I. INTRODUCTION

1. The present report has been produced, at the request of the Secretary-General, by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in response to the General Assembly's request for a detailed report by the Secretary-General containing recommendations on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 as it pertains to the internal oversight functions of the United Nations operational funds and programmes.

2. In pursuing this mandate, the Office contacted the funds and programmes to obtain information about their internal oversight mechanisms. In this context, OIOS has identified organizational structures and procedures established by the funds or programmes, or provided to them by the Office, which enable them to exercise internal oversight to varying degrees. This identification or stock taking of internal oversight in the funds and programmes was the first step in a process leading to the eight recommendations contained in paragraphs 44 to 51 of the present report. These recommendations suggest methods by which the Office can assist funds and programmes in enhancing their internal oversight mechanisms, as called for by the General Assembly in paragraph 11 of resolution 48/218 B. They have been drafted with a view towards enabling the Assembly to formulate a policy to be implemented by the governing bodies of the funds and programmes in question with regard to their oversight functions. They are made without prejudice to the independent authority of the Office of Internal Oversight Services under resolution 48/218 B to fulfil its responsibilities.

3. The Office has made every effort to actively involve all concerned entities in the different stages of the stock taking. To reinforce the accuracy of the observations, broaden the perspective of the analysis and corroborate the soundness of the recommendations, surveyed funds and programmes, and external entities were involved in the information gathering and verification process as well as the analysis of findings.

4. From January to December 1996, the Office, with the involvement of the Secretary-General and all executive heads, held consultations with the governing bodies of the funds and programmes, as requested by the General Assembly in paragraph 11 of resolution 48/218 B. In two cases where no formal meeting of a governing body was scheduled during 1996 (United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (UNCHS)/Habitat and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP)), informal consultations were carried out by the executive heads of these agencies, and all members of the governing bodies in question were given the opportunity, via mail poll, to comment on the draft report (for details on the consultation process see annex IV). The present report takes account of the result of those consultations as well as of pertinent developments which have emerged since the report was first issued in draft form.

5. While the present report was being prepared, several funds and programmes took measures to enhance their internal oversight services by establishing new, or restructuring their existing, internal oversight functions, or by initiating a closer cooperation with the Office. For example, the Governing Council of UNEP, in its decision 18/46 of 25 May 1995, expressed its desire to work closely with the Office and requested the Executive Director to formulate and enact, in consultation with the Office, a specific plan of action to prevent waste, fraud and mismanagement. The Secretary-General welcomes these developments as they confirm that funds and programmes have recognized the necessity to strengthen their internal oversight functions. The Office, in acknowledging the evolving nature of the United Nations system, does not attempt to offer a definitive picture of recent developments but only seeks to indicate current trends.

II. SCOPE

6. The present report considers the following operational funds and programmes:

- International Trade Centre (ITC);
- United Nations Habitat and Human Settlement Foundation (UNCHS/Habitat);
- Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP);
- United Nations Development Programme (UNDP);
- Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP);
- United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA);
- Voluntary funds administered by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR);
- United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF);
- United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR);
- United Nations Office of Project Services (UNOPS);
- United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA);
- United Nations University (UNU);
- World Food Programme (WFP).

7. The legal status of these funds and programmes has been defined by or with the involvement of the General Assembly, and their executive heads are appointed by, or with the involvement of the Secretary-General. Furthermore, with the exception of the World Food Programme, they are all audited by the United Nations Board of Auditors.

8. Entities which are fully financed by the regular budget of the United Nations, such as the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), and those such as the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW), the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), which are financed by the trust funds administered by the United Nations, and hence are fully provided with internal oversight services of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, have not been addressed in the present report. Similarly, the United Nations Capital Development Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) and the United Nations Volunteers, which are financed by the trust funds administered by UNDP are considered as part of UNDP for purposes of the present report.

9. Under current arrangements, the Office of Internal Oversight Services provides all or part of the internal oversight services to the following funds and programmes: ITC, UNITAR, UNRWA, UNU, voluntary funds of UNHCR, Fund of UNEP, UNCHS/Habitat and Fund of UNDCP. Funds and programmes whose internal oversight functions are at present provided largely separate from OIOS are: UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA, UNOPS and WFP.

III. METHODOLOGY

10. With a view to fulfilling the mandate laid down in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 48/218 B, the resolution was analysed to extract those elements which defined the internal oversight function. A model of the internal oversight function was then developed which could be extended to the funds and programmes.

11. A questionnaire was then prepared and was sent in June 1995 to all entities concerned to obtain information which would allow the formulation of conclusions about the current status of internal oversight in the target funds and programmes.

12. Upon receipt of the replies to the questionnaire, the data were catalogued and verified with each fund and programme by the end of September 1995. Another verification of the data and update, where appropriate, was carried out in September 1996. Taking into account that individual operational funds and programmes have differing but equally viable organizational arrangements, the provision of oversight services was analysed with regard to:

(a) Adequacy, effectiveness and efficiency of services:

- Adequacy of oversight responsibilities with respect to execution of all components of the oversight function (audit, evaluation, monitoring and inspection, investigation);
- Adequacy of personnel and budgetary resources;
- Effectiveness of internal monitoring of the implementation of recommendations;
- Efficiency of oversight services through coordination among oversight functions;

- Effectiveness of designated organizational entity/person to receive allegations of waste, fraud and mismanagement;
 - Adequacy of protection of staff members who make allegations/ report misconduct;
- (b) Independence of oversight functions:
- Operational independence guaranteed by the organizational structure;
- (c) Accountability to governing body:
- Accountability through regular, informative reports on developments of the oversight responsibilities with specific emphasis on reporting present findings as well as the implementation status of previous recommendations deriving from internal audits, evaluations, monitoring, inspections and investigations.

13. Finally, based on the analysis, certain recommendations were developed to enhance the oversight functions of the funds and programmes.

IV. ANALYSIS

A. Audit

14. The survey disclosed that all operational funds and programmes have long-established audit functions with a clearly defined scope of work. As one would expect, the quantity and scope of audits varies with the size and objectives of the funds and programmes. One common characteristic seems to be the pronounced emphasis on management and programme audits over financial statement audits, which fall traditionally in the domain of external auditors.

15. Though some units have been reorganized as recently as 1992 (and the Office of Internal Oversight Services itself was established in 1994), the organizational structure, reporting lines and internal reporting procedures were in all cases clearly defined. Audit services are generally provided by the Office of Internal Oversight Services to funds and programmes financed through the regular United Nations budget. In addition, the Office provides audit services to activities financed from sources outside the regular budget (ITC, UNCHS/Habitat, UNDCP, UNEP, UNHCR) through separately funded arrangements. The Office communicates findings and recommendations of internal audits to the audited entity and follows up on the implementation of audit recommendations.

16. Within all operational funds and programmes that have audit units separate from the Office, audit units report to the office of the executive head. The organizational arrangement that brings audit under the authority of the executive or the assistant executive head is in some cases the result of relatively recent reorganizations. These efforts towards reorganization reflect the common understanding that in order to provide objective, impartial and candid assessments, the audit unit has to be granted an adequate measure of operational independence from the entities subject to its scrutiny. In other words, the audit function is to be divorced as much as possible from the administration of the entity.

17. In addition to the organizational structure, the survey looked at financial and human resources committed to the audit and evaluation functions. The commitment of resources should be viewed in the context of the operational scope of a fund or programme as this is the major determining factor for the allocation of resources for oversight services. From a general perspective, the commitment of financial resources to audit services is on average slightly higher than for evaluation services.¹ It can be observed as a general principle that operational funds and programmes extensively involved in humanitarian relief (e.g. UNHCR) have higher audit than evaluation budgets. In contrast, funds and programmes primarily concerned with strategic or long-term programmes and projects (UNICEF, ITC, UNFPA) are likely to have comparatively higher expenditure on evaluations.² Given the nature of humanitarian relief work, characterized by the necessity to respond to emergencies within an extremely short time-frame, and often involving substantial cash transfers to geographically remote areas, the need for forceful audit entities is apparent.

18. The Office of Internal Oversight Services is committed to employing its resources in the most efficient manner without compromising the integrity of its service. In particular, it will sound out the possibility of cooperation with audit services of United Nations operational funds, programmes and specialized agencies which are present in regions where it is engaged. The Office is willing to provide services for other members of the United Nations system, but will also rely on services provided more cost-efficiently by other entities as long as adherence to the standards of the Office is guaranteed. However, in view of the limited staff resources and financial constraints currently existing in the funds and programmes, such an arrangement does not seem feasible at this time.

B. Evaluation

19. Similar to audit, evaluation units are well established within all surveyed funds and programmes. However, the organizational structures are more diverse than in the case of audit. Within several funds and programmes, evaluation constitutes an integral part of the oversight function (UNCHS/Habitat, ITC, UNHCR, UNICEF, WFP), while in others (UNEP, UNDCP, UNDP, UNFPA) evaluation is integrated in the strategic planning process. Other organizational arrangements include the merging of evaluation and inspection functions (UNHCR), combining the evaluation unit with a research office (UNICEF) or pairing evaluation and monitoring functions (UNICEF, UNDP). UNHCR is also a good example of the diversity of the evaluation function. The agency was subject to an in-depth evaluation by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) in 1993 on the basis of an evaluation report by what is now the Central Evaluation Unit of the Office of Internal Oversight Services. Besides, the agency has had its own in-house evaluation function with a focus not only on field projects, but increasingly on broader policy issues such as urban refugees, institution-building, and staff security and stress, which complement the evaluation as performed by the Office. All these organizational arrangements are equally viable and reflect the differing focuses of the individual entities. An entity that combines evaluation with inspection is more likely to view evaluation as a periodic but ad hoc procedure, while the philosophy underlying the integration of monitoring and evaluation stresses the continuity of the evaluation process.

20. With regard to financial resources committed to evaluation functions, those funds and programmes with long-term commitments or a strategic agenda (ITC, UNEP, UNDCP, UNICEF, UNFPA) have relatively high evaluation expenditure ratios, reflecting their need to evaluate programmes and cooperation projects to determine their effectiveness and efficiency. On the other hand, relief operations have received a lower level of expenditure as evaluations against set targets seem to have a more limited application in an emergency setting, though important "lessons learned" can and should also be derived from the evaluation of performance in this environment.

C. Monitoring

21. The monitoring function within OIOS is described in Secretary-General's bulletin ST/SGB/273 as providing assistance "in implementing the provisions of article V of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring and Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation on monitoring of programme implementation. The Office shall also ensure that monitoring and self-evaluation are viewed as an integral part of managerial responsibility for the efficiency and effectiveness of programme performance."

22. The survey indicated the existence of monitoring units in some funds and programmes whereas in others monitoring tasks are currently accomplished through other organizational units (e.g. evaluation) or are integrated into managerial functions. In general, it is not viewed as necessary that each organizational fund or programme establish a monitoring unit. In particular, smaller entities or entities with a limited operational scope would not derive a substantial benefit from a monitoring unit. Establishing a new unit could simply lead to the diversion of scarce resources. Instead, the Office will continue to promote the development and strengthening of the monitoring and self-evaluation functions as a managerial responsibility and stands ready to provide assistance with this task in a proactive manner.

23. Together with the Department of Administration and Management, the Office has embarked upon an effort to simplify programme monitoring and evaluation, including reporting to legislative bodies, with a view to transforming it from what is perceived as a cumbersome procedure of mere quantitative reporting to oversight bodies into a meaningful and effective tool for managers to review the performance of the function for which they are responsible. This reform effort will be carried out on the basis of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring and Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation (PPBME rules). It will encompass all entities within the global Secretariat as well as those funds and programmes which have so far participated in the central programme performance monitoring and reporting exercise.

D. Inspection

24. In the mandate of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, the scope of inspections is defined as "ad hoc inspections of programme and organizational units whenever there are sufficient reasons to believe that programme oversight is ineffective and that the potential for the non-attainment of the objectives and the waste of resources is great ... These inspections shall recommend to management corrective measures and adjustments as appropriate." Organizationally, the inspection function in the Office is part of the Monitoring and Inspection Unit, while the current arrangement in most funds and programmes gives the audit unit responsibility for inspections. The Office is concerned that the latter arrangement might prove inadequate in certain cases where specialized knowledge of inspectors is necessary or where resources from audit cannot be shifted quickly enough to address ad hoc inspection requirements. To address this concern, a "rapid reaction force" within the audit unit could be formally designated and trained to deal with ad hoc inspections.

25. In addition, in order to ensure inspection coverage throughout the Organization, the Office stands ready to cooperate with the funds and programmes, should they decide to call on its inspection team rather than establishing a permanent inspection unit.

E. Investigation

26. The Investigations Section of the Office of Internal Oversight Services was established to perform three general functions: to "investigate reports of violations of United Nations regulations, rules and pertinent administrative issuances and transmit to the Secretary-General the results of such investigations together with appropriate recommendations"; to "focus on assessing the potential within programme areas for fraud and violations ... in high-risk operations as well as offices away from headquarters"; and to "receive and investigate reports from staff and other persons engaged in activities under the authority of the Organization suggesting improvements in programme delivery and reporting perceived cases of possible violations of rules or regulations, mismanagement, misconduct, waste of resources or abuse of authority ... [S]taff members and others can make directly to the Office suggestions and reports which shall be received and handled in complete confidence" (emphasis added; see ST/SGB/273, paras. 16-18).

27. Of the surveyed funds and programmes, only WFP has established a unit that will carry out functions similar to those described above. The Office of Inspection and Investigation in the Office of the Executive Director was created in July 1995, and submitted its first annual report to the Executive Board in October 1996. While this initiative is noted, it is suggested that procedures, like those in place for the Office of Internal Oversight Services, should be established and publicized to ensure the confidential treatment for those who submit suggestions and reports to the Office of the Executive Director. The chosen organizational structure of that Office, that is, bringing into it the investigation unit, should provide an adequate measure of operational independence, integrity and credibility, although consideration must be given to a direct reporting relationship with the governing body as well.

28. All of the other operational funds and programmes do not have a separate investigative unit. Under current arrangements, the Office of Internal Oversight Services will provide investigative services to all of these funds and programmes as necessary. However, if the Office is to provide effective coverage in this area, it will be necessary to designate additional resources from extrabudgetary sources to the budget of the Investigations Section for posts and travel. Such an arrangement would avoid adding significant overhead costs associated with establishing new units and guarantee the implementation of unified and equally professional standards among the participating agencies.

29. Based on the experience which the Office has accumulated to date, several additional posts, plus adequate travel funds, would be required to cover the additional workload in the area of investigations. The financial burden of these expenses would have to be shared among the participating agencies, i.e. those funds and programmes without an investigations unit of their own and to whom the Office would provide these services. The different size of respective annual budgets would have to be taken into account under this arrangement. In order to account for the actual usage of services of the Office during a given year, a reassessment of the cost sharing would have to be carried out at the end of each budget year.

30. If any entity should decide that an investigation unit must be created internally, organizational structures have to be put in place that ensure the operational independence of the new unit. The investigation unit could be placed in the Office of the Executive Head and report to the governing body to guarantee impartial investigation services. In this event, the unit would have to be staffed with a sufficient number of trained, professional investigators and develop procedures which ensure confidential reporting of information with protection afforded both to those who make reports in good faith and to those who are the subjects of reports.

31. Additionally, the unit would need to develop and implement transparent terms of reference and an operating manual so that both the investigators and the other staff of the agency are made fully cognizant of the authority, jurisdiction, responsibilities, reporting relationships (notably to the head of the agency) and procedures of the investigation office.

32. The Investigations Section of the Office stands ready to work with those funds and programmes that are planning to establish investigative units. This service could be consultative, providing advice on the structuring and requirements of such a unit and sharing information on the development of internal systems, procedures and controls.

F. Coordination among oversight functions

33. In addition to surveying the organizational structure and scope of work of the individual oversight functions, an attempt has been made in the present study to identify successful measures to enhance the cooperation among internal oversight functions. Cooperation between oversight units can contribute to greater cost-efficiency and create synergies. Consequently, close cooperative ties should be maintained among these functions as well as with functions that are often related to the oversight function but may be organizationally located in a different functional entity (e.g., in strategic planning).

34. The study of the operational funds and programmes revealed little evidence that the cooperation among oversight units is approached in a systematic or even institutionalized fashion. Rather, cooperation is generally based on informal meetings. Diverse arrangements with varying degrees of institutionalization can be envisioned to coordinate the functioning of the oversight services. All funds and programmes that have not already done so should establish meetings to be attended by the heads or deputy heads of all oversight units including evaluation and potentially strategic planning. These meetings should be held at least monthly to discuss oversight issues of common interest and exchange relevant information.

35. Distinctive deviations from this general scheme exist within UNHCR and WFP, where internal audit committees³ coordinate the general oversight process, and in UNDP, where a Management Review/Oversight Committee has been established recently. The purpose of that committee, according to its terms of reference, is to facilitate the process which provides the Administrator, and through him/her the Executive Board, with assurance that UNDP's accountability framework is operating effectively. The committee will meet formally four times each year to review, inter alia, long-term and annual plans for internal audit, review, self-assessment and evaluation of UNDP activities; to review the summary results of audits, reviews, control self-assessments and evaluations; and to review compliance with oversight recommendations. The Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services has been invited by the UNDP Administrator to become a permanent member of the committee and to participate in the meetings.

36. From an oversight perspective, the UNDP arrangement can be seen as a model which should, mutatis mutandis, be institutionalized in all larger funds and programmes. This would allow the Office of Internal Oversight Services to play a proactive role in coordinating and in promoting unified and equally high standards of oversight throughout the Organization.

G. Monitoring of implementation of recommendations

37. The effectiveness of internal oversight services can be dramatically enhanced by instituting effective procedures for monitoring the implementation of recommendations. Currently, the Office has one Compliance Officer in the Office of the Under-Secretary-General, responsible for the coordination of monitoring the status of the implementation of recommendations. The Office prepares a semi-annual report on the implementation of recommendations and the status of compliance with earlier recommendations by those entities that come under the authority of the Secretary-General. This internal report is submitted to the Secretary-General.

38. Implementation of agreed recommendations should be verified by the relevant internal oversight personnel. All funds and programmes have stressed that implementation of recommendations is monitored during subsequent reviews. This procedure can be enhanced by continuing the dialogue established with the addressee during the review process until all the recommendations are implemented. Therefore, it is strongly recommended that funds and programmes with independent oversight functions develop a mechanism for continually monitoring the implementation of recommendations. In addition, clear procedures should be established to address non-compliance with an approved implementation schedule and reporting to the executive head on the status of implementation of recommendations.

H. Reporting procedures

39. Closely related to monitoring implementation is the procedure for reporting to intergovernmental bodies on findings and the implementation status of previous recommendations. This procedure demonstrates to the intergovernmental body and other interested parties that the organization itself is constantly striving to use its resources effectively and efficiently.

40. The Office of Internal Oversight Services submits to the Secretary-General for transmittal to the General Assembly an annual analytical and summary report on its activities. This annual report includes, inter alia, a description of significant findings and recommendations for corrective action made by the Office during the reporting period and an identification of each significant recommendation in previous reports on which corrective action has not been completed (ST/SGB/273, para. 28).

41. The present review has found that most of the oversight functions of the funds and programmes are lacking adequate reporting procedures as also noted by the Joint Inspection Unit in their report entitled "Accountability, management improvement and oversight in the United Nations system" (A/50/503/Add.1). Although oversight issues, in particular reports by the Board of External Auditors, are frequently or even regularly (e.g., UNHCR) on the agendas of governing bodies, reports from internal oversight units are not given the prominence and attention they require in order for an independent internal oversight to be effective. It is therefore recommended that the reporting procedures of funds and programmes follow similar lines as established for reports of the Office to the General Assembly (see paragraph 5 (e) of resolution 48/218 B). The internal oversight units, in particular the audit units, should be authorized to submit, through their respective executive heads, periodic comprehensive reports and ad hoc reports on specific issues to their governing bodies. Likewise, if the Office provides internal oversight functions or reviews to a particular fund or programme, reports emanating from this should also be made available to the respective governing body by the executive head upon request from the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services together with the comments of the executive head, as appropriate. In the case of UNRWA, which reports directly to the General Assembly and has a separate audit function, it is suggested that significant audit reports should be submitted to the General Assembly after consultation with the Office. For ITC, UNCHS/Habitat and UNDCP, there are established reporting lines to intergovernmental bodies which are not within the strict definition of governing bodies, but which could assume this role for purposes of accountability.

42. Following the underlying philosophy of General Assembly resolution 48/218 B, it would seem appropriate that the Assembly, as the highest legislative and oversight body of the Organization, should be kept informed on a regular basis and in a concise fashion about the effectiveness of internal oversight in the various parts of the Organization. This could be achieved through a summary report which would be compiled and coordinated by the Office of Internal Oversight Services and submitted to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 5 (e) (ii) of resolution 48/218 B. The report would be based on submissions from the operational funds and programmes which would be forwarded to the Office by their executive heads after discussion and approval, as appropriate, by the respective governing bodies.

43. In order to further strengthen a unified approach to internal oversight throughout the Organization, the above-mentioned report should be submitted to the General Assembly together with comments, if any, by the Office of Internal Oversight Services. The comments of the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit would be solicited, as appropriate, as stipulated in resolution 48/218 B. In order to enable the Office to provide its comments, the annual work plans of the funds' and programmes' internal oversight units should be transmitted to the Office for information, together with copies of final reports issued by those units. Furthermore, it is understood that, in accordance with its Organization-wide mandate, the Office would carry out reviews of internal oversight units whenever there are sufficient reasons to believe that oversight mechanisms are ineffective, and otherwise as the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services deems appropriate. Such reviews would recommend to the executive head of the fund or programme corrective measures and adjustments as appropriate.

V. RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation 1

44. The results of our survey indicated the existence of dedicated monitoring units in some funds and programmes, whereas in others the monitoring tasks are accomplished through other organizational units. In view of the refocusing of programme performance monitoring and evaluation as promoted by the Office of Internal Oversight Services, it is recommended that the monitoring concept be viewed and developed as part of the managerial responsibility. Whatever organizational structure has been used to perform the monitoring tasks, its function should be modified to that of a facilitator, gathering the appropriate data and, most importantly, independently analysing and reporting on the implementation of programme activities. Furthermore, the Office's guidelines on programme monitoring and evaluation should be embraced as a minimum requirement and implemented by those funds and programmes which have certain deficiencies in these areas.

Recommendation 2

45. The current arrangement gives the audit unit responsibility for the inspection function in most funds and programmes. In the experience of the Office, specialized knowledge of the area to be inspected has been essential in forming the inspection team. Additionally, the inspection team must frequently be assembled on short notice, in reaction to a perceived problem. In order to address these two key components of inspection, it is recommended that consideration be given to forming separate inspection units in the larger funds and programmes. Where this is not practical, an inspection team should be formed within the audit unit which is trained to deal with these specialized tasks. The Office also offers its assistance should a fund or programme decide not to establish its own inspection function.

Recommendation 3

46. Of the surveyed funds and programmes, only WFP has established a unit similar to the Office's Investigations Section. Currently, the Office provides investigation services to any fund or programme if requested and the necessary priority is established. In order to provide more effective coverage, resources must be allocated by the individual fund or programme to the budget of the Investigations Section. However, the decision to carry out an investigation must not be subject to the availability of resources. For those entities which decide to establish their own investigation function, the operational independence of the unit needs to be ensured along with the development of a confidential reporting facility and procedures to protect those who make reports in good faith or are the subject of such reports.

Recommendation 4

47. The study of the operational funds and programmes determined that in most instances cooperation among oversight units is approached in a rather informal manner. It is recommended that regular monthly meetings be held among the heads of the oversight units and other units performing the designated oversight functions to discuss oversight issues and exchange information. It is further recommended that periodical meetings be held in all funds and programmes between internal oversight units and management at the executive level to address issues of planning and coordination of, and compliance with recommendations resulting from internal oversight activities.

Recommendation 5

48. Surveyed funds and programmes have stressed that the implementation of recommendations from internal oversight activities is monitored during subsequent reviews. The effectiveness of the oversight function can be increased if more emphasis is placed upon ensuring the timely implementation of recommendations. Therefore, it is strongly recommended that internal oversight units in the funds and programmes should develop a mechanism for continually monitoring the implementation of their recommendations. This mechanism should include procedures for addressing non-compliance and reporting on the status of implementation to the executive head.

Recommendation 6

49. The results of the present survey indicate that most of the funds and programmes are lacking adequate reporting procedures. It is recommended that the reporting procedures of funds and programmes follow similar lines as those established for the Office of Internal Oversight Services in paragraph 5 (e) of resolution 48/218 B. Therefore, internal oversight units should be authorized to submit, through their respective executive heads, periodic comprehensive reports and ad hoc reports on specific issues to their governing bodies. Reports of the Office pertaining to a particular fund or programme should be made available by its executive head to its governing body, upon request from the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services, together with the comments of the executive head, as appropriate.

Recommendation 7

50. In order to further strengthen and unify reporting procedures, the Secretary-General recommends complementing the reporting line of the Office of Internal Oversight Services to the General Assembly with a report which contains summary records on internal oversight issues of each operational fund and programme. The sub-parts of the summary report would be drafted by the individual entities, making every effort to avoid duplication of reporting; they would also be submitted to the governing body for review and approval before being transmitted to the Office. The report would provide a tool for the General Assembly to monitor internal oversight activities within the individual organizations and provide a comprehensive overview of the achieved improvements and areas of concern to be addressed in the future.

Recommendation 8

51. In view of its responsibility for the enhancement of internal oversight mechanisms in the operational funds and programmes as well as its coordinating role, the Office of Internal Oversight Services should have the authority to seek and obtain any relevant information, specific or general, from the internal oversight entities or the concerned executive heads. It should also have the right to comment, if necessary, on the quality and adequacy of the oversight activities of funds and programmes as they would be reported to the General Assembly following recommendation 7 above.

Notes

² Note that UNDP's expenditure does not follow this characterization; neither does UNEP and UNCHS/Habitat.

³ Internal audit committees are usually composed of the heads of the oversight units as well as other division/bureau heads. A similar arrangement exists for UNFPA, where audit, evaluation and monitoring issues are reviewed and discussed regularly by the UNFPA Executive Committee, chaired by the Executive Director (members include all senior management).
