Introduction

1. In its resolution 1991/24 of 5 March 1991, entitled "Development of public information activities in the field of human rights, including the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights", the Commission on Human Rights, reaffirming that activities to improve public knowledge in the field of human rights were essential to the fulfilment of the purposes of the United Nations set out in article 1, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and that carefully designed programmes of teaching, education and information were essential to the achievement of lasting respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and believing that a world public information campaign on human rights was a valuable complement to the activities of the United Nations aimed at the further promotion and protection of human rights worldwide, requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its forty-eighth session a report on public information activities with special emphasis on the activities of the World Campaign, including details of the costs incurred in 1991 and the budget envisaged for future activities, as well as a further assessment of the impact of the World Campaign activities undertaken by the United Nations in the field of human rights. The present report is submitted in conformity with that request.

2. It may be recalled that in its resolution 43/128 of 8 December 1988 the General Assembly decided to launch the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights. The launching of the World Campaign was the culminating point of a series of activities carried out worldwide by the United Nations, Governments and non-governmental organizations in order to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

3. The main objective of the World Campaign is to increase understanding and awareness of human rights and fundamental freedoms and to educate the public on the international human rights machinery and efforts of the United Nations to promote and protect human rights. It aims to build up a universal culture of human rights, one that clearly recognizes that human rights and fundamental freedoms are inherent in the human person without any distinction as to race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

4. In keeping with these objectives, the United Nations is increasingly developing its information and education programme, since information leading to awareness and knowledge of basic rights and freedoms represents an essential element for the universal implementation of the standards already set in the field of human rights. It is evident that in order to realize one's rights one has to know them. The five main areas of activity of the World Campaign are: preparation and dissemination of printed information and reference materials; workshops, seminars and training courses; fellowships and internships; special human rights observances; promotion activities.

I. CENTRE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

A. Printed material

1. Information material

5. In paragraph 9 of resolution 1991/24, the Commission requested the Department of Public Information to increase the print-run of the information and reference material produced by the United Nations, in particular the Fact Sheet series, for worldwide distribution. In keeping with that directive, the Centre for Human Rights continued the issuance of its information material, which is distributed to national and regional human rights institutions, academic and research institutions, the media, non-governmental organizations and concerned individuals.

6. Fact Sheets are translated into the six official United Nations languages and distributed worldwide free of charge. Owing to the increased demand, several Fact Sheets have been reprinted. 15. A new version of the booklet Human Rights: Questions and Answers, especially focused on the World Conference on Human Rights, is under preparation.

16. In paragraph 6 of resolution 1991/24, the Commission on Human Rights urged all Member States to include in their educational curricula materials relevant to a comprehensive understanding of human rights issues and encouraged the efforts of the Centre for Human Rights to develop a manual for higher education in the field of human rights, in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

17. In keeping with that directive, the Centre for Human Rights is proceeding with the elaboration of a manual on human rights teaching at university level. Coordination meetings with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization have been held at Geneva, Tunis and Paris and the cooperation and advice of international human rights experts has been sought.

C. Cooperation in the organization of and participation in other training courses, workshops and activities

21. Throughout 1991, the Centre for Human Rights co-sponsored, cooperated in the organization of or actively participated in more than 100 conferences, workshops, seminars, training courses, consultations and other meetings held all over the world. Participation in these events provided the opportunity to explain the aims and objectives of the World Public Information Campaign and to disseminate information on human rights issues. A list of these activities is attached as annex I.

D. Fellowships and internships

22. An unprecedented number of applications for the fellowship programme were received for 1991: 63 Governments proposed 92 candidates, of whom 41 were selected, on the basis of equitable geographic distribution, with priority being given, inter alia, to applicants from developing countries and to allocating a fair share of the fellowships to women. Details of the 1991 fellowship programme are provided in paragraphs 62 to 74 of the report on advisory services (E/CN.4/1992/49).

23. In the course of 1991, more than 75 internships were offered to outstanding graduate students to gain first-hand knowledge of United Nations action and procedures in the field of human rights through active participation in the work of the Centre for Human Rights, under the direct supervision of senior officials. Internships do not entail financial commitments of any kind by the Centre for Human Rights or the United Nations. The restructuring of the internship programme undertaken last year has permitted an improvement in the present system of responsibility for interns and the content of the internship programme.

II. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INFORMATION

24. To further the objectives of the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights to increase understanding and awareness of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the Department of Public Information (DPI) was requested by the Commission in paragraph 9 of its resolution 1991/24 to make full use of its available resources in the field of human rights in order to update and expand its stock of audio-visual materials on human rights. It also requested the Department to increase the print-run of information and reference materials for worldwide distribution.

25. As the Department that has primary responsibility for information activities, DPI coordinates the public information activities of the World Campaign and, as secretariat to the Joint United Nations Information Committee, promotes system wide information activities in the field of human rights. The Department continues to employ a coordinated multimedia approach to ensure the effective coverage of human rights activities as well as worldwide distribution of relevant information materials.

26. In the 1992-1993 programme budget, the Department continues to have a mandate under the thematic heading of human rights. It also continues to have mandates in such related areas as social, cultural and economic rights, and the rights of specific groups, and on other major issues, including activities against apartheid, the question of Palestine, self-determination, decolonization and the advancement of women. The Department's relevant activities are regularly reported to the General Assembly and to other intergovernmental bodies under each specific area or issue.

A. Activities in the field of human rights during 1990-1991

27. The multimedia approach of the Department in the field of human rights can be grouped into three broad areas: products, services and dissemination of information. These areas include: printed material; film, radio and television; photos and exhibits; press coverage including press conferences; media liaison; public inquiries; special events and activities; collaboration with non-governmental organizations; utilization of the resources of the 67 United Nations information centres and services; and inter-agency co-productions.

28. It should be noted that most of these activities, in such areas as radio and television, photos and exhibits, press coverage including press conferences, media liaison, public inquiries, the visitors' service, non-governmental organizations, United Nations information centres and services; and inter-agency co-productions, are not under the programme budget thematic heading of human rights and are therefore funded under other sections of the budget.

29. As reported to the Commission last year, originally under the thematic heading of human rights the Department was allocated $416,700 for the last biennium. However, $9,400 was added from the Special Programmes budget to increase the amount, which then totalled $426,100 for the 1990-1991 biennium.

30. In the biennium 1990-1991, the activities specifically mandated under the theme of human rights included: commemoration of Human Rights Day ($7,000); production of an illustrated text of the Convention on the Rights of the Child ($26,100); a 30-minute documentary about the work of the United Nations in the field of human rights ($162,000); production of 10 local language versions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights ($28,000); an educational video and study guide ($75,000); reprints and new language production of human rights instruments ($34,000); an international media round table on human rights for journalists ($45,000); production in Arabic, Chinese and Russian of a booklet entitled Human Rights: Questions and Answers ($28,600); publication of the biannual subscription and sales publication entitled Objective: Justice ($20,400); and continued acquisition of documentation and development of reference services on human rights at the libraries of the United Nations information centres and services.

31. A number of special events were organized at Headquarters to commemorate Human Rights Day on 10 December 1991. These included a Human Rights Day programme, sponsored by the Committee on Security and Independence of the International Civil Service, United Nations Staff Union, New York; the opening of the exhibition "Auschwitz: A Crime Against Humanity", both on 10 December; a special panel discussion on the occasion of Human Rights Day and the twenty fifth anniversary of the International Covenants on Human Rights and the premier screening of "New Horizons for Human Rights", a new film produced by the Department of Public Information, on 12 December; and the commemoration meeting of the General Assembly on the occasion of the anniversary of the International Covenants, on 16 December.

32. Among the new publications the Department completed in 1991 were: an illustrated publication on the Convention on the Rights of the Child (DPI/1101), in the six official languages; and a publication on the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (DPI/1055), in the six official languages.

33. One of the Department's major productions completed in 1991 was a 30-minute documentary film on human rights entitled "New Horizons for Human Rights". The film now available in English, will also soon be distributed in Arabic, French and Spanish.

34. Production of local language versions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights continued. Of the local language versions provided by the Centre for Human Rights to the Department in 1990-1991, 16 were printed during the biennium with the assistance of United Nations information centres and services. These included: Albanian, Burmese, Filipino, Finnish, Greek, Haitian Creole, Hausa, Hungarian, Indonesian, Maninka, Mikmaq, Portuguese (Brazilian), Pular, Romanian, Serbian and Sinhalese. It should be mentioned that several United Nations information centres have also reported the printing of local language versions of other human rights instruments and documents.

35. As part of the About the United Nations educational video series, the Department completed a video and an accompanying teaching guide on human rights, specifically the rights of the child. This video kit is available to academic institutions, non-governmental organizations and speakers on the United Nations.

36. In 1991 the Department began or completed 16 reprints and/or new official language productions of seven human rights instruments. These include: Principles of Medical Ethics (DPI/801), in Arabic and Russian; Declaration of the Right of Peoples to Peace (DPI/844), Arabic, Chinese and French; Declaration of the Human Rights of Individuals who are not Nationals of the Country in which they Live (DPI/894), in Russian; Declaration on Social and Legal Principles relating to the Protection and Welfare of Children, with Special Reference to Foster Placement and Adoption Nationally and Internationally (DPI/914), in Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish; Human Rights: Questions and Answers (DPI/919), in Chinese and Spanish; Universal Declaration of Human Rights poster (DPI/936), in Spanish; and Human Rights and Social and Economic Development: A Selection of Publications (DPI/1028), in French and Spanish.

37. The DPI International Journalists Round Table on Human Rights and the United Nations was held at Headquarters in New York from 14 to 16 October 1991. Five main topics were taken up in half-day sessions, consisting of presentations by main speakers and panel discussions, followed by questions and answer periods. The topics were: "United Nations action to protect and promote human rights", with as keynote speaker the Under-Secretary-General for Human Rights; "Human rights and AIDS/HIV", with as main speaker the Deputy Director of the WHO Global Programme on Aids, World Health Organization; "Peace, international humanitarian law and humanitarian issues", with as main speaker the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; "Social Justice and Economic Disparities", with the Director General of the United Nations Office at Vienna and Head of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs; and "Freedom of the press and safety of journalists", with the Executive Director of the Committee to Protect Journalists. The panel for each topic included United Nations officials, diplomats, journalists and experts from leading non-governmental organizations. Some 60 journalists from all regions attended. Among the participants were the 14 journalists who attended the DPI training programme for broadcasters and journalists from developing countries, being held in New York from 16 September to 25 October.

38. The Round Table provided an opportunity for expanded contacts and collaboration between the Department of Public Information and the International Committee of the Red Cross, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization, other United Nations agencies and offices, leading non-governmental organizations in the field of human rights and media organizations. This strengthened collaboration will greatly benefit the planning of future human rights-related activities.

39. The booklet Human Rights: Questions and Answers has now been printed in Arabic, Russian and Chinese in addition to English, French and Spanish.

40. The Department continues to issue Objective: Justice, a biannual subscription and sales publication. Its recent issues have focused on such issues as the International Covenants, the specialists who monitor human rights, racism and protecting the rights of migrant workers.

41. In paragraph 3 of its resolution 1991/24, the Commission requested the Secretary-General to ensure that recent periodic reports of States parties to treaty monitoring bodies and the summary records of discussion of them in treaty bodies be available in the United Nations information centres of the countries which had submitted them. The Centre for Human Rights informed the Department of Public Information in September that arrangements had been made for the Distribution and Sales Section at the United Nations Office at Geneva to provide all United Nations information offices with copies of relevant documentation. The Department subsequently informed all Centres of the arrangements and requested that they publicize the availability of these documents in their area(s), with special emphasis in those countries which had submitted reports to the treaty bodies.

42. The Department continued its efforts to ensure comprehensive documentation and reference services on human rights for various users at the libraries of United Nations information centres and services. In pursuance of paragraph 4 of Commission resolution 1991/24, DPI finalized, in cooperation with the Centre for Human Rights, a basic list of reference and information material on human rights. The replies received from the United Nations information offices were consolidated in 1991 and a comprehensive list was given to the Centre to enable it to provide basic documentation to the information centres that lack certain documentation on this issue. A chart indicating the status of basic human rights documentation at United Nations information centres and services is attached as annex II.

43. Four of the Department's feature articles issued during 1991 under the title United Nations Focus, in English, French and Spanish, have dealt with human rights issues. Numerous others have dealt with human rights-related subjects, including the rights of women. The four articles were entitled: "Searching for the pernicious roots of racism" (DPI/1150); "Human Rights Covenants" (DPI/1153); "Specialists who monitor human rights" (DPI/1155); and "The trade of shame: the sale of children" (DPI/1156). Two other articles, entitled "The limits of sovereignty" and "Traditional practices", were prepared for publication in early 1992.

44. The short animated film entitled "Brushstrokes", released by the Department in 1990, received two awards in early 1991 from the Association internationale d'animation. This film on prejudice is available in Arabic, English, French and Spanish.

45. In keeping with its role of coordinating the public information activities of the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights, the Department submitted a proposal to the Joint United Nations Information Committee at its thirty-fifth session in New York in June to establish an inter-agency working group on human rights. It was recommended that DPI arrange an ad hoc group at Headquarters. Emphasis will be placed on the preparations for the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights and on the International Year for the World's Indigenous People in 1993.

46. In preparation for the first session of the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference on Human Rights in September 1991, the Department proposed a public information programme and information coverage requirements for the World Conference. The information programme for the World Conference was adopted by the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session.

47. The Department's regular publications, including United Nations Chronicle, Yearbook of the United Nations, Development Forum and African Recovery, as well as Objective: Justice, continued to devote articles, including cover stories, to human rights.

48. The Department included human rights issues in two of its weekly briefings for non-governmental organizations in 1991. More than 1,200 non-governmental organizations worldwide are associated directly with the Department. More than 175 representatives of these organizations regularly attend the weekly briefings at Headquarters.

49. In addition to developing new information products about human rights and conducting regular briefings for non-governmental organizations, the Department meets requests for documents and information material about human rights, develops contacts with the media, and cooperates with other United Nations offices and non-governmental organizations by participating in, co-sponsoring and/or organizing events.

50. It should be noted that the Department's Public Inquiries Unit received almost 1,000 requests for information on human rights in 1991. The focal point on human rights in the Department's Communications and Project Management Division received an average of 50 requests per month for human rights information and publications during 1991 (compared to 30 per month in 1990). The Dissemination Division of the Department distributed 181,861 copies of the Department's human rights publications last year in bulk quantities (compared to 157,565 in 1990). The Visitor's Service at Headquarters arranged for 28 in-house briefings on human rights for a total of 1,539 people. In addition, information on United Nations work in the field of human rights was given to around 460,000 visitors to the United Nations Headquarters in New York.

51. In 1991 the Department regularly included information material pertaining to human rights and related issues in its weekly radio and television programmes in official and non-official languages. In addition to numerous short items and interviews on human rights issues in its current affairs radio magazine, the Department produced 28 special features (compared to 18 in 1990) on this theme. Those programmes on the "United Nations and the human rights situation in South Africa" in the "One South Africa" radio series are broadcast in English, Sesotho, Setswana, Xhosa and Zulu. Human rights and related issues were also included in the Department's other news and current affairs radio programmes, such as Perspective, which is broadcast to some 350 radio stations worldwide. The topics included: international instruments dealing with civil and political rights, the right to development, the right of people to peace, the rights of the child, protection of the rights of migrant workers and the elimination of discrimination against women; the United Nations and human rights; and the human rights situation in South Africa, El Salvador and other countries.

52. The Department's video and television programmes, such as UN in Action, and programmes produced for CNN World Report, which are seen weekly in more than 120 countries, also include human rights issues. World Chronicle, a weekly television programme produced by the Department, featured special guests from the human rights field, including Rosalyn Higgins and Ambassador Andreas Mavrommatis, two experts on the Human Rights Committee. The latter programme, which is aired on over 150 channels around the United States and is regularly used by United Nations information centres, especially in Brazil, Indonesia, Japan, the Philippines and Trinidad, has featured guests prominent in the field of human rights.

53. During the past year the Department continued to give full press, radio and television coverage to the proceedings of all United Nations intergovernmental bodies dealing with human rights, such as the Commission on Human Rights and its various committees and working groups, the Committee on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Committee against Torture and the work of special rapporteurs. As in previous years, the United Nations Information Service at Geneva highlighted the work of the Commission and other human rights bodies. A report of the activities of UNIS Geneva is found in section B below.

B. Activities of information centres and services

1. United Nations Information Service at Geneva

54. During the reporting period, the United Nations Information Service continued to cover, through print and radio and audio-visual programmes, the proceedings of all United Nations intergovernmental bodies dealing with human rights which took place at Geneva: a total of 11,900 publications on the general issue of human rights were distributed. In addition, the following numbers of publications were distributed: 1,380 on racial discrimination, 1,200 on women's issues, 800 on apartheid and 3,200 on the rights of the child, as well as 588 press releases (313 English, 275 French) on human rights questions. Press conferences and interviews were conducted with personalities engaged in activities in support of human rights. Special events were organized by the Information Service in observance of international days and weeks on human rights-related issues.

55. As part of the Graduate Study Programme organized by the Information Service in July 1991 for 83 graduate students from 49 countries, the activities of the United Nations for the promotion and the protection of human rights were prominently featured in a two-day seminar. In addition, a round table devoted to women's issues in the United Nations system was also organized.

(a) Activities in support of the work of United Nations intergovernmental bodies dealing with human rights

56. As in previous years, the United Nations Information Service at Geneva has highlighted the work of the Commission on Human Rights, which held its forty-seventh session from 28 January to 8 March 1991 at the Palais des Nations. On that occasion, the Service accredited 33 visiting journalists, in addition to the permanent press corps of some 200 journalists accredited to the United Nations Office at Geneva. Several press conferences on the Commission were organized, including one for the Under-Secretary-General for Human Rights before the opening of the session and two for the Chairman of the Commission. Meetings and briefings for non-governmental organizations were also organized in connection with the session.

59. Human rights activities were also highlighted in the Semaine Internationale/Weekly Review prepared by the Service. Non-governmental organization briefings with the Chairmen and Bureau members of these bodies were held regularly.

60. In addition, international days devoted to human rights questions such as on the elimination of racial discrimination and on solidarity with the Palestinian people were publicized and covered. Furthermore, some of the subsidiary human rights bodies such as working groups on specific questions received limited coverage. The spokesman drew attention to developments and activities on human rights during the twice-weekly press briefings.

61. A total of 313 press releases in English and 275 in French were prepared by the Press Unit for dissemination at Geneva and elsewhere in the United Nations system.

The Service, in collaboration with the Group on Equal Rights for Women, organized a celebration with the participation of Sadako Ogata, United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Jan Martenson, Director-General of the United Nations Office at Geneva and others. Films and videos on refugee women were screened. An art, photo and poster exhibit was inaugurated.

65. To commemorate the tenth anniversary of the entry into force of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Service organized a panel discussion on 9 September 1991 to examine and evaluate the application of the Convention. (a) A commemorative ceremony devoted to "The Human Rights Covenants and the Optional Protocol 25 Years Later". The programme included a message from the Secretary-General and statements by Jan Martenson, Under-Secretary-General for Human Rights; F. Pocar, Chairman of the Human Rights Committee; P. It co-sponsored a major symposium, with the United Nations Association of the Philippines and the City of Manila University, on the topic "Human Rights in the Philippines". More than 1,000 teachers and students of the university attended the symposium. The Director of the Centre spoke on behalf of the Under-Secretary-General for Human Rights on the topic "The Protection of Human Rights in the Context of the Right to Development" at the Symposium on Human Rights and Development in Manila, organized by the Organization mondiale contre la torture in collaboration with two local non-governmental organizations. Among other special activities during that same week, the UNIC Director addressed a national congress of the Caucus of Development NGO Networks on the role of non-governmental organizations in the United Nations, and spoke on "Human Rights and International Law" at an activity organized by the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (Kalookan-Malabon-Navotas Chapter). He also gave a television briefing on the United Nations and human rights in Cuba for "Worldnet".

C. Budget envisaged for future activities

85. For the biennium 1992-1993, it was proposed that the Department of Public Information should carry out a number of activities under the thematic heading of human rights. These are:

- (a) Commemoration of Human Rights Day in 1992 and in 1993;
- (b) Production and distribution of an information kit on emerging human rights issues, in English, French and Spanish;
- (c) Production and reprints of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in local language versions;
- (d) Production and reprints of selected human rights instruments in various official languages;
- (e) Continued publication of Objective: Justice in English;
- (f) Production of a poster and public service announcements for the International Year of the World's Indigenous People;
- (g) Production of a poster for the International Year of the World's Indigenous People, in all official languages; and
- (h) Convening of a journalists encounter on human rights issues and the United Nations.

86. It was originally proposed that $277,300 should be allocated to activities under this heading. However, the final sum will be subject to confirmation based on the decisions taken by the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session on the proposed programme budget of the Department. It is expected that there will be a reduction in the funding available to most of the Department's activities, including its human rights activities.

87. The Department has been mandated by the General Assembly to carry out additional activities within the budget of the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993. For the Department's information programme and coverage requirements, the General Assembly at its last session approved $400,000 within the present biennium.

III. COORDINATION AND COOPERATION WITHIN AND OUTSIDE THE UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

88. In paragraph 10 of resolution 1991/24, the Commission on Human Rights requested the Centre for Human Rights to coordinate as necessary, taking fully into account General Assembly resolution 43/128 and, in particular, the primary role assigned to the Department of Public Information in its own field of competence, the relevant activities of the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights within the United Nations system, and to maintain liaison with Governments, regional and national institutions and individuals concerned in the development and implementation of those activities. It also emphasized, in paragraph 13, the need for the United Nations to harmonize its public information activities with organizations such as the International Committee of the Red Cross and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the relevant fields of competence.

89. In keeping with this resolution, on 18 April 1991 the Centre for Human Rights convened in Geneva the third inter-agency meeting on human rights issues. The meeting allowed participants to review joint projects and exchange information on a number of ongoing activities regarding advisory services and technical cooperation as well as information, documentation and education in the field of human rights carried out by the respective organizations. Further forms of cooperation were identified between the Centre for Human Rights and a number of organizations represented at the meeting. A brief summary of the meeting is given below.

A. United Nations system

1. Department of Public Information

90. The Department of Public Information (DPI) participated at the inter-agency meeting of 18 April 1991. Details of the activity of the Department in the field of human rights are contained in chapter II above.

2. Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs

91. The representative of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs recalled its fruitful cooperation with the Centre, in particular with respect to seminars and training courses. He reaffirmed the need to disseminate more forcefully the principles leading to the respect for human rights which is at the basis of social development. He recalled the Eighth United Nations Conference on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders held Havana in 1989 which stressed the importance of implementing international norms and of standard setting. He welcomed the proposal to set up a United Nations centre for human rights documentation and training in Czechoslovakia which had been formulated by the Centre for Human Rights and which was being implemented in cooperation with the Government of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic. He proposed to strengthen the cooperation between the two organizations by establishing an internship exchange programme.

3. United Nations Interregional Crime Research Institute

92. The cooperation between the United Nations Interregional Crime Research Institute (UNICRI) and the Centre for Human Rights has been very fruitful in the organization of seminars and training courses for judges and administrators of justice. It was pointed out that UNICRI had inserted human rights issues into its working programme. It was proposed that the two organizations strengthen their cooperation yet further by preparing a human rights kit for use in the field containing the basic documents on human rights standards, information and education.

4. United Nations Children's Fund

93. The Centre for Human Rights has actively cooperated with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) in developing and disseminating materials to promote the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, which entered into force on 2 September 1990. The UNICEF representative stressed the importance of education for children, in particular in the case of immigrant children. It was pointed out that a growing number of requests from Member States concerned changes in legislation in the field of children's rights.

5. United Nations Conference on Trade and Development

94. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) representative recalled the specific mandate of the organization. He stressed that the present world situation encouraged the possibility of cooperation in the field of human rights. In particular, he stressed the existing link between human rights, economic cooperation and development. Initially, UNCTAD would be interested in strengthening cooperation with the Centre for Human Rights on the interrelationship between poverty, underdevelopment and human rights violations and on the social dimension of the international economic system and local human rights violations. Respect for human rights was a universal obligation, as was indicated at the Second United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Paris in 1990. He envisaged the possibility to co-sponsor those UNCTAD projects in which a human rights perspective is needed.

6. United Nations Development Programme

95. Cooperation between the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the Centre for Human Rights started with the joint project in Colombia and has been further enhanced and developed since 1989. The UNDP representative stressed the importance that human rights issues play in the development process and referred in particular to the UNDP Human Development Report, in which, human rights matters are explicitly taken into consideration and a "human freedom index" is provided. UNDP offered its cooperation, through its resident representatives in the field, to the Centre for Human Rights in its action in favour of national and regional human rights institution-building. It was proposed that, in implementing projects, the Centre could benefit from the local expertise available at UNDP field offices; it was suggested that this proposal could be reviewed in future bilateral meetings.

7. United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

96. Cooperation between the Centre for Human Rights and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) is based on the common aim of the two organizations. UNHCR is interested in strengthening cooperation with the Centre in order to protect persons in their country of origin, thus preventing refugee situations from arising. In particular, it is considered important to broaden the cooperation between the two organizations in the fields of information and training in human rights issues at the national level, as well as to further the evolution of substantive concepts of refugee law such as arbitrary detention, persecution and displaced persons. A further subject of cooperation would be human rights and mass exodus, as such movements characterize a large number of refugee situations. UNHCR stressed the importance of participating actively in the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993 and proposed that the two organizations set up an informal working group to discuss possible joint action.

8. International Labour Organisation

97. The cooperation between the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the Centre for Human Rights could be further strengthened by focusing on joint production of basic public information materials. It was proposed to insert human rights issues in the courses organized by ILO in Turin (Italy) for UNDP coordinators. Substantive subjects of cooperation between both organizations could be those concerning migrant workers and indigenous peoples. Mention was made of the joint working group (ILO/Centre for Human Rights) which was looking into ways and means to develop further the cooperation between the two organizations.

9. United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

98. With the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the Centre for Human Rights cooperates in the field of education, training and information in the field of human rights. UNESCO representatives underlined the necessity to insert human rights education as a part of its general international education efforts. The activity of UNESCO in this field aims at creating a human rights network for education. In particular, UNESCO is promoting associate school programmes, which include human rights issues; the "Club de l'UNESCO" actively participates by providing curricula, programmes and publications for the use of NGOs. Associated university programmes and UNESCO chairs are promoted in a number of universities worldwide. Every second year, UNESCO sponsors the Prize for Teaching Human Rights. In 1993, UNESCO will organize the World Conference for Human Rights Teaching and Education in which the Centre for Human Rights has been invited to participate. Possible further cooperation between UNESCO and the Centre for Human Rights was envisaged in the establishment of a human rights data bank and in the elaboration of a human rights teaching manual to be adapted to the different cultural, political and institutional realities.

10. World Health Organization

99. Coordination between the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Centre for Human Rights has been fruitful in the past. Experts from both organizations have participated in seminars. The WHO representative recalled the importance of cooperation in the field of human rights and health care, in particular with reference to the AIDS programme. Attention has been given to the education of children at school, in cooperation with UNESCO and UNICEF. The representative reaffirmed the availability of WHO for any further form of cooperation with the Centre for Human Rights, stressing the importance of the media in disseminating information on human rights.

In particular, reference was made to the Manual on Human Rights reporting which could serve as a basis to be adapted to the different local cultural, administrative and institutional realities. She stressed the necessity of finding more practical ways to strengthen cooperation between UNDP, ILO and the Centre for Human Rights and to create some network activities in the field of human rights. The Commonwealth Secretariat informed the meeting about the creation of a Commonwealth database on human rights resources and expressed the hope of cooperating with the Centre for Human Rights on this subject.

4. Non-governmental organizations

116. Throughout the year, non-governmental organizations have actively cooperated with the United Nations bodies dealing with human rights, providing them with information and expertise. Non-governmental organizations also effectively contribute to the implementation of the activities of the World Public Information Campaign especially in the areas of information, education and dissemination of United Nations materials and publications.

117. In connection with the forty-seventh session of the Commission on Human Rights, a special briefing for representatives of non-governmental organizations was given by the Under-Secretary-General and senior staff members from the Centre. Special meetings with the Chairmen of the Commission and of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities were also organized.

IV. HUMAN RIGHTS OBSERVANCES

A. Official commemorations

122. In addition to the activities listed in section II above, the following took place:

(a) On United Nations Day, 24 October, a ceremony took place at United Nations Office at Geneva. The Under-Secretary-General delivered a speech. A concert was also organized to celebrate the forty-sixth anniversary of the signing of the Charter of the United Nations;

(b) On 29 November 1991, a special meeting was organized to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People at the United Nations Office at Geneva; parallel activities took place in New York. ##### B. Exhibitions and other activities

123. A number of exhibitions were sponsored by the Centre for Human Rights in 1991 in connection with human rights events such as meetings of the Commission on Human Rights and the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, United Nations Day, Human Rights Day and World AIDS Day (2 December).

124. On 6 August 1991, a concert entitled "Free Human Rights" took place in Geneva. The concert was organized by the Rehab Hope Fund, Inc., an American non-profit public benefit corporation, and co-sponsored by the Centre, on the occasion of the presentation of the report of Mr. L. Despouy, Special Rapporteur on disability, to the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.

V. NATIONAL FOCAL POINTS

125. The General Assembly, in paragraph 12 of resolution 43/128, urged all Member States that had not yet done so to designate national focal points that could be supplied with copies of relevant human rights material and that might also serve as points of liaison with the United Nations in the development and implementation of the World Campaign. The focal points designated by Governments as of 31 December 1991 are listed as annex III to the present report.

VI. BUDGET

126. The budget available for publication of information and reference materials in 1991 was US$ 118,000. It has been used to cover expenditures for Human Rights Fact Sheets, the Human Rights Newsletter, ad hoc publications, the Bulletin of Human Rights, human rights studies, the Yearbook on Human Rights, official records of the Human Rights Committee, United Nations Action in the Field of Human Rights, Selected Decisions of the Human Rights Committee.

127. The budget approved for 1992 is US$ 163,800. As indicated in the Centre's publications programme, it will cover expenditures for, inter alia: (a) fact sheets (four); (b) ad hoc publications (five); (c) Bulletin of Human Rights (three); (d) Human Rights Newsletter (four); (e) Human Rights: A Compilation of International Instruments; (f) Status of International Instruments; (g) Human rights studies (four); (h) United Nations Action in the field of Human Rights; (i) Yearbook on Human Rights; (j) Official Records of the Human Rights Committee.

VII. ASSESSMENT OF THE IMPACT OF THE WORLD PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGN FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

128. The aim of the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights is to disseminate information on human rights, in order to increase understanding and awareness of human rights and fundamental freedoms. The activities carried out by the United Nations in the framework of the World Campaign have contributed to increased public interest in and awareness of human rights issues. Their impact can be assessed in terms of increased participation by the international community in the United Nations human rights programmes and of greater interest of the public worldwide in questions related to human rights.

129. In 1991, the Centre for Human Rights received the largest number of requests for technical assistance and cooperation so far from Governments from all over the world. Eighteen training courses, workshops and seminars were organized at the request of Governments. In addition, technical assistance was provided to regional organizations and institutions and to 12 Governments in areas such as documentation and information, training and legislative assistance to strengthen their national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights.

130. The number of ratifications of international human rights instruments has also increased. The Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted in 1989, now counts 105 States parties. The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination has been adhered to by 130 States. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights has 99 States parties while the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights has been ratified by 103 States.

131. Utilization of the United Nations mechanisms and procedures in the field of human rights continued to increase. The number of communications presented under the Optional Protocol went from 37 in 1990 to 51 in 1991. There has been also an increasing number of actions under the special procedures. For example, the work of the Special Rapporteur on summary executions almost doubled in 1991: he sent 125 urgent appeals to 44 countries (as compared with 64 appeals to 25 countries in 1990). There is a growing demand for information on the existing international mechanism available to individuals for the protection of their rights.

132. Requests for human rights materials are constantly growing. The Centre has developed a mailing list for the distribution of publications which includes more than 5,000 addresses and a list for the distribution of documentation of about 2,000 addresses. The mailing lists include academic and research communities, non-governmental organizations, national human rights institutions, media, concerned individuals, regional organizations and institutions, United Nations Information Centres and United Nations field offices. In the distribution of information materials, the Centre tries to assure that all geographical areas are properly covered.

133. In addition, the Centre daily receives requests for information on human rights issues and on the United Nations activities and programmes in the field of human rights emanating from non-governmental organizations, academic and research institutions, schools, national and regional human rights centres and individuals. Particular interest has recently been shown in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the two most recent instruments adopted in the framework of the United Nations. During 1991, the Centre replied to more than 2,000 requests for information materials. These often came from a non-specialized audience, testimony to the growing interest in human rights issues showed by the international public opinion.

134. The Centre has noted an increase in the requests for the organization of briefings on its activities and on human rights issues. Requests come mainly from universities, high schools, school teachers, journalists, non-governmental organizations, diplomats and public officials. Briefings organized by the Department of Public Information, UNITAR and ILO usually include a session on human rights, where representatives of the Centre are invited to illustrate general or specific aspects of the Centre's activities.

135. The number of invitations addressed to the Centre by non-governmental organizations, academic institutions and national and international institutions to participate in or co-sponsor meetings, conferences, training activities and other events on human rights has also seen greater increase than ever before.

136. Human rights issues and United Nations activities in this field are being covered by radio, television, newspapers and other written media with increasing frequency. The growing interest shown by the media for topics related to human rights is confirmed, for instance, by the activities organized in many Member States to celebrate Human Rights Day in cooperation with national radio and television stations.
