I. Introduction

1. This report has been produced, on the request of the Secretary-General, by the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), in response to the General Assembly's request for a detailed report by the Secretary-General containing recommendations on the implementation of GA Resolution 48/218B as it pertains to the internal oversight functions of the United Nations operational funds and programmes.

2. In pursuing this mandate, OIOS contacted the funds and programmes to obtain information about their internal oversight mechanisms. In this context, OIOS has identified organizational structures and procedures established by the funds or programmes, or provided to them by OIOS, which enable them to exercise internal oversight to varying degrees. This identification or stock-taking of internal oversight in the funds and programmes was the first step in a process leading to the eight recommendations contained in paragraphs 38-45 of this report. These recommendations suggest methods by which the Office can assist funds and programmes in enhancing their internal oversight mechanisms, as called for in GA Resolution 48/218B, paragraph 11. They have been drafted with a view toward enabling the General Assembly to formulate a policy to be implemented by the governing bodies of the funds and programmes in question with regard to their oversight functions. They are made without prejudice to the independent authority of OIOS under General Assembly Resolution 48/218B to fulfill its responsibilities.

3. OIOS has made every effort to actively involve all concerned entities in the different stages of the stocktaking. To reinforce the accuracy of the observations, broaden the perspective of the analysis and corroborate the soundness of the recommendations, surveyed funds and programmes, and external entities were involved in the information gathering and verification process as well as the analysis of findings.

4. While this report was being prepared, several funds and programmes took measures to enhance their internal oversight services by establishing new, or restructuring their existing internal oversight functions, or by initiating a closer cooperation with OIOS. For example, the Governing Council of UNEP expressed its desire to work closely with the Office of Internal Oversight Services and requested the Executive Director to formulate and enact, in consultation with OIOS, a specific plan of action to prevent waste, fraud and mismanagement (UNEP/GC.18/40, May 25, 1995). The Secretary-General welcomes these developments as they confirm that funds and programmes have recognized the necessity to strengthen their internal oversight functions. OIOS, in acknowledging the evolving nature of the UN system, does not attempt to offer a definitive picture of recent developments but only seeks to indicate current trends.

II. Scope

5. This report considers the following operational funds and programmes:
 1. International Trade Centre (ITC)
 2. United Nations Habitat and Human Settlement Foundation (UNCHS/Habitat)
 3. Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP)
 4. United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)
 5. Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP)
 6. United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA)
 7. Voluntary Funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)
 8. United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF)
 9. United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR)
 10. United Nations Office of Project Services (UNOPS)
 11. United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA)
 12. United Nations University (UNU)
 13. World Food Programme (WFP)

6. The legal status of these funds and programmes has been defined by or with the involvement of the General Assembly, and their executive heads are appointed by, or with the involvement of the Secretary-General. Furthermore, with the exception of the World Food Programme, they are all audited by the United Nations Board of Auditors.

7. Entities which are fully financed by the regular budget of the United Nations, such as UNCTAD, and those such as INSTRAW, UNRISD and UNIDIR which are financed by the Trust Funds administered by the United Nations, and hence are fully provided with internal oversight services of OIOS, have not been addressed in this report. Similarly, UNCDF, UNIFEM and UNV which are financed by the Trust Funds administered by UNDP are considered as part of UNDP, for purposes of this report.

8. Under current arrangements, OIOS provides all or part of the internal oversight services to the following funds and programmes: ITC, UNITAR, UNRWA, UNU, Voluntary Funds of UNHCR, Fund of UNEP, UNCHS/Habitat and Fund of UNDCP. Funds and programmes whose internal oversight functions are at present provided separate from OIOS are: UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA, UNOPS and WFP.

III. Methodology

9. In undertaking the mandate of General Assembly Resolution 48/218B paragraph 11, the resolution was analyzed to extract those elements which defined the internal oversight function. A model was then developed of the internal oversight function which could be extended to the funds and programmes.

10. The next step was to prepare a questionnaire which was sent in June 1995 to all entities within the scope to obtain information which would allow the formulation of conclusions about the current status of internal oversight in the target funds and programmes.

11. Upon receiving the replies to the questionnaire, the data was catalogued and verified with each fund and programme by the end of September 1995. Taking into account that individual operational funds and programmes have differing, but equally viable organizational arrangements, the provision of oversight services was analyzed with regard to:

- (a) Adequacy, effectiveness and efficiency of services
 - adequacy of oversight responsibilities with respect to execution of all components of the oversight function (audit, evaluation, monitoring and inspection, investigation)
 - adequacy of personnel and budgetary resources
 - effectiveness of internal monitoring of the implementation of recommendations
 - efficiency of oversight services through coordination among oversight functions
 - effectiveness of designated organizational entity/person to receive allegations of waste, fraud and mismanagement
 - adequacy of protection of staff members who make allegations/report misconduct
- (b) Independence of oversight functions
 - operational independence guaranteed by the organizational structure
- (c) Accountability to governing body
 - accountability through regular, informative reports on developments of the oversight responsibilities with specific emphasis on reporting present findings as well as the implementation status of previous recommendations deriving from internal audits, evaluations, monitoring, inspections and investigations.

12. Finally, based on the analysis, certain recommendations were developed to enhance the oversight functions of the funds and programmes.

IV. Analysis

(a) Audit

13. This survey disclosed that all operational funds and programmes have long established audit functions with a clearly defined scope of work. As one would expect, the quantity and scope of audits varies with the size and objectives of the funds and programmes. One common characteristic seems to be the pronounced emphasis on management and programme audits over financial statement audits, which fall traditionally in the domain of external auditors.

14. Though some units have been reorganized as recently as 1992 (and OIOS itself established in 1994), the organizational structure, reporting lines, and internal reporting procedures were in all cases clearly defined. Audit services are generally provided by OIOS to funds and programmes financed through the regular United Nations budget. In addition, OIOS provides audit services to activities financed by extra-budgetary funds (ITC, UNCHS/Habitat, UNDCP, UNEP, UNHCR) through separately funded arrangements. OIOS communicates findings and recommendations of internal audits to the audited entity and follows up on the implementation of audit recommendations.

15. Within all operational funds and programmes that have audit units separate from OIOS, audit units are located in the office of the executive head. The organizational arrangement that brings audit under the authority of the executive or the assistant executive head is in some cases the result of relatively recent reorganizations. These efforts towards reorganization reflect the common understanding that in order to provide objective, impartial and candid assessments, the audit unit has to be granted operational independence from the entities subject to its scrutiny. In other words, the audit function is to be divorced from the administration of the entity.

16. In addition to the organizational structure, this survey looked at financial and human resources committed to the audit and evaluation functions. The commitment of resources should be viewed in the context of the operational scope of a fund or programme as this is the major determining factor for the allocation of resources for oversight services. From a general perspective, the commitment of financial resources to audit services is on average slightly higher than for evaluation services¹. It can be observed as a general principle that operational funds and programmes extensively involved in humanitarian relief (e.g. UNHCR) have higher audit than evaluation budgets. In contrast, funds and programmes primarily concerned with strategic or long-term programmes and projects (UNICEF, ITC, UNFPA) are likely to have comparatively higher expenditure on evaluations². Given the nature of humanitarian relief work, characterized by the necessity to respond to emergencies without time for thorough administrative planning, and often involving substantial cash transfers to geographically remote areas, the need for forceful audit entities is apparent.

17. OIOS will study cost saving measures for its activities away from United Nations Headquarters in New York and the United Nations Office in Geneva. OIOS is committed to employing its resources in the most efficient manner without compromising the integrity of its service. In particular, OIOS will investigate the possibility of cooperation with audit services of United Nations operational funds, programmes and specialized agencies with a regional presence in regions in which OIOS is engaged. OIOS is willing to provide services for other members of the UN system, but will also rely on services provided more cost efficiently by other entities as long as adherence to OIOS standards is guaranteed.

(b) Evaluation

18. Similar to audit, evaluation units are well established within all surveyed funds and programmes. However, the organizational structures are more diverse than in the case of audit. Within several funds and programmes, evaluation constitutes an integral part of the oversight function (UNCHS/HABITAT, ITC, UNHCR, UNICEF, WFP). While in others (UNEP, UNDCP, UNDP) evaluation is integrated in the strategic planning process. Other organizational arrangements include the merging of evaluation and inspection functions (UNHCR), combining the evaluation unit with a research office (UNICEF), or pairing evaluation and monitoring functions (UNICEF, UNDP). UNHCR is also a good example for the diversity of the evaluation function. The agency has been subject to an in-depth evaluation by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) in 1993 on the basis of an evaluation report by the OIOS Central Evaluation Unit. Besides, the agency has had its own, in-house evaluation function with a focus on field projects which complement the evaluation as performed by OIOS. All these organizational arrangements are equally viable and reflect the differing focuses of the individual entities. An entity that combines evaluation with inspection is more likely to view evaluation as a periodic but ad hoc procedure, while the philosophy underlying the integration of monitoring and evaluation stresses the continuity of the evaluation process.

² Note that UNDP's expenditure does not follow this characterization, neither does UNEP and UNCHS/ Habitat.

19. With regard to financial resources committed to evaluation functions, those funds and programmes with long-term commitments or a strategic agenda (ITC, UNEP, UNDCP, UNICEF) have relatively high evaluation expenditure ratios, reflecting their need to evaluate programmes and cooperation projects to determine their effectiveness and efficiency. On the other hand, relief operations have received a lower level of expenditure as evaluations against set targets seem to have a more limited application in an emergency setting, though, important "lessons learned" can and should also be derived from the evaluation of performance in this environment.

(c) Monitoring

20. ST/SGB/273 describes the monitoring function within OIOS as providing assistance "in implementing the provisions of article V of the Regulations and Rules governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring and Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation on monitoring of programme implementation. The Office shall also ensure that monitoring and self-evaluation are viewed as an integral part of managerial responsibility for the efficiency and effectiveness of programme performance."

21. The survey indicated the existence of monitoring units in some funds and programmes whereas in others monitoring tasks are currently accomplished through other organizational units (e.g. evaluation) or are integrated into managerial functions. In general, it is not viewed as necessary that each organizational fund or programme establish a monitoring unit. In particular, smaller entities or entities with a limited operational scope would not derive a substantial benefit from a monitoring unit. Establishing a new unit could simply lead to the diversion of scarce resources. OIOS encourages the development of the monitoring and self-evaluation functions as a managerial responsibility and will provide assistance with this task, if requested.

(d) Inspection

22. In the OIOS mandate, the scope of inspections is defined as "ad hoc inspections of programmes and organizational units whenever there are sufficient reasons to believe that programme oversight is ineffective and that the potential for the non-attainment of the objectives and the waste of resources is great [...]. These inspections shall recommend to management corrective measures and adjustments as appropriate." Organizationally, the inspection function in OIOS is part of the Monitoring and Inspection Unit, while the current arrangement in most funds and programmes gives the audit unit responsibility for inspections. OIOS is concerned that the latter arrangement might prove inadequate in certain cases where specialized knowledge of inspectors is necessary or where resources from audit can not be shifted quickly enough to address ad hoc inspection requirements. To address this concern, a "rapid reaction force" within the audit unit could be formally designated and trained to deal with ad hoc inspections.

23. In addition, and in order to ensure inspection coverage throughout the Organization, OIOS stands ready to cooperate with the funds and programmes should they decide to call on its inspection team rather than establishing a permanent inspection unit.

(e) Investigation

24. The OIOS Investigations Section was established to perform three general functions: to "investigate reports of violations of United Nations regulations, rules and pertinent administrative issuances and transmit to the Secretary-General the results of such investigations together with appropriate recommendations"; to "focus on assessing the potential within programme areas for fraud and violations... in high-risk operations as well as offices away from Headquarters"; and to receive and investigate reports "from staff and other persons engaged in activities under the authority of the Organization suggesting improvements in programme delivery and reporting perceived cases of possible violations of rules or regulations, mismanagement, misconduct, waste of resources or abuse of authority.... [S]taff members and others can make directly to the Office suggestions and reports which shall be received and handled in complete confidence." (emphasis added) ST/SGB/273 paras 16-18.

25. Of the surveyed funds and programmes, only WFP has established a unit that will carry out functions similar to those described above. Since the Office of Inspection and Investigation in the Office of the Executive Director (OEDI) was created in July 1995, its definitive terms of reference have not been formalized as of October 1995. While this initiative is noted, it is also suggested that an officer be designated to receive suggestions and reports. At the same time, procedures should be established to ensure the confidential treatment for those who submit suggestions and reports to OEDI. The chosen organizational structure of OEDI, i.e. bringing the investigation unit into the Office of the Executive Director, should guarantee its operational independence, integrity and credibility, although consideration must be given to a direct reporting relationship with the governing body as well.

26. All of the other operational funds and programmes do not have a separate investigative unit. Under current arrangements, OIOS will provide investigative services to all of these funds and programmes as necessary. However, if OIOS is to provide effective coverage in this area, it will be necessary to designate additional resources from extra-budgetary sources to the budget of the Investigations Section for posts and travel.

27. If any entity should decide that an investigation unit must be created internally, organizational structures have to be put in place that ensure the operational independence of the new unit. The investigation unit could be placed in the Office of the Executive Head and report to the governing body to guarantee impartial investigation services. In this event, the unit would have to be staffed with a sufficient number of trained, professional investigators and develop procedures which ensure confidential reporting of information with protection afforded both to those who make reports in good faith and to those who are the subjects of reports.

28. Additionally, the unit would need to develop and implement transparent terms of reference and an operating manual so that both the investigators and the other staff of the agency are made fully cognizant of the authority, jurisdiction, responsibilities, reporting relationships (notably to the head of the agency) and procedures of the investigation office.

29. The Investigations Section of OIOS stands ready to work with those funds and programmes who would try to establish investigative units. This service could be consultative, providing advice on the structuring and requirements of such a unit and sharing information on the development of internal systems, procedures and controls.

(f) Coordination Among Oversight Functions

30. In addition to surveying the organizational structure and scope of work of the individual oversight functions, this study has tried to identify successful measures to enhance the cooperation among internal oversight functions. Cooperation between oversight units can contribute to greater cost efficiency and create synergies. Consequently, close, cooperative ties should be maintained among these functions as well as with functions that are often related to the oversight function, but may be organizationally located in a different functional entity (e.g. in strategic planning).

31. The study of the operational funds and programmes found little evidence that the cooperation among oversight units is approached in a systematic or even institutionalized fashion. Rather, cooperation is generally based on informal meetings. Distinctive deviations from this general scheme exist within UNHCR and WFP where internal audit committees³ coordinate the general oversight process.

32. Beyond the examples given, diverse arrangements with varying degrees of institutionalization can be envisioned to coordinate the functioning of the oversight services. All funds and programmes, which have not already done so, should establish meetings to be attended by the heads or deputy heads of all oversight units including evaluation and potentially strategic planning. These meetings should be held at least monthly to discuss oversight issues of common interest and exchange relevant information.

(g) Monitoring of Implementation of Recommendations

33. The effectiveness of internal oversight services can be dramatically enhanced by instituting effective procedures for monitoring the implementation of recommendations. Currently, OIOS has one Compliance Officer in the Office of the Under-Secretary General, responsible for the coordination of monitoring the status of the implementation of recommendations. OIOS prepares a semi-annual report on the implementation of recommendations and the status of compliance with earlier recommendations by those entities that come under the authority of the Secretary-General. This internal report is submitted to the Secretary-General.

34. Implementation of agreed recommendations should be verified by the relevant internal oversight personnel. All funds and programmes have stressed that implementation of recommendations is monitored during subsequent reviews. This procedure can be enhanced by continuing the dialogue established with the addressee during the review process until all the recommendations are implemented. Therefore, it is strongly recommended that funds and programmes with independent oversight functions develop a mechanism for continually monitoring the implementation of recommendations. In addition, clear procedures should be established to address non-compliance with an approved implementation schedule and reporting to the executive head on the status of implementation of recommendations.

(h) Reporting Procedures

35. Closely related to monitoring implementation is the procedure for reporting to inter-governmental bodies on findings and the implementation status of previous recommendations. This procedure demonstrates to the inter-governmental body and other interested parties that the organization itself is constantly striving to use its resources effectively and efficiently.

36. OIOS submits to the Secretary-General for transmittal to the General Assembly an annual analytical and summary report on its activities. This annual report includes inter alia a description of significant findings and recommendations for corrective action made by the Office during the reporting period and an identification of each significant recommendation in previous reports on which corrective action has not been completed (ST/SGB/273, para. 28).

37. This study has found that most of the oversight functions of the funds and programmes are lacking adequate reporting procedures as also noted by the Joint Inspection Unit in their report entitled "Accountability, Management Improvement and Oversight in the United Nations System" [JIU/REP/95/2]. It is recommended that the reporting procedures of funds and programmes follow similar lines as established for OIOS' reports to the General Assembly. Therefore, the internal oversight units should be requested to submit, through their respective executive heads, periodic comprehensive reports and ad hoc reports on specific issues to their governing bodies. In the case of UNRWA, which reports directly to the General Assembly and has a separate audit function, it is suggested that significant audit reports should be submitted to the General Assembly after consultation with OIOS. For ITC, UNCHS/Habitat and UNDCP, there are established reporting lines to inter-governmental bodies, which are not within the strict definition of governing bodies, but which could assume this role for purposes of accountability. Following the underlying philosophy of General Assembly Resolution 48/218B, a reporting line for all funds and programmes to the General Assembly through OIOS should also be contemplated.

V. Recommendations

Recommendation 1

38. The results of our survey indicated the existence of dedicated monitoring units in some funds and programmes, whereas in others the monitoring tasks are accomplished through other organizational units. It is recommended that whatever organizational structure is used to perform the monitoring tasks, the monitoring concept be viewed and developed as part of the managerial responsibility. The unit performing the monitoring tasks should act as a facilitator, gathering the appropriate data and most importantly, independently analyzing and reporting on the implementation of programme activities.

Recommendation 2

39. The current arrangement gives the audit unit responsibility for the inspection function in most funds and programmes. In the experience of OIOS, specialized knowledge of the area to be inspected has been essential in forming the inspection team. Additionally, the inspection team must frequently be assembled on short notice, in reaction to a perceived problem. In order to address these two key components of inspection, it is recommended that consideration be given to forming separate inspection units in the larger funds and programmes. Where this is not practical, an inspection team should be formed within the audit unit which is trained to deal with these specialized tasks. OIOS also offers its assistance should a fund or programme decide not to establish their own inspection function.

Recommendation 3

40. Of the surveyed funds and programmes, only the WFP has established a unit similar to the OIOS Investigations Section. Currently, OIOS provides investigation services to any fund or programme if requested and the necessary priority is established. In order to provide more effective coverage, resources need to be allocated by the individual fund or programme to the budget of the Investigations Section. For those entities which decide to establish their own investigation function, the operational independence of the unit needs to be ensured along with the development of a confidential reporting facility and procedures to protect those who make reports in good faith or are the subject of such reports.

Recommendation 4

41. The study of the operational funds and programmes determined that in most instances, cooperation among oversight units is approached in a rather informal manner. It is recommended that regular monthly meetings be held among the heads of the oversight units and other units performing the designated oversight functions to discuss oversight issues and exchange information.

Recommendation 5

42. Surveyed funds and programmes have stressed that implementation of recommendations from oversight activities, is monitored during subsequent reviews. The effectiveness of the oversight function can be increased if more emphasis is placed on ensuring the timely implementation of recommendations. Therefore, it is strongly recommended that funds and programmes with independent oversight functions develop a mechanism for continually monitoring the implementation of recommendations. This mechanism should include procedures for addressing non-compliance and reporting on the status of implementation to the executive head.

Recommendation 6

43. The results of our survey indicate that most of the funds and programmes are lacking adequate reporting procedures. It is recommended that the reporting procedures of funds and programmes follow similar lines as those established for OIOS. Therefore, the internal oversight units should be requested to submit, through their respective executive heads, periodic comprehensive reports and ad hoc reports on specific issues to their governing bodies.

Recommendation 7

44. In order to further strengthen and unify reporting procedures, the Secretary-General recommends complementing the reporting line of OIOS to the General Assembly, with a report which contains summary records on internal oversight issues of each operational fund and programme. The sub-parts of the summary report would be drafted by the individual entities, making every effort to avoid duplication of reporting. The report would provide a tool for the General Assembly to monitor oversight activities within the individual organizations and provide a comprehensive overview of the achieved improvements and areas of concern to be addressed in the future.

Recommendation 8

45. In view of its responsibility for the enhancement of internal oversight mechanisms in the operational funds and programmes, and its coordinating role, OIOS should have the authority to seek and obtain any relevant information, specific or general, from the internal oversight entities or the concerned executive heads. OIOS should also have the right to comment, if necessary, on the quality and adequacy of the oversight activities of funds and programmes as they would be reported to the General Assembly following recommendation 7.
