembly resolution 45/199 of 21 December 1990, and other relevant resolutions. The current reform and all future efforts at reform should respect and build upon those resolutions and should be in conformity with the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, which is based upon the sovereign equality of all its Members.

III. Institutional Reforms

A. Complementarity between the work of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary bodies

8. The objective is to enhance the complementarity between the work of the Economic and Social Council and the work of the General Assembly, in accordance with Article 60 of the Charter, in order to avoid the present overlapping and unnecessary duplication of work, debates and items between these two organs and their subsidiary bodies.

9. Both principal organs should carry out their respective responsibilities, as entrusted to them in the Charter, in the formulation of policies and the provision of guidance to and coordination of United Nations activities in the economic, social and related fields.

10. In order to ensure that the operational activities of the United Nations system effectively assist the recipient countries in their development efforts, improvements are needed at both the policy-making and the operational levels.

1. The role of the General Assembly

11. The General Assembly is the highest intergovernmental mechanism for the formulation and appraisal of policy on matters relating to the economic, social and related fields, in accordance with Chapter IX of the Charter. It is the main forum where Governments pursue the development dialogue, which includes all these issues, in its political context. The purpose of the dialogue is to take an integrated view of matters relating to the economic, social and related fields in order to build and deepen the political understanding required for enhanced international development cooperation, to generate impulses for action and to launch initiatives.

2. The role of the Economic and Social Council

12. The functions and powers of the Economic and Social Council are provided for in Chapters IX and X of the Charter and elaborated in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly. With the adoption and implementation of Assembly resolutions 45/264 and 46/235, the Council has been significantly revitalized. The following additional measures will further strengthen the Council:

(a) High-level segment

13. As established by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/264, the high-level segment of the Council's substantive session shall continue to consider one or more major economic and/or social policy themes, with ministerial participation. It should also carry out a one-day policy dialogue and discussion with the heads of financial and trade institutions. In this connection, these institutions are invited to furnish relevant special reports and studies on the selected themes, within their respective mandates and areas of expertise, as well as on important developments in the world economy and in international economic cooperation, in accordance with the agreements signed between them and the United Nations.

(b) Coordination segment

14. The coordination segment shall continue to deal with one or more themes selected at the organizational session of the Council, as established in Assembly resolution 45/264, and will take up coordination matters arising from subsidiary bodies, principal organs and specialized agencies in the economic, social and related fields. Following the coordination segment there should be agreed conclusions containing specific recommendations to the various parts of the United Nations system for their implementation, in accordance with resolution 45/264. In accordance with the present resolution and resolution 45/264, the Secretary-General should arrange to inform the Council at its following substantive session of steps taken by the United Nations system to give effect to these recommendations.

(c) Operational activities of the United Nations for the international development cooperation segment

15. In order to improve the quality and impact of the operational activities of the United Nations and to promote an integrated approach in this field, this segment shall provide coordination and guidance so as to ensure that the policies formulated by the General Assembly, particularly during the triennial policy review of operational activities, are appropriately implemented on a system-wide basis. The work of the operational activities segment would include a high-level meeting, open to all Member States in accordance with Article 69 of the Charter, including ministerial participation, to provide an opportunity for policy makers to engage in broad consultations on international development cooperation. Specific arrangements will be decided upon by the Council at its organizational session. The outcome of this segment shall be reflected, inter alia, in the adoption of decisions and resolutions.

16. This segment will have the following functions:

(a) To provide the United Nations system with cross-sectoral coordination and overall guidance on a system-wide basis, including objectives, priorities and strategies, in the implementation of the policies formulated by the General Assembly in the field of operational activities;

(b) To monitor the division of labour between and cooperation within the bodies of the United Nations system, in particular the development funds and programmes, to include the conduct of field-level coordination, and make appropriate recommendations to the Assembly, as well as to provide guidance, where appropriate, to the system;

(c) To review and evaluate the reports on the work of the development funds and programmes, including the assessment of their overall impact, with a view to enhancing the operational activities of the United Nations on a system-wide basis;

(d) To undertake preparatory work for the triennial policy review of operational activities by the Assembly;

(e) To review the operationally relevant recommendations of the subsidiary bodies of the Council and other relevant bodies in the light of policies established by the Assembly, in order to incorporate them, as appropriate, into the operational activities of the United Nations;

(f) To provide orientation and recommendations to the relevant inter-agency coordination mechanisms and to support and enhance their role.

(d) General segment

17. The Economic and Social Committees of the Council shall be subsumed into the plenary as of 1994. Thus, the Council shall supervise the activities of its subsidiary bodies by considering and taking appropriate action on their reports and recommendations in the general segment.

18. The general segment shall be so organized as to recognize the distinction between economic and social issues as reflected in the draft agenda. In its consideration of the reports of its subsidiary bodies the Council shall concentrate on the conclusions and the adoption of recommendations and shall refrain from duplicating the substantive debate already held. However, further substantive discussions on specific issues shall be undertaken at the request of one or more Member States.

19. The various segments of the Council's substantive session, particularly the operational activities segment, shall be organized in such a way as to ensure that there is adequate time available for proper discussion of any item on the agenda, including those currently dealt with by the Economic and Social Committees, on the basis of the practice of the Council.

20. Ministerial attendance is encouraged throughout sessions of the Council, particularly in the high-level and operational activities segments of its substantive session.

3. Governing bodies of the United Nations development funds and programmes

21. The current governing bodies of the United Nations Development Programme/the United Nations Population Fund and the United Nations Children's Fund shall be transformed into Executive Boards. These Boards shall be responsible for providing inter-governmental support to and supervision of the activities of each fund or programme in accordance with the overall policy guidance of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with their respective responsibility as set out in the Charter, and for ensuring that they are responsive to the needs and priorities of recipient countries. The Boards will be subject to the authority of the Council. The need for a separate Executive Board for the United Nations Population Fund shall be further considered in the light of the outcome of the International Conference on Population and Development to be held in 1994.

22. The functions of each Executive Board shall be the following:

(a) To implement the policies formulated by the Assembly and the coordination and guidance received from the Council;

(b) To receive information from and give guidance to the head of each fund or programme on the work of each organization;

(c) To ensure that the activities and operational strategies of each fund or programme are consistent with the overall policy guidance set forth by the Assembly and the Council, in accordance with their respective responsibility as set out in the Charter;

(d) To monitor the performance of the fund or programme;

(e) To approve programmes, including country programmes, and projects with respect to the World Food Programme, as appropriate;

(f) To decide on administrative and financial plans and budgets;

(g) To recommend new initiatives to the Council and, through the Council, to the Assembly as necessary;

(h) To encourage and examine new programme initiatives;

(i) To submit annual reports to the Council at its substantive session, which could include recommendations, where appropriate, for improvement of field-level coordination.

23. The agendas and deliberations of the Executive Boards shall reflect the functions set forth in paragraph 22 above.

24. Membership of each Executive Board shall be with due regard to equitable geographical representation and other relevant factors, with a view to ensuring the broadest and most effective participation. The number of seats on each Board shall take into account the need for the effective conduct of the work of each Board.

25. The Executive Boards of the United Nations Development Programme/the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and, subject to the provisions of paragraph 30 below, the World Food Programme, shall have 36 members each, as follows: 8 from African States, 7 from Asian States, 4 from Eastern European States, 5 from Latin American and Caribbean States and 12 from Western European and other States.

26. Each Executive Board shall meet in an annual session at such time as it determines.

27. The regular meetings of the Boards, which shall be held between the annual sessions, shall be held at the premises of the headquarters of the respective organization as of the date when such premises are rendered possible to accommodate such meetings. The Executive Boards of the funds and programmes are encouraged to make the necessary facilities available as soon as possible without prejudice to the resources of existing programmes and projects. Right of participation in the deliberations of the Board meetings, without the right to vote, shall also be reserved to a member State when its country programme is under consideration. The Executive Board may also invite member States of the respective funds and programmes and participants who manifest a special interest in the item or items under consideration to participate in the deliberations without the right to vote. Decision-making shall continue to be according to existing rules, and the practice of striving for consensus should be encouraged.

28. In order to secure transparency of the system, improved modalities should be developed by the funds and programmes for regular informal briefings and improved information for all member States of the respective funds and programmes.

29. In order to ensure an effective and efficient interaction between the Assembly, the Council and the individual Executive Boards, each Board will submit an annual report on its programmes and activities to the Council at its substantive session. This report will include a section which follows a common structure on the basis of specific areas designated by the Council or the Assembly.

30. The same arrangements should apply to the Committee on Food Aid Policies and Programmes of the World Food Programme, and consultations between the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations should be undertaken as soon as possible for this purpose, in view of the fact that the World Food Programme is an autonomous joint organ of both. This process should lead to the adoption of parallel resolutions by the General Assembly and the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization.

B. Resources for operational activities

31. The fundamental characteristics of operational activities, especially those relating to their financing, as set forth in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, especially resolution 47/199, are reaffirmed.

32. As part of the overall reform process, there is a need for a substantial increase in resources for operational activities for development on a predictable, continuous and assured basis, commensurate with the increasing needs of developing countries, as stated in resolution 47/199. Any new funding system should include mechanisms for all participating countries to demonstrate their responsibility and commitment to the programmes and funds. Such mechanisms should distinguish between the financing arrangements for contributions by developed countries and others in a position to do so, as against the capacity for voluntary contributions from developing countries.

33. To facilitate the development of such a system, the Secretary-General is requested to review and analyse possible changes and improvements in the present funding system, including, but not limited to, multi-year negotiated pledges, and to submit a report with his recommendations in April 1994. The report could include, if possible, an assessment of the likely impact of each option on the overall level of funding and on the level of contributions.

34. The process would include consultations to be held in New York in May 1994 for a period of no more than five days and negotiations on prospective new modalities for financing in a resumed session of the General Assembly in 1994.

C. Secretariat: the enhanced role and capability of the United Nations Secretariat

35. The Secretariat administrative reforms should take into account the intergovernmental agreements on the restructuring of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields with a view better to serve the activities of Member States in the Second and Third Committees of the General Assembly and in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies.

36. The ongoing Secretariat reform process is noted. It has the potential to enhance the role of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, particularly in the area of research and analysis of global development trends. There is, however, a need to further examine ways and means to enhance the modalities of reporting in the economic, social and related fields. The Secretary-General is requested to make recommendations to the Economic and Social Council at its 1994 session to this effect, including recommendations on the advantages of establishing a system of integrated reports in the economic, social and related fields.

D. Review

37. Additional efforts shall be made to improve further the functioning of the United Nations in the field of operational activities. Appropriate arrangements shall be made for a comprehensive review of the implementation of the present resolution as well as of decisions on financing, including the possibility of considering those matters at a high-level meeting of the Economic and Social Council in 1995 and at the fiftieth session of the General Assembly.

38. That review will include consideration of the effectiveness of the measures taken to improve the working methods of the Executive Boards, the possible need for a further modification in the size of the Boards and options for further improving the effectiveness of and representation on these Boards, taking into account the need to combine universality with efficiency and to ensure transparency in decision-making.

ANNEX II

Division of labour between the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council

A. Guidelines

1. The following guidelines shall be applicable to the division of labour between the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council as of 1994:

(a) The inclusion or deletion of issues and items from the agendas of the Assembly and the Council, as well as the periodicity of their consideration, shall continue to be in accordance with the existing rules of procedure of the Assembly and the Council;

(b) Unnecessary duplication of debates and consideration of items and reports in the Assembly and the Council shall be avoided, according to the division of labour between both principal organs;

(c) Work overload in the Second and Third Committees of the Assembly and in the Council shall be avoided through agreed periodicity, such as biennialization and triennialization;

(d) Clustering of consideration of major economic, social and related issues should not preclude the discussion of any specific issue that a delegation may wish to bring up in accordance with the relevant rules of procedure;

(e) Documentation requirements for each session of the Assembly and the Council should be streamlined, and all documents should be made available according to the six-week rule;

(f) Consideration in the Assembly or the Council of reports of their subsidiary bodies should not repeat the substantive debate already held in the subsidiary body, but should concentrate on the adoption of recommendations. Substantive discussion of the report of a subsidiary body should be undertaken only upon the request of a Member State.

B. Reports

2. The preparation of all reports shall take into consideration the division of labour outlined in paragraph 1 above. To that end, reports from subsidiary organs, the specialized agencies and other bodies of the United Nations system must contain sections referring to one or all of the following, as appropriate: (i) monitoring of the implementation of all previous decisions; (ii) policy recommendations; and (iii) coordination recommendations. The pertinent sections of each report should be discussed in the Assembly or the Council according to the responsibilities of each as set out in the Charter of the United Nations.

3. The total number of reports requested for each year should be reduced. When a biennial programme of work is adopted, the Secretariat should indicate whether it is in a position to provide the documentation in accordance with the six-week rule. If that is not the case, arrangements must be made to ensure that the Secretariat can comply with the six-week rule in regard to all documentation for the economic, social and related fields.

C. Methodology of work of the Second Committee

4. The draft programme of work of the Second Committee should be considered in informal consultations, with the assistance of the bureau of the Council, during the previous session of the Assembly before August. Once that programme of work has been approved by the Committee at its second meeting, the programme of debates should be changed only in extreme circumstances.

5. The same criteria should apply to the Council, whose programme of work should be considered in consultation with the Chairman of the Second Committee.

6. The debates in the Second Committee should be centred around the items listed in section E below.

D. Agenda for the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council

7. The following items are to be considered by the Council at its annual substantive session:

1. Adoption of the agenda and other organizational matters.

High-level segment

2. Theme or themes to be decided upon at the organizational session of the Council.

Coordination segment

3. Coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other bodies of the United Nations system related to the following themes:

Theme or themes to be decided upon at the organizational session of the Council.

Operational activities of the United Nations for the international development cooperation segment

4. Operational activities of the United Nations for international development cooperation.

General segment

5. Social, humanitarian and human rights questions: reports of subsidiary bodies, conferences and related questions.
6. Economic and environmental questions: reports of subsidiary bodies, conferences and related questions.
7. Regional cooperation in the economic, social and related fields.
8. Permanent sovereignty over national resources in the occupied Palestinian and other Arab territories.
9. Programme and related questions in the economic, social and related fields.

Establishment of new subsidiary bodies

On 12 February, in accordance with a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽⁸⁾ the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1993/207, established the Commission on Sustainable Development as a functional commission of the Council (see PART THREE, Chapter I). The Council also decided on the composition of the Commission and the periodicity of its meetings and approved the agenda for its organizational session.

On the same date, by decision 1993/215, the Council decided on supplementary arrangements to the rules of procedure for its functional commissions to apply to the Commission on Sustainable Development.

Economic and Social Council1993 sessions*Agendas

On 2 February, the Economic and Social Council adopted a six-item agenda for its organizational and resumed organizational sessions.⁽¹⁾

On 12 February, the Council, by decision 1993/206, approved the provisional agenda for its 1993 substantive session, including the high-level, operational activities and coordination segments. It also adopted the agenda of items for consideration by its Economic and Social Committees.

On 28 June, by decision 1993/221, the Council adopted the agenda for the high-level segment of its substantive session of 1993⁽²⁾ and approved the organization of work of the segment. On 1 July, by the same decision, it adopted the agenda for its substantive session⁽³⁾ and approved the organization of work of the session. It also approved the requests made by non-governmental organizations to be heard by the Council at that session.⁽³⁾ On 16 July, the Council included an item entitled "Elections" in the agenda of its substantive session.

Substantive session

Segments of the substantive session

In accordance with a 1991 General Assembly resolution,⁽⁴⁾ the Council, as part of its substantive session, held a high-level segment; a segment on coordination of the activities of United Nations agencies, organizations and bodies; an operational activities segment; and a committee segment.

High-level segment

The Council, by decision 1993/204 of 12 February, decided that the high-level segment of its substantive session should be devoted to consideration of the following major theme: "World Summit for Social Development, including the role of the United Nations system in promoting social development"; and that, without prejudice to the 1991 Assembly resolution on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields,⁽⁵⁾ the high-level segment with ministerial participation would be held from 28 to 30 June. It invited the Secretary-General, in preparing a report for the segment, to pay attention to ways of attaining the objectives of the Summit and to examine the core issues and the role of the United Nations (see PART THREE, Chapter XII).

Coordination segment

On 12 February, by decision 1993/205, the Economic and Social Council decided that its coordination segment in 1993 should be devoted to the consideration of the following themes: coordination of humanitarian assistance: emergency relief and the continuum to rehabilitation and development; and coordination of the activities of the United Nations system in the fields of preventive action and intensification of the struggle against malaria and diarrhoeal diseases, in particular cholera. The Council further decided that the segment would make specific recommendations on matters related to coordination for implementation by the United Nations system. It requested the Secretary-General to apprise it at its 1994 substantive session of the steps taken by the United Nations to give effect to those recommendations.

In accordance with the 1991 Assembly resolution on restructuring and revitalizing the United Nations,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General presented to the Council reports on each of the two themes⁽⁵⁾ selected for the 1993 coordination segment. On 9 and 14 July, the Council approved draft agreed conclusions on the two themes.⁽⁶⁾

In his November report on the restructuring and revitalization process,⁽⁷⁾ the Secretary-General discussed the arrangements for the selection of themes for the Council's coordination segment. He believed that the Council itself should determine the themes, and preferably well in advance of its organizational sessions. He stated that the agreed conclusions reached by the Council on its 1993 themes represented progress towards ensuring that the outcome of the coordination segment was fully authoritative.

Operational activities segment

The Council considered the question of operational activities for development at its substantive session in 1993. Discussions during the segment led to policy recommendations, which were adopted on 22 July by resolution 1993/7.

In his November report on the restructuring and revitalization process,⁽⁷⁾ the Secretary-General stated that proposals being considered by the General Assembly for strengthening the Council's institutional capacity to deal with the issue of operational activities for development of the United Nations system had considerable potential for meeting that objective.

Report for 1993

The work of the Economic and Social Council at its organizational and substantive sessions in 1993 was summarized in its report to the General Assembly.⁽⁶⁾

On 20 December, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, the Assembly adopted decision 48/434, by which it took note of chapters I, II, V (sections A, C and J), VII and IX of the Council's report. On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, the Assembly adopted decision 48/452, by which it took note of relevant chapters of the report. By two decisions of 23 December, the Assembly took note of the chapters of the report as follows: chapters I, V (sections A and B) and IX, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee (decision 48/482), and chapters I, III, V (section c), VIII and IX (decision 48/483).

Cooperation with other organizations

Non-governmental organizations

Review of consultation arrangements

On 12 February, by decision 1993/214, the Economic and Social Council decided to conduct, with the assistance of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), a general review of the 1968 arrangements for consultation with NGOs,⁽⁸⁾ to be completed by 1995. The Committee was requested to consider the modalities for such a review and to submit its proposals to the Council at its 1993 substantive session.

The Committee, at its 1993 session (see below), recommended that the Council establish an open-ended working group to conduct the review.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July, the Council adopted without vote resolution 1993/80.

Review of the arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling Article 71 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 1296(XLIV) of 23 May 1968, in particular paragraph 40 (e) thereof, which provides that the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations shall consider matters concerning non-governmental organizations which may be referred to it by the Council or by commissions,

Recognizing the continued validity of its resolution 1296(XLIV) as a useful framework for consultations with non-governmental organizations,

Recalling its decision 1993/214 of 12 February 1993,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations on its session held in 1993,

1. Decides to establish an open-ended working group consisting of representatives of all interested States;

2. Requests the open-ended working group to undertake the general review called for by the Economic and Social Council in its decision 1993/214, with a view to updating, if necessary, Council resolution 1296(XLIV), as well as introducing coherence in the rules governing the participation of non-governmental organizations in international conferences convened by the United Nations;

3. Also requests the open-ended working group to include in its review an examination of ways and means of improving practical arrangements for the work of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations and the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat;

4. Invites the open-ended working group to submit a progress report for consideration by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994 and by the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

5. Requests the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations at an inter-sessional meeting in 1994 to review the progress report and to transmit its comments to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994;

6. Invites United Nations organs, bodies, programmes and specialized agencies to participate in the work of the open-ended working group, in accordance with established practice;

7. Further invites the non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council to participate in the work of the open-ended working group, in accordance with the provisions of Council resolution 1296(XLIV);

8. Requests the open-ended working group to enable other relevant non-governmental organizations, in particular those from developing countries, to contribute their views, in accordance with established practice, as set out in the annex to the present resolution;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, within existing resources, the assistance necessary, including documentation, for the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to consider this question at its substantive session of 1994 and to make recommendations to the General Assembly with a view to finalizing the general review by 1995, as called for in its decision 1993/214.

ANNEX

Participation of non-governmental organizations in the open-ended working group on the review of consultative arrangements with non-governmental organizations

1. Pursuant to paragraph 7 of the present resolution, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council will participate in the open-ended working group in accordance with the provisions of Council resolution 1296(XLIV) of 23 May 1968.

2. Non-governmental organizations which fall under the following three categories will be accredited upon submission to the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat a notification of their desire to participate in the review process:

(a) Non-governmental organizations in consultative status with a specialized agency of the United Nations system;

(b) Non-governmental organizations on the roster of the Commission on Sustainable Development;

(c) Other non-governmental organizations accredited for participation in conferences convened under the auspices of the United Nations and/or their preparatory process.

3. Other non-governmental organizations wishing to be accredited may apply to the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat for that purpose, in accordance with the following requirements:

(a) The Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat shall be responsible for the receipt and preliminary evaluation of requests for accreditation received from non-governmental organizations;

(b) All such applications must be accompanied by the following information:

(i) The aims and purposes of the organization, which should be in conformity with the spirit, purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

(ii) The date of establishment of the organization, the location of its headquarters and proof of its non-profit nature;

(iii) Information on the programmes and activities of the organization and the country or countries in which they are carried out;

(iv) A copy of the latest annual report and of the most recent budget;

(v) A copy of the constitution and/or by-laws and a list of members of the governing body and their country of nationality;

(vi) A description of the membership of the organization, indicating the total number of members and their geographical distribution.

The requests of organizations that fail to provide the above information will not be considered by the Secretariat.

4. In cases where the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat believes, on the basis of the information provided in accordance with paragraph 3 above, that an organization has established its relevance to the work of the working group, it will recommend to the working group that the organization be accredited. In cases where the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat does not recommend the granting of accreditation, it will make available to the working group its reasons for not doing so. The Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat should ensure that its recommendations are available to the working group at least one week prior to the start of each session.

5. The working group will decide on the recommendations of the Non-Governmental Organizations Unit of the Secretariat for accreditation within twenty-four hours of the recommendations having been considered by the working group. In the event of a decision not being taken within this period, interim accreditation shall be accorded until such time as a decision is taken.

6. A non-governmental organization that has been granted accreditation to attend a session of the working group may attend all its future sessions.

7. In recognition of the intergovernmental nature of the working group, non-governmental organizations shall have no negotiating role in the work of the group.

8. Pursuant to paragraph 7 of the present resolution, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council will have the opportunity to address the working group, in accordance with the provisions of paragraphs 31 and 33 of Council resolution 1296(XLIV).

9. Other relevant non-governmental organizations may also ask to speak briefly at such meetings. If the number of requests is too large, the working group shall request the non-governmental organizations to form themselves into constituencies, each constituency speaking through one spokesperson. Any such oral intervention will be made at the discretion of the Chairman and with the consent of the working group, in accordance with normal United Nations practice.

10. Pursuant to paragraph 7 of the present resolution, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council may submit written statements, in accordance with the provisions of paragraphs 29, 30 and 33 of Council resolution 1296(XLIV).

11. Other relevant non-governmental organizations may, at their own expense, make written presentations in any of the official languages of the United Nations. Those written presentations will not be issued as official documents.

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations met in New York from 22 March to 2 April and on 4 May 1993.⁽⁹⁾ It considered applications for consultative status and requests for reclassification received from NGOs; and reviewed the quadrennial reports submitted by NGOs in categories I and II consultative status with the Council, as well as future activities and the provisional agenda for its 1995 session. The Committee recommended one draft resolution and three draft decisions for adoption by the Council.

The Committee recommended that consultative status be granted to 43 NGOs which had applied; that 10 NGOs be reclassified; and that the Council withdraw the consultative status of eight organizations that had failed to report on their activities for the period 1986-1989, and reclassify the consultative status of six organizations from category II to Roster.

On 30 July, by decision 1993/331, the Council approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the 1995 session of the Committee.

Requests from NGOs for hearings

The Committee on NGOs met again in New York on 11 June⁽³⁾ to hear requests from NGOs in category I consultative status to address the Council or its sessional committees in connection with items on the Council's agenda. The Committee recommended that 20 NGOs be heard. The Council approved their requests on 1 July by decision 1993/221.

Adopted without vote

Draft by President and Bureau based on informal consultations (E/1993/L.9; agenda items 2 & 3.

Calendar of meetings

On 16 July 1993, by decision 1993/231, the Economic and Social Council approved the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1994 and 1995 in the economic, social and related fields.(11)

Participation of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro)

On 28 April, by resolution 821(1993), the Security Council reaffirmed that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) could not continue automatically the membership of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia in the United Nations. It recommended to the General Assembly that it decide that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia should not participate in the work of the Economic and Social Council.

On 29 April, the Assembly approved that recommendation by resolution 47/229.

Coordination in the UN system

Inter-agency coordination

ACC activities

In 1993, the Administrative Committee on Coordination, in the follow-up to the 1992 review of its functioning and of the structure of its subsidiary machinery,(1) implemented measures to improve its working methods and established procedures for consultation among executive heads of United Nations organizations on major initiatives.(2) With regard to its subsidiary machinery, ACC established a Senior-level Task Force to review and make policy recommendations on information-sharing. In the light of the Task

Force's recommendations, ACC decided to discontinue its Advisory Committee for the Coordination of Information Systems and to establish an Information Systems Coordination Committee (ISCC), which would report through ACC's Organizational Committee. ISCC was requested to finalize draft terms of reference and establish a work programme with budget proposals.

ACC discussed policy issues related to resource flows and financing for development, the World Summit for Social Development and the Agenda for Development. It agreed to examine further in 1994 the issues relating to the division of labour within the United Nations and the system's access to resources.

ACC also considered progress achieved in the follow-up to the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) and, on the recommendation of the Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development, decided to establish an ACC Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas to meet the coordination needs defined in chapter 17 of Agenda 21 adopted by UNCED.⁽³⁾

Through its Consultative Committee on Programme and Operational Questions, ACC gave priority attention to enhancing the coherence and effectiveness of the system's operational activities for development, with particular reference to the Assembly's 1992(4) comprehensive triennial policy review of operational activities (see PART THREE, Chapter II).

Among other issues discussed by ACC were actions undertaken by the organizations of the United Nations to assist countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter of the United Nations, dealing with States experiencing economic problems resulting from preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against another State.

In June, ACC submitted to the Economic and Social Council a report⁽⁵⁾ on programmes and resources of the United Nations system for the biennium 1992-1993, with the aim of relating the objectives of United Nations organizations to the corresponding allocations of financial resources. On 30 July, by decision 1993/326, the Council took note of the report.

During the year, ACC held two regular sessions (Rome, Italy, 19 and 20 April; New York, 28 and 29 October). Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows:

Organizational Committee (New York, 8-12 February; Rome, 5-8 and 21-23 April; New York, 18-21, 29 and 30 October); Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Personnel and General Administrative Questions) (New York, 1-8 March; Vienna, 12-16 July); Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Financial and Budgetary Questions) (Vienna, 8-12 March; Montreal, Canada, 30 August-3 September); Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Geneva, 16-19 March); Consultative Committee on Programme and Operational Questions (New York, 3 and 4 June and 20-24 September).

Bodies on specific subjects met as follows:

Subcommittee on Nutrition, twentieth session (Geneva, 15-19 February); fifth Inter-Agency Meeting on Ageing (Vienna, 18 and 19 February); third Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on the International "Year of the Family" (Vienna, 10-12 March); seventeenth Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Women (Vienna, 15 and 16 March); Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development, first and second meetings (New York, 23-25 March and 8-10 September); Inter-Agency Meeting on Coordination in Matters of International Drug Abuse Control (Vienna, 7 and 8 April, and—after it changed its name to the ACC Subcommittee on Drug Control—Paris, 6-8 September); Subcommittee on Rural Development, twenty-first meeting (Washington, D.C., 5-7 May); Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Consultation on Jointly Funded Secretariats of ACC Standing Committees (Geneva, 6 July); second Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting for the International Conference on Population and Development (Geneva, 13 July); Joint United Nations Information Committee, nineteenth session (London, 20-22 July); Inter-Agency Meeting on Ocean Affairs (Paris, 23 and 24 August); Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, twenty-seventh session (Geneva, 6-8 September); Advisory Committee for the Coordination of Information Systems, seventh session (Geneva, 27-29 September); Subcommittee on Water Resources, fourteenth session (Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, 6-8 October).

Report for 1992

Parts two and three of the ACC annual overview report for 1992⁽⁶⁾ were considered on 10, 12 and 13 May 1993 by CPC,⁽⁷⁾ which regretted the late submission of the documentation and its inadequacy. CPC requested ACC to ensure that it was provided in future with up-to-date, appropriate and timely documentation.

Cooperation with financial institutions

In February 1993,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted to the Economic and Social Council a 1992 report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on United Nations system cooperation with multilateral financial institutions: performance and innovation challenges and examples of fresh approaches. The report recommended that United Nations organizations, in order to enhance cooperative relationships with the multilateral financial institutions, should commit themselves to increasing the competitiveness of their programmes. It suggested ways to foster creativity, responsiveness, sustained performance improvement, and other elements of a competitive posture, as well as topics to be included in the deliberations of executive heads and governing bodies on technical cooperation activities.

Commenting on the report,⁽⁹⁾ ACC accepted its recommendations in principle. However, in the view of some ACC members, the recommendations did not present new ideas, and many of the approaches suggested had been overtaken by events.

On 13 July, in decision 1993/227, the Economic and Social Council took note of the JIU report and ACC's comments thereon.

UN programme coordination

CPC activities

During 1993, the Committee for Programme and Coordination met in New York for an organizational session on 8 April and 5 May, for the first part of its thirty-third session from 10 to 14 May and for the second part from 6 to 22 October.⁽⁷⁾

The Committee reviewed the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations. It discussed the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995; the prototype of a new format of the medium-term plan; establishment of a system of responsibility and accountability of programme managers of the United Nations; and evaluation (see PART FIVE, Chapter I). It also examined the annual report of ACC for 1992,⁽⁶⁾ preparations for the Joint Meetings of ACC and CPC, and reports of JIU.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 July, by decision 1993/313, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of CPC on the first part of its thirty-third session⁽⁷⁾ and endorsed its recommendations. The Council also took note of the updated annual overview report of ACC for 1992,⁽¹⁰⁾ and welcomed the action taken by ACC to enhance the effectiveness of its functioning and to streamline its subsidiary machinery. It requested the Secretary-General to report on his efforts to mobilize and coordinate assistance to countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter. The Council stressed that all system-wide activities undertaken by subsidiary bodies of ACC that had been abolished, particularly those relating to science and technology for development, new and renewable sources of energy and the least developed countries, should continue to be coordinated by the new subsidiary machinery.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By resolution 48/218, the General Assembly noted CPC's recommendation that consideration be given to replacing the current medium-term plan by a new format as outlined in its report.⁽⁷⁾ It also endorsed CPC's recommendations on the establishment of a transparent and effective system of accountability and responsibility by 1 January 1995.

Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC

The twenty-seventh Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC were held in New York on 27 October⁽¹¹⁾ to discuss the results of UNCED and their implications for the United Nations. The Meetings had before them a background paper on the subject,⁽¹²⁾ which drew attention to issues addressed by ACC and its Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development and by the Commission on Sustainable Development which were of relevance to CPC.

The Joint Meetings stated that the multidisciplinary nature of UNCED follow-up required an integrated approach to coordination at the policy-making and programme implementation levels. It was therefore crucial to ensure harmonization of policy guidance on sustainable development issues given by the various governing bodies of the United Nations system. It was also suggested that the United Nations assist in coordinating international support for national follow-up activities and support the elaboration of national sustainable development strategies. The Joint Meetings recommended to the Economic and Social Council that it consider science and technology as one of the themes for the coordination segment of its 1994 substantive session.

Work programmes of the Second and Third Committees of the General Assembly

On 20 December, by decision 48/431, the General Assembly approved the organization of work of the Third Committee and its biennial programme of work for 1994-1995.

On 21 December, by decision 48/457, the Assembly approved the biennial programme of work of the Second Committee for 1994-1995.

PART FOUR

Legal questions

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 1993, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) continued to deal with nine contentious cases. Two new disputes and a request for an advisory opinion were referred to the Court, and one case was removed from its list. The Court delivered one Judgment and 10 Orders.

In May, the General Assembly and the Security Council, independently, held elections to fill a vacancy created by the death of one Judge and, in November, they elected five Judges to fill vacancies caused by the expiration of terms (see APPENDIX III).

In September, the Assembly adopted a number of recommendations regarding the use of the Court by States (resolution 47/120 B). On 15 October, the President of the Court addressed the Assembly on the work and role of the Court, emphasizing ICJ's important position as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations and the need to protect it strenuously.

Judicial work of the Court

In 1993, the President made an Order recording the discontinuance of proceedings in the case concerning Certain Phosphate Lands in Nauru (Nauru v. Australia), directing its removal from the Court's list. The Court also made two Orders on two separate requests by Bosnia and Herzegovina against Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) for an indication of provisional measures and on a similar request by Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) in the case concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro)). It gave a Judgment in the case concerning Maritime Delimitation in the Area between Greenland and Jan Mayen (Denmark v. Norway). The Court, its President and Vice-President made several Orders on the conduct of proceedings in pending cases.

In July, the Court, in view of developments in environmental law and protection in the past few years and considering that it should be fully prepared to deal with any environmental case within its jurisdiction, established a seven-member Chamber for Environmental Matters as of 6 August 1993. The members of the Chamber were to serve for an initial period of six months.

The 1993 activities of ICJ were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 1992 to 31 July 1993⁽¹⁾ and 1 August 1993 to 31 July 1994.⁽²⁾ By decision 48/404 of 15 October 1993, the Assembly took note of the 1992/93 report.

Maritime delimitation in the area between Greenland and Jan Mayen (Denmark v. Norway)

Denmark, in 1988,⁽³⁾ instituted proceedings against Norway, requesting the Court to decide where a single line of delimitation should be drawn between Denmark's and Norway's fishing zones and continental shelf areas in the waters between the east coast of Greenland and the Norwegian island of Jan Mayen. In 1991, the Reply of Denmark and the Rejoinder of Norway were filed to their respective 1989 Memorial and 1990 Counter-Memorial within the time-limits fixed by a 1990 Court Order.

Having heard oral arguments in the case from 11 to 27 January 1993, the Court, at a public sitting of 14 June, delivered its Judgment,⁽⁴⁾ the operative paragraph of which read as follows:

The Court,

By fourteen votes to one,

Decides that, within the limits defined

(1) to the north by the intersection of the line of equidistance between the coasts of eastern Greenland and the western coasts of Jan Mayen with the 200-mile limit calculated as from the said coasts of Greenland, indicated on sketch-map No. 2^a as point A, and

(2) to the south, by the 200-mile limit around Iceland, as claimed by Iceland, between the points of intersection of that limit with the two said lines, indicated on sketch map No. 2 as points B and D, the delimitation line that divides the continental shelf and fishery zones of the Kingdom of Denmark and the Kingdom of Norway is to be drawn as set out in paragraphs 91 and 92 of the present Judgment.

Against: Judge ad hoc Fischer.

Vice-President Oda and Judges Evensen, Aguilar Mawdsley and Ranjeva appended declarations to the Judgment. Vice-President Oda and Judges ¹For the sketch-map referred to above, see Maritime Delimitation in the Area between Greenland and Jan Mayen (Denmark v. Norway), Judgment of 14 June 1993, I.C.J. Sales No. 635.

Schwebel, Shahabuddeen, Weeramantry and Ajibola appended separate opinions. Judge ad hoc Fischer appended a dissenting opinion.

Aerial incident of 3 July 1988 (Iran v. United States)

Iran, in 1989, instituted proceedings against the United States, referring to the destruction of an Iranian aircraft on 3 July 1988 and the killing of its 290 passengers and crew by missiles launched in Iranian airspace from the United States guided-missile cruiser the USS Vincennes. The time-limits for written proceedings, fixed in a December 1989 Court Order, were extended by an Order in June 1990. The Memorial of Iran was filed within the prescribed time-limit.

In March 1991, within the time-limit fixed for its Counter-Memorial, the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the Court's jurisdiction. By an April 1991 Order,⁽⁵⁾ the Court fixed 9 December as the time-limit within which Iran might present a written statement of its observations and submissions on those objections. As requested by Iran, and after the views of the United States were ascertained, the President of the Court, by Orders of 18 December 1991⁽⁶⁾ and 5 June 1992,⁽⁷⁾ extended that time-limit to 9 June and 9 September 1992, respectively. Iran's written statement was filed within the prescribed time-limit and was communicated to the Secretary-General of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) together with the written pleadings previously filed. Following the submission of written observations by the ICAO Council within the time-limit of 9 December 1992, fixed by the President of the Court, the Court fixed 12 September 1994 as the date for the opening of hearings in the case.

Certain phosphate lands in Nauru (Nauru v. Australia)

In 1989, Nauru instituted proceedings against Australia in a dispute concerning the rehabilitation of certain phosphate lands mined under Australian administration before Nauruan independence.

Within the time-limits fixed by the Court in July 1989, Nauru filed its Memorial in 1990, and Australia filed, in 1991, certain preliminary objections to the Court's jurisdiction and on the admissibility of the case. Within the time-limit of 19 July 1991, fixed by an Order of 8 February 1991,⁽⁸⁾ Nauru filed its observations and submissions on those objections. In a Judgment on the Preliminary Objections of 26 June 1992,⁽⁹⁾ the Court rejected, with one exception, Australia's objections and found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the Application and that the Application was admissible. In an Order of 29 June 1992,⁽¹⁰⁾ the President of the Court fixed 29 March 1993 as the time-limit for filing the Counter-Memorial of Australia, which was filed within that time-limit.

By an Order of 25 June 1993,⁽¹¹⁾ the Court fixed 22 December 1993 as the time-limit for filing the Reply by Nauru and 14 September 1994 for the Rejoinder by Australia. In September, the Parties notified the Court that, having reached a settlement, they agreed to discontinue the proceedings. On 13 September, the Court made an Order⁽¹²⁾ recording the discontinuance and removing the case from the Court's list.

Territorial dispute (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Chad)

In 1990, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya filed a notification of an agreement between it and Chad concerning the peaceful settlement of their territorial dispute. Each Party duly filed a Memorial in 1991 within the prescribed time-limit and a Reply and a Counter-Memorial in 1992 within the time-limits fixed by Orders of August 1991⁽¹³⁾ and April 1992,⁽¹⁴⁾ respectively. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya chose Jose Sette-Camara, and Chad chose Georges M. Abi-Saab, to sit as Judges ad hoc in the case.

Following the hearings held between 14 June and 14 July 1993, the Court began deliberations on its Judgment.

East Timor (Portugal v. Australia)

In 1991,⁽¹⁵⁾ Portugal instituted proceedings against Australia in a dispute concerning certain activities of Australia with respect to East Timor. Portugal claimed that Australia, by negotiating with Indonesia an agreement, signed on 11 December 1989, relating to the exploration and exploitation of the continental shelf in the area of the Timor Gap, had caused legal and moral damage to the people of East Timor and Portugal, which would become material if the exploitation of hydrocarbon resources began there.

Within the time-limits fixed by a May 1991 Order,⁽¹⁶⁾ the Portuguese Memorial and the Australian Counter-Memorial were filed in 1991 and 1992, respectively. By an Order of 19 June 1992,⁽¹⁷⁾ the Court fixed 1 December 1992 and 1 June 1993 as the time-limits for the filing of a Reply by Portugal and a Rejoinder by Australia, respectively. The Reply by Portugal was filed within the prescribed time-limit. However, an Order of 19 May 1993⁽¹⁸⁾ extended to 1 July 1993 the time-limit for the Australian Rejoinder, which was filed accordingly.

Portugal chose Antonio de Arruda Ferrer-Correia, and Australia chose Sir Ninian Stephen, to sit as Judges ad hoc in the case.

Maritime delimitation (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal)

In 1991, Guinea-Bissau instituted proceedings against Senegal in a dispute concerning the delimitation of all the maritime territories between the two States. At the same time, previous proceedings instituted by Guinea-Bissau against Senegal in 1989 concerning the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal)⁽⁵⁾ were still in progress.

Guinea-Bissau claimed that the result of that Arbitration did not make it possible to establish a definitive delimitation of all the maritime areas over which the Parties had rights, and asked the Court to adjudge and declare what should be the line delimiting all the maritime territories appertaining to Guinea-Bissau and Senegal.

Following the November 1991 Judgment in the case concerning the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal),⁽⁵⁾ the President of the Court met with the two Parties in February and October 1992⁽⁷⁾ and agreed to their request that no time-limit be fixed for the initial pleadings of the case, pending the outcome of the continuing negotiations on the question of maritime delimitation.

Maritime delimitation and territorial questions between Qatar and Bahrain (Qatar v. Bahrain)

Qatar instituted proceedings in 1991 against Bahrain in respect of disputes relating to sovereignty over the Hawar islands, sovereign rights over the shoals of Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah and the delimitation of the maritime areas of the two States.⁽¹²⁾

In August 1991, Bahrain contested the basis of jurisdiction invoked by Qatar. By an October 1991 Order,⁽¹³⁾ the President of the Court decided that written proceedings should first be addressed to the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the dispute and of the admissibility of the Application, and fixed the time-limits for the filing of a Memorial by Qatar and a Counter-Memorial by Bahrain, which were filed accordingly in 1992. Also in 1992, Qatar and Bahrain filed their respective Reply and Rejoinder within the time-limits fixed by an Order of June 1992.⁽¹³⁾ The Court then fixed 28 February 1994 as the date for the opening of hearings in the case.

Qatar chose Jose Maria Ruda, and Bahrain chose Nicolas Valticos, to sit as Judges ad hoc in the case.

Questions of interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the aerial incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States)

In 1992,⁽¹³⁾ the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya instituted separate proceedings against the United Kingdom and the United States in respect of a dispute over the interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Civil Aviation,⁽¹⁴⁾ which arose from its alleged involvement in the crash of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on 21 December 1988.

In its Applications, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya referred to the charging and indictment of two of its nationals by the Lord Advocate of Scotland and by a United States Grand Jury, with having caused a bomb to be placed aboard Pan Am flight 103. The bomb subsequently exploded, causing the aircraft to crash, killing all persons aboard. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya had complied fully with all of its obligations under the Montreal Convention, which it claimed to be the only appropriate Convention in force between the Parties, and which required it to establish its own jurisdiction over alleged offenders present in its territory and submit the case to its authorities for prosecution, as there was no extradition treaty between it and the other parties; that the United Kingdom and the United States were in breach of the Convention by rejecting the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya's efforts to resolve the matter within the framework of international law and placing pressure upon it to surrender the two Libyan nationals for trial; and that the United Kingdom and the United States were under a legal obligation to cease and desist from such breaches and from the use of force or threats against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and from all violations of its sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence.

It also made two separate requests for an indication of provisional measures in each case. By two April 1992 Orders,⁽¹³⁾ the Court found that the circumstances of the case were not such as to require the exercise of its power to indicate provisional measures. By Orders of 19 June 1992,⁽¹³⁾ the Court fixed 20 December 1993 as the time-limit for the filing of a Memorial by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and 20 June 1995 for Counter-Memorials by the United Kingdom and United States. The Memorial by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya was filed within the prescribed time-limit and it chose Ahmed S. El-Koshevi to sit as Judge ad hoc in the case.

Oil platforms (Iran v. United States)

Iran, in 1992,⁽¹⁵⁾ instituted proceedings against the United States regarding a dispute in which Iran alleged that the destruction by United States warships, on 19 October 1987 and 18 April 1988, of three offshore oil production complexes owned and operated by the National Iranian Oil Company constituted a breach of international law and the 1955 Iran/United States Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights. Iran requested the Court to rule on the matter.

By an Order of December 1992,⁽¹⁵⁾ the time-limits were fixed as 31 May 1993 for the filing of a Memorial by Iran and 30 November 1993 for a Counter-Memorial by the United States. As requested by Iran and after the United States indicated that it had no objection, the President of the Court, by an Order of 3 June 1993,⁽¹⁶⁾ extended those time-limits to 8 June and 16 December 1993, respectively. Iran duly filed its Memorial within the prescribed time-limits, while the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court.

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro))

On 20 March 1993, Bosnia and Herzegovina instituted proceedings against Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide.⁽¹⁷⁾

Bosnia and Herzegovina requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) had violated and was continuing to violate several provisions of the Genocide Convention as well as of the Charter of the United Nations, the 1949 Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims and their 1977 Additional Protocol I,⁽¹⁸⁾ the 1907 Hague Regulations on Land Warfare and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;⁽¹⁹⁾ that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) was using force and the threat of force against Bosnia and Herzegovina, violating its sovereignty and intervening in its internal affairs, as well as encouraging and supporting military and paramilitary actions in and against Bosnia and Herzegovina; that Bosnia and Herzegovina had the sovereign right under the Charter of the United Nations and customary international law to defend itself and to request assistance of any State in doing so, which was not to be impaired by Security Council resolution 713(1991)⁽²⁰⁾ and subsequent resolutions imposing and reaffirming an arms embargo upon the former Yugoslavia; that those consequent resolutions should not be construed as imposing an arms embargo upon Bosnia and Herzegovina; and that, pursuant to the right to collective self-defence, other States had the right to come to the immediate defence of Bosnia and Herzegovina at its request; that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should cease and desist immediately from its breaches of the foregoing legal obligations; and that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should pay reparations for damages sustained by Bosnia and Herzegovina.

On the same day, Bosnia and Herzegovina requested the Court to indicate provisional measures to the effect that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should cease and desist immediately from all acts of genocide against the people and State of Bosnia and Herzegovina, from military or paramilitary actions and support for such actions in or against Bosnia and Herzegovina and from any other use or threat of force against it; that Bosnia and Herzegovina had the right to seek support and assistance from other States in defending itself; and that other States had the right to come to its immediate defence.

Hearings on the request for an indication of provisional measures were held on 1 and 2 April 1993. On 8 April, at a public sitting, the Court delivered an Order,⁽²¹⁾ the operative paragraph of which read as follows:

The Court,

Indicates, pending its final decision on the proceedings instituted on 20 March 1993 by the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro), the following provisional measures:

A. (1) Unanimously,

The Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should immediately, in pursuance of its undertaking in the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide of 9 December 1948, take all measures within its power to prevent commission of the crime of genocide;

(2) By 13 votes to 1,

The Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should in particular ensure that any military, paramilitary or irregular armed units which may be directed or supported by it, as well as any organizations and persons which may be subject to its control, direction or influence, do not commit any acts of genocide, of conspiracy to commit genocide, of direct and public incitement to commit genocide, or of complicity in genocide, whether directed against the Muslim population of Bosnia and Herzegovina or against any other national, ethnical, racial or religious group;

Against: Judge Tarassov.

B. Unanimously,

The Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) and the Government of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina should not take any action and should ensure that no action is taken which may aggravate or extend the existing dispute over the prevention or punishment of the crime of genocide, or render it more difficult of solution.

Judge Tarassov appended a declaration to the Order.

By a letter of 27 April,⁽²²⁾ the Secretary-General communicated the Order to the Security Council.

By an Order of 16 April,⁽²³⁾ the President of the Court fixed 15 October 1993 and 15 April 1994 as the time-limits for the filing of a Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina and a Counter-Memorial by Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro), respectively.

On 27 July, Bosnia and Herzegovina made a second request for the indication of provisional measures to the effect that Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should cease and desist from any type of support to any group or individual in Bosnia and Herzegovina and from any efforts, proposals or negotiations to partition, annex or incorporate the sovereign territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina; that such annexation or incorporation should be deemed illegal, null and void; and that all Contracting Parties to the Genocide Convention were obliged, and the Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina should have the means to prevent acts of genocide and defend its people and State from such acts and from partition by means of genocide, including the ability to obtain weapons, equipment and supplies.

In a similar action, Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro), on 10 August, requested the Court to indicate provisional measures requiring Bosnia and Herzegovina to take all measures within its power to prevent acts of genocide against the Bosnian Serbs. Following hearings on those requests on 25 and 26 August, the Court, by an Order of 13 September,⁽²⁴⁾ held that the present situation demanded the immediate implementation of provisional measures indicated in the April Court Order rather than an indication of additional measures. In declining Bosnia and Herzegovina's requests related to the partition and annexation of its territory and the means of preventing acts of genocide and partition, the Court pointed out that such claims were beyond the scope of its jurisdiction in that case, conferred on it by the Genocide Convention. At the same time, the Court recorded that great suffering and loss of life had been sustained by the population of Bosnia and Herzegovina since and despite its Order of 8 April,⁽²¹⁾ and reminded the Parties that they were obliged to take the Court's provisional measures into account seriously.

Following a request by Bosnia and Herzegovina and after the views of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) had been ascertained, the Vice-President of the Court, by an Order of 7 October,⁽²⁵⁾ extended the time-limits for a Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina and a Counter-Memorial by Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) to 15 April 1994 and 15 April 1995, respectively.

Bosnia and Herzegovina chose Elihu Lauterpacht, and Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) chose Milenko Kreca, to sit as Judges ad hoc in the case.

Gabcíkovo-Nagymaros Project (Hungary/Slovakia)

In 1992, Hungary applied to the Court in a dispute with the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic concerning the projected diversion of the Danube, inviting the Republic to accept the Court's jurisdiction.

Following negotiations between Hungary and the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, which dissolved into two States on 1 January 1993, Hungary and Slovakia, on 2 July 1993, submitted to the Court certain issues arising out of differences which had existed between Hungary and the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic regarding the implementation and termination of the 1977 Budapest Treaty on the Construction and Operation of the Gabcíkovo-Nagymaros Barrage System and on the construction and operation of the "provisional solution"—a system damming up the Danube on Czechoslovak territory, with resulting consequences on water and the navigation course. A Special Agreement for the submission of those issues to the Court, signed by the Parties on 7 April, recorded that Slovakia was, in that respect, the sole successor State of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic.

The Court was requested to decide whether Hungary had been entitled to suspend and subsequently abandon, in 1989, the work on the Nagymaros Project and on the part of the Gabcíkovo Project for which it was responsible, and whether the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic had been entitled to execute, in 1991-1992, the "provisional solution". The Court was also requested to determine the legal effects of the termination of the Treaty by Hungary in 1992 and the legal consequences of the Court's Judgment in that case.

By an Order of 14 July 1993,⁽²⁶⁾ the Court decided that each Party should file a Memorial and a Counter-Memorial within the time-limits of 2 May 1994 and 5 December 1994, respectively.

Legality of the use by a State of nuclear weapons in armed conflict

By a letter of 27 August 1993, the Director-General of the World Health Organization (WHO), pursuant to a 14 May resolution of the World Health Assembly, requested an advisory opinion from the Court on whether the use of nuclear weapons by a State in war or other armed conflict would be a breach of its obligations under international law, in view of the health and environmental effects.

By an Order of 13 September,⁽²⁷⁾ the Court fixed 10 June 1994 as the time-limit within which WHO and its member States entitled to appear before the Court might submit written statements on the question.

Other questions

Role of the Court

Acting on the Secretary-General's 1992 recommendations concerning the role of ICJ,⁽²⁸⁾ the General Assembly, by resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993, encouraged States to make greater use of the Court for the peaceful settlement of disputes and recommended that they accept the Court's jurisdiction, including through the dispute settlement clauses of multilateral treaties. The Assembly requested States to make contributions to the Secretary-General's Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ, established in 1989, and asked the Secretary-General to report periodically on the financial status and use of the Fund.

It decided to continue to examine the Secretary-General's recommendations, including those related to the use of the advisory competence of the Court.

Elections to the Court

The Secretary-General, on 1 February 1993,⁽²⁹⁾ informed the Security Council of the death, on 14 January, of Judge Lachs, and thus of the occurrence of a vacancy in the Court. The procedure in the General Assembly and in the Security Council for filling the vacancy was outlined in the Secretary-General's 23 April memorandum.⁽³⁰⁾ On 5 May, the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Statute of the Court, submitted to the Assembly and to the Council a list of candidates⁽³¹⁾ for the vacancy, nominated by national groups, and their respective curricula vitae.⁽³²⁾

On 4 February 1993, the Security Council adopted unanimously resolution 805(1993).

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the death of Judge Manfred Lachs on 14 January 1993,

Noting further that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of the deceased Judge has thus occurred and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council, Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 10 May 1993 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Security Council resolution 805(1993)

4 February 1993 Meeting 3170 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations with Council members (S/25226).

(For results of the elections, see APPENDIX III).

Request for an advisory opinion

In accordance with its 1992 decision,⁽³³⁾ the General Assembly continued in 1993 consideration of its agenda item on the request by the Ibero-American Summit of Heads of State and Government (Madrid, Spain, July 1992) for an advisory opinion from ICJ on the conformity with international law of certain acts involving the extraterritorial exercise of the coercive power of a State and the subsequent exercise of its criminal jurisdiction.

On 9 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee,⁽³⁴⁾ the Assembly decided to continue consideration of the item and include it in the provisional agenda of its 1994 session (decision 48/414).

Chapter II

Legal aspects of international political relations

In 1993, the General Assembly, its Sixth (Legal) Committee and the International Law Commission (ILC) continued to consider legal aspects of international political and state relations.

ILC again took up the question of an international criminal jurisdiction, including a draft statute of an international criminal court, in the context of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind. It also considered international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law and State responsibility and the law of non-navigational uses of international watercourses. The Assembly, in December, requested the Commission to continue to elaborate a draft statute for an international criminal court as a matter of priority and endorsed its decision to include in its agenda the law and practice relating to reservations to treaties, and State succession and its impact on the nationality of natural and legal persons (resolution 48/31).

The Assembly established an Ad Hoc Committee to elaborate an international convention on the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, with particular reference to responsibility for attacks on such personnel (48/37), and decided to continue in 1994 consideration of a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property (decision 48/413).

International Law Commission

The International Law Commission (ILC), at its forty-fifth session (Geneva, 3 May-23 July 1993),⁽¹⁾ continued work on the progressive development and codification of international law; it held 33 public meetings.

At its 1993 session, ILC considered an international criminal jurisdiction, including a draft statute of an international criminal court, in the context of the draft Code of Crimes Against the Peace and Security of Mankind; international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law; State responsibility for wrongful acts; and the law of non-navigational uses of international watercourses. ILC continued to cooperate with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee, the European

Committee on Legal Cooperation and the Inter-American Juridical Committee.

Members of the Commission prepared outlines on selected topics of international law⁽²⁾ for ILC's subsequent consideration. ILC's Working Group on the long-term programme of work recommended that topics on the law and practice relating to reservations to treaties and State succession and its impact on the nationality of natural and legal persons be included in the Commission's future agenda.

In accordance with a General Assembly request (resolution 48/31), the Secretariat prepared for ILC's attention a topical summary of the Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee discussion in 1993⁽³⁾ on ILC's report for that year.

The twenty-ninth session of the International Law Seminar—for postgraduate students and young professors or government officials dealing with international law—was held during the ILC session (Geneva, 1-18 June), with one United Nations Institute for Training and Research fellow and 24 other participants of different nationalities, mostly from developing countries. The participants also attended ILC meetings and lectures specifically organized for them. Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Germany, Ireland, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom made voluntary financial contributions, thus making it possible to award 15 full and 3 partial fellowships. Since the first seminar in 1964, fellowships had been awarded to 342 of the 643 participants representing 150 nationalities.

International criminal jurisdiction

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽⁴⁾ ILC considered in 1993⁽¹⁾ the question of an international criminal jurisdiction in the framework of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind. The draft Code, originally prepared by ILC in 1954,⁽⁵⁾ defined offences that were crimes under international law and for which the responsible individual was to be punished. In accordance with a 1991 Assembly resolution,⁽⁶⁾ the Commission received in 1993 the comments and observations of 24 Governments⁽⁷⁾ on the draft Code as adopted by ILC on first reading in 1991.⁽⁸⁾

The Commission had before it the eleventh report⁽⁹⁾ on the draft Code, submitted by its Special Rapporteur, Doudou Thiam (Senegal), containing a draft statute of an international criminal court consisting of 37 articles divided into three titles. Title I dealt with the creation of the Court, Title II, its organization and functioning, and Title III, its procedure. The Commission also received comments by 13 Governments⁽¹⁰⁾ on the 1992 report of the Working Group⁽¹¹⁾ on a draft statute for an international criminal jurisdiction.

The Commission considered the report of the Working Group⁽¹²⁾ on its 1993 meetings (17 May-16 July) and its revised version⁽¹³⁾ containing a draft statute for an international criminal tribunal consisting of 67 articles, which were annexed to the Commission's 1993 report.⁽¹⁾ Those draft articles dealt with the establishment and composition of the court (articles 1-21); jurisdiction and applicable law (22-28); investigation and commencement of prosecution (29-35); trial (36-54); appeal and review (55-57); international cooperation and judicial assistance (58-64); and enforcement of sentences (65-67).

On 21 July, the Commission requested Governments to submit their comments on the proposed draft articles by 15 February 1994, with a view to completing the elaboration of the draft statute at ILC's 1994 session.

International liability

Draft articles on international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law continued to be considered by ILC in 1993 on the basis of the ninth report⁽¹⁴⁾ of its Special Rapporteur on the subject, Julio Barboza (Argentina). The Rapporteur examined the issue of prevention in respect to activities having a risk of causing transboundary harm. He also commented on the obligation of prevention and pointed out the financial and technological inequality between developing and developed countries to monitor those activities involving risk. The Rapporteur presented 11 draft articles dealing with prior authorization (article 11); transboundary impact assessment (12); pre-existing activities (13); performance of activities (14); notification and information (15); exchange of information (16); national security and industrial secrets (17); prior consultation (18); rights of the State presumed to be affected (19); factors involved in a balance of interests (20); and non-transference of risk or harm (20 bis).

The Commission referred articles 11 to 20 bis, together with article 10 (non-discrimination), which it had examined in 1990,⁽¹⁵⁾ to the Drafting Committee for further examination. The Committee, in a July report,⁽¹⁶⁾ set forth the draft articles it had adopted on first reading, dealing with the scope of the articles (article 1); use of terms (2); prior authorization (11); risk assessment (12); and measures to minimize the risk (14). In line with its policy of not adopting articles not accompanied by commentaries, ILC took note of the report and decided to defer action on it until its 1994 session.

State responsibility for wrongful acts

In 1993, ILC again considered State responsibility for wrongful acts on the basis of the fifth report on the topic⁽¹⁷⁾ by its Special Rapporteur, Gaetano Arangio-Ruiz (Italy). The report dealt with Part Three of the draft articles on State responsibility (implementation) and contained six draft articles on: conciliation (article 1); task of the conciliation commission (2); arbitration (3); terms of reference of the arbitral tribunal (4); judicial settlement (5); excès de pouvoir or violation of fundamental principles of arbitral procedures (6). An annex to the report dealt with the settlement of disputes. The report also addressed the consequences of the so-called "crimes" of States (article 19 of Part One of the draft articles). The Commission referred articles 1 to 6, as well as the annex thereto, to the Drafting Committee but, due to a lack of time, it did not consider article 19 of Part One.

ILC also dealt with articles adopted at the 1992 session by its Drafting Committee,⁽¹⁸⁾ on which it had deferred action pending the submission of commentaries. It adopted a new paragraph 2 to be included in article 1 of Part Two of the draft, as well as articles relating to the cessation of wrongful conduct (article 6); reparation (6 bis); restitution in kind (7); compensation (8); satisfaction (10); and assurances and guarantees of non-repetition (10 bis).

The Commission also received from the Drafting Committee articles adopted by it in 1993 on first reading⁽¹⁹⁾ pertaining to countermeasures by an injured State (article 11); conditions relating to resort to countermeasures (12); proportionality (13); and prohibited countermeasures (14). It noted the recommendations of the Drafting Committee and deferred action on them until its 1994 session.

In August,⁽²⁰⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the draft articles on state responsibility, provisionally adopted by the Commission.

Non-navigational uses of international watercourses

Regarding the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses, ILC considered in 1993 the preliminary report on the topic⁽²¹⁾ by its Special Rapporteur, Robert Rosenstock (United States). The Special Rapporteur suggested that, before further drafting was undertaken, the issue of whether the outcome of the exercise should take the form of a framework convention or model rules should be discussed. He agreed with the view that ILC recommend provisions on fact-finding and dispute settlement regardless of the final form of its work. The Special Rapporteur presented an examination of the first 10 of a set of draft articles adopted by the Commission in 1991.⁽²²⁾ Twenty Member States and one non-member State presented to the Secretary-General their comments and observations on the draft articles,⁽²³⁾ as requested by the General Assembly in 1991.⁽⁶⁾ The Commission referred the 10 articles to its Drafting Committee for examination. In July, it received from the Committee the texts of articles it had adopted⁽²⁴⁾ pertaining to the scope of the present articles (article 1); use of terms (2); watercourse agreements (3); parties to watercourse agreements (4); equitable and reasonable utilization and participation (5); factors relevant to equitable and reasonable utilization (6); general obligation to cooperate (8); regular exchange of data and information (9); and relationship between different kinds of uses (10). Taking note of the Drafting Committee's recommendations, the Commission deferred action on them until its 1994 session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted resolution 48/31 without vote.

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-fifth session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-fifth session,

Emphasizing the need for the progressive development of international law and its codification in order to make it a more effective means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and to give increased importance to its role in relations among States,

Recognizing the importance of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission further to enhance their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Recognizing also the role of the International Law Commission in the fulfilment of the objectives of the United Nations Decade of International Law,

Expressing its appreciation for the progress achieved by the International Law Commission in its elaboration of a draft statute for an international criminal court, and noting the constructive debate in the Sixth Committee pertaining to this question,

Considering that experience has demonstrated the usefulness of structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention on each of the main topics dealt with in the report, and that this process is facilitated when the Commission indicates specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments are of particular interest for the continuation of its work,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-fifth session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at that session;

3. Recommends that, taking into account the comments of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission should continue its work on the topics in its current programme;

4. Takes note with appreciation of chapter II of the report of the International Law Commission, entitled "Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind", which was devoted to the question of a draft statute for an international criminal court;

5. Invites States to submit to the Secretary-General by 15 February 1994, as requested by the International Law Commission, written comments on the draft articles proposed by the Working Group on a draft statute for an international criminal court;

6. Requests the International Law Commission to continue its work as a matter of priority on this question with a view to elaborating a draft statute, if possible at its forty-sixth session in 1994, taking into account the views expressed during the debate in the Sixth Committee as well as any written comments received from States;

7. Endorses the decision of the International Law Commission to include in its agenda the topics "The law and practice relating to reservations to treaties" and "State succession and its impact on the nationality of natural and legal persons", on the understanding that the final form to be given to the work on these topics shall be decided after a preliminary study is presented to the General Assembly;

8. Notes the intentions of the International Law Commission for the programme of work for the remainder of the current term of office of its members, and in this connection requests the Commission to resume at its forty-sixth session the consideration of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and welcomes the Commission's decision to endeavour to complete in 1994 the second reading of the draft articles on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses;

9. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts of the International Law Commission to improve its procedures and methods of work;

10. Requests the International Law Commission:

- (a) To consider thoroughly:
 - (i) The planning of its activities and programme for the term of office of its members, bearing in mind the desirability of achieving as much progress as possible in the preparation of draft articles on specific topics;
 - (ii) Its methods of work in all their aspects, bearing in mind that the staggering of the consideration of some topics might contribute, inter alia, to a more effective consideration of its report in the Sixth Committee;
- (b) To continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, those specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest for the continuation of its work;

11. Takes note of the comments of the International Law Commission on the question of the duration of its session, as presented in its report, and expresses the view that the requirements of the work for the progressive development of international law and its codification and the magnitude and complexity of the subjects on the agenda of the Commission make it desirable that the usual duration of its sessions be maintained;

12. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the summary records and other documentation of the International Law Commission;

13. Once again expresses the wish that seminars will continue to be held in conjunction with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants from developing countries will be given the opportunity to attend those seminars, appeals to States that can do so to make the voluntary contributions that are urgently needed for the holding of the seminars, and expresses the hope that the Secretary-General will continue to make every effort, within existing resources, to provide the seminars with adequate services, including interpretation, as required;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the forty-eighth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate;

15. Recommends the continuation of efforts to improve the ways in which the report of the International Law Commission is considered in the Sixth Committee, with a view to providing effective guidance for the Commission in its work;

16. Also recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the forty-ninth session of the General Assembly commence on 24 October 1994.

General Assembly resolution 48/31

International State relations and international law

Judicial responsibility for attacks on United Nations personnel

In 1993, several United Nations bodies addressed the question of the judicial responsibility for attacks on United Nations personnel, a subject of growing concern to the Organization (see PART ONE, Chapter I). In March, the President of the Security Council issued a statement⁽¹⁾ on behalf of Council Members demanding that States act promptly to deter, prosecute and punish those responsible for attacks on and other acts of violence against United Nations forces and personnel. He also requested the Secretary-General to report on existing arrangements for their protection, taking into account relevant multilateral instruments and status of forces agreements concluded between the United Nations and host countries. The Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, in its May report,⁽²⁾ agreed that a comprehensive, systematic and practical approach was needed to address the issue and indicated that it would consider, in the light of the Secretary-General's report, what further steps might be taken, including a legally binding international instrument to reinforce existing arrangements.

In response to the Council's request, the Secretary-General, in an August report,⁽³⁾ outlined the various international legal instruments under which United Nations personnel and forces were protected and suggested that, in the long term, a new international instrument be elaborated to codify and develop further international law relating to their security. The Security Council, by resolution 868(1993), noted the Secretary-General's proposal.

At the request of New Zealand,⁽⁴⁾ the General Assembly considered the issue. The Assembly's Sixth Committee established a working group to examine the question, including proposals by New Zealand⁽⁷⁾ and Ukraine⁽⁸⁾ outlining the framework for a draft convention on responsibility for attacks on United Nations personnel.

In his oral report to the Committee on 15 November, the Chairman of the Working Group stated that the Group had considered several possibilities for meeting the new challenges and agreed with the Secretary-General's proposal that a new binding legal instrument be elaborated.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/37 without vote.

Question of responsibility for attacks on United Nations and associated personnel and measures to ensure that those responsible for such attacks are brought to justice

The General Assembly,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace" and General Assembly resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 47/72 of 14 December 1992,

Gravely concerned at the increasing number of attacks on United Nations personnel that have caused death or serious injury,

Recalling further the statement made by the President of the Security Council, on behalf of the Council, on 31 March 1993, in which the Security Council, inter alia, recognized the need for all relevant bodies of the Organization to take concerted action to enhance the safety and security of United Nations forces and personnel,

Recalling the report of the Special Committee on Peace-keeping Operations,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 27 August 1993 on the security of United Nations operations,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 868(1993) of 29 September 1993,

Noting with appreciation the draft proposals submitted by the delegations of New Zealand and Ukraine under this item,

Welcoming the oral report of the Chairman of the Working Group established under the item,

1. Decides to establish an Ad Hoc Committee open to all Member States to elaborate an international convention dealing with the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, with particular reference to responsibility for attacks on such personnel;

2. Decides also that the Ad Hoc Committee shall be authorized to hold a session from 28 March to 8 April 1994 and, if the Committee itself so decides, to hold a further session from 1 to 12 August 1994, to prepare the text of a draft convention, taking into account any suggestions and proposals from States, as well as comments and suggestions that the Secretary-General may wish to provide on this subject, and bearing in mind views expressed during the debate on this item at the forty-eighth session of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work;

4. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on progress made towards the elaboration of the draft convention;

5. Recommends that at its forty-ninth session a working group be re-established in the framework of the Sixth Committee in the event that further work is required for the elaboration of the draft convention;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Question of responsibility for attacks on United Nations and associated personnel and measures to ensure that those responsible for such attacks are brought to justice".

General Assembly resolution 48/37

9 December 1993 Meeting 73 Adopted without vote

International tribunal for the prosecution of violations of humanitarian law in the former Yugoslavia

By resolution 808(1993), the Security Council decided to establish an international tribunal for the prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of the former Yugoslavia since 1991. Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter, the Council, in May, established the Tribunal and adopted its statute (resolution 827(1993)); in August, it established a list of 23 candidates to serve as judges (resolution 857(1993)). In September, the General Assembly elected 12 judges for the Tribunal (decision 47/328) and, in October, the Council appointed Ramon Escobar-Salom (Venezuela) as Prosecutor (resolution 877(1993)). (For details see PART TWO, Chapter IV.)

Prevention of terrorism

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly an August report with a later addendum⁽⁷⁾ containing replies from 14 Member States and 4 United Nations organizations on measures to eliminate international terrorism, as requested by the Assembly in 1991.⁽⁸⁾ Annexed to the report was information on the state, as at 22 June 1993, of signatures, ratifications, or accessions to a number of international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, including those for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions: the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,⁽⁶⁾ and the 1979 International Convention against the Taking of Hostages.⁽¹⁰⁾

On 9 December, the Assembly, by decision 48/411, requested the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the proposals submitted by Governments⁽⁷⁾ or made during the 1993 debate on the item in the Sixth Committee, or as contained in its 1991 resolution⁽⁸⁾ on combating international terrorism.

Other action. The Security Council, in November, intensified sanctions under the air and arms embargo imposed against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya in March 1992⁽¹¹⁾ to ensure compliance with its January 1992 resolution⁽¹²⁾ requesting the surrender for trial of two Libyan nationals suspected in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, as well as cooperation with French authorities investigating the attack in 1989 on Union de transports aériens (UTA) flight 772 in the Niger (resolution 883(1993)) (for details, see PART ONE, Chapter I).

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

Report of the Secretary-General. In 1993, the Secretary-General submitted comments received from Belgium,⁽¹³⁾ Bulgaria,⁽¹⁴⁾ and Japan,⁽¹⁵⁾ on draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, which were adopted by ILC in 1991.⁽¹⁶⁾

Working Group report. In 1992,⁽¹⁷⁾ the General Assembly decided to establish in 1993 a Working Group on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, to continue consideration of issues relating to the draft articles on that subject and to facilitate the conclusion of a convention through the promotion of general agreement.

The Working Group held 13 meetings between 27 September and 8 October, and a final meeting on 11 November. It discussed the main issues concerning the draft articles, namely: the definition of the terms "State" and "commercial transaction", including the question of the criterion to be applied in determining whether a contract or transaction was commercial (article 2); the question of the legal distinction between a State and certain of its entities in the matter of State immunity from foreign jurisdiction (5 and 10); the exception of contracts of employment; and immunity from measures of constraint in connection with proceedings before a court. Other issues raised concerned the retroactivity of the present articles and the possible inclusion of provisions on aircraft and space objects and on the settlement of disputes.

In its report,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Group concluded that although progress had been made on a number of substantive issues, remaining areas of disagreement needed to be narrowed down to arrive at a generally acceptable basis for the elaboration of a convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, by decision 48/413, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, took note of the report of the Working Group and decided that consideration of the substantive issues should continue in the Sixth Committee during 1994 towards the conclusion of a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property through general agreement. The Assembly also decided that it would consider in 1994 ILC's recommendation that an international conference of plenipotentiaries be convened to examine the draft articles and to conclude a convention on the subject. It further decided to include the item in the provisional agenda of that session.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomats

As at 31 December 1993,⁽¹⁾ the number of parties to the various international instruments relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations was as follows: 172 States were parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations,⁽²⁾ with Georgia, Guinea Bissau and the Republic of Moldova acceding, and Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia succeeding in 1993; 47 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality,⁽³⁾ with the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia succeeding in 1993; and 61 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes,⁽³⁾ with Bosnia and Herzegovina and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia succeeding during the year.

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations⁽⁴⁾ had 150 parties, with Armenia, Georgia and the Republic of Moldova acceding and Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia succeeding in 1993; 36 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality⁽⁵⁾ and 44 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes.⁽⁶⁾

The 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,⁽⁶⁾ had 86 States parties, with Antigua and Barbuda acceding and Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic and Slovakia succeeding in 1993.

Report of the Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolutions of 1987,⁽⁷⁾ 1990⁽⁸⁾ and 1992,⁽⁹⁾ the Secretary-General, in January 1993, requested States to provide information on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and on action taken to bring offenders to justice. In August, he submitted to the Assembly a report⁽¹⁰⁾ containing an analytical summary and the texts of the information received. A total of 11 new cases of violations, as well as additional information on previous cases, were reported by States during the period 19 September 1992 to 1 August 1993. In connection with 16 reported cases in respect of which no information had been received within a reasonable period of time, the Secretary-General addressed reminders to the States concerned. Nine follow-up reports were received in response to those reminders. No views were received with respect to enhancing diplomatic protection.

Treaties and agreements

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations⁽¹⁾ was acceded to in 1993 by Australia and the Republic of Moldova. The Czech Republic and Slovakia succeeded Czechoslovakia with respect to the Convention.⁽²⁾ As at 31 December, 20 States had ratified or acceded to the Convention, which had not yet entered into force.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 1993, some 1,200 international agreements and 1,006 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 377 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions.

The texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded are published in the United Nations Treaty Series in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. In 1993, the following volumes of the Treaty Series covering treaties registered or filed in 1978, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 were issued:

Multilateral treaties

New multilateral treaties concluded under United Nations auspices

The following treaties, concluded under United Nations auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 1993:⁽²⁾

- International Cocoa Agreement, 1993, concluded at Geneva on 16 July 1993
 Amendments to articles 16, 17 and 19(b) of the Convention on the International Maritime Organization, adopted on 4 November 1993
 Protocol amending Article I(a), Article 14(1) and Article 14(3)(b) of the European Agreement of 30 September 1957 concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road (ADR), adopted at Geneva on 28 October 1993
 International Convention on Maritime Liens and Mortgages, 1993, done at Geneva on 6 May 1993
 International Agreement on Olive Oil and Table Olives, 1986, as amended and extended, 1993, done at Geneva on 10 March 1993
 Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on their Destruction, opened for signature at Paris on 13 January 1993

Multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General

The number of multilateral treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions stood at 438 at the end of 1993. During the year, 225 signatures were affixed to treaties for which he performed depositary functions and 968 instruments of ratification, accession, acceptance and approval or notification were transmitted to him. In addition, he received 245 communications from States expressing observations or declarations and reservations made at the time of signature, ratification or accession.

The following multilateral treaties in respect of which the Secretary-General acts as depositary came into force during 1993;⁽²⁾

Agreement establishing the Fund for the Development of the Indigenous Peoples of Latin America and the Caribbean, concluded at Madrid, Spain, on 24 July 1992

Agreement concerning the Adoption of Uniform Conditions of Approval and Reciprocal Recognition of Approval for Motor Vehicle Equipment and Parts, done at Geneva on 20 March 1958

Regulation No. 91: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of side-marker lamps for motor vehicles and their trailers

Regulation No. 92: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of replacement exhaust silencing systems (RESS) for motorcycles

European Agreement on Important International Combined Transport Lines and Related Installations (AGTC), concluded at Geneva on 1 February 1991

Fourth Extension of the International Coffee Agreement, 1983, adopted by the International Coffee Council under Resolution No. 363 of 4 June 1993

International Coffee Agreement, 1983 adopted by the International Coffee Council on 16 September 1982, as further extended by resolution 363(E) of 7 June 1993

Chapter III

Law of the sea

In 1993, United Nations efforts to promote the universal acceptance of the 1982 Convention on the Law of the Sea took on an added urgency as the required number of ratifications were deposited for the Convention to enter into force.

The General Assembly, in December, invited States to increase their efforts to achieve universal participation in the Convention and called on all States that had not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention at the earliest possible date (resolution 48/28).

UN Convention on the Law of the SeaSignatures and ratifications

The number of ratifications of, or accessions to, the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea increased to 60 during 1993 (58 ratifications, 2 accessions) with the receipt of instruments of ratification from Barbados, Guyana, Honduras, Malta, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Zimbabwe.⁽¹⁾

The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982,⁽²⁾ was to enter into force 12 months after receipt of the sixtieth instrument of ratification. On 16 November 1993, Guyana became the sixtieth country to ratify the Convention, establishing the date of the Convention's entry into force as 16 November 1994.

The Convention was closed for signature in 1984, having received 159 signatures.⁽³⁾

Impact of entry into force

The entry into force of the Convention on the Law of the Sea would have a marked impact on the practice of States and the activities of a number of international organizations competent in ocean affairs, the Secretary-General stated in November.⁽⁴⁾

He noted that the Convention's entry into force would consolidate and strengthen the provisions that had received general acceptance and would make operative the Convention's unique system for the settlement of disputes. Several outstanding issues dealing with the deep seabed regime were the subject of ongoing consultations.

The date of the Convention's entry into force would affect the work programmes of the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. The Commission was to convene the Group of Technical Experts within three months from 16 November 1993 to review the state of deep seabed mining and to establish when commercial production might begin. The Expert Group would report on all matters within its mandate to the Assembly of the International Seabed Authority at its first session, which was to be held on the date the Convention entered into force. The Group would also report on practical arrangements for the establishment of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea to the meeting of States parties to the Convention, which was to be convened within six months from 16 November 1994. Finally, the Preparatory Commission was to transfer its property and records to the International Seabed Authority and dissolve itself at the conclusion of the first session of the Assembly.

The Secretary-General stated that his work would be affected by the Convention's entry into force, as would the work of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs, which was required to adjust its activities, especially in 1994 and beyond. Those activities related to: the Secretary-General's assumption of various functions, as specified in article 319 of the Convention, including that as the depositary of the Convention; arrangements for the first election of members of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the meeting of States parties; arrangements for the initial election of the members of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf; and arrangements for drawing up the lists of conciliators and arbitrators in accordance with annexes V and VII to the Convention, as well as for drawing up the list of experts by the relevant organizations, in accordance with annex VIII to the Convention.

Other developments related to the Convention

Pursuant to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽⁵⁾ the Secretary-General submitted in November a report describing developments relating to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.⁽⁶⁾ The report was divided into two parts. The first part reviewed the status of the Convention in terms of its impact on State practice and national policy, the settlement of conflicts and disputes, maritime safety and environmental protection, waste management, the conservation of living marine resources, and the work of the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. The second part outlined the activities of the Secretariat's Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea (see below).

States continued to adopt or modify legislation in accordance with the Convention and, as new States came into existence, the number of coastal States as at 15 October 1993 totalled 150. Also as at mid-October, the number of States claiming a 12-mile territorial sea, measured from baselines, had increased to 120 from 114 at the end of 1992, and the number of States claiming a 24-mile contiguous zone had increased from 38 to 44. Eighty-four States claimed a 200-mile exclusive economic zone, while seven based their zones on a line of delimitation, by determination of coordinates or without limits. Forty States based their continental shelf on a depth of 200 metres plus the exploitability criterion, 23 established theirs at the outer edge of the continental margin or 200 miles, and six worked on 200 miles. Another 16 States claimed archipelagic status, although not all had specified archipelagic baselines.

In order to remove problems with aspects of the Convention's deep-sea mining provisions that inhibited industrialized States in particular from ratifying or acceding to it, the Secretary-General had convened informal consultations on those issues with some 30 States. Those consultations in 1993 focused on nine problem areas relating to the deep seabed mining regime, as contained in the Convention: costs to States parties; the Enterprise (see below); decision-making; the Review Conference; technology transfer; production limitation; the compensation fund; the financial terms of contracts; and environmental issues.

The Convention's imminent entry into force gave a sense of urgency to the Secretary-General's efforts, and in April he presented four possible procedural approaches resulting from the consultations. After in-depth discussions in August, however, he concluded that it was not possible at that stage to narrow the discussion to agreed provisions and specific procedures for their adoption.

States involved in disputes over maritime delimitation and related issues continued to pursue settlement through negotiations and the International Court of Justice (ICJ). Croatia and Slovenia, having successfully settled most of their land boundaries, pursued negotiations over the boundary at the mouth of the Dragonja river to the sea, which would generate a maritime boundary in the Bay of Piran. Namibia and South Africa reached agreement on 8 September that South Africa would transfer sovereignty over the enclave of Walvis Bay in 1994.

On 14 June, ICJ delivered its Judgment in the case concerning the maritime delimitation in the area between Greenland and Jan Mayen, fixing a delimitation line for the continental shelf and the fishery zones in that area between Denmark and Norway. The Court divided the area of overlapping claims into three zones, and then divided each of those zones between the two parties, expressing its view that they should enjoy equitable access to the fishing resources. The maritime delimitation case between Guinea-Bissau and Senegal was pending with ICJ. In the case concerning maritime delimitation and territorial questions between Bahrain and Qatar, oral proceedings confined to the issues of jurisdiction and admissibility were scheduled to open in February 1994. (For details on the ICJ cases, see PART FOUR, Chapter I.)

The year saw some new international agreements, rules and standards that were intended to complement the Convention in such areas as maritime safety, waste management, conservation of living marine resources, and other issues related to marine environmental protection.

As follow-up to Agenda 21, adopted in 1992 by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development,⁽⁷⁾ the Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) agreed to establish an ACC Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas.

At the regional level, there was a marked acceleration in the establishment of common policies and cooperation, particularly on environmental problems, and decisions were increasingly taken at the ministerial level. Effective marine environmental law and policy, however, generally awaited solutions to problems of land-based sources of pollution. Expectations in that area focused on the preparations of the United Nations Environment Programme for the 1995 inter-governmental meeting called for in Agenda 21.

The issue of conservation and management of living marine resources was addressed in 1993 by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and by government representatives during the United Nations Conference on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (see PART THREE, Chapter VIII). FAO started to prepare an International Code of Conduct for Responsible Fishing in consultation with relevant international organizations. The Code was to be formulated within the framework of the Convention on the Law of the Sea and other appropriate international instruments. An outline of the Code was submitted by FAO to the Committee on Fisheries in March 1993. It followed six thematic areas: fishing operations, fishery management practices, fair trade practices, aquaculture development, the integration of coastal fishing in coastal area management and fishery research.

Preparatory Commission

During 1993, the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its eleventh session at Kingston, Jamaica, from 22 March to 2 April.⁽⁶⁾ Among the matters considered were the implementation of resolution II adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982,⁽⁸⁾ which embodied the regime for the protection of pioneer investment in the development of seabed mining technology, and the preparation of draft rules and agreements.⁽⁹⁾

The General Committee, acting as the Preparatory Commission's executive organ for implementing resolution II, considered and took note of periodic reports submitted by the certifying States (China, France, India, Japan and the Russian Federation) on behalf of pioneer investors. It approved the recommendations of the fourth meeting of the Training Panel and designated five candidates selected by the Panel for training programmes offered by India and the Russian Federation. The Committee also took note of traineeships offered by China and the InterOceanmetal Joint Organization and its certifying States and one in chemical engineering offered by India. It reaffirmed its decision to invite any State member of or observer in the Preparatory Commission to submit candidates for the training programme.

The plenary of the Preparatory Commission held two readings of the draft rules of procedure of the organs of the International Seabed Authority and finalized their texts, except for the so-called "hard-core" issues relating to financial and budgetary matters, decision-making on questions of substance, elections and the participation of observers and subsidiary organs.⁽¹⁰⁾

A draft agreement between the International Seabed Authority and the Government of Jamaica regarding the headquarters of the Authority was approved with some clarifications.

Special Commissions

The Preparatory Commission's four Special Commissions⁽¹¹⁾ continued to work in accordance with their respective mandates.

Developing land-based producer States

Special Commission 1, which focused on the potential impact of future seabed mining on land-based minerals production in developing countries, completed consideration of all items in its programme of work. Most delegations felt that draft provisional recommendations drawn up by the Commission Chairman had bridged the various positions of delegations and could be submitted to the International Seabed Authority.

The Enterprise

Special Commission 2 continued its preparations for the Enterprise—the operational arm of the International Seabed Authority. It continued to focus on the development of a training programme, the organizational structure and operational options of the Enterprise and the initial operation of the Enterprise.

The Special Commission also considered the draft final report of the Chairman's Advisory Group of Assumptions. The Group felt that there was a need for continuity in its work and suggested that its successors concentrate on, among other things: the periodic analysis of world markets and metal prices; the evaluation of technological developments; and the state of knowledge of deep sea environments and the possible impact of mining activities.

Seabed mining code

Special Commission 3 continued to prepare the seabed mining code and rules for the exploration and exploitation of polymetallic nodules on the deep seabed. Although some issues remained to be resolved, a number of the draft mining code provisions had in effect met the approval of delegations.

International Tribunal

Special Commission 4 continued to draft practical arrangements to establish the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. With the adoption of its draft report by the Preparatory Commission, preparations began for the first Meeting of States Parties to the Convention prior to the Tribunal's inauguration. Agreement had not been reached on the number of official working languages of the Tribunal and how to apply the plan for phasing in the Tribunal.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/28 by recorded vote.

Law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions, including resolution 47/65 of 11 December 1992, on the law of the sea,

Recognizing that, as stated in the third preambular paragraph of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole,

Convinced that it is important to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose,

Emphasizing the need for States to ensure consistent application of the Convention, as well as the need for harmonization of national legislation with the provisions of the Convention,

Considering that, in its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, it proclaimed that the seabed and ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction (hereinafter referred to as "the Area"), as well as the resources of the Area, are the common heritage of mankind,

Recalling that the Convention provides the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources,

Recalling with satisfaction the expressions of willingness to explore all possibilities of addressing issues of concern to some States in order to secure universal participation in the Convention,

Noting that the sixtieth instrument of ratification of, or accession to the Convention was deposited on 16 November 1993 and that as a consequence the Convention shall enter into force twelve months after the date of deposit of that instrument,

Recognizing the need for cooperation in the early and effective implementation by the Preparatory Commission of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea,

Noting with satisfaction the progress made in the Preparatory Commission since its inception, including the registration of six pioneer investors and the designation by the Preparatory Commission of reserved areas for the International Seabed Authority from the application areas submitted by the pioneer investors pursuant to resolution II, bearing in mind that such registration entails both rights and obligations for pioneer investors,

Noting also the increasing needs of countries, especially developing countries, for information, advice and assistance in the implementation of the Convention and in their developmental process for the full realization of the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention,

Concerned that the developing countries are as yet unable to take effective measures for the full realization of these benefits owing to the lack of resources and of the necessary scientific and technological capabilities,

Recognizing the need to enhance and supplement the efforts of States and competent international organizations aimed at enabling developing countries to acquire such capabilities,

Recognizing also that the Convention encompasses all uses and resources of the sea and that all related activities within the United Nations system need to be implemented in a manner consistent with it,

Deeply concerned at the current state of the marine environment,

Mindful of the importance of the Convention for the protection of the marine environment,

Noting with concern the use of fishing methods and practices, including those aimed at evading regulations and controls, which can have an adverse impact on the conservation and management of living marine resources,

Considering the need for effective and balanced conservation and management of living marine resources, giving full effect to the relevant provisions in the Convention,

Noting activities carried out in 1993 under programme 10 (Law of the sea and ocean affairs) in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, as revised, taking into account the restructuring of the Secretariat of the Organization, and of the report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to paragraph 21 of General Assembly resolution 47/65,

1. Recalls the historic significance of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea as an important contribution to the maintenance of peace, justice and progress for all peoples of the world;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the increasing and overwhelming support for the Convention, as evidenced, inter alia, by the one hundred and fifty-nine signatures and sixty ratifications or accessions, and notes that as a consequence the Convention will enter into force on 16 November 1994;

3. Invites all States to make renewed efforts to facilitate universal participation in the Convention;

4. Notes with appreciation the new developments and the active participation of States in the consultations under the auspices of the Secretary-General aimed at promoting dialogue and at addressing issues of concern to some States in order to achieve universal participation in the Convention;

5. Also invites all States to participate in the consultations held under the auspices of the Secretary-General and to increase efforts to achieve universal participation in the Convention as early as possible;

6. Recognizes that political and economic changes, including particularly a growing reliance on market principles, underscore the need to re-evaluate, in the light of the issues of concern to some States, matters in the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources, and that a productive dialogue on such issues involving all interested parties would facilitate the prospect of universal participation in the Convention, for the benefit of mankind as a whole;

7. Calls upon all States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention at the earliest possible date, and also calls upon all States to take appropriate steps to promote universal participation in the Convention, including through dialogue aimed at addressing the issues of concern to some States;

8. Also calls upon all States to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose;

9. Calls upon States to observe the provisions of the Convention when enacting their national legislation;

10. Notes the progress made by the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea in all areas of its work, including the completion of its draft provisional final report at its eleventh session;

11. Recalls the Understanding on the Fulfilment of Obligations by the Registered Pioneer Investors and their Certifying States adopted by the Preparatory Commission on 30 August 1990, as well as the understandings adopted on 12 March 1992 and 18 August 1992;

12. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his efforts in support of the Convention and for the effective execution of programme 10 (Law of the sea and ocean affairs) in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, and requests him, in the execution of programme 10, to continue to provide an effective response to the increased needs of States for assistance in the implementation of the Convention;

13. Also expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the report prepared pursuant to paragraph 21 of General Assembly resolution 47/65 and requests him to carry out the activities outlined therein, as well as those aimed at the strengthening of the legal regime of the sea;

14. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to assist States in the implementation of the Convention and in the development of a consistent and uniform approach to the legal regime thereunder, as well as in their national, subregional and regional efforts towards the full realization of the benefits therefrom, and invites the organs and organizations of the United Nations system to cooperate and enhance assistance in these endeavours;

15. Urges interested Member States, in particular States with advanced marine capabilities, to review relevant policies and programmes in the context of the integration of the marine sector in national development strategies, and to explore prospects for intensifying cooperation with developing countries, including those of regions active in this field;

16. Requests the competent international organizations, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and other multilateral funding agencies, in accordance with their respective policies, to intensify financial, technological, organizational and managerial assistance to the developing countries in their efforts to realize the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention and to strengthen cooperation among themselves and with donor States in the provision of such assistance;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to keep under review, in cooperation with States and the competent international organizations, the measures being undertaken and any necessary follow-up action, in order to facilitate the realization by States of the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention, and to report thereon periodically to the General Assembly;

18. Recognizes that the protection of the marine environment will be significantly enhanced by the implementation of applicable provisions of the Convention;

19. Reiterates its call to States and other members of the international community to strengthen their cooperation and to take measures with a view to giving full effect to the provisions in the Convention on the conservation and management of living marine resources, including the prevention of fishing methods and practices which can have an adverse impact on the conservation and management of living marine resources and, in particular, to comply with bilateral and regional measures applicable to them aimed at effective monitoring and enforcement;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue and to accelerate the consultations in order to achieve universal participation in the Convention as early as possible and to provide the necessary services for these consultations, the next meeting of which will take place from 31 January to 4 February 1994;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide for the convening of the twelfth regular session of the Preparatory Commission at Kingston from 7 to 11 February 1994, during which arrangements will be made for meetings of the Training Panel, and, if necessary, provide for a further meeting of up to two weeks during the summer in New York;

22. Takes note of the decision of the Preparatory Commission to convene a meeting of the Group of Technical Experts to review the state of deep seabed mining and to make an assessment of the time when commercial production may be expected to commence;

23. Notes the need to make arrangements for the first session of the Assembly of the International Seabed Authority and a meeting of States parties to the Convention, if required, including arrangements for the participation of observers;

24. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, and earlier if appropriate, on developments pertaining to the Convention and all related activities and on the implementation of the present resolution;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Law of the sea".

On 21 December, the Assembly, in resolution 48/194, reaffirmed that the United Nations Conference on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks should complete its work before the forty-ninth (1994) session of the General Assembly, and approved the convening of two further sessions of the Conference in New York in 1994. The Secretary-General was asked to submit the final report on the work of the Conference to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session.

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

The Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued its preparations in 1993 for the final ratification of the Convention on the Law of the Sea and its entry into force.⁽⁶⁾ Programme 10 of the 1992-1997 medium-term plan⁽¹⁰⁾ on the law of the sea and ocean affairs continued to be implemented, following the existing subprogramme structure and maintaining the same priorities.

The Division continued to assist Governments and regional organizations to implement the Convention and to develop a consistent and uniform approach to its legal regime. Advisory services included: examination of the implications of the Convention for States or intergovernmental organizations; the formulation and harmonization of national maritime legislation; the development and elaboration of marine and coastal zone policies and plans; and the building of national and regional institutional frameworks to help realize benefits under the Convention. The Division assisted Jamaica with the preparation of a pilot project for implementation under the World Bank/International Maritime Organization wider Caribbean initiative for ship-generated wastes project.

A Consultative Meeting on Training in Integrated Management of Coastal and Marine Areas for Sustainable Development (Sassari, Sardinia, Italy, 21-23 June) was held in cooperation with the United Nations Development Programme. The Division provided technical assistance to the International Ocean Institute for the design of an advanced course on the integrated management of coastal and ocean areas, to be implemented at its new regional centres in Colombia, Fiji, India and Senegal.

Several publications on developments in ocean and coastal affairs were completed or in progress in 1993. Among those published were: a compilation of national legislation on the exclusive economic zone;⁽¹¹⁾ volume II of a compilation of documents of the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea; a volume of the Annual Review of Ocean Affairs: Law and

Policy, Main Documents;⁽¹²⁾ the eighth volume of The Law of the Sea: A Select Bibliography—1992;⁽¹³⁾ and Bibliography on the Law of the Sea (1968-1988): Two Decades of Law-making, State Practice and Doctrine (Multilingual Supplement).⁽¹⁴⁾ Three issues of the Law of the Sea Bulletin⁽¹⁵⁾ were published in 1993, as well as a Reference Guide to Law of the Sea Bulletins, Nos. 1 to 22 (1983-1992).

The computerized Law of the Sea Information System was revised and updated. Extensive revisions were made to the Country Marine Profile Database and the National Marine Legislation Database, and a Polymetallic Nodule Deposits Database was being established. The Library Bibliographic Information System was expanded to include holdings at the Division's reference library at Kingston and the Division's specialized Law of the Sea Library and Reference Collection continued to serve Member States and others. The Division maintained close cooperation with United Nations agencies and bodies.

The Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea—established in 1981⁽¹⁶⁾ and presented annually in honour of the first President of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea—was awarded to Pongthong Onoora of the Ministry for Agriculture and Cooperatives of Thailand.

Chapter IV

Other legal questions

In 1993, the United Nations continued to work on various aspects of international law and international economic law.

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization met in March and discussed, among other questions, the economic problems of third States affected by sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter. In December, the General Assembly asked the Special Committee to give priority consideration to that question in 1994 (resolution 48/36).

Various aspects of relations between the United Nations diplomatic community and the United States were addressed by the Committee on Relations with the Host Country at four meetings held during the year. Voicing concern that the financial indebtedness of certain missions accredited to the Organization had risen to alarming proportions, the Assembly reminded missions, their personnel and Secretariat personnel of their obligations (48/35).

With regard to the United Nations Decade of International Law (1990-1999), the Assembly appealed for contributions to implement the programme for the Decade's second term (1993-1994) (48/30). Within the framework of the Decade, the Assembly approved guidelines and recommendations put forward by the Secretary-General on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law (48/29).

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law adopted the Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction and the Assembly took note of its completion and adoption in December (48/33).

International organizations and international lawStrengthening the role of the United Nations

The Secretary-General, in his annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization,⁽¹⁾ noted that, with the cold war over, the United Nations could play the pivotal role in establishing world order and progress that had been assigned to it by the Charter.

Referring to his 1992 "Agenda for Peace",⁽²⁾ the Secretary-General added to peace-keeping and preventive diplomacy the concept of peace enforcement, as foreseen in Chapter VII of the Charter for peace-keeping operations that did not necessarily have the consent of all parties concerned. The combined efforts of preventive diplomacy, peace-keeping, peace-building and sometimes peace enforcement, he said, strengthened the opportunity for post-conflict peace-building to prevent the recurrence of violence among nations and peoples.

Special Committee on the Charter

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization⁽³⁾ (New York, 1-19 March 1993) continued to discuss proposals for the maintenance of international peace and security and to examine the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, as requested by the General Assembly in 1992.W

The Committee had before it two updated working papers, submitted by the Russian Federation, concerning the maintenance of international peace and security. They proposed new issues for consideration by the Committee,⁽⁵⁾ and a draft declaration on the improvement of cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations.⁽⁶⁾ An amendment to the draft declaration was proposed by Mexico. The Committee also examined a proposal by 19 States on the implementation of Charter provisions concerning assistance to third States affected by sanctions under Chapter VII;⁽⁷⁾ a working paper on the same subject submitted by India and Nepal;⁽⁸⁾ a revision of a 1992 proposal by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on the effectiveness of the Security Council in the maintenance of international peace and security;⁽⁹⁾ and a revised working paper by Cuba, also on the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security.

In considering the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, the Committee had before it draft United Nations conciliation rules, proposed by Guatemala.⁽¹⁰⁾

Application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter

In response to an invitation contained in a December 1992 statement⁽¹¹⁾ by the President of the Security Council, the Secretary-General submitted a November report to the Council and the General Assembly on the special economic problems of third States resulting from the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter.

In March, the issue was taken up by the Special Committee on the Charter⁽³⁾ (see above) and by an informal open-ended Working Group of the Assembly. Matters discussed included proposals for: the establishment of a fund to assist third States affected by the imposition of sanctions; a study on the effectiveness and management of various types of sanctions and on verification of compliance with sanctions regimes; and for an "economic impact statement" to be considered before the adoption of sanctions. In a May statement to the Working Group, the Secretary-General noted that, as sanctions became more common, more permanent structures might be needed to study and deal with ensuing economic problems, as might consultations between the Security Council, the Secretary-General, international financial institutions, and Member States.

On 20 September, the Assembly, by resolution 47/120 B, section IV, decided to continue to examine ways to implement Article 50 of the Charter (see APPENDIX II) and requested the Secretary-General to report annually on its implementation.

Report of the Secretary-General. In his November report on the special economic problems of States as a result of sanctions imposed under Chapter VII,⁽¹²⁾ the Secretary-General outlined the practice and experience of the Security Council in applying Article 50 including the procedure for considering applications by States and mechanisms and instruments for following up on the Council's recommendations.

The Secretary-General noted that there was no United Nations mechanism to address the spirit of Article 50 effectively and systematically and recommended the establishment of more orderly and systemic arrangements. In particular, he proposed that the Security Council address the issue of requests for assistance under Article 50 when adopting preventive or enforcement measures; this would provide, at the outset, a clear legal basis for the treatment of such requests. A sanction committee or specially established ad hoc committee could be entrusted with a mandate to consider such requests and to make recommendations to the President of the Council. The Secretary-General also noted that the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with functions and powers vested in it under Articles 63 and 64 of the Charter, could play an important role in coordinating United Nations efforts to assist in the context of Article 50, giving practical meaning to cooperation between the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as provided under Article 65. Other recommendations dealt with appeals for assistance, financial arrangements for resource mobilization, and coordination issues. (For information on special economic assistance to States affected by sanctions against Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro), see PART THREE, Chapter III.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted resolution 48/36 without vote.

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind the reports of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh, thirty-ninth, fortieth, forty-first, forty-second, forty-third, forty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-sixth, forty-seventh and forty-eighth sessions, as well as the views and comments expressed on them by Member States,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 8 November 1993,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Noting the discussions in the Security Council towards strengthening the consultative process in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter with a view to minimizing special economic problems of countries adversely affected as a result of their implementation of preventive or enforcement measures under Chapter VII of the Charter,

Mindful of the desirability for further work being done by the Special Committee in the fields of the maintenance of international peace and security and the peaceful settlement of disputes between States,

Bearing in mind various proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session aimed at strengthening the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 1993,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee will hold its next session from 7 to 25 March 1994;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 1994, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 4 below:

(a) To accord appropriate time for the consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context:

(i) To consider on a priority basis proposals on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter;

(ii) To continue its consideration, also on a priority basis, of the proposal on the enhancement of cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations;

(iii) To consider other specific proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted to the Special Committee or which might be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 1994, including the proposal on the strengthening of the role of the Organization and enhancement of its efficiency and the revised proposal submitted with a view to enhancing the effectiveness of the Security Council with regard to the maintenance of international peace and security;

(b) To continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and in this context:

(i) To continue its consideration of the proposal on United Nations rules for the conciliation of disputes between States;

(ii) To continue its consideration of other specific proposals relating to the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, in particular those relating to the enhancement of the role of the International Court of Justice;

4. Also requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever that has significance for the outcome of its work;

5. Decides that the Special Committee shall continue to accept the participation of observers of Member States in its meetings, including those of its working group, and also decides that the Special Committee shall be authorized to invite other States or intergovernmental organizations to participate in the debate in its plenary meetings on specific items where it considers that such participation would assist its work;

6. Invites the Special Committee at its session in 1994 to initiate a review of its membership and to consider various proposals regarding this membership;

7. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Host country relations

Pursuant to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹³⁾ the Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider various aspects of relations between the United Nations diplomatic community and the United States, its host country.⁽¹⁴⁾ At four meetings between 10 February and 9 November 1993, the Committee considered: the security of missions and the safety of their personnel; issues arising from implementation of the 1947 Headquarters Agreement between the United Nations and the United States,⁽¹⁵⁾ including host country travel regulations; the acceleration of immigration and customs procedures and security arrangements for the Headquarters district; the responsibilities of permanent missions to the United Nations and their personnel, particularly in relation to financial indebtedness; matters related to the use of motor vehicles and parking; and rationalization of the Committee's work.

With regard to security, the Committee was informed of responses to several incidents, including the robbery of a Chinese delegate to the Assembly's 1992 session, the 1992 attack on the mission of Iran, and a case of car-jacking involving an official of the German mission. It was also informed of a seminar on survival in New York, organized at the United Nations on 13 May by the United States mission and the New York City Commission for the United Nations, the Consular Corps and International Business.

The Committee also considered an allegation by Cuba that demonstrations held regularly in the proximity of its mission constituted a deliberate campaign of harassment against mission personnel, and concerns raised by the Russian Federation regarding the security of the Russian mission housing complex. Costa Rica, Cyprus and the Russian Federation drew the Committee's attention to recent security measures related to access to United Nations premises, which, in their view, had inconvenienced their missions. In response, the United States noted that the measures had an impact on the host country as well, and described steps taken to alleviate the problems.

The Committee was informed that all travel restrictions imposed on United Nations staff members of Afghan nationality, and their dependents, were removed by the host country on 11 January 1993, and that an informal meeting was arranged by the Secretariat and the host country mission on the subject of United States customs procedures. In that regard, the Russian Federation reiterated its request that special lines be designated for diplomatic personnel at all terminals at Kennedy Airport in New York. Addressing transportation arrangements, Mali, Sierra Leone and Zimbabwe stated that their mission vehicles were receiving parking tickets in areas traditionally reserved for their vehicles. The United States replied that alternative parking space was being sought for Zimbabwe's mission.

Iraq reminded the Committee of the continuing freeze on its liquid assets in the United States, which had been used by its mission to pay staff salaries, rents and other expenses, and of travel restrictions imposed on mission personnel. The United States responded that rent securities and other funds of Iraq came under the sanctions imposed by the Security Council and came under the jurisdiction of the Council's Sanctions Committee.

The United States reported that the chronic indebtedness of missions and individuals had risen to more than $5 million in 1993 and remained a very serious problem for the host country. It had become difficult to persuade creditors not to seek relief in the civil court system and, although the United States continued to intervene on behalf of missions and individuals with diplomatic privileges and immunities, it also had an obligation to protect the interests of its citizens and creditors who were unable to obtain legal relief. It was noted that when a diplomat, a diplomatic mission or a staff member of the Secretariat failed to pay just debts, this reflected poorly on the entire United Nations community. During the year, the Committee's Working Group on Indebtedness continued its efforts to solve the problem.

In recommendations and conclusions adopted on 9 November, the Committee expressed its anticipation that the host country would continue to take all measures necessary to prevent interference with the functioning of missions and that problems of host country relations raised at its meetings would be duly settled. It stressed the importance and urgency of its Working Group's efforts concerning financial indebtedness and reminded permanent missions, their personnel and Secretariat personnel of their obligations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/35 without vote.

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations and the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

Noting the spirit of cooperation and mutual understanding that has guided the deliberations of the Committee on issues affecting the United Nations community and the host country,

Welcoming the increased interest shown by Member States in participating in the work of the Committee,

Welcoming also the efforts to explore ways to rationalize the work of the Committee, and in particular its agenda,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 58 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations is in the interests of the United Nations and all Member States, and expresses the hope that the host country will continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and hopes that problems raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

4. Voices its concern that the amount of financial indebtedness resulting from non-compliance with contractual obligations of certain missions accredited to the United Nations has increased to alarming proportions, reminds all permanent missions to the United Nations, their personnel and Secretariat personnel of their responsibilities to meet such obligations, and expresses the hope that the efforts undertaken by the Committee, in consultation with all concerned, will lead to a solution of this problem;

5. Welcomes the lifting of travel controls by the host country with regard to certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, and expresses the hope that the remaining travel restrictions will be removed by the host country as soon as possible, and in this regard notes the positions of the affected States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

6. Supports the efforts of the Chairman of the Committee, Member States and the Secretariat to explore ways to rationalize the work of the Committee and its agenda, permitting it to remain efficient and responsive, and in keeping with the overall spirit of its mandate;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

8. Requests the Committee to continue its work, in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

United Nations Decade of International Law

In response to requests contained in a 1992 General Assembly resolution,⁽¹⁶⁾ the Secretary-General submitted two 1993 reports on the United Nations Decade of International Law (1990-1999), which the Assembly had declared in 1989.⁽¹⁷⁾ The Decade's aims were to promote acceptance of and respect for the principles of international law; to promote the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to, and full respect for, the International Court of Justice (ICJ); to encourage the progressive development of international law and its codification, and to encourage its teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation. The Assembly adopted the programme of activities for the Decade's second term (1993-1994) in 1992.⁽¹⁸⁾

In August,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Secretary-General summarized replies from States and international organizations on steps taken to implement the programme of activities for the second term, and views on possible activities for the next term. He also described recent activities of various United Nations bodies related to the progressive development of international law and its codification in such fields such as human rights, disarmament, outer space, economic development, international trade, international drug control and crime prevention and criminal justice, the environment, and the law of the sea.

In September,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a preliminary operational plan for a possible United Nations congress on public international law, including its purpose, timing, organization of work, and issues regarding participation and financing.

Sixth Committee action. The Sixth Committee's Working Group on the Decade, established in 1990 pursuant to a 1989 Assembly resolution⁽¹⁷⁾ with a view to preparing recommendations on the programme of activities for the Decade, held six meetings between 6 October and 16 November 1993.⁽²⁰⁾ The Working Group discussed the implementation of the programme of activities for the second term (1993-1994) of the Decade and a draft programme for a United Nations congress on public international law. It recommended that the congress be held in 1995 and that the Secretariat proceed with its preparation. It also considered the Secretary-General's report on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict and commented on specific sections.

Protection of the environment in times of armed conflict

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽²¹⁾ the Secretary-General, in July 1993,⁽²²⁾ presented information received from the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict. ICRC reviewed existing law on the subject and described related work being carried out under its auspices. In 1993, ICRC convened two meetings of experts (Geneva, January and June) to define the content of existing law, identify problems with implementation and any gaps it might have, determine what action needed to be taken, and draft model guidelines for military manuals. The experts reaffirmed the importance and relevance of the currently applicable rules and recognized the need to look for ways to protect the environment in times of non-international armed conflict. A proposal to protect nature reserves, which could be likened to demilitarized zones or other protected areas, received considerable support. The experts encouraged ICRC to clarify and, where necessary, develop rules to protect the natural environment in times of armed conflict. ICRC raised a number of questions for examination by the Sixth Committee and stated its readiness to clarify rules governing the conduct of hostilities, including those relevant to protection of the environment, and to continue drafting pertinent rules for inclusion in military manuals. Annexed to the report were guidelines for military manuals and instructions on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/30 without vote.

United Nations Decade of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 44/23 of 17 November 1989, by which it declared the period 1990-1999 the United Nations Decade of International Law,

Recalling also that the main purposes of the Decade, according to resolution 44/23, should be, inter alia:

(a) To promote acceptance of and respect for the principles of international law;

(b) To promote means and methods for the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to and full respect for the International Court of Justice;

(C) To encourage the progressive development of international law and its codification;

(d) To encourage the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law,

Recalling further its resolution 47/32 of 25 November 1992, to which was annexed the programme for the activities for the second term (1993-1994) of the Decade,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his reports submitted pursuant to resolution 47/32,

Recalling that at its forty-fifth session the Sixth Committee established the Working Group on the United Nations Decade of International Law with a view to preparing generally acceptable recommendations on the programme of activities for the Decade,

Noting that at its forty-sixth, forty-seventh and forty-eighth sessions the Sixth Committee reconvened the Working Group to continue its work in accordance with resolutions 45/40 of 28 November 1990, 46/53 of 9 December 1991 and 47/32,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General containing information received from the International Committee of the Red Cross on the work of the group of experts on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict, conducted under the auspices of the International Committee, and the draft guidelines for military manuals and instructions on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict, annexed thereto,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Sixth Committee and its Working Group on the United Nations Decade of International Law for their work at the current session, and requests the Working Group to continue its work at the forty-ninth session in accordance with its mandate and methods of work;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to States and international organizations and institutions that have undertaken activities in implementation of the programme for the activities for the second term (1993-1994) of the Decade, including sponsoring conferences on various subjects of international law;

3. Invites all States and international organizations and institutions referred to in the programme to provide, update or supplement information on activities they have undertaken in implementation of the programme, as appropriate, to the Secretary-General, as well as to submit their views on possible activities for the next term of the Decade;

4. Takes note with appreciation, in this respect, of the International Conference on the Protection of War Victims, held at Geneva from 30 August to 1 September 1993, and its Final Declaration adopted on 1 September 1993,^a as an important means for reaffirming, strengthening and promoting international humanitarian law, and reminds all States of their responsibility to respect and ensure respect for international humanitarian law in order to protect the victims of war;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, on the basis of information received under paragraph 3 above a report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on the implementation of the programme, together with views on possible activities for the next term of the Decade;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to supplement his report, as appropriate, with new information on the activities of the United Nations relevant to the progressive development of international law and its codification, and to submit it to the General Assembly on an annual basis;

7. Encourages States to disseminate at the national level, as appropriate, information contained in the report of the Secretary-General;

8. Appeals to States, international organizations and non-governmental organizations working in this field and to the private sector to make financial contributions or contributions in kind for the purpose of facilitating the implementation of the programme;

9. Once again requests the Secretary-General to bring to the attention of States and international organizations and institutions working in the field of international law the programme annexed to resolution 47/32;

10. Decides that a United Nations congress on public international law should be held in 1995, as proposed in part III of the report of the Working Group, and requests the Secretary-General to proceed with the preparations for the congress and keep the Member States informed of the status of the preparations;

11. Expresses its appreciation of the work of the group of experts on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict, conducted under the auspices of the International Committee of the Red Cross, and of the report prepared by the International Committee;

12. Invites all States to review the draft guidelines for military manuals and instructions on the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict annexed to the report of the International Committee of the Red Cross and to provide their comments thereon to the International Committee, either directly or through the Secretary-General, no later than 31 March 1994;

13. Welcomes the intention of the International Committee of the Red Cross to draw up a new version of the guidelines for military manuals, taking into account the comments made by States on the report of the Secretary-General containing information received from the International Committee, and notes that the International Committee is ready to convene, if need be, a meeting of government experts for that purpose;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to invite the International Committee of the Red Cross to report on activities undertaken by it and other relevant bodies with regard to the protection of the environment in times of armed conflict, and to submit the information received in the report to be prepared under paragraph 5 above to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "United Nations Decade of International Law".

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

In response to a 1991 General Assembly request,⁽²³⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a November 1993 report⁽²⁴⁾ on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law in 1992-1993, within the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law.

During the period under review, the United Nations Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) carried out activities in the fields of public international law, international trade law and the law of the sea and ocean affairs. Two sessions of the Geneva International Law Seminar were held during the biennium (see below).

Activities of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) included a national seminar on international commercial arbitration (Mexico City, 20 and 21 February 1992), the UNCITRAL Congress on the theme of uniform commercial law in the twenty-first century (New York, 18-22 May 1992), a fifth UNCITRAL symposium on international trade law (Vienna, 12-16 July 1993), and national seminars on international trade law in Bangladesh, Indonesia, Pakistan, Poland, Slovenia, Sri Lanka, Thailand and Ukraine. Seminars were also planned for Argentina, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Brazil, Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, Mongolia, the Republic of Moldova and Uzbekistan (see also below, under "International economic law").

The United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) provided training on procedures for the settlement of commercial disputes, legal aspects of debt management, and the promotion of cooperation in environment-development negotiations. It also continued to issue publications and disseminate information on various aspects of international law.

A number of publications on international law were issued by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which also created several chairs of international law, with a view to strengthening teaching, training and research in developing countries through inter-university cooperation. Under the United Nations/UNITAR international law fellowship programme, 19 fellowships were awarded in 1992 and 20 in 1993 for courses and seminars at The Hague Academy of International Law (Netherlands). The fellowships were for six weeks and were followed by either three months of training in legal departments of the various United Nations bodies or participation in the International Law Seminar or other special seminars organized by UNITAR. As of April 1993, all aspects of the fellowship programme were financed by OLA. Financing of the Programme of Assistance in general continued to come from appropriations from the regular budget and from voluntary contributions to the Programme's trust fund.

Subject to the availability of new funds, the Secretary-General recommended the continuation of the International Law Seminar, the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship programme on the law of the sea, the dissemination of legal documents, and steps to promote training and assistance in international trade law. He also recommended that the number of fellowships awarded under the fellowship programme in international law be evaluated, that consideration be given to providing advisory services and lectures through sending experts to various regions, and that States and international organizations be encouraged to expand their activities under the Programme of Assistance.

The Advisory Committee on the Programme of Assistance held its twenty-seventh session on 10 December 1992 and its twenty-eighth session on 29 October 1993. In 1993, the Committee approved the Secretary-General's recommendations for further implementation of the Programme.

International Law Seminar

Pursuant to a 1991 General Assembly resolution,⁽²⁵⁾ the twenty-eighth session of the International Law Seminar for postgraduate students of international law and young professors or government officials dealing with international law, was held at Geneva from 1 to 19 June 1992.⁽²⁴⁾ There were 21 participants, mostly from developing countries, and four United Nations/UNITAR fellows. The twenty-ninth session (Geneva, 1-18 June 1993), held pursuant to a 1992 Assembly resolution,⁽²⁶⁾ was attended by 24 of the selected candidates and one fellowship holder.

The participants of both sessions attended meetings of the International Law Commission (ILC). Four working groups were established at the 1992 Seminar to deal with the relationship between the International Criminal Court (ICC) and the Security Council, sources of law to be applied by ICC, the initiation of proceedings before ICC and the conferment of jurisdiction on ICC. In 1992, Argentina, Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Finland, France, Hungary, Jamaica, Morocco, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom had awarded, through voluntary contributions, 15 full fellowships and one partial fellowship to participants from developing countries. In 1993, 15 full fellowships and 3 partial fellowships were made available by Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Germany, Ireland, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. Since the Seminar's inception in 1964, fellowships had been awarded to 342 of the 643 participants, representing 150 nationalities.

In 1993, the General Assembly appealed for voluntary contributions to the Seminar in its resolutions on the work of ILC (see PART FOUR, Chapter II) and on the Programme of Assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/29 without vote.

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 17 of its resolution 46/50 of 9 December 1991, paragraph 1 of section IV of the annex to its resolution 45/40 of 28 November 1990 and paragraph 1 of section IV of the annex to its resolution 47/32 of 25 November 1992,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law and the guidelines and recommendations on future implementation of the Programme within the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law, which were adopted by the Advisory Committee on the Programme and are contained in section III of that report,

Bearing in mind that the encouragement of the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law is one of the main objectives of the United Nations Decade of International Law, as declared in its resolution 44/23 of 17 November 1989 and further expanded in section IV of the programme for the activities to be commenced during the first term (1990-1992) of the Decade, which is contained in the annex to resolution 45/40, and in section IV of the programme for the activities for the second term (1993-1994) of the Decade, contained in the annex to resolution 47/32,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Noting with appreciation the efforts made by States at the bilateral level to provide assistance in the teaching and study of international law,

Convinced, nevertheless, that States and international organizations and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme and increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming its resolutions 2464(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2550(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2838(XXVI) of 18 December 1971, 3106(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, 3502(XXX) of 15 December 1975, 32/146 of 16 December 1977, 36/108 of 10 December 1981 and 38/129 of 19 December 1983, in which it stated or recalled that in the conduct of the Programme it was desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international organizations and others, as well as its resolutions 34/144 of 17 December 1979, 40/66 of 11 December 1985, 42/148 of 7 December 1987, 44/28 of 4 December 1989 and 46/50, in which, in addition, it expressed or reaffirmed the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programme in international law, account would be taken of the need to secure representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

1. Approves the guidelines and recommendations contained in section III of the report of the Secretary-General and adopted by the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, in particular those designed to achieve the best possible results in the administration of the Programme within a policy of maximum financial restraint;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out in 1994 and 1995 the activities specified in his report, including the provision of:

(a) A number of international law fellowships in both 1994 and 1995, to be determined in the light of the overall resources for the Programme and to be awarded at the request of Governments of developing countries;

(b) A minimum of one scholarship in both 1994 and 1995 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, subject to the availability of new voluntary contributions made specifically to the fellowship fund;

(c) Subject to the overall resources for the Programme, assistance in the form of a travel grant for one participant from each developing country, who would be invited to possible regional courses to be organized in 1994 and 1995; and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget, when appropriate, as well as from voluntary financial contributions earmarked for each of the activities concerned, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 14, 15, and 16 below;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his constructive efforts to promote training and assistance in international law within the framework of the Programme in 1992 and 1993, in particular for the organization of the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth sessions of the International Law Seminar, held at Geneva from 1 to 19 June 1992 and 1 to 18 June 1993, respectively, and for the activities of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat related to the fellowship programme in international law and to the

Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, carried out, respectively, through its Codification Division and its Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the possibility of admitting, for participation in the various components of the Programme of Assistance, candidates from countries willing to bear the entire cost of such participation;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to consider the relative advantages of using available resources and voluntary contributions for regional, subregional or national courses, as against courses organized within the United Nations system;

6. Welcomes, in particular, the publication, in a single volume and in all official languages of the Organization, of the Summaries of the Judgments, Advisory Opinions and Orders of the International Court of Justice (1948-1991), carried out through the joint efforts of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs and its secretariat for the Programme of Assistance and of the Registry of the International Court of Justice;

7. Invites interested States to consider the option of financing the translation and publication of the Judgments of the International Court of Justice;

8. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs to bring up to date the United Nations Treaty Series and the United Nations Juridical Yearbook;

9. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for its participation in the Programme through the activities described in the report of the Secretary-General;

10. Also expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for its participation in the Programme through the activities described in the report of the Secretary-General;

11. Further expresses its appreciation to the Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contributions it has made to the Programme by enabling selected candidates under the international law fellowship programme to attend its annual international law courses and by providing facilities for seminars organized under the fellowship programme in international law in conjunction with the Academy courses and for its constructive efforts in organizing the regional training and refresher course held at Harare in 1993;

12. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by the Hague Academy of International Law to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of and, if possible, an increase in their financial contributions in order to enable it to carry on with the above-mentioned activities, in particular the summer courses, regional courses and programmes of the Centre for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations;

13. Urges all States and relevant international organizations, whether regional or universal, to make all possible efforts to implement the goals and carry out the activities contemplated in section IV of the programme of activities for the second term (1993-1994) of the United Nations Decade of International Law, dealing with the encouragement of the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law and contained in the annex to its resolution 47/32;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

15. Reiterates its request to Member States and to interested organizations and individuals to make voluntary contributions, inter alia, for the International Law Seminar, for the fellowship programme in international law and for the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals which have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

16. Urges in particular all Governments to make voluntary contributions for the organization of regional refresher courses in international law by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, especially with a view to covering the amount needed for the financing of the daily subsistence allowance for up to twenty-five participants in each regional course, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible for the Institute to continue to organize the regional courses;

17. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fiftieth session on the implementation of the Programme during 1994 and 1995 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme in subsequent years;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fiftieth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law."

International economic law

In 1993, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by UNCITRAL and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

Report of UNCITRAL

At its twenty-sixth session (Vienna, 5-23 July 1993), UNCITRAL adopted the Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction, which it annexed to its report,⁽¹⁾ and a draft Guide to Enactment of the Model Law. The Commission also examined legal issues in electronic data interchange; guarantees and stand-by letters of credit; case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT); UNCITRAL's future programme of work; the coordination of work on trade law; the status of legal texts as at 13 July 1993;⁽²⁾ training and assistance; and relevant General Assembly resolutions. The Commission noted the publication of a bibliography⁽³⁾ of recent writings related to its work as well as the user guide for CLOUT—the system of collecting and disseminating information on court decisions and arbitral awards relating to conventions and model laws emanating from UNCITRAL's work—and the first CLOUT compilation of abstracts summarizing such decisions and awards.

As in previous years, UNCITRAL's annual report was forwarded to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) for comments.

Report of the Secretary-General. In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General submitted an August 1993 report⁽⁵⁾ on travel assistance to enable Commission members from least developed countries (LDCs) to attend meetings of UNCITRAL and its working groups, and on the feasibility of holding consecutive meetings of those working groups to lessen travel expenses. The Secretary-General drew attention to UNCITRAL's discussion on the rationalization of its work at its 1993 session. It was observed that the holding of consecutive working group meetings was impracticable and would not result in savings on travel costs since delegations were usually composed of different experts, according to the nature of the work assigned to each working group, and different members of the UNCITRAL secretariat were normally assigned to service each working group. It was also noted that, if working groups met consecutively, experts might be away from their duty stations for too long. The Secretary-General also observed that the expert representation of developing countries in the Commission's meetings and working groups remained very low. He said that barely one third of the Commission members from the developing world had been able to attend all working group meetings and he suggested that the General Assembly finalize consideration of the matter in 1993.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 September, the General Assembly, by decision 47/473, deferred consideration of granting travel assistance to LDCs and other developing countries that were members of UNCITRAL until its forty-eighth session. On 9 December, in resolution 48/32, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to establish a trust fund for the Commission to grant travel assistance to members from developing countries and decided to continue considering the question of granting travel assistance to members from LDCs at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General.

Unification of trade law

Procurement

In 1993, UNCITRAL considered the draft Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction, adopted by its Working Group on the New International Economic Order (NIEO) in 1992,⁽⁶⁾ as well as Secretariat notes containing pertinent comments by Governments,⁽⁷⁾ proposed amendments to the draft,⁽⁸⁾ and a draft Guide to Enactment of the Model Law.⁽⁹⁾

By a 16 July decision,⁽¹⁾ the Commission adopted the UNCITRAL Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction and annexed it to its 1993 report. UNCITRAL requested the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the Model Law, together with the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law, to Governments and other interested bodies. It recommended that all States give favourable consideration to the Model Law when enacting or revising their laws, in view of the need for improvements and uniformity in procurement laws and practice. The Commission further discussed and adopted the Guide to Enactment, subject to implementation of proposed changes.

UNCITRAL also considered a Secretariat note on the proposed elaboration of model statutory provisions on the procurement of services.⁽¹⁰⁾ It agreed that its Working Group on NIEO should proceed with their preparation and that they should be presented in a manner suitable both for States that had adopted the Model Law and for those considering simultaneous adoption of provisions for goods, construction and services.

At its sixteenth session (Vienna, 6-17 December),⁽¹⁾ the Working Group on NIEO considered the draft model legislative provisions on procurement of services and identified pertinent changes to the Model Law, including the addition of an article on special procedures for procurement of services. It decided to complete a final draft text at its March 1994 session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/33 without vote.

Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Noting that procurement constitutes a large portion of public expenditure of most States,

Noting also that a model law on procurement establishing procedures designed to foster integrity, confidence, fairness and transparency in the procurement process will also promote economy, efficiency and competition in procurement and thus lead to increased economic development,

Being of the opinion that the establishment of a model law on procurement that is acceptable to States with different legal, social and economic systems contributes to the development of harmonious international economic relations,

Being convinced that the Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law will significantly assist all States, including developing countries and States whose economies are in transition, in enhancing their existing procurement laws and formulating procurement laws where none presently exist,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the completion and adoption by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law of the Model Law on Procurement of Goods and Construction together with the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law;

2. Recommends that, in view of the desirability of improvement and uniformity of the laws of procurement, States give favourable consideration to the Model Law when they enact or revise their procurement laws;

3. Recommends also that all efforts be made to ensure that the Model Law together with the Guide become generally known and available.

Carriage of goods by sea

In July,⁽¹⁾ UNCITRAL noted that the liability regime of the 1978 United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea (Hamburg Rules),⁽²⁾ which entered into force on 1 November 1992, coexisted with liability regimes based on the 1924 International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to Bills of Lading (Hague Rules) and recommended promotion of the unification of regimes on the basis of the Hamburg Rules.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/34 without vote.

United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea, 1978 (Hamburg Rules)

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, would significantly contribute to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest, and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Recalling the entry into force, on 1 November 1992, of the United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea, 1978 (Hamburg Rules),

1. Invites all States to consider becoming parties to the United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea, 1978 (Hamburg Rules);

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to make increased efforts to promote wider adherence to the Convention.

Electronic data interchange

In July,⁽¹⁾ UNCITRAL had before it the report of the Working Group on Electronic Data Interchange on its twenty-fifth session (New York, 4-15 January).⁽²⁾ The Working Group discussed the legal aspects of electronic data interchange (EDI), including the scope and form of uniform rules on EDI, definitions and general provisions, form requirements, the obligations of parties, the formation of contracts, and liability and risk.

The Commission expressed hope that the Working Group would proceed expeditiously with the preparation of statutory provisions on EDI and decided that the Secretariat should continue to monitor pertinent legal developments in other organizations.

The Working Group continued its consideration of draft provisions for uniform rules on the legal aspects of EDI and related means of trade data communication at its twenty-sixth session (Vienna, 11-22 October).⁽¹⁴⁾

Guarantees and stand-by letters of credit

In July,⁽¹⁾ UNCITRAL considered the reports of its Working Group on International Contract Practices at its eighteenth (Vienna, 30 November-11 December 1992)⁽¹⁵⁾ and nineteenth (New York, 24 May-4 June 1993)⁽¹⁶⁾ sessions, at which it examined articles 1 to 8 and 9 to 17 of a draft Convention on International Guaranty Letters. UNCITRAL noted that the Working Group had requested the Secretariat to prepare a revised draft of articles 1 to 17 and had agreed to consider whether independent guarantees and stand-by letters of credit should be dealt with in separate parts of the Convention after determining which provisions were applicable exclusively to those issues. The Working Group was requested to complete its work before UNCITRAL's 1995 session.

At its twentieth session (Vienna, 22 November-3 December 1993),⁽¹⁷⁾ the Working Group examined articles 18 to 27 of the draft Convention and completed a final reading of articles 1 and 2(1).

Future programme of work

In July, UNCITRAL considered proposals for its possible future work,⁽¹⁸⁾ made at the UNCITRAL Congress on International Trade Law in 1992.⁽¹⁹⁾ Acting on those proposals, the Commission requested the Secretariat to prepare for its 1994 session draft guidelines for pre-hearing conferences on arbitral proceedings. The Secretariat was also asked to prepare feasibility studies on unification work in the field of assignment of claims and on harmonized rules to deal with cross-border insolvencies. UNCITRAL emphasized the relevance of the Build, Operate and Transfer (BOT) project financing concept to its work, and noted the Secretariat's efforts to monitor the preparation by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization of guidelines for the development, negotiation and contracting of BOT projects.

Coordination of work

In July, UNCITRAL had before it a report of the Secretary-General describing the activities of international organizations related to the harmonization and unification of international trade law.⁽²⁰⁾ Noting slow progress in the drafting of an international code of conduct on the transfer of technology (see PART THREE, Chapter VII), the Commission suggested cooperation with UNCTAD to expedite completion of that project. It was also suggested that UNCITRAL monitor UNCTAD's work on restrictive business practices (see PART THREE, Chapter IV), since the issues pertinent to that topic were of a legal rather than trade policy nature. The Commission noted with satisfaction its close cooperation with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee and the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law.

Training and assistance

UNCITRAL had before it, in July, a Secretariat note on training and technical assistance,⁽²¹⁾ describing seminars and symposia on international trade law that had taken place since the Commission's 1992 session. In addition to national seminars in eight countries, the Fifth UNCITRAL Symposium on International Trade Law was held in Vienna (12-16 July 1993). The UNCITRAL secretariat provided regional organizations with technical assistance to review the laws of member States with a view to their harmonization and unification and participated in a workshop on public procurement systems and consultations on international commercial arbitration (Singapore, 16 November) and a postgraduate course in international trade law (Turin, Italy, 10-11 May). It also participated in a number of conferences and meetings held by other organizations (see also above, under "UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law").

In considering the note, the Commission emphasized the need for contributions from States to the UNCITRAL Trust Fund for Symposia, to meet increasing demands for training and technical assistance, especially in developing countries and newly independent States. The need for increased cooperation and coordination with development assistance agencies, particularly those within the United Nations system was also noted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 48/32 without vote.

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-sixth session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would significantly contribute to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Stressing the value of participation by States at all levels of economic development and from different legal systems in the process of harmonizing and unifying international trade law,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-sixth session,

Mindful of the valuable contribution being rendered by the United Nations Commission within the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law,

Having considered also the report of the Secretary-General,

Concerned about the continuing relatively low incidence of expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and particularly of its working groups during recent years, due in part to inadequate resources to finance the travel of such experts,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-sixth session;

2. Welcomes the ongoing work of the Commission and appreciates the many proposals on possible future work made during the Congress on International Trade Law of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, held in New York from 18 to 22 May 1992, and, in this connection:

(a) Welcomes the decision of the Commission to request its secretariat to commence work in preparation of guidelines for pre-hearing conferences in arbitral proceedings;

(b) Also welcomes the decision of the Commission to continue considering the other proposals made during the Congress as part of its future programme of work;

3. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field in order to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law and, in this connection recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, continue to maintain close cooperation with the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

4. Also reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and assistance in the field of international trade law and the desirability of seminars and symposia sponsored by the Commission to provide such training and assistance, and in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing seminars at Bangkok; Jakarta; Lahore, Pakistan; Colombo; Dhaka; Kiev; Warsaw; and Rogaska

Slatina, Slovenia, and for assisting the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council with its initiative to promote harmonization of international trade law in the Asia-Pacific region, and to the Governments whose contributions enabled the seminars to take place;

(b) Urges Governments, the relevant United Nations organs, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries, and in the award of fellowships to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such seminars and symposia;

(c) Appeals to the United Nations Development Programme and other United Nations bodies responsible for development assistance to support the training and technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to establish a separate trust fund for the Commission to grant travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

6. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue its consideration in the competent Main Committee during the forty-eighth session of the General Assembly on granting travel assistance, within existing resources, to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

7. Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing the Fifth Symposium on International Trade Law of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law at Vienna from 12 to 16 July 1993 during its twenty-sixth session;

8. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end invites States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to these conventions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of paragraphs 5 and 6 above to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session.

General Assembly resolution 48/32

9 December 1993 Meeting 73 Adopted without vote

Legal aspects of the new international economic order

In a July report,⁽²²⁾ the Secretary-General submitted the views and comments of three Member States and four international organizations on the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order to be given priority attention by the Working Group established by the General Assembly in 1991⁽²³⁾ to consider the issue. UNITAR had issued a study on the codification and progressive development of such principles and norms.⁽²⁴⁾

On 23 November,⁽²⁵⁾ the Sixth Committee was informed that the Working Group had considered the Secretary-General's report at its 17 November meeting and proposed that consideration of the item be deferred so that Governments and international organizations could reflect on a new document, possibly based on a re-examination of the UNITAR study. The Working Group had agreed that, if the item could be reformulated to address the principles of international economic relations in the context of international economic cooperation and development, it might be possible to retain it on the Assembly's agenda.

On 9 December, the General Assembly decided to resume consideration of the legal aspects of international economic relations at its fifty-first (1996) session and to include the item on progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order in the provisional agenda of that session (decision 48/412).

PART FIVE

Administrative and budgetary questions

Chapter I

United Nations financing and programming

In 1993, the United Nations continued to operate under difficult financial conditions brought about by the non-payment of assessed contributions by a number of Member States. The problem was exacerbated by the rapid increase of peace-keeping activities throughout the world.

The General Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to cover costs for peace-keeping operations from the support account, in an amount not to exceed $16,376,250 for the period 1 January to 30 June 1994 (resolution 48/226).

The Assembly approved appropriations for 1994-1995 totalling $2.6 billion. Appropriations for 1994 alone were $1.2 billion. Income estimates for the biennium amounted to $477 million (48/231 A-C).

On the basis of recommendations of the Committee on Contributions, the Assembly determined the assessed contributions of six new Member States. It requested the Committee to take certain criteria into account when determining the scale of assessments for 1995-1997, and requested it to review thoroughly all aspects of the scale methodology (48/223 A-C).

The Assembly accepted the financial reports and audited financial statements for the year ended 31 December 1992 of funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, and approved the recommendations of the Board of Auditors. It urged a number of United Nations bodies to implement the Board's 1992 recommendations and again requested them to report on their implementation. The Assembly took note of the United Nations system accounting standards, adopted by the Administrative Committee on Coordination, and invited the Board of Auditors to report on the implications of a possible extension of the term of office of Board members from three to four or six years (48/216 A-D).

UN financingFinancial situation

The precarious financial plight of the United Nations, brought on by the non-payment of dues

by a number of Member States, was the subject of several reports of the Secretary-General in 1993. They restated earlier warnings that, unless timely and adequate payments were made by Member States, the financial outlook was bleak. The United Nations regular budget had ended the year 1992 with cash depletion, and had depended on borrowing from other funds and on advance payments of 1993 assessments to provide a small cash balance. A number of peace-keeping missions had experienced shortfalls in collections, forcing them to borrow from the newly established Peace-keeping Reserve Fund, although that was not the Fund's primary purpose, the Secretary General reported in June 1993(1) in response to a 1992 General Assembly resolution.(2) His report gave a broad financial picture of the Organization at the end of May 1993 and projected results for the rest of the year if the trends continued.

By 31 May, only 10 Member States had paid their peace-keeping dues in full and only 8 of them had also paid their regular budget assessments in full. At that time, unpaid contributions totalled $2,235.7 million, almost two thirds of which was owed by permanent Security Council members.

At the end of 1992, unpaid dues to the regular budget were $500.4 million, $61 million over the unpaid balance a year earlier. In January 1993, following adoption in December 1992 of the revised appropriations for 1992-1993,(3) $1,070 million was assessed for the regular budget. Unpaid contributions totalled $938.7 million, of which $366.2 million was outstanding for 1992 and prior years and $572.5 million related to 1993. The balance due was equivalent to 88 per cent of the regular budget assessment for 1993. At the end of May, 47 Member States had fully paid their regular budget assessments for 1993 and prior years.

The cash-flow situation of peace-keeping operations continued to be one of the most serious problems confronting the Organization. Unpaid dues to peace-keeping missions were $1,297 million as at 31 May 1993—double the amount in September 1992.

Ten peace-keeping operations were funded from assessed contributions: United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), United Nations Angola Verification Mission (UNAVEM/UNAVEM II), United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission (UNIKOM),

United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO), United Nations Observer Mission in El Salvador (ONUSAL), United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR), United Nations Operation in Somalia (UNOSOM) and United Nations Operation in Mozambique (ONUMOZ). Two completed peace-keeping operations—United Nations Advance Mission in Cambodia (UNAMIC) and United Nations Observer Group in Central America (ONUCA)—had contributions outstanding; those balances had been consolidated into UNTAC and ONUSAL. For two other completed missions—United Nations Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group (UNIIMOG) and United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG)—accounts were still open and outstanding contributions being sought. The United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP), financed from voluntary contributions since its inception in 1964,(4) was to be financed in part from assessments as from 15 June 1993 according to Security Council resolution 831(1993).

Non-payments caused several missions to experience severe cash shortages, with UNIFIL, UNPROFOR, UNTAC, UNAVEM, ONUSAL and UNIKOM being the most affected. In response to their needs, temporary advances were made from the Peace-keeping Reserve Fund (see below). The lending capacity of the Fund being exhausted at one point in 1993, UNTAC had to borrow from the regular budget; this loan was repaid as soon as contributions to UNTAC permitted. The regular budget had lent $17.3 million to the operations by mid-year: $15.3 million to UNAVEM and $2 million to ONUSAL.

One of the consequences of the Organization's recurrent cash-flow problems was the delay in payments to countries which contributed troops and equipment to various missions. Based on troop-strength reports for the period ending 30 April 1993, the United Nations owed them about $284.3 million: $101.4 million in respect of UNIFIL; $118.8 million for UNPROFOR; and $64.1 million for UNTAC.

With large amounts of dues unpaid as at 31 May and in view of the uncertainties about the scope and scale of peace-keeping activities, it was difficult to make cash projections for the rest of the year. At the end of May, usable cash balances on hand, including the Peace-keeping Reserve Fund, were about $725 million, of which $550 million was linked to peace-keeping and $175 million to the regular budget. According to projections, the regular budget would receive between $400 million and $450 million in the remaining seven months. With expenditures for that time projected at $650 million to $700 million within the approved regular budget, it appeared that the regular budget would fall short of cash by the end of 1993.

The Secretary-General therefore urged Member States to improve their payment pattern to cover the shortfalls; otherwise, the regular budget would have to borrow from other funds at the beginning of August and continue to do so thereafter. Severe cash difficulties were also expected for most, if not all, of the newer and larger peace-keeping operations by the end of the year. If the operations continued at projected levels, expenditures for the rest of the year might exceed $1,600 million, notably for UNOSOM and UNPROFOR. With payments projected to fall far below that sum, the resulting negative cash flow would raise the financial crisis of the United Nations to unprecedented levels.

In October,(5) the Secretary-General submitted a report containing an analysis of the Organization's financial situation, according to which there was no change in the pattern of payments and a slightly improved, though still below average, collection pattern as at 30 September. With three months left in 1993, unpaid dues to the regular budget were $783.8 million, of which $304.2 million was due for 1992 and prior years and $479.6 million related to 1993. The total amount outstanding was the equivalent of 72 per cent of the 1993 regular budget assessment.

With the recent increase in United Nations membership, a larger number of Member States were assessed in 1993. Eighteen Members—Australia, Botswana, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Iceland, Ireland, Kuwait, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Micronesia, Namibia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Singapore and Sweden—paid their 1993 assessments in full within 30 days. By 30 September, only 62 Members had paid in full, while an unprecedented 116 still had outstanding contributions. Fifty-nine Members had made no contribution at all in 1993, a much larger number than before.

Assessments levied for peace-keeping missions since September 1992 were two-and-one-half times the 1993 assessment for the regular budget. The unpaid balance also doubled, with $1,502.4 million outstanding for peace-keeping as at 30 September 1993. Outstanding assessments to the regular budget and peace-keeping combined were $2,286.2 million. A factor contributing to the magnitude of unpaid dues was that assessments for eight operations, totalling $708.4 million, were issued only in September 1993.

Contributions received during the first two weeks of October totalled $593.7 million, of which $235.8 million was for the regular budget and $357.9 million for peace-keeping. As at 14 October, the amount unpaid was $1,692.5 million: $548 million for the regular budget and $1,144.5 million for peace-keeping.

The cash flow of the Organization remained critical, the Secretary-General noted. After cash balances declined further in July and August, certain Member States made larger than expected payments in September. In 1993, cash was depleted in January and again in August/September. Borrowing from peace-keeping funds had been required for a total of 46 days during those months, with a maximum of $15 million. Cash balances were minimal in March and September and were expected to be so again in December. During only four months of the year was there enough cash on hand to meet the requirements of the next month in full.

With the collection of peace-keeping contributions falling far short of requirements, cash management was dominated by the need to maintain sufficient funds on hand for immediate operational requirements. As a result, payments to troop-contributing countries were inevitably delayed. However, even after delaying such payments, not every peace-keeping operation was fully solvent throughout the year. Five operations—UNAVEM, ONUSAL, UNIKOM, UNTAC and UNPROFOR—had to borrow funds at one time or another. As at 30 September, $80.7 million was owed by UNAVEM, ONUSAL and UNTAC to the Peace-keeping Reserve Fund, UNTAG and UNIMOG.

The Secretary-General reported an increasing trend in recent months, whereby he was authorized to incur peace-keeping costs without a corresponding authority to assess Member States; the result put an increased strain on the Organization's reserves and rendered its financial situation even more difficult.

According to the Secretary-General, the financial reserves at the disposal of the Organization amounted to $672.6 million, consisting mainly of the Working Capital Fund, the Special Account and the Peace-keeping Reserve Fund. Unpaid assessments of over $2,200 million as at 30 September far surpassed available reserves. Together, the Working Capital Fund, at a level of $100 million unchanged since 1982, and the Peace-keeping Reserve Fund, set at $150 million (see below), provided a funding equivalent of 4.3 per cent of combined regular budget and peace-keeping appropriations, which corresponded to just over two weeks of expenditures.

The low level of available reserves and the delays in the assessment and collection of contributions from Member States for peace-keeping operations resulted in certain operations being unable to meet their obligations. As at 30 September, the United Nations owed troop-contributing States some $605 million, considerably more than in previous years.

Concluding, the Secretary-General remarked that the financial situation, which might have a crippling effect on the Organization's capacity to continue its operations, had caused him to intervene personally at high levels to seek timely payments from Member States. He also addressed the General Assembly, warning of the dire consequences of the Organization's running out of money. The volume and complexity of United Nations operations, in respect of both the regular budget and peace-keeping, were so great that there were few if any contingency measures that could be taken to substitute for the single operational imperative of United Nations financing, namely, that Member States paid their assessed contributions in full and on time.

According to an addendum issued in November,⁽⁶⁾ outstanding contributions to the regular budget and peace-keeping totalled $1,574.8 million as at 31 October 1993.

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly an April report on financing an effective United Nations,⁽⁷⁾ prepared by an Independent Advisory Group on United Nations Financing, under the co-chairmanship of Shijuro Ogata and Paul Volcker and sponsored by the Ford Foundation. Among the report's recommendations for alleviating the financial condition of the Organization were: requiring Member States to pay dues in four quarterly instalments; charging interest on dues not paid on time; not authorizing the Organization to borrow commercially; stopping the borrowing of funds from peace-keeping accounts to cover regular budget costs, after a reliable means to pay its bills was set up; and increasing the Working Capital Fund from $100 million to $200 million. The Group proposed that the regular budget assessment scale be based on a 3- rather than a 10-year average of Member States' gross domestic product (GDP). It recommended that the United Nations create a revolving reserve fund for peace-keeping set at $400 million and consider the merits of a unified peace-keeping budget, financed from a single annual assessment, and that the Secretary-General be permitted to obligate up to 20 per cent of the estimated cost of a peace-keeping mission once it was approved by the Security Council.

In a November report,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General addressed broad policy issues concerning the question of establishing a secure financial base for the Organization in order for it to fulfil its responsibilities effectively and in a timely fashion. He also responded in detail to the recommendations of the Independent Advisory Group, which, he said, merited thorough review by the Assembly.

With regard to the recommendation to divide United Nations expenditures into three categories—with the regular budget financed by assessed contributions, peace-keeping by a separate assessment, and humanitarian and development activities financed largely by voluntary contributions—the Secretary-General agreed that the categorization of current expenditures under those three headings remained broadly valid. At the same time, he noted that the regular budget included resource provisions which partially covered the cost of back-stopping for peace-keeping operations, and that one such operation—UNFICYP—was currently assessed for a cost that exceeded the voluntary contributions received. Also, support-cost income emanating from peace-keeping and voluntary contributions was funding a number of programme support posts and activities. On the financing of peace-keeping operations by separate assessment, he noted that the Assembly since 1973 had authorized an ad hoc scale which recognized the special responsibilities of the permanent members of the Security Council.⁽⁹⁾ Concerning humanitarian activities, the Secretary-General stated that in recent years, while not moving away completely from the position that they should be financed through voluntary contributions, Member States had included some amounts related to those activities in peace-keeping operations' budgets, UNOSOM being the first of them. In accordance with a 1991 Assembly resolution,⁽¹⁰⁾ a Central Emergency Revolving Fund, financed by voluntary contributions, was established. As at 30 September 1993, 27 countries and one non-governmental organization had contributed $48.8 million to the Fund, while seven United Nations organizations had obtained advances from it in the amount of $52.7 million. Some $22.4 million had been reimbursed to the Fund, leaving a cash balance of $19.5 million.

The Secretary-General expressed full support for the recommendations that the consensus procedure for approving the regular budget should be continued and that all countries must pay their assessed dues on time and in full. With regard to possible quarterly payment by Member States, instead of an annual lump sum, he said it was feasible only if adopted as part of other changes agreed to by Member States that would ensure that the Organization had adequate cash reserves at all times; if adopted in isolation, that recommendation was not likely to improve cash flow, but could result in collection of less money at the beginning of the year.

Concerning the charging of interest on late payments and depositing such interest income in the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General recalled that he had made similar proposals in the past. The recommendation that countries that appropriated their United Nations contribution late in the year should do so earlier would help improve the Organization's financial situation, the Secretary-General said. He also agreed with the recommendations that the United Nations should stop borrowing from peace-keeping accounts to cover regular budget expenditures, once a reliable way to pay its bills was established, and that the level of the Working Capital Fund should be raised from $100 million to $200 million; in his view, the Fund should be set at $300 million in 1994, representing 25 per cent of the annual regular budget. He considered generally useful the recommendation that the United Nations should deposit budgetary surpluses owed to Member States with regular budget arrears into the Working Capital Fund, but added that a further analysis of its implications would be necessary.

As to the recommendation that he not be given authority to borrow commercially, the Secretary-General maintained his position that he should be allowed to do so, but only when no funds were available under any of the assessed activities. If the proposal were approved, any interest on commercial loans to be paid by the United Nations could be matched by the interest charged to those Member States that did not pay their contribution in full and on time, making such borrowing necessary. The recommendation to base the regular budget assessment rate on a 3-year rather than 10-year average of Member States' GDP should be referred to the Committee on Contributions.

The Secretary-General noted that the recommendations that the international community should accept significantly increased peace-keeping costs and that Governments should consider financing those costs from their national defence budgets were addressed to Member States. He supported the recommendation that a much larger revolving fund, set at $400 million, should be established, as well as the recommendations for a unified peace-keeping budget, financed by a single annual assessment, and for a regular appropriation for peace-keeping training. He concurred with the thrust of the recommendation that he should be permitted to obligate up to 20 per cent of the initial estimated cost of a peace-keeping operation once it was approved by the Security Council; in his view, however, he should be permitted to obligate up to one third of the initial estimated cost, which amount should be assessed on Member States. Regarding the recommendation that all Member States with above average per capita incomes, except for the permanent Security Council members, be included in the B group of developed nations, which paid the same rate of assessment for peace-keeping and the regular budget, he stated that such placement rested with the Assembly.

He would draw the attention of the concerned agencies and programmes to the recommendation that all United Nations programmes funded by voluntary contributions should have their administrative expenditures financed by assessed contributions and that the voluntarily funded agencies should seek a larger portion of their funding from multi-year, negotiated pledges.

Concerning additional financing through non-governmental sources, which the Group regarded as neither practical nor desirable, the Secretary-General remarked that he did not see any inconsistency in attempting to raise funds from such sources through the trust fund mechanism, as long as the activities to be financed were consistent with the Organization's objectives and mandates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/220 on 23 December without vote.

Improving the financial situation of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 47/215 of 23 December 1992,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the relevant recommendations contained in his report A/48/565 and Corr.1,

Recognizing the need for a continuing dialogue at the intergovernmental level to analyse possible solutions for the improvement of the financial situation of the Organization,

1. Reaffirms the obligation of Member States to pay assessed contributions promptly and in full;
2. Recognizes that non-payment of assessed contributions in full and on time has damaged and continues to damage the ability of the Organization to implement its activities effectively;
3. Decides to continue consideration of this item and, inter alia, the above-mentioned reports, at its resumed forty-eighth session.

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/756) without vote, 11 December (meeting 37); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/48/L.9); agenda item 124.

Financing of peace-keeping operations

Following consideration of 1992 reports by the Secretary-General on several peace-keeping operations, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), at its special 1993 summer session (New York, 3 May-29 June), made a number of general observations and recommendations.⁽¹⁾ It believed that the presentation of the reports needed to be improved and that the time had come for a different type of report providing for more evaluation and analysis in terms of major expenditure items. Performance reports should contain the proposed and actual staffing tables, indicating the numbers of troops, military observers, police monitors, international contractual personnel and proposed deployment schedules, as well as related savings and over-expenditures. Proposals for new posts should be well justified, as should requests for all additional requirements, with clear rationales for establishing posts at the Assistant Secretary-General (ASG) and Under-Secretary-General (USG) levels. The Committee pointed to the need to limit the volume of documentation, revamp reports and make them more concise, with less narrative, but more tables and graphics, substantiating financial performance and estimates, and with an improved presentation of voluntary contributions and a clear definition of the role of assessed budgets and requirements for humanitarian and development activities, specifying short- and long-term needs.

To help reduce peace-keeping costs, ACABQ reiterated its recommendation that the Secretary-General should request Member States to provide additional civilian personnel for non-core functions. It requested a review of entitlements of mission personnel and suggested a number of cost-saving measures. It called for urgent measures to enhance cost-effectiveness and efficiency of procurement procedures. It saw a need for standard guidelines for financial arrangements and for the disposition of assets following liquidation of an operation. It called for strengthening the internal audit function both in the mission area and at Headquarters and for timely submission of reports. The procedure for requesting commitment authority also needed to be addressed.

In view of the lack of a clear response to a number of its observations and recommendations, ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General submit a comprehensive report on all issues affecting the successful operation and administration of peace-keeping missions, together with proposals to enhance cost-effectiveness and efficiency and recommendations regarding non-payment or late payment of contributions. It requested him also to make recommendations regarding possible 12-month financial periods and a standardization of performance periods to help simplify the task of the budgetary organs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (September)

On 14 September 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 47/218 B without vote.

Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the role of the General Assembly in accordance with Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, as well as the introductory statement by its Chairman, on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations,

1. Decides that the administrative, budgetary and management aspects of the financing of the peace-keeping operations shall be reviewed urgently and thoroughly with a view to improving the efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the peace-keeping operations, as well as to providing enhanced budgetary control by Member States;

2. Endorses the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session on all issues which affect the successful operation and administration of the peace-keeping operations, including steps taken to comply with the report of the Advisory Committee and taking into account the views expressed by Member States during the resumed forty-seventh session of the Assembly;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General, in this context, to provide an overview of the administrative guidelines applicable to the management of peace-keeping operations;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General, in this connection, to report to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session on arrangements relating to the reimbursement to troop-contributing countries for death, injury, disability and illness resulting from service in the peace-keeping operations, as well as to submit recommendations on arrangements for standardization of compensation, including direct payment to the beneficiaries.

General Assembly resolution 47/218 B

14 September 1993 Meeting 110 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/47/832/Add.1) without vote, 3 September (meeting 74); draft by Netherlands (A/C.5/47/L.46); agenda item 124. Meeting numbers: GA 47th session: 5th Committee 4-10, 34, 42, 45, 50, 52, 68, 69, 70, 72, 74; plenary 110.

Report of the Secretary-General. Pending a full review by the Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session of separate reports on the financing of peace-keeping operations, the Secretary-General presented in December 1993 a consolidated report on the following operations, requesting financial authority for maintaining them until 30 April 1994: UNDOF, UNIFIL, UNAVEM II, UNIKOM, MINURSO, ONUSAL, UNTAC, UNPROFOR, UNOSOM II, ONUMOZ, UNFICYP, United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, United Nations Observer Mission Uganda-Rwanda (UNOMUR), United Nations Mission in Haiti, United Nations Observer Mission in Liberia, United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda and United Nations Military Liaison Team in Cambodia.⁽¹²⁾

ACABQ report. In December,⁽¹³⁾ ACABQ noted that its comments with regard to each operation were contained in separate reports. In its understanding, the Secretary-General's report represented a consolidation for ease of reference only and did not imply an attempt to submit a consolidated budget for peace-keeping operations. It expressed regret at the late submission of documentation and believed that all reports on peacekeeping should be submitted in a more timely manner. ACABQ therefore requested the Secretary-General to take corrective measures to prevent a recurrence of such a situation and to submit all outstanding reports by 15 January 1994.

The Committee pointed out that in a number of instances its recommendations on certain operations were only up to 31 March rather than 30 April and were for commitment authority rather than appropriation in view of the fact that the relevant budgets had not been considered and approved. In a number of cases, the amount recommended for assessment was less than that recommended for commitment in view of available cash balances or the unencumbered balances of appropriations. Also, the amounts recommended in future would take into account performance during the initial months.

ACABQ stressed that its agreement to consider the Secretary-General's report and make recommendations derived solely from the need to provide for continuation of the operations in question and should not be viewed as a precedent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 23 December 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/227 without vote.

Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the financing of seventeen peace-keeping operations—United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, United Nations Angola Verification Mission, United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission, United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara, United Nations Observer Mission in El Salvador, United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia, United Nations Protection Force, United Nations Operation in Somalia II, United Nations Operation in Mozambique, United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus, United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, United Nations Observer Mission Uganda-Rwanda, United Nations Mission in Haiti, United Nations Observer Mission in Liberia, United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda, and United Nations Military Liaison Team in Cambodia—as well as the report of the Advisory Committee on the question under consideration,

Recalling the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, which, inter alia, addressed the timely submission of reports to the General Assembly,

Expressing its concern that the Secretariat has until now not given the desirable level of attention to the views of the General Assembly in this matter,

Mindful of the fact that peace-keeping requires a reliable and assured funding base for the success of operations and that troop contributors need to be reimbursed on a more regular basis, and that the continuation of irregular budgetary practices may further complicate this situation,

1. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Notes with concern that the approach based on the compilation of the abbreviated statements of requirements of peace-keeping operations in a series of separate subsections in the report of the Secretary-General does not allow for proper budgetary scrutiny by the General Assembly;

3. Notes that such a compilation of the requirements of the operations represents an exceptional measure in order to expedite the approval of resources necessary for the maintenance of the operations and does not constitute a precedent for the future;

4. Decides, therefore, that peace-keeping submissions will continue to be considered on an individual basis until such time as the General Assembly decides otherwise;

5. Expresses regret at the worsening trend of the late submission of full cost estimates for the peace-keeping operations despite the deadlines set for the submission of such cost estimates by the General Assembly and assurances by the Secretariat, and notes that none of the cost estimates has been submitted on time at the current session;

6. Reaffirms its concern expressed in its resolutions 47/41 C, 47/208 B and 47/210 B of 14 September 1993 about the delays in the submission of budget documents until well into the financing period of the peace-keeping operations, which have contributed to the financial difficulties of the operations;

7. Takes note of the reasons advanced by the Secretary-General for the delays in submission, in paragraphs 1 and 2 of his report, and considers that the circumstances related to the regular budget are not related to the timely submission of the cost estimates for peace-keeping operations;

8. Expresses its concern about the apparent lack of adequate financial planning relating to peace-keeping;

9. Emphasizes that the General Assembly can appropriate resources only on the basis of a detailed consideration and approval of the cost estimates submitted to it by the Secretary-General;

10. Expresses its concern also about the insufficient provisions for external audit, and reiterates its request to the Board of Auditors to review its need for resources to perform its functions adequately;

11. Decides to consider, on an exceptional basis, the report of the Secretary-General and to take action thereon solely in order to provide for the continuation of the operations in question, without it constituting a precedent, on the understanding that the measures under paragraphs 13 to 15 below will be duly implemented;

12. Decides also to take action on each operation within the framework of the present resolution in a separate decision at its current session;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to take prompt and definitive corrective measures to prevent the recurrence of delays in the submission of full cost estimates and to report to the General Assembly at its current session, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on the implementation of those measures;

14. Decides further that all performance and financial reports shall be submitted by 31 January 1994 to Member States, notwithstanding paragraph 10 of resolution 47/41 C, paragraph 10 of resolution 47/208 B, paragraph 15 of resolution 47/234 of 14 September 1993 and paragraph 7 of resolution 47/224 C of 14 September 1993, so that the Assembly will be able to consider appropriating the required resources no later than 31 March 1994 for each operation, well in advance of the commencement of its financial period;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to improve the presentation and type of information contained in performance and financial reports, in accordance with recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report;

16. Decides to review the matter at its resumed forty-eighth session.

General Assembly resolution 48/227

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/807) without vote, 22 December (meeting 46); draft by Japan (A/C.5/48/L.14), orally revised; agenda item 138 (a); Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 42, 44, 45, 46; plenary 87.

Apportionment of costs

In 1993, the General Assembly again considered the question of placement of Member States into the groups for the apportionment of peace-keeping expenses. First specified in 1973⁽⁶⁾ and again in March 1989,⁽¹⁴⁾ the groups were subsequently adjusted by the Assembly in December 1989⁽¹⁵⁾ and in 1991.⁽¹⁶⁾ The original four groups consisted of (1) permanent members of the Security Council; (2) specifically named economically developed Member States not permanent members of the Council; (3) economically less developed Member States; and (4) economically less developed Member States that were specifically named.

By decision 47/472 of 14 September 1993, the General Assembly deferred to its forty-eighth session further consideration of the issue of placing Member States into groups. On 24 September, it decided to include the item under administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations and to consider the relocation of Belarus and Ukraine from the group of economically developed to less developed Member States. Member States which joined the Organization in 1993 also had to be assigned to the appropriate group.

Belarus and Ukraine requested that they be moved in communications dated 12 August⁽¹⁷⁾ and 16 August,⁽¹⁸⁾ respectively, citing economic hardship since the breakup of the Soviet Union. By a letter of 18 October,⁽¹⁹⁾ Madagascar requested that it be reclassified under the fourth group instead of the third.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly adopted decision 48/472 without vote.

Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations

At its 87th plenary meeting, on 23 December 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided:

(a) To continue during its current session the mandate of the open-ended working group of the Fifth Committee established pursuant to Assembly resolution 47/218 of 23 December 1992;

(b) As an ad hoc arrangement, in respect of the apportionment of peace-keeping expenses, that:

(i) Andorra and Monaco should be included in the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (b) of Assembly resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989, and that their contributions to the financing of peace-keeping operations should be calculated in accordance with the relevant resolution to be adopted by the Assembly regarding the scale of assessments;

(ii) The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia should be included in the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (c) of resolution 43/232, and that its contributions to the financing of peace-keeping operations should be calculated in accordance with the relevant resolution to be adopted by the Assembly regarding the scale of assessments;

(iii) Eritrea and Madagascar should be included in the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (d) of resolution 43/232, and that their contributions to the financing of peace-keeping operations should be calculated in accordance with the relevant resolution to be adopted by the Assembly regarding the scale of assessments;

(c) To consider and decide during its current session the placement of the Czech Republic and Slovakia in the appropriate group as set out in resolution 43/232 for the apportionment of peace-keeping expenses;

(d) To consider, as an exceptional measure, any arrears of Belarus and Ukraine arisen in 1992 and 1993 and for 1994 in the financing of peace-keeping operations as being due to conditions beyond their control, and, accordingly, that the question of the applicability of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations related to the loss of voting rights in the General Assembly in this respect would not arise.

General Assembly decision 48/472

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/807/Add.1) without vote, 21 December (meeting 45); draft by Rapporteur (A/C.5/48/L.12), based on informal consultations; agenda item 138 (b).

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 27, 28, 45; plenary 87.

Support account for peace-keeping operations

In an October 1993 report,⁽²⁰⁾ the Secretary-General discussed the support account for peace-keeping operations, established in 1990 and financed through the inclusion in the respective budgets of an amount equalling 8.5 per cent—a rate derived from the aggregate standard cost of the then existing overload posts—of the cost of the mission's civilian staff component. Introduction of the provision based on a percentage rate eliminated the disproportionate distribution of the costs for overload posts among peace-keeping operations. The account was intended to meet the needs at Headquarters for the support of ongoing missions, as well as some of the additional workload associated with the pre-implementation phase of prospective ones. As at 1 May 1993, there were 194 posts financed from the support account, of which 91 were at the Professional levels and above and 103 in the General Service category. The equivalent of 50 additional posts (15 Professional and 35 General Service) was provided under general temporary assistance.

The report addressed the feasibility of annualized budget estimates for supporting peace-keeping operations, as well as the methodology for distributing support costs and for their funding, and set forth resource requirements for 1993 and 1994. In view of the transparency of the existing arrangements, the Secretary-General suggested that the current methodology be maintained subject to certain refinements and adjustments, such as the introduction of an annualized budget estimate.

For the remainder of 1993, the Secretary-General sought approval for an additional 199—93 Professional and 106 General Service—posts, 72 of which were authorized by ACABQ. The total cost of the 393 positions in 1994 was estimated at $29.9 million.

For 1993, total projected expenditure under the support account amounted to some $24.5 million, against recorded income of $22.7 million, including an unencumbered 1992 balance of some $2.9 million. Additional estimated income of $4.7 million was projected for 1993. Expenditure for 1994 was estimated at $35.4 million, including an anticipated credit of some $450,000 for relocation and renovation cost, reimbursed to the account from the regular budget.

ACABQ, in December 1993,⁽²¹⁾ recommended authorization of $16,376,250 to cover costs borne by the account for the six months from 1 January to June 1994. That amount included provisions for general temporary assistance, overtime, travel and common services, in addition to the cost of the 194 posts approved prior to May 1993 and the 148 posts recommended by ACABQ (instead of the 199 proposed), pending submission of another report by the Secretary-General in early 1994.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/226 without vote.

Support account for peace-keeping operations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/258 of 3 May 1991 and 47/218 A of 23 December 1992,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the support account for peace-keeping operations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming the need to continue to improve the administrative and financial management of peace-keeping operations,

1. Endorses, on a provisional basis, the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions relating to the funding from the support account of the posts in the Department of Peace-keeping Operations, the Field Operations Division, the Internal Audit Division and, within the Department of Administration and Management, the Peace-keeping Financing Division and the Purchase and Transportation Service (excluding the six General Service posts proposed), subject to the policy decisions to be taken during the current session of the General Assembly after consideration of the report of the Secretary-General requested in paragraph 6 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments to cover costs borne by the support account in an amount not to exceed 16,376,250 United States dollars for the period from 1 January to 30 June 1994, as recommended by the Advisory Committee in paragraph 34 of its report;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session in accordance with the recommendations contained in paragraph 6 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session the item entitled "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations".

General Assembly resolution 48/226

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/807) without vote, 21 December (meeting 45); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/48/L.32); agenda item 138 (a). Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 42, 44, 45; plenary 87.

Peace-keeping Reserve Fund

On 1 January 1993, a Peace-keeping Reserve Fund was set up under the authority of the Secretary-General, in accordance with a 1992 General Assembly decision,⁽²²⁾ as a cash-flow mechanism to ensure the Organization's rapid response to the needs for peace-keeping operations. The level of the Fund was set at $150 million.

In February 1993,⁽²³⁾ the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of the establishment of the Fund and that an initial sum of $59 million—$42 million from the special account of UNTAG and $17 million from UNIMOG—had been transferred to it. The remaining $91 million was to be financed from the amount retained under a 1987 Assembly resolution on the Organization's financial emergency, under which the provisions of certain financial regulations were suspended in respect of surpluses.⁽²⁴⁾

A total of $32.9 million had been loaned from the Fund to peace-keeping missions that had temporary cash shortages: $15.9 million to UNAVEM, $12 million to UNIKOM and $5 million to ONUSAL, leaving an available balance of $16.6 million.

In November 1993,⁽²⁵⁾ the Secretary-General reported that $47 million had been transferred to the Fund from the account of UNTAG and $17.2 million from that of UNIMOG upon their closure on 31 December 1992. The Fund also received a voluntary contribution of $400,000 from Switzerland and interest income of another $400,000. The balance of $85.5 million required for full funding was to be derived from the payment of arrears to the regular budget. Most of the $64.2 million transferred to the Fund between 1 January and 31 October had been used to meet the cash-flow needs of existing missions rather than for the start-up of new ones. In addition to ONUSAL, UNAVEM and UNIKOM, a loan was made to UNTAC which also experienced cash depletion, and some $0.1 million was loaned to UNOMUR for start-up costs. As at 31 October 1993, the balance in the Fund was $269,634, a balance which, the Secretary-General said, was hardly sufficient to meet needs; even if the Fund were fully funded to its established level of $150 million, it would not be sufficient to meet peace-keeping expenses for one month, which totalled some $215 million. In that context, the Secretary-General pointed to his support for the recommendation of the Independent Advisory Group on United Nations Financing (see above) that a much larger revolving fund be established at the level of $400 million.

By decision 48/459 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the report to its resumed forty-eighth session.

Efficiency review

Programme planning

In a July 1993 report,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General outlined a possible new approach to programme planning, presenting a modified planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation cycle, on the basis of recommendations by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) and ACABQ.⁽²⁾ In 1992, CPC had recommended that in 1993 a prototype of a possible new format of the medium-term plan be presented, which would address in particular issues concerning the manageability of the drafting and revision process, including the questions of preparation and submission of documentation and the review of programme planning documents by subsidiary intergovernmental machinery. CPC's recommendations were endorsed by the General Assembly,⁽³⁾ which also reaffirmed the medium-term plan as the principal policy directive of the United Nations, serving as a framework for the formulation of the biennial programme budgets.

The Secretary-General's report reflected the outcome of an ad hoc technical seminar of 23 experts (Mohonk, New York, 22-28 April 1993), all of whom were either current or past members of CPC and ACABQ, including the Chairmen. In its review of the medium-term plan, the seminar identified the following shortcomings: the plan tended to be a bottom-up aggregation of sectoral plans and strategies, rather than providing through a substantive introduction an overarching statement of purpose and direction for the Organization in a specific time-frame; little priority was given to formulation of the plan by programme managers or many Member States and, once adopted, the plan was little used or had little real impact; the link between plan and programme budget was often fairly formalistic and there were frequent repetitions between both; monitoring needed to be considerably refined; the plan's objectives were not precise enough; and much more time was spent on reviewing plans and budgets than on implementation and evaluation. The seminar also noted that peace-keeping activities had largely been excluded from the plan, a lacuna which needed correction.

It was proposed to replace the current introduction to the plan by a policy-level "Perspective" on the direction of the Organization's work, offering an overview of trends and problems, new challenges and solutions. The "Perspective" could be reviewed directly by the Assembly plenary through a working group, with a review by relevant bodies, such as the Commission on Sustainable Development, then CPC, the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly's Main Committees as an alternative. It could be prepared for an 8- to 10-year time-frame, to be amended if need arose.

The Secretary-General said the medium-term plan was used to provide a programmatic structure for the biennial budget and was a general reference to ensure that proposed activities accorded with legislative intent. However, there was a failure in the Secretariat to internalize planning as a management tool, and programme managers rarely referred to the plan once it was adopted. The medium-term programme, an intermediate-level document, should be consistent with the "Perspective" and based on approved mandates. Between the "Perspective" and the budget, duplication had to be avoided. The new planning document should set out the programme for four years instead of the current six. The specialized and regional intergovernmental bodies should play a central role in preparing the document.

The medium-term programme either could be adopted for a fixed period or could "roll", with its duration extended every two years by two years. To provide a linkage with the budget outline and the programme budget, the programme should be divided into two time-frames of two years each. It would thus be prepared, revised or extended every two years and reviewed at the same time as the budget outline. With the new approach to medium-term planning, the current system of biennial programme budgets could be retained or the presentation of annual budgets be considered.

Concluding, the Secretary-General said the Assembly might wish to make recommendations on the nature of and period to be covered by the "Perspective" document; on the medium-term programme of work; and on biennial or annual budgets and their relationship with the medium-term programme and the budget outline. He added that, subject to the Assembly's decision on those proposals, a prototype of a new format for a medium-term programme would be prepared for 1994.

Following discussion of the Secretary-General's report, CPC in October⁽⁴⁾ reaffirmed the need for a programmatic planning tool beyond the biennial programme budget. It recommended that consideration be given to replacing the current medium-term plan by a composite document containing a perspective and a programme framework, which listed only major programmes and subprogrammes and provided guidelines against which the preparation and implementation of the programme budget would be assessed.

Contingency fund and programme budget implications

The Secretary-General, in a July 1993 report,⁽⁵⁾ reviewed the procedures for providing statements of programme budget implications and for using and operating the contingency fund. The fund was created by the General Assembly in 1986⁽⁶⁾ to accommodate additional mandated expenditures not provided for in the proposed programme budget. In 1987, the Assembly adopted criteria for using the fund,⁽⁷⁾ which was set at 0.75 per cent of the overall budget. For 1990-1991, the level was the equivalent of $15 million, about $3.2 million of which remained unused at the end of the biennium. For 1992-1993, the fund was set at $18 million, about $11.7 million of which remained unused at the end of 1992. The level was maintained at 0.75 per cent for 1994-1995. The Secretary-General concluded that no changes were necessary in the procedures regarding the contingency fund and that its funding level and general operation appeared satisfactory.

Closely related to the issue of the contingency fund were, in the Secretary-General's view, the treatment of programme budget implications and revised estimates relating to the maintenance of peace and security. He recommended that statements of programme budget implications be extended to include new intergovernmental bodies and all major conferences. A contingency provision for preventive diplomacy and peacemaking activities included in the budget would make the budget more comprehensive and transparent, but would not preclude the possibility of additional requirements.

Secretariat restructuring

In connection with the restructuring of the Secretariat begun in February 1992,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General presented in March 1993 revisions to the 1992-1993 programme budget.⁽⁹⁾ He stated that the translation into budgetary and programmatic terms of the restructuring involved the creation of new departments as well as the redeployment of posts and redistribution of resources. Accordingly, he requested, among other things, approval by the General Assembly for transfers of resources among sections of the programme budget as detailed in his report and for a revised appropriation of $2,467,775,800, i.e., $263,400 less than the amount approved by the Assembly in 1992.⁽¹⁰⁾

ACABQ, in March 1993,⁽¹¹⁾ said that a major difficulty in considering the Secretary-General's report was that it lacked context, a long-term concept or framework for the whole process of restructuring and where the restructuring of the Secretariat fit into that process. The Committee saw a need for a clear statement of an overall restructuring plan and a time-frame for its implementation. It believed that the report should have demonstrated how the proposed changes would better enable the Secretariat to respond to the relevant intergovernmental decisions, particularly to the Assembly's 1986 resolution on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations,⁽¹²⁾ and to the programme mandates entrusted to it by the Member States, and how the restructuring would achieve the management aim, as stated by the Secretary-General, of a more responsive, cost-effective and streamlined Secretariat.

By a letter of 29 March to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee⁽¹³⁾ the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences noted that the purpose of the restructuring was to enhance the efficiency and functioning of the Secretariat and that it should be undertaken in a comprehensive and integrated manner and within a specified time period. He also noted that the proposed restructuring within the Department of Administration and Management would result in a gap between the head of the Department at the USG level and heads of offices at the D-2 level. The Committee sought reassurance that the redistribution of publishing functions among three organizational units—the Office of Conference Services, the Office of General Services and the Department of Public Information (DPI)—would not result in increased costs or delays or inefficiencies in processing documentation. It also drew attention to its mandate to monitor the Organization's policy on publications and requested the Secretariat to ensure that appropriate services were provided to the Committee on Conferences through close coordination between the Office of Conference Services and DPI.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (May)

On 6 May 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 47/212 B without vote.

Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations and programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/211 of 21 December 1987, 43/213 of 21 December 1988, 44/200 A to C and 44/201 A and B of 21 December 1989, S-18/3 of 1 May 1990, 45/199, 45/248 A and B, 45/253 and 45/254 A to C of 21 December 1990, 45/264 of 13 May 1991, 46/232 of 2 March 1992, 46/235 of 13 April 1992, 47/199 of 22 December 1992 and 47/212 A and 47/213 of 23 December 1992,

Reaffirming its functions and powers in considering and approving the budgets of the Organization, and, in this context, its role with regard to the structure of the Secretariat and the creation, suppression and redeployment of posts financed from the regular budget of the Organization,

Reaffirming also the responsibilities of the Secretary-General as chief administrative officer of the Organization,

Recalling the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation,

Reaffirming the priorities set out in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997 as revised and approved under the terms of its resolution 47/214 of 23 December 1992,

Noting that New York is the Headquarters and a centre of the United Nations and that there are currently three additional United Nations centres, at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 47/212 A,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having further considered the letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee,

Taking into account the views expressed by Member States,

I

1. Approves a revised appropriation of 2,467,458,200 United States dollars for the biennium 1992-1993 as a result of the restructuring;

2. Also approves, subject to the provisions contained in the present section and in sections II and III of the present resolution, the proposals for transfers of resources among sections, as reflected in the annex to the present resolution, and concurs with the recommendations and observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Further approves the proposals of the Secretary-General with regard to high-level posts, subject to the following modifications:

(a) Decides to defer action on the proposal of the Secretary-General to abolish the four high-level posts in the Department of Administration and Management and, in this regard, requests him to reconsider his proposals relating to these posts with a view to ensuring that the most senior officials of that Department have a degree of authority that is equivalent to that of the most senior officials in other areas of the United Nations, taking into account the observations and recommendation of the Advisory Committee and the views expressed by Member States;

(b) Requests the Secretary-General to pursue as a matter of urgency his efforts to agree with the Director-General of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade on a prompt appointment to the post of Executive Director of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/GATT at its present level;

(c) Decides to defer action on the proposal of the Secretary-General to abolish the post of Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) and requests him to reconsider his proposal and to report in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 on future secretariat support arrangements for the United Nations Environment Programme and Habitat, including the question of separate senior management arrangements for Habitat, taking into account the views and recommendations of the Commission on Human Settlements, the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme and the Economic and Social Council and the views expressed by Member States;

II

1. Stresses again the need for a timely dialogue between Member States and the Secretary-General on the process of the restructuring of the Secretariat;

2. Emphasizes that the restructuring of the Secretariat should be carried out in accordance with the guidance given by the General Assembly, and with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation and the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

3. Stresses the importance of effective coordination of the activities of the departments and units responsible for economic and social issues, and notes the intention of the Secretary-General to devote his personal attention to this task and to establish appropriate internal coordination mechanisms for this purpose, with special attention to the promotion of greater coordination and complementarity in the respective activities of the United Nations, including Headquarters departments, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the United Nations Development Programme, in particular in support of the programmes on Africa and the least developed countries;

4. Reiterates the need for the full and effective implementation of all programmes and subprogrammes as set out in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, the revisions thereto, the programme budget and other relevant mandates of the General Assembly, in accordance with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

5. Notes the indication by the Secretary-General that the further restructuring of the Secretariat in the economic and social sectors would entail the decentralization of activities to the field and to the regional commissions and stresses that his proposal relating to decentralization to the field should be in accordance with General Assembly resolution 47/199 and those proposals relating to decentralization to the regional commissions in accordance with the criteria agreed by the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council within their respective mandates and on the basis of clearly identified relative advantages;

6. Also notes that the modalities for the proposed integration of the Office for Project Services into the Department for Development Support and Management Services will first be considered by the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme and subsequently by the General Assembly in the light of a report of the Secretary-General on the work of the task force mentioned in paragraph 103 of his report, which will include the relevant financial aspects;

7. Invites the relevant intergovernmental bodies to report as soon as possible to the General Assembly, through the Committee on Conferences, on the overall implications of applying General Assembly resolution 40/243 of 18 December 1985 to the venues of intergovernmental bodies whose secretariats are affected by the current restructuring;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the current overall restructuring process and taking into account the need to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the Organization in accordance with the principles contained in General Assembly resolution 46/232, to review the role of the United Nations Headquarters, centres, the regional commissions and entities in the field, in particular the centres at Vienna and Nairobi, with a view to improving the distribution of responsibilities among them, on the basis of their relative advantages;

9. Welcomes, in this connection, the intention of the Secretary-General, as expressed in paragraph 19 of his report, to consider the relocation of activities in order to provide a clearer purpose for each of the United Nations programmes and sharpen the substantive focus of each of the centres, and requests him to submit, in accordance with the principles and guidelines contained in General Assembly resolution 46/232, adequate proposals in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 to reflect the status of the centre at Nairobi;

10. Also welcomes, in this connection, the intention of the Secretary-General, as expressed in paragraph 67 of his report, to identify, on the basis of the approaches underlying the current restructuring exercise, activities that would, in accordance with the principles and guidelines contained in General Assembly resolution 46/232, benefit from a relocation to Vienna and requests him to submit adequate proposals in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any future proposals relating to major changes in the organization of the Secretariat include a timetable for their implementation and, to the extent possible, are submitted in the context of the biennial proposed programme budgets;

12. Reiterates, in this context, its request to the Secretary-General contained in its resolution 47/212 A, section II, paragraph 6, to provide the Committee for Programme and Coordination and other concerned intergovernmental bodies with all relevant information which will enable them to identify and analyse the programmatic aspects and consequences of the restructuring of the Secretariat in their areas of competence;

1. Endorses the commitment of the Secretary-General to strengthen the role of the United Nations in international economic and social cooperation through, inter alia, the restructuring of the Secretariat;

2. Notes the commitment of the Secretary-General to ensure that the integration of activities resulting from his restructuring proposals, including the creation of the Department for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development, the Department for Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis and the Department for Development Support and Management Services, will lead to improved programme delivery as well as economies of scale;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session detailed and clearly identifiable information on all costs incurred and savings achieved during the biennium 1992-1993 as a result of the first and second phases of the restructuring of the Secretariat;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General, in implementing the restructuring of the Secretariat and in preparing the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 on the basis, inter alia, of General Assembly resolution 47/213:

(a) To take fully into account the results of the intergovernmental review called for in General Assembly resolution 47/212 A, section II, paragraph 6, and the implementation of the revisions to the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993 associated with the restructuring process;

(b) To provide adequate resources and to identify clearly units, at appropriate levels, for the implementation of all programmes and activities, including those involved in the current phase of restructuring, in particular the programmes on the development of Africa, the least developed countries, transnational corporations, science and technology for development and social development, the newly mandated activities on the protection of global climate and the elaboration of an international convention to combat desertification, particularly in Africa;

(c) To strengthen the coordination of the activities on science and technology with the United Nations Development Programme for better management of the United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development;

(d) To ensure that all activities related to transnational corporations are kept integrated;

(e) To review the proposed activities of the new organizational entities in order to ensure that they meet the concerns expressed in paragraphs 9 and 24 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and to reflect the outcome of this review in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995, taking into account the fact that the presence, representation and functions of the United Nations in the field are defined in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

(f) To propose improvements in programme delivery and the termination of activities considered obsolete or redundant for the consideration of the relevant intergovernmental bodies, in accordance with regulation 4.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

(g) To elaborate further his proposals with respect to the Department of Administration and Management and the Department of Public Information, taking fully into account the comments expressed in paragraph 33 of the report of the Advisory Committee and of the relevant decisions of the General Assembly, including resolution 47/202 C of 22 December 1992;

(h) To reflect all savings to be achieved and all additional costs to be incurred as a result of the restructuring, in accordance with the second paragraph of the introduction to the report of the Secretary-General and paragraphs 25 to 27 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

5. Notes that the resources allocated to the departments involved in the restructuring will be reviewed in the context of established procedures for the preparation of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 with a view to ensuring effective programme delivery, taking into account the ongoing elaboration of workload standards and other management techniques as requested in General Assembly resolution 47/212 A, section I;

6. Invites the Secretary-General, in the context of the implementation of the current phase of the restructuring of the Secretariat, to consider activities related to the economies in transition in accordance with the relevant mandates contained in resolutions of the General Assembly and the observations of the Advisory Committee as expressed in paragraph 9 of its report;

7. Also invites the Secretary-General to ensure, in the context of the search for improved efficiency, the rationalization of the working arrangements within each department of the Secretariat in order to ensure that resources are used in the most effective way and that the programme managers are fully responsible and accountable;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session under the agenda item on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations information on his efforts to improve the efficiency of the United Nations;

9. Reaffirms its request made in its resolution 47/214, section V, that the Secretary-General establish a system of responsibility and accountability of programme managers and report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

10. Concurs with the observations of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 34 of its report and urges the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to strengthen and make more effective the planning, management and administrative support within and between the departments responsible for peace-keeping operations, including the Field Operations Division, and also within the Department for Humanitarian Affairs;

11. Also concurs with the observations of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraphs 35 and 36 of its report and reiterates that transfers of resources between sections of the programme budget should be made in accordance with financial regulation 4.5 and financial rule 104.4;

12. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to study the possible establishment of a D-3 level and requests him to take fully into account the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee as contained in its report and, in that context, concurs with the specific observation contained in paragraph 48 thereof;

13. Endorses the view of the Committee on Conferences as contained in the letter from its Chairman addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee;

14. Invites the Secretary-General, particularly with regard to the publication policy of the Organization, to ensure the provision of appropriate support to the Committee on Conferences through, inter alia, close coordination among the departments and units concerned.

General Assembly resolution 47/212 B

6 May 1993 Meeting 102 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/47/932) without vote, 21 April (meeting 66); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/47/L.36), based on informal consultations, orally revised; agenda items 103 & 104.

Meeting numbers. GA 47th session: 5th Committee 59-62, 66; plenary 102.

Reports of the Secretary-General. In a September 1993 report,⁽¹⁴⁾ the Secretary-General stated as the main objective of the restructuring exercise the consolidation and streamlining of activities into well-defined functional categories aimed at ensuring effective implementation of mandates entrusted to the Secretariat by policy-making organs. During the first phase of the reform, initiated in February 1992,⁽⁸⁾ a number of offices were regrouped, related functions consolidated and resources redeployed. As a result, unnecessary bureaucratic layers had been reduced and certain peripheral activities eliminated. Lines of responsibility had been more clearly defined by concentrating the decision-making process in key departments at Headquarters.

The following structural arrangements were put in place: a new Department of Political Affairs was created, incorporating the functions of the Department of Political and Security Council Affairs, the Centre against Apartheid, the Office for Political and General Assembly Affairs, the Department for Special Political Questions, Regional Cooperation, Decolonization and Trusteeship, the Department for Disarmament Affairs and part of the Offices for Research and Collection of Information. The new Department was placed under two Under-Secretaries-General.

Also created was a Department of Peace-keeping Operations, incorporating the former Office of Special Political Affairs, which included the Office of the Military Adviser. The Office for Ocean Affairs and Law of the Sea was integrated into the Office of Legal Affairs. A new Department for Economic and Social Development was formed, which comprised the Office of the Director-General, the Department for International Economic and Social Affairs, the Department for Technical Cooperation and Development, the Centre on Transnational Corporations and the Centre for Science and Technology for Development. A Department of Humanitarian Affairs was established following adoption of a 1991 Assembly resolution on strengthening the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance.⁽¹⁵⁾ The new Department absorbed the functions performed by the United Nations Disaster Relief Office, the Unit for Special Emergency Programmes and various offices and units dealing with emergencies and humanitarian assistance. The Department of Conference Services was made an Office and placed within the Department of Administration and Management.

Together, the restructured and consolidated entities represented some 48.1 per cent of the total budget resources approved for 1992-1993.

In order to provide a comprehensive internal audit and ensure compliance with Assembly resolutions and United Nations rules and regulations, as well as to investigate mismanagement and to prevent waste and abuse, an Office for Inspections and Investigations (OII) was created effective 1 September 1993. The Office, headed by an ASG reporting directly to the Secretary-General, was a first step towards setting up a broader audit, inspection and investigation authority. The function of OII, its reporting responsibilities, relation with the Board of Auditors and resource basis were further described in a November note of the Secretary-General.⁽¹⁶⁾

Concerning further reform, the Secretary-General said that the creation of new linkages and synergies should be key components. Linkages could be improved among agencies and at the field level, between research and operational activities, and among the global activities of the United Nations, sectoral agencies and the Bretton Woods institutions. New policy and programme linkages should effectively address the continuum from humanitarian assistance to rehabilitation and development. During the years to come, high priority would continue to be given to strengthening the Organization's ability to deal with the increased demands for peace-keeping and peacemaking and related field operations. That would be done through greater coordination within a unified and integrated structure, as well as improved budgetary planning and enhanced management control, audit and programme evaluation. In carrying out the reforms at a number of duty stations, a key concern would be improved coordination between

Headquarters and activities at regional and country levels.

In a November report,⁽¹⁷⁾ the Secretary-General proposed further changes in the senior structure of the Secretariat as well as the transfer of certain functions from the Department of Political Affairs to the Department of Administration and Management, leading to a net reduction of $437,200 in the 1994-1995 budget. The purpose of his streamlining efforts, he explained, was not merely to achieve economies, but rather to ensure clear lines of responsibility and reporting, greater managerial accountability and a better understanding that the various mandates of the Organization were parts of a greater whole.

Management improvement

Pursuant to a 1992 Assembly resolution,⁽³⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a report in October 1993 assessing the system of accountability and responsibility of programme managers in the United Nations.⁽¹⁸⁾

He stated that vastly increased and more challenging demands had an obvious impact on traditional concepts of responsibility and accountability and on budgeting and programme management. The shorter response time for urgent mandates made it necessary to resort to ad hoc arrangements which might not fit within existing descriptions of programmes and the resources provided for them. The wider range of expertise required for multifaceted mandates, often at short notice, might be scarce or fully occupied in the Secretariat and might therefore have to be procured from outside. The more complicated and increased demands by Member States, coupled with greater managerial discretion, might require adjustments of the rules and regulations that had guided the work of the Secretariat. Procedures and practices of intergovernmental bodies would need to be reviewed in the context of the new realities.

Procedures and practices, including those of intergovernmental bodies, had to be reviewed in the context of the new realities and the balance between centralized controls, and the legitimate concerns for a more decentralized style of management had to be rethought.

Suggestions for improvements would be further examined. They included: more management training at all levels; greater attention to managerial skills in choosing programme managers; and a clearer system of rewards and sanctions for staff, including performance-related pay schemes and more flexible termination provisions. However, there was still a need to address the central problem of finding the balance between the need for greater managerial discretion for senior staff and the ultimate responsibility to Member States. A thorough review of the regulations, procedures and rules of accountability was to be undertaken in the following year aimed at providing programme managers with enough discretion to implement mandates in an effective and efficient manner, while preserving adequate central control and oversight to meet the concerns of Member States. Necessary adjustments to the existing systems of accountability and responsibility would be made.

Alleged misconduct and mismanagement, as well as abuses or violations of United Nations regulations, were to be investigated by the newly established OII, which incorporated functions of the existing main oversight units. Among other tasks of OII were the monitoring and evaluation of programme implementation; assessment of the Organization's management and control systems; and issuing recommendations for policies and measures to promote economy and efficiency, based on its audits, inspections and investigations.

In an October report,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) welcomed the creation of OII as a significant step towards improvement. However, it recognized the new Office as only the first step towards the establishment of a higher-level post with broader oversight authority. To ensure more effective oversight, all the serious deficiencies in the current oversight, accountability, internal control and management improvement processes had to be addressed and the key factors required to construct an effective mandate for OII identified, in order to make it an important part of a transparent management system.

Responding in November,⁽²⁰⁾ the Secretary-General noted that the establishment of OII was a first step towards setting up a broader and higher-level authority for audit, evaluation and investigation. In that regard, he would also be guided by the experience gained by OII. He emphasized that it had been borne in mind that measures taken by the Secretariat could not focus exclusively on the strengthening of an independent oversight mechanism, but that considerable efforts and adequate resources were required at the same time for an integrated system of accountability and responsibility. The latter required that the role and accountability of programme managers be more clearly defined and that the functions of the Department of Administration and Management be strengthened. Also, the plans for a broader authority for audit, evaluation and investigation had to be carefully reviewed to avoid duplication with existing external oversight mechanisms, particularly those of the Panel of External Auditors and JIU itself. Taking those considerations into account, the Secretary-General had some reservations regarding JIU's assumption that a very large oversight office with a $60 million budget and a staff of 220 to 800 might be required. However, he supported the proposal for sufficient resources for the oversight office in order for it to play a significant role in increasing the effectiveness and accountability of the Secretariat.

In December 1993,⁽²¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates under sections 25 and 31, proposing the redeployment of resources amounting to $11,941,700 from administration and management to OII in the proposed budget for 1994-1995.

ACABQ, in an oral report on 18 December before the Fifth Committee, endorsed the redeployment of resources in the amount proposed by the Secretary-General. It noted, however, that that amount did not include $320,300 in respect of the post of the ASG for Inspections and Investigations. It was ACABQ's understanding that the Assembly had yet to take a decision on establishing OII, in view of which it was drawing attention to the fact that, should the proposal be adopted, a post at the ASG level would need to be provided for.

The Assembly, in resolution 48/230, section II, of 23 December, took note of the Secretary-General's reports containing revised estimates⁽¹⁷⁾, ⁽²¹⁾ and ACABQ's recommendations. It approved his proposals for redeployment of resources and decided to continue the current arrangements as contained in his report,⁽¹⁷⁾ pending a review of the issue at its resumed session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 23 December 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/218 without vote.

Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

I

Having considered the relevant documents on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations,

Mindful of the need for sustained efforts to improve the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations,

Stressing that the late issuance of documentation has hampered consideration by the General Assembly of important issues, and that the Secretary-General should ensure that all future reports are issued on time,

Mandates and prerogatives

1. Expresses concern at the inadequate implementation of General Assembly mandates in some cases and the undertaking of non-mandated measures in other cases;

2. Stresses again the importance of sustained, timely and substantive dialogue and consultations between the Member States and the Secretary-General;

Programme planning

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms that the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, originally adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/253 of 21 December 1990 and revised under the terms of Assembly resolution 47/214 of 23 December 1992, constitutes the principal policy directive of the United Nations, as set out in regulation 3.3 of the Regulations Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, and Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 37/234 of 21 December 1982;

3. Notes that in its present format the medium-term plan has a limited impact on the work of the Organization;

4. Regrets that a prototype of a new format of the medium-term plan has not been provided as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 47/214;

5. Notes with appreciation the recommendation by the Committee for Programme and Coordination that consideration be given to the possibility of replacing the current medium-term plan by a document prepared along a different format as outlined in paragraph 233 of its report, reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, a prototype of a new format of the medium-term plan, taking into account the present resolution and the views expressed by Member States in the Fifth Committee, and decides to give this issue in-depth consideration at its forty-ninth session on the basis of the relevant documentation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed revisions to the medium-term plan, to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, in accordance with regulation 3.11 of the Regulations Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, and taking into account the relevant conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its thirty-third session;

Restructuring of the Secretariat

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the restructuring and efficiency of the Secretariat;

2. Also takes note of the indication by the Secretary-General in his statement to the Fifth Committee that the Secretariat can now enter into a phase of consolidation;

3. Regrets that the report of the Secretary-General does not provide an analysis of the effects of the restructuring on programmes as requested by the General Assembly in its resolutions 46/232 of 2 March 1992 and 47/212 A and B of 23 December 1992 and 6 May 1993 respectively and does not include proposals on decentralization measures;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, an analytical report on all aspects of the restructuring of the Secretariat and its effects on the programmes, including those relating to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and transnational corporations;

5. Reaffirms section II, paragraph 8, of its resolution 47/212 B and requests the Secretary-General to take that paragraph into account in formulating his forthcoming proposals on decentralization measures;

6. Reiterates its requests relating to the International Trade Centre and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), in section I, paragraphs 3 (b) and (c), of its resolution 47/212 B, and stresses the need for the Secretary-General to implement fully and promptly the decisions of the General Assembly contained therein;

7. Recalls section VIII of its resolution 44/201 A of 21 December 1989 on the desirability of the establishment of unified conference services at Vienna;

8. Stresses the need for the establishment of unified conference services at Vienna as soon as possible and requests the Secretary-General to report on their establishment no later than at its forty-ninth session;

High-level posts

1. Stresses that, once approved by the General Assembly, high-level posts should be filled promptly in order to enable the relevant entities to function properly and undertake the implementation of their mandates without undue delays;

2. Decides to keep under review the number and distribution of high-level posts, including those financed from extrabudgetary resources, and requests the Secretary-General to provide a clear rationale for the establishment of such posts in the context of future proposals he may make;

3. Also decides, in the context of section I.C, paragraph 6, of the present resolution, to maintain the current approved senior management arrangement for the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat);

Improvement of the Management of the United Nations

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on procedures and norms for the creation, suppression, reclassification, conversion and redeployment of posts, regrets that the Secretary-General did not provide a report on those issues and further requests that such a report be submitted, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on accountability and responsibility of programme managers in the United Nations, and regrets that the report does not provide an adequate response to the requests of the General Assembly in its resolutions 46/185 B and 46/189 of 20 December 1991, 47/212 B and 47/214, section V, paragraph 2;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on accountability and oversight in the United Nations Secretariat and of the comments of the Secretary-General thereon;

4. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the establishment of a transparent and effective system of accountability and responsibility no later than 1 January 1995, as contained in paragraphs 243 to 245 of its report;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the system of accountability and responsibility the following elements, taking into account relevant experiences within and outside the United Nations system:

(a) The establishment of clear responsibility for programme delivery, including performance indicators as a measure of quality control;

(b) A mechanism ensuring that programme managers are accountable for the effective management of the personnel and financial resources allocated to them;

(c) Performance evaluation for all officials, including senior officials, with objectives and performance indicators;

(d) Effective training of staff in financial and management responsibilities;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the establishment of the system to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

II

Recalling its responsibility under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations with regard to financial and budgetary matters,

Recalling also Article 97 of the Charter concerning the responsibility of the Secretary-General as chief administrative officer,

Recognizing the increased importance, cost and complexity of United Nations activities,

Recognizing also the need for an enhanced oversight function to ensure the effective implementation of these activities in the most cost-effective manner possible,

Recognizing further the need for adequate intergovernmental programme evaluation with full respect for existing legislative mandates,

1. Recalls the need for the establishment of a system of responsibility and accountability for United Nations officials, as called for in section LE of the present resolution;

2. Reaffirms the role of the Board of Auditors as an external control mechanism pursuant to General Assembly resolution 74(I) of 7 December 1946, other relevant resolutions of the Assembly and the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, for oversight, monitoring and control by the Assembly of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations;

3. Recognizes the role of the Joint Inspection Unit in accordance with its mandate, contained in General Assembly resolution 31/192 of 22 December 1976;

4. Reaffirms the existing mandates of relevant intergovernmental and expert bodies of the General Assembly in the field of administration, budgetary and management matters;

5. Also reaffirms its decision 47/454 of 23 December 1992;

6. Emphasizes the need to ensure respect for the separate and distinct roles and functions of external and internal oversight mechanisms and also to strengthen the external oversight control mechanisms;

7. Stresses that oversight mechanisms should guarantee full respect for the individual rights of staff members and due process of law;

8. Requests the Panel of External Auditors and the Board of Auditors to provide their views on how oversight functions could be improved, according to current reporting procedures, and in this regard decides to consider the relevant report of the Joint Inspection Unit;

9. Resolves that the decision to establish an additional independent entity, taking into account Article 97 of the Charter, to enhance oversight functions, in particular with regard to evaluation, audit, investigation and compliance, be taken subject to the definition of its modalities, including its relationship with existing control mechanisms;

10. Stresses, in this regard, that any administrative structure should be aimed at ensuring efficiency and cost-effectiveness, especially with regard to programme delivery;

11. Decides, in this regard, to continue consideration of this issue at the earliest possible opportunity during its current session;

III

Stressing the necessity for the proper management of resources and funds of the United Nations,

Determined to address alleged cases of fraud in the United Nations in an impartial manner, in accordance with due process of law and full respect for the rights of each individual concerned, especially the rights of defence,

Taking note of the views expressed by Member States during its forty-eighth session,

1. Decides to study the possibility of the establishment of a new jurisdictional and procedural mechanism or of the extension of mandates and improvement of the functioning of existing jurisdictional and procedural mechanisms;

2. Also decides to this end to establish an ad hoc inter-governmental working group of experts in the legal and financial fields which shall work in consultation with the relevant existing bodies and shall submit a report to the General Assembly with specific recommendations no later than at its forty-ninth session;

3. Further decides that the working group shall consist of twenty-five members and invites the President of the General Assembly to define the composition of the working group, with due regard for equitable geographical representation, and to convene it as soon as possible but no later than 31 March 1994;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the working group with the necessary services;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the issue identified in paragraph 1 above, and to bring these views to the attention of the working group, as well as to the attention of the General Assembly;

6. Invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to fund the activities of the working group;

7. Decides to defer consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the recovery of misappropriated funds to its resumed forty-eighth session, and requests the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to comment on it.

General Assembly resolution 48/218

Programme evaluation

Joint Inspection Unit

In its annual report to the General Assembly,⁽¹⁾ the Joint Inspection Unit—a subsidiary organ of the bodies within the United Nations system—gave an overview of its activities between 1 July 1992 and 30 June 1993. The work programme of JIU for 1993 and beyond was transmitted to the Assembly in April by the Secretary-General,⁽²⁾ who stated that JIU had been working to develop a more comprehensive work-programming framework and strategy. It had been greatly assisted by the advent of five new Inspectors in January, who contributed fresh insights and new ideas. Recently, JIU changed its focus in the direction of in-depth studies of management systems in operation and programme performance and results, a direction which was followed in the current work programme. Under active consideration for future years were peace-keeping, humanitarian issues, management, budgetary and administrative matters, and coordination and cooperation, especially in the field of development.

In its report, JIU summarized its recent reports on an integrated library network of the United Nations system; decentralization of organizations in the system; managing works of art in the Organization; proposals for improving peace-keeping operations; a more unitary approach to field representation of United Nations organizations; buildings management; working with non-governmental organizations; financing in relation to "An Agenda for Peace"; relationship agreements between the United Nations and its specialized agencies; and the responsiveness of the United Nations to specific development needs of small Member States.

JIU noted that, through its work programme, it had implemented a number of 1992 ACABQ recommendations on action to be taken to enhance the Unit's effectiveness and relevance to Member States and participating organizations.⁽³⁾ It noted, however, that there was equally a need for the participating organizations to make further efforts to supplement JIU action, through timely issuance of their comments and proper consideration by their governing bodies.

As a means of contributing to improved action, JIU further proposed that: the Assembly review JIU's proposed work programme and decide on the activities to be inspected, investigated and evaluated in order of priority; JIU be invited to present its reports with financial implications to ACABQ for subsequent review and decision by the Assembly and to the legislative organs concerned, with the Inspectors participating in the deliberations on their reports; JIU be invited to meetings when its budget estimates and/or other financial requirements were being discussed; the Assembly authorize a study on using national experts to assist JIU in fields such as peace-keeping and humanitarian assistance; and the Assembly request the Secretary-General to examine the possibility of JIU's having access to extrabudgetary resources for specific projects relating to the operational activities of some participating bodies. It proposed annual meetings between all review and advisory bodies, including ACABQ, CPC, the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) and the Board of Auditors, to promote better coordination. During the period under review, JIU maintained contact with a number of management and financial bodies having similar responsibilities, such as CPC, the Board of Auditors, the Panel of External Auditors, ACABQ the Inter-Agency Meeting on Language Arrangements, Documentation and Publications, and other management, evaluation and audit services of participating organizations.

JIU also made observations on follow-up to four of its reports on: management of interpretation services (1986);⁽⁴⁾ autonomous United Nations research institutes (1987);⁽⁵⁾ human resources development through technical cooperation (1990); and the coordination of activities related to early warning of possible refugee flows (1990).

In October 1993,⁽⁶⁾ the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on the implementation of the recommendations contained in those reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/221 on 23 December without vote.

Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolution 47/201 of 22 December 1992, and decision 46/446 of 20 December 1991,

Having considered the annual reports of the Joint Inspection Unit for the periods 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991, 1 July 1991 to 30 June 1992, and 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993, and its work programmes for the related periods, as well as the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Expressing its appreciation to the Joint Inspection Unit for the measures taken with regard to improving its programming methods, increasing its productivity and enhancing its performance,

Stressing the importance of timely substantive consideration of the reports of the Joint Inspection Unit by Member States and the participating organizations, especially those organizations which have been inspected,

Emphasizing the need for greater management efficiency, transparency and coordination on the part of the participating organizations within the United Nations system,

Reaffirming the statute of the Joint Inspection Unit, the only independent system-wide inspection, evaluation and investigation body,

Recognizing the need to give adequate means to the Joint Inspection Unit in order to enable it to carry out its functions,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on its activities during the period 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993, of its work programme for 1993, and of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

2. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit to study carefully all problems arising during the start-up phase of peace-keeping operations;

3. Notes with appreciation the efforts of the Joint Inspection Unit aimed at improving its programming methods, output and quality of work, and requests it to continue its efforts to comply with the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and that it report thereon to the General Assembly;

4. Invites the Joint Inspection Unit, in its future work programmes, to put more emphasis on inspection and evaluation to ensure optimum use of funds in order to enhance the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations system;

5. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit, when appropriate, to provide in its reports information on estimated financial implications or possible cost-savings resulting from implementation of the recommendations formulated therein;

6. Calls upon the Joint Inspection Unit to follow up on the implementation of its recommendations and to include the relevant information regularly in its annual reports;

7. Also invites the Joint Inspection Unit to maintain a close relationship with the Committee for Programme and Coordination, the International Civil Service Commission, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the Board of Auditors, the Panel of External Auditors and organizations and bodies within the United Nations system in order to ensure greater and more cost-effective coordination of their respective activities for the promotion of management efficiency, greater accountability and transparency of the United Nations and other participating organizations;

8. Requests the executive heads of the participating organizations to increase their efforts to make detailed and timely comments on Joint Inspection Unit reports and to ensure that their governing bodies consider these reports;

9. Calls upon the executive heads of the participating organizations concerned to ensure that Joint Inspection Unit recommendations approved by their governing bodies are implemented and to report thereon;

10. Recognizes the need to enhance the contribution of the Joint Inspection Unit to the management efficiency and transparency of the organizations within the United Nations system;

11. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to include in the report called for in its decision 47/454 of 23 December 1992 and to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session proposals regarding the procedures for selecting Inspectors, with a view to improving the selection process, with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution;

12. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the participating organizations, without prejudice to article 20 of the statute of the Joint Inspection Unit, to consider providing the Unit with extra-budgetary resources and programme support funds for specific activities of inspection, evaluation and investigation in those areas which are linked to those resources;

13. Requests the Secretary-General and the Joint Inspection Unit to study and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on means by which the Unit could enhance its inspection and evaluation of specific fields of activities, such as peace-keeping operations, humanitarian assistance, operational activities for development and technical and financial matters;

14. Requests the governing bodies of all the participating organizations and programmes, when considering reports of the Joint Inspection Unit, particularly those having financial implications, to keep the Unit informed;

15. Decides to keep under review some of the proposals of the Joint Inspection Unit contained in paragraph 40 of its annual report;

16. Notes the preliminary work programme of the Joint Inspection Unit for 1994-1995 and beyond.

UN budget

Budget for 1992-1993

Revised appropriations

In March 1993,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General presented revisions to the programme budget for the 1992-1993 biennium, proposed in connection with the second phase of the Secretariat restructuring initiated in December 1992.⁽²⁾ The Assembly had provided directives for those revised estimates in a 1992 resolution.⁽³⁾

The translation into budgetary and programmatic terms of the second phase of the restructuring involved the creation of new departments, redeployment of posts and redistribution of resources among various sections of the programme budget. A total of 35 high-level posts financed from the regular budget—20 at USG and 15 at ASG level—were proposed, compared to 48 such posts in the budget as adopted by the General Assembly in 1991,⁽⁴⁾ leading to savings of $4,516,100.

Through those revised estimates, the Secretary-General sought the Assembly's approval for a revised appropriation of $2,467,775,800, reflecting a reduction of $263,400 from the amount approved in 1992.⁽⁵⁾ He also sought approval for changes in the number and distribution of high-level posts for the remainder of the biennium.

ACABQ, also in March,⁽⁶⁾ noted that the revised estimates were not submitted in a complete budget format and that various categories of costs related to differing periods within the biennium; there was no indication of the biennialized costs of the resulting structure that could be compared to the structure reflected in the initial appropriation. The lack of such information as well as a clear presentation of the new structure by budget section hindered an evaluation of the financial effects of the restructuring.

The Assembly, in resolution 47/212 B, approved a revised appropriation of $2,467,458,200 for 1992-1993 as a result of the restructuring, $290,600 less than requested by the Secretary-General.

Revised estimates for disarmament centres

In 1991, the General Assembly had decided that the administrative costs of the United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament in Africa (Lome, Togo), in Asia and the Pacific (Kathmandu, Nepal) and in Latin America and the Caribbean (Lima, Peru) should be financed from the regular United Nations budget, to ensure their continued financial viability.⁽⁷⁾ As requested by the Assembly, the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee a detailed account of the centres' activities in 1992 and those proposed for 1993, together with estimates of 1993 requirements, functional breakdown of staff and the financial positions of the centres.⁽⁸⁾ He stated that, owing to the lack of sufficient resources from voluntary contributions, not all activities projected for 1992 had been implemented; part of the difficulty in raising funds was that potential donors wanted to see an infrastructure already in place before committing themselves to contributing to any project.

The Secretary-General noted that the Assembly had authorized under the 1992-1993 budget an appropriation of $506,900 relating to salaries and common staff costs of three P-5 posts for the Directors of the three centres. In order to cover other administrative costs, an additional $300,000 net was required under budget section 37. If those resources could not be found in the contingency fund, implementation of the 1991 resolution would have to be postponed, in accordance with guidelines for using the fund adopted in 1987.⁽⁹⁾

According to a March 1993 report of ACABQ,⁽¹⁰⁾ the 1993 costs of Directors, already appropriated for 1992-1993, should be added to the $300,000 requested by the Secretary-General; total administrative costs under the regular budget in 1993 would amount to about $553,000. To provide administrative support for the three centres combined, ACABQ recommended commitment authority of $150,000 under section 37 of the 1992-1993 budget. In apportioning that amount, the Secretary-General should take into account all relevant factors, including each centre's current financial status and work programme.

ACABQ also recommended that the Secretary-General submit, in the context of the proposed budget for 1994-1995, his long-term proposals for those centres regarding their financial viability. It added that a determination had to be made as to which activities should be carried out by Headquarters on behalf of the centres and those to be entrusted to the centres themselves. In ACABQ's opinion, there was also a need to have a coherent and integrated programme for the centres, bearing in mind related activities funded under the regular budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By resolution 47/219 B of 6 May 1993, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's revised estimates and ACABQ's recommendations. It approved a commitment authority of $150,000 under section 37 of the 1992-1993 budget in order to provide for the administrative support of the regional centres; that amount would be a first call on the contingency fund in 1993 as it related to a proposal carried over from 1992.

In resolution 48/228, the Assembly accepted the Secretary-General's proposal for conversion of the Director's post of the centre at Kathmandu, from the date the Director was permanently located in the centre there.

Final appropriations

In December 1993,⁽¹¹⁾ the Secretary-General requested final appropriations of $2,411,404,000 for expenditure and $443,320,100 for income. That represented a decrease in expenditure of $56,054,200 (2.3 per cent) from the $2,467,458,200 appropriated by General Assembly resolution 47/212 B of May 1993, and a decrease of $27,696,300 (5.9 per cent) in income, resulting in a reduction of $28,357,900 in net requirements. The changes in the levels of resources were due to fluctuations in exchange rates, inflation, decisions of policy-making organs that could not be deferred, unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, and other changes, including further adjustments relating to the restructuring of the Secretariat.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/219 A without vote.

Final budget appropriations for the biennium 1992-1993

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1992-1993:

General Assembly resolution 48/219 B

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/804) without vote, 19 November (meeting 44); draft by S-G (A/C.5/48/48); agenda item 122.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 39, 40, 44; plenary 87.

Second performance report

In December 1993, the Secretary-General presented to the Fifth Committee his second performance report for 1992-1993,⁽¹¹⁾ with revised estimates of expenditure and income (see above).

ACABQ recommended that the Fifth Committee accept on a provisional basis the reductions proposed by the Secretary-General. It would examine in detail the second performance report in early 1994, at which time it would issue its report on the factors used in preparing the performance report, namely, inflation, currency exchange rates and standard costs, with particular reference to common staff costs. The General Assembly would thus have another opportunity to examine the performance report in the light of ACABQ's detailed comments.

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly, by decision 48/460 of 23 December, approved provisionally those revised estimates, which it decided to review in detail at its resumed forty-eighth session. It noted that the performance report did not comply with its 1992 resolution⁽¹²⁾ requesting the Secretary-General to improve the budget performance report and make its presentation more timely and more transparent, and requested his compliance.

In March 1993,⁽¹³⁾ the Secretary-General presented to the Fifth Committee updated information on the financial results of the 1990-1991 biennium as at 31 December 1992. The General Assembly, in December 1992,⁽¹⁴⁾ had decided to revert to the question of the final appropriations at its resumed forty-seventh session. At the closure of the accounts in March 1992, expenditure and income both exceeded the appropriations approved in 1991,⁽¹⁵⁾ by a net excess of $11,971,200, which was within the net commitment authority of $13,867,100 granted by the Assembly. Included in the expenditures reported at the end of 1991 was an amount of $55,813,200 in unliquidated obligations, which under financial regulation 4.3 remained available for disbursement until 31 December 1992.

As at that date, certain savings had been achieved in the liquidation of obligations, reducing net requirements to $8,382,100. Final expenditure excluded approximately $1.5 million in obligations, representing contractual commitments charged originally against the 1990-1991 budget, in respect of which payments could not be completed prior to 31 December 1992; in accordance with the financial regulations, those valid obligations were transferred as a charge against current appropriations.

Accordingly, the Secretary-General proposed that the Assembly approve an increase in expenditure for 1990-1991 in the amount of $17,662,100 and that it assess Member States in 1994 for that increase, offset by an income of $9,280,000.

The Assembly, by decision 47/453 B of 14 September 1993, postponed a decision on the item to its forty-eighth session. It requested the Secretary-General to provide full information on all aspects of supernumeraries and consultants in the final budget performance report for 1992-1993, and to report on their status in the proposed budget for 1994-1995.

Budget for 1994-1995

In December 1993, the General Assembly approved appropriations for the 1994-1995 biennium totalling $2,580,200,200 gross ($2,112,798,500 net). Income estimates of $477,401,700 from sources other than assessed contributions from Member States were also approved. Member States were to be assessed $1,198,902,550 for 1994.

The Secretary-General had proposed a programme budget of $2,749,064,000, i.e., 1.7 per cent higher than the preliminary level of resources included in the budget outline approved by the Assembly in 1992.⁽¹⁶⁾ The proposed budget was presented to the Assembly through CPC and ACABQ, which made their recommendations following an item-by-item examination of the programme budget proposals. ACABQ recommended a reduction of $186,473,800 in expenditures, of which $10,394,900 was provisional. The Fifth Committee reduced ACABQ's estimates further.

Appropriations

In August 1993,⁽¹⁷⁾ the Secretary-General proposed a programme budget for 1994-1995 at a level of $2,749,064,000, representing a net growth of $25,324,200, or 1 per cent, over the revised appropriation approved by the General Assembly in May 1993, by resolution 47/212 B, for the 1992-1993 biennium. Income for 1994-1995 was estimated at $520,278,000, leading to a net proposed appropriation of $2,228,786,000, and resulting in a net increase of $232,344,200.

Proposed increases in expenditure were primarily directed to the three areas of overall policy-making, direction and coordination; political affairs; and human rights and humanitarian affairs. On the other hand, the rationalization of structures and elimination of duplication resulting from the reorganization of the economic and social sectors of the Secretariat introduced economies of scale and released resources, enabling the Secretariat to meet additional demands, such as follow-up to and preparations for major conferences, without budget growth. It also allowed for redirection of some resources to the area of regional cooperation for development.

Resources were to be distributed to substantive activities as follows: common support services (33.7 per cent); staff assessment (16.3 per cent); regional cooperation for development (13.6 per cent); international cooperation for development (11.4 per cent); political affairs (6 per cent); public information (4.9 per cent); human rights and humanitarian affairs (4.7 per cent); capital expenditures (3.3 per cent); jointly financed activities and special expenses (2.4 per cent); international justice and law (2 per cent); and overall policy-making and coordination (1.7 per cent).

About 55.4 per cent of the proposed budget was for costs associated with the 10,171 staff members who constituted the core of the Secretariat. In view of the additional tasks entrusted to the Organization in a variety of domains, the Secretary-General proposed an increase of staff by 68 posts—41 at the Professional and 27 at the General Service level. A significant expansion was devoted to strengthening the Organization's capacities for preventive diplomacy, peaceful settlement of disputes, peace-keeping and peace-building.

The budget was presented in two parts, in accordance with the new budget format approved by the Assembly in 1992.⁽³⁾ Part one provided the proposed distribution of resources by section, addressed the question of policies, objectives and priorities for the budget period, and described the budget methodology applied; it was supported by annexes. Part two comprised a detailed section-by-section analysis of the programme budget, with information in the form of tables, programme narratives and description of resource requirements.

As stated by the Secretary-General in his introduction to the proposed budget, it included a number of innovations, such as regrouping in a specific part estimates for capital expenditures, including major maintenance and technological innovations. Also, an attempt was being made to present more clearly the resources which had a strong bearing on activities financed from the regular budget, notably voluntary contributions and the support account for peace-keeping operations.

The Fifth Committee approved the budget item by item, in first and second readings.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/231 A without vote.

Questions relating to the 1994-1995 budget

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/228 without vote.

Questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995

The General Assembly,

I

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and subsequent relevant resolutions,

Recalling section VI, paragraph 1, of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990, in which it reaffirmed that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters,

Recalling also its resolutions 45/253 of 21 December 1990 on programme planning and 47/213 of 23 December 1992 on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 1994-1995,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 contained in the report on the work of the second part of its thirty-third session,^a without prejudice to the priorities established by the General Assembly;

2. Deplores the extraordinary and unacceptable delay in the submission of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995 by the Secretary-General, which compelled the General Assembly and its subsidiary organs to conduct a review on the basis of incomplete and inadequately transparent proposals;

3. Stresses that the activities included in the proposed programme budget must be derived from the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, as adopted by the General Assembly in its resolutions 45/253 and 47/214 of 23 December 1992, and other relevant intergovernmental decisions, and should be aimed at the full implementation of the mandates, policies and priorities previously established;

4. Reaffirms its resolution 47/213;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account paragraph 69 of the first report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995,^b to present extrabudgetary resources, including backstopping activities, in the proposed programme budget for 1996-1997 so as to show, to the extent possible, objects of expenditure, as is done in respect of the regular budget;

6. Regrets that the provisions of section III of its resolution 47/212 B of 6 May 1993 have not been applied to the sections of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995;

7. Stresses the need for full and comprehensive information regarding the costing parameters applied in the programme budget, including instructions to programme managers on the preparation of the budget, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1996-1997 contains a clear indication of all the cost elements, including inflation, exchange-rate fluctuations and others;

8. Requests the Board of Auditors, as part of its audit of financial systems during the audit of regular budget accounts, to review the development of assumptions used in the presentation of the programme budget and performance reports, with a view to suggesting improvements;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to present in future budget documents the actual regular budget and extrabudgetary expenditure by object of expenditure by section for the prior and current bienniums, with appropriate forecasts to the end of the current biennium, to enable comparison with the request contained in the proposed programme budget;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to include every three months in his report on the status of contributions a summary financial statement;

11. Regrets that the Secretary-General has not responded to the requests contained in section II, paragraphs 8 to 10, of its resolution 47/212 B;

12. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General review the role of United Nations Headquarters, centres, the regional commissions and entities in the field, in particular the centres at Vienna and Nairobi, with a view to improving the distribution of responsibilities among them on the basis of their relative advantages, submit proposals to reflect the status of the centre at Nairobi and identify activities that would benefit from relocation to Vienna;

13. Urges the Secretary-General to submit adequate proposals in response to these requests at the earliest possible time, but no later than at the forty-ninth session of the General Assembly;

14. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General review and develop procedures and norms, including workload analyses, to justify the creation, suppression, reclassification, conversion and redeployment of posts, as contained in section II, paragraph 2, of its resolution 46/185 B of 20 December 1991, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

15. Stresses that, whenever a post becomes vacant, a proper programmatic/workload justification will be needed for its retention, abolition or redeployment;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals relating to activities that may have become obsolete with a view to reallocating resources to priority areas;

17. Reaffirms the need for a comprehensive, substantive and timely dialogue between Member States and the Secretary-General on administrative and budgetary matters;

18. Recalls its resolution 47/211 of 23 December 1992, in which it approved, inter alia, the recommendations of the Board of Auditors with regard to payment to supernumerary staff contained in its report, and requests the Secretary-General to comply no later than 1 July 1994 and to report to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session on its implementation in the context of the agenda item entitled "Personnel questions";

19. Endorses the recommendations and observations regarding the vacancy management system and "vacancy pool" contained in paragraphs 17 to 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and, in this regard, reiterates the obligation of the Secretary-General to comply with financial regulation 4.5 and rule 104.4 relative to transfers of resources between appropriation sections;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the desirability and practicability of creating a new budget section relating to resources for the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and external oversight mechanisms, including the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit, without prejudice to their existing mandates or their autonomy, bearing in mind paragraph (b) of General Assembly decision 47/454 of 23 December 1992, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to respect fully the rules and regulations governing programme planning in the presentation of future proposed programme budgets;

22. Decides to make the following changes in the programmatic narrative in the final published version of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995:

(a) To replace the references to the report entitled "An Agenda for Peace" as a mandate with references to General Assembly resolutions 47/120 A and B of 18 December 1992 and 20 September 1993, respectively;

(b) In section 3C (Department of Political Affairs II):

(i) To include, in paragraph 3C.36, after the words "resolution 46/137 of 17 December 1991", a reference to paragraph 4.37 of the medium-term plan, as amended in the annex to Assembly resolution 47/214;

(ii) To reformulate paragraph 3C.37 to ensure that references to procedures for electoral assistance duly reflect the provisions adopted by the General Assembly and properly respect the agreed specific functions of the resident coordinators;

(c) To delete the reference to preventive diplomacy under section 3B (Department of Political Affairs I), programme 3, subprogramme 4;

(d) In section 21 (Human rights):

(i) To include reference to the Working Group on the Right to Development;

(ii) To insert the word "mandated" before each reference to fact-finding missions;

23. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To identify appropriate activities under section 9 (Department for Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis) of the proposed programme budget, with a view to implementing General Assembly resolutions 44/215 of 22 December 1989 and 46/210 of 20 December 1991;

(b) To reformulate activities under section 9, programme 1, subprogramme 5, in order to reflect all the aspects of the pertinent resolutions, as well as the relevant mandates of programme 21 (Public administration and finance) of the medium-term plan, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

(c) To reformulate activities under section 10 (Department for Development Support and Management Services), programme 2, in accordance with the relevant mandates of programme 21 of the medium-term plan, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

(d) To transfer the responsibility related to the preparation of the reports on the new international humanitarian order from section 21 to section 23 (Department of Humanitarian Affairs);

24. Also requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the coordination between the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, taking into account the role of the Director-General of the United Nations Office at Vienna and the observations contained in paragraph IV.51 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

II

1. Approves the comments and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions as expressed in chapter I of its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995, and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures;

2. Takes note of the statement made by the Secretary-General to the Fifth Committee on 24 November 1993 regarding the temporary suspension of recruitment of Professional staff introduced in 1992 and of paragraph 57 of the first report of the Advisory Committee;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals to the General Assembly at its current session on the provision of and related arrangements for travel services and allowances, with a view to making more effective use of resources, taking into account the practices of Member States;

4. Decides that, until such time as posts have been reclassified according to prescribed internal procedures and approved by the General Assembly, no staff member encumbering a post under reclassification review shall be paid at the higher grade level;

5. Decides also that the total allocation for consultants and ad hoc experts shall be maintained at its total revised appropriation amount for the biennium 1992-1993, and requests the Secretary-General to take action to make the best use of those resources, taking into account the relevant recommendations of the Board of Auditors and paragraph 74 of the first report of the Advisory Committee;

6. Decides further to set the vacancy factor in respect of General Service staff at 0.8 per cent;

7. Approves, subject to the modifications below, the recommendations and observations of the Advisory Committee as expressed in chapter II of its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995, and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures;

Section 1. Overall policy-making, direction and coordination

8. Accepts, in addition to the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on this section, the establishment of one D-1, two P-3 and two General Service posts on a temporary basis for the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, decides to review the staffing of this Office, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that there is no duplication with the work of other Secretariat units;

9. Invites Member States to make voluntary contributions for the financing of activities related to the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to clarify and review the distribution of responsibilities and liaison functions between the United Nations centres in Europe vis-à-vis organizations in Europe, taking into account all pertinent considerations and views expressed in the Fifth Committee;

11. Accepts the Secretary-General's proposals for an additional P-5 and an additional P-3 post for the Office of the Director-General of the United Nations Office at Geneva on a temporary basis, and decides to keep under review the staffing of the Office of the Director-General on the basis of a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

Section 3. Political affairs

12. Notes that the proposal of the Secretary-General for the merger of sections 3B and 3C of the programme budget should release resources for redeployment within this section;

13. Accepts the proposal of the Secretary-General for the conversion of the post of Director of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific from the date the Director is permanently located in the Centre at Kathmandu;

14. Also accepts the proposals of the Secretary-General for consultants and ad hoc expert groups for the Office of Disarmament Affairs;

Section 4. Peace-keeping operations and special missions

15. Takes note of the recommendation of the Advisory Committee in its report and the report of the Secretary-General on the support account for peace-keeping operations, and decides to consider the criteria for the scope and use of the support account for peace-keeping operations for headquarters support for peace-keeping operations at the earliest opportunity during its current session, and, pending the outcome of that review, authorizes the Secretary-General to continue current administrative arrangements concerning the Situation Room;

16. Decides to review, at its fiftieth session, the impact of the merger of the Field Operations Division into the Department of Peace-keeping Operations on the overall effectiveness of the Headquarters support system for peace-keeping operations and other field activities, on the basis of a report to be submitted on this matter;

Section 8. Department for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development

17. Accepts the proposals of the Secretary-General for full funding for the ad hoc secretariat on desertification for 1994-1995, subject to any expenditure in 1995 being mandated by the appropriate intergovernmental body;

18. Endorses provisional financing for the Non-Governmental Liaison Service through the United Nations regular budget in the amount proposed by the Secretary-General, on the understanding that such financing should not be used for salaries, travel and representation activities of the staffs of non-governmental organizations; in this regard, the Secretary-General shall require a report from the Non-Governmental Liaison Service on the use of this amount, which will be subject to audit by appropriate bodies;

19. Takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General regarding the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s, and requests the Secretary-General to consider the creation of a new budget section relating to the New Agenda with recommendations for additional resources and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session;

20. Accepts the proposals of the Secretary-General for the World Summit for Social Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women and the Global Conference on Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States in the light of the recommendation of the Committee for Programme and Coordination in paragraph 90 of its report, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that adequate services and resources are provided for those events;

Section 9. Department for Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis

21. Accepts the proposals of the Secretary-General for resources for the preparation and servicing of the International Conference on Population and Development;

22. Also accepts the level of resources recommended by the Advisory Committee and requests the Secretary-General to provide adequate posts for activities dealing with micro-economic issues through redeployment;

Section 10. Department for Development Support and Management Services

23. Accepts, on a provisional basis, the proposal of the Secretary-General for section 10 related to regular budget funding, and requests a review of his proposals in the light of relevant recommendations and decisions of the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme and the recommendations of the Advisory Committee;

24. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of paragraph 33 of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, to review the activities, resources and institutional and organizational arrangements of the Department for Development Support and Management Services, including those related to natural resources, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session with proposals aimed at the most effective delivery of technical cooperation to developing countries;

Section 11A. United Nations Conference on Trade and Development

25. Calls upon the Secretary-General to ensure that the distribution of resources among the subprogrammes of section 11A properly reflects the priorities agreed at the eighth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development held at Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, taking into account the views of the Trade and Development Board, as well as the restructuring in the economic and social sectors;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals for the implementation of section III, paragraph 4 (b), of its resolution 47/212 B in the context of his revised estimates for the biennium 1994-1995, and decides in the meantime to redeploy for activities relating to transnational corporations the temporary D-2 post proposed for abolition in paragraph 11A.57;

27. Accepts the proposal of the Secretary-General for resources for consultants and ad hoc expert groups as contained in paragraph 11A.159;

Section 11B. International Trade Centre UNCTAD/GATT

28. Reiterates its request in section I, paragraph 3 (b), of its resolution 47/212 B, for the prompt appointment of the Executive Director of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/GATT;

Section 12B. United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat)

29. Reiterates its request in section I, paragraph 3 (c), of its resolution 47/212 B, and stresses the need for the Secretary-General to implement fully and promptly the decisions of the General Assembly contained therein;

30. Accepts the proposal of the Secretary-General for the staffing level for this budget section, as shown in the staffing table 12B.3;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to assure the allocation of adequate resources for the preparatory activities for the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat), to be held in 1996;

Section 15. Economic Commission for Africa

32. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the financial situation of the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders under active review and to submit proposals for any necessary additional funding for the Institute;

Section 21. Human rights

33. Accepts the proposals of the Secretary-General for the staffing resources for human rights activities;

34. Requests the Secretary-General to review the allocation of resources among the approved programmes in section 21 so as to ensure the most effective delivery of all mandated activities;

35. Takes note of the comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph VI.2 of its report on section 21 of the proposed programme budget, in particular the issue of workload justification, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the information requested by the Advisory Committee for review by the General Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session;

Section 22A. Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

36. Requests the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner for Refugees to review the existing arrangements for regular budget and extrabudgetary funding for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, taking fully into account the increased demand upon the Office since 1989, and, if necessary, to submit proposals to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session through the appropriate intergovernmental bodies;

Section 23. Department of Humanitarian Affairs

37. Accepts one additional D-1 post located at Geneva and one additional P-2 post located in New York, decides to increase the reduction proposed by the Advisory Committee in its report from three to five General Service posts, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the staffing needs of this section under review;

Section 24. Public information

38. Requests the Secretary-General to review the requirements of the Department of Public Information, taking into account its role, functioning and activities, with a view to making it more effective, more relevant and more cost-effective and enhancing its ability to respond to the mandates entrusted to it;

39. Also requests the Secretary-General to review the resources devoted to public information activities currently proposed outside section 24, to assess their use and to examine the viability and implications of their possible consolidation within that section;

Section 25. Administration and management

40. Requests the Secretary-General to study the management and organizational structure of the Department of Administration and Management, in particular the senior posts structure, and the possible consolidation of administrative functions in various units of the Secretariat, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

41. Also requests the Secretary-General, in the light of paragraph VIII.23 of the report of the Advisory Committee, to submit a report to the General Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session giving justification for his proposals to abolish nineteen posts in the Office of Conference Services, describing carefully the impact of such proposals on activities of the Office and programme delivery, and to submit proposals in this regard;

42. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session a comprehensive study on the organization, management and human resources requirements for the provision of adequate conference services as a basis for the consideration of his proposals for the regular budget for the biennium 1996-1997, and to provide Member States with previous studies on this matter that were carried out during the biennium 1992-1993;

43. Notes that the proposed increase in the section for the Department of Administration and Management is not fully justified;

44. Also notes the growing imbalance between proposed expenditures for administrative matters and those for substantive issues;

45. Further notes the observation of the Committee for Programme and Coordination in paragraph 35 of its report that preference should be given to the redeployment of the proposed increase to the extent possible to priority areas;

Section 27. Special expenses

46. Expresses concern about the high costs of after-service health insurance and requests the Secretary-General to seek ways and means to reduce the increases in these costs;

Section 30. Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance

47. Accepts the recommendations of the Advisory Committee, and decides to reduce further, by 6 million United States dollars, the proposed estimates of the Secretary-General for alterations, improvements and major maintenance at major headquarters locations.

General Assembly resolution 48/228

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/811) without vote, 21 December (meeting 45); draft by Vice-Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/48/L.34), orally revised; agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 24, 26-28, 30-45; plenary 87.

Introducing the text, the Fifth Committee Vice-Chairman said it had been drawn up by consensus and represented a delicate political balance. Thanks to the political will of all Member States, it had been possible to analyse properly each budget section and arrive at the decisions set forth in the resolution.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

In a December 1993 report,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Secretary-General requested authorization from the General Assembly to enter into commitments to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising in the 1994-1995 biennium. He recalled that in 1991 the Assembly had authorized him to enter into such commitments for 1992-1993 or subsequently.⁽¹⁹⁾ It had also authorized commitments not exceeding a total of $3 million a year as he certified related to the maintenance of peace and security, or certain commitments certified by the President of the International Court of Justice (ICJ); or commitments of up to $500,000 as the Secretary-General certified were needed for interorganizational security measures pursuant to a 1981 Assembly resolution.⁽²⁰⁾ The 1991 resolution also provided for the Secretary-General to report on such commitments and seek related appropriations, and for the Assembly to be convened if a decision of the Security Council created a need for commitments for maintaining peace and security that exceeded $10 million. The challenging circumstances facing the Organization and the increasingly fluid international situation which demanded rapid response made such a procedure in 1994-1995 even more necessary, the Secretary-General believed. However, he considered that the current annual limit of $3 million related to the maintenance of peace and security proved to be restrictive and should be raised to $6 million.

With regard to the commitments certified by the President of ICJ, the Court proposed that the text applied prior to the 1988-1989 biennium be used again. That would involve reinsertion of certain items in respect of maintenance in office of judges not re-elected and the payment of pension, travel and removal expenses of such judges, as well as travel, removal and installation grants for newly elected judges.

ACABQ, in an oral report before the Fifth Committee, agreed with those changes. It recommended approval of a $5 million limit, instead of the $6 million proposed, for maintenance of peace and security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/229 without vote.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the biennium 1994-1995

The General Assembly

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and subject to the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and the provisions of paragraph 3 below, to enter into commitments in the biennium 1994-1995 to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to that biennium, provided that the concurrence of the Advisory Committee shall not be necessary for:

(a) Such commitments, not exceeding a total of 5 million United States dollars in any one year of the biennium 1994-1995, as the Secretary-General certifies relate to the maintenance of peace and security;

(b) Such commitments as the President of the International Court of Justice certifies relate to expenses occasioned by:

- (i) The designation of ad hoc judges (Statute of the International Court of Justice, Article 31), not exceeding a total of 300,000 dollars;
 - (ii) The appointment of assessors (Statute, Article 30), or the calling of witnesses and the appointment of experts (Statute, Article 50), not exceeding a total of 50,000 dollars;
 - (iii) The maintenance in office for completion of the cases of judges who have not been re-elected (Statute, Article 13, paragraph 3), not exceeding a total of 40,000 dollars;
 - (iv) The payment of pensions and travel and removal expenses of retiring judges, and travel and removal expenses and installation grant of members of the Court (Statute, Article 32, paragraph 7), not exceeding a total of 180,000 dollars;
 - (v) The holding of sessions of the Court away from The Hague (Statute, Article 22), not exceeding a total of 50,000 dollars;
- (c) Such commitments, in an amount not exceeding 500,000 dollars, in the biennium 1994-1995, as the Secretary-General certifies are required for interorganizational security measures pursuant to section IV of General Assembly resolution 36/235 of 18 December 1981;

2. Resolves that the Secretary-General shall report to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth and fiftieth sessions all commitments made under the provisions of the present resolution, together with the circumstances relating thereto, and shall submit supplementary estimates to the Assembly in respect of such commitments;

3. Decides that, for the biennium 1994-1995, if a decision of the Security Council results in the need for the Secretary-General to enter into commitments relating to the maintenance of peace and security in an amount exceeding 10 million dollars in respect of the decision, that matter shall be brought to the General Assembly, or, if the Assembly is suspended or not in session, a resumed or special session of the Assembly shall be convened by the Secretary-General to consider the matter.

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/811) without vote, 21 December (meeting 45); draft by S-G (A/C.5/48/52), orally revised; agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 24, 26-28, 30-45; plenary 87.

Working Capital Fund

The General Assembly in December 1993 established the Working Capital Fund for the 1994-1995 biennium at the level of $100 million. The provisions of the authorizing resolution (see below) corresponded to those approved in 1991 for the previous biennium.⁽²¹⁾ As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations pending receipt of assessed contributions and to pay unforeseen and extraordinary expenses.

The Independent Advisory Group on United Nations Financing (see above, under "Financial situation") recommended that the Fund's level be raised to $200 million, with the difference to be financed by a one-time assessment of $100 million. The Secretary-General proposed that the Fund's level be increased to an amount corresponding to 25 per cent of the net annual budget; on that basis, the Fund should be set in 1994 at $300 million.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/232 without vote.

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1994-1995

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 1994-1995 in the amount of 100 million United States dollars;

2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 1994;

3. There shall be set off against this allocation of advances:

(a) Credits to Member States resulting from transfers made in 1959 and 1960 from the surplus account to the Working Capital Fund in an adjusted amount of 1,025,092 dollars;

(b) Cash advances paid by Member States to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1992-1993 in accordance with General Assembly resolution 46/188 of 20 December 1991;

4. Should the credits and advances paid by any Member State to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1992-1993 exceed the amount of that Member State's advance under the provisions of paragraph 2 above, the excess shall be set off against the amount of the contributions payable by the Member State in respect of the biennium 1994-1995;

5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:

(a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for the purpose;

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments that may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 48/229 of 23 December 1993 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as may be necessary to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities which, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed 200,000 dollars; advances in excess of the total of 200,000 dollars may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund;

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 above prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 1994-1995, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved in General Assembly resolution 1341(XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

23 December 1994 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/811) without vote, 22 December (meeting 46); agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 24, 26-28, 30-46; plenary 87.

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, created to accommodate additional expenditures relating to each biennium which were derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget, was established by the General Assembly in 1986.⁽²²⁾

The level of the fund for 1994-1995 was set at $20 million by the Assembly in 1992.⁽¹⁶⁾ The consolidated amount of $3,803,400 was within the fund's available balance, as noted in a December 1993 report of the Secretary-General.⁽²³⁾ The Secretary-General suggested that the Fifth Committee recommend to the Assembly, under a 1987 resolution setting out criteria for the use of the fund,⁽⁹⁾ appropriation of the required amounts under the relevant sections of the programme budget, totalling $3,803,400.

ACABQ, in an oral report to the Fifth Committee, noted that the Secretary-General's report did not include programme budget implications of $152,500 of a resolution on the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s (see PART THREE, Chapter III); the total amount to be drawn from the contingency fund was $3,955,900, rather than the amount proposed by the Secretary-General. Accordingly, the balance in the fund would be $20 million, less $3,955,900.

By resolution 48/230, section IX, of 23 December, the Assembly noted that a balance of $16,044,100 remained in the fund.

Contributions

Scale of assessments

Assessment rates of new Member States

The Committee on Contributions (fifty-third session, New York, 14 June-2 July 1993)⁽¹⁾ recommended the rates at which six new Member States, which joined the Organization in 1993 (see PART ONE, Chapter V), were to be assessed for contributions to the regular budget of the United Nations.

The recommended rates of assessment were 0.42 per cent for the Czech Republic, 0.13 per cent for Slovakia, 0.02 per cent for the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and 0.01 per cent each for Eritrea and Monaco. For 1993, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia was asked to pay eight twelfths of the suggested rate, and Eritrea and Monaco seven twelfths. The Committee was unable to decide on a similar recommendation for the Czech Republic and Slovakia.

In considering the rates of the two successor States to the former Czechoslovakia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, the Committee followed the approach used in 1992 in dividing up the rates of the former Soviet Union and the former Yugoslavia. As a result, the previously approved rate of Yugoslavia was recommended to be reduced by that suggested for the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. For Andorra, subsequently admitted to United Nations membership on 28 July, a rate of 0.01 per cent for 1993 and 1994 was recommended. For 1993, its proportional rate was set at five twelfths of the suggested rate.

The Committee received written and oral representations from several States which used to be part of Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia. They drew attention to the complex political, legal, economic and technical issues underlying the concerns of those States about the level of assessment of the former consolidated States, the manner in which the rates were distributed among them and the perceived discrepancies between their individual rates of assessment and their ability to pay. In sympathy with many of those concerns, the Committee concluded that a determination of assessment rates for those States which better reflected their current ability to pay could be achieved only in the context of a new scale of assessments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/223 A on 23 December 1993 without vote.

The General Assembly,

Taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee during the forty-seventh session of the General Assembly,

Resolves that:

1. The rates of assessment of the following States, admitted to membership in the United Nations in 1993, shall be as follows:

Member State	Date of admission
Czech Republic	19 January	0.42
Slovakia	19 January	0.13
The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia	8 April	0.02
Eritrea	28 May	0.01
Monaco	28 May	0.01
Andorra	28 July	0.01

2. For the year of their admission, these Member States shall contribute at the rate of one twelfth of these percentages for each full month of membership. Their contributions for 1993 and 1994 shall be applied to the same basis of assessment as for other Member States, except that, in the case of appropriations or apportionments approved by the General Assembly for the financing of peace-keeping operations, the contributions of these States, as determined by the group of contributors to which they may be assigned by the Assembly, shall be calculated in proportion of the calendar year;

3. The 1993 assessments of the Czech Republic and Slovakia shall be credited to Member States; the advance of the former Czechoslovakia to the Working Capital Fund shall be transferred to the two new States in accordance with their rates of assessment;

4. The 1993 assessments of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia shall be deducted from those of Yugoslavia for that year; the rate of assessment of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia shall be deducted from that of Yugoslavia for 1994; the advance of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia to the Working Capital Fund shall be transferred from that of Yugoslavia in accordance with its rate of assessment;

5. The 1993 assessments of Eritrea, Monaco and Andorra shall be taken into account as miscellaneous income in accordance with regulation 5.2 (c) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations; Monaco's 1993 assessment shall be adjusted by seven twelfths of the flat fee paid for its participation in United Nations activities as a non-member State in that year;

6. The advances of Eritrea, Monaco and Andorra to the Working Capital Fund shall be added to the Fund pending the incorporation of their rates of assessment in a 100 per cent scale.

Assessments for 1995-1997

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/223 B without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the scale of assessments, in particular resolution 46/221 B of 20 December 1991,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions,

Reaffirming that the capacity to pay of Member States is the fundamental criterion for determining the scale of assessments,

1. Requests the Committee on Contributions to recommend to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session a scale of assessments for the period 1995-1997 on the basis of the average of two separate machine scales and the following elements and criteria:

(a) Statistical base periods of seven and eight years;

(b) Uniform exchange rates in accordance with the criteria contained in paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 46/221 B;

(c) The debt adjustment approach used in the preparation of the scale of assessments for the period 1992-1994;

(d) A low per capita income allowance formula with a per capita income limit of the average world per capita income for the statistical base period and a gradient of 85 per cent;

(e) A floor rate of 0.01 per cent and a ceiling rate of 25 per cent;

(f) A scheme of limits whose effects would be phased out by 50 per cent with a view to its complete phasing out in the scale for the period 1998-2000;

2. Decides that in phasing out the scheme of limits, the allocation of additional points resulting therefrom to developing countries benefiting from its application shall be limited to 15 per cent of the effect of the phase-out;

3. Concurs with the observations contained in paragraph 70 of the report of the Committee on Contributions on its fifty-second session and paragraph 29 of its report on its fifty-third session and requests the Committee on Contributions to make recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session that address the problems noted in the above-mentioned paragraphs, taking into account the specific circumstances of Belarus and Ukraine and on the basis of non-discriminatory application of the scale methodology;

4. Decides also that individual rates for the least developed countries should not exceed their current level, namely, 0.01 per cent.

General Assembly resolution 48/223 B

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/806) without vote, 21 December (meeting 45); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/48/L.13); agenda item 127.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 5-9, 12, 41, 42, 45; plenary 87.

Introducing the draft resolution, Barbados stated that, although there had been major differences of opinion during the consultations on the elements to be incorporated in the preparation of the scale of assessments for 1995-1997, the need to adopt a coherent and transparent methodological criterion on the preparation of future scales had been unanimously recognized. Some elements of the guidelines, based on which the Committee on Contributions was requested to prepare the scale, required clarification. Agreement on a single statistical base period had been reached only by resorting to a new procedure, requesting the Committee to calculate the next scale on the basis of the average of two separate machine scales based on statistical base periods of seven and eight years, respectively. It was envisaged that the Committee would make an average of the two separate scales before applying such adjustments as might be necessary. The elements relating to uniform exchange rates and the debt-adjustment approach would apply in the same way as in the preparation of the current scale.

Scale methodology

In the absence of a new mandate from the General Assembly, the Committee on Contributions, at its 1993 session,⁽¹⁾ reviewed all components of the current scale methodology in preparation for calculating the next scale of assessments. It also considered the possibility of preparing the next scale on the basis of a new approach and provided an illustrative table showing its effect on the rates of Member States. In doing so, the Committee considered the need to address the special problems of the Member States formerly part of Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia. For the review of the current scale methodology, its components were divided into income concepts; conversion of national income to United States dollars; and other elements such as statistical base period, low per capita income allowance and scheme of limits. The Committee followed that approach in order to draw a clearer distinction between components based on technical concepts and those largely based on non-technical considerations that were deemed important in the United Nations context.

From a technical point of view, the Committee still considered the national income concept to be more sound than other income concepts for the purposes of the scale of assessments, notwithstanding the use of debt-adjusted income in past or future scales. For application in the near future, the Committee further believed that it would be most appropriate to continue using market exchange rates despite the temporary problems connected with countries whose economies were in transition and the periodic problems with exchange rates that were fixed, controlled or existed under circumstances of high inflation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, on the Fifth Committee's recommendation, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/223 C without vote.

The General Assembly

1. Requests the Committee on Contributions to undertake a thorough and comprehensive review of all aspects of the scale methodology with a view to making it stable, simpler and more transparent while continuing to base it on reliable, verifiable and comparable data, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fiftieth session;

2. Reaffirms the principle of capacity to pay as the fundamental criterion for determining the scale of assessments, and agrees, in principle, to establish an ad hoc body to study the implementation of this principle in determining the scale of assessments and to consider its mandates and modalities at a later stage in the forty-eighth session.

Budget contributions in 1993

Of the $1,555,011,392 in contributions due to the United Nations regular budget as at 1 January 1993, $1,077,008,024 had been collected from Member States by 31 December, leaving $478,003,368 outstanding. Of the total, $400,823,795 was due for 1993 alone, while $77,179,573 was outstanding from previous years. In addition, non-member States owed $3,931,297 for taking part in United Nations activities. Of that sum—comprising $3,554,231 for 1993 and $377,066 for past years—$350,260 was outstanding as at 31 December 1993.

On 19 January 1993,⁽²⁾ the Secretary-General informed the President of the General Assembly that 20 Member States—Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Gambia, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Sao Tome and Principe, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa and Yemen—were over two years in arrears in paying their contributions to the regular budget and for peace-keeping. By five more letters, dated 15 April,⁽³⁾ 7 May,⁽⁴⁾ 2(5) and 15 June,⁽⁶⁾ and 15 September,⁽⁷⁾ the Secretary-General stated that the necessary payments had been made by Haiti, Guatemala, Mauritania, Yemen and Sierra Leone, respectively. On 21 September,⁽⁸⁾ he stated that, at that time, 14 Member States were in arrears—Cambodia, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Gambia, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Niger, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and South Africa. In subsequent letters of 24,⁽⁹⁾ 27⁽¹⁰⁾ and 29 September,⁽¹¹⁾ 4,⁽¹²⁾ 6,⁽¹³⁾ 11⁽¹⁴⁾ and 14 October⁽¹⁵⁾ and 3 November,⁽¹⁶⁾ he said the necessary payments had been made by Cambodia and the Niger, Guinea-Bissau, Mali, the Central African Republic, the Gambia, Chad, the Dominican Republic and the Comoros, respectively. Those 14 States had thus cut their arrears below the requirement under Article 19 of the Charter, regaining their voting privileges in the Assembly.

Accounts and auditing

Accounts of UNHCR and UNITAR

In 1993, the General Assembly accepted the accounts and financial statements for the year ended 31 December 1992 of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR)⁽¹⁾ and the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR),⁽²⁾ as well as the summary of principal findings, conclusions and recommendations for remedial action of the Board of Auditors.

The Board's principal findings and recommendations for remedial action were transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in July 1993.⁽³⁾

With regard to UNITAR, the Board stated that it was unable to satisfy itself that all the transactions included in the financial statements were in accordance with financial regulations and the requisite legislative authority. Expenditures in excess of contributions and other available resources were made in contravention of appropriate statutes. The Board recommended that in view of the Assembly's decision to streamline and restructure the Institute, the UNITAR administration should ensure that its budget was based on realizable income and that programmes or projects did not exceed available voluntary contributions. A liaison officer responsible for the restructuring should be designated and specific guidelines formulated for transferring its accounts and financial services from New York to Geneva, to where UNITAR had been moved.

Concerning UNHCR, the Board recommended that the Internal Audit Division prioritize the strengthening of internal controls on cash resources in field offices in 1994. Administrative lapses and lack of coordination should be assessed and acted on. UNHCR should review its system of allocation of funds to ensure a more efficient distribution of resources and should continue reviewing and cancelling long-outstanding unliquidated obligations, including those raised against contributions in kind amounting to $33.8 million as at 31 December 1992. Field offices should be instructed to comply with reporting requirements, and accounting for contributions in kind should conform to common accounting standards being developed for the United Nations system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/216 A without vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered, for the year ended 31 December 1992, the financial reports and audited financial statements of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and the audited financial statements of the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the reports and audited opinions of the Board of Auditors, as well as the summary of the principal findings, conclusions and recommendations for remedial action of the Board of Auditors,

Noting the steps taken by the executive heads and governing bodies of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to give appropriate consideration and attention to the recommendations in earlier audit reports, as commented upon by the Board of Auditors in the annexes to its current reports,

1. Recognizes that the Board of Auditors conducts its reviews in a comprehensive manner, as stipulated in regulation 12.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, and expresses its appreciation to the Board for the action-oriented and concrete recommendations contained in its reports;

2. Accepts the financial report and audited financial statements and the audit opinions and reports of the Board of Auditors regarding the aforementioned organizations;

3. Abo accepts the concise summary of principal findings, conclusions and recommendations for remedial action of the Board of Auditors;

4. Notes with concern that the Board of Auditors issued a qualified audit opinion on the financial statements of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, and in this connection reaffirms the importance of compliance with the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, especially regulations 4.1 and 13.2;

5. Approves all the recommendations and conclusions of the Board of Auditors;

6. Requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to implement better financial management systems that will permit an effective and economic delivery of its programme and reduce persistent over-obligation of funds.

Implementation of 1992 recommendations

In October 1993,(4) the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the recommendations that the Board of Auditors had made in 1992(5) regarding strengthening of budgetary control to avoid over-expenditure of approved budgets; more cost-effective and transparent purchasing policy by reducing the number of exceptions to competitive bidding; more effective managing and controlling of allowances and benefits for staff; compliance with the Board's recommendations on the hiring, remuneration and performance evaluation of experts, consultants and short-term personnel; and improved control over non-expendable property in all locations, including peace-keeping operations. The comments of ACABQ were taken into account in the preparation of the report.

The Secretary-General stated that measures were being taken to ensure compliance with the Board's recommendation that expenditures be incurred only within the approved appropriations. Procedures were being designed under the Integrated Management Information System to ensure that obligations were not accepted if funds were not available. An administrative instruction of January 1992 addressed the establishment of standards for controlling non-expendable property, and property records were being kept by respective departments and offices.

On property accountability in field missions, he stated that 23 of 27 missions had provided inventory reports of non-expendable property; the others were expected to do so by the end of the year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, on the Fifth Committee's recommendation, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/216 B without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 47/211 of 23 December 1992, and especially paragraphs 9 and 10 thereof,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors in its report for the period ended 31 December 1991,

1. Recognizes the role of the Board of Auditors in carrying out comprehensive and financial audits of the United Nations and its organizations and programmes;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, and requests the Board to consider the report when it follows up on its recommendations in its report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

3. Notes with deep concern that, with a few commendable exceptions, most United Nations organizations and programmes have taken no steps to address the requests contained in paragraphs 9 and 10 of its resolution 47/211;

4. Urges the executive heads of the International Trade Centre, the United Nations University, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation to comply fully with paragraphs 9 and 10 of its resolution 47/211;

5. Reiterates its request to the executive heads of the United Nations organizations and programmes to submit reports on measures taken or to be taken in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, including timetables for their implementation, to the General Assembly at its resumed forty-eighth session, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

6. Requests the executive heads of the United Nations organizations and programmes, in preparing the above-mentioned reports, to give particular attention to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors regarding procurement, the employment of consultants and property accountability in field missions, and in this connection requests the Board, in its audits for the biennium 1992-1993, to give particular attention to those matters;

7. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the United Nations organizations and programmes, at the same time as the recommendations of the Board of Auditors are submitted to the General Assembly, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to provide the Assembly with their responses and to indicate measures that would be taken to implement these recommendations, with appropriate timetables;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the United Nations organizations and programmes to draw attention in such reports to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, the implementation of which would require action by the General Assembly.

Accounting standards

In October 1993,⁽⁶⁾ the Secretary-General presented a report on common inter-organization accounting standards, in response to a 1992 General Assembly decision.⁽⁷⁾ Since his previous report of September 1992,⁽⁸⁾ the Working Party on Accounting Standards, established by the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Financial and Budgetary Questions), had held two meetings, in December 1992 and June 1993, in order to add new provisions to the draft standards and review existing ones. The text of the standards, as adopted by the Administrative Committee on Coordination, was annexed to the Secretary-General's report.

The standards were intended to provide a framework for accounting and financial reporting in the United Nations system which reflected generally accepted accounting principles, while taking into consideration specific characteristics and needs. They were also to promote consistent accounting and financial reporting practice among the organizations. The standards were based essentially on those promulgated by the International Accounting Standards Committee. In developing them, other authoritative sources, including the recommendations of professional bodies concerned with accounting standards in the public sector, were consulted. The Secretary-General concluded that the standards represented an important advance, having been drawn up in a cooperative spirit by the organizations of the United Nations system. He noted the constructive interest of the Panel of External Auditors, whose suggestions had contributed to the attainment of the standards, and invited the Assembly to take note of the standards and the organizations' plans for their application and development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/216 C without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decisions 46/445 of 20 December 1991 and 47/449 of 22 December 1992,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on accounting standards,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Takes note of the United Nations system accounting standards contained in the annex to the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the United Nations organizations and programmes to take those standards into account in the preparation of their financial statements for the period ending 31 December 1993;

3. Also takes note of the plans of the organization for the application and development of the United Nations system accounting standards, as reflected in paragraphs 9 and 11 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, at its fifty-first session.

Term of office of Board members

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/216 D without vote.

The General Assembly,

Noting that the United Nations and most of its organizations and programmes have a two-year financial period, but that members of the Board of Auditors have a three-year term of office,

Invites the Board of Auditors, in consultation with the Secretary-General, to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on the implications of extending the term of office of members of the Board of Auditors to four or six years.

Chapter II

United Nations officials

In 1993, the Secretary-General continued the restructuring of the Secretariat, with the creation of new departments, redeployment of posts and the redistribution of resources among various sections of the programme budget for the remainder of the 1992-1993 biennium and for the proposed 1994-1995 budget.

Matters related to personnel management, the administration of justice in the Secretariat, and amendments to the Staff Rules and Regulations remained on the agenda of the General Assembly, which acted on those issues in resolution 47/226. The Assembly urged the Secretary-General to implement the plan of action for improving the status of women in the Secretariat by 1995, to give greater priority to the recruitment and promotion of women, and to increase the number of women from developing countries (48/106).

The International Civil Service Commission made several recommendations to the Assembly, including changes in the methodology for determining the pensionable remuneration of staff in the General Service and related categories. The Assembly acted on those recommendations in resolution 48/224 and endorsed those concerning the United Nations pension system in resolution 48/225.

Restructuring of the SecretariatHigh-level posts for 1992-1993

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a March 1993 report⁽²⁾ dealing with, inter alia, proposed changes in the number and distribution of high-level posts in the United Nations Secretariat for the remainder of the biennium 1992-1993.

In connection with the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the Secretariat, begun in February 1992, he reiterated his 1992 proposal⁽³⁾ to establish three new departments headed by Under-Secretaries-General (USGs): the Department for Policy Coordination and Sustainable Development, which would provide support for central coordinating and policy-making functions vested in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies, as well as the Assembly's Second and Third Committees; the Department of Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis, which would focus on the compilation and dissemination of economic and social statistics, the analysis of long-term trends, the assessment of economic and social policies, the elaboration of projections and the identification of new and emerging issues; and the Department of Development Support and Management Services (DDSMS), which would act as an executing agency for programmes and projects in selected cross-sectoral areas in institution-building and human resources development and serve as a focal point for management services and technical cooperation. The Secretary-General proposed that the latter Department incorporate the Office for Project Services (OPS) of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), and that functions and posts be transferred between departments and duty stations.

The Secretary-General further proposed the following: to abolish the USG post in the Department of Economic and Social Development, the USG post of the Executive Director of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (UNCHS), following his decision to place the Centre and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) under common direction, and four Assistant Secretary-General (ASG) posts in the Department of Administration and Management (DAM), one each in the Department of Political Affairs (DPA) and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development; to downgrade the USG post of the head of the Department of Public Information to the ASG level and the ASG post of the head of the International Trade Centre (ITC) to the D-2 level; and to create an ASG post to head the Centre on Human Rights and a temporary ASG post for the Secretary-General of the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women. He announced his intention to study the possibility of introducing a D-3 senior career level for selected managerial responsibilities, equivalent to an ASG in terms of emoluments. He concluded that the restructuring would thus lead to a reduction of 13 high-level posts, with 3 additional posts remaining vacant pending further proposals.

Acting on the Secretary-General's report, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), also in March,⁽⁴⁾ requested a more detailed explanation of the various components, structure and operation of the three proposed departments in the economic and social sectors. It expressed the view that more justification was needed in relation to the transfer of functions and posts between duty stations as well as to the creation and abolition of high-level posts, and it recommended the development of classification criteria for such posts. Noting that DAM was the largest department in the Secretariat, ACABQ observed that its senior officials should have a degree of authority equivalent to senior officials in other areas of the United Nations and recommended the deferral of action on the proposed abolition of the four ASG posts, pending a further review and explanation of such action. It cautioned that the proposed establishment of a D-3 level would defeat the objective of rationalizing the number of high-echelon posts and requested the Secretary-General to submit a detailed report on the modalities for integrating OPS in DDSMS. In addition, ACABQ made recommendations concerning vacancy management and the transfer of functions within the Secretariat, especially in the public information and common support service sector.

In a March letter to the Chairman of the General Assembly's Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee,⁽⁷⁾ the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences noted that the proposed restructuring within DAM would create a gap between the head of the Department at the USG level and heads of offices at the D-2 level.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 May, at its resumed forty-seventh session, the General Assembly, by resolution 47/212 B, approved the Secretary-General's proposals with regard to high-level posts but deferred action on the proposed abolition of the four ASG posts in DAM and the USG post in UNCHS, and requested him to reconsider those proposals. The Secretary-General was also requested to pursue an agreement with the Director-General of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade on the prompt appointment of an Executive Director of ITC at its current level. The Assembly concurred with ACABQ's observations regarding the establishment of a D-3 level and endorsed the view of the Committee on Conferences expressed in its Chairman's letter to the Fifth Committee.

High-level posts for 1994-1995

In November, the Secretary-General presented proposed requirements for high-level posts for the biennium 1994-1995.⁽⁸⁾ He stated that, despite a dramatic expansion in United Nations activities, there would be no increase in the number of such posts and that the location of most of them would remain unchanged. He also concluded that there was no need to introduce a new D-3 category of senior permanent appointments. He proposed to allocate two ASGs to DAM, one as Controller and the other to oversee conference and general services, and to redeploy two ASG posts from that Department: one to head the new Office of Inspections and Investigations, reporting to the Secretary-General, and the other to DPA. In the latter Department, which was to be headed by a USG with the support of two ASGs, changes included the abolition of one USG post. An additional ASG post for the Department of Peace-keeping Operations (DPKO) was to be redeployed from the Protocol and Liaison Service of the Secretary-General's Executive Office. In addition, the Secretary-General proposed to replace the current USG post in UNCHS with an ASG position.

In December,⁽⁷⁾ ACABQ expressed the view that institutional arrangements for UNCHS required an intergovernmental decision and requested the Secretary-General to keep his proposal regarding joint direction for UNEP and UNCHS under review. It recommended accommodating the additional ASG post in DPA by downgrading the USG post proposed for abolition. It observed that the decision to retain two ASG posts in DAM instead of four was not fully explained and that the functions of the ASG overseeing conference and general services were not clear. The Committee requested the Secretary-General to resubmit his proposals for the senior structure of DAM and to explain further his proposal to transfer secretariat services to it.

On 23 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 48/230, section VI, endorsed ACABQ's observations and recommendations. By resolution 48/228 of the same date, the Assembly reiterated its requests for the prompt appointment of the Executive Secretary of ITC and for a report on senior management arrangements for UNCHS, and requested the Secretary-General to report in 1994 on the management and organizational structure of DAM. (For further information on the restructuring of the Secretariat and resources required for it, see previous chapter.)

Integration of UNDP/OPS in the Secretariat

In an October report with subsequent addenda,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General outlined the modalities for integrating OPS from UNDP into DDSMS, as elaborated by the OPS task force and its working groups on personnel, finance, procurement and governance. The report described, inter alia, common and specific personnel arrangements for Professional and General Service staff, as well as those related to project personnel, and estimated the overall staffing requirements of the Office for 1994-1995 at 296 posts, including 58 posts which could be redeployed from the former staffing table of DDSMS (see also PART THREE, Chapter II).

By decision 48/459 of 23 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) held two sessions in 1993, its thirty-seventh from 8 to 26 March in New York and its thirty-eighth from 15 July to 3 August at Vienna. The Commission examined issues that derived from resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and governing bodies of other organizations participating in the United Nations common system of salaries and allowances, as well as from its own statute. It considered matters related to pensionable remuneration and pension entitlements, conditions of service of the Professional and higher categories, remuneration of the General Service and related categories, and conditions of service applicable to both categories. A summary of its deliberations and decisions was provided in its nineteenth annual report,⁽¹⁾ on which the General Assembly acted in December (see below).

In a November statement,⁽²⁾ the Secretary-General indicated that cost reductions resulting from the Commission's 1993 decisions and recommendations amounted to $14,361,800 for 1994 and $18,686,300 for 1995, with an additional reduction of $65,700 estimated for 1993. At the same time, income from staff assessment was estimated to decline by $13,371,900 in 1994 and $17,729,700 in 1995, bringing the net reduction of costs in 1994 and 1995 to $989,900 and $956,600, respectively. He further noted that reductions relating to expenditures for staff assessment and to income from staff assessment, in the amount of $31,101,600 each, would be made in the process of recosting the proposed programme budget 1994-1995.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/224 without vote.

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the nineteenth annual report of the International Civil Service Commission and other related reports,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single unified United Nations common system,

Strongly supporting the work of the International Civil Service Commission as an independent expert body towards regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

I

Staff participation in the work of the Commission

Recalling section II, paragraph 2, of its resolution 45/241 of 21 December 1990, section I, paragraph 5, of its resolution 46/191 A of 20 December 1991 and section I.B of its resolution 47/216 of 23 December 1992,

Noting the changes introduced by the International Civil Service Commission in its working methods that resulted in the full participation of the Coordinating Committee for Independent Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System in the work of the Commission,

Regrets the continued suspension of participation by the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations in the work of the International Civil Service Commission, and again urges that the Commission and the Federation work towards the re-starting of the dialogue between them;

II

Conditions of service of the Professional and higher categories

A. Comparator

Recalling section VI of its resolution 46/191 A and section ILC of its resolution 47/216,

Takes note of the programme of work of the International Civil Service Commission outlined in its annual report relating to specific issues regarding the application of the Noblemaire principle, and in this regard stresses the universal character of the United Nations;

B. Margin considerations

Recalling section I.LA of its resolution 47/216, in which the General Assembly took note of the study by the International Civil Service Commission of the methodology for determining the cost-of-living differential between New York and Washington, DC., in the context of net remuneration margin calculations, and requested the Commission to submit a report on the application of the methodology to it,

1. Takes note of the decisions of the International Civil Service Commission with regard to the introduction of the new methodology;

2. Notes the net remuneration margin of 114.2 for the calendar year 1993;

3. Also notes from annex VIII to the report of the Commission that the United Nations/United States remuneration ratios range from 186.0 at the P-1 level to 116.5 at the D-2 level, considers that this imbalance should be addressed in the context of the overall margin considerations established by the General Assembly, and reiterates its request to the Commission, contained in section II.G of its resolution 47/216, to make proposals in this regard to it at its forty-ninth session;

C. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling section I.H, paragraph 1, of its resolution 44/198 of 21 December 1989, by which it approved the establishment of a floor net salary scale by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service, as well as section V of its resolution 47/216,

1. Approves, with effect from 1 March 1994, the revised scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories contained in annex I to the present resolution;

2. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to review and, if necessary, recommend revised rates of staff assessment consequential upon changes in the base/floor salary scale;

D. Expatriate entitlements

Recalling section I.G, paragraph 3, of its resolution 44/198, in which it requested the International Civil Service Commission to collect the necessary information on the practices of the organizations of the United Nations common system regarding the granting of expatriate entitlements to staff members living in their home country while stationed at duty stations located in another country, in order to assess the feasibility of harmonizing practices among organizations,

1. Notes the conclusion of the International Civil Service Commission that the practices followed by the organizations of the United Nations common system were consistent with the provisions of the staff regulations and rules as adopted by the governing bodies of the organizations concerned;

2. Requests the Commission to study the matter further, with a view to harmonizing the practices of organizations with those of the United Nations and to make recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-first session;

E. Language incentive

Recalling its resolution 2480 B(XXIII) of 21 December 1968, section III, paragraph 2, of its resolution 38/232 of 20 December 1983 and section LA of its resolution 47/216,

1. Decides that organizations wishing to introduce the language incentive scheme to promote linguistic balance should do so within the parameters set out in the report of the International Civil Service Commission and in this regard requests all United Nations organizations to pay particular attention to the situation of staff members whose mother tongue is not an official language of the United Nations;

2. Decides also that the organizations that already have a language incentive scheme should ensure that the scheme is in line with the parameters set out in the report of the Commission;

3. Requests the Commission to report on the introduction of the language incentive scheme by the organizations, to review the scheme after taking into account the views expressed in the General Assembly and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fifty-third session;

F. Relationship between hours of work and remuneration

Recalling section LA of its resolution 47/216,

1. Concurs fully with the views expressed by the International Civil Service Commission regarding the relationship between hours of work and remuneration as set out in its annual report;

2. Endorses the decision of the Commission to maintain the current common system practice with regard to working hours;

G. Post adjustment issues

Taking note of paragraph 142 of the report of the International Civil Service Commission,

Requests the International Civil Service Commission to ensure that place-to-place surveys conducted for all headquarters duty stations are fully representative of the cost of living of all staff working in the duty station;

III

General Service salary survey methodology

Recalling section XIII, paragraph 4, of its resolution

45/241 and section X of its resolution 46/191 A, in which, inter alia, it requested the International Civil Service Commission to report on its review of the methodology for the conduct of salary surveys of the General Service and related categories at headquarters duty stations,

Recalling its request to the Secretary-General in section XIII, paragraph 3, of its resolution 45/241 and section III of its resolution 47/216 to submit a report on procedures whereby the Secretary-General and other executive heads could take measures regarding salary scales of the General Service category at variance with recommendations of the Commission only after consultations with the appropriate intergovernmental bodies and the Commission,

Taking note of the note of the Secretary-General, in which he proposes that consultation with the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions be conducted prior to making a decision on the establishment of General Service salaries following a survey carried out by the Commission,

1. Takes note of the decisions of the International Civil Service Commission in respect of its review of the general methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at non-headquarters duty stations;

2. Urges organizations to implement the recommendations of the Commission with regard to salary scales for staff in the General Service and related categories, and requests that, in cases where decisions at variance with the recommendations of the Commission are envisaged, the matter be referred to the governing body of the organization(s) concerned;

IV

Staff assessment and Tax Equalization Fund

Recalling section XXVI, paragraph 4, of its resolution 47/219 A of 23 December 1992, concerning the first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993, in which it urged the International Civil Service Commission to review the rates of staff assessment during 1993,

Recalling also its decision 47/459 of 23 December 1992, in which it requested the Secretary-General to review all aspects of the question of staff assessment as they affected the budgets of the United Nations organizations and programmes, taking into account the views of the Commission and the experience of other organizations of the common system, and to present proposals to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session, through the Commission,

1. Adopts, with effect from 1 March 1994, the revised staff assessment scale and consequential amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, as contained in annex II to the present resolution, for use in conjunction with gross base salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories;

2. Regrets that it has not received the review of all aspects of the question of staff assessment as requested in its decision 47/459, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the report no later than at its forty-ninth session;

Personnel policy considerations

Recalling its request in section XII, paragraph 1, of its resolution 45/241 and section VIII of its resolution 46/191 A that, as a matter of priority, the International Civil Service Commission resume active consideration of the substantive areas covered under articles 13 and 14 of its statute,

Recalling section VII of its resolution 47/216, by which it urged the Commission to give attention in its work programme to measures designed to promote sound personnel management in the international public service,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the International Civil Service Commission under articles 13 and 14 of its statute with regard to job classification and human resource management, training in the context of human resource development and the status of women in the United Nations common system;

2. Urges the Commission, in this context, to devote further attention to personnel management issues;

3. Takes note of the report of the Commission on the implementation of its decisions and recommendations, submitted under article 17 of its statute, and welcomes the action taken by the World Health Assembly and the Governing Body of the International Labour Organisation regarding the extra steps beyond the common system salary scales;

VI

Decisions of Administrative Tribunals

Recalling its resolution 3357(XXIX) of 18 December 1974, by which it established the International Civil Service Commission for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Noting that judgements regarding the conditions of service of staff, including, inter alia, salary scales for the General Service and related categories and post adjustment for the Professional and higher categories, by either the United Nations Administrative Tribunal or the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation, may have a consequential impact for the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund,

Noting also that—while under article 20 of the rules of procedure of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and under article 17, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation the Chairman of the Pension Board may, on giving previous notice to the President of the Tribunal concerned, intervene in a case if it is considered that the judgement to be given by the Tribunal could affect the administration of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund—there are no established mechanisms to ensure that the Pension Fund receives timely notice of such cases and that, furthermore, such opportunity is not provided to the Commission by either Tribunal,

1. Notes the administrative and financial implications for the organizations of the United Nations common system of judgements Nos. 1265 and 1266 of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation regarding the salary scale resulting from the General Service salary survey for Geneva conducted by the International Civil Service Commission in 1990;

2. Regrets in this regard that the Commission and the common system organizations, other than the respondent, did not have an opportunity to have their views presented to the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to consult fully with the Commission regarding the methodologies, procedures and rationale used in arriving at its decisions or recommendations that are the subject of appeals before the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and to ensure that the views of the Commission are fully reflected in his submissions to the Tribunal;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to consult with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in the event that the outcome of the appeals mentioned in paragraph 3 above have an impact on the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund;

5. Requests the executive heads of the other organizations of the common system to consult with the Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board as set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 above, respectively, in similar cases before the United Nations Administrative Tribunal or the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation where they are the respondents;

6. Urges the governing bodies of the organizations of the common system to ensure that the executive heads of their organizations consult the Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on all such cases before either Tribunal;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the executive heads of the organizations of the common system, to examine the feasibility of:

(a) Amending the statute of the International Civil Service Commission and/or the relationship agreements between the United Nations and the other organizations of the common system with a view to ensuring a coordinated response in all appeals involving the conditions of service of staff of the common system;

(b) Introducing arrangements similar to those under article 20 of the rules of procedure of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and article 17, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation, with established mechanisms for providing timely notice of such cases to the International Civil Service Commission, to enable the Commission to intervene in appeals before those Tribunals involving decisions or recommendations of the Commission or any other common system issues; and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session.

S = Rate applicable to staff members with no dependent spouse or child.

*This scale represents the result of a consolidation of 3.6 multiplier points of post adjustment into net base salary. There will be consequential adjustments in the post adjustment indices and multipliers at all duty stations effective 1 March 1994. Thereafter, changes in post adjustment classifications will be effected on the basis of the movements of the newly consolidated post adjustment indices.

Personnel management

In April, at its resumed forty-seventh session, the General Assembly acted on the Secretary-General's reports on personnel questions, consideration of which it had deferred in 1992.⁽¹⁾ In October 1993, the Secretary-General requested⁽²⁾ the Assembly to include in the agenda of its forty-eighth session an item on personnel questions in order to consider a report on the equitable geographical representation of Member States in the Secretariat, prepared pursuant to Assembly resolution 47/226 of 8 April.

In December, ACABQ, in the first report on the proposed programme budget for 1994-1995⁽³⁾ (see previous chapter), noted that the temporary suspension of external recruitment for posts in the Professional category, introduced in February 1992, had placed a strain on existing staff resources and necessitated numerous exceptions. The Advisory Committee was of the opinion that, given the Organization's expanding responsibilities, the suspension should end. It also noted confusion connected with the redeployment of vacant posts to and from a "vacancy pool" and within and between budget sections. ACABQ underscored the importance of distinguishing between changes in the staffing table resulting from the restructuring, the treatment of vacancies, and proposals for the creation of new posts. It recommended that its prior concurrence be sought when the movement of a post represented a transfer of resources between budget sections.

In a statement before the Fifth Committee on 24 November, the Secretary-General said that, once the budget for 1994-1995 was approved, it might be possible to lift the freeze on recruitment and offer longer-term contracts to senior staff.

By resolution 48/228 of 23 December, the General Assembly took note of ACABQ's opinion regarding the suspension of recruitment, endorsed its recommendations regarding the vacancy management system, and decided to set the vacancy factor for General Service staff at 0.8 per cent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 April, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 47/226 without vote.

Personnel questions

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 8, 97, 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming its resolutions 45/239 A to C of 21 December 1990 and 46/232 of 2 March 1992,

Bearing in mind the views expressed by Member States on personnel questions in the Fifth Committee during its forty-seventh session,

Noting with appreciation the statement on personnel questions made by the Secretary-General to the Fifth Committee on 6 November 1992,

Having considered the documents on personnel questions submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly,

Aware of the views expressed by the recognized staff representatives in the Fifth Committee in accordance with its resolution 35/213 of 17 December 1980,

Recognizing that the staff of the Organization is an invaluable asset of the United Nations, and commending its contribution to furthering the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

1. Reiterates its full support for the Secretary-General as the chief administrative officer of the Organization, and underlines its full respect for his prerogatives and responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Stresses the importance of ensuring that personnel management is conducive to the recruitment and retention of staff of the highest quality;

3. Urges the Secretary-General to review and improve, where necessary, all personnel policies and procedures with a view to making them more simple, transparent and relevant to the new demands placed upon the Secretariat, while promoting the full development of staff potential;

4. Takes note of the comments in the report submitted by the Secretary-General on the respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations on how best to assist and rehabilitate staff members in dealing with the after-effects of traumatic and stressful security-related experiences, and looks forward to receiving further information thereon at its forty-ninth session;

5. Reaffirms the need for the Secretary-General to use to the fullest extent the staff-management consultative mechanisms set out in staff rule 108.2;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to implement appropriate measures to ensure that no restriction or discrimination exists in the United Nations for the recruitment, appointment and promotion of men and women;

I. Personnel management planning

Welcoming the integrated approach adopted by the Secretary-General to personnel management planning,

A. Recruitment

Reaffirming, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, that the paramount consideration in the appointment, promotion, granting or reviewing of permanent contracts and career development of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity, and with respect to recruitment, that due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible,

Noting the positive results of national competitive examinations for posts at junior Professional levels as a useful tool for recruitment of highly qualified staff,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to expedite the national competitive examination process at the P-1 and P-2 levels;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to further his efforts to introduce the competitive examination process at the P-3 level, with due regard to the promotion prospects of staff members at the P-2 level and with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to speed up the examination process and to ensure that successful candidates are offered positions without delay;

4. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To continue to recruit external candidates in a manner consistent with staff regulation 4.4;

(b) To ensure that the vacancy announcement bulletins are given the widest possible circulation, inter alia, by distributing them without delay to the Permanent Missions to the United Nations;

(c) To ensure that the recruitment process is completed as quickly as possible while allowing sufficient time for applications to be received;

5. Expresses the hope that the Secretary-General would end the temporary suspension of recruitment as soon as possible;

1. Composition of the Secretariat

Noting that the temporary suspension of recruitment, together with a growing number of new Member States, has affected the representation of Member States in the Secretariat,

1. Reaffirms that no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group of States;

2. Recognizes that the system of desirable ranges has been established as one of the guiding principles to provide in the recruitment of staff for geographical representation of Member States in posts subject to geographical distribution in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Urges the Secretary-General, whenever making appointments at all levels to posts subject to geographical distribution, to continue his efforts to ensure that all Member States, in particular the unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, are adequately represented in the Secretariat, bearing in mind the need to increase the number of staff recruited from Member States below the mid-point of their desirable ranges;

4. Decides to establish an open-ended Working Group of the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly, and requests its Chairman to convene a meeting of the Working Group for one week at Headquarters, in the spring of 1993, to consider the formula for the determination of equitable geographical representation of Member States in the Secretariat, on the basis of Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter, as set out in Assembly resolution 41/206 C of 11 December 1986 and further outlined in Assembly resolutions 42/220 A of 21 December 1987, 45/239 A, 46/232 and other relevant resolutions, and requests the Chairman of the Fifth Committee to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-eighth session, as an exceptional measure and without prejudice to the full implementation of Assembly resolution 46/220 of 20 December 1991;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to exercise flexibility in the application of desirable ranges in individual recruitment cases, keeping in view all parts of the present resolution;

2. Secondment

Reaffirming that there are differences inherent in the secondment of staff from government service to the United Nations and secondment between agencies of the United Nations common system,

1. Reaffirms that secondment from government service is consistent with Articles 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations and that it can be beneficial to both the Organization and Member States;

2. Decides that secondment from government service should, irrespective of the length of its period, be based on a tripartite agreement among the Organization, the Member State and the staff member concerned;

3. Also decides that the renewal of a fixed-term appointment that extends the secondment status of a staff member seconded from government service shall be subject to agreement by the Organization, the Government and the staff member concerned;

4. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in consultation with the International Civil Service Commission, to develop a standardized contracting procedure to be used for secondments into and out of the Organization that would take into account the legitimate interests of all the three parties mentioned in paragraph 3, while assuring that the conditions set out in Articles 100 and 101 of the Charter and in the Staff Rules are respected;

5. Amends staff regulation 4.1 and annex II to the Staff Regulations to read:

"Regulation 4.1: As stated in Article 101 of the Charter, the power of appointment of staff members rests with the Secretary-General. Upon appointment, each staff member, including a staff member on secondment from government service, shall receive a letter of appointment in accordance with the provisions of annex II to the present Regulations and signed by the Secretary-General or by an official in the name of the Secretary-General."

"ANNEX II

"LETTERS OF APPOINTMENT

"(a) The letter of appointment shall state:

"(i) That the appointment is subject to the provisions of the Staff Regulations and the Staff Rules applicable to the category of appointment in question and to changes which may be duly made in such regulations and rules from time to time;

"(ii) The nature of the appointment;

"(iii) The date at which the staff member is required to enter upon his or her duties;

"(iv) The period of appointment, the notice required to terminate it and period of probation, if any;

"(v) The category, level, commencing rate of salary and, if increments are allowable, the scale of increments and the maximum attainable;

"(vi) Any special conditions which may be applicable;

"(b) A copy of the Staff Regulations and the Staff Rules shall be transmitted to the staff member with the letter of appointment. In accepting appointment the staff member shall state that he or she has been acquainted with and accepts the conditions laid down in the Staff Regulations and in the Staff Rules.

"(c) The letter of appointment of a staff member on secondment from government service signed by the staff member and by or on behalf of the Secretary-General, and relevant supporting documentation of the terms and conditions of secondment agreed to by the Member State and the staff member, shall be evidence of the existence and validity of secondment from government service to the Organization for the period stated in the letter of appointment.";

3. Employment of spouses

Considering that employment possibilities for spouses accompanying staff members contribute to attracting and retaining the most qualified staff,

Noting that the absence of these possibilities may be an obstacle to the mobility of staff,

1. Invites the Secretary-General to pursue actively the possibilities of employment of spouses accompanying staff members;

2. Also invites the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to review with his colleagues in the Committee ways to improve coordination and reduce impediments to the employment of qualified spouses accompanying staff members of the United Nations common system organizations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

3. Invites Governments in host countries to consider granting work permits for or otherwise enabling the employment of spouses accompanying staff members of international organizations;

B. Career development

Recognizing that career development is an indispensable part of an effective management of personnel, Believing that exchange of staff between national Governments and United Nations organizations can enhance their effectiveness and career development,

1. Endorses the underlying principles contained in the reports of the Secretary-General on career development at the United Nations and the training programme in the Secretariat;

2. Recognizes that the implementation of the career development system as proposed by the Secretary-General in his report on career development at the United Nations requires enhancement of and respect for the authority of the Office of Human Resources Management in accordance with the pertinent recommendations of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations;

3. Urges the Secretary-General to undertake without delay a complete review of the performance evaluation system currently in use in the Secretariat, in consultation with the International Civil Service Commission as appropriate, with a view to developing it into an effective system that accurately assesses staff performance and improves staff accountability as part of the career development system;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to accord priority to the career development needs of staff through appropriate training and rotation of assignments, as appropriate;

5. Endorses the proposals of the Secretary-General to improve the training programme, stresses the need to focus training on priority areas of the Organization and concurs with the Secretary-General that appropriate resourcing for training is important;

6. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that under the responsibility of the Office of Human Resources Management effective career counselling is provided to staff in order adequately to assist them in their career planning;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that for those staff members whose performance evaluations consistently show poor levels of performance, procedures outlined in staff regulation 9.1 (a) are effectively applied;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to explore ways and means to encourage exchange of staff between the United Nations and national Governments and international organizations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to examine or review the possibility and desirability of achieving an appropriate flexibility between career and fixed-term appointments, taking into account the functional and structural needs of the Organization as well as the requirements of a career international civil service, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

10. Notes the implementation of the mobility pilot project in the occupational group of administrative staff, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General on career development at the United Nations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to incorporate in the programme of activities for the Office of Human Resources Management, within the existing level of the budget provision for that Office, an equal employment opportunity programme, taking due account of the existence of the Focal Point for Women, and entailing procedures to ensure that opportunities for staff selection and advancement are extended on the basis of merit, efficiency, competence and integrity and do not discriminate against staff of either gender, and also requests that these principles be applied by the Secretariat in its pursuit of the benchmarks set out in General Assembly resolution 45/239 C for the participation of women in Professional posts in the Secretariat and in pursuing the goal of the Secretary-General announced in the Fifth Committee on 6 November 1992;

12. Encourages the Secretary-General to take into account the knowledge of a second official language of the United Nations in the promotion of all Professional staff, in accordance with relevant General Assembly resolutions;

13. Urges the Secretary-General to introduce appropriate measures in conjunction with the International Civil Service Commission to enhance the motivation of the staff in order to increase creativity and productivity;

C. Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

Recalling Articles 8 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also the goals set in its resolution 45/239 C, Reaffirming that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibility for administrative, budgetary and personnel matters, including, inter alia, the issue of representation of women in the Secretariat,

Recognizing that the advancement of women in the Secretariat requires commitment,

Noting the intention of the Secretary-General to bring the gender balance in policy-level positions as close as possible to 50:50 by the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations,

1. Urges the Secretary-General to implement the action programme contained in his report on improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat designed to overcome the obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to accord high priority to the recruitment and promotion of women to posts subject to geographical distribution, particularly at the senior policy and decision-making levels, in order to achieve the goals set in its resolution 45/239 C;

3. Encourages the Secretary-General to improve the role of the Focal Point for Women so as to reach the benchmarks set out in its resolution 45/239 C;

4. Appeals to all Member States to support the efforts of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and related organizations to increase the participation of women in posts in the Professional category and above, by identifying and nominating more women candidates, especially for senior policy-level and decision-making posts, encouraging more women to apply for vacant posts and to sit for the national competitive examinations where applicable and creating and maintaining national rosters of women candidates to be shared with the United Nations, the specialized agencies and related organizations;

II. Administration of justice in the Secretariat

1. Regrets that the report on the administration of justice in the Secretariat called for in its resolution

45/239 B has not been submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

2. Stresses the importance of a just, transparent, simple, impartial and efficient system of internal justice in the Secretariat;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake a comprehensive review of the system of administration of justice, in response to the request contained in its resolution 45/239 B, taking into account the concrete suggestions for improvement of the system proposed by Member States during the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly, in consultation with the staff representatives as appropriate, and to submit a report thereon, including, inter alia, information on costs arising to Member States from the system, to the Assembly not later than at its forty-ninth session;

4. Takes note with satisfaction of the policies, guidelines and procedures issued by the Secretary-General on 29 October 1992 regarding the equal treatment of men and women in the Secretariat, including those seeking to eliminate sexual harassment from working relationships in the United Nations;

5. Encourages the Secretary-General to implement fully these policies, guidelines and procedures and improve them as necessary;

III. Reporting

1. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session a comprehensive report on the implementation of all matters covered in the present resolution;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to resume the annual publication of the list of staff of the Secretariat as of 30 June 1993;

IV. Amendments to the Staff Regulations

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, Approves the amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations as set forth in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX

Amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations

Regulation 3.2, paragraph (a), (b) and (d)

For the existing texts, substitute:

"(a) The Secretary-General shall establish terms and conditions under which an education grant shall be available to a staff member serving outside his or her recognized home country whose dependent child is in full-time attendance at a school, university or similar educational institution of a type that will, in the opinion of the Secretary-General, facilitate the child's re-assimilation in the staff member's recognized home country. The grant shall be payable in respect of the child up to the end of the fourth year of post-secondary studies or the award of the first recognized degree, whichever is the earlier. The amount of the grant per scholastic year for each child shall be 75 per cent of the admissible educational expenses actually incurred, subject to a maximum grant as approved by the General Assembly. Travel costs of the child may also be paid for an outward and return journey once in each scholastic year between the educational institution and the duty station, except that in the case of staff members serving at designated duty stations where schools do not exist that provide schooling in the language or in the cultural tradition desired by staff members for their children, such travel costs may be paid twice in the year in which the staff member is not entitled to home leave. Such travel shall be by a route approved by the Secretary-General, but not in an amount exceeding the cost of such a journey between the home country and the duty station.

"(b) The Secretary-General shall also establish terms and conditions under which, at designated duty stations, an additional amount of 100 per cent of boarding costs subject to a maximum amount per year as approved by the General Assembly may be paid in respect of children in school attendance at the primary and secondary levels.

"(d) The Secretary-General shall also establish terms and conditions under which an education grant shall be available to a staff member whose child is unable, by reason of physical or mental disability, to attend a normal educational institution and therefore requires special teaching or training to prepare him or her for full integration into society or, while attending a normal educational institution, requires special teaching or training to assist him or her in overcoming the disability. The amount of this grant per year for each disabled child shall be equal to 100 per cent of the educational expenses actually incurred, up to a maximum amount approved by the General Assembly."

Regulation 3.3, subparagraph (b) (in)

For the existing text, substitute:

"(iii) The Secretary-General shall determine which of the scales of assessment set out in subparagraphs (i) and (ii) above shall apply to each of the groups of personnel whose salary rates are established under paragraph 5 of annex I to the present Regulations;"

Regulation 3.4, paragraphs (a) and (d)

For the existing texts, substitute:

"(a) Staff members whose salary rates are set forth in paragraphs 1 and 3 of annex I to the present Regulations shall be entitled to receive dependency allowances for a dependent child, for a disabled child and for a secondary dependant at rates approved by the General Assembly as follows:

"(i) The staff member shall receive an allowance for each dependent child, except that the allowance shall not be paid in respect of the first dependent child if the staff member has no dependent spouse, in which case the staff member shall be entitled to the dependency rate of staff assessment under subparagraph (b) (i) of regulation 3.3;

"(ii) The staff member shall receive a special allowance for each disabled child. However, if the staff member has no dependent spouse and is entitled to the dependency rate of staff assessment under subparagraph (b) (i) of regulation 3.3 in respect of a disabled child, the allowance shall be the same as the allowance for a dependent child in (i) above;

"(iii) Where there is no dependent spouse, a single annual allowance shall be paid for a secondary dependant in respect of either a dependent parent, a dependent brother or a dependent sister.

"(d) Staff members whose salary rates are set by the Secretary-General under paragraph 5 or paragraph 6 of annex I to the present Regulations shall be entitled to receive dependency allowances at rates and under conditions determined by the Secretary-General, due regard being given to the circumstances in the locality in which the office is located."

Annex I to the Staff Regulations

For the existing text of paragraphs 1 to 10, substitute:

"1. The Secretary-General shall establish the salary of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and the salaries of United Nations officials in the Director category and above, in accordance with amounts determined by the General Assembly, subject to the staff assessment plan provided in staff regulation 3.3 and to post adjustments wherever applied. If otherwise eligible, they shall receive the allowances that are available to staff members generally.

"2. The Secretary-General is authorized, on the basis of appropriate justification and/or reporting, to make additional payments to United Nations officials in the Director category and above to compensate for such special costs as may be reasonably incurred, in the interests of the Organization, in the performance of duties assigned to them by the Secretary-General. Similar additional payments in similar circumstances may be made to heads of offices away from Headquarters. The maximum total amount of such payments is to be determined in the programme budget by the General Assembly.

"3. Except as provided in paragraph 5 of the present annex, the salary scales and the scales of post adjustments for staff members in the Professional and higher categories shall be as shown in the present annex.

"4. Subject to satisfactory service, salary increments within the levels set forth in paragraph 3 of the present annex shall be awarded annually, except that any increments above step XI of the Associate Officer level, step XIII of the Second Officer level, step XII of the First Officer level, step X of the Senior Officer level and step IV of the Principal Officer level shall be preceded by two years at the previous step. The Secretary-General is authorized to reduce the interval between salary increments to ten months and twenty months, respectively, in the case of staff subject to geographical distribution who have an adequate and confirmed knowledge of a second official language of the United Nations.

"5. The Secretary-General shall determine the salary rates to be paid to personnel specifically engaged for short-term missions, conferences and other short-term service, to consultants, to Field Service personnel and to technical assistance experts.

"6. The Secretary-General shall fix the salary scales for staff members in the General Service and related categories, normally on the basis of the best prevailing conditions of employment in the locality of the United Nations office concerned, provided that the Secretary-General may, where he deems it appropriate, establish rules and salary limits for payment of a non-resident allowance to General Service staff members recruited from outside the local area.

"7. The Secretary-General shall establish rules under which a language allowance may be paid to staff members in the General Service category who pass an appropriate test and demonstrate continued proficiency in the use of two or more official languages.

"8. In order to preserve equivalent standards of living at different offices, the Secretary-General may adjust the basic salaries set forth in paragraphs 1 and 3 of the present annex by the application of non-pensionable post adjustments based on relative costs of living, standards of living and related factors at the office concerned as compared to New York. Such post adjustments shall not be subject to staff assessment.

"9. No salary shall be paid to staff members in respect of periods of unauthorized absence from work unless such absence was caused by reasons beyond their control or duly certified medical reasons."

General Assembly resolution 47/226

8 April 1993 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/47/708/Add.2) without vote, 19 March (meeting 57); draft by Vice-Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/47/L.21); agenda item 112.

Meeting numbers. GA 47th session: 5th Committee 13, 15-17, 19-22, 25, 28, 50, 57; plenary 98.

Staff composition

In November, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his annual report⁽⁴⁾ on the composition of the United Nations Secretariat by nationality, gender, grade and type of appointment. The total number of Secretariat staff as at 30 June 1993 was 14,558, of whom 10,192 were paid from the regular budget and 4,396 from extrabudgetary resources. There were 4,010 staff in the Professional category and above, 9,682 in the General Service and related categories, and 896 project personnel.

Staff in posts subject to geographical distribution numbered 2,573. As at 30 June, there were 29 unrepresented Member States, the same as the year before, and 25 underrepresented Member States, compared with 21 on 30 June 1992. Changes in representation resulted not only from staff appointments and separations from service, but also from adjustments in the desirable range of posts subject to geographical distribution, changes in the number of Member States, variations in the assessed contribution of individual States or in their population, as well as from changes in the status of some staff members. The report also provided information on groupings of Member States, their desirable ranges and representation at senior levels.

As at 30 June 1993, the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution was 804, or 31.2 per cent, including three USGs, one ASG, nine at the D-2 level and 31 at the D-1 level. There were also 308 women, or 35 per cent, in posts with special language requirements.

Representation of Member States

In December, the Vice-Chairman of the Fifth Committee submitted a report⁽⁵⁾ of the Working Group on the equitable geographical representation of Member States in the Secretariat. The Working Group, established under General Assembly resolution 47/226, held five meetings in New York between 19 and 23 July to consider formulas used for geographical distribution in the United Nations system. Matters addressed during the discussions included the number of posts subject to geographical distribution, types of appointment, posts in bodies and categories excluded from distribution, the system of desirable ranges, and methods used by other international organizations to gauge the geographical representation of their membership. However, the Working Group found itself unable to agree on specific conclusions and recommendations.

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

Status of women in the Secretariat

During 1993, the Secretary-General submitted two reports on improving the status of women in the United Nations Secretariat.

In a March report to the Commission on the Status of Women,⁽⁶⁾ submitted in response to a 1992 General Assembly resolution,⁽⁷⁾ he provided a statistical update and summarized implementation of the action programme for improving the status of women⁽⁸⁾ as well as the 1992 recommendations of the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat.⁽⁹⁾

The Secretary-General pointed to his March 1993 administrative instruction containing the Steering Committee's recommendations on the appointment and promotion of women and stipulating, inter alia, that qualified women in the service of the Organization under any type of appointment, who had a good performance record and at least one year's experience, would be regarded as internal candidates for available professional vacancies. He also indicated his intention to give priority to the promotion and recruitment of qualified women candidates in departments with less than 35 per cent women overall and less than 25 per cent women at levels P-5 and above. To bring the balance in policy-level positions as close to parity as possible by 1995, he had requested the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) to prepare a plan of action for 1993 and 1994, which included measures for attracting qualified women to fill vacancies and to increase the number of posts available for successful candidates from competitive examinations.

Acting on the report, the Commission on the Status of Women⁽¹⁰⁾ expressed concern at the slow progress made in improving the situation of women in the Secretariat, and recommended a resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council (see below).

In an October report on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,⁽¹¹⁾ submitted in response to a 1992 Assembly request,⁽⁷⁾ the Secretary-General described the situation as at 30 June 1993 and developments between July 1992 and June 1993. He noted that the number of women at the ASG and D-2 levels remained comparable to the previous year. Women at the D-1 level numbered 31, an increase from 26 the year before. Women represented 21.1 per cent of staff promoted from P-5 to D-1. The Senior Review Group, appointed in 1990 to review promotions to the Director level, recommended two more women for D-2 posts in July 1993, bringing the number of women at that level to 11. There were 103 women at the P-5 level, up from 94 a year earlier, and women promoted from the P-4 to P-5 level during the reporting period numbered 39, out of a total of 94 promotions. Of staff promoted from P-3 to P-4 and from P-2 to P-3, 46.9 per cent and 52.7 per cent respectively were women. During the 12-month period ending 30 June 1993, 44 of the 119 staff members recruited in the Secretariat (37 per cent) were women. The report noted that 76 Member States, including 23 new Members of the United Nations, had no women nationals in posts subject to geographical distribution as at June 1993.

In October,⁽¹²⁾ the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) approved a policy statement on the prevention of sexual harassment, recommended by its Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Personnel and General Administrative Questions) (CCAQ(PER)).⁽¹³⁾ Statistical data on the status of women in the United Nations common system were considered in 1993 by ICSC⁽¹⁴⁾ as a follow-up to the recommendations of its working group on the subject, which were endorsed by the Commission in 1992.⁽⁸⁾ The data covered the distribution and recruitment of staff by gender and level, the distribution of women by occupation, and the time in grade by gender and level.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Social Committee, adopted resolution 1993/9 without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling Articles 1 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also Article 8 of the Charter, which provides that the United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs,

Recalling further the relevant paragraphs of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, especially paragraphs 79, 306, 315, 356 and 358,

Recalling the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and other bodies that have continued to focus on this question since the adoption of Assembly resolution 2715(XXV) of 15 December 1970, in which the question of the employment of women in the Professional category was first addressed,

Noting with concern that the goal of a 30 per cent participation rate of women in posts subject to geographical distribution by the end of 1990 was not achieved,

Noting also with concern that the participation rate of women in posts at the D-1 level and above remains unreasonably low, although some welcome improvements have been made in the form of recent appointments by the Secretary-General,

Aware that a comprehensive policy aimed at preventing and combating sexual harassment should be an integral part of personnel policy,

Commending the Secretary-General for his administrative instruction on procedures for dealing with cases of sexual harassment,

Recalling the goal set by the General Assembly in resolutions 45/125 of 14 December 1990, 45/239 C of 21 December 1990, 46/100 of 16 December 1991 and 47/93 of 16 December 1992 of a 35 per cent overall participation rate of women in posts subject to geographical distribution by 1995,

Recalling also the goal set by the General Assembly in resolution 45/239 C of a 25 per cent participation rate of women in posts at the D-1 level and above by 1995,

Bearing in mind that a visible commitment by the Secretary-General, especially during the continuing restructuring phase, is essential to the achievement of the targets set by the General Assembly,

Welcoming the commitment of the Secretary-General, expressed in his statement to the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly on 6 November 1992 to bringing the gender balance in policy-level positions as close to fifty-fifty as possible, and his commitment, expressed in his message on the occasion of International Women's Day, to ensuring that the number of women in Professional posts in the Secretariat reflected the world population as a whole by the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations in 1995,

Welcoming also the evaluation and analysis of the main obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat contained in the report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming further the action programme outlined in the report of the Secretary-General, designed to remove the obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,

Welcoming the development by the Secretary-General of a plan of action for 1993 and 1994 to improve the status of women in the Secretariat by 1995,

1. Urges the Secretary-General to implement fully the action programme designed to remove the obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and notes that his visible commitment is essential to the achievement of the targets set by the General Assembly;

2. Also urges the Secretary-General to further examine existing work practices within the United Nations system with a view to increasing flexibility so as to remove direct or indirect discrimination against staff members with family responsibilities, further considering such issues as job-sharing, flexible working hours, child-care arrangements, career-break schemes and access to training;

3. Further urges the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, to accord greater priority to the recruitment and promotion of women in posts subject to geographical distribution, particularly in senior policy-level and decision-making posts, in order to achieve the goals set in General Assembly resolutions 45/125, 45/239 C, 46/100 and 47/93 of an overall participation rate of 35 per cent by 1995 and 25 per cent in posts at the D-1 level and above by 1995;

4. Strongly urges the Secretary-General to make further use of the opportunity offered by the United Nations reorganization process to promote more women into senior-level positions;

5. Urges the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Charter, to increase the number of women employed in the Secretariat from developing countries, particularly those which are unrepresented or under-represented, and from other countries that have a low representation of women;

6. Strongly encourages Member States to support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies to increase the percentage of women in Professional posts, especially at the D-1 level and above, by identifying and submitting more women candidates, encouraging women to apply for vacant posts and creating national rosters of women candidates;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to ensure that adequate machinery, with the authority of enforcement and the responsibility of accountability, including a senior-level official devoted to the implementation of the action programme and the recommendations in the report on obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, is maintained and strengthened during the course of the programme for the period 1991-1995;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General further to develop comprehensive policy measures aimed at the prevention of sexual harassment in the Secretariat;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that a progress report containing, inter alia, policy measures aimed at the prevention of sexual harassment in the Secretariat is submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-eighth session and to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session and to ensure that it is issued in accordance with the six-week rule for the circulation of documentation.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1993/9

27 July 1993 Meeting 43 Adopted without vote

Approved by Social Committee (E/1993/105) without vote, 12 July (meeting 6); draft by Commission on the Status of Women (E/1993/27); agenda item 19.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted resolution 48/106 without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 1 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also Article 8 of the Charter, which provides that the United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs,

Recalling further the relevant paragraphs of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, especially paragraphs 79, 315, 356 and 358,

Recalling the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and other bodies that have continued to focus on this area since the adoption of Assembly resolution 2715(XV) of 15 December 1970, in which the question of the employment of women in the Professional category was first addressed,

Taking note of the progress report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling also the goal set in its resolutions 45/125 of 14 December 1990, 45/239 C of 21 December 1990, 46/100 of 16 December 1991 and 47/93 of 16 December 1992 of a 35 per cent overall participation rate of women in posts subject to geographical distribution by 1995,

Noting with concern that the current rate of increase in the appointment of women is insufficient to achieve the objective of a 35 per cent participation rate of women in posts subject to geographical distribution by 1995,

Recalling further the goal set in its resolution 45/239 C of a 25 per cent participation rate of women in posts at the D-1 level and above by 1995,

Also noting with concern that the participation rate of women in posts at the D-1 level and above remains unreasonably low, although some welcome improvements have been made,

Aware that a comprehensive policy aimed at preventing sexual harassment should be an integral part of personnel policy,

Commending the Secretary-General for his administrative instruction on procedures for dealing with cases of sexual harassment,

Bearing in mind that a visible commitment by the Secretary-General is essential to the achievement of the targets set by the General Assembly,

Welcoming the commitment of the Secretary-General, expressed in his statement to the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly on 6 November 1992, to bringing the balance in policy-level positions as close to fifty-fifty as possible, and his commitment, expressed in his message on the occasion of International Women's Day, 1993, to see that the number of women in Professional posts in the Secretariat reflects the world population as a whole by the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations in 1995,

Welcoming also the development by the Secretary-General of a plan of action for 1993 and 1994 to improve the status of women in the Secretariat by 1995,

1. Urges the Secretary-General to implement fully the plan of action to improve the status of women in the Secretariat by 1995, noting that his visible commitment is essential to the achievement of the targets set by the General Assembly;

2. Also urges the Secretary-General to examine further existing work practices within the United Nations system with a view to increasing flexibility so as to remove direct or indirect discrimination against staff members with family responsibilities, including consideration of such issues as job-sharing, flexible working hours, child-care arrangements, career break schemes and access to training;

3. Further urges the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, to accord greater priority to the recruitment and promotion of women in posts subject to geographical distribution, particularly in senior policy-level and decision-making posts and within those parts of the United Nations system and its specialized agencies where representation of women is considerably below the average, in order to achieve the goals set in its resolutions 45/125, 45/239 C, 46/100 and 47/93 of an overall participation rate of 35 per cent by 1995 and 25 per cent in posts at the D-1 level and above by 1995;

4. Strongly urges the Secretary-General to make further use of the opportunity offered by the United Nations reorganization process to promote more women into senior-level positions;

5. Calls on the Secretary-General to strengthen, from within existing resources, the focal point for women within the Secretariat to ensure authority of enforcement and responsibility of accountability and to enable it more effectively to monitor and facilitate progress in the 1995 action programme;

6. Urges the Secretary-General to increase the number of women employed in the Secretariat from developing countries, particularly those which are unrepresented or underrepresented, and from other countries that have a low representation of women, including countries in transition;

7. Strongly encourages Member States to support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies to increase the percentage of women in Professional posts, especially at the D-1 level and above, by identifying and submitting more women candidates, encouraging women to apply for vacant posts and creating national rosters of women candidates to be shared with the Secretariat, specialized agencies and regional commissions;

8. Requests the Secretary-General further to develop comprehensive policy measures aimed at the prevention of sexual harassment in the Secretariat;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that a progress report on the status of women in the Secretariat containing, inter alia, policy measures aimed at the prevention of sexual harassment in the Secretariat, is presented to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-eighth session, in accordance with the relevant rules on the delivery timetable for documentation, and to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session.

Staffing of UN missions

In October,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on staffing of the United Nations peace-keeping and related missions (civilian component). JIU made recommendations on the planning and management of peace-keeping operations at Headquarters and in the field, on recruitment, briefing and training, and on the conditions of service of civilian personnel. It recommended ensuring better delineation of authority between DPKO and other Secretariat entities dealing with such operations, strengthening DPKO by recruiting experienced and competent civilian and military personnel, merging the Field Operations Division (FOD) into DPKO, establishing a core team responsible for peace-keeping operations and a post of Police Commissioner within DPKO, strengthening the recently established 24-hour situation room and designating focal points to deal with queries of Member States. With regard to the functioning of field structures, JIU recommended establishing clear lines of authority and interrelationship between major officials in missions, creating or strengthening joint operation centres to function on a 24-hour basis, and delegating more administrative and financial authority to the field.

Recommendations concerning recruitment provided for the creation of a "pre-certified" roster and a roster of selected retirees for recruitment; the more active use of outside recruitment and of United Nations Volunteers; the secondment of staff from specialized agencies and regional organizations; the use of stand-by personnel from Member States; the encouragement of local staff recruitment and suitable contractual instruments; and the formulation of new policies and procedures with a better field orientation. Other recommendations dealt with the creation of a pool of trained personnel at different management levels, provision for special training programmes and on-the-job training, and the security of personnel.

Submitting his comments in December,⁽¹⁶⁾ the Secretary-General said that the integration of FOD into DPKO had been carried out and the post of Police Advisor was established in the Department. He further pointed to his proposal to redeploy a number of posts for the creation of a focal point unit within DPKO and noted that the concept of a joint operations centre was already in effect in the field missions in Somalia and the former Yugoslavia and was being introduced into other large multi-dimensional missions. The Secretary-General also stated that both a pre-certified roster of personnel and a roster of retirees had been established and described steps taken to implement other recommendations.

In response to a 1992 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁷⁾ the Secretary-General presented a December 1993 report⁽¹⁸⁾ on the use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations. He examined arrangements for the use of personnel provided by Governments, staff assigned from the Secretariat and other organizations of the United Nations system, civilians recruited individually from outside the system, the use of United Nations Volunteers, and personnel contracted internationally and locally. The Secretary-General concluded that no single source could provide the civilian personnel required for field missions and that a mix was usually necessary for missions to function effectively and at minimum cost.

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's note⁽¹⁶⁾ with comments on JIU's report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

Post classification system

In August, ACC's CCAQ(PER)⁽¹³⁾ considered alternative arrangements for the Director category, including its de-linking from the Professional grades, an increase in D-level remuneration, and the introduction of a pay-for-performance scheme and time-limited assignments. The Committee also examined two alternative adjustments to the introduction of a P-6 grade. Under the first, a P-6 would be equal in all respects to D-1, but classified to account for technical rather than directorial complexity. Under the second arrangement, P-6 would be a separate level between P-5 and D-1. In December,⁽¹²⁾ ACC requested CCAQ(PER) to complete and report on its studies of these matters in 1994.

In 1993,⁽¹⁴⁾ ICSC considered a status report on job classification and human resources development in the United Nations common system. It noted progress achieved in developing job classification standards and the need to maintain their accuracy and relevance. It decided to pursue the development of practical solutions to problems identified in the administration of the job classification system. Lastly, it reaffirmed that job classification was compatible with effective career planning, and indeed a prerequisite for it.

In resolution 48/228, the General Assembly decided that, until posts were reclassified according to prescribed internal procedures and approved by it, no staff member encumbering a post under reclassification review should be paid at the higher grade level.

Career development and training

In 1993, the promotion system in the Secretariat changed from the Vacancy Management and Redeployment System, in force from 1988 to 1992, to one involving a grade-by-grade promotion review of eligible staff once a year. A new Placement and Promotion System was to be introduced in the near future, which would provide for a review of candidates as vacancies occurred.

In its 1993 report,⁽¹⁴⁾ ICSC reiterated the importance of training to organizational efficiency and to enhancing the career objectives of staff. It approved guidelines for the evaluation of training proposed by CCAQ(PER),⁽¹⁵⁾ and recommended their application in organizations of the United Nations common system.

In resolution 47/226 on personnel questions, the General Assembly endorsed the principles contained in the Secretary-General's 1992 reports⁽¹⁶⁾ on career development at the United Nations and the training programme in the Secretariat and made a number of requests for action to improve the career development system and the training programme in respect of staff accountability and performance evaluation, rotation of assignments, career counselling, equal employment opportunities, language requirements and staff motivation.

Staff rules and regulations

On 8 April, the General Assembly, by decision 47/457 B, took note of the Secretary-General's 1991⁽²⁰⁾ and 1992⁽²¹⁾ reports on amendments to the Staff Rules of the United Nations. In resolution 47/226 of the same date (see above), the Assembly approved amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, proposed by the Secretary-General in 1991⁽²⁰⁾ and 1992.⁽²¹⁾

In November 1993, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report⁽²²⁾ containing the texts of provisional rules and amendments to the Staff Regulations. The changes applicable to all staff, except technical cooperation project personnel and staff specifically engaged for conference and other short-term service, concerned the function of the Appointment and Promotion Board to make recommendations to the Secretary-General on proposed probationary and other appointments of a probable duration of one year or more, excluding the appointment of persons for service with a mission; the selection of staff members qualified for promotion; minimum periods of service in grade as a normal requirement for consideration for promotion; and lateral transfers or reassignments of a probable duration of one year or more. The changes applicable to staff specifically engaged for short-term service and assignments of limited duration concerned two types of non-career appointments: the traditional short-term appointment of up to six months, intended for language and other conference services, and an appointment of limited duration, expected to last between three months and three to four years in such activities as peace-keeping and peacemaking, technical cooperation, and humanitarian and emergency operations. The provisions on travel arrangements were also revised.

By decision 48/459 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

Staff representation

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the General Assembly again deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's 1992 report on the cost of staff representation activities,⁽²¹⁾ reviewing the nature and level of regular budget funding for those activities, until its resumed forty-eighth session.

Privileges and immunities

In response to a March 1993 Security Council request,⁽²³⁾ the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the security of United Nations operations⁽²⁴⁾ and arrangements to protect United Nations forces and personnel. On 20 September, in resolution 47/120 B, section VII, the General Assembly welcomed the report and decided to consider further steps to enhance the status and safety of personnel involved in United Nations operations. (For more information on the security of United Nations operations, see PART ONE, Chapter I, and PART FOUR, Chapter II.)

On 8 April, the Assembly, by decision 47/457 C, requested the Secretary-General to submit updated information on respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations, pursuant to its 1990⁽²⁵⁾ and 1992⁽²⁶⁾ resolutions.

In September 1993, the Secretary-General, on behalf of and with the approval of ACC, submitted a note⁽²⁷⁾ with updated information on the subject. He said that developments of the last year had pushed the acceptable safety threshold for personnel of the United Nations system to a level inconceivable in the past. The banner of the Organization no longer provided staff with safe passage and an unwritten guarantee of protection, and staff were often at risk simply by virtue of their employment with organizations of the system. Although the primary responsibility for the security of staff rested with host Governments or other governmental authorities, the United Nations was increasingly called on to operate in areas where there was no Government or where the Government was unable to fulfil its commitments under the Charter.

Since 1 July 1992, there had been 19 fatalities among staff members belonging to different organizations, bringing the number of fatalities since the beginning of 1992 to 30. As at 30 June 1993, there were 45 officials under detention or missing, including 28 staff members of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) who were arrested during the period 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993. Of 70 UNRWA staff members arrested during that period, 40 were subsequently released without charge or trial, and two were charged, tried and sentenced.

The note also discussed the taxation of United Nations officials by host countries and restrictions on their official and private travel. On 1 February, the Secretary-General received from Switzerland a note verbale stating that tax liability would no longer be applied to officials of international organizations residing in its Canton of Vaud. However, Israel continued to levy an exit tax on personnel of UNRWA and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization, and problems related to the taxation of officials were experienced by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization. The Secretary-General also reported that, on 24 September 1992,⁽²⁸⁾ he had received from the United States a note verbale stating that the United Nations staff members who were nationals of Georgia could enjoy unrestricted travel in the United States. The United States took similar action with regard to nationals of Afghanistan on 11 January 1993 (see PART FOUR, Chapter IV). UNRWA, however, continued to report travel restrictions imposed by Israel on its staff.

On 8 November, a representative of the United Nations Security Coordinator reported to the Fifth Committee that nine UNRWA staff members had been released from detention since 30 June.

Also in November, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly comments by the Coordinating Committee for Independent Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System (CCISUA) on the issues of security and independence of the international civil service.⁽²⁹⁾ The Committee called for adequate pressure on Member States that ignored their responsibility under the Charter for the security of United Nations personnel and urged closer monitoring of Charter violations. It stressed the need for strategies for the safety of staff on peace-keeping and humanitarian missions, a quicker response to the needs of staff members injured on duty, and more humanitarian treatment of staff returning from detention or suffering from undue pressure exerted by their Governments. CCISUA said that a medical team to visit illegally detained staff should be on line before the end of 1993 and it recommended reactivation of the Secretary-General's Task Force on the Security and Independence of the International Civil Service.

On 23 December, by decision 48/462, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note⁽²⁷⁾ and of the Security Coordinator's statement to the Fifth Committee.

Staff costs

In its 1993 report,⁽¹⁾ ICSC continued to advise the General Assembly on staff salaries and allowances and made recommendations regarding pensionable remuneration and pension entitlements. The Commission continued to monitor the net remuneration margin between officials in comparable positions of the United States Federal Civil Service and the United Nations system. It reaffirmed its 1992 decision⁽²⁾ that a new methodology for determining the cost-of-living differential between New York and Washington, D.C., should be used in net margin calculations and decided to implement the new methodology in calculations for 1993, along with the margin calculation methodology endorsed by the Assembly in 1989.⁽³⁾ The application of those methodologies resulted in a margin for the 1993 calendar year of 114.2.

ICSC recommended a 3.6 per cent increase in the current base/floor salary scale, through the consolidation of post adjustment, and a revised staff assessment scale, both with effect from 1 March 1994, as well as a new procedure for determining a common staff assessment scale and the introduction of a common staff assessment scale for determining the pensionable remuneration of all categories of staff in 1997. It further recommended the income replacement approach using 66.25 per cent of the net pensionable salary for determining the net pensionable remuneration of the General Service and related categories, to be implemented with the first adjustment of the salary scale on or after 1 April 1994, and decided that subsequent adjustments of pensionable remuneration should be made on the basis of a 1-to-1 interim adjustment procedure.

The Commission proposed parameters for a language incentive scheme for staff in the Professional and higher categories, examined criteria and modalities for payment of special occupational rates, and decided that the use of post adjustment classes should be eliminated as of 1 January 1994. In response to a 1989 Assembly request,⁽⁷⁾ ICSC reviewed the expatriate entitlements of staff living in the home country and stationed elsewhere, with a view to harmonizing existing practices. It also reviewed the general methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at non-headquarters duty stations (see below), decided to maintain the current practices with regard to working hours and remuneration, and requested ILO to bring its practices concerning extra steps beyond the salary scale into line with that of the common system.

The Assembly acted on ICSC's recommendations in resolution 48/224 (see above, under "International Civil Service Commission").

Emoluments of top-echelon officials

On 6 May, the General Assembly, by decision 47/460 B, again deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's two 1991 reports on remuneration for JIU inspectors⁽⁴⁾ and his 1991⁽⁵⁾ and 1992⁽⁶⁾ reports on the question of honoraria payable to members of organs and subsidiary organs of the United Nations.

Special representatives, envoys and related positions

In August,⁽⁷⁾ ACABQ noted that the Secretary-General had recently appointed a number of representatives and envoys at the ASG and USG levels. It requested him to explain the rationale for establishing such high-level posts and to develop criteria for determining related emoluments. The General Assembly, by decision 47/474 of 14 September, requested the Secretary-General to report on the issues raised by ACABQ with regard to the establishment of special representatives, envoys and related positions.

In a November report,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General said that most of the positions in question were in peace-keeping or observer missions approved by the Security Council, and normally corresponded to the USG or ASG level, depending on the size and complexity of the mission. As at 30 September, there were 22 officials in that category (6 at the USG level and 16 at the ASG level), who were remunerated from the budgets approved for their missions. Another category comprised envoys appointed by the Secretary-General to assist him in the exercise of his good offices and related functions. Their rank was determined by the level of responsibilities and the scope and complexity of activities supervised. There were 13 officials in that category (10 at the USG level and 3 at the ASG level), 3 of whom assisted the Secretary-General for a $1 a year honorarium or reimbursement of travel expenses. Others were remunerated on a "when actually employed" basis or on time-limited assignments, and were funded as unforeseen and extraordinary expenses. In addition, 4 officials assisted the Secretary-General in various capacities, including one for a $1 a year honorarium. The report noted that emoluments for all three categories were determined in accordance with the Staff Rules and Regulations and, in cases of limited-duration assignments, were prorated for the length of employment.

By decision 48/459 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

Remuneration of International Tribunal members

In July,⁽⁹⁾ ACABQ considered the question of financing the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, established by the Security Council in May (see PART TWO, Chapter IV). It requested the Secretary-General to provide detailed justification for the number of posts in the Tribunal and their grade level, as well as the allowances of its judges.

In a December report,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Secretary-General noted that, according to the statute of the Tribunal, the remuneration of its judges was the same as that for judges of the International Court of Justice (ICJ). Pending a further review, scheduled for the Assembly's forty-eighth session, that remuneration, as revised by the General Assembly in 1990,⁽¹¹⁾ included an annual salary of $145,000, a special allowance to the President and Vice-President of the Tribunal and the reimbursement of education costs for children. Should the Tribunal be established at The Hague, Netherlands, the floor/ceiling salary scale would also be applicable. Judges were to give up all other remunerated occupations for the duration of their judgeship.

The Secretary-General further proposed a pension entitlement of $20,000 for a member of the Tribunal who served a full four-year term, to be increased in case of re-election by an additional $150 per month, up to a maximum of $30,000 a year. In case of death, the survivors' entitlement should equal one month's base salary for each year of service, subject to a minimum of one month and a maximum of four months. The relocation allowance upon completion of service should amount to 12 weeks of net salary, while an entitlement after four continuous years or more of eligibility should total 16 weeks of annual net base salary.

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994. By the same decision, it deferred consideration of a report on remuneration for members of ICJ, requested in 1990.⁽¹¹⁾ The report was not issued at the time of the decision.

Salaries and allowances

By decision 47/468 of 6 May, the General Assembly, further to its 1990 resolution on the same issue,⁽¹²⁾ noted that remuneration for Secretariat officials should be separate and distinct from that for other officials serving the Assembly and that the Staff Rules and Regulations were not necessarily applicable to the latter. The Secretary-General was requested to submit background information on the subject.

In resolution 48/228, the Assembly expressed concern at the high costs of after-service health insurance and requested the Secretary-General to seek ways to reduce increases in those costs. On 23 December, it noted a significant increase in the common staff costs of salaries and overtime payments, particularly with respect to security officers, and requested the Board of Auditors to pay special attention to that matter in its audit of the United Nations accounts for 1992-1993 (decision 48/481). It also invited the Board to consider the issue of vacancies resulting from the deployment of staff to peace-keeping operations and their impact on salaries and common staff costs (decision 48/460).

On the same date, by decision 48/459, the General Assembly deferred consideration of a report on the question of staff assessment, requested in 1992.⁽¹³⁾ The report was not issued at the time of the decision.

Supernumerary staff

On 23 December, the General Assembly, by decision 48/460, reiterated its 1992 endorsement⁽¹⁴⁾ of the Board of Auditors' 1992 recommendation⁽¹⁵⁾ that payments to supernumerary staff should not have been effected without prior approval of the Assembly. It noted that such payments were not authorized by the Assembly and requested the Secretary-General to report at its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994 on all aspects of the use of supernumerary staff during 1990-1991 and 1992-1993. It also invited the Board of Auditors to consider the matter in its audit of the United Nations accounts for 1992-1993.

The Board had noted, in 1992, that maintaining supernumerary staff at the United Nations Office at Vienna by-passed the objectives of retrenchment mandated by the General Assembly in 1986,⁽¹⁶⁾ and that no termination indemnity should be paid to a staff member on a temporary appointment already completed.

Relationship agreements

On 12 February, the Economic and Social Council decided to initiate a discussion of the relationship agreements between the United Nations and the member organizations of the common system, taking into account the views of JIU, ICSC and background information by the Secretary-General (decision 1993/211). A review of those agreements was called for by the General Assembly in 1992,⁽¹⁷⁾ in view of the 1991 decision of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU)⁽¹⁸⁾ to grant a special post allowance to its staff of the Professional and higher categories to compensate for temporary additional work required to implement changes in ITU's functioning.

In March, CCAQ{PER}⁽¹⁹⁾ considered the issue and concluded that it could not identify any problems at the working level which would justify a review of the agreements. In April,⁽²⁰⁾ ACC took note of that conclusion.

In a June note,⁽²¹⁾ the Secretary-General reviewed pertinent provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the statute of ICSC, which was established in 1974⁽²²⁾ for the regulation and coordination of the United Nations common system. He noted that, in 1991, the Commission had considered ITU's unilateral action incompatible with the common system and that, in 1992, the ITU Administrative Council had accepted the Commission's position, endorsed by the Assembly,⁽²³⁾ but concluded that there was a legal commitment to grant the special post allowance to the staff who had already performed additional work. Subsequently, ICSC had reiterated its view on the matter. Pertinent extracts from ICSC's 1991⁽¹⁸⁾ and 1992⁽²⁴⁾ reports were transmitted to the Council by another June 1993 note.⁽²⁵⁾

In September,⁽²⁶⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council JIU's report on relationship agreements and ACC's comments. The report reviewed specific sections of the 17 agreements concluded between the United Nations and specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, relating to personnel matters or to a unified international civil service. It noted that the agreements had never been revised and could not reflect all the developments that took place after their conclusion. To consolidate the common system further, JIU recommended an evaluation of the agreements' implementation and assessment of the application of particular provisions; a more active and specific application of existing coordinating measures; an enhanced role for ICSC in regulating and coordinating conditions of service in the common system; the establishment of a procedure for approving interpretations and understandings of relevant provisions by the General Assembly and the governing bodies of member organizations; supplementary arrangements with executive heads on modalities of practical cooperation; and more active involvement of Member States in the maintenance of coherent positions regarding staff salaries and conditions of service in different organizations. JIU also recommended that the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) be entrusted with formulating draft resolutions and decisions on coordination questions or that an inter-sessional committee on coordination matters be created within the Economic and Social Council; that a portion of the Council's sessions be devoted to system-wide coordination; and that periodic joint meetings between CPC and ACC be devoted to the same objective.

Commenting on the report, ACC noted that JIU had undertaken a broader review than envisaged by the Assembly and the Council, and that a number of the recommended actions were already being undertaken. ACC was of the view that the review of agreements as well as understanding on their interpretation would evolve in the course of restructuring the inter-agency machinery. At the same time, a fuller application of coordination measures would depend significantly on the initiative of Member States. ACC agreed with the proposal to enhance ICSC's exposure to various organizations but believed that the Commission's participation in their meetings would not be beneficial. Noting existing agreements on inter-agency cooperation in the context of peace-keeping, ACC stated that the need for further arrangements would have to be clearly identified before entering into any new inter-agency agreement. It welcomed the recommendation for the greater involvement of Member States in coordination matters, noting that some complications might be avoided if their representatives maintained consistent positions in the governing bodies of different organizations. Lastly, it underscored the fact that coordination questions were already the main subject of CPC/ACC joint meetings.

By decision 1993/337 of 8 December, the Economic and Social Council took note of the documents transmitted to it for discussion of the relationship agreements.

General Service salaries

In a September note to the Fifth Committee,⁽²⁷⁾ submitted in response to a 1990 General Assembly request,⁽²⁸⁾ the Secretary-General reviewed procedures whereby he and other executive heads could take measures on salary scales of the General Service category at variance with ICSC's recommendations only after consultations with the appropriate intergovernmental bodies and the Commission. The Secretary-General proposed that, in addition to the existing consultation mechanism, there should also be consultations with ACABQ prior to a decision on General Service salaries.

ICSC, in 1993,⁽¹⁾ reviewed the general methodology for surveys of the best prevailing conditions of employment at non-headquarters duty stations. Its review was based on the findings of an informal working group composed of representatives of the ICSC secretariat, United Nations organizations, the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations and CCISUA and followed a 1992 review of the methodology for surveying the best prevailing conditions at headquarters duty stations.⁽²⁹⁾ The Commission noted that while the methodologies used for both headquarters and non-headquarters duty stations were based on the Flemming principle, they measured conditions of service in very different labour markets and office structures; the headquarters methodology operated in largely homogenous office structures in well-established economies, while the non-headquarters methodology was applied to offices with an extremely diverse composition located in countries with widely varying economies.

In the context of its review, ICSC addressed questions such as salaries, selection of jobs, selection of employers, job classification standards, pensionable remuneration and its own role in the two review processes. As a result, it approved certain changes to the methodology which became effective 1 July 1993. The Commission decided to maintain existing provisions with regard to the treatment of the non-pensionable component of remuneration, pending a further review of the issue in 1996.

The Assembly, in resolution 48/224, section III, noted ICSC's decisions with respect to its review of the general methodology for surveys of best conditions at non-headquarters duty stations. It urged organizations to implement the Commission's recommendations with regard to salary scales for staff in the General Service and related categories and requested that, in cases where decisions at variance with those recommendations were envisaged, the matter be referred to the governing body of the organization(s) concerned.

Pensions

During 1993, the number of participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund increased from 61,968 to 63,329, or by 2.2 percent; the number of periodic benefits in award increased from 33,923 to 35,435, or by 4.5 per cent. On 31 December, the breakdown of the periodic benefits in award was as follows: 11,688 retirement benefits, 6,427 early retirement benefits, 5,736 deferred retirement benefits, 4,963 widows' and widowers' benefits, 5,896 children's benefits, 669 disability benefits and 56 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, 4,186 lump-sum withdrawal and other settlements were paid.

During the same period, the principal of the Fund increased from $10,246,849,744 to $11,160,603,611, or by 8.9 per cent.

The investment income of the Fund during the year amounted to $893,907,978, comprising $567,664,880 in interest and dividends and $326,243,098 in net profit on sales of investments. After deduction of investment management costs amounting to $13,827,607, net investment income was $880,080,371.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, which held its forty-fifth session (special) in New York from 24 to 30 June 1993.⁽³⁰⁾ In accordance with the General Assembly's 1991 decision to biennialize the Fifth Committee's work,⁽³¹⁾ the Fund's forty-fifth session was scheduled to take place in 1994. However, in 1992,⁽³²⁾ the Assembly asked ICSC, in cooperation with the Board, to finalize in 1993 the review of the pensionable remuneration and pensions of the General Service staff and related categories. The special session was held to deal with that issue.

The Board also considered: amendments to the Fund's Regulations governing the methodology for determining pensionable remuneration, as requested by the Assembly in 1992,⁽³³⁾ a study of the "income inversion" anomaly and its possible reduction, requested by the Assembly in the same resolution; the Fund's administrative expenses; and methodology and actuarial assumptions to be used in the next actuarial valuation of the Fund. The Board also decided to provide the Assembly with a status report on problems related to the interpretation and application of the three transfer agreements between the Fund and the former USSR, Byelorussian SSR and Ukrainian SSR, which the Board had started to discuss in 1991 and 1992.

The Board also examined the management of the Fund's investments, financial statements and schedules for the year ending 31 December 1992, the investment return during the year ending 31 March 1993, and amendments to the Fund's Administrative Rules and Rules of Procedure, adopted by its Standing Committee. In accordance with articles 9 and 20 of the Fund's Regulations, the Board dealt with the membership of its Committee of Actuaries and its Investments Committee.

ACABQ submitted its comments on the Board's report in October,⁽³⁴⁾ and the Assembly acted on the Board's recommendations in December (see below).

Pension Fund investments

The market value of the Fund's assets as at 31 March 1993 was $11,407 million, an increase of $1,296 million over the previous year. Total investment return for the year ended 31 March 1993 was 11.6 per cent, which, after adjusting for inflation, represented a "real" rate of return of 8.2 per cent. Investment income from interest and dividends amounted to $568 million in 1993. New funds, which became available for investment (contributions plus investment income, less benefit payments and investment expenses), totalled $588.5 million, while realized capital gains amounted to $326.2 million.

The Fund remained one of the most diversified pension funds in the world, as the proportion of its assets exposed to currencies other than the United States dollar, which was the Fund's unit of account, as well as the ratio of equities to total assets continued to increase. In order to preserve the Fund's principal, the defensive policy adopted in the mid-1980s was continued but slightly changed. It consisted of increasing holdings in selected equities which appeared undervalued and with potential for future appreciation.

The book value of development-related investments also increased. Investments in development institutions amounted to $1,139.7 million in June 1993, compared with $1,050 million a year earlier, while direct investments in specific developing countries totalled $506.4 million, up from $487.6 million in 1992. Close contacts were maintained with international organizations, regional development institutions, Governments and private sources to ensure full awareness of investment opportunities in developing countries, and follow-up missions were undertaken to Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East.

The implementation of new custodial arrangements for the Fund's assets, aimed at their diversification, through the introduction of parallel accounting and reporting systems and establishment of regional custodians, began in early 1993. The purpose of the new arrangements was to ensure effective risk management and greater control and flexibility, and reduce costs such as custody fees, which exceeded $5.8 million in 1993.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/225 without vote.

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/242 of 21 December 1990, 46/191 A and 46/192 of 20 December 1991 and 47/203 of 22 December 1992,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 1993 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, chapter III of the report of the International Civil Service Commission, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Pensionable remuneration of staff in the General Service and related categories

Recalling that, in section III of its resolution 45/242, the General Assembly requested the International Civil Service Commission, in full cooperation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, to submit recommendations to it at its forty-sixth session in respect of the comprehensive review of the methodology for determining the pensionable remuneration and consequent pensions of staff in the General Service and related categories,

Also recalling section III of its resolution 46/191 A, section II of its resolution 46/192 and section III of its resolution 47/203,

Noting with satisfaction that close cooperation between the Commission and the Board has enabled the two bodies to complete the comprehensive review in 1993 and to reach agreement on the methodology for determining the levels of pensionable remuneration of staff in the General Service and related categories,

1. Approves the recommendations made by the International Civil Service Commission that the income replacement approach, applying 66.25 per cent of the net pensionable salary, should be used to determine the pensionable remuneration for staff in the General Service and related categories, and that the revised methodology should be implemented on the occasion of the first adjustment of the salary scale, on or after 1 April 1994, subject to the transitional measures applied on the occasion of the introduction of the 1992 staff assessment scale;

2. Notes that the recommendations of the Commission in paragraph 85 of its report do not eliminate the income inversion anomaly and that further attention will need to be given to its elimination;

3. Approves the recommendation that subsequent adjustments of pensionable remuneration, until the introduction of the common staff assessment scale in 1997, should be made on the basis of a 1:1 interim adjustment procedure;

4. Approves also the procedure outlined in paragraph 44 of the report of the Commission for determining the common staff assessment scale, with two separate sets of rates (single and dependent);

5. Requests the Commission, in close cooperation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as part of the comprehensive review in 1996 of the methodology to determine the pensionable remuneration and consequent pensions of staff in the Professional and higher categories, to develop a common staff assessment scale for the determination of the pensionable remuneration of all categories of staff using the procedure approved in paragraph 4 above and reflecting the latest available tax rates;

6. Also requests the Commission to recommend to the General Assembly at its fifty-first session a common staff assessment scale, together with the effective date and modalities for its implementation, including appropriate transitional measures as required;

7. Decides that, following the introduction of the common staff assessment scale in 1997, the income replacement approach should be used to determine the pensionable remuneration of staff in the General Service and related categories on the occasion of comprehensive salary surveys, with subsequent adjustment of pensionable remuneration between comprehensive surveys to be made on the basis of a 1:1 interim adjustment procedure;

8. Notes that the Commission, in close cooperation with the Board, will continue to keep under review the matter of the pensionable remuneration and consequent pensions of staff in the General Service and related categories;

9. Amends, with effect from 1 April 1994, article 54 (a) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex I to the present resolution;

10. Amends also, with effect from 1 April 1994, paragraph 6 of annex I to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, and urges the other member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund to take similar action to amend their Staff Regulations or Staff Rules as appropriate;

II

Actuarial matters

1. Takes note of the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in section III.C of its report on the methodology and assumptions to be used in the actuarial valuation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as at 31 December 1993, in particular the changes in the rates of mortality for pensioners and the rates of incidence of disability as set out in paragraphs 108 and 109, respectively, of the report of the Board;

2. Takes note also of the observations of the Panel of External Auditors, the Pension Board and the Committee of Actuaries, as well as the views of Member States, on the request made by the General Assembly in resolution 47/203 that the Board consider the form in which it presents the results of the actuarial valuations, and of the intention of the Board to report on this matter, following discussion with the Board of Auditors, to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

3. Takes note further of the observations of the Board in section III.C of its report on matters related to the operation and application of the transfer agreements that had been concluded, effective 1 January 1981, between the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic;

Administrative expenses

1. Approves expenses chargeable directly to the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, totalling 39,291,900 United States dollars net for the biennium 1994-1995, and an increase in expenses of 365,400 dollars net for the biennium 1992-1993, for the administration of the Fund;

2. Authorizes the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to supplement the voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund, for the biennium 1994-1995, by an amount not exceeding 200,000 dollars.

Other matters

Takes note of the other matters dealt with in the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board.

ANNEX I

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Article 54

Pensionable remuneration

Replace paragraph (a) and subparagraph (i) thereof with the following texts:

"(a) In the case of participants in the General Service and related categories, pensionable remuneration shall be the equivalent in dollars of the sum of:

"(i) The participant's gross pensionable salary, as determined on the occasion of comprehensive salary surveys and subsequently adjusted between such salary surveys, in accordance with the methodology approved by the General Assembly and set out in appendix A to these Regulations,"

Subparagraphs (ii) and (iii) remain unchanged; the reference in paragraph (b) to "the appendix hereto" shall be changed to "Appendix B hereto".

Add the following appendix to the Regulations of the Fund:

"Appendix A

"1. Methodology for determining the gross pensionable salary for participants in the General Service and related categories

"(a) Effective 1 April 1994, and subject to paragraph (b) below, the methodology for determining the gross pensionable salary for participants in the General Service and related categories on the occasion of comprehensive salary surveys shall be as follows:

"(i) 66.25 per cent of the net pensionable salary, determined in accordance with the procedure approved by the International Civil Service Commission, is calculated at each grade and step;

"(ii) The amounts in subparagraph (i) above are grossed up, using the applicable staff assessment rates;

"(iii) The amounts in subparagraph (ii) above, divided by 0.6625 and expressed in local currency, constitute the gross pensionable salary.

"(b) The methodology in paragraph (a) above shall be applied on the occasion of the first adjustment due to the application of the interim adjustment procedure for net salaries on or after 1 April 1994, should such adjustment take place before a comprehensive salary survey.

"2. Adjustment of the gross pensionable salary between comprehensive salary surveys

"The gross pensionable salary shall be adjusted on the same date and by the same percentages as the net pensionable salary of participants in the General Service and related categories is adjusted."

The existing appendix shall become "Appendix B".

ANNEX II

Amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations
Add the following sentence at the end of paragraph 6 of annex I to the Staff Regulations:

"The gross pensionable salaries of such staff shall be determined in accordance with the methodology specified in article 54 (a) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and are shown in the salary scales applicable to such staff."

General Assembly resolution 48/225

23 December 1993 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/48/738) without vote, 4 December (meeting 29); draft by Australia following informal consultations (A/C.5/48/L.4); agenda item 129.

Meeting numbers. GA 48th session: 5th Committee 11, 13, 14, 16, 18, 29; plenary 87.

Travel

Standards of accommodation for air travel

Responding to a 1991 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted an August 1993 report⁽²⁾ on standards of accommodation for air travel covering the period from 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993. With regard to delegation travel, 32 journeys in first-class air accommodation for one representative of each Member State designated as a least developed country (LDC) attending regular, special or emergency sessions of the General Assembly were paid for at a cost of $168,511. With regard to exceptions to the standards of accommodation of staff and others travelling on behalf of the Organization, which the Secretary-General was authorized to make on a case-by-case basis, 66 cases of first-class travel and 69 cases of business-class travel were authorized at a total additional cost of $149,553, compared with $201,373 for the previous reporting period. The latter figure was adjusted to include 2 cases of first-class travel and 3 cases of business-class travel approved ex post facto and unreported in 1992, at a total additional cost of $1,698.

Annexed to the report were lists of exceptions granted by categories which covered: arduous journeys; medical conditions or advanced age; the unavailability of regular standards of accommodation; and travel for eminent persons or prominent persons who donated their services free of charge to the Organization.

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994. By resolution 48/228 of the same date, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit proposals on the provision of, and related arrangements for, travel services and allowances.

Review of travel and related entitlements

In October, the Secretary-General submitted an updated review of travel and related entitlements for members of organs and subsidiary organs and staff members of the United Nations,⁽³⁾ pursuant to a 1992 Assembly decision⁽²⁾ to defer consideration of his report on the subject until the forty-eighth session. The Secretary-General noted that two new subsidiary bodies which were entitled to payment of travel expenses had been established since his 1992 report: the High-level Advisory Board on Sustainable Development and the Commission on Sustainable Development (see PART THREE, Chapter I). He reiterated his proposals to limit the payment of travel expenses for representatives in subsidiary organs of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council to those from LDCs, with estimated savings of $754,000 per annum, and to reconsider the previously authorized exceptional travel entitlements for representatives in functional commissions of the Council nominated directly by their Governments. The Secretary-General requested the Assembly to decide on the travel entitlements for representatives in the Commission on Sustainable Development beyond 1993 and to address the issue of exceptional travel assistance to representatives from LDCs and other developing countries. Annexed to the report were updated lists of subsidiary bodies whose members were entitled to travel expenses or both travel and subsistence expenses for attending meetings.

On 23 December, by decision 48/459, the Assembly deferred consideration of the report until its resumed forty-eighth session in 1994.

Administration of justice

In its annual note to the General Assembly,⁽¹⁾ the United Nations Administrative Tribunal reported that it had delivered 47 judgements during the year. They related to cases brought by staff members against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other United Nations bodies to resolve disputes involving terms of appointment and related rules and regulations.

The Tribunal met in annual plenary session in New York on 17 November 1993 and held two panel sessions (Geneva, 1 June-2 July; New York, 18 October-19 November).

In a 16 September letter⁽²⁾ requesting the inclusion of an additional item in the agenda of the Assembly's forty-eighth session, Australia, Benin, France and Ireland asked for a review of the procedure under article 11 of the Tribunal's statute governing the review of its judgements. In the explanatory memorandum annexed to the letter, they pointed to criticism that the existing procedure was not adequate. In the opinion of some delegations, the procedure should be abolished and replaced with a practical mechanism for resolving staff employment problems.

By decision 48/415 of 9 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, requested the Secretary-General to review the procedure and report on the subject in 1994 and included the item in the provisional agenda of its forty-ninth session.

Chapter III

Other administrative and management questions

In 1993, the Committee on Conferences considered measures to improve the utilization of conference-servicing within the United Nations system and reviewed the work of the Office of Conference Services. It recommended measures to control and limit documentation and reviewed the United Nations publications policy. The Committee examined changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 1993 and reviewed the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for 1994-1995, which was approved by the General Assembly in December (resolution 48/222 A).

Other administrative and management questions under review in 1993 included the issues of works of art at the United Nations, information systems and the introduction of new technologies.

Conferences and meetings

In 1993, the Committee on Conferences reviewed the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the 1994-1995 biennium and examined requests for additions and changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 1993.W

The Committee discussed issues related to the calendar, including measures to improve the utilization of conference-servicing resources, the organization of work and coordination of all organizational aspects of conference servicing. It also dealt with the need to control and limit the amount of documentation. The Committee reviewed the United Nations publications policy, the work of the Office of Conference Services (OCS) and the organization of work of the Committee on Conferences.

Other matters dealt with in the Committee's October report⁽²⁾ included the restructuring of the OCS and the consequences for conference servicing of the economy measures announced by the Secretary-General in August in the light of the financial crisis of the Organization (see PART FIVE, Chapter I).

The Committee held an organizational session in New York on 2 March. The first part of its substantive session was held from 17 to 21 May and the second part from 14 to 17 September and on 2 and 3 November, also in New York.

Calendar of meetingsCalendar for 1993

In March, the Committee on Conferences agreed that proposed changes to the calendar which did not have budget implications could be dealt with by the Secretariat in consultation with the Bureau of the Committee. The Committee was advised of a number of such changes in 1993.

The Committee approved a request from the Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee for a Framework Convention on Climate Change to convene its seventh session in New York from 15 to 19 or 20 March 1993 to prepare for the first session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention.

A meeting of the Special High-level Council for the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction (1990-1999),⁽³⁾ originally scheduled for Geneva in 1992, was rescheduled to take place in New York on 25 January 1993 to enable the Secretary-General to meet with the Special High-level Council.

A meeting of Governmental Experts from Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Representatives of Donor Countries and Financial and Development Institutions, scheduled to be held at Geneva, was convened—with the Committee's approval—in New York from 17 to 19 May to ensure maximum attendance by representatives of the land-locked developing countries.

The International Civil Service Commission received approval to hold its thirty-eighth (1993) session at Vienna from 15 July to 3 August rather than in New York.

The fourth session of the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference on Human Rights was extended until 7 May to enable it to conclude examination of the draft final document for the World Conference.

The Committee approved the rescheduling of the first session of the Preparatory Committee for the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States from 2-13 August to 30 August-10 September.

The Committee considered requests from subsidiary bodies for exceptions to be made to a 1985 General Assembly resolution⁽⁴⁾ which stated that no subsidiary organ of the Assembly should meet at Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless authorized by the Assembly. In September,⁽⁵⁾ the Committee informed the Assembly that it did not object to requests to meet in New York during the Assembly's forty-eighth (1993) session made by the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund, the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the Preparatory Committee for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations, the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa, the Committee of Trustees of the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa, the Special Committee against Apartheid, the Intergovernmental Group to Monitor the Supply and Shipping of Oil and Petroleum Products to South Africa, the Special Committee to Select the Winners of the United Nations Human Rights Prize and the Committee itself. In November,⁽⁶⁾ the Committee informed the Assembly that it did not object to a similar request by the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

On 15 and 16 September, the Committee on Conferences reviewed the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the 1994-1995 biennium. In May, it reviewed the consolidated statement of scheduled special conferences for 1994⁽⁷⁾ and considered the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council for 1994-1995, in accordance with a 1988 Council decision.⁽⁸⁾ In November, the Committee reviewed the section of the proposed programme budget for 1994-1995 relating to conference servicing.⁽⁹⁾

The Committee recommended that the General Assembly adopt the draft calendar of conferences and meetings as amended and authorize the Committee to make the necessary adjustments arising from actions taken by the Assembly in 1993. Concerning a proposal to the Assembly that the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) meet outside its headquarters (New York), the Committee on Conferences drew the Assembly's attention to the fact that ACABQ was not listed among the United Nations bodies exempt from meeting outside established headquarters, as set out in a 1985 Assembly resolution.⁽⁴⁾ The Committee recommended that the Assembly take into account the possible adverse effects of such departures from the 1985 "headquarters rule" on the schedule and work of the Assembly's Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee. The Secretariat was asked to report on the legal reasons and experience of those subsidiary bodies which met away from their established headquarters.

The Committee recommended the adoption of the 1994-1995 draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council. It expressed concern at the increasing number of requests made by intergovernmental bodies for exceptions to the biennialization of their sessions.

Conference and meeting services

As requested by the General Assembly in 1992,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Secretary-General submitted in April a report on the improved utilization of conference-servicing resources at the United Nations.⁽¹¹⁾ The report contained statistics for 1992 on the planned and actual utilization of conference resources allocated to a limited sample of bodies that had been meeting for several years in New York, Geneva and Vienna. The total number of sessions held in 1992 by those bodies was 42 and the total utilization factor was 3,259, resulting in an average utilization factor of 78 per cent, unchanged from 1991. In 1993, the Committee on Conferences recommended to the Assembly that it invite those bodies whose utilization factor was below the benchmark figure—utilization of less than 80 per cent of their allocated resources for three sessions—to review and revise, if necessary, the amount of conference-servicing resources requested.

Also in April, the Secretary-General submitted information on existing conference services, resources and facilities system-wide which could lead to a more effective organization of work and use of conference services.⁽¹²⁾ The information was based on replies received from secretariats at headquarters locations, including the regional commissions and the specialized agencies. The Committee on Conferences requested the Secretariat to provide data on the level of staff posts, the nature of the meetings convened, the capacity utilization at each of the headquarters locations, regional commissions and other organizations and on comparative costs of meetings in New York, Geneva and Vienna.

The Committee was informed that agreement in principle had been reached with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization on the establishment of unified conference services at Vienna to be administered by the United Nations. The Committee urged the Secretary-General to conclude negotiations on the transition as soon as possible.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), to enhance system-wide coordination of conference activities, including coordination of meetings schedules, with a view to optimizing the use of available conference services, resources and facilities.

In accordance with a 1992 Assembly request,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Secretary-General, by an August note,⁽¹³⁾ brought to the attention of all United Nations organs the Assembly's resolutions and guidelines on the use of conference-servicing resources and information on the notional costs per hour of meeting time.

By resolution 48/228 of 23 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit in 1994 a study on the organization, management and human resources requirements for the provision of adequate conference services as a basis for consideration of his 1996-1997 regular budget proposals. It also requested him to provide Member States with studies on the subject that were carried out in the 1992-1993 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/222 A without vote.

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, 46/190 of 20 December 1991 and 47/202 A to c of 22 December 1992,

1. Approves the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the biennium 1994-1995 as submitted and amended by the Committee on Conferences;

2. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make adjustments in the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1994 that may become necessary as a result of action and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

3. Invites the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund and the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme to increase their efforts to rationalize their meeting and documentation requirements with a view to reducing them to the maximum extent possible;

4. Also invites the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund and the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme to consider dispensing with summary records;

5. Welcomes the decision of the Committee on Conferences to continue to monitor the conference services provided to organs and programmes not funded from the regular budget of the United Nations with a view to identifying cost savings;

6. Endorses the efforts of the Committee on Conferences to improve the utilization of conference-servicing resources, and takes note of the Committee's decision in paragraph 23 of its report to raise the benchmark figure to 80 per cent, pending further analysis of the expanded methodology;

7. Welcomes the decision of the Committee on Conferences to continue the experimental methodology in respect of the utilization of conference-servicing resources, and requests the Secretariat to expand the information presented to include analyses of trends and figures on the utilization of conference-servicing capacity;

8. Endorses the decision of the Committee on Conferences to request its Chairman to consult on its behalf with the chairmen of organs concerned, where the utilization factor is lower than the established benchmark figure applicable for the last three sessions, and requests the Committee to report the results of the consultations to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

9. Urges those bodies whose utilization factor is below the applicable benchmark figure for the last three sessions to review and consider reducing the amount of conference-servicing resources requested;

10. Recommends that the measures to ensure optimum utilization of conference services contained in annex II to the report of the Committee on Conferences be implemented, as applicable, by all subsidiary organs in order to achieve the most efficient and effective use of conference-servicing resources;

11. Requests the chairmen of the relevant organs and subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly to propose to Member States, at the beginning of each session, the adoption of time-limits for speakers;

12. Welcomes the decision of the Committee on Conferences to play an informational role vis-a-vis subsidiary organs, providing clear directives to the Secretariat, to set standards and to heighten awareness;

13. Renews its requests to the Secretariat, contained in paragraph 5 of its resolution 47/202 A and paragraph 10 of its resolution 47/202 B, to bring to the attention of all organs information on the notional costs per hour of meeting time and on the notional cost per page of documentation;

14. Reiterates its view, expressed in section VIII of its resolution 44/201 A of 21 December 1989, on the desirability of the establishment of unified conference services at Vienna, stresses, in this context, that the combined financial burden for providing conference services to the United Nations Office at Vienna and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization should, in the long run, benefit from the unification agreement, and urges the Secretary-General to conclude the negotiations with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization in that regard as quickly as possible and to report thereon to the General Assembly no later than at its forty-ninth session;

15. Notes with appreciation the system-wide coordination of conference activities and the agreement reached with regard to establishing a systematic exchange of information and language staff to promote effective utilization of conference staff;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, through the established mechanism of the Inter-Agency Meeting on Language Arrangements, Documentation and Publications, to enhance that coordination, including coordination of meeting schedules, with a view to optimizing the use of available conference services, resources and facilities, with due regard to quality, and making possible the effective participation of Member States, and to report on the results achieved to the General Assembly at its fiftieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

17. Emphasizes that any decisions to convene world conferences should take into account the impact of such conferences on the capacity of the United Nations system to provide conference services and the capacity of Member States to participate in them;

18. Welcomes the benefits from the application of technological innovations to conference servicing, including gains in productivity and reductions in costs, and emphasizes that the primary goal of the introduction of new technology should be to enhance the quality of conference services and ensure their timely provision;

19. Reaffirms the general principle that, in drawing up the schedule of conferences and meetings, United Nations bodies shall plan to meet at their respective established headquarters;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to review the legal basis and experience of all subsidiary bodies that meet away from their established headquarters, thus constituting a departure from General Assembly resolution 40/243 of 18 December 1985, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-ninth session through the Committee on Conferences;

21. Requests the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, when deciding upon its meeting schedule, including meetings away from Headquarters, to take into account the programme of work of the Fifth Committee;

22. Endorses the decision of the Committee on Conferences that in future its review of the proposed programme budget for conference services should be expanded to include conference services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and at the regional commissions.

Workload standards for conference-servicing staff

On 23 December, the General Assembly, by decision 48/459, deferred consideration of a 1992 report on unified workload standards for conference-servicing staff within the United Nations system⁽¹⁶⁾ until its resumed forty-eighth session.

Documents and publications

Documentation control and limitation

By a June note,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General updated the policies laid down by the General Assembly regarding the control and limitation of documentation, as requested by the Assembly in 1969.⁽²⁾ The note, which enumerated policy decisions adopted by the Assembly, most recently in 1992,⁽³⁾ was distributed to all Member States. The policy decisions applied, for the most part, to documentation for the Assembly and its subsidiary bodies. The Assembly had invited other United Nations organs, in particular the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies, to apply the same policies to their documentation. The note summarized Assembly recommendations to limit and control general documents, meeting records, statements, reports and studies, annexes and supplements to the Official Records, documentation for treaty bodies and special conferences, and statements of programme budget implications. Annexed to the note were a list of meeting record entitlements and revised guidelines for the format and contents of reports of the subsidiary organs of the Assembly, as well as guidelines for the control and limitation of documentation for special conferences.

In May,⁽⁴⁾ the Committee on Conferences reviewed the criteria for, status of and guidelines on the provision of written meeting records and on the possibility of issuing the verbatim records of the Security Council in final form only. It also discussed the problems faced by OCS owing to the increase in the volume of documentation and the late submission of documents by author departments.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly instruct all bodies entitled to written meeting records to review the need for such records and to decide whether they should be discontinued or maintained for some or all of their meetings.

The Committee requested OCS to identify incentives to ensure compliance on the part of substantive departments with the 10-week rule for the submission of pre-session documents to the Office. It also recommended to the Assembly to invite inter-governmental bodies to review their agendas for the purpose of combining agenda items and limiting requests for pre-session documentation.

Economy measures

Regarding the economy measures announced by the Secretary-General in August in the light of the financial crisis of the Organization, the Committee on Conferences expressed concern that the measures departed from General Assembly resolutions of 1987⁽⁵⁾ concerning the equal treatment of all official languages and of 1981⁽⁶⁾ on the simultaneous distribution of documents in those languages. The Committee informed the Assembly that the measures would affect the ability of the Assembly and its Main Committees to complete their work in 1993, leading to resumed sessions in 1994 and additional expenditure. In addition, the Committee considered the Secretary-General's decision to limit the distribution of documents to missions to only two official copies to be too restrictive.

Security Council documentation

By notes of 27 July⁽⁷⁾ and 31 August,⁽⁸⁾ the President of the Security Council stated that the Council members had agreed on a series of proposals to streamline the Council's documentation, including issuing verbatim records only in final form beginning 1 January 1994.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/222 B without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions on the control and limitation of documentation, including resolutions 33/56 of 14 December 1978, 36/117 B of 10 December 1981, 37/14 C of 16 November 1982, 45/238 B of 21 December 1990 and 47/202 B of 22 December 1992,

Reaffirming the need for and desirability of written meeting records for some bodies of a political or legal nature,

Considering, on the one hand, the effects of the introduction of technological innovations and, on the other, the increase in the workload and the reduced staffing in the Office of Conference Services,

1. Expresses concern about the late issuance and distribution of documentation, including summary and verbatim records of United Nations bodies;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, through the Committee on Conferences, an analytical report on the factors that contribute to this situation, including the increase in the workload of the Office of Conference Services, the level of staffing, workload standards, the late submission of documents by author departments and the effects of the introduction of technological innovations in the Office;

3. Encourages all bodies currently entitled to written meeting records to review the need for such records, particularly verbatim records, and to communicate their recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

4. Calls upon the Secretariat to strengthen planning and forecasting of parliamentary documentation in both author departments and the Office of Conference Services, and the training of those responsible for the preparation of parliamentary documentation in author departments;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to ensure that documents are submitted by author departments in compliance with the ten-week rule in order to permit processing on time in all official languages, and to include information on the impact of those measures in the report on compliance with the six-week rule requested in paragraph 9 of resolution 47/202 B;

6. Invites intergovernmental bodies and their members to review, as appropriate, their agendas with a view, inter alia, to combining agenda items and limiting requests for pre-session documentation;

7. Calls upon the Secretariat to provide the Office of Conference Services with adequate resources, especially technological resources, to enable it to respond to its increased workload and maintain a high standard of services, with due respect to the principle of equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations as laid down in General Assembly resolution 42/207 C of 11 December 1987;

8. Expresses its deep concern regarding the economy measures announced by the Secretary-General on 26 August 1993 in the context of the financial crisis without prior consultation with Member States, those measures being in contradiction with the principle of equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations as laid down in resolution 42/207 C;

9. Concurs with the recommendation of the Committee on Conferences, contained in paragraph 140 of its report, that cuts in conference servicing introduced by the Secretary-General on 26 August 1993, and subsequently lifted in New York, be lifted also at Geneva and Vienna;

10. Endorses the letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences to the President of the General Assembly, contained in paragraph 136 of the report of the Committee, which reflects the opinions of the Committee on the economy measures announced by the Secretary-General.

Publications policy

In October,⁽⁹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a report outlining the findings and recommendations of a review of the United Nations publications policy, pursuant to a 1991 request of the General Assembly.⁽¹⁰⁾ The report examined the publications policy, including the definition of publications and their mandate, and discussed its implementation by the Publications Board and its working committee and working groups; the Department of Public Information; the Programme Planning and Budget Division; author departments; OCS; and the Office of General Services. The report also discussed coordination with other United Nations duty stations and organizations and preparation and dissemination of publications, including their free distribution and sales, external publishing activities and copyright.

In his conclusions, the Secretary-General stated that the restructuring of the publishing activities at Headquarters was expected to provide a new focus to the planning and implementation of the United Nations publications programme and to integrate it more closely with the other public information activities of the Organization. The reconstituted Publications Board in its review of the publications programme for 1994-1995 was applying the modified criteria for publications set out in the report and sought to take fully into account the concerns expressed in the Committee on Information and in the General Assembly.

The Assembly, by decision 48/459 of 23 December, deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed forty-eighth session.

UN premises and property

Addis Ababa and Bangkok conference facilities

In November,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee a progress report on the construction of additional conference facilities at Addis Ababa and Bangkok, projects which were approved by the General Assembly in 1984.⁽²⁾

The Secretary-General reported that the pace of work at Addis Ababa continued at the 1992 level, as the contractor was unable to achieve the higher production rates anticipated by his revised timetable. Consultants and the administration considered the contractor's latest timetable projecting the completion of construction and commissioning by the end of 1994 as too optimistic and considered the first half of 1995 more realistic. The total project cost, estimated at $107,576,900, was not expected to increase.

The conference facilities at Bangkok were completed in the first quarter of 1993, followed by an inauguration ceremony on 9 April. The building was used for a number of major conferences and smaller meetings during the year. It was expected that the total project cost would not exceed the authorized $48,540,000.

The General Assembly, by decision 48/459 of 23 December, deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed forty-eighth session.

Office accommodation at Geneva

In December,⁽³⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Fifth Committee describing the problem of office accommodation at the United Nations Office at Geneva. He stated that the issue of space allocation had become critical, owing to the increased activities of some departments and offices and the transfer of others to Geneva. Proposals were presented to cover the immediate requirements, including the provision of rent-free and concessional office space by the Swiss authorities and renovation of existing facilities. He also made projections for additional long-term requirements.

In his conclusions, the Secretary-General stated that the General Assembly might wish to approve his proposal to accept an offer by the Swiss authorities of 13,504 square metres of rent-free and concessional office space at the Geneva Executive Centre.

The Assembly, by decision 48/459 of 23 December, deferred consideration of the report of the Secretary-General until its resumed forty-eighth session.

Works of art in the United Nations

By a February note,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) containing recommendations for managing and maintaining works of art in the United Nations. JIU recommended that the Secretary-General submit proposals for an arts policy for adoption by the Assembly; reorganize and strengthen the Arts Committee of the United Nations; inform Member States of measures planned to develop, preserve and safeguard the arts collection of the United Nations; and engage a part-time curator to assure the relevance, coherence and value of the collection.

In June,⁽⁵⁾ the Secretary-General stated that JIU's basic premise of comparing the collection of art in the United Nations to national collections in major museums did not appear appropriate, as the Organization was not involved in a programme of acquisition, but was a repository of donations. He agreed with the recommendations to strengthen the Arts Committee and to develop a comprehensive registry of the works of art, but was of the view that a curator was not needed; a periodic review by the Buildings Management Service of the United Nations Department of Administration and Management should suffice to identify physical deterioration of the works of art.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 48/217 without vote.

Managing works of art in the United Nations: report of the Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Managing works of art in the United Nations" and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon,

Aware of the further comments and explanations provided by the representative of the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Managing works of art in the United Nations" and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the management of works of art in such a manner as to avoid additional costs to the regular budget of the United Nations, with due regard to the quality of services being provided;

3. Recommends the strengthening of the Arts Committee of the United Nations by the advice of local experts in honorary capacities;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on the subject to the General Assembly at its fiftieth session.

Information systems and computers

Technological innovations

During 1993, efforts continued towards upgrading the technological infrastructure of the United Nations in the areas of desktop and larger computers and in communications technology to enhance connectivity among major duty stations.

The total number of personal computers at Headquarters had increased by 44 per cent from 3,450 in 1992 to 5,000 in 1993. At offices away from Headquarters, the number had increased by 23 per cent from 5,600 in 1992 to 6,950 in 1993. The capacity to share information among users was increased through local area networks (LANs).

Additional LAN servers were acquired to house large organizational databases for the integrated management information system (IMIS), the optical disk system and for Internet gopher service.

Efforts continued at Headquarters to improve network services. The LAN wiring project, to install Ethernet cables and fiber optic cables, was more than halfway completed by December. It enabled the successful implementation of the first version of IMIS in its user offices at Headquarters.

As a direct result of the progress made in LAN wiring, the user base of electronic mail at Headquarters grew from 200 to 2,400. Electronic mail was also installed in field service missions.

In the area of LAN management, modern network management tools and techniques were adopted to ensure the smooth flow of data.

Several new technological applications were either tested or introduced, including packet switching equipment, a news-wire service for clients in political areas, and a public-access server through the Internet service.

The Committee on Conferences continued to monitor the applications of new technologies in the area of conference servicing and requested the Secretariat to report in 1994 on the long-range plan and the time-frame for introducing each new application of new technology at each United Nations duty station.

Telecommunications

During 1993, work continued on upgrading and developing the United Nations global telecommunications network. Digital private automatic branch exchange switches were installed in United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna, and those in the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific at Bangkok, the Economic Commission for Africa at Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi were modernized.

A new voice-mail system was installed at Headquarters and a facsimile switch introduced in the central telegraph operations to lower transmission costs and reduce the level of manual work.

In order to improve telecommunications between Headquarters and peace-keeping missions, communications circuits were upgraded to digital mode via satellite to Cambodia, Mozambique, Somalia and the former Yugoslavia.

In November, the Secretary-General submitted a report⁽¹⁾ on the United Nations telecommunication system, containing updated information on a proposed satellite backbone network to meet urgent requirements of the United Nations. It discussed the engineering of the proposed satellite network, as well as its organizational and management structure, project budget and implementation timetable and costs, benefits and financing. The proposals related to the installation of seven Earth stations: one at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, two at the United Nations Office at Geneva and one each at the seat of the regional commissions at Addis Ababa, Amman, Bangkok and Santiago. The network was designed to meet the United Nations' own requirements and enhance connectivity between Headquarters and the regional commissions, field offices and specialized agencies. It would be expanded and configured to meet peace-keeping and humanitarian requirements. Based on an implementation schedule of approximately three and a half years starting in 1993, the total project cost was estimated at $18,212,700. Annexed to the report was a comparison of telephone rates—published commercial rates, special United Nations volume discounts and United Nations network rate—for calls originating in New York; a comparison of sample telex rates; a proposed organizational structure model for a telecommunications section at regional commissions and Nairobi; and a table of United Nations leased circuits and proposed configurations.

The General Assembly, by decision 48/459 of 23 December, deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed forty-eighth session.

Integrated management information system

The fifth progress report on the IMIS project was submitted to the Fifth Committee by the Secretary-General in October 1993.⁽⁷⁾ The project, approved by the General Assembly in 1988,⁽⁸⁾ was to develop an integrated system for the processing of and reporting on administrative actions at all major duty stations, to replace numerous independent systems which were no longer capable of providing the support needed by management. A first series of applications related mainly to human resources was successfully implemented at Headquarters in September.

The Assembly, by decision 48/459 of 23 December, deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's progress report until its resumed forty-eighth session.

UN informatics system

As requested by the Economic and Social Council in 1992,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General submitted in June a report on international cooperation in the field of informatics.⁽⁵⁾ The report described United Nations efforts to make electronic information readily available to Member States and discussed the creation by the Advisory Committee for the Coordination of Information System (ACCIS) of a prototype information module, UNEARTH, a snapshot of general information on United Nations organizations and agencies disseminated on diskette and made available on INTERNET by UNDP. It also discussed the computer and information systems training activities conducted by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the Dag Hammarskjöld Library in New York and the United Nations library at Geneva. The report concluded that United Nations informatics activities were limited and uncoordinated, owing to the lack of an appropriate coordinating mechanism. At its seventh session (Geneva, 27-29 September),⁽⁶⁾ ACCIS discussed, among other things, activities carried out by its secretariat in the 1992-1993 biennium and its 1994-1995 work programme.

In November, ACC created the Senior-Level Task Force on United Nations Information Systems to identify policy issues relating to coordination and to propose mandates, structures and secretariat arrangements for ACCIS and the International Computing Centre (ICC), a Geneva-based United Nations institution.

In December,⁽⁷⁾ ACC, having considered the recommendations of the Task Force, decided to discontinue ACCIS and to establish an Information Systems Coordination Committee. ACC requested the Management Committee of ICC to study the Task Force recommendation concerning the transformation of ICC into an information management service centre with a broader role to provide information-based services on a full cost-recovery basis.

In November,⁽⁸⁾ the 1994-1995 budget estimates for ICC were submitted by the Secretary-General. The Centre, authorized by the General Assembly in 1970⁽⁹⁾ and operating since 1971,⁽¹⁰⁾ offered a comprehensive range of data and text processing and related telecommunication services to organizations of the United Nations system. Its 1994-1995 budget estimates amounted to $25,099,000. Special focus was placed during the biennium on the standardization of the Centre's software operating environment to conform to international and industrial standards. The United Nations share for the use of ICC during 1994-1995 was estimated at $5,639,100.

On 23 December, by resolution 48/230, section VII, adopted on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly approved the ICC 1994-1995 budget estimates, amounting to $25,099,000.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1993/56 without vote.

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1991/70 of 26 July 1991 and 1992/60 of 31 July 1992 on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General concerning the follow-up action taken, in particular the examination of the Advisory Committee for the Coordination of Information Systems and of the International Computing Centre, initiated by the Administrative Committee on Coordination in the context of the review of their functioning, as well as other measures taken so far,

1. Reiterates the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members of the United Nations and for observers through, inter alia, their permanent missions, to the growing number of computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations;

2. Expresses concern at the limited progress achieved thus far and reiterates its call for the urgent implementation of measures to achieve these objectives;

3. Stresses once again the urgent need for representatives of States to be closely consulted and actively associated with the respective executive and governing bodies of the relevant United Nations institutions dealing with informatics within the United Nations system, so that the specific needs of States as internal end-users can be given due priority;

4. Calls on Member States to pursue similar action in the governing bodies of the specialized agencies in which they are represented;

5. Urges the Administrative Committee on Coordination to ensure full and effective consultations between the senior-level task force that it has established and the representatives of States, so that their views and requirements are duly incorporated in the report of the senior-level task force;

6. Requests that the initial phases of the action programme to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States be implemented from within existing resources and in full consultation with the representatives of States;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1994 on the follow-up action taken on the present resolution.

Integrated library network

In March,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted his comments on a JIU report setting forth proposals for an integrated library network of the United Nations system.⁽¹³⁾ The Secretary-General made a series of recommendations supporting the creation of an effective and integrated library network.

The comments of ACC on the JIU report were submitted by the Secretary-General in May.⁽¹³⁾

By decision 1993/227 of 13 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the JIU report and the comments of the Secretary-General and of ACC thereon.

Other administrative and budgetary arrangements

Fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations (1995)

In its report to the General Assembly,⁽¹⁾ the Preparatory Committee for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations reviewed activities of the United Nations system, Member States and non-governmental organizations in preparation for commemoration of the anniversary (see PART ONE, Chapter V).

The Committee was informed that the financial situation of the Organization precluded making funds from the regular United Nations budget available for financing commemorative programmes and events. The Secretary-General therefore established a Trust Fund for the Fiftieth Anniversary Celebrations and urged Member States to support it.

The Committee agreed that it was essential that its secretariat be assured of adequate staff and related resources. It requested its Chairman to raise that concern with the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1993, on the recommendation of the Preparatory Committee for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations, the General Assembly adopted resolution 48/215 without vote.

Commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations in 1995

The General Assembly,

Recalling that on 19 October 1993 it considered and took note of the report of the Preparatory Committee for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations and adopted the draft decision proposed in paragraph 16 of that report,

Noting that, in paragraph 14 of the report of the Preparatory Committee, it was stated that anniversary and commemorative programmes and events in connection with the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations could not be financed from the regular budget, but would be financed from a Trust Fund for the Fiftieth Anniversary Celebrations established by the Secretary-General for that purpose,

Noting also that, in paragraph 15 of the report of the Preparatory Committee, it is recorded that "the Committee agreed that it was essential to the effective functioning and proper management of the fiftieth anniversary that its secretariat be assured of adequate staff and related resources",

1. Approves, on an exceptional basis, the creation of the post of Special Adviser, at the Under-Secretary-General level, against general temporary assistance resources for organizing and coordinating activities related to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide adequate secretariat support for the Preparatory Committee for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations.

UNITAR

The Secretary-General reported in November⁽²⁾ that the UNITAR building, valued at $10.6 million, had been transferred to the United Nations in exchange for the cancellation of the debt and coverage of UNITAR's 1992 financial obligations. The headquarters of UNITAR were transferred to Geneva, effective 1 July (see PART THREE, Chapter XII).

Fifth Committee work programme

By decision 48/458 of 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, approved the Committee's biennial work programme for 1994-1995, as annexed to the decision.

UN Postal Administration

In 1993, the gross revenue of the United Nations Postal Administration (UNPA) from its sale of philatelic items both at Headquarters and at overseas offices totalled more than $16 million. Revenue from the sale of stamps for philatelic purposes was retained by the United Nations. Under the terms of an agreement between the Organization and the United States, revenue from the sale of United States dollar-denominated stamps used for postage from Headquarters was reimbursed to the United States Postal Service. Similarly, postal agreements between the United Nations and the Governments of Switzerland and Austria required that revenue derived from the sale of Swiss franc-denominated stamps and Austrian schilling-denominated stamps for postage be reimbursed to the Swiss and Austrian postal authorities, respectively.

During the year, UNPA released six commemorative stamp issues, two definitive stamps, two souvenir cards, six maximum cards and three postcards.

The first set of six commemorative stamps, entitled "Ageing: Dignity and Participation", was released on 5 February to call global attention to the ageing of populations and challenges facing older persons.

On 3 March, UNPA launched a multi-year stamp series on "Endangered Species". Each year, 12 endangered species would be featured on stamps to highlight the need for the protection of endangered species throughout the world. Three maximum cards accompanied the issue.

On 7 May, the United Nations issued six stamps with the theme "Healthy Environment" to commemorate the forty-fifth anniversary of the World Health Organization. A souvenir card was also released. Two definitive stamps and three postal cards were issued on the same day.

The fifth and final set of stamps in the Human Rights Series was issued on 11 June to illustrate articles 25 to 30 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.⁽¹⁾

To observe the International Day of Peace, UNPA on 21 September issued three stamps and a souvenir card on the theme of peace.

On 29 October, a set of three stamps and three maximum cards were issued on the theme of environment-climate.

The General Assembly, by resolution 48/219 B, resolved that direct expenses of UNPA, which were not provided for under the budget appropriations, should be charged against the income derived from its activities.

PART SIX

Intergovernmental organizations related to the United Nations

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 1993, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to foster peaceful uses of nuclear energy, establish and administer safeguards, provide technical assistance to member States and establish health and safety standards.

The thirty-seventh session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, 27 September-1 October 1993) adopted resolutions relating to measures to resolve international radioactive waste management issues; the early conclusion of a nuclear safety convention; piratical utilization of food irradiation; producing potable water economically; strengthening the effectiveness and improving the efficiency of the safeguards system; and a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Africa.

Armenia, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Lithuania and Slovakia became IAEA members, bringing the total number of member States to 118 at the end of 1993 (see Annex I).

Nuclear safety and radiation protection

In 1993, a group of experts continued to develop a nuclear safety convention. Consensus was achieved on the fundamental principles of nuclear safety which should be adopted as binding international legal obligations of parties to the convention.

Six Operational Safety Review Team missions (China, France, Romania, Russian Federation, Slovakia, Slovenia) and five follow-up visits (Bulgaria, Germany, Japan, Russian Federation, South Africa) were made to nuclear powerplants. In addition, 12 Assessment of Safety Significant Events Team missions (Bulgaria, Czech Republic, France, Lithuania, Netherlands, Russian Federation (4), Slovakia, Ukraine (2)) were carried out to review the operational safety performance of installations, and an International Regulatory Review Team visited Bulgaria to assist in strengthening the country's nuclear regulatory body.

In May, a joint United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/IAEA initiative was launched to strengthen radiation and nuclear safety infrastructures in the successor States of the former USSR. Fact-finding missions to Armenia, Estonia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania and Uzbekistan formed the basis for country-specific programmes. In addition, IAEA assisted the successor States of the former USSR and Eastern European countries in implementing consistent international safety assessments and made recommendations regarding improvements in the safety of nuclear installations.

A safety guide was completed on criteria for intervention after a nuclear or radiation emergency. Work continued on improving the capabilities of the Emergency Response Unit and the overall effectiveness of IAEA to respond to a nuclear accident or radiological emergency.

During 1993, there were five Radiation Protection Advisory Team missions (Croatia, Kuwait, Lebanon, Mauritius, Myanmar). Through individual monitoring services to member States, some 9,000 dosimeters and 1,000 finger dosimeters were distributed.

The International Nuclear Event Scale information system continued to be operational for nuclear powerplants and, on a trial basis, for all other nuclear facilities except medical and military facilities. In 1993, 65 events were reported to the system.

A new programme was initiated to collect and review environmental monitoring data with the collaboration of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation and the World Health Organization (WHO). It aimed at setting up a database to include external radiation levels and radioactive concentrations in atmospheric aerosols, precipitation, drinking-water, groundwater, surface water, sea water, selected bio-indicators and food items under normal conditions.

Nuclear power

Assistance to IAEA member States for nuclear power programme planning and development included support to China, Colombia and Peru, for carrying out studies to assess the nuclear option; Romania, for energy demand forecasting, electricity expansion planning and nuclear programme implementation; the Philippines, for the comparative economic assessment of nuclear and fossil powerplants in the overall power development programme; the Czech Republic and Slovakia, to evaluate and select sites for spent-fuel storage and disposal; Indonesia, for a feasibility study for its first nuclear powerplant on the Muria Peninsula (Java) and for training; Thailand, to examine the introduction of nuclear power into electricity grids; and Iran, for a training course in nuclear power engineering.

IAEA activities in non-electrical applications of advanced reactors focused on coupling nuclear reactors with desalination processes and on feasibility studies of sea-water desalination using nuclear energy for potable water production.

At the end of 1993, the Power Reactor Information System (PRIS) database included information on the status and operating experience of 430 nuclear powerplants. There were 69 users in 29 countries and four international organizations. A subset of the databank, MicroPRIS, for users of personal computers, had 179 subscribers in 53 member States.

Nuclear fuel cycle

World uranium production in 1993 declined further by some 2,000 tonnes to 34,000 tonnes, which met only about 60 per cent of the world-wide reactor-related requirements. Six countries produced nearly 67 per cent of the total.

In the area of reactor-fuel technology and performance, technical committee meetings were held on the influence of water chemistry on fuel cladding behaviour (Rez, Czech Republic, October); advances in control materials for water reactors; and the safe handling, transportation and storage of separated plutonium in civilian nuclear-power programmes.

A mission to Hungary advised on the safety of spent-fuel storage.

Radioactive waste management

IAEA's radioactive waste management programme focused on developing and promulgating its Radioactive Waste Safety Standards, building and strengthening waste management infrastructures, developing radiological and safety criteria for waste disposal, and coordinating international radiological/environmental assessment projects. Other areas emphasized were advisory service missions, guidance on the safety and technical aspects of decommissioning nuclear facilities, quality assurance management for waste packaging and disposal systems, safety assessment in near-surface disposal facilities and the environmental restoration of contaminated land masses.

Under the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Programme, two regular missions and one follow-up mission were organized. In cooperation with UNDP, projects to enhance safety and provide sound environmental management of radioactive wastes were developed for four pilot countries. Reviews of the national waste management programmes of the Czech Republic and Finland were conducted as part of IAEA's Waste Management Assessment and Technical Review Programme.

During the year, IAEA began implementing the International Arctic Seas Assessment Project to evaluate the health and environmental risks posed by the wastes that had been dumped into the Arctic seas and to assess the feasibility of possible remedial actions. The IAEA Marine Environment Laboratory (Monaco) participated in the Russian-Norwegian expedition to the Arctic dump sites to sample and analyse water, sediment and biota in the region.

Food and agriculture

Under a joint IAEA/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) programme, member States were assisted in using nuclear techniques in their agricultural research and development to improve food production, reduce food losses, improve soil fertility and water availability and protect the environment.

Significant advances were made in restoring damaged soils and improving the efficiency of water use and phosphorus uptake by crops. Progress was made in the genetic improvement of crops through the combined use of induced mutations and other techniques such as in vitro propagation and cloning, doubled haploids, deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA)-based marker mutations, electrophoresis of proteins and flow cell cytometry for measuring ploidy.

The first phase of a Latin American regional project on the genetic improvement of seed-propagated crops focused on mutation breeding and in vitro techniques such as the use of doubled haploids. Major crop improvements were achieved in wheat, rice, barley and common bean, resulting in the production of promising mutant lines and the release of mutant varieties. A research coordination meeting was held on improving basic food crops in Africa through plant breeding, including the use of induced mutations (Nairobi, Kenya, September). The major objective of the project was the breeding of improved varieties of staple food crops, emphasizing indigenous species. Another research coordination meeting on the application of DNA-based marker mutations for improving cereals and other sexually reproduced crop species was combined with another meeting on the use of novel DNA finger-printing techniques for detecting and characterizing genetic variation in vegetatively propagated crops.

Research and development at the Agency's Laboratory at Seibersdorf, Austria, focused mainly on the genetic improvement of vegetatively propagated and tropical crops of major importance, through in vitro mutation breeding in association with advanced methods of molecular biology. A radiation treatment service was provided at no cost to FAO and IAEA member States to foster the application of nuclear techniques in national crop-improvement programmes. In 1993, more than 600 radiation service treatments for 48 member States were provided by the Seibersdorf Laboratory. Most of these were seed samples which were irradiated. In August, a joint FAO/IAEA Central Laboratory was established within the Laboratory at Seibersdorf to develop and distribute immunoassay-based disease diagnostic kits for veterinary services in developing countries.

Prospects for increasing the application of the sterile-insect technique to combat the Mediterranean fruit fly were enhanced by the development at the Laboratory, using nuclear techniques, of "Vienna 42", a strain which allowed the release of sterile males alone. The production of sterile males was important because sterile females persisted in stinging the fruit, allowing the entry of micro-organisms which caused the fruit to rot. A model project was developed using the sterile-insect technique against tsetse flies to eradicate the vector of African animal trypanosomiasis from Zanzibar, United Republic of Tanzania.

Human health

The human health programme emphasized creating mechanisms to promote quality in nuclear medicine and radiotherapy processes in developing countries. IAEA collaborated with the Latin American Association of Societies of Nuclear Medicine and Biology in founding the Ibero-American Board for the Certification of Nuclear Physicians in Latin America, Spain and Portugal.

Projects in nuclear medicine and applied radiation biology and radiotherapy continued to enhance indigenous capabilities, including the production of radioactive reagents and radiopharmaceuticals and the use of computer-assisted radiotherapy planning for various types of cancer.

The IAEA/WHO Network of Secondary Standard Dosimetry Laboratories included 67 laboratories and six national organizations in 54 member States, as well as 14 affiliated members. Services continued in the areas of calibration and dose intercomparison and support for technology transfer. The Seibersdorf Laboratory took over the technical activities of the International Dose Assurance Service for radiation-processing dosimetry.

Nutritional and health-related environment studies focused on micronutrient malnutrition and the use of nuclear analytical techniques for studying non-radioactive pollutants in environmental samples and human tissues.

Physical and earth sciences

IAEA's activities in the area of industrial applications of radiation and radioisotopes focused on methods for minimizing industry-related environmental pollution, non-destructive testing and nucleonic control systems for on-line mineral analysis. Work continued on nuclear methods for evaluating healing pathways of pollutant damage in the environment and for removing toxic flue gases from coal-fired power stations.

Water resources development projects dealt with water resources assessment, geothermal resource assessment, studies of sediment transport and related problem, environmental investigations in the hydrosphere and atmosphere, analytical and intercalibration services, and training scientists from developing countries.

Five national/regional nuclear data libraries were incorporated into the Agency's database. IAEA continued to develop the atomic and molecular/plasma-material interaction database system. In 1993, it fulfilled some 700 requests from scientists in 75 member States for experimental and evaluated data and related documentation, data-processing codes and publications.

Some 4,600 scientists participated in activities of the International Centre for Theoretical Physics (Trieste, Italy). Over 50 per cent of them came from developing countries.

Technical cooperation

The most significant development in 1993 in IAEA's technical cooperation activities was the approval by the Board of Governors of the first 12 model projects for the 1994 programme. The projects were formulated in close cooperation with the recipient Governments, which committed substantial resources to them. The model project concept, responding to real needs and designed to have a socio-economic impact on end-users, introduced a new approach to the technical cooperation programme.

Under the programme, a total of 1,373 projects were operational, including 860 continued from 1992 and 412 newly approved projects. Activities covered the provision of training to more than 2,500 scientists, the assignment of 2,978 experts and lecturers, and the completion of 172 training courses. Total new resources available for technical cooperation amounted to $52.9 million, the largest amount ever recorded. The Technical Assistance and Cooperation Fund accounted for 81.1 per cent of those resources, with extrabudgetary funds accounting for 14.8 per cent, and UNDP for 2 per cent. The programme emphasized food and agriculture, which accounted for 20.2 per cent of all disbursements, followed by safety-related activities (19.7 per cent), such as radioactive waste management, radiation protection and the safety of nuclear installations, physical and chemical sciences (18.1 per cent), industry and earth sciences (14.5 per cent) and human health (14.4 per cent).

Agency safeguards responsibilities

During 1993, 2,042 safeguards inspections were performed. IAEA carried out six inspections in Iraq, bringing the total number of inspections to 22 since May 1991, and implemented the essential elements of the plan for the destruction, removal and rendering harmless of items indicated in a 1991 Security Council resolution.^a Inspections were also carried out in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and South Africa (for details of IAEA activities in South Africa, see PART TWO, Chapter I; for details of its activities in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Iraq, see PART TWO, Chapter III).

At the end of December 1993, 194 safeguards agreements were in force with 116 States (and Taiwan). In 1993, safeguards agreements pursuant to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT)^b entered into force with Latvia, Solomon Islands and Tonga. The 1972 safeguards agreement with Czechoslovakia continued to be applied in the Czech Republic and Slovakia to the extent relevant to the territory of each State. In addition, the 1973 safeguards agreement with the former Yugoslavia continued to be applied in Croatia, Slovenia and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) to the extent relevant to the territory of each of those States.

During 1993, safeguards were applied in 46 States under agreements pursuant to NPT or to NPT and the 1967 Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco), in one State under an agreement pursuant to the Treaty of Tlatelolco and in nine States under bi- or trilateral agreements. Safeguards activities pursuant to NPT in Iraq continued and IAEA applied safeguards to nuclear installations in Taiwan.

As at 31 December 1993, safeguards agreements were in force with 100 States pursuant to NPT. For 57 non-nuclear-weapon States party to NPT, there was still no safeguards agreement in force in accordance with the Treaty. As far as IAEA was aware, five of those States had significant nuclear activities.

NPT safeguards agreements were in force with all 11 signatories of the South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (Rarotonga Treaty) and safeguards were applied in one of those States pursuant to such an agreement.

Twenty of the 24 Latin American States party to the Treaty of Tlatelolco had concluded safeguards agreements with IAEA pursuant to that Treaty and 17 of them were in force. Safeguards agreements pursuant to Additional Protocol I of the Treaty were in force with two States with territories in the zone of application of the Treaty.

Nuclear information

The International Nuclear Information System (INIS), with 86 States and 17 international organizations participating, had a bibliographic database on nuclear literature totalling 1,700,078 records by year's end.

The INIS Clearing-house distributed about 440,000 microfiches, representing 24 million printed pages of documents. By the end of 1993, the number of documents available on microfiche was almost 278,000.

Secretariat

At the end of 1993, the IAEA secretariat staff totalled 2,188, with 833 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,355 in the General Service category. Among the 601 staff members in posts subject to geographical distribution, 85 nationalities were represented.

Budget

The regular budget for 1993 amounted to $206,922,000, of which $198,259,000 was to be financed by member States on the basis of the 1993 scale of assessment; $5,419,000 from income from reimbursable work for others; and $3,244,000 from other miscellaneous income. However, because of a shortfall in expected receipts, steps were taken to reduce the budget by 12 per cent to $177,364,100. Actual expenditures from the regular budget amounted to $175,323,802; the authority to spend an amount of $16,628,800 was reserved for deferred programme activities to be carried out in 1994 if arrears of contributions were received in time. An allocation of $1,685,000 to the Equipment Replacement Fund was also approved. As a result, the unused budget amounted to $7,865,398.

The target for voluntary contributions to the Technical Assistance and Cooperation Fund in 1993 was established at $55.5 million, of which $43 million was pledged by member States.

Chapter II

International Labour Organisation (ILO)

In 1993, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) continued activities in its six major programme areas: promotion of policies to create employment and satisfy basic human needs; development of human resources; improvement of working and living conditions and environment; promotion of social security; strengthening of industrial relations and tripartite (government/employer/worker) cooperation; and the advancement of human rights in social and labour matters. The main instruments of action continued to be standard-setting, technical cooperation activities, research and publishing.

Membership in ILO rose to 169 in 1993, with the admission of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Slovakia, Tajikistan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkmenistan (see Annex I).

On 27 May, the 56-member Governing Body of ILO re-elected Michel Hansenne (Belgium) for a second five-year term as Director-General of the International Labour Office beginning 4 March 1994.

Meetings

The eightieth session of the International Labour Conference (Geneva, 2-22 June) had before it the annual report of the ILO Governing Body, the report of the Director-General concerning social protection and the thirtieth special report on the effect of apartheid on labour and employment in South Africa.

The Conference adopted a new Convention and Recommendation on the Prevention of Major Industrial Accidents and discussed the protection of part-time workers with a view to adopting standards in 1994.

A general discussion focused on the complementarity between ILO technical cooperation and international labour standards. A special sitting discussed the Director-General's report on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories.

A tripartite Conference committee again examined the application of ILO Conventions and Recommendations by member States and reviewed the application of ILO standards on workers with family responsibilities.

Among industrial meetings held during the year were: the Tripartite Meeting on Safety and Related Issues pertaining to Work on Offshore Petroleum Installations (Geneva, 20-28 April); tenth session of the Committee on Salaried Employees and Professional Workers (Geneva, 5-13 May); Tripartite Meeting on the Effects of Technological Changes in the Clothing Industry (Geneva, 14-22 September); fifth session of the Joint Committee on the Public Service (Geneva, 20-28 October); Tripartite Meeting on the Social Effects of Structural Change in Banking (Geneva, 23 November-1 December); and the thirteenth session of the Metal Trades Committee (Geneva, 8-15 December).

The Fifteenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians (Geneva, 19-28 January) focused on international standards concerning informal sector employment statistics; statistics of various forms of industrial action; and revision of the International Classification of Status in Employment.

International standards

During 1993, ILO activities concerning Conventions and Recommendations consisted of standard-setting and supervision of the application of standards.

Standard-setting

In 1993, the International Labour Conference adopted the Prevention of Major Industrial Accidents Convention (No. 174) and Recommendation (No. 181), 1993. The Chemicals Convention, 1990 (No. 170) entered into force on 4 November 1993, having received the requisite number of ratifications.

During the year, 398 ratifications of ILO Conventions by 38 member States were registered, bringing the total number of ratifications as at 31 December 1993 to 6,050. There was one denunciation by Portugal of the Night Work (Women) Convention, 1919 (No. 4).

Supervision of standards

In March, the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations was able to note 42 instances in 1993 in which Governments had changed their law and practice to come into closer conformity with ratified Conventions, following the Committee's earlier comments. In addition, it dealt with 251 instances in which employers' or workers' organizations exercised their right to make observations on the application of Conventions ratified by Governments.

The Committee carried out a general survey of the application by member States of selected international labour standards, whether or not they had been ratified by all countries. The 1993 survey dealt with the application of the Workers with Family Responsibilities Convention (No. 156) and Recommendation (No. 165), 1981.^a

The Governing Body's Committee on Freedom of Association, which examined complaints of violations of freedom of association received from employers' and workers' organizations, met three times in 1993 to deal with complaints alleging violations of trade union rights.

A number of special procedures were pursued to examine complaints and representations under various articles of the ILO Constitution. Complaints under article 26 were examined concerning the application of ratified Conventions by Côte d'Ivoire and Sweden, and representations under article 24 were examined concerning Brazil, Myanmar, Poland, Sweden and Venezuela.

Employment and development

Active labour-market policies

The active labour-market policies programme assisted member States to formulate and implement effective labour-market policies to improve access to employment and income, with the aim of reducing the impoverishment of vulnerable groups and stimulating labour productivity in order to create favourable conditions for economic growth with employment security.

ILO focused on employment problems associated with the transition from centralized planning to a more market-oriented economy in Central and Eastern Europe and the countries of the former USSR, carrying out a programme of labour-market research analysis and policy advisory services in the Central Asian republics. Analytical work also extended to developing economies in transition, with initial attention placed on Viet Nam, Nicaragua and Mozambique.

With a view to improving labour-market information systems in member States, new methodologies were developed for monitoring poverty and new approaches were identified for measuring female labour force participation. Assistance to member States was provided through several technical cooperation projects, including a project to develop labour-market information systems in support of employment policies in Portuguese-speaking countries in Africa.

ILO obtained insights into the practices of businesses by conducting labour surveys in Bulgaria, Chile, Hungary, Malaysia, Mexico, the Philippines and the Russian Federation. For example, the survey in Mexico showed how different employers reacted to structural adjustment and the expected signing of the North American Free Trade Agreement. While some enterprises modernized and developed the skills of their employees, others, particularly smaller establishments, reacted more defensively and economized by increasing the proportion of workers who were employed under flexible labour contracts.

In November, at the request of the ILO Governing Body's Committee on Employment and Social Policy, a comprehensive paper was produced on active labour-market policies. The paper defined the concept and objectives underlying an ILO framework for active labour-market policies, described their implementation and set out new directions for future work.

Working environment

The International Programme for the Improvement of Working Conditions and Environment continued to assist countries in promoting occupational safety and health and improving working conditions.

Several activities and publications aimed to promote the adoption and strengthening of the implementation of international labour standards on occupational safety and health. National projects, training workshops and seminars in Africa, Asia and the Pacific and Latin America were held to enhance national action on prevention of major industrial and other accidents in hazardous activities such as construction and the use of chemicals. ILO carried out two regional projects in the English-speaking countries of Africa and 20 countries in Asia to assist in drawing up and implementing national policies on safety and health and to enhance training and information capabilities.

As a follow-up to the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development,^b ILO provided support to Governments and workers' and employers' organizations to deal with environmental and sustainable development matters. The Coordinating Group for the Harmonization of Chemical Classification Systems, established within the framework of the International Programme on Chemical Safety, proposed harmonized classification criteria for acute toxicity and danger to the environment. Through inter-agency cooperation, International Basic Safety Standards for Protection against Ionizing Radiation and for the Safety of Radiation Sources were prepared. Guidance notes on practical measures to be taken at enterprise level were issued on several safety and health subjects. Six issues of the bulletin Safety and Health at Work were published, compact discs (CD-ROMs) with 100 occupational safety and health databases were distributed, and an Asian-Pacific network and several national networks on safety and health were set up.

Activities to improve working conditions and quality of working life included technical cooperation, standard-setting, research and publications. Technical cooperation activities aimed to improve working conditions and productivity in small- and medium-sized enterprises and to prevent and reduce alcohol and drug problems in the workplace. ILO continued to focus on the protection of working children and the gradual elimination of child labour. Under the International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour, which was launched with the support of Germany, more than 120 projects with government institutions, trade unions, employers' organizations and non-governmental organizations were being implemented in six countries. A two-year inter-departmental project on child labour was also completed. To address problems of workers with family responsibilities, a survey of major problems related to the care of the elderly was carried out. Standard-setting on part-time work and the preparation for standard-setting to protect homeworkers were also undertaken. Issues of the Conditions of Work Digest were published on monitoring and surveillance and testing in the workplace.

Field activities

In 1993, total expenditure on operational activities from all sources of funds stood at nearly $149 million, almost a 9 per cent decrease from 1992. Trust funds and multi-bilateral sources provided close to $63.3 million, representing some 43 per cent of overall expenditure. As in the past, the United Nations Development Programme remained the largest single source of external funding, providing some $59 million—close to 40 per cent of overall ILO expenditure on operational activities. The ILO regular budget provided about $18.4 million, representing 12.4 per cent, and the United Nations Population Fund some $8.3 million, representing 5.6 per cent.

The three leading programmes in terms of annual expenditure were the employment and development programme ($39 million), comprising primarily projects in support of rural development, migration and population and employment strategies; the enterprise and cooperative development programme ($34.8 million); and the programme on vocational training systems, rehabilitation and training policies ($22.2 million). Other significant technical programmes focused on industrial relations and labour administration ($6.7 million), working conditions and environment ($10 million) and sectoral activities ($7.7 million). ILO spent $1.7 million and $8 million, respectively, for activities in support of employers' and workers' organizations. Africa remained in the forefront of ILO operational activities ($60 million, representing 40 per cent of the total expenditure), followed by Asia and the Pacific ($41.4 million), the Americas ($22 million), interregional and global ($16.8 million), Europe ($6.1 million) and the Arab States ($2.2 million).

Educational activities

In 1993, priority was given to assisting member States in raising national capacity-building to formulate training policies and effectively manage national vocational training systems. ILO emphasized facilitating effective responses by Governments, employers and workers to the rapid changes occurring in the training environment and to structural adjustment measures, particularly in the countries undergoing transition from a centrally planned to a market economy; improving skills and incomes at the local community level in developing countries; and promoting training opportunities for women and youth. Increased efforts were made to integrate people with disabilities into the mainstream of vocational training. Throughout the year, a sustained effort was made to increase the capacities of the non-governmental sectors engaged in social development to collaborate with Governments in formulating and implementing national training strategies. Applied research resulted in practical guidelines for decision-makers and trainers.

ILO's International Institute for Labour Studies stressed links between labour institutions, industrial organizations and economic development in order to define social policies which combined growth with equity. The relationships between labour institutions and economic development were examined through case-studies covering Africa, Asia and Latin America. In November, a symposium on poverty explored aspects of anti-poverty policies, including macroeconomic and sectoral policies, labour markets, social integration, and the organization and representation of the poor.

The impact of globalization on industrial organization was examined in the context of changing patterns of trade, capital and the international division of labour. The Institute's Forum on Labour in a Changing World Economy examined the importance of labour costs for investment location relative to other factors such as social infrastructures, skill endowments and access to markets.

Tripartite participants from 22 countries attended the 1993 international internship course on active labour policy development. The course was designed to enhance the capacity of social policy makers to develop and manage national programmes in a changing global setting.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the total number of full-time staff under permanent, fixed- and short-term appointments at ILO headquarters and elsewhere was 3,311. Of these, 1,330 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,981 were in the General Service or Maintenance categories. Of the Professional staff, 387 were assigned to technical cooperation projects.

Budget

The International Labour Conference in June 1993 adopted a budget of $466.51 million for the 1994-1995 biennium, which, at the exchange rate of 1.45 Swiss francs to the United States dollar, amounted to 676,439,500 Swiss francs.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The twenty-seventh biennial session of the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) (Rome, Italy, 6-24 November 1993) approved FAO's programme of work and budget for 1994-1995 and adopted resolutions on food, agriculture and administrative and financial matters. With regard to the 1994-1999 medium-term plan, it endorsed the following priorities: environment and sustainable development; policy advice; people in development; poverty alleviation, nutrition and food security; and technical and economic cooperation among developing countries.

The Conference expressed concern over the reduction in world agricultural production in 1993 and the unevenness of progress among countries and regions, in particular the deterioration of food security in sub-Saharan Africa and in large parts of Central and Eastern Europe. In the area of environment and sustainable development, it decided to revise the International Undertaking on Plant Genetic Resources to be in harmony with the Convention on Biological Diversity,^a signed at the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.^b It also adopted the Voluntary International Code of Conduct for Plant Germplasm Collecting and Transfer to contribute to the conservation and rational use of plant genetic resources for sustainable development. The Conference reviewed the implementation of the Plan of Action for the Integration of Women into Agricultural and Rural Development, which called for women's increased access to income, credit, education and decision-making.

The Conference appointed Jacques Diouf of Senegal to the office of Director-General for a period of six years beginning on 1 January 1994. It readmitted South Africa as a member of FAO and also admitted nine new members (Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Kyrgyzstan, Slovakia, Slovenia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia), bringing total membership to 169, one associate member and one member organization as at 31 December 1993 (see Annex I).

World food situation

In 1993, a sharp drop in global food production combined with a draw-down of stocks brought supplies close to the minimum necessary to safeguard world food security. In general, a large proportion of the developing countries experienced a decline in food security. Global production of staple foods fell almost 4 per cent below 1992 production. It was almost entirely accounted for by reduced maize output in the United States. Developing countries and low-income food-deficit (LIFD) countries increased estimated production by 2 million and 3 million tonnes, respectively. None the less, per caput cereal production in the majority of LIFD countries continued to fall in 1993.

World cereal production was estimated at 1,875 million tonnes, 5 per cent below the previous year. Wheat supplies showed a gain, reaching 709 million tonnes. Coarse grains production dropped some 80 million tonnes, 9 per cent less than in 1992, and rice (paddy) production fell by 8 million tonnes to 520 million tonnes. For roots and tubers, the second most important group of staple foods, production was up by 2 per cent in 1993, reaching 150 million tonnes in grain equivalent. The growth was particularly pronounced in developing countries, especially in LIFD countries, which accounted for over three quarters of world production. Cassava production rose by 7 per cent and the world output of pulses rose by 4 per cent over the previous year. Milk production decreased by 1 per cent to 581 million tonnes.

Activities in 1993Emergency assistance

Estimates of the total volume of food aid in cereals to be made available in 1993/94 stood at 11.4 million tonnes, nearly 23 per cent less than the 15.2 million tonnes provided in 1992/93, reflecting a reduced level of budgetary allocations from all major donors except Australia. Total shipments of food aid to developing countries were estimated at 7.8 million tonnes, well below the levels provided during previous years. In particular, cereal food-aid shipments to LIFD countries fell to 7 million tonnes, nearly one third less than in 1992/93 and substantially less than in previous years. Sub-Saharan Africa continued to be the major recipient of food aid, as much as 60 per cent of which was earmarked to meet emergency needs of refugees, displaced persons and drought-affected households. The successor States of the USSR and Eastern European countries received around 4 million tonnes. Food aid played an important role in establishing food supplies in countries that lacked the necessary resources to import needed cereals. In addition to cereal food aid, donors provided approximately 1.7 million tonnes of aid in non-cereal commodities, mainly vegetable oil, pulses, dairy products, meat and fish.

FAO applied its food security assistance scheme to assist Benin, Bhutan, Viet Nam and 10 Latin American and Caribbean countries in formulating comprehensive food security programmes. Using teams of experts, it aimed at accurate diagnosis of problems, realistic formulation of solutions and capacity-building at the national level.

In January, FAO appealed to the international community to increase food aid to those countries in Africa torn by civil strife and faced with the results of prolonged drought. A special report on Africa issued by FAO's Global Information and Early Warning System listed 20 countries as facing exceptional food emergencies: Angola, Botswana, Ethiopia, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritania, Mozambique, Namibia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sudan, Swaziland, United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

FAO deployed 1.5 million doses of live vaccine to Egypt to help control the outbreak of Rift Valley fever, a highly contagious viral disease causing high rates of abortion and neonatal mortality in animals.

FAO's Emergency Centre for Locust Operations—reactivated following an outbreak of the desert locust in the Red Sea coastal areas in late 1992—acted as a clearing-house for information, analysing locust reports and weather and habitat data derived from ground and satellite sources, and issued early warnings to neighbouring countries as locusts migrated. The Centre channelled aid from the donor community to affected zones in the form of technical assistance, sprayers, pesticides, flying hours, communications equipment, spare parts, and training and operating expenses. More than 3.9 million hectares were treated in affected countries since the beginning of the outbreak.

During the year, FAO's Office of Special Relief Operations provided agricultural inputs to Somalia, at the same time rehabilitating abattoirs and veterinary clinics and distributing income-generating supplies such as chickens and fishing gear. In addition, through 15 emergency relief projects, FAO channelled almost $7 million to Somalia to help farmers and fishermen combat drought, famine and the effects of civil war. By rebuilding agricultural infrastructure in the rural areas, FAO also helped the urban poor, whose numbers increased because of people fleeing rural areas (see PART THREE, Chapter III).

Field programmes

FAO provided technical advice and support through its field programme in all areas of food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. In 1993, 1,951 field projects were under way at an expenditure of $309 million. They were funded through trust funds provided by donor countries and other international funding sources ($163.8 million), the United Nations Development Programme ($110.3 million) and the technical cooperation programme from FAO's regular budget ($34.9 million).

During the year, international financing institutions approved some $1,469 million in funding for 32 agricultural and rural development projects, prepared with the assistance of FAO's Investment Centre. Total investments in those projects, including contributions from recipient Governments, amounted to $2,476 million.

Rural development

In the context of the United Nations Year of Indigenous People (1993), FAO conducted case-studies on indigenous groups in Bolivia, India and Mexico, focusing on the particular needs and constraints to development of rural native communities. They assessed issues such as access to land and employment, common resources management and the role of women in the communities.

FAO conducted projects aimed at reassessing and reorienting its development efforts in African countries. One of the projects, centred in drought-prone southern Africa, would develop indicators for measuring poverty and establish a database for continuous poverty monitoring.

FAO examined methods in land management applied by Sahelian communities and by local administrations, among them awareness-building, diagnosis, programming and establishment of committees. In 15 case-studies, the need to incorporate long-term considerations for protection and replenishment of the environment was stressed.

Crops

In 1993, FAO's Fertilizer Programme was renamed the Plant Nutrition Programme to reflect important changes in FAO's approach to plant nutrition. The Programme promoted activities for nutrient management based on a comprehensive vision of the cropping cycle.

During the year, FAO continued to promote integrated pest management (IPM), a system to reduce reliance on pesticides by encouraging farmers to use biological control methods and natural predators, such as spiders and wasps, to avert pests. On a study tour organized by FAO in August, plant protection specialists from 22 countries visited Bangladesh, Indonesia, the Philippines and Viet Nam to see IPM practices that had helped over half a million rice growers minimize pesticide use and raise profits.

As part of a global programme to implement the 1985 International Code of Conduct on the Distribution and Use of Pesticides,^c 13 Caribbean countries were assisted in establishing national pesticide regulation and control schemes. In South America, five countries (Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay) were assisted in setting up intercountry standards and requirements to harmonize regulatory procedures for registering and controlling pesticides.

Efforts continued to promote hybrid rice technology in Asia. From 1991 to 1993, FAO assisted Viet Nam to expand its original 100 hectares of experimental hybrid rice production to almost 1,000 hectares. By 1993, producers in the northern provinces were planting close to 40,000 hectares of the rice, accounting for a 17.5 per cent increase in output.

FAO began preparing the first global report on the state of the world's plant genetic resources and a concrete plan of action for approval and adoption at a major conference, to be held in 1996.

Livestock

In 1993, FAO supported a wide range of livestock-related activities, from feeding systems and meat and dairy production to animal health and the conservation and management of animal genetic resources.

FAO and the United Nations Environment Programme published the World Watch List for Domestic Animal Diversity, the first attempt to document the state of global livestock and genetic diversity.

FAO joined with animal welfare organizations to initiate joint activities in Africa and Asia to promote humane treatment of slaughter animals while heightening the quality of meat products. In Malawi, FAO introduced captive bolt pistols (stun guns) that would protect animals from unnecessary suffering at the time of slaughter.

FAO coordinated an inter-agency study to expand the information base on interactions between livestock production systems and the environment. Issues to be dealt with were methane emissions from stomach fermentation in ruminants, improvement in feed, animal manure management, animal waste disposal, domestic animal genetic diversity, wildlife diversity, and the integration of cropping and livestock systems.

Fisheries

In 1993, the FAO Conference adopted the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas, the first step towards developing an international code of conduct for responsible fishing, being formulated FAO. Reports on the status of high-seas marine resources and of migrating and straddling fish stocks crossing the boundaries between exclusive economic zones and the high seas were presented to the United Nations Conference on Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (see PART THREE, Chapter VIII).

In November, the FAO Council established an Indian Ocean Tuna Fish Commission. The Commission would join a network of other regional fishery bodies to foster international cooperation, covering almost 50 per cent of the total area of the world's oceans and inland waters.

At the East-West Fisheries Conference (St. Petersburg, Russian Federation, May), 300 participants, including 120 from East and Central Europe and the Russian Federation, discussed cooperation in developing trade links and joint ventures, utilization of pelagic species, quality assurance and privatization of the fisheries sectors.

Forestry

Under the FAO Tropical Forest Action Programme, involving 90 partners, a Mediterranean Forestry Action Programme was finalized.

FAO joined with several international partners to establish a programme to improve neem seed viability and genetic variability outside the species' natural range. Neem foliage and seeds held valuable insecticidal and medicinal properties and protected crops from wind erosion in arid areas.

The Forests, Trees and People Programme of FAO continued to improve the livelihoods of rural people of developing countries through sustainable management of forest resources. As a result of a workshop on dispute resolution in forest management (Costa Rica, September), Bolivia, Ecuador, Mali and Thailand began to institutionalize training programmes for environmental dispute resolution.

Nuclear techniques

During the year, FAO and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) jointly conducted research on a variety of topics in plant improvement, crop varieties and atmospheric nitrogen fixation.

Using the mutation breeding technique, which induced inheritable changes in the genetic background of a plant and then selected offspring with the desirable characteristics, scientists raised the yields of sesame and improved oil quality. To date, 19 mutant varieties had been officially released. In addition, 30 promising sesame mutant lines were obtained in Bangladesh, Egypt, Pakistan and Sri Lanka.

^cYUN 1985, p. 1287.

A research programme in Africa used neutron moisture meters to measure water use by crops and crop varieties and identified some varieties of cereals that were more efficient in water use than others. Another research programme used a gene-marker technique to track down soil micro-organisms that could help leguminous species fix atmospheric nitrogen and produce higher yields.

FAO and IAEA established a laboratory within IAEA at Seibersdorf, Austria, to promote nuclear-based methods and related molecular techniques to diagnose livestock diseases. Priority was given to the diseases of greatest importance, such as rinderpest, trypanosomiasis and foot-and-mouth disease.

Information

FAO produced Agriculture: Towards 2010, a revised and updated version of a study originally published in 1979 and last updated in 1987. Designed to address how the future might unfold, it analysed trends in food security, nutrition and agricultural development and projected the most likely outcomes by the year 2010.

In 1993, FAO produced 251 publications, nine periodicals and seven yearbooks, many of them published in Arabic, Chinese, English, French and Spanish. FAO distributed supplemental diskettes with important publications, which contained statistical information and programmes that allowed the user to read, display and manipulate the data provided.

Advances were made in the development of the World Agricultural Information Centre (Rome) to provide its users easy and economical access to information from over 40 FAO databases. In addition, a pilot phase of the AQUASTAT database on water use in rural development and the Scheme Irrigation Management Information System software were completed.

* Refers to the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. In 1992, the FAO Council decided that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) should not participate in the work of the Council or its subsidiary bodies.

Nutrition

In 1993, FAO's activities in nutrition focused on food security at the household level versus overall food availability. An aggregate household food-security index was being developed to serve as a tool for monitoring food security trends worldwide.

FAO produced nutrition profiles for 100 developing countries to provide a concise view of food and nutrition status, agricultural production and economic and demographic data, and assisted over 40 countries in preparing their national plans of action for nutrition.

In Viet Nam, a project to increase knowledge of nutrition within households, in particular among women and mothers, resulted in a significant reduction in children's undernutrition and an increase in production of food from home gardens. The project emphasized vitamin-A deficiency.

Secretariat

At the end of 1993, the number of staff employed at FAO headquarters was 3,262, of whom 1,224 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,975 in the General Service category. Field project personnel and those in regional and country offices numbered 2,687: 839 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,637 in the General Service category. Of the 274 Associate Professional Officers working with FAO, 63 were at headquarters and 211 were in the field or in regional or country offices.

Budget

The FAO Conference in 1993 approved a working budget for the 1994-1995 biennium of $673.1 million. The largest sum of $319 million was appropriated to technical and economic programmes, followed by $101 million to development support programmes.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

During 1993, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued to promote cooperation among nations through its education, science and technology, social and human sciences, culture and communication, information and informatics activities.

The twenty-seventh session of the General Conference of UNESCO, held in Paris from 25 October to 16 November, approved a budget of $455,490,000 for the 1994-1995 biennium and reconfirmed the agency's priority activities. It re-elected Federico Mayor as UNESCO Director-General for a second six-year term.

In 1993, UNESCO's membership increased to 181 with the admission of Andorra, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Niue, Slovakia, the Solomon Islands, Tajikistan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan (see Annex I).

Education

UNESCO's major education activities focused on basic education for all (EFA), the renewal of educational systems and educational advancement and policy.

As a follow-up to the World Conference on Education for All held in Jomtien, Thailand, in 1990, UNESCO assisted member States to diagnose basic learning needs, set national EFA goals and devise effective strategies to achieve those goals. Also as follow-up to the Jomtien Conference, the second meeting of the International Consultative Forum on Education for All was held at New Delhi, India (8-10 September). In 1993, the first Jomtien progress report on EFA status and trends was released and an EFA videobank containing innovative projects was created. The Education-for-All Summit of Nine High-Population Countries (New Delhi, 13-16 December), sponsored by UNESCO, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), adopted a declaration and a plan of action in which Governments pledged to universalize primary education and reduce illiteracy. A new training programme for national professionals in evaluating and following up non-formal basic education was started with the support of the German Development Foundation and the UNESCO Institute for Education (Hamburg, Germany). The Scheme of Humanitarian Assistance for Refugee Education (SHARE) was launched to train refugee teachers, construct buildings and provide educational materials for refugees. The Pan-African Conference on the Education of Girls (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, 28 March-1 April), organized jointly with UNICEF, discussed attracting and retaining girls in the education system and set up counselling programmes in 14 African countries.

Under the renewal of educational systems, the newly established International Commission on Education for the Twenty-First Century held two sessions (Paris, 2-4 March; Dakar, Senegal, 18-21 September). In 1993, UNESCO launched Project 2000+ on Science Education for All and in July, the International Forum on Science and Technology Literacy for All adopted a declaration endorsing further development of that project. Activities under the International Project on Technical and Vocational Education (UNEVOC), launched during the year, included an international consultation on the role of technical and vocational education in education systems (Turin, Italy, 14-18 June) and an international workshop on curriculum development in technical and vocational education (Turin, 30 August-2 September). UNESCO published jointly with the World Health Organization, a guide to plan, implement and evaluate school-based acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) education and UNESCO produced an advocacy film for school-based AIDS education. Under an initiative launched in 1991 to foster inter-university cooperation (UNITWIN), 45 UNESCO Chairs had been set up in 25 countries by the end of the year. In addition, 27 university networks were established and 75 projects from 53 countries were processed.

In 1993, UNESCO continued to promote the advancement of education through participation in emergency assistance programmes and reconstruction operations pertaining to education in Albania, Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Cambodia, Croatia, Iraq, Slovenia and Somalia, and initiated activities for rebuilding Palestinian educational and cultural institutions, including an international symposium (Granada, Spain, 9 and 10 December), a workshop on developing a Palestinian secondary school curriculum (East Jerusalem, 27-31 November) and the granting of 57 international fellowships. The sixth regional conference of Ministers of Education of the Asia and the Pacific region (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 21-24 June) adopted recommendations and a declaration focusing on education for all, education for women and girls, the quality and relevance of education and international and regional cooperation. The UNESCO Institute for Educational Planning (Paris) continued to implement its annual training programme and its training-of-trainers programme and introduced new intensive training courses. UNESCO continued to disseminate information on education through periodicals and publications such as the World Education Report. Among other activities were a regional technical meeting on training strategies of primary head-teachers (Paris, 29-31 March), a meeting of experts on the education of information specialists in the Arab region (Rabat, Morocco, 10-13 May) and a technical consultation on a comparative study of private secondary education (Quezon City, Philippines, 5-7 July).

Natural sciences

Activities under the programme on science for progress and the environment focused on science and technology for development, the environment and natural resources management and science, technology and society.

Advanced postgraduate training in research was provided to mathematicians, physicists, chemists and specialists in cell and molecular biology, neurobiology, virology and related sciences, and researchers were awarded fellowships and research grants. UNESCO extended emergency assistance to the Russian Academy of Science to implement a project to limit the brain drain from the country. The third International Congress of Engineering Deans and Industry Leaders took place (Paris, 23-26 June) as did an international meeting on scientific cooperation in physics (Paris, 24 and 25 June). Activities in energy research included a high-level expert meeting of the World Solar Summit Process (Paris, 5-9 July); a summer school session on solar electricity for rural and remote areas (Paris, 5-30 July); a symposium on strategic issues for the reform of energy systems in Central and Eastern Europe and a round table on organization and regulation of electricity systems (Paris, 22-26 November); and an international symposium on energy and society (Paris, 13-17 December). One regional and three national seminars were held on industrial and hazardous wastes and treatment technology in South-East Asia, and the first World Science Report was prepared for publication.

UNESCO's Programme on Man and the Biosphere (MAB), the International Hydrological Programme (IHP) and the Intergovernmental

Oceanographic Commission (IOC) adopted new strategies and action plans as a follow-up to the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED).^a

The MAB Programme was adjusted to focus on the implementation of Agenda 21, an action programme adopted by UNCED, and the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity.^b It continued to monitor the international network of 324 biosphere reserves in 83 member States and provided assistance in carrying out national assessments and action plans for upgrading and developing biosphere reserves, and consolidation and reinforcement of the landscape dimension in biosphere reserves.

Among activities of IHP were an international symposium on limnology, climatology and palaeoclimatology of the East African lakes (Jinja, Uganda, February); the International Conference on Hydrology (Paris, 22-27 March), co-sponsored by the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) and the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU); and the inception of the Latin American and Caribbean Hydrological Cycle, Water Resources Activities and Observation/Information System.

In cooperation with WMO and ICSU, IOC co-sponsored the World Climate Research Programme and promoted programmes on coastal marine research and on training and education in marine sciences. IOC provided information on events in the oceans and seas adjacent to coastal and island States through its quarterly Products Bulletin of the Integrated Global Ocean Services System, and continued to improve the efficiency of the International Tsunami Warning System in the Pacific Ocean. A symposium on bridging the gap between science and decision-making in global climate change mitigation (Venice, Italy, 6 and 7 May) took place, as did a meeting of experts on oceanography, ecology and environmental aspects of the Persian Gulf and the Sea of Oman (Tehran, Iran, 29 November-3 December). Other activities dealt with studies of coastal marine productivity, mangrove management in Africa and environmental studies and training in the Baltic Sea.

Activities under the International Geological Correlation Programme aimed at improving the use and collection of geological information and strengthening seismological networks and volcano observatories as well as training and research centres. The Programme conducted studies on the integration of environmental and development aspects in disaster reduction and on the establishment of a regional disaster monitoring system. It developed training modules on reducing earthquake and flood disasters, provided training to scientists and undertook post-earthquake reconnaissance missions as well as missions of the International Mobile Early-Warning System for Volcanic Eruptions.

The Global Terrestrial Observing System carried out research in agro-silvo-pastoral development, rural land use dynamics, land-inland water ecotones, tropical soil biology and fertility, and forest-atmosphere interactions, and provided training in ecology and natural resources management. UNESCO also continued its activities relating to arid zones and the problems of desertification, particularly under a regional project for the Sahel countries of Africa, and organized a training course in radio-ecology, attended by participants from Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine.

UNESCO's project on the environment and population education and information for human development aimed at developing an integrated approach to achieve people-centred, equitable and sustainable development. Activities to promote environmental education included disseminating information, developing national strategies and action plans, training educators and preparing environmental education curriculum prototypes for primary and secondary schools and teacher education.

In cooperation with UNFPA, UNESCO organized the International Congress on Population Education and Development (Istanbul, Turkey, 14-17 April), which adopted the Istanbul Declaration and an action framework for population education on the eve of the twenty-first century, which was endorsed by the UNESCO General Conference later in the year.

Social and human sciences

In 1993, UNESCO continued to promote the international development of the social and human sciences and to study their contribution to social change.

Among activities concerning women as agents of social change were a meeting on the legal and social rights of women in the Balkan countries (Ankara, Turkey, 8-12 June) and a meeting on the impact of socio-economic changes on women in the period of transition to market-oriented economies (Sofia, Bulgaria, 14-18 June). Studies were undertaken on the participation of women in the democratic process in Africa and on the economic, political, social and cultural obstacles to women's rights in Africa. Activities related to youth continued to be promoted through the International Youth Clearing House and Information Service (INFOYOUTH). A workshop was held to develop a literacy training programme for peri-urban South African youth (Gaborone, Botswana, 20-24 March). In addition, UNESCO published volumes in anthropology, economics, political science and sociology of The International Bibliography of the Social Sciences, and a book entitled Women in developing economies: Making Visible the Invisible.

Under activities related to the promotion of peace, human rights and the elimination of all forms of discrimination, the International Congress on Education for Human Rights and Democracy (Montreal, Canada, 8-11 March) adopted a plan of action, which constituted UNESCO's contribution to the World Conference on Human Rights (see PART THREE, Chapter X). UNESCO chairs for human rights education were established at the Comenius University (Bratislava, Slovakia) and the Nicolas Copernicus University (Torun, Poland), studies were undertaken on the cultural rights of minorities in Africa, Asia and Europe, and an international network was set up to identify new international standards for combating sexual exploitation, particularly prostitution of women. UNESCO launched a programme to promote a culture of peace in El Salvador and was developing similar programmes for Guatemala and Mozambique.

In response to a 1991 UNESCO General Conference proposal, welcomed by the United Nations General Assembly in 1992,^c the UNESCO secretariat submitted to the 1993 General Conference a study and a plan of action with a view to proclaiming 1995 the United Nations year for tolerance. A meeting of experts (Istanbul, 16 and 17 April) prepared a draft Declaration on Tolerance and forwarded it to the General Assembly for adoption (see PART THREE, Chapter XII).

The 1993 Felix Houphouët-Boigny Peace Prize was awarded jointly to Yasser Arafat, Chairman of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, Yitzhak Rabin, Prime Minister of Israel and Shimon Peres, Foreign Minister of Israel.

Culture

Cultural activities in 1993 emphasized the promotion of international cultural cooperation and culture for development, and the preservation and enrichment of the cultural heritage and cultural identities. Those activities took place in the context of the World Decade for Cultural Development (1988-1997), proclaimed by the General Assembly in 1986.^d By the end of 1993, 839 projects were being undertaken under the Decade around the world, of which 197 were receiving financial assistance from UNESCO (see PART THREE, Chapter XII). Several projects for sustained development in the Maya region began under the Maya World programme, a data bank for the production of audio-visual aids was created under the Baroque World programme, and a study of the cultural needs of the Palestinian people was carried out under UNESCO's Arabia Plan. UNESCO also continued an integral study of the Silk Roads in Central Asia and launched, in cooperation with the World Tourism Organization, a programme for cultural tourism on the Silk Roads.

The World Commission on Culture and Development, established in 1992, received pledges of some $2 million and decided on its initial lines of inquiry.

The seventeenth session of the World Heritage Committee (Cartagena, Colombia, 4-11 December) placed 35 additional sites on the World Heritage list, bringing the total to 411. The Committee also revised the criteria for the list to include cultural landscapes and geological sites and adopted strategic orientations and recommendations for the implementation of the 1972 Convention for the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage. During the year, activities were carried out to safeguard the cultural heritage of the Old City of Jerusalem, Hue City in Viet Nam and the Angkor monuments in Cambodia. The Intergovernmental Conference for the Safeguarding and Development of the Historic Area of Angkor (Tokyo, Japan, 12 and 13 October) was held; an international meeting of experts (Paris, 16 and 17 June) considered new directions for the Programme to Safeguard the Intangible Cultural Heritage; and an international congress was convened (Paris, 29 June-1 July) to discuss issues related to the conservation of stone and other materials. In addition, two meetings were organized in cooperation with the Government of Mexico to consider issues related to education, work and cultural pluralism (Oaxaca, May) and to the rights of indigenous populations (Campeche, June).

Communication

UNESCO's communication programme continued to encourage the free flow of information, support communication for development and promote new communication technologies (see also PART ONE, Chapter V).

UNESCO provided financial assistance to the International Freedom of Expression Exchange

Network, a collaborative effort of 40 media organizations from 20 countries, and supported a round table on the rights of journalists and media organizations (Ljubljana, Slovenia, 3-6 February). In October, the Intergovernmental Council of the International Programme for the Development of Communication (IPDC) approved 59 communication projects. A project on communication for basic education in the least developed countries was launched in Benin, Burkina Faso, Guinea, Mali and the Niger. Media technology seminars were held and technical support services were granted.

New projects approved in 1993 under the Intergovernmental Informatics Programme (IIP) brought the number of projects funded in the 1992-1993 biennium to 38, for a total of $3.4 million. Through its 111 national focal points, IIP continued to develop the INFORMAFRICA programme, which was introducing informatics into education systems in Africa; strengthen regional informatics networks in Africa, the Arab States, the Baltic States and Eastern Europe; and harmonize and coordinate activities between the two regional informatics networks in Asia and the Pacific.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, UNESCO had a full-time staff of 2,401, comprising 941 in the Professional and higher categories, drawn from 143 nationalities, and 1,460 in the General Service category.

Budget

The General Conference of UNESCO, at its 1991 session, approved a budget of $444,704,000 for the 1992-1993 biennium, which was subsequently increased to $446,736,565. The level of the Working Capital Fund was fixed at $17,200,000 and the total assessment placed on member States (after deducting miscellaneous income) was $432,216,000.

NOTE: For further information on UNESCO's activities in 1993, see Report of the Director-General 1992-1993, published by UNESCO.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

The World Health Assembly, the governing body of the World Health Organization (WHO), at its forty-sixth annual session (Geneva, 3-14 May 1993), approved an effective working budget of $822.1 million for the 1994-1995 biennium. In doing so, the Assembly endorsed five priority areas for the Organization's work: health in a changing environment; proper food and nutrition for a healthy life; integrated disease control as part of overall health care and human development; dissemination of information for advocacy and for educational, managerial and scientific purposes; and intensified health development action in support of countries most in need.

The Assembly adopted a resolution calling for a study on the feasibility of establishing, with other involved United Nations bodies, a joint co-sponsored United Nations programme on the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS). In other action, the Assembly confirmed WHO's commitment to the eradication of poliomyelitis and urged member States to strengthen their programmes against tuberculosis. It requested the Director-General to reinforce WHO leadership in pursuing efforts to improve and strengthen national capacity for malaria control.

Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima was reappointed WHO Director-General for a second five-year term beginning July 1993.

During 1993, the membership of WHO increased to 187, with the admission of the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Estonia, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Tuvalu; Puerto Rico and Tokelau were associate members (see Annex I).

Health system infrastructureHealth systems development and research

An interregional consultation on programming of technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC) in health (Jakarta, Indonesia, February) considered strategies for promotion and advocacy, recommended establishing national focal points for TCDC in health and considered monitoring, evaluation and financing of activities.

In the area of health systems research, WHO promoted research in 15 medical schools in different regions. A global working group (Lilongwe, Malawi, November) set long-term priorities to strengthen research institutions and consolidate knowledge in areas of concern to many countries. Innovative approaches for further institutionalizing health systems research were developed through regional task forces and meetings (Copenhagen, Denmark, October; Yangon, Myanmar, October).

The priority WHO initiative for intensified cooperation with peoples in greatest need was being implemented in 25 countries at the end of 1993. A major thrust of the initiative was to coordinate national resources and programmes while mobilizing international support to meet health and development needs.

The cornerstone of WHO's work in global information transfer was the quarterly International Digest of Health Legislation. A December meeting (Cairo, Egypt) provided an opportunity to exchange information and experience on and promote the concept of health legislation as a tool for strengthening health policies and strategies.

Primary health care systems

In 1993, a WHO study group reviewed recent changes in the methods used in different countries to finance health services. A network was established to provide expert advice on the financing and economics of health services in central and eastern Europe. An intercountry consultation of ministers of health (Windhoek, Namibia, October) reviewed experience with user fees and insurance systems, and an international master's degree programme in health economics, co-sponsored by WHO and the World Bank, began at Chulalongkorn University (Bangkok, Thailand, June). Infrastructure development was the subject of the technical discussions during the 1993 World Health Assembly.

An intercountry workshop on primary health care development (Cairo, April) devised approaches for strengthening local and district planning. A regional meeting (Harare, Zimbabwe, November-December) discussed approaches to urban health development. Policies to improve the health of the urban poor were discussed at an interregional meeting (Manila, Philippines, August).

Public information and education for health

In addition to arranging regular briefings, press conferences and interviews, and producing press releases, features and fact sheets, WHO produced press kits and documentation for special days and observances, such as World Health Day (7 April), which had as its theme "Handle life with care: prevent violence and negligence"; World No-Tobacco Day (31 May) on the theme of "Health services: our window to a tobacco-free world"; World Diabetes Day (14 November); and World AIDS Day (1 December) on the theme "AIDS: time to act".

WHO and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) organized meetings on supportive environments for health (Nairobi, Kenya, June; Bangkok, November) for countries in Africa, South-East Asia and the Western Pacific. A November meeting (San Jose, Costa Rica) issued guidelines for comprehensive approaches to school health education in the Americas. An international AIDS conference (Berlin, June) organized a working group on strengthening the role of schools in preventing HIV infection.

Health science and technology

Health protection and promotion

World Health Day (7 April) on the theme of accident and injury prevention, drew particular attention to violence against girls and women, including physical and mental abuse and hidden violence of discrimination or denial of food, medical care, education and a safe environment. The World Health Assembly highlighted the importance of eliminating female genital mutilation and other social and behavioural obstacles affecting the health of women and children. A preparatory meeting (Copenhagen, March) on investing in women's health drew up a plan for a European women's health forum. A regional commission for Arab women was being established and the WHO Regional Committee for the Eastern Mediterranean held technical discussions on the role of women in support of health for all.

In May, the Director-General established a new division responsible for all WHO activities relating to food aid, food safety and nutrition. An Asian conference on street food (Beijing, China, October), convened by WHO and the International Life Sciences Institute (Washington, DC.), considered the risk of transmission of cholera and other food-borne diseases by street-vended foods.

WHO provided technical support in translating the International Code of Marketing of Breast-milk Substitutes into appropriate national measures in Guatemala, Iraq, Morocco, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Republic of Tanzania and Viet Nam. Ninety developing and 14 industrialized countries joined the WHO/United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) Baby-friendly Hospital Initiative, whereby hospital procedures were adapted, and staff trained, to encourage breast-feeding of newborn infants.

In November, a WHO expert committee discussed reference data and guidelines for accurately assessing body mass and growth as indicators of physical welfare. WHO and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) joined in organizing a consultation (Rome, Italy, October) on the role of fats and oils in human nutrition, particularly in relation to chronic non-communicable diseases.

World Health Day, which focused on accident and injury prevention, was followed by consultations intended to build up a pool of technical expertise and establish a network of public health experts concerned with the prevention of intentional injury. At the Second World Conference on Injury Control (Atlanta, United States, May), organized by a WHO collaborating centre with the support of others, aimed at strengthening technical cooperation between research institutes, furthering the adoption of common standards of analytical methodology for injury control and arousing interest in the WHO programme for community safety. In December, WHO convened a symposium (Brussels, Belgium) on neurotrauma prevention and management. WHO co-sponsored an all-Africa conference on tobacco control (Harare, November), at which tobacco-producing countries took initial steps to harmonize their control programmes and considered ways to reduce their economic dependence on tobacco. On World No-Tobacco Day (31 May), WHO issued information and recommendations on the role of health services and health personnel in attaining a tobacco-free society.

Health of specific population groups

In December, a WHO expert committee considered maternal and child health and family planning in the 1990s and reviewed trends and technical advances and their applicability to national programmes. WHO worked with FAO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to provide support to national family planning and population programmes through eight regional teams. At an interregional meeting (Bangkok, May), national programme managers, policy makers and representatives of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and United Nations bodies agreed on strategies to increase the choice of contraceptive methods available and ensure a high quality of care in family planning programmes.

WHO and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) launched a project to strengthen the capacity of countries to reduce maternal mortality. In collaboration with the International Confederation of Midwives and UNICEF, WHO convened an international workshop (Vancouver, Canada, May) to examine ways to improve the quality of maternal health care. The Organization launched a regional support project on accelerated action for safe motherhood in the African region and held a workshop (Brazzaville, Congo, February) to brief participants on topics such as the regional family health data bank.

An intercountry consultation (Beirut, Lebanon, June) prepared a social profile of adolescent girls, including factors that could affect their reproductive health, and suggested action to provide special services for that group.

In May, the ILO/WHO Committee on the Health of Seafarers reviewed the occupational health problems of seafarers and made recommendations on injury prevention, prevention of blood-borne and sexually transmitted diseases, education to prevent drug and alcohol abuse, as well as mental diseases and psychosocial disturbances. An international directory of occupational health databases was issued in collaboration with the International Commission on Occupational Health.

Protection and promotion of mental health

In 1993, WHO organized three meetings on neurology and public health (Venice, Italy, May; Limoges, France, October; Berlin, December) to increase awareness of the burden of neurological disorders.

A WHO expert committee issued a report dealing with the prevention of alcohol and drug abuse in the workplace, which recommended combining comprehensive prevention policies and health promotion programmes. A consultation organized jointly with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) (Vienna, June) reviewed the difficult task of small regulatory agencies trying to control unofficial drug distribution systems and outlined guidelines for import control and inspection. As part of efforts to rationalize prescribing psychotropic drugs in the Americas, a seminar was organized (Montevideo, Uruguay, October) to make government officials, prescribers and journalists more aware of the problem of inappropriate drug use.

Environmental health

In May 1993, the World Health Assembly endorsed a new global strategy for health and environment, based on the recommendations of the WHO Commission on Health and Environment. The Assembly asked WHO to carry out studies on potential environmental hazards to human health and to establish alliances with financial and other organizations to ensure that health goals were incorporated into their programmes on environment and development. Education, training and research in environmental health were promoted through the WHO global environmental epidemiology network, whose membership included some 2,000 institutions and individuals in all regions. Training workshops were held in several countries and a textbook on basic epidemiology was published.

During the year, a conference on sustainability of rural and urban water supplies took place (Accra, Ghana, April) and the WHO Regional Committee for Africa endorsed the establishment of a programme to accelerate water-supply and sanitation development.

A workshop on urban health was held (Manila, August); a second meeting for French-speaking African countries in the Healthy Cities project was convened (Tunis, Tunisia, September); a regional workshop on urban health was held (Harare, November); and a global Healthy Cities conference took place (San Francisco, United States, December). Regional workshops on the promotion of health-supportive environments were held (Nairobi, July; Bangkok, November).

Diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative technology

A consultation on the design of a new type of high voltage X-ray machine for use in providing radiotherapy in developing countries was organized jointly with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) (Washington, D.C., December).

An international meeting on the role of the pharmacist drew up recommendations to improve the quality of pharmaceutical services and discussed pharmaceutical care (Tokyo, August-September). WHO participated in a UNIDO consultation on the industrial use of medicinal and aromatic plants in Asia and the Pacific (Vienna, July), which highlighted the need for coherent national policies and effective regulation to control the quality and use of such products. WHO continued to publish the quarterly periodical WHO drug information and the monthly WHO pharmaceuticals newsletter.

During the year, training activities were carried out to promote community-based rehabilitation. WHO, in collaboration with the International Leprosy Association, provided training in the United States for professional staff of leprosy programmes. In November, WHO hosted two meetings with representatives of 32 NGOs supporting rehabilitation programmes in developing countries.

Disease prevention and control

Although the goal of immunizing 80 per cent of the world's children was achieved in 1991, about 6,000 children a day died in 1993 because they were not vaccinated. WHO's Expanded Programme on Immunization reported little progress in extending immunization coverage to hard-to-reach populations. In addition, there was a decline in coverage in the growing number of countries affected by war and severe economic conditions. Computer software was developed to improve the forecasting of needs for vaccines and equipment and global policies on safe injections were updated.

In May, the World Health Assembly stressed the gravity of the malaria situation and urged WHO and its member States to initiate effective and sustainable control programmes. A WHO meeting on malaria control in September considered the managerial and budgetary aspects of the plan of work for 1993-1999 and analysed resource needs from donor countries. Meetings in Brazzaville (March), New Delhi, India (March) and Kunming, China (November) worked out plans for malaria control and evaluation guidelines in Africa, South-East Asia and the Western Pacific, respectively.

In 1993, the WHO expert committee on Schistosomiasis focused on the increasing problem posed by the disease in urban centres of Africa and Brazil and among refugees, especially in Cambodia. The importance of an intersectoral approach to water resource development schemes to control Schistosomiasis and other parasitic diseases was the subject of a WHO publication, Parasitic diseases in water resources development. In its review of the current status of the epidemiology and control of food-borne trematode infections (Manila, October), a WHO study group found that some 40 million people were infected and that a coordinated control strategy was needed.

Dengue and dengue haemorrhagic fever epidemics threatened about 2,000 million people living in 100 countries in Africa, the Americas and Asia and the Pacific. In May, the World Health Assembly called on member States to strengthen prevention and control programmes, concentrating on vector control, expanded diagnostic capabilities, strengthened surveillance and increased community awareness, and asked WHO to focus on research in dengue surveillance, epidemiology, vaccine development and vector control.

From 1985 to the end of 1993, the incidence of leprosy was reduced by 40 per cent, a decrease of estimated cases from 5.5 to 3.1 million. Some 4.3 million patients were cured through multidrug therapy. To attain the objective of eliminating leprosy as a public health problem by the year 2000, a strategy of targeting high-priority countries was adopted. India had 52 per cent of all estimated cases of leprosy and five other countries (Bangladesh, Brazil, Indonesia, Myanmar and Nigeria) had a further 27 per cent. To promote the prevention and management of disabilities due to leprosy, a manual for health workers was published and training modules for managers of leprosy control programmes were revised.

The WHO/UNDP/World Bank special programme for research and training in tropical diseases continued its twofold approach of developing better tools against six groups of tropical diseases (malaria, Schistosomiasis, lymphatic filariasis/onchocerciasis, leprosy, African trypanosomiasis/Chagas disease and leishmaniasis) and promoting research capacity in endemic countries, with special attention to women and tropical diseases. A joint initiative was launched by the ministers of health of Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay to eliminate Chagas disease by the year 2000 by controlling vectors and screening blood products.

Preventing the estimated 3 million annual deaths of children under five years old from diarrhoea remained a high priority objective for WHO. Training activities emphasized case management and better programme management. A manual on diarrhoea for use in medical schools was published and four guides were issued, including one for health workers to be used in counselling mothers. The Organization's global task force on cholera control continued to coordinate WHO support to countries. In addition to publishing guidelines, WHO pursued control efforts in all the countries concerned, particularly in Africa, where there were many more deaths than in South America. There was a resurgence of the disease in the Eastern Mediterranean and in South-East Asia a new strain of cholera emerged.

By the end of the year, 192 acute respiratory infection training units had been established in 28 countries in an effort to reduce the deaths associated with pneumonia of some 4 million children annually. As part of providing direct technical support to countries, WHO organized one workshop for African ethnographers for adaptation of terminology for use at the local level, and another, in planning, evaluation and problem-solving (Cotonou, Benin, November), for African consultants. A meeting of principal investigators was held to analyse the results of a multicentre study on the clinical signs and etiological agents of pneumonia, sepsis and meningitis in infants under three months old (Beijing, November).

Tuberculosis was the world's leading cause of death from a single infectious agent, accounting for over a quarter of avoidable deaths among adults. The epidemic was becoming more difficult to control because of the emergence of multidrug-resistant strains of the bacillus and because of the HIV pandemic. In April, WHO declared tuberculosis a global emergency, warning that the disease would claim 30 million lives in the next decade unless urgent steps were taken to curb its spread. In view of the gravity of the situation, the World Health Assembly, in 1993, urged WHO members to strengthen national programmes by detecting smear-positive cases through microscopic examination, introducing standardized short-course chemotherapy, case registries and evaluation of treatment results, providing reliable antituberculosis drugs and promoting public awareness of prevention. A vigorous publicity campaign was launched to bring the crisis to public attention, an information package for non-scientists was widely disseminated and an issue of World Health magazine was devoted to tuberculosis.

By the end of the year, an estimated 15 million HIV infections and 3 million AIDS cases had occurred since the beginning of the pandemic. In May, the World Health Assembly requested the Director-General to study the feasibility and practicability of establishing a joint and cosponsored United Nations programme on HIV and AIDS, in close consultation with the executive heads of UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Bank. In July, the Economic and Social Council expressed its support for the study. WHO continued to strengthen national AIDS programmes by providing technical assistance through its regional offices and developed a computerized database to facilitate monitoring of country programmes. The theme of World AIDS Day (1 December)—"AIDS: time to act"—highlighted the need for urgent action and served as a call for a global multisectoral approach to the HIV/AIDS threat.

WHO cooperated with a consortium of six NGOs in treating some 2.5 million people for onchocerciasis (river blindness). A consultation on the effects of solar ultraviolet radiation on the eye (September) led to a call for a major international study on the subject. Training of personnel in Africa in blindness prevention continued to be a priority. WHO organized a workshop for African Portuguese-speaking countries (Maputo, Mozambique, October) where it planned strategies for national blindness prevention. An intercountry meeting on national blindness prevention programmes (Cairo, April) called for fuller programme evaluation.

Around the world, about 7 million new cases of cancer occurred annually, about half of them in developing countries. Two-thirds of all cancers were attributable to lifestyle and the environment. To maximize the impact of limited resources in cancer control and palliative care, WHO continued to support prevention through promotion of healthy lifestyles, early detection of breast, mouth and cervical cancer, use of a model list of 22 essential drugs for chemotherapy and training in radiotherapy. A WHO working group (Banff, Canada, September) approved a manual on palliative care for those providing home care. Meetings organized jointly by WHO and the International Association for the Study of Pain (Arezzo, Italy, June; Paris, August) prepared guidelines on cancer pain relief and supportive care for children.

The WHO project for multinational monitoring of trends and determinants of cardiovascular diseases continued in 25 countries and entered the final stage of data collection. The third and final population survey was prepared and a special training workshop was organized (Gargano, Italy, March). An international conference on preventive cardiology (Oslo, Norway, June-July) held workshops on preventing cardiovascular diseases in countries of the Eastern Mediterranean, cardiovascular diseases in developing countries and the establishment of a global database. A WHO study group (October) reviewed global demographic changes in relation to the epidemiology of cardiovascular diseases in the elderly.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the total number of full-time staff employed by WHO was 4,456 on permanent and fixed-term contracts. Of these, 1,589 staff members, drawn from 144 nationalities, were in the Professional and higher categories, and 2,867 were in the General Service category. Of the total number, 54 were in posts financed by UNDP, UNEP, UNDCP and UNFPA.

Budget

The forty-sixth (1993) World Health Assembly approved an effective working budget of $822,101,000 for the 1994-1995 biennium.

Chapter VI

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

During the fiscal year 1993 (1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993), the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) and its affiliate, the International Development Association (IDA), continued to provide economic assistance to developing countries, emphasizing poverty reduction and expanded access to health, education and other social services. Efforts to encourage borrowers to capitalize on the positive links between poverty alleviation and sound environmental policies—while redressing the environmental damage arising from poorly conceived growth strategies—were among the Bank's priorities. The Bank elaborated environmental strategies for several key regions and countries, expanded its research on a broad range of environmental topics, continued to integrate environmental concerns into its country-policy dialogues and undertook a series of internal reviews to improve its capacity to take account of social, cultural, resettlement and rehabilitation issues in project design and implementation.

During fiscal 1993, the Bank committed $27,632 million as follows: $16,945 million for its loans; $6,751 million for IDA credits; and $3,936 million for gross investments made by the Bank's second affiliate, the International Finance Corporation.

As at 31 December 1993, 177 States were members of the World Bank. New members in 1993 were Croatia, the Czech Republic, Micronesia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Tajikistan and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (see Annex I).

Lending operations

In fiscal 1993, the Bank made 122 loans to 45 countries amounting to $16,945 million, a 12 per cent increase over fiscal 1992. This brought its cumulative total of loan commitments to $235,154 million since its inception in 1946.

Agriculture and rural development

The Bank approved lending to 15 countries for 17 agricultural projects in fiscal 1993, totalling $1,918.8 million. China received $425 million, of which $325 million went to improve the grain market and $100 million to help with flood control and land drainage in the Taihu basin. Poland was extended a loan of $300 million to assist the Government's medium-term agriculture sector adjustment programme. A loan of $250 million to Colombia was intended to assist the Government in introducing and sustaining financial and trade policy changes, and a loan of $215 million to Morocco was approved for making large-scale irrigation more efficient, cost-effective and sustainable.

Development finance companies

Four countries received $582 million to assist their development finance companies in fiscal 1993. Indonesia received $307 million to support governmental regulatory and institutional reforms in the financial sector, aimed at helping to lower the risk of financial instability, improve the efficiency of resource allocation and transform the State commercial banks. China was granted $150 million to assist the Tianjin municipal government to restructure its industrial sector by modernizing businesses in the machine-tool, construction-equipment, electronic-components, automotive-parts and electric-motors subsectors. A loan of $75 million to Ecuador was to provide funds for term financing in the private sector, improve the performance of the finance sector and promote trade liberalization. Colombia was extended a loan of $50 million to assist the export development process.

Education

In fiscal 1993, 11 education projects in nine countries were approved for a total of $968 million. Malaysia received loans amounting to $248 million, of which $141 million was to create some 250,000 new student places, expand equitable access to primary and secondary education and increase the quality of pre-service training for the country's higher-level skilled workers and technicians. Brazil was granted $212 million to improve the quality of education for some 3 million children in the first four grades of primary school in four north-eastern states. In Mexico, an $80 million loan supported the expansion of early childhood development services to the country's poorest states. In Algeria, a $40 million Bank project supported the introduction of a pilot system designed to assess learning outcomes and quality in basic and secondary education; it also supported teacher training. A $32 million project in Jamaica aimed at improving the quality, efficiency and equity of lower secondary education, emphasizing schools serving the poorest students.

Energy

Sixteen energy projects—in oil, gas, coal and power—were assisted in 12 countries in fiscal 1993 at a cost of $3,021 million. India received $845 million, of which $400 million helped to finance a five-year investment programme of new coal- and gas-based power stations of the National Thermal Power Corporation, and $350 million to improve the efficiency in power transmission and system operations. A $610 million loan was extended to the Russian Federation to finance the purchase of essential inputs for existing oil-production operations in western Siberia. Of the $400 million granted to China, $300 million was for the construction of its largest pumped-storage hydroelectric plant in Zhejiang province, while $100 million went into the completion of a hydroelectric power facility to meet increased electricity demands in Fujian province. A loan of $300 million to Argentina served to complete the permanent structures of the Yacretá hydroelectric project, install its first six units, connect them to the national grid and implement environmental protection and resettlement measures.

Industry

In fiscal 1993, loans for the industrial sector totalling $685 million were granted to four countries. China received $250 million to control industrial water pollution cost effectively in the Jiangsu region. Peru also received a $250 million loan to support its privatization programme and related sectoral policy, legal and regulatory reforms. A loan of $130 million was granted to Egypt to implement strategies to develop the tourism industry while controlling environmental degradation in tourist areas. Bulgaria secured a loan of $55 million to make available investment and export credits, aimed at encouraging a strong supply response to ongoing governmental reforms.

Non-project

In fiscal 1993, the Bank granted non-project loans totalling $2,980 million to 12 countries. Argentina received $850 million, of which $450 million was a debt and debt-service reduction loan that would finance interest and principal collateral for the par bonds to be issued in exchange for eligible debt and support the implementation of a debt agreement between the country and its commercial-bank creditors. The other loan, of $400 million, to Argentina was a financial-sector adjustment loan to assist in reducing the role of the State in the financial sector, strengthen the banking sector and its supervisory framework and provide resources for the country's debt and debt-service reduction arrangements. A $600 million loan was made to the Russian Federation for foreign exchange to finance imports needed in support of its stabilization and economic reform programme. Poland received $450 million to support its enterprise and bank restructuring and privatization programme. A loan of $300 million was made to India to support measures taken by the Government to liberalize further the external sector and investment regime. Peru was granted $150 million as supplemental funds for the Government's macroeconomic stabilization programme and broad-based structural reforms in the fiscal and social sectors, privatization, agriculture and labour policy.

Population, health and nutrition

In fiscal 1993, Bank lending for population, health and nutrition amounted to $706.8 million for 11 projects. Iran received a $141.4 million loan to expand its primary health-care system in rural areas and its family-planning programme. Venezuela was granted $94 million for a project that sought to control both vector and waterborne endemic diseases (malaria, in particular) in poor rural and peri-urban areas. A loan of $93.5 million was extended to Indonesia for a project to improve infant, child and maternal health. Hungary received $91 million to finance the rehabilitation of selected institutional-care facilities, the introduction of management-information systems in hospitals and training in public-health management. A loan of $90 million went to Chile to support policy and institutional reform and priority health facility investments.

Public sector management

In fiscal 1993, the Bank approved $576 million in loans to support public sector management reforms in five countries. Argentina received $300 million to support the second phase of its public enterprise reform programme. Hungary was granted a loan totalling $132 million to support reforms in its social insurance system. The Russian Federation received a $70 million loan to increase the capacity of its Federal Employment Service to process the anticipated upsurge of benefit claims from the growing numbers of unemployed following economic restructuring and privatization. The Philippines received $63 million to computerize its tax administration system.

Technical assistance

The Bank approved seven loans to six countries for technical assistance in fiscal 1993, totalling $212.3 million. The Russian Federation received $100 million to assist in implementing its privatization programme. Peru was granted $41.8 million, of which $30 million was to assist in preparing and implementing its privatization programme and related sectoral policy, legal and regulatory reforms. A $30 million loan extended to Venezuela supported judicial reforms aimed at improving its enabling environment for private sector development.

Telecommunications

During fiscal 1993, three loans were made by the Bank in telecommunications for a total of $264 million. The Philippines received $134 million to finance the 1992-1996 investment programme of the Philippine Long Distance Company, aimed at extending and improving telephone facilities in provincial areas. In Morocco, a loan of $100 million went to expand the country's telecommunications network and to finance a time slice of the 1992-1994 investment programme of the National Post and Telecommunications Authority.

Transportation

The Bank made 15 loans to 11 countries, totalling $2,584.6 million for transportation projects. China received $930 million, of which $420 million supported the efforts of the Ministry of Railways in preparing the railway system to serve a future market-oriented economy. A $480 million loan was made to Mexico to protect and enhance past investments in the federal highway network. A loan of $340 million was extended to Argentina to finance a four-year time slice of the maintenance programme of the National Highway Directorate and its road construction needs. Indonesia received $197.1 million, of which $155 million was to improve the road network in selected rural areas of eastern Indonesia.

Urban development

The Bank made 10 loans to eight countries in the amount of $1,687.5 million for urban development projects. It approved two loans totalling $420 million to Mexico, of which $220 million went to a government programme to reduce air pollution in Mexico City and $200 million supported a project to improve the quality and efficiency of urban transport systems in medium-sized cities. Morocco received $234 million, of which $130 million was for a project to benefit resettled squatter and low-income households by providing serviced lots at affordable prices. Turkey was extended $285 million to reconstruct essential housing, infrastructure and other facilities damaged by an earthquake in 1992 and to restore economic activity in the affected area. Algeria was granted $200 million to accelerate the completion of a public-housing programme and private unfinished stock through the supply of construction materials and the provision of technical assistance. Brazil received $128.5 million to consolidate financial, institutional and organizational policy changes required to achieve sustainable, integrated multimodal transport in Rio de Janeiro.

Water supply and sanitation

In fiscal 1993, seven loans to six countries totalling $758.5 million were approved for water supply and sanitation. Of the two loans totalling $390 million made to Brazil, $245 million supported the creation of two urban water-basin authorities for the Guarapiranga River near Sao Paulo and for the upper Iguacu River in Curitiba, and $145 million supported a project to restore water quality in the system of rivers and reservoirs in the metropolitan area of Belo Horizonte. Turkey was granted a $129.5 million loan to provide water supply, sewerage, flood protection and solid waste services in Greater Bursa. The Republic of Korea received $110 million to expand waste-water treatment plants in Kwangju and Seoul. A loan of $80 million to Indonesia supported a project that would provide safe, adequate and easily accessible water supply and sanitation services, as well as a programme of health and hygiene education.

Economic Development Institute

In fiscal 1993, the Economic Development Institute (EDI) continued to impart knowledge and experience accumulated in the World Bank and elsewhere, with the strategic objective of strengthening development decision-making in the Bank's member countries. To further its objective, EDI relied on training activities, institution-building programmes and its publications programme. Of the 152 training programmes organized by EDI, 17 of them dealt with agriculture, 31 with development management, 37 with finance and industry, 24 with human resources, 17 with infrastructure and urban development, and 26 with macroeconomics.

EDI carried out 38 training programmes in Africa, 25 in Asia, 43 in Europe and Central Asia, 19 in Latin America and the Caribbean, and 16 in the Middle East and North Africa. Some 40 EDI training activities in the former USSR emphasized the training of instructors in enterprise management and banking and of senior officials involved in restructuring enterprises, privatization and the management of commercial banks. A quarter of EDI's training activities in 1993 took place in sub-Saharan Africa. To help in South Africa's transition from apartheid to democracy, EDI was engaged in a training programme to prepare those who would be entering government service to perform better their responsibilities. EDI collaborated with Viet Nam to carry out a United Nations Development Programme project that supported the country's efforts to move from a command-driven economy to a market-oriented one. In the Middle East and North Africa, 16 training and institutional assistance activities were completed, covering public sector management, environmental assessments, higher education and water resources management.

EDI was involved in three institution-building programmes in Latin America aimed at strengthening the abilities of local institutions to improve living conditions in low-income settlements. It also helped organize national and regional workshops in cooperation with Governments and non-governmental organizations to improve development programmes. In October 1992, the Joint Vienna Institute began to provide training to officials from Central and Eastern Europe and the republics of the former USSR.

EDI prepared and published training materials on policy analysis and reform. Sixty-five new titles were published in fiscal 1993 and a total of 20,000 items were sent out in response to 4,000 requests. Although EDI's highest priority remained its training programmes in Africa, it placed increasingly more emphasis on its activities in Central and Eastern Europe and the former USSR. The shift was reflected in the publication of over a dozen titles in Russian.

Co-financing

The volume of co-financing anticipated in support of Bank-assisted operations in fiscal 1993 was $11,230 million. About 48 per cent of all Bank-assisted projects and programmes were co-financed. The largest source of co-financing continued to be official bilateral and multilateral development institutions, which together accounted for $7,759 million or 69 per cent of the total.

Other major co-financing activities in fiscal 1993 included those under the Special Programme of Assistance (SPA) for sub-Saharan Africa. In the second phase of SPA, covering 1991-1993, donors pledged $7 billion of co-financing and coordinated financing for quick-disbursing balance-of-payments assistance in support of adjustment programmes in 27 countries. As at 31 December 1992, SPA donors had allocated some $5.3 billion, or nearly 80 per cent of the pledged amount, and had disbursed some 50 per cent, or more than $2.5 billion, of those allocations in the eligible countries.

Financing activities

During fiscal 1993, the Bank raised $12,700 million through medium- and long-term borrowings in 12 currencies and currency units, including $11,200 million of fixed-rate borrowings and $1,500 million of variable-rate borrowings. Borrowings were made up of $4,187 million in United States dollars, $3,842 million in Japanese yen, $708 million in deutsche mark, $771 million in Swiss francs and $3,168 million in Canadian dollars, European currency units, French francs, Irish pounds, Italian lire, Netherlands guilders, pounds sterling and Spanish pesetas.

After $3,600 million of currency swaps and a notional par volume of $3,800 million of interest-rate swaps, all of the year's borrowings were fixed-rate liabilities denominated in United States dollars, yen, mark, Swiss francs and guilders.

As at 30 June 1993, short-term borrowings outstanding were $3,789 million equivalent, comprising $2,483 million from official sources through the Bank's central bank facility and $1,306 million from market borrowings in United States dollars.

Capitalization

The total subscribed capital of the Bank as at 30 June 1993 was $165,589 million or 90 per cent of authorized capital of $184,048 million. The permissible increase of net disbursements ("headroom") was $78,861 million, or 43 per cent of the Bank's lending limit.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 1993, the staff of the World Bank numbered 6,197, of whom 4,005 were in the Professional or higher categories, drawn from 121 nationalities.

Income, expenditures and reserves

The Bank's gross revenues, generated mainly from loans and investments, totalled $9,451 million in fiscal 1993, a decline of $223 million from fiscal 1992. Net income was $1,130 million, down $515 million from the previous year. Expenses rose by about $253 million to $8,215 million, $679 million of which covered administrative costs that had increased by $67 million over fiscal 1992.

On 30 June 1993, reserves amounted to $12,000 million, and the reserves-to-loan ratio stood at 11.4 per cent, excluding prefunding of interest waivers.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC) is an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank). It was established in 1956 to further economic growth in developing member countries by promoting private-sector investment. During the 1993 fiscal year (1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993), IFC provided direct loans and equity financing in international capital markets as well as an array of advisory services to businesses and Governments on issues related to private investment.

As at 30 June 1993, IFC had a total membership of 155, following the admission of Belarus, the Comoros, Micronesia, Kyrgyzstan, Lithuania, the Marshall Islands and the Russian Federation. Czechoslovakia ceased to be a member and was succeeded by the Czech Republic and Slovakia. Two of the five successor States of the former Yugoslavia—Croatia and Slovenia—also joined IFC (see Annex I).

Financial and advisory services

As many countries accelerated the move to a market economy, demand for IFC's financial and advisory services increased sharply. IFC expanded its presence worldwide, opening several new offices or missions in areas of increased activities, notably in the former Soviet Union and in Latin America. It resumed its activities in Lebanon and stepped up its investment programme in China.

During fiscal 1993, IFC approved $2.1 billion in financing for 185 projects, including its Africa Enterprise Fund (AEF) projects. Helping companies in developing countries achieve a proper balance between debt and equity financing was a key IFC objective. Equity and quasi-equity investments approved during the year came to $519 million, 24 per cent of total approvals. The Corporation also mobilized considerable cofinancing, approving $1.8 billion in financing from other investors and lenders through loan syndications and the underwriting of securities issues. The total costs of the projects approved were estimated to be $17 billion. Thus, for every $1 of financing approved by IFC for its own account, other investors and lenders would provide $7.

The environment was an urgent priority for IFC, which was trying to increase awareness for environmentally sound projects in developing countries. During fiscal 1993, IFC strengthened its environmental review process, expanded its collaboration with other institutions on environmental issues, and intensified its efforts to channel private-sector resources into the environmental goods and services sector in developing countries.

During project appraisal, IFC reviewed the environmental analysis done by the project sponsor to ensure that the project was environmentally sound and sustainable and that it complied with the World Bank's environmental policies and guidelines, as well as with the requirements of the host country.

IFC actively encouraged investments in environmental projects in such areas as water supply and wastewater treatment, solid and hazardous waste management, manufacture of clean production technology and pollution-control equipment, recycling and ecotourism.

At the beginning of fiscal 1993, IFC was reorganized, which increased its responsiveness, enabling it to develop regional strategies more closely attuned to the specific needs of different regions and to deepen its in-house expertise in several critical sectors—infrastructure, chemicals and petrochemicals, agribusiness, oil and gas, and mining. Continued strong growth was projected in IFC's operations for the remainder of the 1990s. IFC's Board of Directors approved a three-year plan for fiscal years 1994-1996 that envisaged annual growth in nominal terms of around 13 per cent.

Regional projects

In fiscal 1993, IFC extended its operations to a broader range of member countries, reflecting the impact of changes in the investment environment in a number of countries as the emphasis on market-driven economic development accelerated. Investments were approved in 54 countries, compared with 51 countries in fiscal 1992, contributing to the Corporation's long-term objective of achieving a regionally balanced and diversified portfolio. The amount of financing approved for IFC's own account increased for most regions, with the biggest percentage increase in Europe.

Loans and investments totalling $473 million were approved for 54 projects in countries with per capita incomes of $400 or less. Approvals in the poorest countries accounted for 29 per cent of the projects and 22 per cent of the financing approved for IFC's own account.

Sub-Saharan Africa

IFC approved 45 projects in 18 countries in sub-Saharan Africa during fiscal 1993, including AEF projects. As at 30 June 1993, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 166 companies in 32 countries.

In dollar terms, natural resource-based projects dominated IFC's approvals. A $108 million loan was approved, of which up to $68 million would be syndicated, for a $334 million gas project in Nigeria. IFC also approved $11.4 million in equity investment for an oil- and gas-development project in Côte d'Ivoire and a $10 million loan for the expansion of a bauxite mining project in Sierra Leone. A loan of $10 million was also approved for Zimbabwe to support the expansion of a coal mine.

Several agribusiness projects were approved during fiscal 1993, including loans totalling $21 million for the rehabilitation of two sugar plantations in Zimbabwe that had been affected by drought. IFC also approved a loan of $2 million for the creation of a shrimp farm in Madagascar.

In the tourism sector, IFC approved four hotel projects in Guinea, Nigeria, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe, and in manufacturing, loans and equity of $4.8 million were approved for the expansion of a soap and edible-oil producer in Côte d'Ivoire.

In the financial sector, besides approving debt and equity financing for several merchant and investment banks and leasing and insurance companies, IFC helped to establish three investment funds: the Mauritius Fund Limited, the first closed-end fund to invest in Mauritius ($5 million in equity); the Emerging Markets Gold Fund, a global fund that would invest in gold-mining companies in a number of developing countries, including Ghana; and the Africa Fund, which would invest in stock markets in North Africa and sub-Saharan Africa ($7.5 million in equity).

Through AEF, IFC approved total financing of $11 million—$10 million in loans and $1 million in equity—for 20 projects in 13 countries. The projects approved were in a broad range of industries, including light manufacturing, fishing, agriculture and tourism.

IFC provided technical assistance and advisory services to enterprises of all sizes, including to larger companies in such areas as debt mobilization for large projects, feasibility studies, project appraisals and privatization. It also advised Governments on capital-market development, privatization and foreign direct investment. Over the past seven years, the Corporation's Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS) provided advisory assistance on foreign direct investment to more than two thirds of the countries in sub-Saharan Africa. In fiscal 1993, FIAS began to work in eight countries where it had not worked before and completed policy advisory projects in 10 countries.

Asia

In fiscal 1993, IFC approved 39 projects in nine countries in the Asia region. As at 30 June 1993, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 183 companies in 11 countries.

IFC approved financing totalling $43 million for two cement companies and a commercial bank in China. In the Philippines, it approved $148 million in financing for two powerprojects, playing a crucial role in the construction of a 700-megawatt coal-fired powerplant in Pagbilao by providing debt and equity financing for its own account and bringing United States and Japanese export-import banks into the project, while serving as the sponsor's financial adviser. In Sri Lanka, IFC approved financing for a telecommunications project in the private sector ($1.4 million in equity). In response to Thailand's growing shortages of domestically refined petroleum products, IFC approved a $350 million loan—$75 million for its own account and $275 million to be syndicated with international financial institutions—to help finance a $1.9 billion, 5-million-ton-per-year oil refinery. IFC was also financing the construction of Thailand's first facility to produce purified terephthalic acid to supply producers of polyester chips and fibres. Thailand and other countries in the region were net importers of purified terephthalic acid. IFC approved loans and equity of $24 million, while a future $125 million would come from syndications.

New investment in general manufacturing was dampened by both the world-wide economic slow-down and by infrastructural bottlenecks in some countries, particularly in power. Several manufacturing companies in the region increased their share capital, however, through rights issues to which IFC subscribed as a shareholder. IFC also approved financing for projects in the textiles, paper, automotive and cement industries.

In the tourism and service sectors, IFC approved financing for such ventures as a shipping company in Indonesia ($17 million in loans and equity and $10 million in syndications), two hotels and a hospital in Thailand ($57.9 million in loans and equity and $35 million in syndications) and the construction of a conference centre for a large hotel in Nepal (a $0.8 million loan).

In the financial sector, IFC approved investments in a number of capital-markets projects, including the establishment of a venture-capital fund in the Philippines ($2.5 million in equity) and a joint-venture bank in China ($7.5 million in equity and stand-by). It also approved loan financing for leasing companies in India and Indonesia, while participating in increasing the capital of a number of financial institutions in which it was already a shareholder, to support continued development.

In fiscal 1993, IFC continued to provide wide-ranging technical assistance to both businesses and Governments, structuring and mobilizing, for instance, funds for constructing a hotel in Indonesia and advising Sri Lanka on the financial restructuring of Air Lanka, the national airline. It also undertook a comprehensive review of the Indian stock markets and recommended changes to modernize and internationalize them. In China, IFC began to provide technical assistance to the new securities regulatory commission, focusing on regulations for the country's rapidly expanding stock markets. IFC also prepared a study for Tonga on the feasibility of introducing a second commercial bank.

FIAS provided advice on strengthening the investment environment to six countries in the region: Bangladesh, India, Mongolia, Nepal, Sri Lanka and Viet Nam. Two meetings organized by FIAS attracted several countries to discuss ways to create a more favourable environment for foreign direct investment.

Europe

In fiscal 1993, IFC approved 20 projects in four European countries. As at 30 June, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 105 companies in 11 countries.

IFC approved its first projects in Russia soon after it joined the Corporation. They included a credit line of $15 million to the International Moscow Bank and loans and equity totalling $71.5 million for two oil-development projects. IFC approved its largest investments to date in Central and Eastern Europe. One of them, a $371 million loan to SKODA Automobilova A.S., the Czech Republic's recently privatized producer of motor vehicles, would help to finance a $4.3 billion five-year investment programme to build a new engine plant, introduce new models and increase manufacturing capacity.

Financing through loans, equity and syndications totalling $67.2 million was approved for Poland's first float-glass plant, a joint venture formed by Pilkington (United Kingdom) and Poland's biggest sheet-glass manufacturer. Another large project in Poland, for which loans and equity totalling $46.2 million were approved, in-involved the modernization of a newly privatized manufacturer of specialty and alloy steel near Warsaw.

To encourage investment in Central and Eastern Europe, IFC helped to establish several investment funds, including the New Europe East Investment Fund to support foreign investment in and technology transfer to reforming economies of Europe, including the former Soviet Union. The Private Equity Fund—Europe would make venture capital available to local private enterprises.

IFC approved financing for nine projects in Turkey, including four capital-market projects as well as projects in the hotel and manufacturing industries.

Demand for IFC advisory services was great in the European countries in transition. Advice and technical assistance on a wide range of issues was provided to Governments and businesses in more than 10 countries. The most noteworthy advisory assignment involved preparing and implementing, with backing from the United States Agency for International Development and the United Kingdom Know-How Fund, the privatizations of hundreds of large companies and thousands of small enterprises in Russia, as well as scores of small firms in Ukraine. IFC designed privatizations that were being used as models in both countries. In Poland, IFC was helping to implement the restructuring and privatization strategy it had designed for the country's cement and lime industries. In the Czech Republic, it advised Etibank, a state mining and mineral-processing company, on a joint venture to manufacture soda ash. Russia received technical assistance from IFC in setting up securities markets such as stock exchanges, developing the regulatory framework, training staff and selecting equipment. IFC also provided advice on capital-market development in Hungary, Poland, Romania and Slovenia, mostly in connection with establishing and regulating securities markets.

FIAS provided advice on foreign direct investment to a number of Governments in the region.

Latin America and the Caribbean

In fiscal 1993, IFC approved 52 projects in 16 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean. As at 30 June, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 261 companies in 23 countries.

Although economic liberalization in Latin America had gained the attention of foreign investors, they often remained reluctant to invest in the region because of the political instability of many countries. Consequently, IFC continued to play a catalytic role for investments in the region. In fiscal 1993, the Corporation accomplished several of its objectives by helping various companies gain access to international capital markets. For example, IFC, through loans, syndications and underwriting costing $61.8 million, underwrote a bond issue by a Mexican cement producer in the European bond markets, arranged a currency swap of Deutsche mark into United States dollars, and syndicated a loan for the company. It also underwrote, in the amount of $14.4 million, part of the international equity issue by Corporación Financiera del Valle, a Colombian company, and approved a $15 million investment in the Latin American Corporate Bond Fund, the first fund to enable institutional investors to invest in debt issues of private-sector Latin American companies.

To support the development of domestic capital markets, IFC approved $25 million towards the establishment of the Scudder Latin American Trust for Independent Power to provide equity capital for private-sector power projects in the region. Playing a catalytic role, IFC led the management of the fund, made an investment in the fund for its own account, helped to attract institutional portfolio investors, and promoted equity issues in the domestic markets. Similarly, IFC approved equity of $10 million for a new private equity fund and a new investment-management company in Mexico.

IFC gave increasing importance to financing private-sector infrastructure projects in Latin America. It approved financing totalling $167.7 million for two telecommunications projects in Argentina and $27 million for one such project in Mexico, while providing an interest-rate hedging facility of $13.8 million to Chile's largest telecommunications operator. Other infrastructure projects for which IFC approved financing included the modernization of two privatized railroads in Argentina; power projects in Argentina, Belize, Chile and Guatemala; and a private port in Mexico.

IFC approved credit lines for medium-sized companies in Panama and Costa Rica and was also involved in the restructuring, conversion or expansion of a number of industrial companies in Argentina, Brazil, Guatemala, Jamaica and Mexico.

Because of the slow-down in the petrochemicals industry worldwide, many Latin American companies concentrated on consolidating and strengthening existing operations. Mexico's petrochemicals industry continued to expand, however, because of the country's improved investment climate and because downstream petrochemical industries had been opened up to the private sector. IFC approved financing totalling $73 million for modernizing and relocating glycol and ethanol amine plants of Grupo Idesa S.A. de C.V.

A wide range of technical assistance and advisory services was provided in the region by IFC, which advised small- and medium-sized enterprises and assisted Governments with capital-market development. It provided advice on privatization issues as well as on foreign direct investment. FIAS assisted the Governments of Argentina, the Bahamas, El Salvador and Paraguay on foreign direct-investment policies and institutions and was involved in foreign-investment promotion in Bolivia and Venezuela.

Central Asia, the Middle East and North Africa

As part of its reorganization at the beginning of fiscal 1993, IFC's Central Asia, Middle East and North Africa Department assumed responsibility for operations in Pakistan and the new Central Asian republics.

In fiscal 1993, IFC approved 28 projects in seven countries in the region. As at 30 June 1993, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 74 companies in nine countries.

In support of Morocco's privatization efforts, IFC approved a syndicated line of credit of $70 million for a group of leasing companies and an equity investment of $4.3 million in a privatization investment fund. It continued to finance projects in the tourism sector. In Tunisia, IFC approved financing of $65 million in loans and syndications for an oil-development joint venture, sponsored by British Gas, as well as $3.9 million in financing for a producer of sanitary ware.

In Egypt, IFC approved an equity investment of $16.5 million in the first privatized Egyptian bank, which would serve as a model for future privatizations. Investments in a number of sectors in Pakistan were approved, including in the textiles industry ($7.5 million), hotel construction ($15 million), cement production ($38.9 million) and banking ($25 million). IFC also approved financing for Pakistan's first securities depository, for Oman's first leasing company, and for the expansion of a successful pharmaceutical group in Jordan. In Lebanon, IFC approved its first project since 1978: a syndicated line of credit of $45 million to five leading Lebanese banks and a loan for a ceramic floor-tile producer ($6 million).

IFC continued to provide technical assistance and advisory services to businesses and Governments in the region. In Algeria, Egypt, Iran, Kyrgyzstan and Pakistan, it advised Governments on various aspects of capital-market development, in particular providing assistance in developing the legal and structural framework required for securities markets, a leasing industry and the banking sector. In Iran and Jordan, IFC helped negotiate and structure joint ventures to make better use of the countries' natural resources.

FIAS provided advice on foreign direct investment to a number of Governments in the region. It completed projects in Algeria, Jordan, Morocco, Pakistan and the United Arab Emirates and began a study of ways to facilitate linkages between foreign and local firms in Egypt.

Financial operations

IFC's net income for fiscal 1993 was $142 million, representing a return of 5.6 per cent on its net worth. Net income was down from the $180 million posted in fiscal 1992 because of the low interest-rate environment and a decrease in loan-portfolio income. However, the equity portfolio continued to perform strongly. Equity income reached $155 million, up from $149 million in the previous year. Dividends totalled $38 million, compared to $35 million in fiscal 1992, and capital gains, at $117 million, were slightly higher than the previous year.

Capital and retained earnings

At the end of fiscal 1993, IFC's net worth, the total of paid-in capital and retained earnings, came to $2.7 billion, up from $2.4 billion at the end of fiscal 1992.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 1993, IFC's regular staff numbered 831, recruited from 99 countries.

Chapter VIII

International Development Association (IDA)

The International Development Association (IDA), established in 1960 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), provides assistance for the same purposes as the Bank, but primarily to poorer developing countries and on easier terms. Though legally and financially distinct from the Bank, IDA shares the same staff.

The funds used by IDA—called credits to distinguish them from World Bank loans—come mostly as subscriptions in convertible currencies from members, general replenishments from its more industrialized and developed members and transfers from the Bank's net earnings. Credits are made only to Governments, have 10-year grace periods and 35- or 40-year maturities and are interest-free.

During the fiscal year 1993 (1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993), IDA continued to promote economic development, concentrating on countries with annual per capita gross national product of $635 or less (in 1991 dollars). In fiscal 1993, IDA's 123 approved credits in the amount of $6,745.3 million were distributed among 44 countries. In addition, Samoa received $6.1 million as supplementary financing to a previous loan.

The majority of IDA funds for lending were provided by its Part I (industrialized) member countries and several Part II (developing) countries under a series of replenishment agreements. Fiscal year 1993 was the third and the last year of the ninth replenishment of IDA resources (IDA-9), which provided funds to finance commitments to IDA borrowers in fiscal years 1991-1993. During the year, one formal notification to participate in IDA-9 was received from Greece. As at 30 June 1993, at the close of the IDA-9 commitment period, donor contributions totalled 11,121 million special drawing rights (SDRs). IDA's commitment authority for fiscal 1993 amounted to SDR 4,538 million and was derived mainly from the release of the third tranche of donors' contributions to IDA-9. The commitment authority from reflows approved by the Executive Directors for the fiscal 1991-1993 period and other resources amounted to SDR 3,304 million. Therefore, total available IDA resources for the IDA-9 period amounted to SDR 14,425 million. Against those resources, IDA made IDA-9 credit commitments of SDR 13,728 million.

In December 1992, the representatives of donor Governments reached an agreement on a tenth replenishment of IDA resources (IDA-10) of SDR 13 billion to provide funds to cover credit commitments in fiscal years 1994 to 1996.

During 1993, IDA membership rose to 155 with the admission of Armenia, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Georgia, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Tajikistan and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (see Annex I).

Lending operations (credits)

By 30 June 1993, IDA had made cumulative commitments totalling $77,816.4 million. In fiscal 1993, lending commitments amounted to $6,751.4 million, of which $2,770.3 million went to 27 countries in Africa; $1,165 million to four countries in East Asia and the Pacific; $2,271.2 million to five countries in South Asia; $104.4 million to two countries in Europe and Central Asia; $316.7 million to four countries in Latin America and the Caribbean; and $123.8 million to two countries in the Middle East and North Africa. India was the largest borrower with 10 credits totalling $1,532.7 million, followed by China with eight credits totalling $1,017 million.

Agriculture and rural development

In fiscal 1993, IDA approved agriculture and rural development projects in 18 countries, totalling $1,347.9 million. China received $527 million, of which $165 million went to strengthen grain marketing and $147 million to address constraints limiting agricultural productivity in Sichuan province. India received $369.7 million, of which $117 million went to increase rural incomes among tribal people in Bihar State and $106 million to accelerate growth through rural development in Rajasthan State. Pakistan was granted $83 million, of which $54.2 million was to improve productivity on waterlogged lands in Punjab province. Of $70.8 million extended to Malawi, $45.8 million supported agricultural research and extension activities on improved seeds and fertilizers.

Education

During the fiscal year, 19 countries received $1,038.2 million for education projects. India was granted $165 million to improve basic education in Uttar Pradesh and upgrade the quality of schools and access to them. Ghana received $110.1 million, of which $65.1 million was to improve primary schools by constructing classrooms and housing for teachers, lengthening school hours and providing teacher training. A $106 million credit went to Pakistan to improve access, equity and efficiency in Baluchistan's primary-education system, particularly for girls. China received $100 million for civil works, equipment, materials, specialist services and training to support lower-middle-school teacher training. Bolivia was granted $90.7 million, of which $50.7 million supported the delivery of integrated child development services to poor children between six months and six years of age.

Energy

Ten countries received credits totalling $520 million for energy-related projects in fiscal 1993. The United Republic of Tanzania received $200 million to meet the growing demand for electricity through the construction of the Lower Kihansi hydroelectric scheme. Ghana was granted $80 million to finance the country's electricity-investment programme. A $50 million credit was extended to Guinea to cover transitional costs associated with privatization of the national power utility and to improve the regulatory framework of the energy sector.

Industry

IDA granted $401.6 million for 11 industrial projects in nine countries in fiscal 1993. Of $120.9 million extended to Zambia, $100 million supported the country's parastatal-reform and privatization programme, a key component in the country's ongoing structural adjustment programme. A $100 million credit granted to Uganda supported policy and institutional reforms in the financial system. Of $65.8 million extended to Sri Lanka, $60 million supported policy and regulatory reforms in the financial sector. Ghana received $41 million to establish a revolving export-credit refinance and guarantee facility for private exporters.

Non-project credits

In fiscal 1993, 12 countries received credits amounting to $600.8 million to finance non-project areas. Ethiopia received $275 million, of which $250 million supported its structural adjustment programme designed to transform economic management and raise investment, particularly by the private sector. Zimbabwe received $125 million for the second phase of its structural adjustment programme. Bangladesh received $103.5 million, of which $100 million was for a second industrial-sector adjustment credit aimed at extending import liberalization, promoting exports and developing the private sector. A $60 million credit extended to Kyrgyzstan supported reform efforts by providing foreign exchange for imports critical to production and for technical assistance.

Population, health and nutrition

Twelve countries received IDA credits totalling $1,104.8 million for 14 projects. India received $779 million, of which $500 million was to assist primary education, primary health care, disease control, nutrition, and compensation, redeployment and retraining of surplus workers; $194 million to improve the nutrition and health of preschool children and pregnant and nursing women; and $85 million for the country's National Leprosy Eradication Programme. A $70 million credit was extended to the Philippines to strengthen local health departments and non-governmental organizations providing health and nutrition services to the urban poor. A credit of $64.5 million was granted to Zimbabwe to finance a programme for sexually transmitted disease prevention and care.

Public-sector management

In fiscal 1993, IDA approved credits amounting to $32.6 million for five public-sector management projects in five countries. Guyana received a credit of $12 million to establish a public-sector salary structure providing longer-term employment and a related recruitment programme. In Sierra Leone, a credit of $10 million was granted to finance a technical assistance programme aimed at increasing the effectiveness of budgeting and expenditure control and accountability, standards of public administration and the efficiency of public enterprise. A $7 million credit was extended to Burkina Faso for consultants and equipment to support private-sector growth through institutional reforms.

Technical assistance

In fiscal 1993, IDA credits totalling $300.6 million were extended to nine countries for technical assistance projects. China received $160 million, of which $60 million was for technical assistance, training and equipment to strengthen the central bank and the Ministry of Finance; $50 million to provide technical assistance to strengthen the Chinese Academy of Sciences and the National Environmental Protection Agency; and an additional $50 million to help finance activities related to the country's economic reform programme. The United Republic of Tanzania received two IDA credits totalling $54.9 million, of which $34.9 million was to implement the Government's parastatal-reform and civil service-reform programme and $20 million was to improve accounting and auditing standards, the legal system and the administration of justice. A credit of $29 million was extended to Uganda to introduce new systems and equipment aimed at increasing and improving financial data at the Ministry of Finance and Economic Planning, the Uganda Revenue Authority and the Bank of Uganda.

Telecommunications

IDA credits totalling $89.1 million were extended to Guinea and the United Republic of Tanzania during fiscal 1993. The United Republic of Tanzania received a credit of $74.5 million to establish a market-oriented regulatory and policy framework for the telecommunications sector and rehabilitate and expand the local and long-distance network. Guinea received $14.6 million to support the newly created Société des telecommunications and the Office de la poste guinéenne.

Transportation

During fiscal 1993, credits totalling $584.1 million were granted to 12 countries for transportation projects. Nigeria received $153 million to improve the condition of its road networks, of which $85 million was for Oyo and Osun States and $68 million was to support a sustainable improvement programme for high-priority roads in Jigawa and Kano States. A $96 million credit was granted to Ethiopia to finance urgent rehabilitation of its main roads, particularly between Addis Ababa and Assab. A $65 million credit was extended to Honduras for institutional and regulatory reform of the country's transportation system and for improving transport infrastructure to promote export growth.

Urban development

IDA granted credits amounting to $291.2 million to six countries for urban development projects. A $110 million credit to China went to strengthen urban services in four major cities in Zhejiang province. Pakistan received $100 million to implement its national programme aimed at restoring vital infrastructure, which had been destroyed by floods in September 1992.

Water supply and sewerage

In fiscal 1993, IDA granted credits to six countries totalling $395.4 million for water-supply and sewerage projects. China received $120 million to improve Changchun Municipality's water supply and to reduce water pollution. A $92 million credit was granted to India to improve access to potable rural water-supply systems and environmental-sanitation facilities in some 1,200 villages in Karnataka State.

Secretariat

The principal officers, staff, headquarters and other offices of IDA are the same as those of the World Bank (see PART SIX, Chapter VI).

Chapter IX

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) intensified its efforts to provide policy advice as well as financial and technical assistance to its increasingly diverse membership. During its fiscal year 1993 (1 May 1992 to 30 April 1993), IMF played a central role in supporting the transformation of the former centrally planned economies into market-based systems. Arrangements were approved for the Russian Federation, each of the Baltic States, and many of the members in Central and Eastern Europe whose economies were in transition. Both the scope and extent of the Fund's operations expanded significantly, and for the first time IMF was close to achieving the universality of membership that was a goal since its founding almost 50 years earlier.

As at 31 December 1993, IMF had a total membership of 178 countries. The Czech Republic and Slovakia succeeded to the membership of former Czechoslovakia, and Tajikistan and Micronesia were admitted as new members of the Fund (see Annex I).

IMF facilities and policies

IMF provided financial assistance to its members under a variety of facilities and policies to enable them to regain a viable balance of payments, economic growth and exchange-rate stability.

Stand-by arrangements, focusing on specific macroeconomic policies such as exchange-rate and interest-rate policies and designed to help countries overcome short-term balance-of-payments difficulties, typically covered 12 to 18 months but could extend to three years. Extended arrangements were available to support medium-term programmes of three years, during which time more intractable balance-of-payments difficulties, attributable to structural as well as macroeconomic problems, were addressed.

The structural adjustment facility (SAF), launched in 1986,^a provided balance-of-payments assistance on concessional terms to low-income developing countries to support medium-term macroeconomic and structural adjustment programmes. In December 1987, the Executive Board established the enhanced structural adjustment facility (ESAF),^b which was similar to SAF in objective, eligibility and programme features, but differed in scope, terms of access and funding sources. After extending ESAF for one additional year, the Executive Board agreed in April 1993 that the experience of low-income countries under ESAF had been favourable and that the facility should be renewed and extended. The terms and conditions of the enlarged ESAF would be the same as those of its predecessor, with increased emphasis on protecting programmes through social safety nets and contingency mechanisms; providing timely technical assistance, in cooperation with other institutions, to those groups most in need of it; and strengthening countries' administrative ability to implement reforms. During 1993, disbursements under SAF amounted to 21.2 million special drawing rights (SDRs) (about $29.1 million) and those under ESAF to SDR 227.3 million (about $312.2 million).

The compensatory and contingency financing facility (CCFF) assisted members to meet shortfalls in their export receipts and/or excesses in the cost of their cereal imports. Through a combination of additional financing and adjustment, contingency financing enabled these countries to maintain the momentum of their adjustment programmes in the face of adverse external shocks, such as declines in export earnings, increase in import prices and interest-rate fluctuations. During 1993, Moldova and Romania made drawings under CCFF for a total of SDR 90.3 million (about $126.1 million). IMF provided resources under the buffer-stock financing facility to assist members in financing contributions to approved international buffer stocks of commodities.

Financial assistance

IMF disbursements to its members in 1993 totalled SDR 5.3 billion (about $7.3 billion), the same level as 1992. Disbursements under shorter-term stand-by arrangements declined substantially, from SDR 3.32 billion in 1992 to SDR 1.05 billion in 1993. Those under extended arrangements more than doubled, from SDR 0.91 billion to SDR 1.85 billion, underscoring the members' increased need for medium-term IMF resources to help them overcome structural balance-of-payments problems. Thus, in recognition of the special needs of its members and as a result of the shift to market-oriented economic systems, IMF established the systematic transformation facility (STF) in April 1993 to operate through 1994. In 1993, IMF disbursed SDR 1.4 billion (about $1.9 billion) under STF to 11 countries (Belarus, Cambodia, Estonia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Russian Federation, Slovakia and Viet Nam).

As at 31 December 1993, IMF had 44 various arrangements in effect with member countries, with total commitments of SDR 7.7 billion (about $10.6 billion), down from 51 in effect at the end of December 1992. There were 16 stand-by arrangements (Costa Rica, Czech Republic, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Estonia, Guatemala, Hungary, Jordan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Moldova, Pakistan, Panama, Poland and Viet Nam); 5 extended arrangements (Argentina, Egypt, Jamaica, Peru and Zimbabwe); 3 SAF arrangements (Comoros, Ethiopia and Rwanda); and 20 ESAF arrangements (Albania, Benin, Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea, Honduras, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mongolia, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe).

Liquidity

IMF's liquidity position improved considerably with the payments of the quota increases after the Ninth General Review of Quotas entered into force in November 1992. By the end of April 1993, these increases, together with the quotas of new members, raised total IMF quotas to SDR 144.6 billion, compared with SDR 91.2 billion at the end of April 1992. The quota increases enabled IMF to make more credit available to its members. (The enlarged access policy, which had enabled IMF to provide additional financing from borrowed resources to members whose payments imbalances were large in relation to their quotas, was terminated in November 1992 when the Ninth General Review of Quotas became effective.)

As at 30 April 1993, IMF liquid resources amounted to SDR 68 billion (about $95.5 billion), compared with SDR 37.4 billion (about $52.5 billion) a year earlier. Total usable resources received by IMF from payments for the increases in quotas amounted to SDR 31.1 billion, of which SDR 9.1 billion was received in SDRs (payments for the reserve asset portion of the increases, net of reserve tranche purchases in SDRs) and SDR 22 billion was received in currencies considered to be sufficiently strong to be used in IMF transactions. IMF's adjusted and uncommitted usable resources totalled SDR 52.2 billion, compared with SDR 20.9 billion a year earlier.

The Fund's liquid liabilities increased substantially from SDR 25.6 billion as at 30 April 1992 to SDR 33.7 billion as at 30 April 1993, representing primarily an increase in reserve tranche positions from SDR 21.9 billion to SDR 30.3 billion. However, outstanding borrowing by IMF decreased from SDR 3.7 billion to SDR 3.4 billion. The ratio of IMF's adjusted and uncommitted usable resources to its liquid liabilities—the liquidity ratio—nearly doubled from 81.6 per cent to 154.9 per cent over the same period.

SDR activity

During fiscal 1993, total gross transfers of SDRs reached the record level of SDR 34.2 billion, substantially higher than the previous peak of SDR 22.6 billion reached in fiscal 1984, when reserve asset payments for quota increases under the Eighth General Review took place. Transfers of SDRs among participants and prescribed holders nearly doubled to SDR 11.1 billion, mainly as a result of the substantial increase in prescribed operations associated with the use of the same-day SDR loan/repayment mechanism by members paying the reserve asset portion of their quota subscriptions and increases. Members sought more SDRs (generally to discharge obligations to IMF) than other members were prepared to sell, and IMF was unable to arrange for all the requested acquisitions. Fewer members indebted to IMF were thus able to effect repurchases in SDRs, which declined from SDR 1.8 billion in fiscal 1992 to SDR 0.6 billion in fiscal 1993. More members drew on the IMF General Resources Account (GRA) to make payments for their quota increases. As a result, IMF's holdings of SDRs in GRA increased sharply to SDR 7.93 billion from SDR 0.68 billion at the end of the previous fiscal year.

Policy on arrears

The amount of overdue financial obligations to IMF remained high during fiscal year 1993. However, as a result of the sustained implementation of IMF's strengthened cooperative strategy, the level of arrears declined for the first time in a decade from SDR 3.5 billion (about $4.9 billion) at the end of fiscal year 1992 to SDR 3 billion (about $4.2 billion) at the end of fiscal year 1993. The strengthened cooperative strategy consisted of: preventing new arrears; intensifying collaboration among the members concerned, IMF and other multilateral and official bilateral financial institutions to resolve existing protracted arrears; and implementing, as necessary, remedial and deterrent measures to prevent any new arrears from becoming protracted.

Most cases of short-term arrears were resolved during fiscal year 1993; almost all of the amount that remained outstanding was owed by members in arrears to IMF by six months or more. By the end of April 1993, seven members remained ineligible to use IMF's resources because of overdue obligations. Effective 9 August 1993, IMF suspended the voting rights of the Sudan (in arrears to the Fund since July 1984) in accordance with the Third Amendment of the Articles of Agreement, which empowers IMF to suspend the voting and related rights of a member that persists in its failure to settle overdue financial obligations to IMF.

Technical assistance and training

The demand for IMF's technical assistance and training continued to rise during fiscal 1993, primarily as a result of the shift towards market-oriented economies in the newly independent countries of the former Soviet Union as well as in Central and Eastern Europe. The increase in the number of countries with IMF-supported programmes and the acceleration of structural reforms in many member States also created a higher demand for technical assistance.

The reform of consumer subsidies figured prominently in Fund-supported programmes for a number of developing countries, as well as in policy advice provided to countries in transition to market economies. Adjustments needed to reduce budgetary outlays and provide appropriate producer incentives were accompanied by a variety of social safety-net measures, including limited transfers in cash and kind to vulnerable countries such as Central and Eastern European States, States of the former Soviet Union and developing countries like Guyana and Ethiopia.

IMF technical assistance concerning social safety nets frequently helped to clarify the options available, and therefore to shape a Government's sustainable adjustment effort. In several transition economies such as Belarus, Kyrgyzstan and Ukraine, IMF helped in subsidy reduction and restructuring of the public sector. Greece, Indonesia, States of the former Soviet Union, Brazil, Bolivia and other Latin American States—all of them countries facing severe budgetary imbalances as a result of major social-security programmes—were given assistance in the area of pensions.

The IMF Institute provided training for officials from member countries through residential and generally longer-term courses at its headquarters and at the Joint Vienna Institute. The Institute also conducted shorter courses and seminars in the field at either the national or the regional level. Moreover, it offered lecturing assistance for other training institutions and briefings for visiting groups in Washington, D.C.

The Institute offered 13 courses and three seminars for officials at IMF headquarters and eight courses and one seminar at the Joint Vienna Institute, training a total of 816 persons in a wide range of subjects. These programmes were complemented by 21 external training courses, 12 seminars for senior officials, and lecturing assistance for six other training institutions. Six training courses were organized within the former USSR and Central and Eastern Europe, and more than half the external seminars were held in the same group of countries. IMF offered similar training activities in other parts of the world, including Africa.

IMF-World Bank collaboration

Both IMF and the World Bank continued to focus on global economic issues and worked at strengthening the economies of their member States. However, the Bank remained primarily a development institution, whereas the Fund was a cooperative institution that sought to maintain an orderly system of payments and receipts between countries.

IMF's greater emphasis on structural aspects of its programmes made close collaboration between the two institutions important, particularly in the development of programmes supporting members' requests for resources assistance under IMF's structural adjustment and enhanced structural adjustment facilities.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the total full-time staff of IMF—including fixed-term and permanent employees—was 2,326, recruited from 122 countries.

Chapter X

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) promotes the efficiency and safety of civil air transport. Its objectives were set forth in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago, United States, 1944) which prescribe standards, recommended practices and procedures for facilitating civil aviation operations.

In 1993, scheduled traffic of the world's airlines increased to some 250 billion tonne-kilometres. The airlines carried about 1.17 billion passengers and 18 million tonnes of freight. The passenger load factor and the weight load factor on total scheduled services (domestic and international) remained unchanged at 66 per cent and 58 per cent, respectively. Air freight rose by 8 per cent to 67.7 billion tonne-kilometres, and airmail traffic increased by 3 per cent. Overall passenger/freight/mail tonne-kilometres were up by 4 per cent compared to the previous year and international tonne-kilometres increased by 8 per cent.

The ICAO Assembly held its thirtieth (extraordinary) session (Montreal, Canada, 25-26 May 1993) and elected the Czech Republic to fill a vacancy on the Council created as a result of the dissolution of Czechoslovakia on 31 December 1992.

During the year, the ICAO Council held three regular sessions. In June, the Council decided that the fact-finding investigation which ICAO initiated in 1983 regarding the shooting down of Korean Air Lines flight KAL-007 on 31 August 1983 had been completed, but stopped short of endorsing its conclusions. The Council urged States to take measures to ensure the safety of air navigation of civil aircraft. In December, the Council decided to suspend action taken in 1989 by the ICAO Assembly urging Contracting States to ban air links and suspend or terminate bilateral air transport agreements with South Africa because of its apartheid policies. The Council's decision was made in the light of the General Assembly's October 1993 move to lift its sanctions against South Africa (resolution 48/1).

In 1993, membership of ICAO rose to 182 with the admission of Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Kyrgyzstan, Slovakia, Tajikistan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkmenistan.

Activities in 1993

Air navigation

In the area of air navigation, ICAO continued to update and implement its specifications and regional plans. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 18 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention and Procedures for Air Navigation Services. To promote their uniform application, ICAO made available guidance material consisting of new and revised technical manuals and circulars. The ICAO regional offices continued to be the principal means of assisting States in implementing regional plans, which covered air navigation facilities and services required for international air navigation in the nine ICAO regions. ICAO's efforts were supplemented by experts who advised States on installing new facilities and services and operating existing ones.

Six air navigation meetings recommended changes to ICAO specifications—among them, the Third Asia/Pacific (ASIA/PAC) Regional Air Navigation Meeting (Bangkok, Thailand, 19 April-6 May), which discussed the new ICAO communications, navigation, surveillance and air traffic management (CNS/ATM) systems and made important decisions governing the transition plan from the existing aviation infrastructure in the ASIA/PAC region to the modern space-age environment. The Fourth Meeting of the Special Committee for the Monitoring and Coordination of Development and Transition Planning for the Future Air Navigation System (Montreal, 15 September-1 October) completed its final version of the global coordinated plan for the transition to the ICAO CNS/ATM systems.

Other project areas that received special attention in 1993 included accident and incident investigation and reporting, aerodromes, airport and air-space congestion, audiovisual training aids, aviation environmental matters, aviation medicine, bird strikes to aircraft, common geodetic reference, aircraft airworthiness, controlled flight into terrain, flight safety and accident prevention, flight safety and human factors, meteorology, telecommunications and search and rescue.

Air transport

ICAO continued in 1993 to collect and publish data on traffic, finances, fleet and personnel of commercial air carriers; traffic and finances of international airports and route facilities; aircraft accidents; civil aircraft on register; general aviation activities and civilian pilot licences.

A meeting of the statistics panel (Montreal, 29 November-3 December) reviewed the status of statistics reporting to ICAO and provided advice on possible measures for improvement. The Technical Advisory Group on Machine Readable Travel Documents (Montreal, 6-9 July) finalized specifications for machine readable official travel documents and for a machine readable crew member certificate. A Facilitation Area Meeting (New Delhi, India, 30 August-3 September) discussed a wide range of facilitation problems in Asia and the Pacific. The Pacific Area Traffic Forecasting Group (Tokyo, 12-23 April) developed traffic forecasts for Asia and the Pacific to assist in developing air navigation systems planning. Workshops and seminars were held on forecasting and economic planning (Cairo, Egypt, 29 March-2 April); statistics (Beijing, China, 29 March-2 April); air transport regulatory policy (Quito, Ecuador, 19-23 April; Budapest, Hungary, 24-28 May; Cairo, 18-22 October); and airport and route facility management (Nairobi, Kenya, 4-8 October; Vienna, 13-17 December).

ICAO continued to cooperate closely with other international organizations such as the International Air Transport Association, the Airports Council International, the Customs Cooperation Council, the World Tourism Organization, the International Organization for Standardization, the International Maritime Organization and the Universal Postal Union. It also continued to provide secretariat services to three independent regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

ICAO maintained its responsibilities for the administration of the Danish and the Icelandic joint financing agreements for air navigation services, to which 22 Governments were contracting parties in 1993. The two agreements, signed in 1956 and amended in 1982, concern the provision of certain air navigation services for Greenland and the Faeroe Islands and in Iceland.

Legal matters

In March, the ICAO Council considered the general work programme of the Legal Committee, approved by the Council in 1992,^a and agreed that a rapporteur should be appointed for the establishment of a legal framework for global navigation satellite systems. A rapporteur was appointed in July.

A regional seminar, attended by 30 delegates from 17 States of East and West Africa, was held (Mauritius, 1-3 December) to discuss major issues and challenges in the legal field.

The following ratifications, adherences or successions to the 1944 Convention on International Civil Aviation, ICAO's constituent instrument, and to certain conventions and protocols on international air law were registered in 1993:

Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago, 1944)

Technical cooperation

During 1993, ICAO's technical cooperation programmes were financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), trust funds and the associate experts programme. Total 1993 expenditures for all technical cooperation programmes came to $39.9 million, 9.9 per cent below the amount of $44.3 million in 1992.

ICAO had resident missions in 33 countries during all or part of 1993. It gave assistance to 82 countries in the form of fellowships; visits from experts assigned to intercountry projects; and subcontractual arrangements. It engaged 367 experts from 43 countries during all or part of the year, 249 on assignment under UNDP and 121 on trust fund projects (including 7 under the associate experts programme). The number of experts in the field at the end of 1993 was 111. A total of 675 fellowships were awarded in 1993, 650 of which were implemented.

Equipment purchases and subcontracts continued to represent a substantial portion of the technical cooperation programme. In addition to UNDP and trust fund projects, 67 Governments or organizations were registered with ICAO under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Services at the end of 1993. The total for equipment and subcontracts committed during 1993 amounted to $12.8 million, compared with $13.73 million in 1992.

The following were recipients of UNDP country projects executed by ICAO, costing a total of $21.48 million:

Africa: Botswana, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Ethiopia, Gambia, Guinea, Kenya, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Namibia, Niger, Nigeria, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Swaziland, Togo, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire, Zambia.

Americas: Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guyana, Honduras, Panama, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay.

Arab States: Egypt, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Oman, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, United Arab Emirates, Yemen.

Asia/Pacific: Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Indonesia, Kiribati, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Maldives, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka.

Europe: Romania.

ICAO also executed UNDP intercountry and interregional projects in Africa, the Americas, the Arab States, and Asia and the Pacific for some $1.5 million.

Trust fund projects totalling $7.3 million were executed by ICAO in Argentina, Bahamas, Bolivia, Brunei Darussalam, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Fiji, Guinea-Bissau, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Morocco, Oman, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Republic of Korea, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Sierra Leone, Trinidad and Tobago, Viet Nam, Yemen and Zambia.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the total number of staff members in the ICAO secretariat stood at 763: 302 employees recruited from 80 countries in the Professional and higher categories and 461 in the General Service and related categories. Of the total, 199 persons were employed in regional offices.

Budget

Appropriations for the 1993 financial year totalled $47,958,000.

Appropriations for 1994 were $51,317,000.

NOTE: For further details on the activities of ICAO in 1993, see Annual Report of the Council—1993.

Chapter XI

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

The Universal Postal Union (UPU), established in 1874 at Berne, Switzerland, continued in 1993 to exchange postal services among nations. It promoted the organization and improvement of postal services and the development of international collaboration in this area. At the request of its members, it participated in various forms of postal technical assistance.

In 1993, UPU membership rose to 185, with the admission of Azerbaijan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkmenistan. (See Annex I for complete membership.)

Activities of UPU organsUniversal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, the supreme legislative authority of UPU, composed of all member States, normally meets every five years. The most recent Congress, the twentieth, took place in Washington, D.C., in 1989, and the twenty-first was scheduled to meet at Seoul, Republic of Korea, in 1994.

The work of the Congress consisted mainly of examining and revising the acts of UPU based on proposals submitted by member States, the Executive Council or the Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS), and of making administrative arrangements for UPU activities. The acts in force since 1 January 1991 were those of the 1989 Congress.

Executive Council

At its 1993 session (Berne, 26 April-14 May), the Executive Council—which carries out the work of UPU between Congresses—considered administrative matters and examined studies concerning international mail referred to it by the 1989 Congress.

The Council held a general discussion on monopoly and competition and reviewed general matters and the structure of UPU; regulatory aspects, pricing and remuneration of letter post; air conveyance and quality control; parcel post; postal financial services; technical cooperation; human resource management; and finance.

Consultative Council for Postal Studies

The annual session of CCPS (Berne, 11-26 October) reviewed progress achieved in implementing the Washington General Action Plan, adopted at the 1989 UPU Congress to serve as a master plan for the bodies of UPU and for postal administrations during 1990-1994. Other issues considered were the post and its markets; development of rapid services; operations and quality of service; modernization; management; human resources; technical cooperation; UPU relations with the International Organization for Standardization; multilingual vocabulary of the international postal service; and follow-up to CCPS studies.

The Electronic Transmission Standards Group, aimed at establishing a world-wide postal electronic data interchange (EDI) system adapted to postal operational needs and accessible to all UPU members, focused on standardizing EDI codes, messages and bar codes in order to provide reference tools for all administrations wishing to participate in EDI activities.

Postal security matters continued to be dealt with by the Postal Security Action Group, which focused on establishing a postal security network. Three manuals and an operational binder on postal security were made available to postal administrations. Two 2-week postal security training courses were held: one for Central and Eastern Europe (Helsinki, Finland, May) and another for Asia and the Pacific (Beijing, China, August).

During the year, symposia were held on sales programmes in the postal environment (11 and 12 October); express mail service (EMS) (13 and 14 October); and the post and the environment (12 October).

International Bureau

Under the general supervision of the Executive Council, the International Bureau—the UPU secretariat—served the postal administrations of member States as an organ for liaison, information and consultation.

During 1993, the Bureau collected, coordinated, published and disseminated international postal service information. At the request of postal administrations, it also conducted inquiries and acted as a clearing-house for settling certain accounts between them. It continued its programme of studying the operation of the international postal network and monitoring the quality of international mail circulation, and carried out six service-quality tests, two for EMS and four for ordinary mail. An update to the Compendium of Delivery Standards, containing information from some 90 postal administrations, and the Manual of Quality of Service Standards—International Network were distributed. The Bureau fielded 12 missions to 32 postal administrations to examine the state of regional postal services. Work on developing a database to facilitate the quality of service analysis started in 1993.

As at 31 December 1993, the number of permanent and temporary staff members employed by the Bureau was 155, of whom 64 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 42 countries) and 91 in the General Service category. As French remained the sole official UPU language, 15 officials were employed in the Arabic, English, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish translation services.

Technical cooperation

In 1993, technical cooperation provided by UPU was financed for the most part by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), with UNDP/UPU project expenditures amounting to $1.9 million. Assistance was also provided through the UPU Special Fund (voluntary contributions in cash and in kind from member States) and the regular budget for a total of $1.7 million. Multi-year projects financed by UPU and in execution numbered 71; 116 experts and consultants undertook missions during the year, and 236 fellowships were awarded.

In addition, UPU provided bilateral and multi-lateral assistance to national postal administrations and participated in special programmes in such areas as the second United Nations Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1991-2000),^a the Transport and Communications Decade for Asia and the Pacific, phase II (1992-1996),^b technical cooperation among developing countries, the action programme for the least developed countries and combating the illicit transmission of narcotic drugs by post. Fellowships and training courses were also offered by a number of countries.

The six UPU regional advisers appointed in 1991 (two in Africa, one in Latin America and the Caribbean, two in Asia and the Pacific and one in the Arab countries), monitored and assessed the progress achieved in implementing the Washington General Action Plan. Twenty-two technical assistance country projects were proposed, revised or approved for financing. UNDP approved a regional project entitled "Transformation of postal services into enterprises, modernization of administrative and operational structures" and a support project for African, Arab, Asian, European and Latin American countries.

Budget

Under UPU's self-financing system, contributions are payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. At its 1992 session, the Executive Council approved the 1993 budget of 29,087,690 Swiss francs, to be financed by contributions from member States. In 1993, the Council approved the 1994 budget at a total of 30,548,630 francs, also to be financed by member States.

Chapter XII

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

In 1993, the 42-member Administrative Council of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), at its forty-eighth session (Geneva, 21 June-1 July), reviewed financial and administrative matters and decided to convene a World Telecommunication Development Conference in 1994 at Buenos Aires, Argentina.

ITU membership rose to 182 in 1993 with the admission of Andorra, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Micronesia, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkmenistan (see Annex I).

Conferences

The World Telecommunication Standardization Conference (WTSC-93) (Helsinki, Finland, 1-12 March) focused on further streamlining the ITU Telecommunication Standardization Sector to increase its competitiveness in global standardization. WTSC-93 set up 15 study groups and adopted 458 new or revised recommendations submitted by them. The first World Radiocommunication Conference (WRC) was organized at Geneva (15-19 November), as was the associated first Radiocommunication Assembly (8-16 November). Among other things, the Conference set the agenda for the 1995 WRC and the preliminary agenda for the 1997 WRC. The Assembly reviewed the work achieved by the ITU Radiocommunication Sector study groups which supported the work of Conferences and issued recommendations on technical and operational questions for radiocommunication systems and services.

Radiocommunication Sector

On 1 March 1993, the Radiocommunication Sector became functional. The Radiocommunication Bureau, which supported all Sector activities, replaced the specialized secretariats of the International Radio Consultative Committee, the International Frequency Regulation Board and the former General Secretariat staff engaged in radiocommunication matters. The Bureau provided services to administrations and users in application of the ITU radio regulations, in coordination and registration of radio frequency assignments and satellite orbits, and assisted to resolve cases of harmful interference. It assigned call sign series, provided maritime mobile information services and conducted seminars and training sessions for national frequency management requirements, in close cooperation with the Bureau for Telecommunication Development. The Bureau provided the specialized technical secretariat for the Radiocommunication Assembly and its study groups in developing recommendations for spectrum utilization and radio system characteristics. The part-time Radio Regulations Board reviewed and approved procedures for application of the radio regulations, and was consulted by the Bureau on issues of application of the radio regulations when required.

Study groups focused on spectrum management techniques, fixed satellite service, radiowave propagation in non-ionized and ionized media, science services, mobile radiodetermination, amateur and related satellite services, fixed service, broadcasting service (sound), broadcasting service (television) and inter-service sharing and compatibility.

The Bureau examined and recorded in the Master International Frequency Register 89,687 frequency assignment notices received from member countries. At the end of 1993, the Register contained particulars of 1,185,776 assignments representing 5,564,593 records.

Telecommunication Standardization Sector

During 1993, the Telecommunication Standardization Bureau's main activities included organizing the work of study groups and their working parties and completing recommendations. Excluding WTSC-93, 36 meetings were held in 1993. Twenty-four new recommendations and 21 revised recommendations were approved by members after WTSC-93, bringing the total for 1993 to 201 new recommendations and 302 revised recommendations. Thirteen recognized operating agencies and eight scientific or industrial organizations were admitted to participate in the work of the Telecommunication Standardization Sector in 1993, increasing the total number to 89 recognized operating agencies, 142 scientific or industrial organizations and 38 international organizations.

Technical cooperation

United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) assistance for ITU technical projects decreased in 1993. The Field Operations Department, however, continued to assist developing countries, especially least developed countries (LDCs), by providing specialists from headquarters, outside experts, technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC) missions and fellowships. It also organized workshops, study groups and seminars. In 1993, the Department handled 139 projects costing approximately $17 million. Of the 827 missions undertaken in 1993, 260 were to LDCs. In addition to organizing 65 TCDC missions and granting 410 fellowships, ITU field offices undertook 99 missions.

In Africa, 20 technical assistance projects were implemented by the Telecommunication Development Bureau (BDT) costing $3.7 million. Human resources development activities included courses on digital satellite communications technology (Lusaka, Zambia, September; Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, November), in English and French, respectively; study of administrative, managerial and operational aspects of the Staff Training College at Ndola (Zambia, January); a training development workshop at the Staff Training College of Zambia Posts and Telecommunications Corporation (July); telecommunication training managers meeting (Maputo, Mozambique, October); a high-level management seminar for English-speaking LDCs in Africa (Maputo, October); a training workshop for French- and Lusophone-speaking countries (Dakar, Senegal, April); and a seminar on human resources management and training for French speaking countries (Dakar, November).

In the Americas, BDT developed a regional programme on rural and low-income strata telecommunication. It provided assistance to the telecommunications training centres in the region and prepared books on telecommunication policies and on training for the Americas region. Projects, mostly financed by trust funds, provided assistance to Brazil, to research and develop the design of telecommunication equipment and modernize its telecommunication system; Colombia, to implement an advanced training programme; Costa Rica, to modernize the tariff structure of the telegraph system; Chile, to train personnel; Ecuador, to set up an information system; El Salvador, to strengthen organizations; Honduras, to improve institutional management, supply equipment and assist in maintenance; the Netherlands Antilles, to analyse optical fibre systems and evaluate tenders; Nicaragua, to strengthen the Post and Telecommunications Institute and the tariff structure for the telephone service; Panama, for tariff structures for the telephone service; Paraguay, for its telecommunications system; and Peru, to strengthen technologies and to assist in training. Advisory services were provided to Suriname. In addition, 45 missions were carried out, 14 new projects were prepared and 21 projects already undertaken were supervised. In addition to the above projects, ITU organized 25 TCDC missions and nine seminars and meetings in the region and granted 67 fellowships.

In Asia and the Pacific, ITU focused on applying new technologies and using computer-aided management techniques. Projects were implemented to strengthen national telecommunication technical and administrative services in Afghanistan, to rehabilitate the telecommunication sector; Bangladesh, to provide experts to examine tender documents for a new earth station and prepare specifications for digital multi-access radio, examine specifications for switching systems and install a computer-aided system to acquire and analyse traffic data; Bhutan, to assist in implementing the telecommunication development plan and provide fellowship training; Cambodia, to support telecommunication development, monitor a new communications network and train personnel; China, to implement a telecommunication modernization programme; India, to upgrade All India Radio sound archives, refurbish stored material and introduce optical disc storage facilities; Iran, to establish a rural telecommunication network; the Lao People's Democratic Republic, to prepare a proposal for financing the expansion of telecommunication facilities; Nepal, to establish quality control management and to set up a repair centre; Sri Lanka, to develop telecommunication management; Tuvalu, to assist in converting the telecom billing system; and Viet Nam, to develop a telecommunications master plan and train personnel. The services of experts were provided to the Maldives and Mongolia.

The third regional telecommunication exhibition organized by ITU, "Asia TELECOM 93", was held (Singapore, 17-22 May). Human resources development activities were carried out in India, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Pakistan. During 1993, ITU aimed at rebuilding a South Pacific telecommunication support programme. Among the main activities undertaken in West and South Asia were monitoring and providing support for ongoing projects and sectoral support to identify areas of assistance. Twenty-four missions were carried out, 12 projects were supervised and 14 new project proposals were prepared. Eleven missions were carried out in South-East Asia and three project proposals were prepared. The participants at the Asia and Pacific Regional Telecommunication Coordination Meeting (Bali, Indonesia, 1 and 2 December) agreed to inform ITU of all ongoing and follow-up telecommunication activities and to exchange information among all parties. A working group (Bali, 3 December) discussed telecommunication policies and strategies.

Support for developing regional telecommunication in the Arab States continued to be provided under the modern Arab telecommunication development (MODARABTEL) project financed by UNDP. The Fourth Steering Committee Meeting (Rabat, Morocco, October) assessed and approved all implemented and future activities of the project. Among them were a network on data communication, a network on management information systems in training, a network on applied research in telecommunications, a sub-network on digital cellular mobile radio systems and a network for a statistical database in telecommunications. The lead countries for those networks were Egypt, Morocco, Tunisia, Saudi Arabia and the Syrian Arab Republic, respectively. In cooperation with UNDP, technical and administrative assistance was provided to develop national telecommunication services in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, Tunisia and Yemen. Human resources development projects relating to telecommunications were carried out in Algeria, Djibouti, Lebanon and Morocco.

Activities carried out by ITU and the Commonwealth of Independent States included rebuilding and strengthening existing networks. Funding came mostly as loans from the World Bank and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. The second phase of a human resources management project in Hungary was being prepared. In Europe in 1993, ITU carried out 59 missions, conducted 24 workshops and trained 474 persons, in addition to improving and updating five databases.

Activities under the special programme for LDCs included workshops on optical fibre technology (Bangladesh, October), financial management in telecommunications for Asia and the Pacific (Singapore, December) and outside plant maintenance for the Arab region (Yemen, November), and a training course on outside plant installation and maintenance for Africa (Malta, November). In addition to sending advisory missions, fellowships were granted to LDCs.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, 719 officials (excluding staff on short-term contracts and project personnel) were employed by ITU either at headquarters or in the field. Of these, 10 were elected officials, 568 had permanent contracts and 141 had fixed-term contracts; 74 nationalities were represented in posts subject to geographical distribution.

Budget

The adjusted budget for 1993 totalled 137,270,950 Swiss francs or $95,327,048 (based on an exchange rate as at 31 December 1993 of $1.00 = SwF 1.44). In addition, SwF 5,301,500 ($3,681,597) was programmed for the technical cooperation special accounts budget, and SwF 8,577,400 ($5,956,527) for the supplementary publications budget.

In 1993, the Administrative Council adopted a budget for 1994 amounting to SwF 139,975,000, SwF 5,213,000 for technical cooperation and SwF 9,580,000 for the supplementary publications budget.

NOTE: For further information on ITU activities, see Report on the Activities of the International Telecommunication Union in 1993, published by ITU.

Chapter XIII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

In 1993, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) continued its activities in accordance with the programmes and budget adopted in 1991 by the World Meteorological Congress for the period 1992-1995. The Congress meets once every four years, but the 36-member Executive Council meets annually to supervise the implementation of WMO's programmes and regulations. At its forty-fifth session (Geneva, 8-18 June 1993), the Council adopted policy and strategy principles for the fourth WMO long-term plan (1996-2005) to ensure that meteorology and operational hydrology contributed to sustainable development, the implementation of Agenda 21 of the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED),^a the 1992 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change^b and the proposed international convention to combat desertification.^c The Council approved the Guidelines on the Role of National Meteorological and Hydrological Services in the Implementation of Agenda 21 and the Framework Convention on Climate Change.

During the year, WMO continued to contribute to the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction (1990-2000) (IDNDR)^d with activities focused on risk assessment and technology.

Nine States—the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Slovakia, Tajikistan, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan—acceded to the WMO Convention in 1993, bringing WMO's membership to 169 States and 5 Territories (see Annex I).

World Weather Watch

The World Weather Watch Programme (WWW), the core programme of WMO, continued to provide global observational data and processed information required by members for operational and research purposes. Its essential elements were the Global Observing System (GOS), which provided observational data for weather analysis, forecasts and warnings; the Global Telecommunication System (GTS), which offered telecommunication facilities for the rapid collection, exchange and distribution of observational data and processed information; and the Global Data-Processing System (GDPS), which provided for the processing, storage and retrieval of observational data and made processed information available.

World Weather Watch implementation

GOS, the main source of observational data needed to prepare weather analysis, forecasts and warnings, included 9,800 land stations, 7,360 Voluntary Observing Ships, 620 active drifting buoys at sea, 3,000 aircraft, and a system of at least four polar-orbiting and five geo-stationary satellites. The space-based sub-system of GOS provided valuable and continuous operational satellite data. During the year, WMO extended its cooperative agreements with satellite projects in China, the European Community, India, Japan, the Russian Federation and the United States. The Commission for Basic Systems (CBS) Working Group on Observations, at its sixth session (Geneva, 17-21 May 1993) considered the introduction of new observing technologies such as the Automated Ship-board Aerological Programme, automated aircraft observing and reporting systems and wind-profilers, into GOS.

Satellite-based telecommunications played a central role at all levels of GTS. The data-collection and dissemination missions of meteorological satellites were of utmost importance in areas where commercial telecommunications could not provide member States with cost-effective services, such as those delivered by METEOSAT satellites over Africa. The new Regional Meteorological Telecommunication Network in Region IV (North and Central America) entered its implementation phase during the year and GDPS continued to expand its information processing services. The quality of warnings, forecasts and predictions improved through the introduction of more powerful computers and/or higher-resolution analysis and forecasting systems at GDPS centres. Efforts were made to enhance the parameterization of physical phenomena in numerical models and to define needs and specifications. Activities included the design of data-processing facilities for national meteorological centres to bridge the technology gap between GDPS centres in developing countries and those in more developed countries. WMO members were invited to state their requirements for numerical weather prediction (NWP) products at the International Workshop on Users' Requirements (Montreal, Canada, 14-17 September) with the aim of improving the quality of warnings, forecasts and predictions. The CBS Working Group on Data Processing reviewed those requirements during its eighth session (Geneva, 15-19 November) with a view to establishing procedures for experimental distribution of those products. A training seminar on the use of NWP products from advanced GDPS centres was held at Toulouse, France (20-25 September).

Instruments and methods of observation

Data quality, the development of composite observing systems and long-term data homogeneity were major objectives of the Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme. Several instrument intercomparisons were started or completed in 1993. Among those completed were the seven-year WMO Solid Precipitation Measurement Intercomparison made in 13 countries, and the WMO Wind Instrument Intercomparison in France. Canada and France started the WMO Intercomparison of Present Weather Sensors/System during the year to provide better performance characteristics and to enhance the use of automatic weather stations.

Meetings held under the Programme included sessions of the Working Group on Surface Measurements (Reading, United Kingdom, 19-23 April) and the Working Group on Upper-air Measurements (Geneva, 10-14 May).

The WMO Radiosonde Intercomparisons which started in 1984 was completed in 1993. Reports of all trials and comparisons were published in the Instruments and Observing Methods Report series.

Tropical cyclones

In 1993, the Tropical Cyclone Programme focused mainly on the transfer of technology to developing countries. As follow-up to the 1990 Special Experiment Concerning Typhoon Recurvature and Unusual Movement (SPECTRUM), China, in cooperation with WMO, organized the Third Technical Conference on SPECTRUM (Shanghai, 25-29 October). Like its predecessors, the conference was designed to transfer research findings from SPECTRUM to meteorologists in the typhoon region. The Global Guide to Tropical Cyclone Forecasting was released during the third international workshop on tropical cyclones (Santa Cruz, Mexico, November/December). The publication provided meteorologists and training institutions with the most up-to-date technique for forecasting tropical cyclones.

World Climate Programme

The World Climate Programme (WCP) consisted of the World Climate Data and Monitoring Programme (WCDMP), the World Climate Applications and Services Programme (WCASP), the World Climate Impact Assessment and Response Strategies Programme (WCIRP) and the World Climate Research Programme (WCRP).

The Intergovernmental Meeting on WCP (Geneva, 14-16 April), convened by WMO and co-sponsored by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC), the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU), adopted guidelines for national and international climatological activities.

The Commission for Climatology (CC1) had the lead role in implementing the WCDMP and WCASP. The eleventh session of CC1 (Havana, Cuba, 15-26 February) emphasized members' responsibility for processing climate data and for submitting it to international centres and archives. WCDMP continued to expand its capacity to help member States and to improve the availability of timely climate data for research, climate change detection, impact assessment and other applications. New Climate Computing (CLICOM) software and manuals were distributed to more than 80 members and international organizations during the year. New CLICOM training tutorials were near completion and CLICOM training seminars were organized in a number of countries.

The Data Rescue in Regional Association I (Africa) (DARE) project was operational in 28 African countries in 1993. UNEP provided funding for equipment and the International Data Rescue Co-ordination Centre (IDCC) (Brussels), operated by the Royal Meteorological Institute of Belgium, provided training in data management. There were more than 1,300 DARE I microfilms in the IDCC inventory at the end of the year. An expert meeting on Data Rescue in Regional Association IV (North and Central America) (DARE IV) (Barbados, August) developed plans to rescue climate data in the Caribbean.

The WMO Technical Conference on Tropical Urban Climates (Dhaka, Bangladesh, 28 March-2 April) was held in cooperation with the International Council for Building Research, Studies and Documentation, the International Federation for Housing and Planning, the International Geographical Union, UNEP and the World Health Organization. The conference recommended activities to reinforce the Tropical Urban Climate Experiment, and follow-up to the Second World Climate Conference and the sustainable development agenda of UNCED.

WMO continued its collaboration with other organizations, especially in assessing the impact of energy production and use on climate. Activities included the International Atomic Energy Agency-initiated joint project on databases and methodologies for the comparative assessment of energy sources for electricity generation, the energy efficiency 2000 project coordinated by the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe and the global energy efficiency 21 project.

World Climate Research Programme

WCRP, undertaken jointly by WMO, IOC/UNESCO and ICSU, continued to organize research into the basic physical processes that determine the Earth's climate, including the refinement of models to quantify changes related to the buildup of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere.

The Global Energy and Water Cycle Experiment (GEWEX) Scientific Steering Group held its sixth session at San Diego, United States, from 1 to 5 February. Its first major field experiment was the GEWEX Continental-Scale International Project to study the energy budget and hydrological cycle of the Mississippi river basin. Proposals for similar large-scale studies were also under consideration for the catchments of rivers flowing into the Baltic Sea, the Amazon basin, several Arctic river basins, and the region influenced by the Asian monsoon.

The highlight of the Tropical Ocean and Global Atmosphere Programme during 1993 was the successful completion in February of the intensive observing period of the Coupled Ocean-Atmosphere Response Experiment (COARE) above the warm water pool in the western tropical Pacific. COARE, the largest atmospheric and oceanic field study carried out in the tropical zone since 1974, involved some 11,000 atmospheric soundings, 700 days of ship observations, 45 aircraft missions, continuous profiles of wind and temperature from four sites, and the measurement of oceanic temperature, salinity and currents from 20 moorings. A broad spectrum of atmospheric weather conditions was observed, including the behaviour of convective systems and their interaction with the ocean.

The World Ocean Circulation Experiment (WOCE), to observe global oceanic circulation at all depths during the period 1990-1997, peaked during 1993. Of the 62 hydrographic sections planned, almost half had been surveyed at least partially and 10 were completed. The successful launching of the United States-French TOPEX/POSEIDON satellite was a milestone for WOCE. The satellite's altimeter instruments provided the most accurate measurements to date of changes in global sea level.

Progress was made during the year with the Arctic Climate System Study (ACSYS) to investigate Arctic Ocean circulation and its impact on global climate. The second session of the ACSYS

Scientific Steering Group was held at Hamburg, Germany (4-8 October). In the Antarctic, WCRP initiatives led to the launching of the International Programme for Antarctic Buoys, an activity to measure surface air pressure, air temperature and buoy position over an area of the southern ocean and Antarctic marginal seas.

The Atmospheric Model Intercomparison Project was conducted under WCRP auspices by the United States Department of Energy's Programme for Climate Model Diagnosis and Intercomparison. By the end of 1993, 30 groups from around the world had completed simulations of the ten-year period (1979-1988) under specified standard conditions. A range of diagnostic projects examined the ability of the current generation of atmospheric models to represent mean climate and a wide variety of climate statistics on global and regional scales.

Other meetings under the WCRP included the fifth session of the Working Group on Radiative Fluxes (San Diego, 8-12 February) and the fourteenth session of the Joint Scientific Committee for WCRP (Hamilton, Bermuda, 15-20 March).

Atmospheric research and environment

A total of 33 meetings and training courses were organized under WMO's Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme in 1993. They included the Fourth International Conference on Southern Hemisphere Meteorology and Oceanography (Hobart, Australia, 29 March-2 April); the WMO consultation of experts to complete the assessment of world-wide atmospheric acid deposition (Egbert, Canada, 1-5 June); the fifth meeting of the Steering Committee for Long-term Asian/African Monsoon Studies (Yokohama, Japan, 20 and 21 July); the WMO Meeting of Experts on CO₂ Measurements (Rome, Italy, 7-10 September); the International Conference on CO₂ Measurements and Analysis (Carqueiranne, France, 13-17 September); a training course on weather forecasting (Nanjing, China, 20 September-15 October); a training workshop on background atmospheric composition monitoring for the Global Atmospheric Watch (GAW) (Halkidiki, Greece, 11-15 October); and a training course on background atmospheric composition measurements (Budapest, Hungary, 1-27 November).

During the year, new GAW global observatories were established in Algeria, Argentina, Brazil, China, Indonesia and Kenya, and stations in the Global Ozone Observing System continued to provide near-real time data for WMO's periodic bulletins on the state of the Antarctic Layer during the austral spring period.

Several member States focused on the development or improvement of monthly, seasonal, and other long-period weather forecasts. The western Pacific workshop on seasonal to interannual climate variability (Melbourne, Australia, June) noted promising preliminary experiments for tropical regions that suggested the potential for improved coupled ocean-atmosphere models to capture phenomena such as the El Niño/Southern Oscillation (ENSO), which could lead to useful seasonal or even longer-term forecasts.

The Register of National Weather Modification Projects for 1991, the Proceedings of the WMO Workshop on Cloud Microphysics and Applications to Global Change and the Report of the Third International Cloud Modelling Workshop were published in 1993.

Applications of meteorology

Agricultural meteorology

The Advisory Working Group of the Commission for Agricultural Meteorology (CAgM) (Geneva, 6-10 September) reviewed the draft text of the Fourth Long-term Plan, approved the agenda for the eleventh session of CAgM and made recommendations on scientific lectures to be organized for the session. Scientists from meteorological, agricultural and water resources services attended workshops jointly organized by WMO and FAO on the use of agrometeorological data for effective irrigated crop production, and training in the use of the Interactive Statistics Package was provided to participants from 18 countries in Central and North America.

A joint meeting of Regional Associations III (South America) and IV (North and Central America) Working Groups on Agricultural Meteorology (Guatemala, 8-12 February) discussed the preparation of reports on the agrometeorology of sweet potatoes, oil palm, cocoa beans, date palm, coconut palms and forage maize. Among other items covered were the protection of crops from frost, pests and diseases; the requirements for biological data and the establishment of databanks; crop water requirements for rain-fed and irrigated crops; meteorological inputs to an early warning system on agricultural production; and the effects of meteorological phenomena such as El Niño and global warming on agricultural productivity. A meeting of the Regional Association V (South-West Pacific) Working Group on Agrometeorology (Quezon City, Philippines, 16-19 March) considered problems identified by members, and the impact of ENSO. Subjects recommended for further study included the organization of national services; studies on the agrometeorology of avocado, pineapple, mango and grapefruit; crop protection and production; the impact of tropical cyclones; agrometeorological data management; national drought plans; early warning systems; and training.

An illustrated manual on locusts and codes for transmitting pest data was published in Arabic, English and French and sent to observing stations in all countries affected by locusts.

Aeronautical meteorology

The worldwide implementation of new aeronautical meteorological codes began on 1 July, bringing to fruition years of cooperation between WMO, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) and user organizations. The new codes followed far-reaching amendments to standards and recommended practices for meteorological reports and forecasts for aviation.

Implementation of the codes required extensive training and WMO organized several training events, including regional training seminars for English-speaking countries in Central America and the Caribbean (Barbados, 4-7 May); for Spanish-speaking countries in Latin America (Bogotá, Colombia, 10-13 May); and for personnel in 15 French-speaking countries in Africa (Niamey, Niger). WMO personnel participated in ICAO regional seminars on the new codes in Nairobi, Kenya, and Cairo, Egypt, in June.

The planned satellite broadcasting of data from Washington and London over the World Area Forecast System (WAFS) also progressed in 1993. Satellite distribution of WAFS data from both cities was expected to begin in 1994.

Marine meteorology

At its eleventh session (Lisbon, Portugal, 19-30 April), the Commission for Marine Meteorology reviewed the main achievements of its programme, including implementation of the new WMO marine broadcast system under the International Maritime Organization (IMO) Global Maritime Distress and Safety System. The Commission also discussed a restructuring of the WMO Marine Climatological Summaries Scheme.

A WMO/IOC Technical Conference on Space-based Ocean Observation (Bergen, Norway, 6-10 September) provided a forum for users and potential users of data and the agencies designing and operating the satellites to exchange information.

Data from in-situ platforms and Voluntary Observing Ships (VOS) in particular, continued to provide essential ground-truthing for satellite observations and real-time reports for immediate use.

The key link between national meteorological services and VOS was provided by the international network of Port Meteorological Officers (PMOs). WMO organized an international seminar/workshop (London, 20-25 September) for about 50 PMOs from 30 countries, to enhance international coordination among the officers and educate them in current shipping practices, observing requirements and facilities and communications.

Public weather services

A team of experts from five countries was enlisted to prepare initial public weather services programme plans embracing: the content of forecasts and warnings; presentation and dissemination techniques, public information and education; and the exchange and coordination of hazardous weather information between neighbouring countries.

Hydrology and water resources

The first World Water Day was celebrated on 22 March to increase awareness of the need for better management of the world's water resources. Among the problems identified were: increasing water scarcity, water-borne diseases, pollution, flooding, droughts and conflicts in international river basins. The event coincided with the fourth joint UNESCO/WMO/ICSU International Conference on Hydrology Towards the 21st Century: Research and Operational Needs (Paris, 22-26 March). The Conference, which made recommendations in the areas of hydrological research, operational hydrology, interdisciplinary studies and capacity building, followed up on discussions at the ninth session of the Commission of Hydrology (Geneva, 5-15 January). The Geneva session reviewed the Hydrology and Water Resources Programme, planned activities for the next four years and made proposals for the WMO Fourth Long-term Plan. On the Commission's recommendation, WMO intensified its activities in water quality monitoring. It placed more emphasis on technical assistance in water quality assessment and management and initiated regional training workshops on water quality monitoring. A workshop on water quality on small islands was organized for Caribbean countries at St. Joseph, Trinidad and Tobago, in July.

WMO completed a UNDP-funded project to strengthen the overall capacity of the Water Resources Bureau of Papua New Guinea. The project trained personnel, set up computerized databases for water quantity and quality, undertook watershed management studies to evaluate land use and the impact of pollution from mining, and installed a pilot satellite-based telemetry station.

Meetings held under the Hydrology and Water Resources Programme included an international workshop on sea-level changes and their consequences for hydrology and water resources (Noordwijkerhout, Netherlands, 19-23 April); a workshop on global environmental change and land surface processes in hydrology, which discussed modelling and measuring problems (Tucson, United States, 17-21 May); a conference on water and environment issues (Delft, Netherlands, 3 and 4 June); and an international symposium on precipitation and evaporation (Bratislava, Slovakia, 20-24 September).

Education and training

During the year, instructors under WMO's Education and Training Programme participated in the second meeting of the Working Group on Distance and Computer-aided Learning (Boulder, United States, 10 July); the third meeting of the Standing Conference of Heads of Training Institutions of National Meteorological Services (Boulder, 11 and 12 July); and the First International Conference on Computer-aided Learning and Distance Learning in Meteorology, Hydrology and Oceanography (Boulder, 5-9 July). The Korean Meteorological Administration hosted a regional training seminar for national instructors (Seoul, 6-17 December) and the Third International Conference on School and Popular Meteorological and Oceanographic Education was held at Toronto, Canada, from 14 to 18 July.

Some 536 persons participated in 24 training events organized by WMO in 22 countries during 1993. The Organization also co-sponsored or supported 30 training events organized by members or by national institutions. The number of the WMO Regional Meteorological Training Centres (RMTCs) increased to 19 with the addition of the Nanjing Institute of Meteorology for Class I Training in Chinese and English and the Advanced Meteorological Sciences Training Centre of the Iran Meteorological Organization in Tehran for Class I, II, III and IV Training in Farsi and English. The RMTC global network trained more than 3,000 students during the 1992-1993 biennium.

Drawing on funds from various sources, WMO awarded 32 long-term and 147 short-term fellowships. The WMO Training Library continued to strengthen and expand its holdings of audiovisual training and computer-assisted learning materials to meet the increasing needs of WMO members.

Technical cooperation

In 1993, countries received technical assistance valued at $26.3 million, financed by UNDP (27.8 per cent), the WMO Voluntary Cooperation Programme (VCP) (29.2 per cent), trust funds (38.3 per cent) and the WMO regular budget (4.7 per cent). Donors contributed some $7 million to VCP, while member States provided equipment, expert services and fellowships. Some 80 countries received support for 141 VCP projects, 69 of which were completed in 1993. Eighty-one countries received assistance totalling $1.23 million from the regular budget.

The resource mobilization unit of the WMO secretariat became operational on 1 March. It initiated negotiations with major financial institutions, transnational companies, large consulting engineering firms and others, for financial support for technical cooperation projects.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the total number of full-time staff employed by WMO (excluding 26 professionals on technical assistance projects) on permanent and fixed-term contracts stood at 289. Of these, 134 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 52 nationalities) and 155 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

The year 1993 was the second year of the eleventh financial period (1992-1995), for which the 1991 WMO Congress had established a maximum expenditure of 236,100,000 Swiss francs (SwF). The budget was based on zero real growth in programmes, but for the first time, the Congress made provision for cost increases due to inflation. This afforded more stable purchasing power for programmes. Of the assessed contributions totalling SwF 55,943,762 for the year, SwF 12,069,882 remained unpaid. Total unpaid contributions due from members stood at SwF 17,634,766.

The approved regular budget for the 1992-1993 biennium was SwF 112,010,000. The accumulated cash surplus for the biennium was SwF 3.3 million. In addition to regular budget expenditure, there were extra-budgetary activities in technical cooperation projects. WMO also administered several trust funds and special accounts financed by various members and international organizations.

NOTE: For further details on WMO activities, see the World Meteorological Organization Annual Report, 1993, published by the agency.

Chapter XIV

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 1993, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) held the eighteenth session of its biennial Assembly (London, 25 October-5 November), at which it considered and approved its work during the previous two years. The Assembly adopted amendments to the annex of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972, regarding changes to signals and lights, and to the annex of the International Convention for Safe Containers, 1972, to introduce the units of the International Organization for Standardization. Also adopted were 36 technical resolutions, some of which dealt with procedures for operational control; life-saving and search and rescue; fire safety; radio communications; tonnage measurement; fatigue factors in manning and safety; survey and inspection of tankers and bulk carriers; standards for ship manoeuvrability; piracy; guidelines to assist flag States; the Code for the Safe Carriage of Irradiated Nuclear Fuel, Plutonium and High-Level Radioactive Wastes in Flasks on Board Ships; and the International Safety Management Code. The Assembly adopted the 1994-1995 IMO budget and elected 32 member States to serve during the 1994-1995 biennium on the IMO Council—IMO's governing body between Assembly sessions. It also adopted amendments to the IMO Convention which would increase the Council's membership from 32 to 40. The amendments were to enter into force 12 months after being accepted by two thirds of IMO member States.

During the year, IMO membership rose to 147 with the acceptance of the IMO Convention by Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Eritrea, Georgia, Latvia, Paraguay, Slovakia, Slovenia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkmenistan (see Annex I for complete membership).

In May, the Joint United Nations/IMO Conference of Plenipotentiaries adopted the Convention on Maritime Liens and Mortgages. The Convention would improve conditions for ship financing and the development of national merchant fleets and promote international uniformity in maritime liens and mortgages. The Convention opened for signature on 1 September and was to enter into force six months following the date on which 10 States had expressed their consent to be bound by it.

Activities in 1993

In November, the International Maritime Prize for 1992 was presented to Yoshio Sasamura (Japan), who had served IMO from 1964 to 1989 in various capacities, including as Secretary of IMO's Maritime Safety Committee and as Assistant Secretary-General. The prize is awarded annually to the individual or organization judged to have done the most to promote the objectives of IMO.

The theme for World Maritime Day, which was observed at IMO headquarters in London on 29 September, was "Implementation of IMO standards—the key to success".

World Maritime University

In December, 95 students representing 55 countries graduated from the World Maritime University at Malmo, Sweden. The University was founded by IMO in 1983 to provide advanced post-graduate training in maritime administration, environmental protection, port and shipping management, maritime education and training and maritime safety administration.

In 1993, the University received a grant of $1 million from the Seafarers Trust of the International Transport Workers Federation (ITF), part of which would be used to endow an ITF chair in the human factor in maritime safety.

Prevention of pollution

Amendments adopted in 1991 to annex I (oil pollution) and annex V (garbage pollution) of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto (MARPOL 73/78), entered into force on 4 April. The amendments to annex I required oil tankers of 150 gross tons (gt) and above and ships other than tankers of 400 gt and above to carry a shipboard oil pollution emergency plan approved by the Administration of the country whose flag the ship flew. The amendments to annex V designated the Wider Caribbean area (the Caribbean, the Gulf of Mexico and other seas and bays extending as far south as French Guiana) as one of the special areas where garbage dumping would be strictly controlled. In October, IMO launched a $5.5 million Wider Caribbean Initiative on Ship-Generated Waste to reduce the discharge of all forms of such wastes in the region.

In addition, 1992 amendments to MARPOL 73/78 entered into force on 6 July,^a requiring tankers to be fitted with double hulls to protect against oil pollution in the event of collision or stranding. Alternative methods providing the same level of protection for the cargo were acceptable. The amendments also reduced the amount of oil tankers are permitted to discharge into the sea from 60 litres to 30 litres per nautical mile.

In November, the contracting parties to the 1972 Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter (the London Convention) agreed to ban the dumping into the sea of low-level radioactive wastes such as those from nuclear power production and from the industrial, medical and research uses of radioisotopes. They also adopted amendments to the Convention banning the incineration at sea of industrial wastes and phasing out the dumping of industrial wastes by 31 December 1995. The amendments were to enter into force on 19 February 1994, 100 days after their adoption.

Regarding the prevention of air pollution from ships, IMO's Marine Environment Protection Committee began preparing a new annex to MARPOL 73/78 to reduce pollution by nitrogen oxides, sulphur oxides and volatile organic compounds and to control incineration and fuel oil quality. The annex was expected to be completed in 1994.

Ship security and safety of life at sea

A protocol to the 1977 Torremolinos International Convention for the Safety of Fishing Vessels was adopted on 2 April at an international conference at Torremolinos, Spain, to amend the parent Convention, which had never entered into force and had become outdated. Taking into account recent developments in fishing and fishing vessel technology, the Protocol addressed safety provisions such as automatically controlled machinery spaces, improved life-saving appliances, immersion suits and thermal protective aids, satellite communication systems and other components of the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System.

On 1 August, new regulations intended to improve shipping safety and aid search and rescue operations came into force. The regulations, contained in amendments to the 1974 International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS), made it mandatory for all ships of 300 gt and above to be fitted with the NAVTEX system—which transmits printed maritime safety information telegraphically—and with emergency position-indicating radio beacons.

In 1993, the IMO Assembly adopted the International Safety Management Code, which was designed to provide an international standard for the safe management and operation of ships and for pollution prevention. It was expected to be used as the basis for a new chapter in the 1974 SOLAS Convention. The Assembly adopted resolutions dealing with life-saving and search and rescue operations concerning marking inflatable life-rafts; training requirements for crews of fast rescue boats; conditions for the approval of servicing stations for inflatable life-rafts; symbols related to life-saving appliances and arrangements; and minimum training requirements for personnel nominated to assist passengers in emergency situations on passenger ships. In addition, four resolutions were adopted on fire safety, dealing with fire-resistant materials, sprinkler systems, fire safety information and lighting to indicate escape routes.

Unlawful acts at sea

In February and March, a working group on piracy and armed robbery visited three States in the Strait of Malacca region—Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore—where some 200 attacks on shipping had been reported in 1991. A series of measures designed to combat incidents of piracy and armed robbery were adopted by the IMO Assembly based on the recommendations of the working group.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the IMO secretariat employed 297 staff members. Of these, 115 were in the Professional and higher categories and 182 were in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

In 1993, the IMO Assembly approved a work programme and budget of 34,328,800 pounds sterling for 1994-1995: 16,724,200 pounds for 1994 and 17,604,600 pounds for 1995.

Chapter XV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

During 1993, the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued to promote respect for the protection and use of intellectual property through cooperation among States and ensuring administrative cooperation among the intellectual property "Unions." WIPO's three governing bodies, namely, the General Assembly, the Conference and the Coordination Committee, held their twenty-fourth series of meetings (Geneva, 20-29 September) and approved a draft programme and budget covering the period 1994-1995 in the amount of 230 million Swiss francs. They decided to apply as from 1 January 1994, for a four-year trial period covering the bienniums 1994-1995 and 1996-1997, a unitary contribution system, under which each member State would pay one contribution only, regardless of the number of contribution-financed Unions of which it was a member.

In 1993, WIPO's membership increased to 143, with Armenia, Bhutan, Bolivia, Estonia, Latvia and Saint Lucia acceding to the Convention establishing WIPO, and Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, the Republic of Moldova, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Uzbekistan declaring continued application or succession to prior membership in the Convention (see Annex I).

Membership in the treaties administered by WIPO increased with the adherences or declarations of continued application as follows:

The number of members of the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property rose to 117 with the accession of Belarus, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, El Salvador, Latvia, the Republic of Moldova, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Uzbekistan. Membership to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works increased to 105 with the addition of Albania, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, El Salvador, Gambia, Jamaica, Kenya, Namibia, Nigeria, Saint Lucia, Slovakia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. The Czech Republic and Slovakia succeeded to Czechoslovakia's membership in the Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source on Goods, the Strasbourg Agreement Concerning the International Patent Classification and the Lisbon Agreement for the Protection of Appellations of Origin and their International Registration, thus changing the memberships to 31, 27 and 17 respectively. Cuba, the Czech Republic, Greece, Poland, Slovakia, Trinidad and Tobago, and Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) acceded to the Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Microorganisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure, bringing the number of States parties to 29. Bolivia, the Czech Republic, Greece, Jamaica, the Netherlands, Nigeria, Slovakia and Switzerland acceded to the Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations, bringing the number of member States to 45. China, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Greece, Jamaica, the Netherlands, Slovakia and Switzerland became parties to the Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms, raising membership to 50. With the accession of Armenia, Croatia and Switzerland to the Brussels Convention Relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite, this instrument's membership rose to 18. With the signatures of Belarus and Morocco, the number of adherents to the Nairobi Treaty on the Protection of the Olympic Symbol increased to 34. Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia signed the Nice Agreement Concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purposes of the Registration of Marks as well as the Locarno Agreement Establishing an International Classification for Industrial Design, bringing the number of member States to 38 and 21, respectively. The number of States parties to the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) rose to 63 with the accession of Belarus, China, the Czech Republic, Latvia, the Niger, Slovakia, Slovenia, Trinidad and Tobago, Uzbekistan and Viet Nam. Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, Kazakhstan, Slovakia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Uzbekistan joined the Madrid (International Registration of Marks) Agreement, bringing the number of States parties to 38. With the adherence of Côte d'Ivoire and Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) to the Hague (International Deposit of Industrial Designs) Agreement, membership increased to 23. Brazil, Chile, the Czech Republic and Slovakia became parties to the Treaty on the International

Registration of Audiovisual Works, bringing the number of member States to 9.

The 17 treaties in the two main fields of intellectual property administered by WIPO in 1993 were as follows, listed in order of the year of adoption:

Industrial property: Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property; Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source on Goods; Madrid Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Marks; The Hague Agreement Concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs; Nice Agreement Concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purpose of the Registration of Marks; Lisbon Agreement for the Protection of Appellations of Origin and their International Registration; Locarno Agreement Establishing an International Classification for Industrial Designs; PCT; Strasbourg Agreement Concerning the International Patent Classification; Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Microorganisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure; Nairobi Treaty on the Protection of the Olympic Symbol; Vienna Agreement Establishing an International Classification of the Figurative Elements of Marks.

Copyright and neighbouring rights: Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations; Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Brussels Convention Relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite; Treaty on the International Registration of Audiovisual Works.

Activities in 1993

Development cooperation

During 1993, technical, legal, industrial and commercial training was given to government officials and personnel through courses, study visits, workshops, seminars, training attachments abroad and on-the-job training by WIPO officials or consultants. Some 90 such events were organized mainly in developing countries. In addition, 80 study visits to both industrialized and developing countries were organized for officials of developing countries to provide basic instruction on industrial property or copyright, or specialized information in areas such as: computerization of industrial property office administration, the use of computerized patent information databases (including the use of CD-ROM technology), legal and economic aspects of industrial property, the administration of the collection and distribution of copyright royalties and the use of trademarks for marketing products and services. In all, 39 developing countries, 10 industrialized countries and 9 intergovernmental organizations hosted the courses and meetings or organized them jointly with WIPO for about 6,000 people from some 118 developing countries. Besides WIPO officials, some 165 outside experts were invited as speakers, about 40 per cent of whom were nationals of developing countries.

In 1993, the WIPO Academy was created with the aim of conducting encounter sessions on current intellectual property issues, at the policy level, for middle to senior government officials from developing countries. Three sessions, one each conducted in English, French and Spanish, were held for 35 officials from 33 developing countries. WIPO also awarded the first three long-term scholarships to three developing-country nationals for intellectual property law studies in an industrialized country.

WIPO officials and outside consultants undertook 202 missions to 76 developing countries to advise government authorities on upgrading administrative procedures, computerization, the provision of patent information services and setting up organizations for the collective administration of rights under copyright law.

WIPO continued to promote the use by developing countries of the vast resources of technological information contained in patent documents through its state-of-the-art search service, supplying some 450 search reports and copies of 2,550 patent documents to 20 Governments and institutions during 1993.

In January, WIPO hosted a meeting with the member States of the Association of South East Asian Nations and in October with the member States of the Common Market of the Southern Cone, to discuss cooperation in harnessing their respective intellectual property systems to achieve common economic and trade goals.

Setting of norms and standards

In May, the fifth session of the Committee of Experts on the Settlement of Intellectual Property Disputes Between States concluded that a sixth session was necessary to examine further proposals, which was subsequently approved by the WIPO General Assembly in September. The Preparatory Meeting for the Diplomatic Conference for the Conclusion of a Treaty on the Settlement of Intellectual Property Disputes Between States, which also met in May, was to be reconvened for a second part in conjunction with the Committee of Experts' sixth session in 1994.

Regarding the Draft Patent Law Treaty, the Assembly of the Paris Union, which met in April and September, asked the WIPO Director-General to convene an extraordinary session of the Assembly, when appropriate, to fix a date for continuing the Diplomatic Conference for the Conclusion of a Treaty Supplementing the Paris Convention as far as Patents are Concerned (Patent Law Treaty). The first part of the Conference took place in 1991.^a

A draft of the Trademark Law Treaty and Regulations was discussed by the Committee of Experts on the Harmonization of Laws for the Protection of Marks at its fifth (June) and sixth (November-December) sessions. At the latter session, the Committee of Experts reviewed the draft and agreed on various amendments. The Preparatory Meeting for the Diplomatic Conference for the Conclusion of the Trademark Law Treaty decided that the Director-General should convene the Conference from 10 to 28 October 1994.

In June, the third session of the Committee of Experts on a Possible Protocol to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works considered the norms the Protocol might contain to clarify or widen the rights of authors and other owners of copyright.

At its first session in June, the Committee of Experts on a Possible Instrument on the Protection of the Rights of Performers and Producers of Phonograms discussed the norms a possible future multilateral treaty should contain to ensure better international protection of the rights of performers and producers of sound recordings. At its second session in November, it completed the first examination of a proposal for a new instrument and identified a number of issues for further examination.

In September, the WIPO General Assembly approved the establishment of a WIPO Arbitration Center for the resolution of intellectual property disputes between private parties as from 1 July 1994. Four dispute-settlement procedures would be available to enterprises and individuals: mediation, arbitration, expedited arbitration (designed particularly for small-scale disputes) and a combined procedure, providing for mediation and, in default of settlement through mediation, arbitration.

International registration activities

Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). A proposal by the International Bureau for the Bureau to become an alternative receiving office under the PCT as at 1 January 1994, was approved by the Assembly of the PCT Union in September. The Assembly appointed the Spanish Patent and Trademark Office as an International Searching Authority and designated Chinese as a language in which an official text of the PCT was to be established.

In 1993, the number of record copies of international applications received by the International Bureau amounted to 28,577, an increase of 10.26 per cent over 1992. The average number of PCT contracting States designated per international application was 31.46. International applications thus replaced some 900,000 national applications.

During the year, the International Bureau organized some 50 information and training seminars for over 3,200 persons (government officials, lawyers and representatives of private circles) to promote the PCT. In addition, briefings were given at WIPO headquarters on the PCT and its operations.

At its fifteenth session in June, the PCT Committee for Technical Cooperation approved a new list of periodicals under the PCT minimum documentation and discussed the use of optical discs as data carriers for the exchange of patent documents forming part of the PCT minimum documentation between patent offices.

A June meeting of the International Searching and International Preliminary Examining Authorities under the PCT agreed on the modification to certain sections of the Administrative Instructions and to certain forms and PCT Search Guidelines.

The International Bureau continued to cooperate with the European Patent Office (EPO) and the United States Patent and Trademark Office in developing a system to enable applicants to prepare European, United States and international (PCT) applications in machine-readable form. The system, called EASY (Electronic Application System), would allow applicants to input the various data to be given in the request; to do automatic validity checks of such data; to prepare the remainder of the international application (description, claims and abstract) using a word processor; and submit the drawings as facsimile images. The International Bureau also concluded an agreement with EPO for the inclusion of the PCT data in ESPACE-ACCESS discs (a searchable index produced by the EPO) and explored further cooperation in the use of CD-ROM technology.

The first set of some 140 CD-ROMs containing the PCT international applications published in 1989 was issued in 1993 as part of a project to issue the whole backfile (1978 to 1989) of the 66,700 published PCT applications by the end of 1994.

Madrid Agreement. In 1993, 16,498 international trademark registrations were made by the International Bureau, 5 per cent more than in 1992. As the average number of countries covered by each international registration was 10, the international registrations in 1993 had the equivalent effect of some 165,000 national registrations. There were 4,264 renewals in 1993, 21 per cent less than in 1992.

The computerization of the International Trademark Register was completed in 1993. The entry and validation of data relating to some 280,000 international registrations in force in the System of Electronic Marks' Interrogation, Registration and Administration (SEMIRA) database were completed in May. Work continued on the Madrid Agreement and Madrid Protocol System (MAPS) and the MAPS Assisted Translation and Classification Help for Examiners System (MATCHES) computerized systems intended to facilitate the automatic classification and translation (English to French and French to English) of terms appearing in the list of goods and services under the Nice Classification. The MAPS system was designed to replace the existing SEMIRA system.

The Marks Information Optically Stored archiving and publishing system was upgraded in 1993. It was originally set up to rationalize documentation management and improve and facilitate access to the files of international registrations and their publication. Scanning of the backlog of more than 160,000 international registration files was completed.

The Read-Only Memory of Madrid Actualized Registry Information CD-ROM "biblio discs" (text only) were produced, compiling the relevant data of each international mark registered in the International Trademark Register. Digitalizing of the backlog image database (amounting to some 105,000 images) was completed and the first "image disc" (containing figurative elements of marks only) was issued, together with the monthly "biblio disc."

Hague Agreement. In 1993, the number of industrial design deposits, renewals and prolongations received by the International Bureau was 5,191, an increase of 8.53 per cent over the 1992 figure.

At its third session in April, the Committee of Experts on the Development of the Hague Agreement Concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs discussed a draft new act of the Hague Agreement Concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs prepared by the International Bureau on the basis of the outcome of the Committee's previous sessions. In November, the International Bureau published a revised version of the draft new act to be discussed by the Committee of Experts in 1994.

Countries in transition to market economies

WIPO invited officials of countries in transition to market economies for discussions at its headquarters and organized study visits to various countries. The International Bureau assisted those countries to prepare laws dealing with intellectual property and to establish administrative structures to implement those laws. Assistance and training were also offered in relation to accession to WIPO-administered treaties. The International Bureau, through seminars and special training courses, promoted awareness of the importance of intellectual property in those countries.

It also assisted the Interstate Council on the Protection of Industrial Property (which groups nine States of the former USSR, namely, Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Ukraine and Uzbekistan) in setting up a regional patent system under the proposed Eurasian Patent Convention.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, WIPO employed 426 staff members, drawn from 57 nationalities. Of these, 144 were in the Professional and higher categories, and 282 were in the General Service category.

Budget

WIPO's principle income was derived from ordinary and special contributions from member States and from international registration services (primarily under the PCT and the Madrid Agreement). Contributions were paid on the basis of a class-and-unit system by members of the Paris, Berne, International Patent Classification, Nice, Locarno and Vienna Unions and by WIPO member States not belonging to any of the Unions. Income in 1993 amounted to $93.5 million; expenditures totalled $73.5 million, of which $39.7 million was staff costs.

Chapter XVI

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), continued to provide concessional assistance for financing agricultural projects in developing countries. It was established in 1977 to achieve food security through increased agricultural production, and improved nutrition and income for the poorest rural populations, including the landless, marginal farmers, pastoralists, fisherfolk, indigenous peoples and poor women.

IFAD's membership rose to 150 during 1993 with the admission of Armenia, the Cook Islands and Kyrgyzstan. Of its member countries, 22 were in Category I (developed countries), 12 in Category II (oil-exporting developing countries) and 116 in Category III (other developing countries) (see Annex I).

The sixteenth session of the Governing Council of IFAD (Rome, Italy, 20-22 January) approved a 1993 budget of $50.4 million plus a contingency of $650,000. It appointed Fawzi Hamad Al-Sultan of Kuwait as its new President for a four-year term.

The Council endorsed the report and recommendations of the consultation on the fourth replenishment of the Fund's resources,^a established in 1992 to cover the period 1995-1997, and requested a final report and any recommendations thereon no later than at its seventeenth (1994) session.

The IFAD Executive Board held three regular sessions in 1993 (April, September and December), approving loans for 32 new projects, including seven loans under the Special Programme for Sub-Saharan African Countries Affected by Drought and Desertification (SPA) and one funded both from the Regular Programme and SPA resources. It also approved four technical assistance grants and a grant of $3 million for the Gaza Strip and Jericho Relief and Development Programme. At each session, the Board reviewed a number of policy and operational matters, including the Fund's liquidity, its lending terms and conditions, and a strategy for improving nutrition through its rural investment projects. The Board reviewed reports on the management of IFAD's Investment Portfolio and approved a transfer of $5 million to the General Reserve for 1993, bringing the total Reserve to $90 million as at 31 December.

The Board approved a programme of work at a level of special drawing rights (SDRs) 230 million for loans and grants under the 1994 Regular Programme, and endorsed a budget of $50.9 million, including a contingency of $350,000. Also approved were the programme of work and estimated administrative expenditures of SPA for 1994 of SDR 22 million and $5.15 million respectively, including a contingency of $75,000.

Resources

Member States pledged $567.4 million in the third replenishment of resources for the period 1990 to 1994. In October, a consultation on the fourth replenishment of the Fund's resources (Rome, 23-24 October) agreed, subject to agreement between countries in Categories I and II with respect to burden-sharing, that $600 million would be an appropriate target for the fourth replenishment covering the period 1995-1997.

Contributions to the second and final phase of SPA (SPA-II), initiated in 1992, amounted to $91 million at the end of 1993. Total commitments made to SPA since its inception in 1986 amounted to $364 million, of which $342 million was in loans.

Activities in 1993

Loans and technical assistance grants approved in 1993 under the Regular Programme and SPA totalled SDR 276.5 million ($383.1 million), 16 per cent above the 1992 level in terms of SDRs. The amount allocated covered 33 projects worth SDR 264.6 million ($366.5 million) and 58 technical assistance grants worth SDR 11.9 million ($16.5 million). Twenty-seven loans amounting to SDR 221.15 million ($306.2 million) were financed from the Fund's Regular Programme and seven loans totalling SDR 43.45 million ($60.3 million) from SPA, including one loan financed from both Programmes. Of 58 grants, 44 amounting to SDR 9.8 million ($13.67 million) were financed from the Fund's Regular Programme. An additional 14 grants were funded by IFAD for SDR 2 million ($2.85 million). The average size of lending per project in 1993 was SDR 8.3 million ($11.5 million).

Under the Regular Programme, twenty-five projects were initiated by IFAD, with 69 per cent of them co-financed with other donors.

During the year, 14 projects in 14 African countries were approved for a total of SDR 111.6 million ($154.6 million) under the Regular Programme and SPA combined. The countries of ^aYUN 1992, p. 1169.

Sub-Saharan Africa received 45 per cent of that amount. The projects dealt with rural resources management in Burundi; restructuring of national agricultural services in Côte d'Ivoire; cooperative development in Ethiopia; rural enterprises in Ghana; horticulture and traditional food crops in Kenya; rural finance and enterprise support in Lesotho; agricultural services and rural financial services in Malawi; artisanal fisheries in Mozambique; agricultural support in Nigeria; national smallholders support in Sao Tome and Principe; smallholder agricultural development in Swaziland; extension and rural financial services in the United Republic of Tanzania; and smallholder dry areas resources development in Zimbabwe.

Six projects in the Asia and the Pacific region, involving SDR 66 million ($91.1 million), focused on integrated agricultural production and water management in Bangladesh; agricultural development in areas inhabited by minorities in Yunnan Province, China; financial services for the rural poor in India; rural development in Papua New Guinea; financial services for small-scale crop and livestock producers on the outer islands in Tonga; and participatory resource management in Viet Nam.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, seven projects received loans of SDR 47.8 million ($66.2 million) to deal with low-income family support in Brazil; agricultural production efficiency in the Dominican Republic; self-sustained agricultural development in Honduras; the capitalization of small farmers in Nicaragua; rural development in Panama; support for smallholders in Suriname; and smallholder support through diversification of farm production in Uruguay.

The Near East and North Africa region, which also covered Albania, Somalia and the Sudan, received SDR 39.3 million ($54.6 million) in 1993 under the Regular and Special Programmes combined. The projects dealt with rural development in Albania; assistance to poor rural families in the Gaza Strip and Jericho; income diversification in Jordan; agricultural services in the Sudan; integrated agricultural development in Tunisia; and environmental protection in Yemen.

Workshops on rural development project implementation were held in Gabon (Libreville, 3-8 May) and Morocco (Marrakech, 26 October-4 November), and the Agricultural Management Training Programme for Africa, initiated in 1984 in cooperation with the World Bank, continued to enhance the management capacity of government and project staff involved in agricultural development. As a follow-up to the Geneva Declaration for Rural Women adopted by the Summit on the Economic Advancement of Rural Women in 1992,^b IFAD prepared strategy papers and guidelines for project gender analysis and completed case studies on women in development in IFAD projects in Bolivia, Dominica, Egypt, Lesotho, Nepal and Papua New Guinea. Among projects approved in 1993, 15 targeted women as major beneficiaries.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the IFAD secretariat had a total of 259 staff, of whom 105 were in the Professional and higher categories and 154 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

Total revenue under the Regular Programme for 1993 was $176 million, consisting of $139.9 million of investment income, including gains of $6.9 million resulting from active portfolio management and $35.9 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total operational and administrative expenses for the year amounted to $44 million (including an exchange gain on operations of $.7 million), compared with a budget, before contingency, of $49.3 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $131 million.

Total revenue under SPA for 1993 was $14.9 million, consisting of $14 million of investment income, including gains from active portfolio management of $200,000 and $900,000 from interest and service charges on loans. Total expenses for the year amounted to $3.5 million, compared with a budget, before contingency, of $5.9 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $11.5 million.

Chapter XVII

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

In 1993, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued its activities in the areas of industrial operations, strategies and promotion. Its special programmes supported industrial growth and restructuring and included the Industrial Development Decade for Africa, assistance to least developed countries, industrial cooperation among developing countries, integration of women in industrial development, cooperation with industrial enterprises and non-governmental organizations, environment and private sector development.

The fifth session of the UNIDO General Conference, held at Yaoundé, Cameroon, from 6 to 10 December, focused on policy reform emphasizing advisory and technical services for private sector development and mobilizing investment and other resources. It approved a new organizational structure and readjustment of the work programme and budgets for the biennium 1994-1995.

The Industrial Development Board held its fifth special (January), resumed tenth (March), and eleventh sessions (June/July, October and November). The Board dealt with UNIDO policies within the current 1992-1997 medium-term plan; future policies in accordance with the priorities in the 1994-1999 medium-term plan; cooperation in industrial development; guidelines for special trust funds; the 1994-1995 work programme and budget; and organizational and staff structure of UNIDO. The Programme and Budget Committee held its ninth regular and first additional sessions in April, June and November.

During the year, Azerbaijan, the Czech Republic, Kyrgyzstan, the Republic of Moldova, Slovakia, Tajikistan and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia joined UNIDO, bringing its membership to 166 as at 31 December 1993. Canada withdrew its membership effective 31 December (see Annex I).

Policy issues

In 1993, UNIDO established a policy framework and a corresponding reconfiguration of its organizational structure. The reform was made in the light of recent global economic, industrial and technological developments and comprised five objectives: industrial and technological growth and competitiveness; development of human resources for industry; equitable development through industrial development; environmentally sustainable industrial development; and international cooperation in industrial investment and technology.

Industrial strategies and operations

A total of 1,713 technical assistance projects valued at $118.8 million were implemented or under implementation in 1993. Africa (including the African Arab States) received 34.2 per cent; the Arab States, 2.8 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 26.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 9.2 per cent; and Europe, 3.3 per cent. Interregional and global projects accounted for 24.2 per cent.

Implementation of industrial operations

Agro-based industries. Technical cooperation expenditures for agro-based industries amounted to $13 million, of which some 14 per cent was financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). A total of 165 projects were implemented or under implementation. The projects focused on introducing cleaner technologies and pollution abatement in the food, leather and textile subsectors; developing and adapting suitable technologies for small- and medium-scale industries; rehabilitating industries through improved technology and management, better trained personnel and quality control; and developing and implementing large-scale programmes in the leather and footwear industry.

Chemical industries. Expenditures for technical cooperation in the chemical industry sector totalled $22.9 million, with 27 per cent financed by UNDP. A total of 280 projects were either implemented or under implementation in 1993. Reducing environmental impact of industrial operations remained central to the activities of the UNIDO Chemical Industries Branch. The transfer of cleaner production technologies, recycling technologies, treatment of industrial waste and the dissemination of those technologies constituted a major part of its work. As an implementing agency of the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer,^a UNIDO initiated projects in Brazil and Egypt to phase out chlorofluorocarbons in polymerfoam manufacturing. Other activities were carried out in the petroleum refining and petrochemical industries, industrial utilization of medicinal and aromatic plants, pharmaceuticals, the pulp and paper industries and safety in the development and use of pesticides.

Engineering industries. Expenditures in engineering industry projects amounted to $10.7 million, with approximately 71 per cent financed from UNDP resources. A total of 162 projects were implemented or under implementation in such areas as computer applications to industrial design; manufacturing; industrial maintenance and spare parts manufacture; electronic components and equipment; transportation; telecommunications equipment and systems; environmental protection and energy generation and consumption; and metalworking and machine tools.

Industrial human resource development. Expenditure for fellowship and other training components in all technical cooperation projects amounted to $14.3 million, as compared with $16.4 million in 1992. Of that total, $9.7 million was spent on fellowships and study tours and $4.6 million on group training activities and meetings. Expenditure for training that received substantive back-stopping from the Industrial Human Resource Development Branch amounted to $2 million, with some 3 per cent financed by UNDP. A total of 104 projects were implemented with emphasis on managerial training and development of human resources in advanced technologies, quality control and productivity techniques.

Industrial management and rehabilitation. Technical cooperation expenditures amounted to $3.3 million, with some 58 per cent financed by UNDP. A total of 63 projects were either implemented or under implementation. The industrial management programme emphasized the transfer of knowledge and technical know-how through training, seminars and workshops and enterprise restructuring projects. In the rehabilitation programme, a pilot project initiated in 1992 assisted 15 enterprises in Poland in 1993.

Industrial strategies and policies. Technical cooperation expenditures amounted to $5.2 million, with some 69 per cent financed by UNDP. Seventy-nine projects were implemented or under implementation. Technical cooperation focused on advice for industrial strategy and policy formulation and on capacity-building, including human resource development, networking for strengthened competitiveness, institutions and decision support systems. In the strategic management of industrial development, UNIDO continued 11 projects to upgrade competitiveness and productivity and to promote small-scale industries.

Institutional infrastructure. A total of 211 projects were implemented or under implementation, with expenditures amounting to $13.8 million, some 71 per cent of which was financed from UNDP resources. Technical cooperation activities focused on small- and medium-scale industries and institutional support for industrial development.

Metallurgical industries. Technical cooperation expenditures in metallurgical industries amounted to $4.6 million, with some 65 per cent financed by UNDP. A total of 81 projects were implemented or under implementation. Environment management and cleaner production in the iron and steel sector were addressed through programmes in Africa, South-East Asia, Eastern Europe and Latin America and the Caribbean. In the foundry and metal transformation sector, projects in Colombia, Indonesia and Sri Lanka focused on private sector foundries and provided technical and administrative assistance and investment advice.

Industrial promotion

Industrial promotion activities focused on reinforcing links in the areas of industrial investment, consultations and industrial technology development and promotion.

Industrial investment programme. A total of 171 investment promotion projects were concluded in 1993 amounting to $954.4 million. The total value of technical cooperation activities implemented was $19.6 million. Identification missions led to 12 new project proposals on industrial cooperation in Asia, Eastern Europe and Latin America. Of the 171 projects concluded, 21 projects, representing $22.3 million, were in Africa; 62 valued at $239.6 million were in Asia and the Pacific; 39 amounting to $204.2 million were in Latin America and the Caribbean; and 49 costing $488.3 million were in the Arab countries, Europe and the Mediterranean.

Technical cooperation for feasibility studies amounted to $8.3 million, with 8 interregional/global, 10 intercountry and 60 country projects in 40 countries under implementation. The Industrial Development Fund was the major source of financing, followed by UNDP, trust funds and the UNIDO Regular Programme of Technical Cooperation.

Industrial technology development and promotion. Under a new UNIDO programme, guidelines on the revitalization of industrial technology research institutes were finalized in cooperation with the International Development Research Centre (Canada) and the Third World Academy of Sciences (Italy).

An outcome of the new programme was a technical cooperation project between institutes in Thailand and Chile for the commercialization of research and development and for the development of policies and strategies for applied research. A project was approved to establish a network of institutions and organizations for monitoring and assessing selected technologies. Under the programme, activities continued in the areas of industrial and technological information; technology promotion; and technology policy, acquisition and negotiation.

System of Consultations. The UNIDO System of Consultations, a mechanism for achieving the goals of the 1975 Lima Declaration and Plan of Action on Industrial Development and Cooperation,^b principally to restructure world industry and increase the share of developing countries in world production, held four consultations during 1993: the First Consultation on the Construction Industry (Tunis, Tunisia, 3-7 May); the Regional Consultation on the Industrial Utilization of Medicinal and Aromatic Plants in Asia and the Pacific (Vienna, 5-8 July); the Regional Consultation on Animal Feed and Related Industries in Africa (Vienna, 5-8 October); and the Consultation on Downstream Petrochemical Industries in Developing Countries (Tehran, Iran, 7-11 November).

Other activities included a workshop on developing the fisheries industry of the islands in the Western Indian Ocean (Antananarivo, Madagascar, June); a regional expert group meeting on software technology and cooperation initiatives (Curitiba, Brazil, December); a workshop on improving the performance of industrial plants for English-speaking African countries (Kampala, Uganda, November); a workshop on rehabilitation and privatization of industries (Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania, September); and a workshop on measures to improve the competitiveness of the sugar cane industry in Africa (Port Louis, Mauritius, December).

Area programmes

UNIDO developed, implemented and monitored operational programmes at country, subregional and regional levels. Project approvals from UNDP indicative planning figure resources, cost-sharing, cash-counterpart and special measures in 1993 amounted to $9.3 million. Of the 59 technical support services at the programme level (TSS-I) projects approved by the UNDP Governing Council for the 1992-1993 biennium for implementation by UNIDO,^c 56 were implemented at a value of $3.2 million. During the year, 150 country programme and five regional programme reviews were undertaken. A total of 1,369 project ideas and concepts were identified, among which 380 projects were developed for appraisal and approval.

Second Industrial Development Decade for Africa (1993-2002)

Under the programme for the Second Industrial Development Decade for Africa (IDDA),^d $4.5 million was allocated in 1993 for technical cooperation, of which $4.02 million was delivered. Regarding country projects, high priority was given to agricultural machinery, investment promotion, engineering, food processing, textiles, chemicals, in particular pharmaceuticals, management and rehabilitation and human resources development. Regional projects emphasized the agro-industries, particularly leather and food, technology transfer, feasibility studies, energy and environment and human resources development. Nearly $900,000 worth of projects were implemented under co-financing arrangements. Projects for the least developed countries (LDCs) accounted for the bulk of activities.

Under the supplementary activity component, $1,862,100 was allocated for 1993. Delivery totalled $2,301,563 (including carry-over funds from 1992) and covered activities related to financial resources mobilization, investment promotion, support for technology acquisition and negotiation, human resources development emphasizing local entrepreneurship and integration of women in industrial development.

Assistance to LDCs

UNIDO assistance to LDCs focused on the follow-up activities related to the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the 1990s.^e Activities focused on human resources development; industrial development in rural areas; macroeconomic conditions and mobilization of financial resources for industrial development; development of the industrial service, scientific and technological base; and integration of women in industrial development. Development of "seed" programmes for LDCs continued to be an important initiative of UNIDO.

New approvals generated for LDCs amounted to $8.4 million, representing 67 projects, while net approvals amounted to $7.4 million with delivery level reaching $20 million.

A ministerial-level symposium on financing the industrial action programme was held in Cameroon.

Industrial cooperation among developing countries

UNIDO continued to support economic and technical cooperation among developing countries. In 1993, special attention was given to promoting cooperation among business enterprises in the South. Some 30 projects were implemented, among them one between China and Viet Nam in the machine tool industry; and a workshop on Brazil's achievements in computer applications in the textile and apparel industries.

In addition to an expert group meeting on patents, licensing and know-how in the petrochemical industries (Manama, Bahrain, November), five technical workshops/expert group meetings were held in industrial processing of medicinal plants (Panajachel, Guatemala); research and development of mineral resources (Hyderabad, India); direct reduction process of iron ore (Cairo, Egypt); processing of lead and zinc sulphide ores (Guangzhou, China); and cooperation in small- and medium-scale industries (Manama).

Integration of women in industrial development

The UNIDO programme and plan of action for the integration of women in industrial development (1990-1995) featured activities to mainstream women within UNIDO technical cooperation, study and research activities and projects specifically targeting women. Women-in-development experts were attached to country programming missions (Burundi, Mozambique, Niger and Sierra Leone) and to programming missions for the development of the small- and medium-scale industrial sectors (Cameroon, Ghana and Zambia). Projects for the development and transfer of appropriate technologies continued to be implemented in the area of food processing with the introduction of energy-saving and environmentally sound technology. A database containing information notes on women in industry for 102 developing countries was further strengthened.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, 1,238 staff members served at headquarters, of whom 405 were in the Professional and higher categories and 833 in the General Service and related categories.

Technical cooperation

UNIDO continued to focus its technical cooperation activities mainly on developing countries, with the net value of project approvals totaling $79.2 million, as compared to $113.6 million in 1992. Of that amount, $56.9 million represented non-UNDP-funded activities. Total technical cooperation delivery in 1993 amounted to $118.8 million.

Budget

The UNIDO General Conference in 1991 approved the regular budget for the 1992-1993 biennium at a level of $181,013,400, to be financed from assessed contributions from member States, in both United States dollars and Austrian schillings (AS). On the basis of an exchange rate of $1.00 = AS 12.90, member States were assessed $179,262,600, consisting of $19,718,900 plus the equivalent in dollars of AS 2,058,116,310. For the Regular Programme of Technical Cooperation, including IDDA, the sum of $10,755,700, which had been appropriated by the General Conference in 1991 at the same exchange rate, was adjusted in 1993 to $12,149,800 at the biennial average rate of exchange of $1.00 = AS 11.26. That comprised $4,580,100 for the technical cooperation component of IDDA and $7,569,700 for the other components.

To deal with the situation caused by UNIDO's continuing cash-flow difficulties, the General Conference, in 1993, decided to allow the temporary allocation of the unutilized balances of the 1990-1991 appropriation in the amount of $8,746,822.

Chapter XVIII

Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)

During 1993, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) continued to serve as a multilateral instrument with the principal objective of liberalizing international trade to facilitate economic growth and development. It provided agreed rules for international trade and served as a forum in which countries could discuss trade problems and negotiate the reduction of various restrictive and distortive measures.

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment (Havana, Cuba, November 1947–March 1948) drew up a charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) and established an Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO). The charter of ITO was never accepted, but the Conference's Preparatory Committee members negotiated tariffs among themselves and drew up GATT, which entered into force on 1 January 1948. Since then, ICITO has served as the GATT secretariat.

The most authoritative body of GATT, the Session of Contracting Parties, postponed to January 1994 its forty-ninth (1993) regular session because of intense activities in the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations.

In 1993, the number of Contracting Parties to GATT rose to 114 with the addition of Bahrain, Brunei Darussalam, the Czech Republic, Dominica, Fiji, Mali, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Slovakia and Swaziland (see Annex I).

Multilateral trade negotiations

Uruguay Round

The Uruguay Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations, launched in September 1986^a at Punta del Este, Uruguay, was concluded by 15 December 1993 at Geneva. The Uruguay Round, which would expand world trade by $755 billion annually by the year 2002, produced the most comprehensive trade agreement ever, with new multilateral rules for liberalizing trade in goods and services, intellectual property rights and investment measures.

The Uruguay Round package consisted of a Final Act comprising some 28 new agreements and national schedules on tariff concessions and initial commitments for liberalizing trade in services. The Trade Negotiations Committee—the most senior body of the Uruguay Round—approved a work programme for the post-Round period, including recommendations on the subject of trade and environment for adoption at a Ministerial meeting to sign the Final Act in April 1994 in Marrakesh, Morocco.

The Uruguay Round package, intended to improve market-access, was estimated to produce world income gains of $235 billion and trade gains of $755 billion annually by the year 2002. Developed countries' tariffs on industrial products were reduced by 38 per cent, lowering average duties from 6.3 to 3.9 per cent. Tariff bindings (maximum duties) would cover 99 per cent of industrial products entering developed countries and 72 per cent for developing countries. The General Agreement on Trade in Services had three major elements: the Framework Agreement containing basic obligations (such as most-favoured-nation and national treatment); the annexes addressing the special situations of individual services sectors (financial services, telecommunications, air transport, movement of labour); and market-opening commitments submitted by participants that would be the subject of further liberalization in future rounds of negotiations.

The Uruguay Round produced the most extensive agreement on intellectual property ever negotiated, covering patents, copyrights, the rights of performers and producers of sound recordings, trademarks, geographical indications including appellations of origin, industrial design, layout designs of integrated circuits and trade secrets. Other agreements provided for the progressive integration of textiles and clothing products into the GATT rules over a ten-year period; greater liberalization of trade in agriculture; and bringing all measures affecting import and export competition under more effective GATT rules and disciplines. They also strengthened disciplines and clarified current rules on anti-dumping, subsidies and countervailing measures, safeguards, customs valuation, import licensing and technical barriers to trade. New rules would cover trade-related investments, rules of origin and preshipment inspection. The rules and procedures relating to settlement of disputes would also improve.

GATT, which existed on a provisional basis, would become a permanent world trade body through the establishment of the World Trade Organization (WTO) on 1 January 1995 to implement the results of the Round. (See also PART THREE, Chapter IV.)

Implementation of the Tokyo Round agreements

The agreements of the Tokyo Round (1973-1979), the seventh round of multilateral trade negotiations, concluded with a major package of tariff concessions, agreements on non-tariff measures and an improved legal framework for GATT. Various committees established at the conclusion of the Tokyo Round continued to supervise tariff schedules, administer the new agreements and provide a forum for discussing related issues.

Reports received by the Committee on Anti-Dumping Practices covering the period 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993 indicated that among the 26 parties to the Agreement on Anti-Dumping Practices, 68 investigations had been initiated by the United States, 61 by Australia, 37 by Canada, 33 by the European Community (EC), 24 by Mexico, 7 by the Republic of Korea, 4 each by Austria, Brazil and New Zealand and 3 by India. Complete data for outstanding final actions (definitive duties or price undertakings) were not available for all signatories. For those signatories notifying such data, measures in force stood at 662 as at 30 June. Most of the measures were accounted for by the United States (279), EC (185), Canada (81) and Australia (64). Dumped products were defined as those sold to an importer at a price lower than that charged by the producer in his domestic market.

Six of the 24 signatories to the Subsidies and Countervailing Measures Agreement initiated countervailing duty investigations during the period 1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993: the United States had initiated 42, Australia, 12; Austria, 4; Chile, 2; Brazil, 1; and EC, 1. Two dispute settlement panels were established, one to examine the imposition by Brazil of provisional and countervailing duties on certain types of milk from EC and another to examine the imposition by the United States of countervailing duties on certain steel products originating in several EC member States. A panel report was adopted on United States measures affecting the export of softwood lumber from Canada.

In December, an informal Working Group established by the Government Procurement Committee adopted the text of a new agreement on Government Procurement to replace the current Government Procurement Code in 1996. The new Agreement covered services, including construction services; procurement at the sub-central level (states, provinces, departments and prefectures); and procurement by public utilities. Although the Agreement, which would apply to contracts above certain thresholds in value, was considered a balanced package, participants intended to expand the coverage further, prior to its signature in April 1994.

In 1993, the Czech Republic, Indonesia, Malaysia, Morocco, Slovakia and Thailand signed the Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade, bringing the total number of signatories to 45. Observer status was granted to Saudi Arabia and Taipei. In May and November, the Committee on Technical Barriers to Trade dealt with the implementation and administration of the Agreement and its annual review. The Committee on Customs Valuation examined national legislation of Argentina, Mexico and Romania relating to the implementation and administration of the Customs Valuation Agreement. At the end of 1993, there were 29 signatories to the Agreement on Import Licensing Procedures. The Committee on Import Licensing examined replies from 12 signatories to a GATT questionnaire on the subject.

Other GATT activities

Special session of Contracting Parties

The Contracting Parties held a special session on 9 June and appointed Peter Sutherland (Ireland) Director-General of GATT with effect from 1 July 1993. Because of the intense Uruguay Round activities, the forty-ninth regular session of the Contracting Parties was postponed to January 1994.

Council of Representatives

In 1993, the Council of Representatives, GATT's highest body between sessions of the Contracting Parties, oversaw a large number of requests for accession to GATT as well as for observer status. During the year, it established working parties to examine requests for accession.

Trade and development

The Committee on Trade and Development continued to review, discuss and negotiate trade issues of interest to developing countries. In 1993, the Committee considered follow-up activities to the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED),^b regional trade arrangements between developing countries and the extension of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) to economies in transition. The Committee resolved a procedural debate in GATT regarding the Southern Common Market ^bYUN 1992, p. 670.

Agreement between Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. During the year, Australia, Austria, Finland, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden and the United States notified the Committee of their respective GSP schemes.

Trade and environment

At the conclusion of the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations, the Trade Negotiations Committee decided to draw up a comprehensive work programme on trade, environment and sustainable development for adoption at the ministerial meeting scheduled for April 1994. The Group on Environmental Measures and International Trade and the Committee on Trade and Development examined connections between trade and environment as a follow-up to UNCED, in particular, the trade provisions of existing multilateral environmental agreements, the transparency of trade-related environmental measures and the trade effects of packaging and labelling requirements.

Textile arrangement

On 9 December, the Textile Committee decided to maintain in force the Multifibre Arrangement (MFA), as extended by the 1986 Protocol for a further period of 12 months from 1 January to 31 December 1994, since the Uruguay Round had not been completed at that time. MFA had governed much of the world's trade in textiles and clothing since 1974.

Technical cooperation

The GATT secretariat's Technical Cooperation Division conducted some 47 technical cooperation missions to developing countries in 1993 to assist officials in preparing draft schedules of concessions and commitments on market access and offers of initial commitments on services. Particular attention was paid to helping least-developed and smaller developing countries in Africa. It also organized several general seminars on GATT and the Uruguay Round in countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Technical missions were sent to Bolivia and Peru to assist with preparations for trade policy review. In November, the Committee on Trade and Development stressed the importance of strengthening the effectiveness of the Division's work to better assist developing countries in the implementation of the results of the Uruguay Round.

Training programme

From the programme's inception in 1955 to the end of 1993, a total of 1,341 trade officials from 123 countries and 10 regional organizations attended GATT trade policy courses. In 1993, two regular 14-week courses were held, one in English and one in French. Switzerland provided financial assistance for a workshop on negotiating techniques as part of the course.

To facilitate the integration of Central and Eastern European countries into the multilateral trading system, the GATT secretariat held another nine-week special trade policy course (Geneva, May) attended by officials from Albania, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Georgia, Hungary, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, the Republic of Moldova, Romania, the Russian Federation, Slovakia, Ukraine and Uzbekistan.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre (ITC), established by GATT in 1964 and operated jointly with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development since 1968, implemented various technical cooperation activities with GATT in 1993. GATT and the United Nations contributed equally to the ITC regular budget, which totalled $18.3 million in 1993. The Centre's technical cooperation activities with developing countries in trade promotion amounted to $24.6 million, with some 96 national, 49 regional and 88 interregional projects under implementation. During the year, ITC focused on trade and environment, women in trade development and export-based rural development.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1993, the GATT secretariat employed 446 staff members (including temporary posts connected with the Uruguay Round negotiations)—195 in the Professional and higher categories and 251 in the General Service category.

Budget

Member countries of GATT contributed to the budget in accordance with a scale assessed on the basis of each country's share in the total trade of the Contracting Parties and associated Governments. The total budget for 1993 was 89,040,000 Swiss francs, or approximately $59.9 million. (The United Nations rate of exchange as at 31 December 1993 was SwF 1.49 = US$1.)

⁽²⁾Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

⁽³⁾Through accession of the German Democratic Republic to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, the two German States (both of which became United Nations Members on 18 September 1973) united to form one sovereign State. As from that date, the Federal Republic of Germany has acted in the United Nations under the designation Germany.

⁽⁴⁾On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. By a telegram of 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

⁽⁵⁾On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

⁽⁷⁾Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar, on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

⁽⁸⁾Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947 and Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and have since been represented as one Member.

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971, and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom, to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles.

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco, or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph Kb) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1(c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23¹

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the ¹Amended text of Article 23, which came into force on 31 August 1965. (The text of Article 23 before it was amended read as follows:

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.)

assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27²

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.
3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.
2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.
3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.
2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims, or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

²Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965. (The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61³

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connexion with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

³Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973. (The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.)

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 77

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING

NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories, and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and

- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
 - b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
 - c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.
2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79, and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendments, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
 - b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
 - c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.
2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV
THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI
MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connexion with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII
TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII
AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109⁴

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX
RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

⁴Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968. (The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I
ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-

General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.

2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.

2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.

2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.

3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.

4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.

5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.

6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.

7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.

2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- a. the interpretation of a treaty;
- b. any question of international law;
- c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V

AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.
