Annex: Draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on involvement of children in armed conflicts.

Introduction

1. The Commission on Human Rights, by its resolution 1994/91, decided to establish an open-ended inter-sessional working group of the Commission to elaborate, as a matter of priority, a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, using as one basis for its discussions the preliminary draft optional protocol on involvement of children in armed conflicts (E/CN.4/1994/91) submitted by the Committee on the Rights of the Child.

2. The Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 1994/10, authorized an open-ended working group to meet for a period of two weeks prior to the fifty-first session of the Commission on Human Rights.

11. The working group had before it the following documents:

E/CN.4/1994/WG.13/1	Provisional agenda
E/CN.4/1994/WG.13/2 and Add.1-3	Report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to paragraph 16 of Commission resolution 1994/91: comments on the preliminary draft optional protocol.
E/CN.4/1994/91	Note by the secretariat (containing the preliminary draft optional protocol prepared by the Committee on the Rights of the Child).

12. The working group adopted its agenda, as contained in document E/CN.4/1994/WG.13/1, at its 1st meeting, on 31 October 1994.

13. At the 16th meeting, on 9 November 1994, a statement on behalf of Ms. Graça Machel, expert appointed pursuant to General Assembly resolution 48/157 to undertake a study on the impact of armed conflicts on children, was delivered to the working group.

II. GENERAL DISCUSSION

14. At its 1st and 2nd meetings, on 31 October 1994, the working group, at the invitation of the Chairman-Rapporteur, held a general discussion on various questions relating to the task of drafting an optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on involvement of children in armed conflicts.

15. It was generally felt that the practice of the use of children as soldiers should be eradicated and that, as one of the means to achieve this purpose, the minimum age for recruitment of persons into armed forces should be raised.

16. Various views were expressed with regard to the mandate of the working group and the contents of the future optional protocol.

17. Some participants insisted on the necessity to implement the principle that the best interests of the child were to be a primary consideration in all actions concerning children. They declared their willingness to adopt without delay an optional protocol in which the minimum age of recruitment should necessarily be set at 18 years and stressed that it was imperative to set such a threshold. Some delegations recalled the request which had been made by the World Conference on Human Rights to the Committee on the Rights of the Child "to study the question of raising the minimum age of recruitment into armed forces" (A/CONF.157/24 (Part I, chap. III, sect. II), para. 50). It was stated in this connection that the preliminary draft optional protocol submitted by the Committee on the Rights of the Child constituted an excellent basis for the work and should not require prolonged discussion.

18. It was, however, argued by some other participants that while all efforts should be made to protect children to the maximum extent from involvement in armed conflicts, the raising of the age limit for recruitment was not the only way to achieve this goal. Reference was made by several delegations to their national legislation allowing, under certain conditions and in certain circumstances, the recruitment of persons below the age of 18 years into their armed forces. It was therefore felt that such national laws would inevitably be in conflict with the provisions of the protocol if it was to be drafted along the lines proposed by the Committee on the Rights of the Child. It was also pointed out that a protocol would not immediately remedy the existing situation of children in armed conflicts.

19. Other representatives stated that national legislation should not be presented as an obstacle to the elaboration of new and more advanced international standards, and that the working group should concentrate on how to draft the protocol most expeditiously. The view was also expressed that the working group should endeavour to draft an instrument which could be widely adhered to, rather than a specific one which would not attract many ratifications.

20. Some delegations expressed their concern about the interrelationship between an optional protocol and some of the already established principles and norms of international humanitarian law, and the need for the provisions of the draft optional protocol to be consistent with those principles and norms. It was also mentioned in this connection that article 38 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which this working group was seeking to develop, had been inspired by pertinent provisions of the 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions.

21. According to another view, the draft optional protocol was not in contradiction with international humanitarian law but rather could supplement the existing instruments in this field. It was also emphasized that the protocol should be seen as a human rights instrument and that obligations for States parties should be clearly spelled out.

22. Other issues raised during the general debate included the distinction between direct and indirect participation in hostilities, voluntary versus compulsory recruitment into armed forces, recruitment of children by rebel groups and other irregular armed forces, status of children enlisted or admitted into military schools and some other questions such as admissibility of reservations to the protocol which were subsequently discussed again by the working group in connection with its consideration of particular articles of the draft optional protocol.

23. Thus, with regard to the issue of the distinction between direct and indirect participation in hostilities, the view was expressed that in the field there was often very little difference between these two forms and that the prohibition on participation should be broadly construed to prevent children from taking part in hostilities both directly or indirectly. For this reason, it was felt by some delegations that the draft protocol should not qualify the participation of children in hostilities.

24. As a large portion of children currently involved in armed conflicts are not dependent on regular armed forces, but on other groups and forces, it was generally felt that the prohibition against recruitment and participation of children in hostilities should be in relation to both governmental armed forces and other armed groups, including irregular armed forces, rebel groups, etc., and that a separate article in the optional protocol should call for such a prohibition.

25. Some delegates expressed doubts concerning the possibility of imposing obligations on non-State actors, being non-parties to the Convention and the Protocol.

26. Many speakers emphasized that while drafting a separate article on the prohibition against recruitment and participation of children in hostilities relating to forces other than those of the State, care should be taken to avoid that armed groups would be equated with States parties to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the proposed protocol. In this respect, it was underlined that human rights instruments primarily address States.

27. Several delegations referred to the specific situation and age limits of children who were admitted as students to various military schools and similar educational institutions in their respective countries. It was stated in this connection that the general prohibition of the recruitment of children below 18 years of age should not apply to children who are enlisted in or admitted to such schools or otherwise recruited only for the purpose of education and military training.

28. The attention of the working group was drawn to different meanings which the term "recruitment" had in different languages. Alternative terms proposed for eventual use in the draft optional protocol included "conscription", "enlistment", "enrolment" as well as "admission" and "registration". It was also stressed that a consistent terminology of human rights and of humanitarian law was vital in the drafting process in order to avoid misinterpretation in the future.

29. In addition to the proposed text for an optional protocol by the Committee on the Rights of the Child, some members of the working group felt that new articles were needed to address issues such as the physical and psychological reintegration of child victims of armed conflicts; conditions of peace and security as essential prerequisites to protect children; obstacles for the protection of children in armed conflicts; the need to broaden the ability of the Committee on the Rights of the Child to seek further clarification from States Parties in case reliable information is received on the recruitment or use of children practised in the territory of a State party.

30. With regard to the proposal for a new article to be inserted after article 5, many delegations opposed the consideration of the present text on the grounds that it went beyond the mandate given by Commission on Human Rights resolution 1994/91 and modified substantive issues, and was thus not in keeping with article 50 of the Convention. Other delegations proposed that consideration of the text should be deferred to a later meeting.

31. One delegation suggested that the envisaged role of the Committee on the Rights of the Child could be made conditional on a declaration by each State party concerned, along the lines of article 41 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, that it recognizes the competence of the Committee in this regard.

32. Some delegations welcoming any effort which could strengthen the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child, strongly supported the proposed new article.

33. Discussion took place concerning the intention of the protocol. Some delegations expressed the view that it was to strengthen the rights of the child, while others believed that the rights of the child are already present in the Convention and that the intention of the protocol is to strengthen the protection of children and the implementation of their rights, as proposed by the Committee.

III. PROPOSALS PRESENTED ON THE PRELIMINARY DRAFT OPTIONAL PROTOCOL

34. At its 2nd meeting, on 31 October 1994, the working group began its general consideration of the preliminary draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on involvement of children in armed conflicts (E/CN.4/1994/91, annex) prepared by the Committee on the Rights of the Child, which was the only draft formally submitted to the working group. Various proposals relating to the preamble and the operative part of this document were considered by the working group.

A. Preamble

Title

35. At its 3rd meeting, on 1 November 1994, the Working Group began its consideration of the title and the preambular part of the preliminary draft optional protocol and continued to do so at its 5th meeting, on 2 November 1994 and at its 17th meeting, on 10 November 1994. The title read as follows:

"PRELIMINARY DRAFT OPTIONAL PROTOCOL ON INVOLVEMENT OF CHILDREN IN ARMED CONFLICTS"

36. At the 5th meeting, on 2 November 1994, it was proposed by the Chairman-Rapporteur that the title of the draft optional protocol should include a reference to the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

37. At the 17th meeting, on 10 November 1994, the Working Group agreed with the proposal of the Chairman-Rapporteur to insert, after the words "optional protocol", the words "to the Convention on the Rights of the Child" in the title of the draft optional protocol.

First preambular paragraph

38. The first preambular paragraph read as follows:

"Encouraged by the fact that an unprecedented number of States have to date become parties to the Convention, thereby demonstrating the widespread commitment that exists to strive for the promotion and protection of the rights of the child,"

39. At the 5th meeting, on 2 November 1994, following the suggestion of the delegations of Nigeria, the United States of America and the Netherlands that the reference to "an unprecedented number of States" should be replaced by another wording, the representative of India proposed to replace the words "the fact that an unprecedented number of States have to date become parties to" by "the overwhelming support for".

(e) The representative of China proposed to replace the word "involved" by the words "from the involvement";

47. The Working Group then agreed to put in square brackets, as competing proposals, the words "implement" and "strengthen", and the words "strengthen" and "increase". The Group also agreed that the final part of the third preambular paragraph should read as follows: "... the protection of children from involvement in armed conflicts".

Fourth preambular paragraph

48. The fourth preambular paragraph read as follows:

"Believing that the involvement in hostilities of persons who have not attained the age of 18 years is harmful for them physically and psychologically and affects the full implementation of the Rights of the Child including the right to life,"

49. At the 3rd meeting, on 2 November 1994, the representative of the Philippines and the observer for Norway proposed to delete the fourth preambular paragraph.

50. At the 17th meeting, on 10 November 1994, upon the proposal of the representative of Australia as well as earlier proposals, the working group agreed to delete the fourth preambular paragraph.

56. Upon the proposal of the representatives of Australia and the Netherlands, the working group agreed to place the text of the fifth preambular paragraph in square brackets.

Sixth preambular paragraph

57. The sixth preambular paragraph read as follows:

"Recognizing that article 38 of the Convention admits recruitment of persons into armed forces and their direct participation in hostilities after the attainment of the age of 15 years,"

Eighth preambular paragraph

66. The eighth preambular paragraph read as follows:

"Convinced that an optional protocol to the Convention, raising the age of possible recruitment of persons into armed forces [and their direct participation in hostilities] to 18 years, will contribute effectively to the implementation of the principle that the best interests of the child are to be a primary consideration in all actions concerning children, while giving States Parties which find themselves in a position to do so the possibility to adhere to such a protocol,"

67. At the 17th meeting, on 10 November 1994, the representative of Japan proposed to introduce into this paragraph a formula similar to that proposed by him (para. 94 below) with regard to article 2, which would read as follows: "as combatants taking a direct part in hostilities".

68. The working group agreed to place the original text of the eighth preambular paragraph in square brackets.

New preambular paragraphs

69. At the 5th meeting, on 2 November 1994, the representative of Cuba proposed a new preambular paragraph reading as follows:

"Convinced that military invasions, foreign occupations, the use or the threat of the use of force, colonialism, the denial of the right to development and of the right of peoples to self-determination constitute the greatest obstacles to the realization of the rights of the child, in particular for the protection of children in armed conflicts."

70. The representatives of the United Kingdom, Poland, the Russian Federation, Germany, India and New Zealand expressed opposition to this proposal.

73. At its 17th meeting, on 10 November 1994, with regard to a new preambular paragraph proposed by India the representative of Pakistan proposed to delete the words "by armed groups".

74. A clear majority of speakers expressed support for the paragraph proposed by India, bearing in mind, however, the need to continue the consideration of the paragraph in the light of the drafting of the new article placed after article 2. The representative of Pakistan explained that the trend was towards the use of children in all hostilities and not just their recruitment by armed groups.

B. Article 1

75. At its 2nd meeting, on 31 October 1994, the Working Group began its consideration of article 1 of the preliminary draft optional protocol which read as follows:

(ii) A new article 1 would read as follows:

93. The representative of Cuba proposed to insert, at the end of the article, the words "unless, by virtue of the applicable law, he has attained majority before".

94. The representative of Japan proposed to insert, at the end of the article, the words "as a combatant that takes direct part in hostilities."

95. The observer for the Friends World Committee for Consultation (Quakers) proposed a new article 2 reading as follows:

101. At the 7th meeting, on 3 November, the representative of Australia proposed the following text:

"States Parties shall refrain from recruiting any person who has not attained the age of 15 years into their armed forces. Further, States Parties shall only be able to recruit persons between the ages of 15 and 18 years of age into their armed forces for educational purposes and for military training."

AnnexDRAFT OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD
ON INVOLVEMENT OF CHILDREN IN ARMED CONFLICTS

The States Parties to the present Protocol,

Encouraged by the overwhelming support for the Convention on the Rights of the Child, demonstrating the widespread commitment that exists to strive for the promotion and protection of the rights of the child,

Reaffirming that the rights of children require special protection and call for continuous improvement of the situation of children without distinction, as well as for their development and education in conditions of peace and security,

Considering that to further [implement] [strengthen] the rights recognized in the Convention on the Rights of the Child, there is a need [to strengthen] [to increase] the protection of children from involvement in armed conflicts,

[Noting that article 1 of the Convention recognizes every human being below the age of 18 years to be a child, unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier,]

[Convinced that an optional protocol to the Convention, raising the age of possible recruitment of persons into armed forces [and their direct participation in hostilities] to 18 years, will contribute effectively to the implementation of the principle that the best interests of the child are to be a primary consideration in all actions concerning children, while giving States Parties which find themselves in a position to do so the possibility to adhere to such a protocol],

[Convinced that military invasions, foreign occupations, the use or the threat of the use of force, colonialism, the denial to the right to development and of the rights of peoples to self-determination constitute the greatest obstacles to the realization of the rights of the child, in particular for the protection of children in armed conflicts],

Recognizing with grave concern the growing trend towards recruitment, training and use of children in hostilities by armed groups,
