Public information

(Programme 23 of the medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001)

Overview

- 26.1 The activities proposed in this section correspond to programme 23, Public information, of the medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001 (A/51/6/Rev.1 and Rev.1/Corr.1) and will be implemented by the Department of Public Information. The mandate for the programme lies in the responsibilities entrusted to the Secretariat by the General Assembly, initially in its resolution 13 (1) of 13 February 1946, and further elaborated in subsequent resolutions of the Assembly on questions relating to information, the most recent being resolution 51/138 of 13 December 1996. As the focal point for public information activities of the United Nations, the Department continues to make concerted efforts to enhance the image of the Organization and to promote an informed understanding of its work among peoples of the world through the implementation of programme activities mandated by the General Assembly, keeping in view the purposes and principles of the Charter and the priority areas defined by the Assembly.
- 26.2 In the biennium 1996-1997, the Department continued to focus on the dissemination of information through electronic networks and databases. The Department has successfully led the Organization's efforts to harness the use of new communication technologies such as the Internet, by launching the United Nations Home Page on the World Wide Web. Furthermore, to respond to the surge in media and public interest in the work of the Organization, the Department developed and implemented information strategies aimed at sharpening its focus on specific United Nations issues, expanding communication links with the various commissions, specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and forming new partnerships with the media, non-governmental organizations, educational institutions and businesses to ensure a multiplier effect of its information outreach programmes. An example of the latter was the organization by the Department in November 1996 of the first United Nations World TV Forum, in collaboration with the Government of Italy and Radio e Televisione Italiana.
- 26.3 The priority for the Department's 1998-1999 work programme will be substantially to consolidate and expand its worldwide outreach to its core audiences, in particular those who shape policy and opinion, including the influential new media groups that are having an increasingly crucial impact in every part of the world. As the Organization approaches the new millennium, the Department intends to continue to take every advantage presented by the new information and communication technologies to develop and implement comprehensive and coherent information strategies that showcase the United Nations as an effective organization capable of dealing with issues of concern to the peoples of the world. The implementation of this programme will require both close cooperation with members of the United Nations system, Member States, media and non-governmental organizations, educational institutions and the business community, as well as the effective deployment of available staff and resources. The Department will design an effective outreach programme that utilizes various channels of both modern communication technologies and traditional media to communicate the message of the United Nations more clearly and persuasively to all targeted audiences.
- 26.4 The proposed programme budget covers the current departmental structure comprising:
- (a) The Office of the Assistant Secretary-General, which provides overall guidance on public information policies and strategies and maintains close contact with permanent representatives of Member States and observers, including heads of other departments of the Secretariat, offices and specialized agencies of the United Nations system. It also provides secretariat services to the Committee on Information, the Joint United Nations Information Committee and the Publications Board. The Executive Office and Programme Evaluation and Committee Liaison Unit are integral parts of the Office of the Assistant Secretary-General, responsible for providing administrative, financial and personnel support, and programme performance reporting, monitoring and evaluation, respectively;

- (b) The Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General, in collaboration with the Office of the Assistant Secretary-General, is responsible for managing the Secretary-General's media-related activities and conducting daily briefings for correspondents and members of permanent missions;
- (c) The Media Division is responsible for planning and managing the production and distribution of information materials and coverage of meetings and other activities of the United Nations. It maintains audio-visual and photo libraries and provides services to accredited correspondents and broadcasting organizations and undertakes daily, weekly and monthly media analysis for the Secretary-General and senior officials;
- (d) The Promotion and Public Services Division is responsible for the development and implementation of thematic information and promotion products, strategies and policies for the promotion of United Nations issues, programmes, special events and activities in cooperation with substantive departments, including developing outreach programmes to non-governmental organizations, United Nations associations and institutions;
- (e) The Library and Publications Division includes the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and the Publications Service (subprogrammes 3 and 4) and is responsible for the development of policies on the work programmes of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, including coordination and cooperation with other United Nations system and depository libraries. It is also responsible for the planning and management of recurrent publications;
- (f) The Information Centres Service reports directly to the Assistant Secretary-General in order to provide substantive guidance to the network of information centres;
- (g) The Committee on Information oversees the work of the Secretariat and other subprogrammes relating to public information. The Committee on Conferences is responsible for monitoring the policy of the Organization on publications. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, it exercises that role over United Nations publications policy with the assistance of the Publications Board, taking into account the views of the Committee on Information and other relevant bodies.

26.5 The budget proposals for the Department of Public Information reflect a net negative growth rate of 1.8 per cent. The overall level of human resources, as indicated in table 26.3, reflects, inter alia, the abolition of 28 Professional level posts, 24 General Service posts and 29 posts under other categories, and the redeployment of one P-4 post to section 8 of the regular budget. The overall level of resources also includes reductions in the amount of $9,900 for travel, $287,000 for general operating expenses, $83,500 for hospitality, $261,500 for supplies and materials and $40,000 for grants and contributions. Increases are requested under other staff costs ($469,500), contractual services ($736,800) and furniture and equipment ($659,900).

26.6 The estimated percentage distribution of the total resources of the major programme in 1998-1999 would be as follows:

	Regular budget	Extra- budgetary

A. Programme of work

26.8 The programme of work to be undertaken during the biennium 1998-1999 is presented below with the four subprogrammes: promotional services, information services, library services and publication services. The activities to be implemented under the programme will be implemented by the following organizational units: Office of the Assistant Secretary-General (OASG), Media Division (MD), Promotion and Public Services Division (PPSD), Information Centres Service, Library and Publications Division (LPD), United Nations Information Service at Geneva (UNIS/GVA), United Nations Information Service at Vienna (UNIS/VIE) and United Nations information centres and field offices.

Subprogramme 1 Promotional services

26.9 The subprogramme will be implemented by PPSD, ICS, UNIS/GVA, UNIS/VIE and the United Nations information centres and field offices.

- 26.10 The major objectives of the subprogramme are to ensure that the United Nations speaks with one voice about the common goals of the Organization; to establish a programme of action to counter misconceptions about the work of the Organization; to develop thematically integrated information strategies and activities and to ensure the timely production of information materials and the launching of activities in order to create an informed public understanding of the work of the United Nations. To that end, the focus of the subprogramme will be on the role of the Organization in furthering economic and social development, democracy and human rights and peace and security, and enhancing the image of the United Nations as an efficient and effective organization capable of meeting the challenges posed in a rapidly changing international environment.
- 26.11 With those objectives in mind, the subprogramme will utilize traditional media of print, radio, television and video and will take advantage of the fourth medium, that is, electronic communications, including the Internet and the World Wide Web, to promote the work of the Organization. In this regard, PPSD will place emphasis on upgrading its technical capability, in the form of training and equipment, to enable it to keep pace with developments, as well as growing demands for information and the potential for reaching new audiences in the area of electronic communications. To take full advantage of the new medium, print materials produced by the Division will, to the extent possible, also be adapted for posting on the United Nations Home Page on the World Wide Web.
- 26.12 The Division will make full use of all four media to produce public information materials designed especially for direct public consumption, as well as material geared towards key redissemulators such as the media, educational institutions, government agencies and civil society, including non-governmental organizations (NGOs), the private sector and youth organizations, which the Department of Public Information relies upon as partners in the effort to promote the work of the Organization as widely as possible. Innovative ways to strengthen the dissemination of information to these key redissemulators, including sectors previously untapped, will be pursued in the form of special events, seminars, workshops and other activities focusing on key themes. Services to the public, including guided tours at Headquarters and the Palais des Nations, Geneva, will also continue to be a priority.
- 26.13 PPSD will work closely with other substantive departments in the Secretariat, as well as specialized agencies and programmes, to define the themes to be highlighted throughout the biennium and to coordinate the public information activities of the Organization with a view to presenting a unified image. To that end, the Division will, for its part, seek to develop further the coordinating mechanism on the public information components of peacekeeping and other field missions, which was established at its initiative with the cooperation of the Departments of Peacekeeping Operations, Political Affairs and Humanitarian Affairs. It will also seek to strengthen the cooperation between the Department of Public Information and the substantive departments in the economic and social fields to ensure the promotion of various priority issues such as sustainable development, ageing, drug abuse, crime control, women and economic development. In the area of human rights, the Division and UNIS/GVA will work closely with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights/Centre for Human Rights. UNIS/GVA will work closely with the secretariat of the Conference on Disarmament.
- 26.14 The global networks of information centres and the information services in Geneva and Vienna promote an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the Organization. ICS provides these information networks with guidelines for public information strategies; plans their work programme and monitors performance; and allocates the budget and oversees the financial and administrative management of centres. ICS is responsible for the establishment of new information centres in Member States, as mandated, and for liaison with national Governments and Secretariat offices on all matters pertaining to the operation of the centres. It provides ongoing guidance to the centres in their efforts to promote the United Nations message through redissemulators, especially media organizations, NGOs and educational institutions. It also supplies the centres with the latest information on United Nations issues and activities, via traditional and electronic means, provides guidance on all communication issues and develops or upgrades software for its network of overseas offices.
- 26.15 During the biennium 1998-1999, ICS will continue to explore and implement the most efficient and cost-effective ways of ensuring the maximum level of programme delivery by the United Nations information centres. It will provide the centres with sustained programme support and timely administrative response and encourage them to cultivate new partnerships and collaborative arrangements with various segments of the local civil society. Computerization and professional training, including briefing sessions by occupational category, will continue to the extent possible within increasingly limited resource allocations.

Subprogramme 2

Information services

- 26.17 The subprogramme will be implemented by MD, OSSG, the network of United Nations information centres and field offices, UNIS/GVA and UNIS/VIE.
- 26.18 The major objective of this subprogramme is to meet the increasing needs for information on the activities of the Organization, the Secretary-General and senior officials. Other objectives include the provision of timely and authoritative information by the Spokesman for the Secretary-General to media representatives, the provision of timely and adaptable information materials through the United Nations information centres to meet regional and local needs, the establishment of an international broadcasting system and monitoring of international trends and events as reflected in the media, as well as coverage of the Organization and the Secretary-General by major media networks.
- 26.19 MD, OSSG, the network of United Nations information centres and field offices, UNIS/GVA and UNIS/VIE will design and implement a multimedia programme of coverage, promotional, communication and dissemination activities on the vision and actions of the United Nations in addressing issues of international concern in a changing world as it approaches the twenty-first century. During the biennium, the subprogramme will focus on developing wider outreach to new constituencies, achieving greater impact through the use of modern communication technologies and a flexible allocation of resources to achieve optimal efficiency. MD will set priorities for programme production and delivery and will develop a feedback mechanism for better evaluation of the outreach, impact and cost-effectiveness of its activities. ICS will set public information strategy policy and the programme of work with a view to ensuring the most efficient and cost-effective programme delivery by the centres.
- 26.20 Subprogramme activities will provide multilingual coverage and information output through the media of press releases, radio programmes, television, video and photographs on the meetings and actions of the United Nations at Headquarters, at regional and field offices and peacekeeping and humanitarian assistance missions worldwide. Information output and dissemination will also reflect, in professional media formats, priority issues of the Organization and the common system in order to promote universal understanding of these issues and better international cooperation in addressing them.

- 26.21 Coverage and information output will be produced and distributed, taking into account the specific needs of redisseminators and target audiences. These include national and international media, delegations, NGOs and educational institutions. The subprogramme will devote increasing attention to new actors and potential partners on the international scene such as grass-roots movements, advocacy groups, women's organizations, youth organizations and national and regional audiences of different cultural orientation. Part of the subprogramme activities will also concentrate on keeping the Secretary-General and his senior aides promptly and fully informed of media coverage of the United Nations, national and international trends of interest to the Organization and breaking developments around the world. Providing accreditation and coverage facilities to international media representatives at Headquarters, the Palais des Nations, Geneva, and United Nations conferences away from Headquarters is also one of the important activities of the subprogramme.
- 26.22 The acquisition and use of modern communication technologies in the implementation of subprogramme activities is designed to enhance outreach, trim cost and, at Headquarters and in the field, maximize impact through achieving better value for the same resources. Foremost among these technologies will be the use of the Internet for the transmission of multimedia output (text, audio, video and photo), the use of resource-saving digital audio and video editing, mixing and production systems, digital graphic technology, digital and direct radio transmission channels and the integration of audio-visual archives for fast electronic dissemination to international audiences. For example, the posting of press releases on the Internet will achieve greater accessibility by users, far beyond the press racks at Headquarters. The introduction of United Nations Radio news and features on the Internet will gradually change the mode of transmission and availability to a fast-growing number of Internet broadcasters and end-users.
- 26.23 At major United Nations centres and the field level, the focus would be on strengthening the capabilities of the network of United Nations information centres and field offices and the Information Services at Geneva and Vienna, and on delivering quick and comprehensive information by enhancing their access to modern communications technology. Depending on local conditions, some United Nations information centres will develop their own home pages on the WorldWide Web containing United Nations information in local languages and responding to the particular interests of the region. As electronic communication becomes more common around the world, United Nations information centres will increase their redissemination of United Nations information via e-mail. At the same time, they will profit from the continued development of the United Nations Home Page on the WorldWide Web and such facilities as the optical disk system. In addition, the United Nations information centres and field offices and the Information Services at Geneva and Vienna will strengthen the broad range of activities designed to promote a better understanding of the United Nations goals and activities.

Library services

- 26.25 The subprogramme will be implemented by the Library and Publications Division (LPD) and the network of United Nations information centres and field offices, UNIS/GVA and UNIS/VIE.
- 26.26 The main objectives of this subprogramme are to provide library services to staff members, delegates, missions, specialized agencies, NGOs and researchers; to ensure the continuous development and management of an accessible archival system of United Nations documents and publications; to facilitate the research needs of its clients; to provide the most useful electronic services possible and to train clients in their use; and to maintain a system of United Nations depository libraries. Library services are implemented by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library in LPD.
- 26.27 The direction of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library is towards that of a library without walls whose foundation is technological innovations. The Library, recognizing the need of users for remote access to full-text information, would plan to design and implement a virtual library where members of the United Nations community will be able to identify materials in any collection and ask for loan/inter-library loans, and find and download articles in full text from journals. Increasing the provision of on-line information services will assist in achieving that goal.
- 26.28 The introduction of an integrated library management system is but one of many technological innovation projects designed to meet this demand and to make a quantum leap towards the virtual library of the future. The Internet and its offspring, the interface with the optical disk system and preservation of the archival collection of United Nations documents through imaging are but a few of the many others.

- 26.29 The Dag Hammarskjöld Library is planning to continue to link its United Nations Bibliographic Information System (UNBIS) to the optical disk system to create a complete United Nations documentation resource for the Organization. Through more innovative use of technology, the UNBIS catalogue will become a much richer tool that will provide a truly interactive resource. The Library plans to catalogue the United Nations system's Internet sites, providing access through UNBIS, and is creating online access to the image files of United Nations maps. The Library will be networking with other United Nations agencies through the Information Systems Coordination Committee in joint projects aimed at making United Nations system information widely available. All of these projects are envisioned to serve not only the Organization, but also to reach out to a worldwide user community of Governments, depository libraries and the public at large.
- 26.30 As electronic resources multiply, the Dag Hammarskjöld Library will be the gateway to a vast depository of information resources, with librarians performing the functions of navigators to the ocean of electronic and traditional resources.
- 26.31 The network of United Nations information centres operates United Nations document reference collections containing mainly United Nations parliamentary documents, reports and sales publications in close cooperation with the Dag Hammarskjöld Library. The main objective of these regional and local collections is to promote the unrestricted access to United Nations information by researchers, students, parliamentarians and the general public.

Subprogramme 4 Publication services

- 26.33 The subprogramme will be implemented by LPD.
- 26.34 The main objectives of the subprogramme are to provide essential authoritative publications, both recurrent and non-recurrent, that would serve as reference materials and increase the dissemination of information; to enhance outreach by producing a number of publications targeted for general readership by explaining the role and activities of the United Nations; and to implement the above in a timely and cost-effective manner.
- 26.35 The work of the Publications Service centres around the writing and production of periodicals, books and other publications. The Service also provides design services to the Organization and plans and oversees the production and printing of Secretariat publications.
- 26.36 The Service's publications are designed to provide authoritative information on the goals and activities of the Organization and to reflect the vital role it plays in meeting compelling contemporary challenges. Despite the proliferation of powerful new media, authoritative publications continue to have long-term impact on opinion and policy; the principal target groups as such are the media, the academic community, NGOs and other public and official institutions.
- 26.37 With the Service's focus now directed exclusively at publications, a significant reorientation will be carried out through changes in content and presentation. The priority is to make Department of Public Information publications more marketable, more widely available, more cost-effective and more timely. These goals are being met through an extensive training programme for staff at all levels and through:
- (a) A more rigorous, demand-driven approach to formulating content and writing style, resulting from closer collaboration with the Sales and Marketing Section and from planned reader surveys. At the same time, publications are being carefully differentiated and profiled in order to promote their marketability and impact in what is an intensely competitive market. More of our publications will be for sale, including the periodical Africa Recovery, and the UN Chronicle will be published bimonthly, rather than quarterly, in order to make it more timely;
 - (b) Closer system-wide collaboration with substantive units, which has helped sharpen and given greater authority to each publication's message and content;
 - (c) A growing use of electronic publishing, which will significantly widen outreach to new audiences and constituencies. It will also help reduce the print runs and therefore the cost of several publications;
 - (d) The deployment of advanced publications technology, which is replacing antiquated word-processing equipment and providing, at lower cost, speed, flexibility and higher-quality graphic presentation. This will also permit a more streamlined editorial process, enabling different units to utilize the research and writing already done by other parts of the department. Decentralized desk-top publication is also resulting in each unit's becoming more self-sufficient in formatting and production, thereby eliminating bottlenecks associated with central processing units;
 - (e) Cost-effectiveness is also being pursued through much greater use of the Secretariat's reproduction facilities.
- 26.38 Another priority of the Service will be enhanced control and streamlining of the complex production process for the Secretariat's publications, a process spanning at least 20 separate units spread across many departments and offices. Steps to strengthen the Service's role in production and coordination of publications include giving the overall responsibility for the area to a more senior manager, by moving the Production and Coordination Unit to the Editorial Section.

Activities

26.39 During the biennium the following activities will be undertaken:

- (a) Other substantive activities
 - (i) Published materials
 - a. Mandated recurrent publications. The Yearbook of the United Nations (annual, in English) and the UN Chronicle (six issues annually, in English and French); and *Africa Recovery*¹ (quarterly, in English and French) (LPD);
 - b. Discretionary recurrent publications. Basic Facts About the United Nations (biennial, in English, French and Spanish); the Annual Report of the Secretary-General on the Work of the Organization (annual, in all six official languages); Guide to Information at the United Nations (biennial, in English and French) (LPD);
 - (ii) Booklets, pamphlets, fact sheets, wall charts, information kits. Briefing Paper (formerly Notes for Speakers) (annual, in English, French and Spanish); Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice (reprints in six official languages, as required); General Assembly media kit (annually) (LPD);
 - (iii) Other technical assistance services
 - a. Oversight and management of the production of all official publications. Working in close cooperation with the Office of Conference and Support Services and all author departments, the Service advises departments on printing costs and options and prepares technical specifications for print materials (LPD);
 - b. Design services to the Secretariat. Design standards and guidelines are determined, and design, typesetting and camera-ready mechanical and computer-generated art work are prepared, including for logos, promotional materials, posters and publications (LPD).

The Service provides services for visitors and administers the guided tour programme at the Vienna International Centre, for which provision is made under income section 3.

- 26.110 In addition, the Service serves as the information centre for Austria and Hungary, and also responds to public inquiries from other Central and Eastern European countries as required. In that capacity, it strengthens contact with key public opinion leaders, including government officials, parliamentarians, local media, educational and academic institutions and NGOs in order to promote an informed understanding of the role of the Organization in peacekeeping, peacemaking and post-conflict peace-building and to stimulate public support for the Organization's activities in the political, economic, social and humanitarian fields.

Other staff costs

- 26.112 The estimate of $84,900 includes a reduction of $32,400 and would provide for general temporary assistance to cover the costs of hiring temporary replacement of staff on extended sick leave or maternity leave; for additional capacity for English and French press coverage of United Nations meetings at Vienna; and for additional support required during peak periods in connection with promotion campaigns and the coverage of special observances and events, as well as during visits of the Secretary-General.

Travel

- 26.113 The estimated requirements of $9,100 reflect a reduction of $5,100 and relate to travel of the Director to Hungary and Slovakia for consultations with government officials; and travel of staff within Austria on information dissemination assignments and contacts with NGOs, as well as participation of staff in special United Nations information events and observance ceremonies.

Contractual services

- 26.114 The estimate of $34,400 would cover the cost of translation ($11,000) and printing ($9,500) of information booklets, pamphlets and brochures in both German and Hungarian; and subscriptions to news agency wire services ($13,900).

General operating expenses

- 26.115 The provision of $9,800 relates to maintenance costs for data-processing equipment.

Hospitality

- 26.116 Proposed hospitality expenses are estimated at $900 and relate to official functions in connection with visiting government officials and journalists invited to press conferences on important United Nations issues at the Vienna International Centre.

Supplies and materials

- 26.117 The estimated requirements of $18,500 relate to stationery and office supplies, and supplies of raw stock materials for photo, television and radio coverage of United Nations conferences and meetings at Vienna.

- 26.119 The United Nations information centres are one of the most important means of disseminating information about the United Nations and its activities to the peoples of the world as their operations cover the whole spectrum of promotional and information services.
- 26.120 The primary objective of United Nations information centres is to promote an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the United Nations among the peoples in the regions and countries of their operation. That objective is achieved through development of activities on United Nations priority issues, major conferences, special events and observances that are aimed at reaching the widest possible audiences through the media, governmental and NGOs, educational institutions, professional associations and others. The centres maintain close working relations with other United Nations agencies and programmes represented in the country with a view to implementing approved activities through a common strategy. They disseminate information products received from Headquarters, often adapting them to maximize local utilization. They provide regular feedback on their activities and on the effectiveness of public information products received. Centre staff speak to groups and organize lectures at schools, universities, professional and business associations, appear on radio and television programmes and respond to public inquiries on United Nations priority issues.
- 26.121 Information centres play a vital role in collecting, analysing, summarizing and providing Headquarters with political analysis, media summaries and clippings on developments relating to international peace and security for use by the Secretary-General and senior officials. During visits of the Secretary-General and senior officials, information centres analyse local media coverage. That information allows United Nations officials to gauge the extent of informed understanding and support secured for the work of the United Nations. The Centres provide the Secretary-General and senior officials with media liaison and other assistance.
- 26.122 The United Nations information centre network strives to maintain adequate regional and linguistic balance in order to ensure the highest possible local presence for United Nations activities, purposes and programmes and to stimulate public awareness about its tasks and responsibilities.
- 26.123 United Nations information centres are often called upon to carry out a variety of ad hoc tasks for other departments of the Secretariat and United Nations agencies.

- 26.124 By its resolution 48/209 of 21 December 1993, the General Assembly approved the establishment of nine United Nations field offices, in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Eritrea, Georgia, Kazakstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and Uzbekistan, with, inter alia, the mandate to carry out public information activities. It is not expected that the scope and scale of information activities in the United Nations field offices during 1998-1999 will exceed the current level.

Resource requirements (at current rates)Posts

- 26.125 The estimated requirements of $23,386,200 relate to the proposed staffing shown in table 26.24. The proposed staffing table reflects the inward redeployment to United Nations information centres and field offices of one D-1 and one P-3 post. It also includes the proposed abolition of 7 P-5, 2 P-4, 1 P-3, 23 Local level and 6 National Officer posts, as a result of the rationalization of the staffing structure of a number of United Nations information centres.

Other staff costs

- 26.126 The estimate of $358,500 relates to the following expenditures: (a) $206,200 for general temporary assistance to cover the cost of day and night security/watchmen, cleaners, drivers and messengers; and to cover replacement requirements for staff on mission assignments, extended sick and maternity leave; and (b) $152,300 for overtime for staff in connection with Directors' official engagements, as well as engagements pertaining to visits by the Secretary-General and other senior United Nations officials, and during periods of peak workload.

Travel

- 26.127 The estimate of $387,900, including a reduction of $48,600, would cover the cost of travel by United Nations information centre Directors and National Officers within the centres' areas of coverage in order to promote to the widest possible extent the aims and purposes of the Organization. This involves giving lectures, attending United Nations observances, media events and meetings of governmental institutions and NGOs, as well as participation in teaching school students on the United Nations.
