in southern Africa in order to assist them in coping with the situation resulting from the acts of aggression and destabilization committed by the apartheid régime of South Africa,

Taking note with appreciation of the consultations undertaken by the Secretary-General to establish within the United Nations system a mechanism to ensure the implementation and overall co-ordination of relief programmes for internally displaced persons,

Noting with indignation that South Africa's policy of apartheid and its direct and indirect acts of aggression, intimidation and destabilization through armed terrorists continue to be the main causes of refugee flows and increasing displacement of persons in southern Africa,

Convinced that there is an urgent need for the international community to extend maximum and concerted assistance to southern African countries sheltering refugees, returnees and displaced persons and also to highlight the plight of these persons,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General on the International Conference on the Plight of Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in Southern Africa;

2. Reaffirms the need to continue the implementation of the Oslo Declaration and Plan of Action on the Plight of Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in Southern Africa adopted by the Conference;

3. Expresses its gratitude to the countries and organizations that have given assistance to the countries in southern Africa to enable them to cope with the situation of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in their countries;

4. Calls upon the international community to provide increased assistance to the countries of southern Africa to enable them to strengthen their capacity to provide the necessary facilities and services for the care and well-being of the refugees, returnees and displaced persons in their countries;

5. Reiterates its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his efforts, on behalf of the international community, to organize and mobilize special programmes of economic assistance for the front-line and other neighbouring States to help them withstand the effects of the acts of aggression and destabilization committed by the apartheid régime of South Africa;

6. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts made by the Secretary-General, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme to implement those specific tasks and responsibilities assigned to them in the Oslo Declaration and Plan of Action, and encourages them to continue their efforts;

7. Endorses the recommendation of the Secretary-General aimed at assigning to the United Nations resident co-ordinators the function of co-ordinating assistance for internally displaced persons, in close co-operation with Governments, local representatives of donor countries and United Nations agencies in the field;

8. Once again urges all Member States, organizations of the United Nations system and governmental and non-governmental organizations to undertake the measures as required of them under the Oslo Declaration and Plan of Action;

9. Decides to consider this question at its forty-fifth session on the basis of a report to be submitted by the Secretary-General.

Other African countries

Chad

In response to a 1988 General Assembly request,(12) the Secretary-General reported(13) in October 1989 on emergency assistance to voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad. UNHCR'S special programme, which was extended several times until 31 March 1989, provided assistance to returnees in the country. At the end of 1988, approximately 103,000 returnees had benefited from the programme, which included provision of food, blankets, household utensils, seeds and agricultural tools, as well as transportation costs. When the programme closed in March, $2.25 million had been spent. Limited repatriation continued in 1989, particularly from Cameroon, the Central African Republic and Nigeria.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/153 on 15 December without vote.

Assistance to voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/143 of 8 December 1988 on emergency assistance to voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad, as well as all its previous resolutions on this question,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Deeply concerned about the persistence of the harmful effects of the natural calamities that are compounding the already precarious food and health situation in Chad,

Considering that the large number of voluntary returnees poses serious social and economic problems for the Government of Chad,

Considering also that the return of displaced persons in the northern region poses serious resettlement problems for the Government of Chad,

Bearing in mind the many appeals made by the Government of Chad for international assistance to the voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad,

1. Endorses the appeals made by the Government of Chad for humanitarian assistance to the voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad;

2. Reiterates its appeal to all States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to support, by generous contributions, the efforts being made by the Government of Chad to assist and resettle the voluntary returnees and displaced persons;

3. Notes with satisfaction the action taken by the various organizations of the United Nations system and the specialized agencies with a view to mobilizing humanitarian assistance to the voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad;

4. Again requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator to mobilize humanitarian assistance to the voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad;

5. Calls upon:

(a) The Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize special humanitarian assistance for the resettlement of displaced persons in the northern region of Chad;

(b) The international community to support the efforts made by the Government of Chad to implement the programmes for repatriating and resettling the voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator, to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Djibouti

In response to a 1988 General Assembly request,(14) the Secretary-General in July 1989 reported(15) on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Djibouti. With full co-operation from the Government, UNHCR had mobilized resources throughout 1988 and the first half of 1989, successfully determining a durable solution for the majority of some 13,000 refugees living in Djibouti-Ville and at the Dikhil camp. Following the departure of 6,455 Djibouti nationals in 1988 from the Dikhil camp, who settled elsewhere in the country, 5,671 Ethiopian refugees, by 14 February 1989, had voluntarily repatriated. As a result, the camp closed by the end of March. The remaining 1,500 refugees in Djibouti, all Ethiopians, received supplementary aid and counselling, educational and medical services from UNHCR. In addition, some 35,000 Somalis fled to Djibouti as a result of armed conflict in north-west Somalia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/150 without vote.

Humanitarian assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Djibouti

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/126 of 7 December 1987 and 43/142 of 8 December 1988 on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Djibouti, as well as all its previous resolutions on this question,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Djibouti,

Deeply concerned about the recent inflow of over thirty-live thousand externally displaced persons, which has added considerably to the burden already being carried by Djibouti in respect of refugees in the country,

Noting that Djibouti is considered one of the least developed countries and that the recent inflow of large numbers of externally displaced persons and the continued presence of refugees have severely strained the already inadequate social and economic infrastructure,

Noting also that the present situation has required the diversion of scarce resources from development to emergency relief and precautionary measures,

Appreciating the determined and sustained efforts made by the Government of Djibouti to cope with the growing needs of refugees and externally displaced persons,

Noting with appreciation the steps taken by the Government of Djibouti, in close co-operation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, to implement appropriate and lasting solutions with respect to the refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti,

Noting with satisfaction that over six thousand refugees have been settled and integrated in Djibouti, despite the physical, social and economic obstacles that the country faces,

Appreciating the assistance provided by Member States, the specialized agencies, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and voluntary agencies to the ongoing relief and rehabilitation programmes for the refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Djibouti and appreciates the efforts of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to keep the situation under constant review;

2. Welcomes the steps taken by the Government of Djibouti, in close co-operation with the High Commissioner, to implement appropriate and lasting solutions with respect to the refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti;

3. Expresses its appreciation to Member States, the specialized agencies, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and voluntary agencies for their assistance to the relief and rehabilitation programmes for the refugees and externally displaced persons in Djibouti;

4. Urges the High Commissioner to intensify his efforts to mobilize, on an emergency basis, the resources necessary to implement lasting solutions with respect to the refugees in Djibouti and the increasing inflow of externally displaced persons;

5. Call upon all Member States, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to support the determined and sustained efforts made by the Government of Djibouti to cope with the urgent needs of refugees and externally displaced persons and to implement lasting solutions as regards their situation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the present resolution.

Ethiopia

In response to a 1988 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁶⁾ the Secretary-General reported⁽¹⁷⁾ in September on assistance to refugees and returnees in Ethiopia.

The influx of Sudanese refugees into south-western Ethiopia continued at an average of 4,400 persons per month. By the end of 1989, the total refugee population was 384,989. UNHCR spent $26.8 million to assist them, 76 per cent of that amount for transport. All refugee shelters were sprayed twice a year with insecticide to control malaria outbreaks and adequate numbers of refuse disposal pits had been constructed. The morbidity and mortality rate dropped considerably as a result of strengthened primary care activities. Some 90 refugees were undergoing training as community health agents and traditional birth attendants.

Throughout 1989, a steady influx of Somali refugees into eastern Ethiopia continued. In August, the five camps hosting Somali refugees were occupied by 324,808 persons. In late 1989, a new camp was established for 10,000 new Somali refugees. Following completion of geological surveys, exploratory drilling was taking place in the Jerrer Valley for a proposed piped water supply system. WFP contributed 63,452 metric tons of food, worth $16.5 million, for Somali refugees. UNHCR provided $34.2 million to assist refugees, with $6.2 million worth of food contributions to augment WFP food aid.

Repatriation of Ethiopian refugees from Somalia and Djibouti continued. Some 4,704 returnees from Somalia, reintegrated in southern Ethiopia during 1989, received cash grants, water, food and shelters. In May, a UNHCR technical mission launched studies aimed at increasing the receiving capacity in southern Ethiopia and to prepare for a possible large-scale repatriation of Ethiopian refugees from Somalia. By the end of February 1989, some 5,600 refugees had voluntarily repatriated from Djibouti.

UNHCR's total expenditures in Ethiopia during 1989 amounted to $89.5 million.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/154 without vote.

Assistance to refugees and returnees in Ethiopia
The General Assembly,

Recalling all its resolutions, in particular resolution 43/144 of 8 December 1988, as well as all those of the Economic and Social Council, on assistance to displaced persons in Ethiopia,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,
Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Recognizing the increasing number of refugees and voluntary returnees in Ethiopia,

Deeply concerned about the massive flow of refugees and voluntary returnees into the country and the enormous burden this has placed on the country's infrastructure and meagre resources,

Deeply concerned also about the grave consequences this has entailed for the country's capability to grapple with the effects of the prolonged drought,

Aware of the heavy burden placed on the Government of Ethiopia and of the need for adequate assistance to refugees, voluntary returnees and victims of natural disasters,

1. Commends the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and intergovernmental organizations and voluntary agencies for their assistance in mitigating the plight of the large number of refugees and voluntary returnees in Ethiopia;

2. Appeals to Member States and to international organizations and voluntary agencies to provide adequate material, financial and technical assistance for relief and rehabilitation programmes for the large number of refugees and voluntary returnees in Ethiopia;

3. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue his efforts to mobilize humanitarian assistance for the relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of voluntary returnees and the large number of refugees in Ethiopia;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to apprise the Economic and Social Council, at its second regular session of 1990, of the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Somalia

In response to a 1988 General Assembly request,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Secretary-General in August reported on assistance to refugees in Somalia.

In February/March, a UN inter-agency mission to Somalia assessed urgent humanitarian requirements and recommended that measures be taken to ensure both the safety of refugees and the civilian nature of those assisted. The mission was dispatched after Somalia requested assistance to cope with the country's emergency situation caused by armed conflict (see PART THREE, Chapter III).

Refugees hosted in Somalia, all of Ethiopian origin, numbered 600,000 in 1989. At high-level negotiations between UNHCR and Somalia (Geneva, 17-25 May; Mogadishu, 12-14 June), agreement was reached on general principles and implementation modalities of the refugee programme. It dealt with voluntary repatriation, spontaneous local integration and assistance to refugees. Later, a tripartite commission, consisting of representatives of Ethiopia, Somalia and UNHCR, was established.

An organized voluntary repatriation programme for the Gedo region continued, with 4,700 repatriated in 1989. Total operational expenditures for voluntary repatriation in 1989 amounted to $1.59 million. While UNHCR, WFP and Somalia agreed to continue food rations for a fixed period, during which civilians in the camps would be re-registered and assisted to relocate to selected sites outside conflict zones, relocation proved not to be feasible. In August, UNHCR and WFP suspended assistance in north-western Somalia due to security problems. In December, a joint mission to Somalia by UNHCR, the European Community, the World Bank and UNDP outlined projects for the refugee-affected areas.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/152 without vote.

Assistance to refugees in Somalia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 35/180 of 15 December 1980, 36/153 of 16 December 1981, 37/174 of 17 December 1982, 38/88 of 16 December 1983, 39/104 of 14 November 1984, 40/132 of 13 December 1985, 41/138 of 4 December 1986, 42/127 of 7 December 1987 and 43/147 of 8 December 1988 on assistance to refugees in Somalia,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Deeply concerned about the heavy burden that has been placed on the fragile economy of Somalia by the continuing presence of large numbers of refugees,

Noting the circumstances that have made it necessary for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the World Food Programme to suspend temporarily their food and other humanitarian assistance programmes for refugees in the north-west districts of Somalia,

Gravely concerned about the resultant serious food shortages that have occurred in the refugee settlements in the north-west districts of Somalia,

Conscious of the fact that Somalia, as a least developed country, does not possess the economic or financial capacity to fill the gap created by the temporary suspension of humanitarian assistance programmes for refugees in the north-west districts of Somalia,

Aware of the fact that Somalia does not have the capacity to provide humanitarian assistance from its limited resources,

Noting with concern the deleterious effect of the presence of refugees on the environment, which has resulted in widespread deforestation, soil erosion and the threat of destruction to an already fragile ecological balance,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the measures that the Government of Somalia is taking to provide material and humanitarian assistance to refugees, in spite of its own limited resources and fragile economy;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, donor countries and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations for their efforts to assist the refugees in Somalia;

4. Calls upon the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the World Food Programme to resume their assistance programmes for the refugees in the north-west districts of Somalia as soon as possible;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in close co-operation with the Office of the High Commissioner, the World Food Programme and the donor community, to launch an interim assistance programme that would ensure that essential food and other humanitarian supplies continue to reach the refugee settlements in the north-west districts of Somalia until such time as a more permanent arrangement can be made;

6. Appeals to Member States, international organizations and voluntary agencies to give full support to the Secretary-General in the launching of the proposed interim assistance programme;

7. Also appeals to Member States, international organizations and voluntary agencies to render maximum and timely material, financial and technical assistance to enable the Government of Somalia to implement the projects and activities identified in the report of the 1987 inter-agency mission annexed to the report submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its forty-second session as the basis for a comprehensive programme of action relating to both the humanitarian and the developmental needs of refugees;

8. Requests the pertinent organizations of the United Nations system, namely the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organisation, the World Health Organization, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, as well as the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Food Programme, to prepare, in consultation with the Government of Somalia, detailed project documentation for the implementation of those projects and activities identified in the report of the Secretary-General as priority endeavours for a comprehensive programme of action;

9. Calls upon the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue and expand their activities in Somalia, in co-operation with the Government of Somalia, and to protect and rehabilitate its damaged environment;

10. Recognizes the important role that non-governmental organizations are playing with regard to programmes for the care, maintenance and rehabilitation of refugees, particularly in activities related to small-scale development projects, and in the fields of health and agriculture;

11. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme to apprise the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1990 of the progress made in their respective fields of responsibility with regard to those provisions of the present resolution which concern them;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the High Commissioner and the United Nations Development Programme, to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session a report on the progress achieved in the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 44/152

15 December 1989 Meeting 82 Adopted without vote

Sudan

In response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(21) the Secretary-General reported(22) in August on the situation of refugees in the Sudan.

Of an estimated 745,000 refugees in the country, UNHCR assisted 380,000, about 350,000 of whom were from Ethiopia. With the Ugandan returnee operation completed, and a reduced caseload of Chadian refugees in the west, UNHCR focused its efforts on the large Ethiopian refugee population in eastern Sudan. UNHCR worked with the World Bank to prepare an agricultural development project to benefit small farmers, including refugees in settlements. It also co-operated with UNDP in following up recommendations of a 1987 inter-agency mission to the Sudan.(23) Four technical missions, dispatched in March/April 1989, subsequently proposed 33 projects requiring a total of $167 million in donor support in the areas of agriculture ($21.6 million), heat and water ($59.4 million), income generation ($11.3 million) and education ($74.4 million).

In March, a revolving fund for small-scale ventures, employment promotion and income generation for women, particularly refugees in the Sudan, with a total allocation of $268,300 was approved. It was financed by funds from the 1984 Second International Conference on Assistance to Refugees in Africa.(24)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/151 without vote.

Situation of refugees in the Sudan

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/141 of 8 December 1988 and its other previous resolutions on the situation of refugees in the Sudan,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 43/141 and the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Expressing its appreciation for the efforts made by the Government of the Sudan for the reception of the refugees and the provision of protection, shelter, food, education and health and other humanitarian services to the ever increasing number of refugees who have been crossing the borders into the Sudan since the early 1960s, Recognizing the heavy burden shouldered by the people and the Government of the Sudan and the sacrifices they are making to host more than one million refugees, who constitute approximately 7.5 per cent of the total population of the country,

Deeply concerned that the great majority of the refugees have settled of their own accord in various urban and rural communities throughout the country and are thus sharing with the indigenous population the already meagre resources and services,

Expressing grave concern at the devastating and far-reaching effects of the successive calamities, ranging from the drought in 1984 to the torrential rains and floods and locust infestations in 1988, that have afflicted the country, thus exacerbating the already deteriorating situation resulting from the presence of this great number of refugees,

Gravely concerned also that the Government of the Sudan, besides dealing with the difficult prevailing economic and social problems, has the additional task of taking care of more than 1.5 million persons displaced by successive calamities and civil strife in the south,

Recognizing the efforts undertaken by the Government of the Sudan to initiate a wide-ranging rehabilitation programme to redress the damages incurred by the natural disasters,

Considering those serious circumstances, which render the Government of the Sudan less prepared than ever to meet its obligations to its own people, and the more serious consequences, which affect the capacity of the Government of the Sudan to receive and grant asylum to additional numbers of refugees,

Expressing its appreciation for the assistance rendered by Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in support of the refugee programme in the Sudan,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Takes note also of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and, in particular, of the new trends identified in the area of refugee aid and development;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General, the High Commissioner, donor countries and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations for their efforts to assist the refugees in the Sudan;

4. Expresses grave concern at the serious and far-reaching consequences of the presence of massive numbers of refugees on the security and stability of the country and the overall negative impact on its basic infrastructure and socio-economic development;

5. Also expresses grave concern at the shrinking resources available for refugee programmes in the Sudan and the serious consequences of this situation on the country's ability to continue to host and assist refugees;

6. Appeals to Member States, the appropriate organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the international financial institutions to provide the Government of the Sudan with the necessary resources for the implementation of development assistance projects, in particular those prepared by the United Nations Development Programme, in the regions affected by the presence of refugees;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to mobilize the necessary financial and material assistance for the full implementation of ongoing projects in the areas affected by the presence of refugees;

8. Requests the High Commissioner to continue co-ordination with the appropriate specialised agencies in order to consolidate and ensure the continuation of essential services to the refugees in their settlements and to explore ways and means to extend assistance to refugees who have settled of their own accord elsewhere;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the present resolution.

Asia and Oceania

In China, UNHCR implemented 42 projects related to water supply, crop production, forestry, education, animal husbandry, health and income generation to benefit the younger generation among some 280,000 Vietnamese refugees. As a result, some 6,000 jobs were created, some 400 children and youths were admitted to primary schools and a vocational training centre, and some 700 families were provided with housing and drinkable water. UNHCR's financial contribution to these projects totalled $4 million.

As lead agency for repatriation of some 300,000 Kampuchean refugees and displaced persons, UNHCR, following a debate on repatriation at the International Conference on Cambodia (Paris, July/August), prepared draft proposals for a repatriation plan (see PART TWO, Chapter III).

The organized repatriation of Sri Lankan Tamils from south India, which began in 1987, ended in April 1989. At the beginning of 1989, there were 9,549 registered refugees in India comprising some 8,322 Afghans and 1,010 Iranians. Assistance was provided in the form of care and maintenance, including education and vocational training. A total of 1,231 refugees departed for resettlement in third countries; 33 Afghans and 19 Iranians voluntarily repatriated.

During 1989, UNHCR expenditures in the region stood at $67.5 million under General Programmes and $41.4 million under Special Programmes.

Indo-China

The rising spiral of arrivals of Vietnamese asylum-seekers continued during 1989, bringing the overall number of Indo-Chinese asylum-seekers in the UNHCR-assisted camps to more than 195,000. Of those, approximately 100,000 persons were in Thailand and 56,000 in Hong Kong, with the rest spread throughout the countries of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) and Japan. The number of registered asylum-seekers rose by 33 per cent compared to the previous year. On the other hand, close to 45,000 refugees left various countries of first asylum for resettlement in third countries, and over 43,000 persons left Viet Nam under the Orderly Departure Programme.

Regarding Vietnamese and Lao asylum-seekers, the Comprehensive Plan of Action adopted at the International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees (see below) presented measures to rechannel departures through legal means, while limiting resettlement to recognized refugees. In 1989, more than 900 Vietnamese and close to 2,000 Lao asylum-seekers returned home voluntarily. However, no consensus could be reached on the problem of return, other than voluntary, to Viet Nam of those persons determined not to be bona fide refugees. In December, the Hong Kong authorities deported some 51 screened-out Vietnamese. Another problem was partial denial of asylum to "boat people", practised in the form of redirecting arriving boats to neighbouring countries.

International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees

The International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees was held in Geneva on 13 and 14 June 1989 to deal with problems posed by the continuing presence in South-East Asia of large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers from Viet Nam and the Lao People's Democratic Republic and by their continuing exodus into the region. As requested by the General Assembly,(25) which in 1988 had welcomed the call by ASEAN for the convening of the Conference, the Secretary-General reported(26) on the Conference in September.

The Conference adopted both a Declaration and a Comprehensive Plan of Action, which set out measures regarding organized clandestine departures, regular departure programmes, refugee status, and implementation and review procedures. The Conference established a Steering Committee consisting of 15 "core group" countries (Australia, Austria, Canada, France, Japan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Netherlands, Norway, Philippines, Switzerland, Thailand, United Kingdom, United States, Viet Nam) to review the Plan's implementation.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee reaffirmed(5) that the Comprehensive Plan of Action was an important and sound basis for a balanced, humanitarian and durable solution to the problem of Indo-Chinese refugees.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1989/176, noted an oral report made on behalf of the Secretary-General by the High Commissioner on the International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/138 without vote.

International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/119 of 8 December 1988,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees, held at Geneva on 13 and 14 June 1989, and the Declaration and Comprehensive Plan of Action adopted by the Conference,

Noting with satisfaction the active participation of Member States, specialized agencies and regional, inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations in the Conference,

Taking note of the decision on the Conference adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its fortieth session,

1. Welcomes the successful conclusion of the International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees, which was convened by the Secretary-General, under the presidency of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Malaysia;

2. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General on the Conference;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for convening the Conference and to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for his valuable assistance and contribution in organizing the Conference;

4. Welcomes the adoption by the Conference of the Declaration and Comprehensive Plan of Action and affirms its belief that the Plan of Action is an important and sound basis for a balanced, humanitarian and durable solution to the problems addressed by the Conference;

5. Stresses that the measures stipulated in the Comprehensive Plan of Action are interrelated and mutually reinforcing and should be implemented in their totality by all States concerned, within the context of national laws and regulations and of international standards;

6. Notes the progress on the implementation of the Comprehensive Plan of Action at the various bilateral and multilateral meetings among the parties concerned, especially those held within the context of the Steering Committee established by the Conference;

7. Calls upon all States concerned and the relevant specialized agencies and regional, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to undertake the various measures required of them within the framework and letter of the Comprehensive Plan of Action;

8. Appeals to all States and regional, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to provide resources for the General and Special Programmes of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to enable it to carry out the tasks prescribed in the Comprehensive Plan of Action;

9. Stresses that the solution of the problem of those seeking refuge in the South-East Asian region could contribute positively towards a climate of peace, harmony and good-neighbourliness among States in the region;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to monitor closely the progress towards implementation of the Comprehensive Plan of Action and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

15 December 1989 Meeting 82 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/44/823) without vote, 27 November (meeting 56); 17-nation draft (A/C.3/44/L.68/Rev.1): agenda item 110 (c). Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 3rd Committee 44-47, 49, 56; plenary 82.

Europe and North America

In Western Europe, the number of asylum-seekers from outside the region continued to increase in 1989, reaching approximately 320,000, as compared to 290,000 in 1988. The influx created a large backlog of undecided applications, leading to a serious strain on reception facilities and increased expenditures on public relief and assistance. Consultations on multilateral solutions to the new asylum situation were held by 14 European and North American Governments and UNHCR.

In December, the High Commissioner appealed to the international community for funds for a shelter project to improve the living conditions of some 13,500 Iraqi nationals in south-east Turkey. The Government of Turkey assisted 30,000 Iraqi nationals living in the country.

During the year, 24,623 refugees were resettled in Canada and 94,000 in the United States. Also, approximately 22,000 persons requested asylum in Canada and 102,000 persons in the United States.

Following the Hungarian Government's accession to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees⁽²⁷⁾ and its 1967 Protocol,⁽²⁸⁾ UNHCR opened an office in Budapest. UNHCR elaborated a programme to help the Government to establish adequate infrastructure for asylum-seekers in Hungary; an appeal for $5.2 million was launched for that purpose.

In 1989, UNHCR's voluntary funds expenditures in Europe and North America totalled $24.1 million, of which $18.8 million was obligated under General Programmes and $5.3 million under Special Programmes.

Latin America and the Caribbean

The estimated refugee population in southern Latin America at the end of 1989 was 22,700, of whom 6,437 were receiving UNHCR assistance. In Mexico, where 41,500 Guatemalan refugees lived, UNHCR commenced a multi-year plan aimed at achieving self-sufficiency in the states of Campeche and Quintana Roo and elaborated a project for the promotion of income-generating activities in Chiapas.

UNHCR opened sub-offices in French Guiana and Suriname in 1989. Efforts to facilitate the voluntary repatriation of Surinamese refugees in French Guiana were strengthened within the framework of a tripartite commission composed of representatives of France, Suriname and UNHCR. The voluntary repatriation of Chilean refugees increased considerably. Some 1,720 refugees returned from Argentina, Cuba and Eastern European countries. From the Dominican Republic, 492 Haitian refugees repatriated.

During 1989, UNHCR voluntary funds expenditures in Latin America and the Caribbean totalled $39.6 million, of which $32.8 million was under General Programmes and $6.8 million under Special Programmes.

Central America

By the end of 1989, about 122,000 Central American refugees were receiving UNHCR assistance. There was a considerable increase in the number of returnees, with significant movements taking place from Honduras. UNHCR continued to assess the welfare of returnees in El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

At a summit meeting (Tela, Honduras, 5-7 August),⁽²⁹⁾ the five Central American Presidents (Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua) adopted a joint plan for the voluntary demobilization, repatriation or relocation of the members of the Nicaraguan resistance and their families. Following repatriation, beneficiaries would be integrated into the development process in their country of origin, according to the plan. The Secretaries-General of the United Nations and of the Organization of American States, as requested by the five Presidents, set up an International Support and Verification Commission to implement the plan. The number of beneficiaries of the plan was estimated at 90,000 persons, with financial requirements of $48 million. (See also PART TWO, Chapter II.)

Conference on Central American Refugees

The International Conference on Central American Refugees was held in Guatemala City from 29 to 31 May.⁽³⁰⁾ It adopted a Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons, which described an overall strategy and follow-up and promotion mechanisms. Objectives of the Plan of Action included identification of durable solutions, within the possibilities of the affected countries, including voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement in third countries. The Plan also set out a three-year regional programme consisting of 32 projects, valued at $380 million.

In October, the Executive Committee of UNHCR, welcoming the commitments given by the affected countries, urged⁽⁵⁾ the international community to ensure that the support expressed during the Conference became concrete commitments of collaboration with the affected countries for implementation of the Plan.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1989/176, noted the oral report made on behalf of the Secretary-General by the UN High Commissioner on the International Conference on Central American Refugees.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 44/139 without vote.

International Conference on Central American Refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/1 of 7 October 1987, 42/110 of 7 December 1987, 42/204 of 11 December 1987, 42/231 of 12 May 1988 and 43/118 of 8 December 1988,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Also taking note of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Welcoming the Declaration and Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons adopted by the International Conference on Central American Refugees, held at Guatemala City from 29 to 31 May 1989,

Bearing mind that a concerted effort in favour of lasting solutions to the problems of refugees, returnees and displaced persons requires the support, co-operation and co-ordination of the affected and interested Governments and of the various international organizations involved, in particular the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Development Programme,

Noting the establishment of the machinery for follow-up and co-ordination at the national level in pursuance of the Concerted Plan of Action and the establishment of priority and design of projects within the framework of the strategies defined by each Government,

Noting with interest that meetings for co-ordination, management and execution have begun with the co-operating countries and the non-governmental organizations interested in participating in the programmes and projects to assist the returnees, displaced persons and refugees in Central America,

Aware of the need to deal with the serious problem of the refugees in Central America who have found asylum in a number of Central American countries, including Belize, and Mexico, and wishing to contribute to the search for lasting solutions that would benefit the countries and communities of asylum and origin,

Recognizing the need to incorporate in the plans of assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons measures to restore the ecological balance and the rational utilization of the natural resources in the areas of the countries affected,

Bearing in mind that, as stated in point 8 of the agreement on "Procedures for the establishment of a firm and lasting peace in Central America", concluded at the Esquipulas II summit meeting, the Central American countries have undertaken, as a matter of urgency, to address the problem of refugees, including their repatriation and relocation through bilateral and multi-lateral processes,

Reiterating its determination to continue its efforts and contributions in the context of the peace agreements, and welcoming the agreements adopted at Tela, Honduras, on 7 August 1989, which include aspects of voluntary repatriation and relocation,

Emphasizing that, among the possible solutions, voluntary repatriation is the most appropriate means of solving the problems caused by the massive presence of refugees in the countries and communities of asylum,

Once again reiterating the paramount importance of humanitarian and apolitical considerations, both in dealing with and in solving the problems of refugees, returnees and displaced persons, and the need to ensure that this approach is strictly observed by the countries of origin and of asylum and other interested parties,

Recognizing the work carried out by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and by the United Nations Development Programme with the Governments of the affected countries in the preparation and convening of the Conference and in the meetings of the Follow-Up Committee of the International Conference on Central American Refugees,

Aware of the reductions in the budget of the Office of the High Commissioner in the region, which seriously affect the beneficiary populations and the policies for a solution put forward in the context of the agreement concluded at the Esquipulas II summit meeting and at the International Conference on Central American Refugees,

Taking into consideration the priority assigned to that section of the emergency programme of the Special Plan of Economic Co-operation for Central America that is intended to promote activities for solving the problem of refugees, displaced persons and returnees,

Recognizing that the search for solutions goes beyond emergency activities and is linked to aspects of the development of the region and assistance for the displaced populations in the countries of origin and asylum that are directly affected by the massive presence of refugees,

Recognizing also that the tripartite commissions, composed of representatives of the countries of asylum, the country of origin and the Office of the High Commissioner, constitute an ongoing mechanism for solving the problem of refugees and that they require support in order to continue the current voluntary repatriation programmes in conditions of personal and material security,

Recognizing further that solutions to the problems of refugees, returnees and displaced persons form an integral part of the efforts for peace, democratization and development being made in the region by each Government,

1. Expresses its profound satisfaction with the success of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, as well as with the adoption by acclamation of the Declaration and Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons;

2. Welcomes the guidelines, goals and objectives of the Concerted Plan of Action as a promising initial basis for future activities, and therefore reaffirms its commitment to contribute to the achievement of a firm and lasting peace in Central America;

3. Welcomes the establishment of the machinery for follow-up and co-ordination at the national level, in pursuance of the Concerted Plan of Action, and the establishment of priority and design of projects within the framework of the strategies defined by each Government;

4. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to support, in close collaboration with the Governments of the affected countries and the Follow-Up Committee of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, together with the United Nations Development Programme and the organs, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, the holding of meetings for follow-up to the Concerted Plan of Action, so that they may be held at the earliest possible time;

5. Notes with interest that the Follow-Up Committee will hold its first meeting during the first week of March 1990, and urges the co-operating countries to respond positively to the assistance projects submitted by the Central American countries, including Belize, and Mexico;

6. Urges Member States and organs, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as the regional and subregional, inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations engaged in the humanitarian task of helping Central American refugees, to continue to provide and to increase their assistance and support to the affected countries in order to implement and follow up the guidelines, goals and objectives of the Concerted Plan of Action;

7. Calls upon the co-operating countries and the relevant agencies of the United Nations system to assist in restoring the ecological balance of the areas in the countries of asylum affected by the massive presence of refugees, in order to provide the populations of those areas with the conditions conducive to development;

8. Appeals to the international community to ensure that the co-operation extended in the solution of the problem of refugees takes into account both the sacrifice borne by the countries of asylum in receiving massive flows of refugees and the effort exerted by the countries of origin to create the conditions that would facilitate the return of their nationals;

9. Also appeals to the international community to increase its assistance to the countries of asylum and of origin of Central American refugees in order to strengthen their capacity to provide the means and services necessary for the solution of the problem of refugees, returnees and displaced persons, in accordance with national development programmes;

10. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations Development Programme for the assistance rendered for the holding of the Conference;

11. Expresses its concern at the reductions in the budget of the Office of the High Commissioner in the region, which seriously affect the beneficiary populations and the policies for a solution formulated at the Conference and by each Government, and urges that the budget previously allocated be restored;

12. Expresses its gratitude to the people and Government of Guatemala for the hospitality extended for the holding of the Conference;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, in co-operation with the High Commissioner, to report on the implementation of the present resolution to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1990 and to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

15 December 1989 Meeting 82 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/44/823) without vote, 27 November (meeting 56); 30-nation draft (A/C.3/44/L.69), orally revised; agenda item 110 (b).

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 3rd Committee 44-47, 49, 56; plenary 82.

South-West Asia,
North Africa and the Middle East

An estimated 100,000 Afghan refugees were reported to have returned, mainly from Pakistan, to their places of origin in the south-western and northern provinces of Afghanistan, but continued fighting in 1989 in certain provinces created new waves of refugees to Pakistan. UNHCR continued to fund cross-border projects implemented by non-governmental organizations in areas of Afghanistan from which high numbers of refugees originated. Of total 1989 disbursements of some $24.8 million, $14.2 million was for activities inside Afghanistan, and the remainder was disbursed for activities in Iran and Pakistan.

In Iran, there were more than 2 million Afghan refugees and 500,000 others, mainly Iraqis. UNHCR's assistance to the Afghan refugees was aimed at extending the rural health delivery infrastructure, water and sanitation systems, access roads, educational facilities and some income-generating activities. About 90,000 Iraqi refugees in Iran received assistance in the areas of health, sanitation and housing facilities.

The UNHCR regional office for the Middle East in Bahrain continued to assist refugees and asylum-seekers in Middle Eastern countries, including cases of refoulement, deportation and expulsion. Due to the prevailing security situation in Lebanon, UNHCR was not able to maintain an international presence in Beirut.

In Algeria, of an estimated 165,000 Sahrawi refugees living in camps around Tindouf, 80,000 persons received assistance from UNHCR, including food, education, health and water. Most were women, children, handicapped and elderly persons. Beginning in April, a group of about 22,000 Senegalese refugees found refuge in Mauritania. A multi-sectoral emergency programme was implemented.

During 1989, UNHCR voluntary funds expenditure in South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East totalled $104.2 million, of which $60.2 million was under General Programmes and $44 million under Special Programmes.

Refugee protection

Protection involved using law and principles to secure the rights, security and welfare of refugees. During 1989, continued and improved consultations took place between States and UNHCR on region-specific concerns. Governments increasingly addressed refugee problems in a comprehensive manner with a view to developing broad strategies to respond positively to those problems.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee expressed(5) deep concern that refugee protection was seriously jeopardized in some States by expulsion and refoulement of refugees or by measures that did not recognize the special situation of refugees. It called on all States to refrain from taking such measures. The Committee called on the High Commissioner to convene an open-ended working group to examine protection and solutions in a comprehensive manner.

International instruments

As at 31 December 1989, the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees(27) had been ratified or acceded to by 102 States as a result of the 1989 accession by Hungary. The 1967 Protocol to the Convention(28) had 103 States parties as a result of the 1989 accession by Hungary and Mozambique.(31) While the majority were parties to both instruments, some were parties to only one; the number of parties to one or both instruments, therefore, totalled 103.

Other intergovernmental legal instruments benefiting refugees included the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen and its 1973 Protocol, the 1959 European Agreement on the Abolition of Visas for Refugees, the 1969 Convention governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, the 1969 American Convention on Human Rights, Pact of San José, Costa Rica, and the 1980 European Agreement on Transfer of Responsibility for Refugees.

As at 31 December 1989, there were 36 States parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons(32) (Madagascar had acceded to the Convention in 1962, but denounced it in 1965) and 15 States parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.(33)

In many countries, the High Commissioner reported that implementation of these instruments was satisfactory, particularly where specific legislative and/or administrative measures to implement them had been adopted, and where they were known and understood by the concerned officials. There were even countries where such laws and measures went beyond the minimum standards of the instruments. At the same time, however, a number of obstacles of a socio-economic, legal, policy or practical nature impeded the full and proper implementation of the instruments in the territory of many contracting States.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee requested(5) the UN High Commissioner to prepare a detailed report on implementation of the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol.

Promotion and dissemination of refugee law

In 1989, despite severely limited financial resources, UNHCR pursued its traditional promotion and dissemination activities with respect to refugee law and protection principles. The Centre for Documentation on Refugees continued to strengthen and systematize information and documentation policies. It published the quarterly Refugee Abstracts and the International Journal of Refugee Law, and helped develop the publication by the International Refugee Documentation Network of an international thesaurus on refugee terminology.

UNHCR continued to advise and train government officials and others on how to determine refugee status. It also assisted all receiving countries in South-East Asia in establishing procedures for determination of refugee status.

In October, the Executive Committee of UNHCR urged(5) the High Commissioner to ensure that protection training courses continued on a significant scale.

Rights of refugees

The granting of admission and asylum and protection from refoulement were indispensable components of the international system for the protection of refugees, according to UNHCR. Many States continued to respect their commitments in that field and the vast majority of the world's refugees were admitted into the territory of States, granted at least temporary asylum and protected from refoulement. However, in a number of instances, admission and asylum were denied on various grounds. These included the refusal of States to examine asylum requests based on a strict application of the notion of "country of first asylum", even where the persons concerned were not permitted to re-enter or remain in the country from which they had last come or where it was far from clear that they would receive humane treatment.

In October, the Executive Committee of UNHCR adopted(5) a conclusion on the problem of refugees and asylum-seekers who moved in an irregular manner from a country in which they had already found protection. The Committee recognized that return to a country in which individuals had already found protection might take place only if the persons concerned were protected there against refoulement and permitted to remain there and be treated in accordance with recognized basic human standards until a durable solution was found. It also drew attention to problems posed by false documents or lack of documents, which were often compounded by the application by certain States of immigration measures restricting the number of persons who could seek admission and asylum. Another growing practice was the restrictive interpretation of various elements of the refugee definition contained in the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol, coupled with the demand that applicants for refugee status satisfy an excessively stringent burden and standard of proof. In addition, a few countries limited or discontinued their previous practice of granting asylum to persons who were compelled to leave their countries of origin as a result of generalized violence, foreign aggression, internal conflicts, massive violation of human rights or other circumstances that seriously disturbed public order.

Other violations of rights of refugees reported during the year included refoulement, unjustified detention of refugees, military and armed attacks on refugee camps and settlements, and forced recruitment of refugees into armed forces.

Protection of refugee women and children

Although there had been a gradual increase in recent years in the general awareness of the protection problems of refugee women, serious violations of their safety and well-being continued, according to UNHCR. An evaluation of the impact of the UNHCR guidelines on refugee women indicated that, while identification of the problems of refugee women and formulation of necessary remedies had improved considerably, the guidelines had to be expanded if the objectives for which they were issued were to be fully met. Refugee children continued to be exposed to physical violence, detention, sexual abuse and forced recruitment into armed forces. The number of unaccompanied minors also increased.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee called(5) for the reinforcement of preventive measures and for States and concerned agencies to strengthen their support of the protection activities of UNHCR relating to refugee women by providing resettlement places for women at risk. It requested the UN High Commissioner to prepare a revised and expanded version of the internal guidelines relating to the international protection of refugee women.

Also in October, the Committee, noting the increasing incidence of nutritional problems among refugee children dependent on food aid, called on UNHCR to initiate formal discussions with relevant UN bodies, donors and other humanitarian organizations to develop strategies for alleviating the problems. It requested the High Commissioner to continue to give special attention to the needs of unaccompanied minors.

Chapter XVI

Drugs of abuse

The global situation regarding illicit drug trafficking and abuse reached a new and dangerous stage in 1989, with heavily armed and well-financed drug trafficking organizations threatening political institutions in some countries. In its annual report, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) stated that the illegal production of narcotic drugs had increased and had spread to more countries. The environment of some countries continued to be damaged by the illicit cultivation of the opium poppy and coca bush. The increasing spread of AIDS through intravenous drug abuse was viewed with growing alarm.

The United Nations continued to seek ways to aid the international fight against drug abuse. Many States and organizations took action in response to the 1988 Convention against Illegal Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances. INCB continued to supervise drug control activities, and the UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control expanded and intensified its activities, providing financial and technical assistance to drug control projects in 49 countries. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council adopted a number of resolutions dealing with drug abuse control, some on the recommendation of the Council's Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the principal UN policy-making body on drug control issues. Because of the alarming state of global drug trafficking and abuse, the General Assembly decided to hold a special session to address the problem.

Convention against illicit traffic

Pursuant to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted in September a report⁽²⁾ focusing on the conclusions of the 1988 UN Conference for the Adoption of a Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances.⁽³⁾ The Conference adopted by acclamation the text of the UN Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, which addresses such issues as offences and sanctions, jurisdiction, extradition, co-operation between States and law-enforcement agencies, and measures to eradicate illicit cultivation of narcotic plants and to eliminate illicit demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

The Secretary-General outlined in the report his actions to implement the 1988 Convention stating that he had assisted States in establishing the legislative and administrative measures necessary for the application of the Convention, and had calculated the resources required by the UN Division of Narcotic Drugs and the INCB secretariat for implementation measures.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted three resolutions. Resolution 1989/20 was adopted without vote.

International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1988/9 of 25 May 1988,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 43/122 of 8 December 1988, in which the Assembly, inter alia, recalled with satisfaction the successful conclusion of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, in particular the adoption of the Declaration, as an expression of the political will of nations to combat the drug menace, and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, a compendium of recommendations for implementation,

Taking note of the report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on its thirty-third session, in particular chapter VI thereof,

Recognizing the important contributions of the United Nations drug control bodies and their distinct mandates and responsibilities, and welcoming the efforts of the Secretary-General to increase co-ordination of activities related to drug control and to implement the recommendations of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline,

Bearing in mind the need to ensure the implementation of the courses of action recommended in the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline, particularly in the areas of education and public information, with regard to the abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

1. Urges Governments and organizations to adhere to the principles set forth in the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking and to utilize the recommendations of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control in developing national and regional strategies, particularly to promote bilateral, regional and international co-operative arrangements;

2. Urges Governments to provide additional resources to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control in order to enable it to strengthen its co-operation with the developing countries in their efforts to implement drug control programmes;

3. Invites intergovernmental and regional and international non-governmental organizations that are referred to under the particular targets of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline to continue to inform the Commission on Narcotic Drugs about activities undertaken in pursuit of those targets;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to support, within available resources, the activities of the non-governmental organizations concerned and, in recognition of the experience and expertise of those organizations, to co-ordinate United Nations activities in drug abuse control with them;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure continued inter-agency co-operation in drug abuse control activities, which will enhance efforts of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to implement activities in follow-up to the Conference;

6. Calls upon the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to keep under review action taken with respect to the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/20

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1969/76) without vote, 5 May (meeting 6): 16-nation draft (E/1989/C.2/L.3; agenda item 12.

Sponsors: Australia, Bahamas, Bolivia, Brunei Darussalam, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Nicaragua, Peru, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, United Kingdom.

Resolution 1989/19 was also adopted without vote.

Provisional application of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Final Act of the United Nations Conference for the Adoption of a Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, adopted at Vienna on 19 December 1988,

Recalling also resolution 2 of the Conference contained in the Final Act, the purpose of which was to seek early ratification of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, so that its implementation by States parties might begin at the earliest possible time,

Taking into account the urgency for States to employ all legal means available to them in the effort to curb drug trafficking, including the measures defined in the new Convention,

1. Urges States, to the extent that they are able to do so, to accelerate steps to ratify the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances so that it may enter into force as soon as possible;

2. Invites States, to the extent that they are able to do so, to apply provisionally the measures set out in the Convention pending its entry into force for each of them;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/19

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 5 May (meeting 61; 32-nation draft (E/1989/C.2/L.2); agenda item 12.

Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Malaysia, Mexico, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, USSR, United Kingdom, United States, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

The Council adopted resolution 1989/13 without vote.

Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the many resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as well as the many political declarations such as the Quito Declaration against Traffic in Narcotic Drugs of 11 August 1984, the New York Declaration against Drug Trafficking and the Illicit Use of Drugs of 1 October 1984, the Lima Declaration of 29 July 1985 and, in particular, the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, all of which called for the urgent preparation of a draft convention against illicit trafficking,

Noting that those resolutions and declarations led to the adoption on 19 December 1988 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances by a conference of plenipotentiaries convened by the United Nations at Vienna from 25 November to 20 December 1988,

Reaffirming the importance of the Convention for improving international co-operation in this field, and noting that the Convention will add to the existing instruments for the control of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Taking into account General Assembly resolution 43/214 of 21 December 1988 and the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, as well as resolution 3 of the United Nations Conference for the Adoption of a Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances,

Noting the priority assigned by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twenty-eighth session to matters relating to narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the excellent preparation of the working document on the draft convention, which was circulated to States for consideration at the conference of plenipotentiaries;

2. Expresses its thanks to States that participated in the development and adoption of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances;

3. Urges States to proceed with the signing and ratification of the Convention, so that it may enter into force as early as possible;

4. Also urges States to take the requisite legislative and administrative measures and to devote the necessary resources at the national level so that the Convention may be implemented effectively;

5. Invites States, to the extent that they are able to do so, to apply provisionally the measures set out in the Convention pending its entry into force for each of them;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to modify the section of the annual reports questionnaire regarding the implementation of international treaties so that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its regular and special sessions, may review the steps that States have taken to ratify, accept, approve or formally confirm the Convention;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide assistance to States, at their request, to enable them to establish the legislative and administrative measures necessary for the application of the Convention;

8. Urges all Member States to take appropriate steps in the General Assembly and its financial organs to assign the appropriate priority and approve the budgetary appropriations necessary to enable the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board to carry out their additional responsibilities under the Convention;

9. Invites the Secretary-General to identify the financial, technical and human resources required by those bodies to carry out their additional responsibilities under the Convention and, within existing resources, to make every effort to assign the necessary resources to the drug control units for the biennium 1990-1991.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/13

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 4 May (meeting 5); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1989/23); agenda item 12.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/140 without vote.

Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 33/168 of 20 December 1978, 35/195 of 15 December 1980, 36/132 of 14 December 1981, 36/168 of 16 December 1981, 37/168 of 17 December 1982, 37/198 of 18 December 1982, 38/93 and 38/122 of 16 December 1983, 39/141 and 39/143 of 14 December 1984, 40/120, 40/121 and 40/122 of 13 December 1985, 41/125, 41/126 and 41/127 of 4 December 1986, 42/111, 42/112 and 42/113 of 7 December 1987 and 43/120 of 8 December 1988 and other relevant provisions,

Noting that these resolutions led to the adoption on 19 December 1988 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances by a conference of plenipotentiaries convened by the United Nations at Vienna from 25 November to 20 December 1988,

Reaffirming the importance of the Convention for improving international co-operation in that field and further strengthening the existing international instruments for the control of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, namely, the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971,

Noting with satisfaction the broad support granted to the Convention, including signature and ratification,

Encouraging the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to begin consideration of measures that could be recommended to Governments for the implementation of the Convention,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the conclusions of the conference of plenipotentiaries,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the report on the conclusions of the conference of plenipotentiaries that adopted the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances at Vienna;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to the States that participated in the preparation and adoption of the Convention;

3. Urges States that have not yet done so to proceed rapidly to sign and to ratify the Convention, so that it may enter into force as early as possible;

4. Also urges States to establish the necessary legislative and administrative measures so that their internal juridical regulations may be compatible with the spirit and scope of the Convention;

5. Invites States, to the extent that they are able to do so, to apply provisionally the measures set forth in the Convention, pending its entry into force for each of them;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to modify the section of the annual reports questionnaire regarding the implementation of international treaties so that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its regular and special sessions, may review the steps that States have taken to ratify, accept, approve or formally confirm the Convention;

7. Invites the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the principal United Nations policy-making body on the subject, to identify suitable measures to be taken prior to the entry into force of the Convention;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to assign the appropriate priority to providing the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board with the necessary financial, technical and human resources that would enable them to carry out the additional responsibilities under the Convention for the biennium 1990-1991;

9. Urges the Secretary-General to provide assistance to States, at their request, to enable them to establish the legislative and administrative measures necessary for the implementation of the Convention;

10. Once again urges all States that have not yet done so to ratify or to accede to the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971;

11. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources and drawing, in particular, on funds available to the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to provide for, facilitate and encourage public information activities relating to the Convention and also to disseminate the text of the Convention in the official languages of the United Nations;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Drug abuse and international control

The 1989 INCB report(4) provided a global overview of drug abuse and trafficking, and summarized the actions of the international drug control system to combat the production, sale and use of illicit drugs. It warned of the growing power of drug trafficking organizations, stating that the traffickers' victory in a single country would endanger the security and integrity of all countries. INCB cited the conclusion of the 1988 Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances as a milestone and a valuable new tool in the fight against illegal drug trafficking.

Pursuant to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(5) the Secretary-General issued a report(6) in October on the actions taken by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the Economic and Social Council and the Secretary-General in the international campaign against drug abuse and illicit trafficking.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/142 without vote.

International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned that the illicit demand for, production of, traffic in and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances has become one of the most serious dangers to the health and welfare of populations, adversely affecting the political, economic, social and cultural structure of all societies,

Recognizing that the criminal activities of drug trafficking and its marketing network destabilize economies, adversely affect the development of many countries and pose a threat to the stability, national security and sovereignty of States,

Alarmed by the growing connection between drug trafficking and terrorism,

Reaffirming the principle of collective responsibility of the international community in combating drug abuse and illicit trafficking,

Recognizing the serious efforts being made by the Governments of some countries in their programmes for crop substitution, integrated rural development and interdiction, and that international economic and technical co-operation has so far proved inadequate to the task at hand and therefore should be substantially stepped up,

Considering that the necessary steps must be taken to preclude the illicit cultivation of plants containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, such as the opium poppy, coca bush and cannabis plant, together with the manufacture of psychotropic substances not used for industrial, scientific or traditional purposes,

Recalling that the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking adopted unanimously the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, which represent the proper framework for international co-operation in drug control,

Welcoming the efforts made by those countries that produce narcotic drugs for scientific, medicinal and therapeutic uses to prevent the channelling of such substances to illicit markets and to maintain production at a level consistent with licit demand,

Reiterating that the transit routes used by drug traffickers change constantly and that an ever-growing number of countries in all regions of the world, and even entire regions, are particularly vulnerable to illicit transit traffic on account, inter alia, of their geographical location,

Recognizing the need for greater international co-operation which would facilitate the marketing of crop substitution products and the control of chemical substances used to process illicit drugs and psychotropic substances, as well as the impact of the social and economic consequences of drug-money transfers and conversion, which have an adverse effect on national economic systems,

Recognizing also the commendable work carried out by the United Nations in controlling narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, which is being seriously impeded by a lack of human and financial resources,

Recalling its resolution 43/122 of 8 December 1988 and resolution 3 of the United Nations Conference for the Adoption of a Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, held at Vienna from 25 November to 20 December 1988, which, inter alia, recognized the urgent need for additional resources, both human and financial, for the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board,

Recalling also its resolution 43/121 of 8 December 1988, in which, inter alia it strongly condemned the criminal activities that involved children in the use, production and illicit sale of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and appealed to the competent international agencies and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control to assign high priority to the study of proposals designed to tackle the problem,

Having regard to its resolution 44/16 of 1 November 1989, by which it decided to convene a special session to consider the question of closer international co-operation to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking,

1. Strongly condemns the crime of drug trafficking in all its forms and urges all States to remain steadfast in their political commitment to the concerted international struggle to put an end to it;

2. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/20 of 22 May 1989 and urges Governments and organizations to adhere to the principles set forth in the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking and to apply, as appropriate, the recommendations of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control;

3. Emphasizes that the international struggle against drug trafficking and the abuse and sale of, and illicit traffic in, narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances is a collective responsibility and that the eradication of the problem requires efficient and co-ordinated international co-operation, in keeping with the principle of respect for national sovereignty and the cultural identity of States;

4. Emphasizes the connection between the illicit production and supply of, demand for, sale of and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and the economic, social and cultural conditions of the countries affected;

5. Recognizes that the international community, in seeking solutions to the problem of illicit production of, demand for and trade, transit or traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, must take into account the differences and diversity of the problem in each country;

6. Calls upon the international community to provide increased international economic and technical co-operation to Governments, at their request, in support of programmes for the substitution of illicit crops by means of integrated rural development programmes that respect fully the jurisdiction and sovereignty of countries and the cultural traditions of peoples;

7. Recognizes the importance of international co-operation in facilitating trade flows in support of integrated rural development programmes leading to economically viable alternatives to illicit cultivation, taking into account factors such as access to markets for crop substitution products;

8. Requests countries that produce the chemical substances necessary for the manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances to take the initiative in adopting measures which ensure effective control of the export of such substances;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake as soon as possible, with the assistance of a group of inter-governmental experts, a study on the economic and social consequences of illicit traffic in drugs, with a view to analysing, inter alia the following elements:

(a) The magnitude and characteristics of economic transactions related to drug trafficking in all its stages, including production of, traffic in and distribution of illicit drugs, in order to determine the impact of drug-related money transfers and conversion on national economic systems;

(b) Mechanisms which would prevent the use of the banking system and the international financial system in this activity;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to ask Member States for their views on the scope and context of such a study, taking into account the elements set forth in paragraph 9 of the present resolution, and to transmit such views to the group of experts;

11. Considers that a system should be established to identify the methods and routes used for the illicit transit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, to enhance the interdiction capability of those States along such routes;

12. Strongly condemns the illicit arms trade that is arming drug traffickers, causing political destabilization and loss of human lives;

13. Calls upon all States, particularly those with high rates of use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, to take prevention and rehabilitation measures and also increasingly stringent political and legal measures to eliminate the demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and calls upon the United Nations and other relevant international organizations to devote greater attention to this aspect of the problem;

14. Takes note with satisfaction of the proposal by the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to convene an international conference on drug demand reduction;

15. Recognizes that the publication and dissemination of materials which encourage or stimulate the production of and demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances do not contribute positively to the international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of its resolution 43/121 and of Economic and Social Council decision 1989/123 of 22 May 1989;

17. Calls upon Member States substantially to increase their contributions to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, so that it can expand its programmes;

18. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/18 of 22 May 1989;

19. Expresses its serious concern at the considerable reduction in the budget and staff of the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board, which threatens their ability to carry out adequately any additional responsibilities deriving from the activities which the United Nations must undertake to tackle the new dimension of the problem of drug abuse and illicit trafficking;

20. Recommends that the Secretary-General take urgent steps to ensure the increase of allocations to the Division of Narcotic Drugs and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board;

21. Takes note with satisfaction of the results of the Second Interregional Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies;

22. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and requests him to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution and also to prepare on a yearly basis a detailed report on international drug-control activities reflecting the work done by the United Nations system to implement the recommendations of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session an item entitled "International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking".

General Assembly resolution 44/142

15 December 1989 Meeting 82 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/44/850) without vote, 29 November (meeting 61); 47-nation draft (A/C.3/44/L.41/Rev.2), orally revised; agenda item 111 (b).

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 3rd Committee 29-34, 43, 58, 60, 61; 5th Committee 53; plenary 82.

Pursuant to a 1979 General Assembly resolution,(7) the Secretary-General submitted in October a report(8) on international co-operation in drug abuse control, outlining the progress made by specialized agencies and UN bodies with respect to the recommendations of the 1987 International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking(9) and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control.(10)

Division of Narcotic Drugs. During 1989, the Division of Narcotic Drugs continued to implement its responsibilities under drug control treaties and intergovernmental mandates. The Division provided assistance and legal and technical advice to Member States, continued to service the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and its various bodies, and conducted follow-up work arising from the 1987 International Conference. It continued to publish, but with reduced frequency, the Bulletin on Narcotics (including a double issue on drug abuse assessment) and an Information Letter.

Regional workshops on the utilization of community resources for the prevention and reduction of drug abuse were held in La Paz (Bolivia), Nairobi (Kenya) and Vigo (Spain). An expert group meeting was held in Banjul, Gambia, in March, which established international curricula for training in the analysis of controlled drugs in biological material. The Division also developed a network of collaborating national training institutions with relevant experience in forensic toxicology.

In the area of supply, the Division's Laboratory made efforts to monitor and control new trends in the licit movement of chemicals and equipment used in the manufacture of illicit drugs. A manual on the clandestine manufacture of substances under international control was being updated. A project was developed to collect and evaluate available data on eradication methods for the three major narcotic plants-the cannabis plant, the coca bush and the opium poppy. The Division continued to advise Governments on the formulation of national legislation related to drug abuse control and to provide relevant examples of existing national legislation.

The twenty-fourth session of the Sub-Commission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East was held in Vienna in February, and the twenty-fifth session in Ankara, Turkey, in October. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1989/120 of 22 May, noted the report of the Sub-Commission on its twenty-fourth session, and approved applications for membership from Kuwait, Lebanon, Oman, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen.

In the area of suppression of illicit trafficking, a workshop on the use of drug-scenting dogs was organized by the Division in April in Vienna and in Budapest, Hungary. An expert group meeting on the development of a new UN drug law enforcement training manual was held in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, in November. The Division's Laboratory undertook the development or strengthening of laboratories in Bangladesh, Bolivia, Ghana, Sri Lanka, Uruguay and Yemen. Four laboratories were started in 1989, in Benin, Kenya, Sierra Leone and the United Republic of Tanzania, and the regional training laboratories in Bangkok and Buenos Aires were further strengthened. The Division published manuals on the analysis of methaqualone/mecloqualone, benzodiazepine derivatives and LSD, and continued the production and provision of UN drug identification kits.

On 17 February,11 the Commission on Narcotic Drugs requested that States members and observers of the Commission review the usefulness of the publications and documentation of the Division of Narcotic Drugs, and submit their findings to the Division for review by the Commission at its thirty-fourth session.

UNDP activities. UNDP continued to support drug abuse control in 1989, including collaborative projects with the UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control (UNFDAC). UNDP's Office for Project Services (OPS), formerly the Office for Projects Execution, implemented projects financed by the Fund. The Fund programme executed by OPS amounted to $132 million. Regional programme activities in drug abuse control continued to be concentrated in Asia and the Pacific and in Latin America and the Caribbean.

UNDP activities in the field of drug abuse control were detailed in a March report(12) by the UNDP Administrator.

WHO activities. The activities of the World Health Organization (WHO) to reduce the harm caused by psycho-active substances were greatly strengthened by the adoption by the World Health Assembly in May 1989 of a far-reaching resolution on the prevention and control of drug and alcohol abuse. A major review of preventive strategies was published in 1989, with special emphasis on techniques for the reduction of drug demand, bringing together much of the work undertaken by WHO in this area in the previous five years. As part of its overall responsibility to monitor health trends, WHO continued to gather data on drug-related mortality and morbidity.

In the area of supply control, WHO continued to implement its guidelines for review of dependence-producing psycho-active substances, and began preparing a revised version of these guidelines. It also convened a Programme Planning Working Group and an Expert Committee on Drug Dependence. The Director-General addressed letters to ministers of health in 33 countries, where methaqualone was legally available, to stop production, sale and use of that drug, since it had created a drug abuse problem in nearly every country in the world. WHO also promoted the rational use of psycho-active drugs in the health-care industry through its educational efforts.

ILO activities. The Governing Body of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) intensified its activity in the area of drug abuse control in 1989, and endorsed a series of new proposals in February. ILO continued to promote drug abuse prevention in the workplace in three major ways: preparation of training materials and training of personnel; promotion of plant-level, union-based or community-based action programmes; and research and analyses of programmes and needs in specific industries and professions. A multi-media kit, "Responses to drug and alcohol problems in the workplace", and the Conditions of Work Digest on "Alcohol and drugs: Programmes of assistance for workers" were disseminated widely, as was a monograph, "Rehabilitation approaches to drug and alcohol dependence".

Other activities. The Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) referred the issue of drug abuse in "sensitive occupations" to the ICAO Air Navigation Commission, an advisory body of independent experts, in view of its relevance to many occupations in the air transport industry. The Commission concluded that current regulatory provisions in the ICAO Standards and Recommended Practices represented a sufficient safeguard against drug abuse by flight crew members and air traffic controllers, and that there was no evidence of a problem of drug abuse in those occupations.

The International Maritime Organization (IMO) devoted substantial efforts to preventing illicit carriage of drugs on ships. The comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline was examined with a view to its application to shipping, and guidelines for shipowners and masters were circulated.

The Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Branch of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs maintained close collaboration with UNFDAC in order to draw up a blueprint for drug abuse prevention in Latin America. Technical co-operation projects were prepared for Argentina, Ghana and Uganda, covering such areas as special training for law enforcement officials and criminal justice personnel to fight organized crime and drug trafficking, policy formulation on drug abuse, improvement of the capacity of forensic laboratories in screening techniques for seized drugs and research and community programmes. A study of AIDS in prison was being conducted in close co-operation with WHO.

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) organized

South-South exchanges of experts in the context of education projects designed to combat drug abuse. It also conducted several projects to promote health and prevent drug abuse in developing countries. With regard to the role of the media, UNESCO organized a meeting of experts in Ottawa, Canada, in September to consider the efficacy of media campaigns to combat drug abuse.

The Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) adopted a resolution on drug abuse among children. It requested the Executive Director to give immediate attention to the planning of an objective assessment of the causes and magnitude of the problem, especially among those children from social groups living in extreme poverty in developing countries.

The Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) expressed concern over the growing problem of drug abuse in the region at its forty-fifth session (Bangkok, Thailand, 27 March-5 April). Five country studies were initiated in 1988-1989 with the collaboration of country drug abuse focal points, with the studies in Australia and Sri Lanka still under way. Drug abuse demand reduction was introduced into ESCAP youth activities where appropriate, and the ESCAP/WHO project on drug abuse rehabilitation in Asia and the Pacific continued.

The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) incorporated the drug abuse issue into its ongoing regional study on social indicators and trends in the region. A regional study entitled "The impact of drug abuse among youth in the ESCWA region: approaches to social reintegration" was planned, as was a comprehensive study on national policies on crime prevention.

Activities related to drug control were also carried out by the Economic Commission for Europe, the UN Research Institute for Social Development, the World Food Programme, the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the UN Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/141 without vote.

Global programme of action against illicit narcotic drugs

The General Assembly

Alarmed by the dramatic increase in drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking in narcotics, which is threatening the health and well-being of millions of people, in particular youth, in the majority of countries of the world,

Deeply concerned that the evolving drug problem is assuming new dimensions and is threatening the economic, social and political structures of affected countries, through acts of violence perpetrated against their democratic institutions and the extensive economic power of illicit drug organizations,

Commending the determined efforts of the Government of Colombia to stop drug trafficking and recognizing the importance of support for such efforts by the international community,

Welcoming the increasing international attention to these issues and the unflinching commitment demonstrated at the highest levels by heads of Government and State to increase their efforts and resources to achieve co-ordinated action in the international fight against production, trafficking and abuse of narcotic drugs,

Recognizing that the collective responsibility of States for the campaign against the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs requires intensified international co-operation and joint action, including the capability to provide, in appropriate forms, necessary support and assistance, if requested by affected States, in order to strengthen their capacity to deal with the problem in all its aspects,

Noting with appreciation the work carried out within the United Nations in the field of drug abuse control and the valuable knowledge and experience represented there,

Recognizing the important contributions made to the international campaign against drug abuse and illicit trafficking by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, held at Vienna from 17 to 26 June 1987, and, in particular, by its adoption of the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, as well as by the conference of plenipotentiaries, held at Vienna from 25 November to 20 December 1988, which adopted the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances,

Deeply concerned that, owing to a lack of resources, it has not been possible for the United Nations organs concerned to execute several of the important steps and measures that were mandated for the biennium 1988-1989,

Acknowledging the recommendations made by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination and the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at their twenty-fourth series of Joint Meetings, at which they concluded, inter alia, that the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination should prepare a system-wide action plan leading to specific activities to be undertaken by organizations of the United Nations system, individually and collectively, and that consideration could be given to the need for the establishment of additional mechanisms to enhance the effectiveness of the United Nations system in the field of drug abuse control.

Recognizing that the new dimensions taken on by the drug menace will necessitate a more comprehensive approach to international drug control and a more efficient and co-ordinated structure in this field in order to enable the United Nations to play the central and greatly increased role necessary for countering this threat,

Bearing in mind its decision, in resolution 44/16 of 1 November 1989, to hold a special session to consider the question of international co-operation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs, with a view to expanding the scope and increasing the effectiveness of such co-operation, and stressing the importance of this special session and of the need for Member States to make the fullest possible contributions to its preparatory work,

1. Resolves that action against drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking in narcotics should, as a collective responsibility, be accorded the highest possible priority by the international community and that the United Nations should be the main focus for concerted action against illicit drugs;

2. Agrees to strengthen the capability of the United Nations in order to achieve more efficient and co-ordinated co-operation at the international, regional and national levels against the threats posed by illicit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to co-ordinate at the inter-agency level, the development of a United Nations system-wide action plan on drug abuse control aimed at the full implementation of all existing mandates and subsequent decisions of intergovernmental bodies throughout the United Nations system, using as a guide the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking and the recommendations in the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, and for the attainment of this purpose:

(a) Calls upon the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the International Narcotics Control Board and its secretariat, as well as the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, to consult closely with and contribute their expertise to the other agencies represented on the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination in developing the action plan;

(b) Requests the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination to include in the action plan, inter alia:

- (i) A statement of purposes that defines the overall goal and denotes specific objectives;
- (ii) An outline of concrete activities that each agency should undertake, within its mandate, ensuring that there is no duplication or overlap;
- (iii) A reasonable time-frame for implementation of each portion of the action plan;
- (iv) A realistic cost estimate for implementing the action plan, being mindful that resources are limited and that it would be necessary for agencies to focus priorities, review deployment of resources or obtain, if necessary, from their governing bodies the authority needed to fulfil their part of the plan;

(c) Requests the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination to present the action plan to all Member States no later than 31 March 1990, in order to permit discussion by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its thirtieth session and by the Economic and Social Council at its next regular session of 1990;

(d) Requests that the executive heads of United Nations bodies report annually to the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination on the progress made in implementing the action plan and that the Administrative Committee include the same information in its annual report, so as to enable the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Economic and Social Council to consider it, within their respective mandates, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly;

(e) Requests the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination to make the necessary adjustments to the action plan annually and to ensure that each agency brings up to date and revises its related activities annually in order to meet changing circumstances;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to select a limited number of experts from developed and developing countries to advise and assist him for a maximum period of one year, in full co-operation with United Nations officials, in order to enhance the efficiency of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control, taking into account the ability of the United Nations to perform its increasing tasks in the light of existing mandates and of decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its special session, and to report to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

5. Requests States, without prejudice to the basic criteria that the General Assembly shall adopt at its special session, to consider in the preparatory work for that session, inter alia, the following areas, with the purpose of ensuring that all aspects of the problem are adequately addressed in the elaboration of a global programme of action against illicit narcotic drugs for adoption at the special session:

(a) Giving increased attention to curbing the rising demand for narcotic drugs by intensified rehabilitative, legal and preventive measures, including public information and education;

(b) The possibility of declaring a United Nations decade against drug abuse, with the purpose of raising public awareness through a world-wide campaign against drug abuse;

(c) The expansion of the scope of international co-operation in support of rural development programmes and other economic development and technical assistance programmes aimed at reducing illicit production and drug, trafficking through the strengthening of economic, judicial and legal systems;

(d) The full involvement of international, regional and national financial institutions within their respective areas of competence in the elaboration of measures to counteract the negative economic and social consequences of the drug problem in all its aspects, paying special attention to the characteristics and magnitude of the conversion and transference of drug-related monies in the economic systems of countries;

(e) The development of mechanisms to prevent the use of the banking system and other financial institutions for the processing or laundering of drug-related money;

(f) An examination of recommendations to enhance the efficiency of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control in the most appropriate way to enable the United Nations to perform its increasing tasks in the most effective and co-ordinated manner;

(g) The development of recommendations for generating increased financial resources to the United Nations drug effort and for ensuring sufficient regular budget resources for the United Nations drug bodies to carry out their mandates;

(h) The co-ordination of an expanded programme of training for national narcotics agents in investigative methods, interdiction and narcotics intelligence;

(i) The feasibility of establishing a reserve pool of experienced narcotics agents and experts pledged by other States, whose services States may request for specified periods of time;

(j) The establishment under the United Nations of a facility to gather and collate information on the financial flow from drug-related funds, to be made available to States at their request;

(k) The feasibility of a United Nations capability that, at the request of States, would provide training and equipment for the anti-drug operations of the States to inhibit the use, interdict the supply and eliminate the illicit trafficking of drugs;

(l) The elaboration of any other appropriate measures whereby the United Nations can contribute further to concerted international action against illicit narcotic drugs;

6. Invites States, at the special session of the General Assembly, to consider requesting the Secretary-General to appoint a limited number of experts, representing the various aspects of the drug problem with regard to both developed and developing countries, to develop further the global programme of action as adopted at the special session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to give priority to narcotics control activities in his proposals for the medium-term plan for the period beginning in 1992;

8. Urges States to contribute to the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control;

9. Also urges States to consider giving financial or other support to enhance the efficiency of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control and to assist and promote a truly comprehensive global programme of action;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the Preparatory Committee of the Whole for the Seventeenth Special Session of the General Assembly, which the Assembly established by its decision 44/410 of 14 November 1989.

UN Fund for Drug Abuse Control

The activities of UNFDAC were expanded during 1989. A budget of $62.5 million for 1989 enabled the planning of financial and technical assistance to 49 countries through 114 drug control projects. Also included in UNFDAC's budget were 38 regional and global projects involving such drug control activities as special training, research, conferences and workshops. Efforts were made to improve programme management and evaluation, for example through the recruitment of experts on law enforcement and psychotropic drugs, the extension of the network of field advisers, and the increase of administrative and support services received from UNDP.

Of the total 1989 budget, 34 per cent was allocated to reducing the supply of illicit drugs; 34 per cent to reducing illicit demand; 25 per cent to strengthening control measures; 4 per cent to staffing and procurement for field offices in a working arrangement with UNDP; 2 per cent to administration and programme evaluation; and 1 per cent to research.

Among UNFDAC's activities in 1989 in Latin America and the Caribbean were: rural development programmes to help eradicate coca cultivation in Bolivia; support for an anti-narcotics unit, education and drug treatment in Brazil; prevention programmes in Chile and Costa Rica; and rural development projects in Mexico and Peru. A $20 million master plan for urban prevention projects and rural development programmes in Colombia was finalized. An UNFDAC Interpol telecommunications network in the Caribbean came into operation in 1989.

Several projects were undertaken in Asia and the Pacific. A $20 million programme was begun in 1989 in India to reduce illicit traffic and demand, while also controlling leakages of licit opium production into the illicit trade. A rural development project was launched in the Lao People's Democratic Republic for opium poppy-growing zones. Other programmes continued in China, Malaysia, Myanmar, Sri Lanka and Thailand.

In the Near and Middle East, UNFDAC actively participated in the work of the Coordinator for UN humanitarian and economic assistance programmes in Afghanistan. In view of the prospect of a resettlement programme in opium poppy-growing parts of the country, a $1.4 million rural rehabilitation and reconstruction programme was approved. Law enforcement projects in Cyprus and Jordan were completed, and others were developed for Turkey and the eastern Mediterranean. A rural development programme in Pakistan was enhanced.

In Africa, programmes were under way in 25 countries. A multisectoral project was started in Morocco, and new programmes in Ghana and Nigeria were planned. Drug control projects became operational in Kenya, Malawi, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zambia. UNFDAC opened an office for a Regional Field Adviser in Nairobi.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/16 without vote.

Contribution of the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control to the fight against illicit traffic in and abuse of drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the strategic role of the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control in the multilateral effort to eliminate the drug problem,

Expressing appreciation to the Executive Director of the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control and his staff for their efforts to develop programmes that meet the needs of countries and address the major aspects of the drug problem,

Noting the significant role in guiding the multilateral narcotics control programme played by the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and by the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, and noting also the adoption on 19 December 1988 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances by the conference of plenipotentiaries held at Vienna from 25 November to 20 December 1988,

Recognizing the benefits that will emanate from the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances for the strengthening of the international narcotics control effort, particularly those activities designed to enhance co-operation between legal, judicial and law enforcement entities,

1. Urges the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control to continue to develop programmes that will address the multifaceted drug problem;

2. Also urges the Fund to continue to use the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, and to use the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, as guiding tools;

3. Affirms that the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances shall not derogate from earlier treaty rights and obligations;

4. Encourages the International Narcotics Control Board, the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control to continue to strengthen their co-operation and take whatever measures may be necessary to achieve the aims of the international conventions in accordance with the advice and suggestions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and in accordance with the policy directives received from the United Nations legislative bodies;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General and the Executive Director of the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control for the initiative and leadership that have characterized the development of the Fund;

6. Urges Governments to consider continuing and increasing substantially their voluntary contributions to the Fund.

Special session of General Assembly

On 1 November, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/16 without vote.

Special session of the General Assembly to consider the question of international co-operation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs, with a view to expanding the scope and increasing the effectiveness of such co-operation

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned about the serious problem of the illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and about the devastating effect of drug abuse on individuals and society,

Bearing in mind statements delivered before the Assembly in plenary meeting during its forty-fourth session, including the address given by the President of the Republic of Colombia on 29 September 1989 and, in particular, his call for a special session of the General Assembly,

1. Decides to hold a special session, at a high political level, to consider as a matter of urgency the question of international co-operation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs, with a view to expanding the scope and increasing the effectiveness of such co-operation;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary administrative arrangements for the convening of the special session.

On 14 November, by decision 44/410, the General Assembly decided that the special session on the question of international co-operation against illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs should take place at United Nations Headquarters from 20 to 23 February 1990. The Assembly also requested the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to consider the question of the enhancement of the role of the United Nations in the fight against illicit drugs at its eleventh special session, and invited it and other UN bodies to submit their views on matters related to the special session of the General Assembly. The Secretary-General was requested to submit a report on the development of a UN plan of action on drug abuse control, and on progress towards the allocation of sufficient resources to deal with the issue of narcotic drugs.

International court for drug trafficking crimes

On 4 December, by resolution 44/39, the General Assembly requested the International Law Commission to address the question of establishing an international criminal court or other international criminal trial mechanism whose jurisdiction would include the illicit trafficking of narcotic drugs across national frontiers.

New title for agenda item

On 15 December, by decision 44/434, the General Assembly decided, considering the increased magnitude of the problem of drug abuse and illicit trafficking, to change the title of agenda item 111 to read "International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking".

Supply and demand

Demand reduction

In a report(13) on drug abuse and measures to reduce illicit demand, the Secretary-General outlined trends in abuse by region and activities by Governments, non-governmental organizations, civic and educational institutions and companies to reduce demand. The report stated that more countries than ever before appeared to be applying a broader range of measures aimed at both prevention and treatment. Most reporting countries had carried out some prevention programmes, usually targeted at youth but also at parents and other persons dealing with youths. Most countries provided behavioural and psychiatric treatment, with the best results achieved when rehabilitation, after-care, social reintegration and treatment were combined in a multidisciplinary approach to ensure the reintegration of an individual into normal community life. A number of countries were reconsidering their drug abuse prevention and treatment policies and programmes in response to the AIDS pandemic, recognizing that intravenous drug abusers were a major vector in the spread of HIV.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/14 without vote.

Intensification and co-ordination of measures for reduction of the illicit demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in its resolution 42/112 of 7 December 1987, welcomed the successful conclusion of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, in particular, the adoption of the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control,

Noting that the General Assembly, in the same resolution, requested the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control, to identify suitable measures for follow-up to the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking,

Seriously concerned at the increasing availability of illicit drugs and the world-wide upward trend in drug abuse, which is causing widespread human suffering, loss of life and social disruption,

Recognizing that measures of prevention, public awareness, early intervention, treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration are essential factors in curbing drug abuse,

Recalling that, by its resolution 1988/16 of 25 May 1988, it urged Governments to improve measures for demand reduction,

Noting that article 14 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, adopted on 19 December 1988 at Vienna, requires parties to adopt measures aimed at eliminating or reducing illicit demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Acknowledging that the specialized agencies concerned with demand reduction initiatives have responded positively to General Assembly resolution 38/93 of 16 December 1983 and the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking in intensifying their drug control activities,

Recognizing the important role that international non-governmental organizations play in all aspects of demand reduction,

Mindful of the fundamental need for action at the national, regional and international levels to achieve a balanced programme of reduction of the supply of and demand for illicit drugs,

Aware that the achievement of this goal requires continuous attention, in-depth analysis, monitoring, co-ordination, follow-up and extensive collaboration,

Noting with satisfaction that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs has included in the provisional agenda of its thirty-fourth session an item concerning the prevention and reduction of the illicit demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

1. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to assess the level of national and international progress in implementing the seven targets set out in chapter I of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking:

(a) To issue a succinct questionnaire, by 31 December 1989, to all Governments and regional intergovernmental organizations, requesting details of action taken at the national and regional levels in implementing the seven targets, together with details of any practical difficulties they have experienced in meeting them;

(b) To prepare, in collaboration with the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization, a report, to be issued by 30 November 1990, analysing the information submitted and assessing, in particular, how best to provide help to States in furthering demand reduction strategies and the extent to which each of the seven targets continues to be relevant, for consideration by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-fourth session;

2. Urges all Governments and regional intergovernmental organizations to co-operate fully in the preparation of the above-mentioned report by providing the information requested in the questionnaire in good time;

3. Urges all Governments to continue to give higher priority to demand reduction in their national strategies to combat drug abuse through the necessary policy and legislative adjustments, including the allocation of appropriate resources and services for prevention, treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration;

4. Calls upon the International Labour Organisation, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization and other appropriate intergovernmental organizations to intensify relevant activities and accord them higher priority, and to collaborate closely with international non-governmental organizations;

5. Calls upon international non-governmental organizations to extend and co-ordinate their activities for developing and executing demand reduction programmes through their contacts with the community at the grass-roots level, in close co-operation with the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and appropriate United Nations organizations and agencies, with the aim of effectively complementing and supplementing their work;

6. Encourages the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control in the further development of its master plans to give due attention to demand reduction activities and the provision of greater resources for related intervention programmes;

7. Urges all Member States to take appropriate steps in the General Assembly and its financial organs to assign the appropriate priority and, within the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 1990-1991 approved by the General Assembly by its resolution 43/214 of 21 December 1988, to approve the budgetary appropriations necessary to enable the Division of Narcotic Drugs to carry out the tasks referred to in paragraph 1 above;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to identify the financial, technical and human resources required by the Division of Narcotic Drugs to carry out the above-mentioned tasks and to make recommendations, taking into account General Assembly resolution 43/214 and the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments, specialized agencies and the international non-governmental organizations concerned for consideration and implementation as appropriate.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/14

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 4 May (meeting 5); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1989/23); agenda item 12.

Narcotic raw materials for licit use

Under the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs,(14) countries were allowed to make reservations regarding traditional, non-medical use of some drugs for a limited time period. The Convention specified that all non-medical use of opium should be suppressed by 12 December 1979, and non-medical use of coca leaf, cannabis and cannabis resin was to be suppressed by 12 December 1989.

In its annual report for 1989,(4) INCB stated that the objective of the 1961 Convention of suppressing the officially sanctioned non-medical use of drugs had been achieved with regard to non-medical use of opium, cannabis and cannabis resin, with the possible exception of Bangladesh. Coca leaf use continued, however, in Bolivia and Peru, and INCB called for assistance to those countries to enable them to comply with their treaty obligations. The report noted that the time periods of the transitional reservations had elapsed; six countries (Argentina, Bangladesh, India, Myanmar, Nepal and Pakistan) had made such reservations.

INCB observed that the diversion of psychotropic substances from licit use into illicit traffic had been controlled, but that traffickers had switched to less regulated substances: amphetamines had been replaced in part by fenetylline, which was being replaced by anorectics and pemo-line, and barbiturates and benzodiazepines were now being used as substitutes for methaqualone. The demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs were the subject of a special study(15) by INCB.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/15 without vote.

Demand and supply of opiates for medical and scientific purposes

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1979/8 of 9 May 1979, 1980/20 of 30 April 1980, 1981/8 of 6 May 1981, 1982/12 of 30 April 1982, 1983/3 of 24 May 1983, 1984/21 of 24 May 1984, 1985/16 of 28 May 1985, 1986/9 of 21 May 1986, 1987/31 of 26 May 1987 and 1988/10 of 25 May 1988,

Emphasizing once again the central role of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol Amending the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 in the control of the production of and trade in opiates,

Reaffirming the need to maintain a balance between the supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific purposes, which is an important element in the international strategy and policy on drug abuse control,

Concerned that the traditional supplier countries continue to face financial and other burdens as a result of their large stocks of opiate raw materials,

Emphasizing once again the fundamental need for international co-operation and solidarity to overcome the problem of excess stocks,

Having considered the section of the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1988 on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs,

1. Urges all Governments to give serious consideration to ways of resolving the problem of excess stocks and bringing about rapid improvement;

2. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its efforts and requests it to pursue the early finalization and implementation of the project, referred to in paragraph 40 of its report, which would assess legitimate needs for opiates in various regions of the world, hitherto unmet because of insufficient health care, difficult economic situations or other conditions;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments and appropriate international agencies for consideration and implementation.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/15

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 4 May (meeting 5); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1989/23); agenda item 12.

Illicit traffic

In a February report,(16) the Secretary-General reviewed the world situation and trends in illicit traffic in drugs. There was some evidence that demand for opium and opiates in traditional consuming areas could be reduced through preventive measures and that some countries had made encouraging progress in that direction. On the other hand, traffickers were finding new markets for heroin in other countries, and the relatively low cost of cocaine in major consuming areas seemed to have aroused the interest of traffickers and drug cartels in revitalizing and expanding heroin distribution through illicit trafficking.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/18 without vote.

Allocation of appropriate resources and priority to the international drug control programme

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in its resolution 43/122, of 8 December 1988, endorsed Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 4(S-X) of 12 February 1988, considering that its implementation was essential for the adequate functioning of the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board,

Recalling also that, in its resolution 1987/29 of 26 May 1987, it requested the Secretary-General to give the sector of international drug control priority, as a matter of urgency, in the allocation of available United Nations resources,

Noting that the General Assembly, in its resolution 42/113 of 7 December 1987, requested the Secretary-General to take steps to provide, within existing resources, appropriate support for strengthening the Division of Narcotic Drugs and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board, inter alia, through redeployment,

Considering that both the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, which was adopted on 19 December 1988, have called for new activities to be undertaken by the Division of Narcotic Drugs as secretariat of the Commission and on behalf of the Secretary-General, as well as by the International Narcotics Control Board and its secretariat,

Recalling the recommendation of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, with regard to the programme budget for the biennium 1988-1989, that the Secretary-General, in implementing General Assembly resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, in which he was requested to reduce the number of posts in the Secretariat by 15 per cent, should keep in mind the concerns expressed by Member States regarding the proposed reductions in posts in smaller offices, including those concerned with narcotics affairs,

Deeply concerned that the proposed cuts envisaged for the international drug control programme would adversely affect programmes which the Commission considers to be of priority,

Having considered the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991 for the Division of Narcotic Drugs,

1. Endorses the recommendations on priorities made by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-third session on the various programme elements contained in the programme of work of the Division of Narcotic Drugs Secretariat for the biennium 1990-1991;

2. Draws to the attention of Member States, in the light of resource reductions and in spite of the identification of priorities, the fact that without additional resources implementation of many important programme elements will be seriously impaired or prevented;

3. Urges States to implement resolution 3 of the United Nations Conference for the Adoption of a Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances by taking appropriate steps in the General Assembly as well as in the financial organs of the Assembly to assign the appropriate priority and approve the necessary budgetary appropriations with a view to providing the Division of Narcotic Drugs and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board with the necessary resources to discharge fully the tasks entrusted to them;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures in conformity with General Assembly resolution 42/113.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/18

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 4 May (meeting 5); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1989/23); agenda item 12.

Drug addiction among children

On 22 May, by decision 1989/123, the Economic and Social Council recalled a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(17) in which the Assembly strongly condemned drug trafficking in all its forms, particularly those criminal activities that involved children in the use, production and illicit sale of narcotic drugs, and appealed to UNFDAC and relevant international agencies to assign high priority to support for programmes to rehabilitate drug-addicted minors. The Council requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly at its 1989 session a report on the implementation of the resolution.

Regional concerns

Africa

In its 1989 report,(4) INCB noted a rapid expansion of illicit drug trafficking in Africa. It stated that the demonstration of firm political will by Governments to take the necessary action to permit effective control was of primary importance. To that end, the enactment of comprehensive laws and administrative regulations and the establishment of implementing agencies were essential first steps. A number of countries had adopted stronger measures to suppress illicit traffic, including the imposition of more severe penalties for trafficking and the establishment of closer co-operation with enforcement agencies in other countries. Efforts to combat drug trafficking were also accompanied by increased bilateral or multilateral cooperation during 1989.

Abuse of cannabis, grown clandestinely in many African countries, remained widespread. Heroin, principally from south-west Asia, was trafficked in increased quantities through Africa to destinations in Europe or North America. Cocaine abuse had not attained alarming proportions in countries of the continent, INCB reported, but cases of abuse were steadily increasing as a result of the use of Africa as a transit point by traffickers.

On 17 February,(18) the Commission on Narcotic Drugs recommended that the creation of three drug law enforcement training centres in the African region be considered, and requested UNFDAC to consider favourably financial requests for the organization of the centres. It also recommended technical aid for the establishment of drug laboratories to countries that lacked such facilities, and invited the Division of Narcotic Drugs, the International Criminal Police Organization, the Customs Co-operation Council and all other interested national and international bodies to consider co-ordinating law enforcement training and resources in the region to enhance their efficiency.

On the same date, the Commission recommended(19) that all African States develop systems for the exchange of information, obtain drug detection and identification equipment, undertake studies of the extent of illicit drug traffic and abuse and enact laws to combat it, and establish special administrations to apply the provisions of international drug control treaties.

Asia

East and South-East Asia. The INCB reported that opium production had increased in 1989 in the region. In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, favourable weather conditions raised harvests. In Myanmar, insurgent groups engaged in illicit drug trafficking took advantage of the prevailing internal situation in that country to increase production. In Thailand, the opium crop was estimated at some 30 tonnes, an increase of 10 per cent over 1988. Some 1,800 of approximately 5,000 hectares devoted to illicit poppy cultivation that had been detected were destroyed. Thai authorities were concerned at the increase in the use of violence and particularly firearms by traffickers. The growing AIDS epidemic in Thailand also had produced a notable increase in the number of HIV-positive heroin addicts.

In China, the trend towards increased drug trafficking on the borders of the Yunnan province continued during 1989. In April, China hosted in Beijing an INCB training seminar for national drug control administrators.

South Asia. The impact of the large illicit opium crop produced in South-East Asia was felt in Bangladesh, where abuse and illicit traffic increased in 1989. Illicit traffic also increased on India's eastern border. India was the only exporter of licit opium for medical and scientific requirements, and its poppy cultivation areas were limited to approximately 15,000 hectares in order to reduce stocks. The Indo-Pakistan Committee to combat drug trafficking met in New Delhi in May, and reached an agreement on several measures to increase co-operation and exchange information.

Europe

Abuse of narcotic drugs, mainly diverted from local sources, continued to be a problem in Eastern European countries. These nations were also confronted with the problem of transit traffic, especially the USSR and the countries along the so-called Balkan route. In June 1989, an expert group meeting convened in Belgrade to discuss ways to combat drug trafficking and organized crime. The participants were Albania, Bulgaria, Greece, Romania, Turkey and Yugoslavia. Over a period of two years, USSR customs officials had seized more than 10 tonnes of drugs, such as heroin or cannabis, and which were being smuggled to Western Europe. The USSR customs service had also developed co-operative arrangements with more than 25 Western countries.

In Western Europe, the increase in drug-related deaths of recent years continued. Drug-related crime was rising more quickly than any other type of criminal offence, and seizures of heroin, cocaine, cannabis and amphetamines reached record levels in most countries. A number of political declarations were made at an Extraordinary Ministerial Conference held in London in May concerning the cocaine threat, the confiscation of proceeds of drug trafficking and the relationship between AIDS and drug addiction. Although less strict controls had been imposed at borders between certain countries of the European Economic Community, authorities found that drug seizures increased substantially, even though fewer persons were checked.

The Second Interregional Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HON-LEA) was held in Vienna from 11 to 15 September.⁽²⁰⁾

Near and Middle East

Widespread illicit opium production continued in Afghanistan, although its actual extent and the amount of drug abuse remained unclear due to the unstable situation in many parts of the country. During the 1988/89 crop season in Pakistan, approximately 150 tonnes of opium had been produced, a figure comparable to that of the previous year. Eradication of poppy cultivation by aerial means was continued, but no significant results were achieved. Opiates continued to enter Iran, where there was a high incidence of abuse. No opium was produced in Turkey, but transit traffic in cannabis resin, heroin and morphine through the eastern frontier continued. In 1989, Turkey made formal agreements with Greece and Iran relating to co-operation in suppressing illegal trafficking.

On 17 February,⁽²¹⁾ the Commission on Narcotic Drugs requested Governments to consider making contributions to UNFDAC to be used specifically for the development of a region-wide drug law enforcement training programme for the Near and Middle East, or other regions expressing similar interest. It also requested the Secretary-General, with the International Criminal Police Organization, the Customs Co-operation Council, the Arab Security Studies and Training Centre and other interested intergovernmental organizations, to identify drug law enforcement training requirements in the region and to make proposals to the Commission at its thirty-fourth session.

North America

In the United States, a survey indicated that the total number of "current" drug users had dropped 37 per cent since 1985, but the number of "frequent" cocaine abusers had doubled. Intravenous drug abuse accounted for 31 per cent of all adult AIDS cases, and was the largest source of new AIDS cases in the United States. A new Director of National Drug Control Policy, with the overall responsibility for co-ordinating drug policy, took office in 1989, and the Federal Government intensified its war on drugs by significantly increasing the budgets of most federal drug-control agencies. A new federal law, which entered into force in 1989, allowed the Federal Government to track and claim ownership of laundered drug money. On the international level, the United States began or continued its co-operation with a number of countries in combating drug abuse, including the Andean countries, Mexico and the Bahamas.

Mexico increased significantly the material and human resources it allocated to the battle against drug trafficking. Some 25 per cent of its armed forces had been assigned to fight illicit drug trafficking, and the budget for drug control activities was increased by 174 per cent. Between December 1988 and August 1989, the authorities destroyed 2,900 hectares of opium poppy and 2,400 hectares of cannabis.

In Canada, cocaine abuse was rising at a faster rate than previously. In 1989, changes in Canadian law went into effect that provided the courts with increased powers to seize the assets of drug criminals.

Latin America and the Caribbean

Drug abuse was reported to be spreading throughout Latin America, adding to the continuing problem of drug trafficking, which had already become a dominant public issue. Heavily armed drug cartels with enormous financial resources continued to undermine political institutions, disrupt national economies and murder officials and private citizens. In addition to the production of cocaine and cannabis, a new threat emerged involving opium-poppy cultivation and heroin processing.

Following a mission to Bolivia, INCB urged that a new drug control law be resolutely applied and that a programme of eradicating the coca bush be pursued rigorously. The Brazilian variety of coca was being increasingly cultivated by Brazilian Indian tribes at the instigation of Colombian traffickers.

In Colombia, escalating violence directed against Government institutions and individuals combating drug trafficking led the authorities to declare an all-out war against the traffickers. Measures decreed by the President included the seizure of traffickers' assets and increased protection for judges. During the first half of 1989, Colombian authorities conducted successful operations in the middle Magdalena region, an area where drug traffickers and guerrilla groups were operating.

In Ecuador, eradication operations between 1984 and 1989 appeared to have decimated coca-bush cultivation. In Peru, efforts to eradicate illicit coca-bush cultivation continued, despite terrorist acts and armed violence by insurgent groups.

Traffickers continued to expand operations in Central America in reaction to stricter controls and enforcement in several South American countries. A sharp increase in illicit opium-poppy cultivation was reported in Guatemala, despite eradication efforts that included the manual destruction of some 1,300 hectares. A programme to track essential chemicals and precursors used in the manufacture of cocaine and heroin—the first of its kind in Central America—was also established.

Stricter measures against drug trafficking in the Bahamas had a major impact on the pattern of illicit traffic. In Cuba, four high-level officials were executed and several others sentenced to prison in 1989 as a result of their involvement with Colombian drug cartels. In Jamaica, authorities continued the cannabis eradication campaign, which had yielded significant results.

Oceania

In Australia, a three-year national campaign against drug abuse was extended for another three years, a reflection of the Government's continued commitment to drug abuse control. More heroin was seized in 1989 than during the previous year. A large seizure of heroin destined for Australia was made in Vanuatu.

Organizational questions

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its thirty-third session in Vienna from 6 to 17 February 1989.(22) It decided that it would hold a special session in 1990 to consider further measures to facilitate the entry into force of the 1988 Convention against Illegal Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, as well as action to improve regional co-operation in drug law enforcement.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/17 without vote.

Special session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs The Economic and Social Council, Recalling its resolution 2001(LX) of 12 May 1976, Recognizing that the complex health, legal, social and human problems associated with drug abuse require the continuous attention of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

Aware of the need for the Commission to consider urgently further measures that may be required to facilitate the entry into force of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances or, if the Convention has entered into force in the interim, the measures required to ensure implementation of its provisions; to consider any urgent questions relating to the possible scheduling of substances under the provisions of the international drug control treaties, following receipt of recommendations to that effect from the World Health Organization; and to consider appropriate action to improve regional co-operation in drug law enforcement,

Decides that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs shall hold a special session of five working days in 1990 at a time when it will not overlap with other meetings and within existing United Nations resources, for the following purposes:

(a) To consider urgently further measures that may be required to facilitate the entry into force of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances or, if the Convention has entered into force in the interim, the measures required to ensure implementation of its provisions;

(b) To consider any urgent questions relating to the possible scheduling of substances under the provisions of the international drug control treaties, following receipt of recommendations to that effect from the World Health Organization;

(c) To consider appropriate action to improve regional co-operation in drug law enforcement;

(d) To consider the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1989, an interim report from the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, and other relevant matters requiring urgent attention.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/17

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/76) without vote, 4 May (meeting 5); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1989/23); agenda item 12.

Also on 22 May, the Council approved the provisional agenda and documentation of the Commission's eleventh special session (decision 1989/119), took note of the report on its thirty-third session (decision 1989/122) and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its thirty-fourth session (decision 1989/118).

International Narcotics Control Board

By decision 1989/121 of 22 May 1989, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Board's 1988 report.(23) On 10 February, by decision 1989/102, the Council decided to discontinue the practice of constituting a Committee on Candidatures to select candidates for election to INCB.

Chapter XVII

Statistics

The United Nations Statistical Commission in 1989 adopted two major economic classifications: the third revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities and the provisional Central Product Classification. Their adoption represented the culmination of more than a decade of effort by both the Statistical Office of the UN Secretariat and the Commission, in co-operation with the European Economic Community and other international organizations. The Economic and Social Council recommended that Member States adopt the revised Industrial Classification and make use of the Central Product Classification.

The importance of development indicators in evaluating progress achieved was discussed by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly. The Council, in May, strongly supported the work of the UN Statistical Office, the UN Research Institute for Social Development and the World Bank in producing development indicators. In December, the Assembly requested the Office and the Institute to pursue actively their co-operation with the other relevant bodies of the UN system.

With regard to the revised System of National Accounts, a recommendation to defer its adoption until 1993, owing to insufficient time for the completion of the full draft, was made by the Inter-Secretariat Working Group on National Accounts.

UN statistical bodies

Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its twenty-fifth session in New York from 6 to 15 February 1989.⁽¹⁾ It discussed and made recommendations in connection with three special issues: co-ordination of international statistical activities; recruitment and selection of professional staff for work in national statistical offices and statistical services of the United Nations; and recurrent UN statistical publications. Other recommendations concerned: the System of National Accounts (SNA); the System of Balances of the National Economy (MPS); links between SNA and MPS; service statistics; the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities and the Central Product Classification; the International Classification of Status in Employment; price statistics; population and housing censuses; social statistics and indicators; environment statistics; patterns of consumption; general development and integration of methodological work; technical co-operation in statistics; the current state of statistics and statistical development in developing countries; the National Household Survey Capability Programme; World Bank initiatives in the design of permanent integrated household surveys; co-ordination and integration of international statistical programmes; and programme questions.

On 22 May, by decision 1989/115, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its twenty-fifth session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its twenty-sixth (1991) session.

Working Group on Statistical Programmes and Co-ordination

The Statistical Commission examined a report on the twelfth (1987) session⁽²⁾ of its Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Co-ordination. It noted that the Working Group had set out its views on co-ordination of ad hoc requests to Member States for statistics from non-statistical units of the United Nations and other international organizations; co-ordination of recurrent statistical data collection, processing and sharing among international organizations; representation of regional intergovernmental statistical bodies in the Statistical Commission; and co-ordination of international statistical activities as a special topic. The Commission also noted that the Working Group had expressed views on special topics to be taken up by the Commission at future sessions, and that it had reviewed progress and plans on the revision of SNA and environment statistics.

At its thirteenth session (Geneva, 11-14 September 1989),⁽³⁾ the Working Group reviewed progress and plans on the revision of SNA and on the International Comparison Programme (ICP), and finalized the provisional agenda for the twenty-sixth session of the Commission. It also considered ways to accelerate statistical development while ensuring co-ordination in selected fields of statistics.

ACC Sub-Committee

The Sub-Committee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) held its twenty-third session in 1989 (Geneva, 19-23 June).⁽⁴⁾ It considered a survey of work plans, follow-up to 1989 decisions of the Statistical Commission, processing and dissemination of trade statistics, publication and dissemination policy, including co-ordination of statistical data bases, external debt statistics, environment statistics, revision of SNA, service statistics, general price statistics and ICP, population and housing censuses, civil registration and vital statistics, social statistics and indicators, indicative patterns of consumption, tourism and migration statistics, and status in employment classification.

The Sub-Committee also considered statistical implications of the single market of the European Economic Community (EEC), co-ordination of technical co-operation in statistics, monitoring achievement of social goals in the 1990s, the National Household Survey Capability Programme, the Living Standards Measurement Study and the Social Dimensions of Adjustment project, and review of the base year for international statistics.

The Sub-Committee recommended that its next session be held in Geneva from 18 to 22 June 1990.

Economic statistics

Environment statistics

After considering a report(5) on environment statistics, the Statistical Commission reaffirmed the high priority attached to that subject and commended the joint efforts of the United Nations Environment Programme, the Statistical Office, the World Bank and other organizations on the linkage of environmental accounting to SNA by means of satellite accounts. It endorsed the preparation of a handbook on environmental accounting, and recommended that a group of specialists from interested countries be established to assist the Statistical Office in developing and implementing the environment statistics programme. The Commission stressed the need for securing extra-budgetary resources or otherwise mobilizing external support for rapid implementation of the environment statistics programme of the Statistical Office and the regional commissions.

National accounts and balances

A progress report(6) on the revision of the System of National Accounts was submitted in 1989 to the Statistical Commission.

The Commission reaffirmed the original objectives of the SNA revision—simplification and clarification, harmonization and updating the system to fit new circumstances; it assigned the highest priority to work on the SNA review, and specified that handbooks should be prepared as soon as possible, with the active involvement of developing countries.

During 1989, the Expert Group on SNA Co-ordination met in January in Luxembourg, and in July and September in New York, to discuss outstanding issues and to review the first draft chapters of the revised SNA.

At a meeting of the Inter-Secretariat Working Group on National Accounts (New York, 20 September), widespread concern was expressed over the insufficient time before the twenty-sixth (1991) session of the Commission to resolve outstanding methodological issues, to complete and review the full draft of the revised SNA, and to ensure that it took into account all comments received. Accordingly, the Working Group recommended that the draft be submitted in 1991 for information and comments only, and be considered for adoption in 1993.

The Commission also had before it a note of the Secretary-General(6) transmitting a report of the secretariat of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA), containing information on developments in MPS. Noting that most countries with centrally planned economies intended to continue work to bring SNA and MPS closer, and the increased number of co-operation projects between countries using MPS and those using SNA, the Commission urged further elaboration of MPS. The Commission welcomed the new orientation of the work on links between SNA and MPS, with a view to making the two systems more applicable to countries with different social and economic systems. It endorsed the continuation of work on the linkages by the Statistical Office, particularly in conjunction with CMEA, with the aim of their integration.

An expert group meeting on the reconciliation of SNA/MPS standards of national accounting (Moscow, 4-9 December)(7) examined the ways to improve harmonization between SNA and MPS and how the two systems could be further integrated, both in theory and in practice. It was recognized that there was a problem in converting data from national currencies into a common unit for international comparisons of levels of aggregates. For that purpose, the calculation of purchasing power parity was strongly recommended. Other recommendations dealt with the design of an integrated framework to permit the derivation of major aggregates of both SNA and MPS from the same coherent system of balances; guidance on variations in institutional arrangements; and identification of non-material services.

Price statistics

The Statistical Commission in 1989 considered a report(6) of the Secretary-General on the International Comparison Programme. Work on phase V of ICP, with 1985 as reference year, was welcomed. Results for EEC, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the European Comparison Programme had already been published; computations had been finalized for the African comparison; and nearly final results were available for the Asia and the Pacific comparison. A partial and preliminary world comparison covering 57 countries had been compiled jointly by the Statistical Office of the European Communities (EUROSTAT) and the UN Statistical Office. It was noted that in phase VI (1990), ICP would likely consist of regional comparisons only, with some possible links among them, owing to the problems of core comparisons and funding of central co-ordination.

The Inter-Secretariat Working Group on ICP convened in New York on 10 and 11 July to review organizational and other arrangements for phase VI and to expedite the preparation and dissemination of technical documents connected with ICP methodology and use of ICP data, particularly the handbook on ICP methods.

An expert group meeting (Paris, 12-16 June), convened jointly by OECD, EUROSTAT and the UN Statistical Office, dealt with outstanding methodological issues and financing of ICP.

Service statistics

A report(6) of the Secretary-General on plans for the further development of service statistics, including international trade in services, was considered by the Statistical Commission in February.

The Commission noted the progress achieved by the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics, a co-operative effort among volunteer national and international statistical agencies to address problems related to data gaps and conceptual issues in service statistics. It welcomed the intention of volunteer countries, in association with participating international organizations, to continue efforts to promote methodology and international comparability in the field of service statistics. It also noted with satisfaction that the work programme of the Voorburg Group was entirely in accord with its own priorities. With regard to priorities for further work on the methodological development of service statistics, the most support was expressed for work on the guidelines on the statistics of financial, business and information services.

The Commission endorsed the continuation of work on service statistics, including trade in services, in appropriate co-ordination with other international organizations. The Secretary-General was requested to seek, in co-operation with international organizations, extrabudgetary funding to support a comprehensive programme involving methodological development, data compilation and technical co-operation to advance work in the important new field of service statistics.

In August, the Statistical Office and the International Monetary Fund finalized their joint inquiry into national practices and selected methodological problems in trade-in-services statistics. The Voorburg Group held its fourth meeting (Ottawa, Canada, October), which covered classification systems in service statistics, price and quantity in services, trade in services, and services that would, among other things, test the application of international standards of services classification according to product and activity. The Group also decided to undertake a survey of its participants' priorities in service statistics in order to facilitate the focus of the Group's future discussions.

International economic classifications

At its February session, the Statistical Commission considered a report(8) on the revision and harmonization of international economic classifications. It also had before it the final draft of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC), Revision 3, and the final draft of the Central Product Classification (CPC). The Commission approved the final draft of ISIC, Rev. 3, and the provisional CPC, both modified to take into account comments by the Commission. The Secretary-General was requested: to prepare a publication on ISIC, Rev. 3, together with indexes and correlation tables between the Classification, the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System, the Standard International Trade Classification, Revision 3, and the provisional CPC; to prepare a publication on CPC, with explanatory notes, for the services part of the classification, as a provisional document; and to publish and circulate ISIC, Rev. 3, and CPC, and to draw them to the attention of UN Member States or members of the specialized agencies.

The Commission recommended that UN Member States adopt ISIC, Rev. 3, or use it in reporting data according to kind of economic activity for the purpose of international comparison, and make use of CPC as a provisional classification in order to gain experience in obtaining international comparability for data according to goods and services. It also recommended that the Statistical Office provide guidance to countries in implementing the recommendations, including the provision of necessary technical co-operation and supplementary documentation.

With regard to the International Classification of Status in Employment (ICSE), the Commission strongly endorsed its proposed revision(9) by the International Labour Office, in collaboration with the UN Statistical Office, and supported the strategy of establishing networks and informal groups for that work. It recommended detailed examination of the classifications of status in employment currently used by countries and of the problems experienced in their application, prior to any revision. The International Labour Office was to report in 1991 on the progress of work on ICSE.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its First (Economic) Committee, adopted resolution 1989/3 without vote.

International economic classifications

Recalling resolution 4(XV) adopted by the Statistical Commission at its fifteenth session, in 1968,

Considering:

(a) The need for implementation of the programme on harmonization of international economic classifications developed by different international organizations,

(b) The importance of international data comparability for various statistics classified according to kind of economic activity or goods and services,

(c) The need to maintain co-ordination among the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC), the General Industrial Classification of Economic Activities within the European Communities (NACE) and the Classification of Branches of the National Economy (CBNE) of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance, as well as among the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System (HS) of the Customs Co-operation Council, the Standard International Trade Classification (SITC) and the new Central Product Classification (CPC),

(d) The desirability of integrating different types of international economic classifications developed by different international organizations and ensuring their consistency with the revised System of National Accounts and the System of Balances of the National Economy,

(e) The action taken by the Joint Working Group on World Level Classifications of the Statistical Office of the United Nations Secretariat and the Statistical Office of the European Communities, by the United Nations Expert Group on Harmonization of Economic Classifications and by the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics to resolve the outstanding issues related to the third revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities and the development of the Central Product Classification,

(f) The proposed revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 2, as described in the report of the Secretary-General on the revision and harmonization of international economic classifications, to be known as the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 3,

(g) The proposed new Central Product Classification, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, to be known as the provisional Central Product Classification,

1. Recommends that Member States:

(a) Adopt, as soon as possible, the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 3, with such modifications as may be necessary to meet national requirements, without disturbing the framework of the classification, or use, for purposes of international comparison, the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 3, in reporting data classified according to kind of economic activity;

(b) Make use of the provisional Central Product Classification in order to gain experience in obtaining international comparability for data classified according to goods and services;

2. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To prepare a publication on the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 3, together with indexes and correlation tables between that Classification, the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System, the Standard International Trade Classification, Revision 3, and the provisional Central Product Classification, based on the provisional text before the Statistical Commission at its twenty-fifth session and in the light of the conclusions of the Commission;

(b) To prepare a publication on the provisional Central Product Classification, together with the explanatory notes for the services part of the classification, based on the provisional text before the Statistical Commission at its twenty-fifth session and in the light of the conclusions of the Commission;

(c) To publish and circulate the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities, Revision 3, and the provisional Central Product Classification and to bring them to the attention of States Members of the United Nations and members of the specialized agencies for adoption.

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (E/1989/85) without vote, 17 May (meeting 7); draft by Statistical Commission (E/1989/21); agenda item 6(a).

Social and demographic statistics

Social indicators

The Statistical Commission in 1989 considered reports of the Secretary-General on international co-ordination of social statistics and indicators and development of statistics and indicators on special population groups(8) and on the development of guidelines on national accounts for women's contribution to development.(8) The Commission noted that there had been an increasing awareness of the need for social statistics and indicators in both developed and developing countries in order to assess socio-economic trends and problems and provide relevant inputs for policy formulation and programme management. It discussed the importance of using population and housing censuses as a basic source of social and related indicators; the development of social data bases on microcomputers; the need for statistics on poverty; the importance of understanding and documenting the underlying methodology in each subject field in order to avoid misinterpretation and misuse of indicators; the usefulness of international comparability; and the importance of creating broad, general support for social statistics.

The Commission endorsed the programmes of the Statistical Office in co-ordinating international work on social statistics, including the new emphasis on the measurement of poverty, and on the development of statistics on women, children, youth, the elderly, the disabled and other special population groups. It recommended that further work in the Statistical Office focus on the development of a co-ordinated UN system data base for selected social statistics and indicators of common interest at the national and international levels. It recommended that national and international statistical services collect social statistics and indicators essential for reliable monitoring of human factors and social impacts of development, and disseminate them in non-technical form on a frequent and timely basis and in a comparable form.

Population and housing censuses

The Statistical Commission had before it a report(9) on the general development and integration of methodological work in population and housing censuses. The Commission noted that, while a range of national and regional activities were taking place relating to the 1990 round of population and housing censuses, many developing countries would require assistance to supplement their own resources. In that connection, the United Nations Population Fund and other multilateral agencies were urged to continue their support to developing countries to enable them to meet national and subnational needs in carrying out population and housing censuses. The Commission strongly supported technical co-operation activities to improve training in census management, sampling, quality control procedures, data processing and analysis, and endorsed the recommendations of the 1988 Cairo International Conference on Dissemination and Use of Census Data for the development of videotape training materials and an expert system in census taking. The Commission recommended that post-enumeration surveys be carried out, and that work be undertaken to establish data bases of census results and to integrate data on special population groups with related socio-economic data.

Patterns of consumption

In 1989, the Statistical Commission considered a report(9) of the Secretary-General and the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) on qualitative aspects of the development of indicators on patterns of consumption. The Commission agreed that there was an urgent need for methodological work on such indicators to assess qualitative aspects of development in the long term, and in connection with the preparations for the fourth UN development decade (the 1990s). Ongoing case-studies of UNRISD would be valuable in identifying data sources and gaps relative to the needed indicators.

The Commission urged interested donors to provide extrabudgetary funds for UNRISD to increase the number of its case-studies to ensure representation from as many geographical regions as possible and to include developing countries at various levels of development. It emphasized that the whole issue of development should be dealt with, including its social, economic, technological and environmental aspects, and that it be treated in the light of their interrelationship. The Secretary-General and UNRISD were requested to prepare a final report on the case-studies and qualitative aspects of development, for consideration by the Commission in 1991.

In connection with Morocco's proposal that it host a meeting of a group of high-level experts, the Commission requested UNRISD to make the necessary contacts with that Government and with interested organizations, including the World Bank and the UN Statistical Office, in order to convene such a meeting to review the progress made on development indicators and to explore the availability of extrabudgetary resources.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 May, on the recommendation of its First Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/4 without vote.

Patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 40/179 of 17 December 1985 and Economic and Social Council resolution 1987/6 of 26 May 1987,

Recalling also the report of the Statistical Commission on its twenty-fourth session, in particular, the section on development indicators,

Recognizing that the subject of patterns of consumption and related socio-economic indicators is of considerable importance and priority for developing countries,

Reaffirming that the choice of indicators is a critical matter if structural shifts and trends in the development process are to be accurately assessed,

Stressing that the development of indicators tailored to the fundamental economic and socio-cultural needs of the population in the fields identified in General Assembly resolution 40/179 would help to orient national development and support international co-operation by helping Governments to formulate and follow policies better geared to the well-being of the population,

Stressing also that in order for the international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade to be successful, there must be a range of indicators relating to economic and social progress, the application of concerted objectives and early-warning systems,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development entitled "Development of indicators on patterns of consumption: qualitative aspects of development",

1. Strongly supports the work of the Statistical Office of the Secretariat, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and the World Bank, which have made considerable progress in producing development Indicators, and encourages the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Environment Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization and the regional commissions to continue their work on indicators tailored to the needs identified by the General Assembly in its resolution 40/179;

2. Affirms the need to identify, as a phase in the development process, patterns of consumption tailored to the well-being of populations and defined as a series of numerical indicative objectives to permit the evaluation, for the use of countries, of the adequate level of satisfaction of fundamental economic and socio-cultural needs in regard to food, housing, clothing, education, health care and necessary social services;

3. Considers that this requires a reliable measuring instrument consisting of a set of indicators related to living conditions, employment and the circumstances underlying them;

4. Encourages countries, in this regard, to improve their basic statistical programmes and capabilities and to make efforts to develop the collection, processing, analysis and dissemination of data relating to patterns of consumption, and invites the international community to strengthen the national capabilities of the developing countries with respect to the collection of integrated socio-economic data and their processing, in particular by microcomputer, with a view to having better and more up-to-date data;

5. Agrees that the Handbook on Social Indicators prepared by the Statistical Office of the Secretariat and the Living Standards Measurement Study and other conceptual work undertaken by the World Bank should contain guidelines for the selection and compilation of indicators in the precise fields referred to in General Assembly resolution 40/179;

6. Recommend that different ways of developing new indicators be explored and that advantage be taken in particular of the household survey mechanisms available at the national level so as to include therein appropriate modules relating to patterns of consumption and the qualitative aspects of development, while making wide use of conventional survey techniques as well as of new methods of collecting and processing data;

7. Requests the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and the Statistical Office of the Secretariat to continue their collaboration on the in-depth analysis of the views of Governments, in particular those of the developing countries, and on the timely completion of the national case-studies, of which there should be a greater number, endeavouring to ensure their methodological coherence and the representation of all the developing regions and taking into consideration the economic, technological, social and environmental aspects of development;

8. Welcomes the offer made by the Government of Morocco to act as host, in 1990, in co-operation with the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and any other interested organizations, including the World Bank and the Statistical Office of the Secretariat, to an international conference of high-level experts, open to the participation of the members of the Statistical Commission, for the purpose of examining methodological questions and the conceptual aspects of the qualitative indicators of development and of consolidating the various research projects and studies currently under way on that subject;

9. Agrees that the conference would be preceded by a preparatory working group meeting to be convened at Geneva as soon as possible, under the auspices of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and with the participation of appropriate international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Bank, with a view to drawing up, inter alia, a common conceptual framework with a relevant set of core indicators;

10. Recommends that appropriate extrabudgetary resources be allocated for the preparation of the case-studies referred to in paragraph 7 above, and invites interested donor countries, the relevant international organizations and other bodies and institutions wishing to participate in the research work on patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development to make voluntary contributions for that purpose to the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the proper dissemination of the present resolution and to take it into consideration in the future work programme of the Statistical Office of the Secretariat, and requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development to submit a final report, containing recommendations, to the Statistical Commission at its twenty-sixth session.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/4

22 May 1989 Meeting 12 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (E/1989/85) without vote, 17 May (meeting 7); draft by Statistical Commission (E/1989/21); agenda item 6(a)).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/234 without vote.

Patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 40/179 of 17 December 1985, Economic and Social Council resolution 1987/6 of 26 May 1987 and the reports of the Statistical Commission on its twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth sessions, in particular the sections on development indicators, and taking note of Council resolution 1989/4 of 22 May 1989,

Reiterating that the subject of patterns of consumption and related socio-economic indicators is of considerable importance and high priority for developing countries,

Reaffirming that, in order for the international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade to be successful, there must be a range of indicators relating to economic and social progress, the application of concerted objectives and early-warning systems, with due regard for the economic, technological, social and environmental aspects of development,

1. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/4, and requests the Statistical Office of the Secretariat and the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development to pursue actively their co-operation with the other relevant bodies of the United Nations system, with a view to achieving the objectives set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 of Council resolution 1989/4;

2. Recognizes that the identification of indicative patterns of consumption and the development of qualitative indicators of development would be extremely useful in the evaluation of the progress achieved in the implementation of the international development strategy and would make a substantial contribution to the work of a United Nations conference on environment and development;

3. Invites interested donor countries, the relevant international organizations and other bodies and institutions wishing to participate in the research work on patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development to make voluntary contributions for that purpose to the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development with a view to the holding in good time of the preparatory meeting and the international conference of high-level experts referred to in paragraphs 8 and 9 of Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/4;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to invite the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development to submit a preliminary progress report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution and of Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/4.

General Assembly resolution 44/234

22 December 1989 Meeting 85 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (A/44/832/Add.1) by consensus, 21 November (meeting 41); draft by Malaysia for Group of 77 (A/C.2/44/L.23/Rev.1); agenda item 12.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 2nd Committee 15-17, 19, 20, 25, 29, 31, 34, 41; plenary 85.

National Household Survey Capability Programme

In February, the Statistical Commission considered a report(9) on the long-range future of the National Household Survey Capability Programme (NHSCP). In operation in 30 developing countries, the Programme had generated worldwide interest in the role of household surveys as a means of collecting much-needed information on the demographic, social and socio-economic aspects of household populations, and was well set to meet the target coverage of 45 countries by 1991, the report stated. The Commission emphasized the need for effective co-ordination with other household survey programmes.

World Bank household survey initiatives

The Statistical Commission had before it a World Bank report(9) on its initiatives in the design of permanent integrated household surveys:

the Living Standards Measurement Study (LSMS) and Social Dimensions of Adjustment (SDA) programmes.

The LSMS programme, launched in 1980 as a research project, had a threefold objective: collection of policy-relevant high-quality data, rapid processing of results, and appropriate policy-oriented analysis of data. It had moved into an operational phase, and several countries had either taken up or proposed to take up integrated multi-subject surveys of the LSMS type on a continuous basis. The Commission endorsed the World Bank's effort to continue to document in detail and disseminate widely the experiences of LSMS.

The SDA programme, designed to assist in minimizing the impact of macro-economic adjustment measures on sub-Saharan Africa, was endorsed by the Commission as an important, unique initiative in capability-building in Africa directed at data gathering and use in the formulation of national policies for structural adjustment. The World Bank was invited to report on the progress of LSMS and SDA, including fuller details of the survey methodology proposed for the SDA programme, for submission to the Commission in 1991.

Special issues

Considering the issue of co-ordination of international statistical activities, the Commission was of the opinion that the existing institutional structures for promoting co-ordination and statistical development were appropriate and effective. The structures included the Commission itself, regional intergovernmental bodies, the Commission's Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Co-ordination, and the ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities. Some areas requiring additional development and co-ordination, including standardization of definitions, classifications and practices, were environment statistics, indicators for development, productivity statistics and statistics on illiteracy. The Commission, recognizing that considerable success had been achieved in co-ordination in a number of areas, requested international organizations to investigate ways to facilitate the translation of international methodological publications into local languages and to help promote implementation of international guidelines. It requested the Statistical Office to investigate the possibility of developing additional mechanisms for the exchange of country experiences in statistical development and standardization.

With regard to recruitment and selection of professional staff for work in national statistical offices and UN statistical services, the Commission recognized the importance of recruiting technically qualified professional staff in national and international statistical services, including the need for a variety of skills and subject-matter specializations to cover the wide range of responsibilities that statistical offices were to meet. It requested more national statistical offices providing specialized and general training courses for their staff to consider the possibility of opening those programmes to participants from other countries and statistical staff from international organizations. The Statistical Office was to consider the feasibility of collecting information on training curricula and sharing it with national statistical services.

As for recurrent UN statistical publications, the Commission emphasized that those prepared by the Statistical Office were unique and especially useful to Governments, universities and research centres. Particularly for developing countries, those publications were the basic source of information in the economic and social area. The Commission endorsed the continuation of the Office's statistical publications programme, and requested the Office to continue the ongoing review of recurrent publications in order to assess current usefulness and relevance in relation to user needs and to improve timeliness and quality. Alternative methods of disseminating statistical information should also be explored.

Other statistical activities

Technical co-operation

The Statistical Commission had before it a report(9) of the Secretary-General, in which he summarized the technical co-operation programmes in statistics for the period 1985-1988. The Commission, endorsing the technical co-operation activities in statistics carried out by the UN Department of Technical Co-operation for Development (DTCD), recommended that DTCD take the lead, in co-operation with the Statistical Office, in promoting capacities in data systems and informatics technology. The Statistical Office was urged to play a leading role in the area of co-ordination in multilateral and bilateral technical co-operation statistical activities. The Commission supported new initiatives in technical co-operation related to the generation of trade statistics, educational video cassettes, civil registration and vital statistics, and statistics on women and disabled persons.

In a later report,(10) the Secretary-General said that the main activities of DTCD included work related to the promotion of NHSCP, and assistance in demographic statistics and population censuses. The total cost of the support provided by the UN technical co-operation programme for the formulation and execution of country, regional and interregional projects was $33.6 million for 1989. Workshops and seminars organized by DTCD during 1989 dealt with: disability statistics, national accounts development and training, external trade, planning organization and administration for large-scale demographic and social data-collection activities, population data bases and related topics, and civil registration. On-the-job and international training and technical expert services were also provided to national statistical offices during the year.

Statistics in developing countries

The Statistical Commission in 1989 considered a report(11) on the current state of statistics and statistical development in developing countries. The Commission noted that the report would have been more useful if references to quality, timeliness and coverage, and topics such as debt and financial transactions and health had been included. It endorsed strategies proposed in the report as useful guides for multilateral and bilateral technical co-operation in statistics. These related to identification of the value of statistics; a balanced approach to technical co-operation; statistical training; data processing; technical advice to countries; statistical organization and management; co-ordination of technical co-operation activities; and the needs of the statistically least developed countries.

Programme questions

In February, the Statistical Commission reviewed the statistical work of international organizations for the period 1986 to June 1988. It approved the UN Statistical Office 1990-1991 work programme, giving highest priority to further development of SNA and linkage with MPS. It urged mobilization of the necessary extrabudgetary resources or development of other approaches, along the lines of the Voorburg Group model, to ensure continuation of methodological work, on the understanding that any such experiments would preserve the roles of the Statistical Commission and the Statistical Office. The Commission expressed general support for the proposed objectives and strategies of the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997.

Chapter XVIII

Institutional arrangements

The Economic and Social Council continued during 1989 to review its structure and functioning. In July, it adopted measures with regard to major policy themes and thematic analyses, documentation, organization of work and substantive support, the purpose of which was to revitalize the Council in its efforts to carry out its responsibilities.

Following the January/February session of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), the Council in May granted consultative status to 33 NGOs, added 17 to the Roster, and reclassified certain others.

The Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC), at its two regular sessions in 1989, gave priority attention to debt and development, an international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade, international drug abuse control and the environment. It also held a special session devoted to the conditions of service of the Professional and higher categories of staff.

The Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) continued efforts to harmonize system-wide activities and work programmes.

Restructuring questions

Revitalization of the Economic and Social Council

In response to a 1988 Economic and Social Council request,⁽¹⁾ the Secretary-General submitted a June report⁽²⁾ on the revitalization of the Council. The report described action taken to implement a set of interrelated measures, prepared by the Council, which aimed at improving its ability to carry out effectively its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations. The Secretary-General gave detailed comments on implementing each paragraph of the 1988 Council resolution⁽¹⁾ and made suggestions for further follow-up.

Among the suggestions were: (1) each year, the President of the Council, in consultation with Member States, should attempt to summarize the major conclusions of the Council's general discussion of economic and social policy, which could serve as a policy statement of the Council; (2) a multi-year programme should be drawn up of major policy themes for in-depth discussion; (3) the Secretary-General should draw the Council's attention to urgent and emerging issues through mechanisms within the UN system for the early identification, analysis and monitoring of world economic developments; (4) the Secretary-General could draw attention to policies and priorities needing Council monitoring and make proposals on how the monitoring should be carried out, including through a periodic progress review of the implementation of the International Development Strategy and specific modalities for monitoring resolutions; (5) there was an urgent need for a thorough review of all documentation prepared for the Council to avoid duplication and excessive documentation; and (6) the specialized agencies should be invited to suggest major policy themes for Council discussion. In conclusion, the Secretary-General stated that political will and attitudinal change on the part of Member States were essential if the Council was to regain its credibility and prestige, for, without such change, efforts to improve the Council's functioning would be ineffective and would not contribute to meaningful revitalization.

In a statement annexed to the Secretary-General's report, the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) welcomed the efforts to revitalize the Council. Suggestions for further revitalization included the allocation of one to two days of the Council's annual general discussion to an exchange of views between the executive heads of the UN system, or their senior representatives, with Council members. Co-ordination was a two-way process of dialogue, ACC stated, in which due weight had to be given to the overall policy and co-ordination concerns of the Council on the one hand, and the mandates, policies and experiences of the various organizations of the system on the other. ACC welcomed the Council's establishment of a multi-year work programme and would assist the Council in identifying and discussing annual in-depth reviews of previously identified major policy themes.

On 28 July 1989, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/114 without vote.

Further measures for the implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 1988/77 on the revitalization of the Council

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/170 of 11 December 1987, 42/211 of 21 December 1987, 43/174 of 9 December 1988 and 43/213 of 21 December 1988, concerning the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations,

Aware that the reform of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations is a continuing process aimed at strengthening the effectiveness of the United Nations in dealing with economic and social issues and requires further attention,

Reaffirming its resolution 1988/77 of 29 July 1988 on the revitalization of the Economic and Social Council, endorsed by the General Assembly in decision 43/432 of 20 December 1988,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revitalization of the Economic and Social Council,

Concerned that some of the provisions of Council resolution 1988/77 have not been implemented,

Concerned also that the documentation submitted to the Council in 1989 was distributed with considerable delay, contravening rule 13 of the rules of procedure of the Council, which states, inter alia, that documentation relating to an item of the agenda shall be circulated six weeks before the opening of the regular session,

1. Note that the organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system have expressed their readiness to contribute fully to the revitalization of the Economic and Social Council;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts towards the full implementation of all relevant provisions of Council resolution 1988/77 and also to implement fully the present resolution;

I. Major policy themes and thematic analyses

3. Decides to consider at its organizational session for 1990 the establishment, on a provisional basis, of a multi-year work programme identifying major policy themes for in-depth consideration each year in accordance with paragraphs 2 (a) (ii), 2 (a) (iii) and 2 (e) (iii) of Council resolution 1988/77, in order to enable the Council, under the authority of the General Assembly, to exercise effectively its functions and powers as set out in the Charter of the United Nations and relevant resolutions of the Assembly and the Council; the multi-year work programme should be updated and adjusted as and when necessary;

4. Decides that the thematic analyses referred to in paragraphs 2 (a) (ii) and 2 (e) (iii) of Council resolution 1988/77, which shall replace the present cross-organizational programme analyses as from 1991, should be made available to the Council in all official languages at least eight weeks in advance of a session;

5. Further decides that the thematic analyses should review existing activities and be forward-looking in identifying policy options; they should also:

(a) Describe the issue and the relationships between fields, sectors and activities of the bodies of the United Nations system concerned;

(b) Provide information on recent conclusions and recommendations of the intergovernmental bodies of the United Nations system concerned;

(c) Review relevant policy decisions and recent, ongoing and planned programmatic activities relating to the theme and their system-wide implementation, highlighting practical problems encountered;

(d) Identify emerging problems and the potential need for action by the United Nations system;

(e) Draw attention, as appropriate, to both social and economic aspects of the selected policy theme;

(f) Recommend substantive and programmatic steps to promote complementarities, co-operation and joint activities, fill gaps and reduce duplication in the United Nations system;

(g) Propose co-ordinated measures to translate legislative mandates and overall guidelines into programmes, taking into account the structure of the United Nations system and the respective areas of competence of its organizations;

(h) Propose monitoring arrangements;

6. Decides, in the context of its consideration of major policy themes, to review the functioning of the relevant subsidiary bodies with a view to developing common approaches to co-ordination, monitoring and follow-up;

7. Invites Member States to be represented in the discussions on major policy themes at an appropriately high level, with a view to the effective consideration of each theme;

8. Invites the executive heads of organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to participate actively in the in-depth discussions on major policy themes and to co-operate closely with the Secretary-General in the preparation of the thematic analyses;

II. Documentation

9. Notes that it is important to improve the quality and reduce the length of documents submitted to the Council and subsidiary bodies in the economic, social and related fields and to avoid overwhelming the Council with excessive documentation;

10. Decides that the President of the Council and other members of the Bureau should continually monitor, with the assistance of the Secretariat, the status of the preparation of documentation, taking into account relevant decisions on documentation, and should propose appropriate measures to the Council, after having held informal meetings to be convened at least eight weeks before each regular session of the Council, bearing in mind the need to adhere to rule 13 of the rules of procedure of the Council and other relevant rules and regulations;

11. Invites all organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to provide the Council with all the necessary input and support, particularly material required for the preparation of thematic analyses and consolidated reports, and requests the specialized agencies to continue to submit annually to the Council executive summaries of their activities;

12. Requests its subsidiary bodies to highlight policy recommendations and decisions resulting from their deliberations for consideration and appropriate action by the Council, and recommends that the General Assembly request its subsidiary bodies reporting through the Council to do the same;

13. Emphasizes that all reports submitted to the Council should be prefaced by a summary outlining the main issues addressed and the conclusions and recommendations;

14. Urges its subsidiary bodies to implement fully Council resolution 1979/41 of 10 May 1979 in submitting to the Council for consideration their provisional agendas together with the lists of requested documentation, with a view to ensuring greater consistency in requests for documentation and improving reporting procedures, and recommends that the General Assembly request its subsidiary bodies reporting through the Council to do the same;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, when introducing new information technologies, to take into account the need to improve the availability of documentation and to reduce the quantity of paper stored and distributed to the Council;

16. Takes note with appreciation of the report made orally by the Chairman of the open-ended task force on documentation established by the Council in its decision 1989/105 of 5 May 1989, and requests the task force to continue its work with a view to submitting concrete recommendations to the Council at its organizational session for 1990, taking duly into account the relevant provisions of the present resolution;

17. Decides to consider at its organizational session for 1990 the proposed format of the report of the Economic and Social Council to the General Assembly;

III. Organization of Work

18. Recommends that the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session request its subsidiary bodies reporting through the Council to make proposals that will provide adequate time for their reports to be considered by the Council;

19. Requests the General Assembly, with the assistance of the Committee on Conferences, to approve and adjust the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1990 and 1991, bearing in mind the recommendation in paragraph 18 above;

20. Decides that, in order to ensure that it is fully effective and substantive, the general discussion on international economic and social policy, including regional and sectoral developments, should not exceed four days and that statements made should not exceed fifteen minutes;

21. Affirms that the President of the Council may prepare a summary of the major conclusions of the general discussion;

22. Decides that, after the conclusion of all the statements in the general discussion, one day should be devoted to an informal exchange of views among members of the Council, with the active participation of the executive heads of the organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system concerned;

23. Decides that the sessional committees shall not begin their substantive work until the conclusion of the general discussion and that, to the extent possible, those committees should devote more time to a constructive dialogue on the agenda items under consideration, with the active participation of representatives of the organizations of the United Nations system concerned, and decides to consider at its organizational session for 1990 modalities for implementing these arrangements, taking into account the need to ensure that its sessions are not prolonged;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council in sufficient time for consideration at its organizational session for 1990 proposals for:

(a) A draft six-year work programme on major policy themes in the economic and social sectors as referred to in paragraph 2 (e) (iii) of Council resolution 1988/77;

(b) A biennial programme of work, with the adjustments in agenda and documentation necessary for the full implementation of Council resolution 1988/77 and the present resolution;

(c) Modalities for the in-depth discussions on major policy themes, possibly in a high-level segment of the Council;

IV. Substantive support

25. Requests the Committee for Programme and Coordination, in accordance with its mandate and acting as a subsidiary body of the Council, to continue to assist the Council in formulating appropriate recommendations relating to the programmatic and co-ordination aspects of relevant activities of the Council.

26. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to implement fully and effectively Council resolution 1988/77 and the present resolution, to take the following points into consideration in providing secretariat support for the Council, as referred to in paragraph 2 (g) of Council resolution 1988/77:

(a) There should be an organizationally distinct and identifiable secretariat structure for providing substantive support in regard to the preparation of thematic analyses and consolidated reports;

(b) The expertise of other organizations of the United Nations system should be drawn upon, as appropriate;

(c) Such secretariat support should be provided, as appropriate, inter alia, within existing resources through redeployment of staff and the use of extrabudgetary resources.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/114

28 July 1989 Meeting 37 Adopted without vote

meeting numbers. ESC 31, 34, 37.

In decision 1989/182 of 28 July, the Council took note of a note by the Secretariat(3) on reports submitted by specialized agencies on economic, social and related matters falling within their mandates.

Restructuring of economic and social sectors

Note of the Secretary-General. Responding to a 1988 General Assembly request,(4) the Secretary-General transmitted a November note(5) regarding the UN intergovernmental structure and functions in the economic and social fields. As requested by the Assembly, the Secretary-General had sought the views of all Member States on ways to achieve a balanced and effective implementation of recommendations 2 and 8 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations (Group of 18), which had reported to the Assembly in 1986.(6) Recommendations 2 and 8 dealt with enhancing the effectiveness of the intergovernmental structure and its secretariat support structures, and with programme delivery in the economic and social fields. The Secretary-General reported that he had received responses from 20 countries, as well as one on behalf of the 12 members of the European Economic Community. The responses were summarized in an annex to his note.

The Secretary-General said the fundamental concern was to ensure the capacity to respond effectively to the requirements of Member States, with one of the important elements being the ability of the Organization to adapt itself to respond effectively to new and emerging issues.

Major intergovernmental deliberations were scheduled that were expected to develop new approaches, to identify priority concerns and to indicate the manner in which the United Nations could best respond to them. For example, two General Assembly special sessions were to be held in 1990 to consider international co-operation against illicit narcotic drug activities, as well as international economic co-operation, particularly the revitalization of economic growth and development in developing countries. In addition, preparatory work was being undertaken on the elaboration of an international development strategy for the fourth UN development decade, expected to be adopted by the Assembly in 1990 (see PART THREE, Chapter I). The widening gap between developed and developing countries was expected to be addressed by the Second United Nations Conference on Least Developed Countries, also scheduled for 1990. As for the environment and its relationship to development, the 1989 Assembly was expected to decide on preparatory arrangements for a major conference on environment and development, to be held in 1992. Preparations were also under way regarding the eighth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), also to be held in 1992. The forty-fourth Assembly's comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development would be likely to have an important bearing (see PART THREE, Chapter II), and both intergovernmental and secretariat work would be affected by the 1992-1997 medium-term plan, scheduled to be adopted by the Assembly in 1990.

Because those deliberations would have critical implications for the UN intergovernmental structure and functions, the Secretary-General believed it would be appropriate to await their results and integrate them into his restructuring recommendations. In the same spirit, he suggested that the Economic and Social Council might also consider scheduling, at an appropriate time, a comprehensive review of the UN intergovernmental structure in the light of the outcome of the various discussions. In the meantime, the Secretary-General had assigned to the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation (DIEC) responsibility for providing various reports, notably thematic analyses and issue-oriented consolidated reports, as well as substantive support for the Council in the form of a separate and identifiable secretariat, as requested by the Council in 1988.(1)

JIU report. In August, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the concluding report(7) of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on implementation of a 1977 Assembly resolution(8) concerning the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the UN system. The report contained recommendations regarding the functioning of the Economic and Social Council, including the allocation of three, rather than five, days to general debate; the reduction of documentation submitted for the general debate; and identification of major items and urgent questions requiring Council decisions. With regard to more effective inter-agency co-ordination, JIU recommended streamlining Council debates on co-ordination; making greater use of the DIEC Director-General; and ensuring flexibility of co-ordination mechanisms. As to making full use of available programming instruments, it was recommended that the Secretariat should prepare and distribute preliminary drafts or provisional versions of planning and programming documents in order to overcome delays. A more operational division of labour between the Department of Technical Co-operation for Development (DTCO), the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs (DIESA), the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs (CSDHA) and the Statistical Office, based on the clustering of distinct sectors in each entity, was recommended, as was clarification and formalization of the Director-General's functions, with the Director-General preparing an annual work plan, indicating his priority activities and the contributions anticipated from UN system entities.

In November comments on the JIU report,(9) the Secretary-General pointed out that the Council had in 1989 taken a number of decisions regarding its work, including that the general debate should not exceed four days, with statements limited to 15 minutes. It had also begun to consider establishing a multi-year work programme, identifying main policy themes for in-depth discussion each year. In comments on particular recommendations, the Secretary-General concurred with the proposal that greater use be made of the DIEC Director-General in co-ordination; stated that he had taken steps to submit the draft introduction to the medium-term plan to Member States for wide consultations; and reported his intention to refer later, after the Assembly's completion of its review of the intergovernmental structure, to changes in the secretariat structure, while stating that he did not share the view that DTCD, DIESA and CSDHA should be restructured along sectoral lines. Although he agreed with certain proposals on clarifying the Director-General's role, he pointed out that they needed to be defined within the terms of specific Assembly resolutions on the subject. He agreed that the Director-General could prepare an annual work plan, indicating priorities and contributions expected from other UN entities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/103 without vote.

Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields

The General Assembly:

Recalling its resolutions 32/197 of 20 December 1977, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/170 of 11 December 1987, 43/174 of 9 December 1988 and 43/213 of 21 December 1988 and its decision 43/432 of 20 December 1988,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 1988/77 of 29 July 1988 on the revitalization of the Council and endorsing Council resolution 1989/114 of 28 July 1989 on further measures for its implementation,

Desiring to strengthen further the role and effectiveness of the United Nations as a whole through enhanced multilateral co-operation in the economic, social and related fields in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that Member States must honour, promptly and in full, their financial obligations as set out in the Charter, and emphasizing that the financial stability of the Organization will facilitate its effective functioning in the economic, social and related fields,

Emphasizing the need for more effective and efficient functioning of the intergovernmental structure of the United Nations and its secretariat support structure in the economic, social and related fields in order to enhance international co-operation and efforts to promote the development of the developing countries,

Affirming that the goal of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields is to ensure effective and efficient use of resources in support of the objectives determined by Member States and not to make financial savings.

Conscious of the new demands that are likely to emerge in the economic, social and related fields from major intergovernmental deliberations scheduled to take place in the early 1990s and the consequent need to adapt the intergovernmental system to these demands,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen co-operation and enhance understanding between the United Nations and the other organizations of the United Nations system as a whole in order to enable the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council to carry out their responsibilities for promoting international economic and social co-operation in accordance with the relevant articles of the Charter,

Reaffirming the central role assigned to the Economic and Social Council in co-ordinating the activities of the agencies of the United Nations system, as set out in Article 63 of the Charter,

Conscious of the special responsibilities assigned to the Economic and Social Council in chapters IX and X of the Charter,

Emphasizing that a high level of commitment and political support on the part of Member States will be necessary if measures agreed upon to improve the functioning of the intergovernmental system in the economic and social sectors are to be effectively implemented and truly realized,

1. Stresses the common interest of all countries in the effective functioning of the United Nations in the economic and social fields so that it is more responsive not only to current issues but also to emerging problems and issues, particularly those relating to the development of the developing countries;

2. Takes note of the note of the Secretary-General on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations and the view expressed therein that more time is required before submission to the Assembly of the detailed report requested in resolution 43/174;

3. Decides to review the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, including the secretariat support structure, taking into account the major intergovernmental conferences scheduled to take place in the early 1990s, including the special session of the General Assembly to consider the question of international co-operation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs, with a view to expanding the scope and increasing the effectiveness of such co-operation, the special session of the Assembly devoted to international economic co-operation, in particular to the revitalization of economic growth and development of the developing countries, the Second United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, the eighth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as the elaboration of the international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade;

4. Stresses the need for the full implementation of Economic and Social Council resolutions 1988/77 and 1989/114, including the provisions related to the secretariat support structure of the Council, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of those resolutions to the Economic and Social Council so that the Council can review the question at its second regular session of 1990;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the follow-up and implementation of the present resolution;

6. Decides to review the question at its forty-fifth session.

11 December 1989 Meeting 80 Adopted without vote

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council in 1989 held its organizational session in New York on 19 January and on 9 and 10 February. Its first regular session, which was also held in New York, was from 2 to 24 May; its second regular session took place in Geneva from 5 to 28 July.

Co-operation with other organizations

Non-governmental organizations

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations met in New York from 23 January to 3 February,⁽¹⁾ when it heard requests from NGOs to be granted consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and requests for reclassification. The Committee recommended that 11 NGOs be heard by the Council or its committees in connection with items on the agenda.⁽²⁾

In May 1989, the number of NGOs in consultative status with the Council totalled 893.⁽³⁾ They were divided into three groups: category I—organizations representative of major population segments in a large number of countries, involved with the economic and social life of the areas they represented; category II—international organizations having special competence in a few of the Council's areas of activity; and the Roster—organizations considered able to make occasional and useful contributions to the Council's work.

The Committee submitted three draft decisions calling for Council action: by the first, it recommended that consultative status be granted to 51 NGOs that had applied and that six NGOs be reclassified; in the second, it recommended approval of the provisional agenda and documentation for its 1991 session; and in the third, it requested that three NGOs be reclassified for failure to provide additional information requested by the Committee in 1987, and that one be reclassified for failure to provide satisfactory additional information. The Committee further recommended that the Council consider a question entitled "Charter of housing rights", as proposed by an NGO, at its second regular session of 1989, under the item "Development and international economic co-operation: human settlements".

By decision 1989/106 of 10 May, the Economic and Social Council granted category II consultative status to 33 NGOs and placed 17 NGOs on the Roster. It reclassified one organization from category II to category I and five organizations from the Roster to category II.

By decision 1989/108 of the same date, the Council reclassified three NGOs from category II to the Roster for failure to provide additional information requested in 1987 and requested those organizations to submit in 1991 a detailed report on their 1986-1989 activities, on the understanding that failure to do so would cause withdrawal of consultative status. It further decided that the Union of International Fairs be reclassified from category II to the Roster, since additional information provided by it was not satisfactory.

Also on 10 May, the Council decided to consider the question "Charter of housing rights" at its second regular session of 1989 (decision 1989/109), took note of the report of the Committee on NGOs on its 1989 session (decision 1989/110) and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the 1991 session (decision 1989/107).

Intergovernmental organizations

During the year, 34 intergovernmental organizations were designated by the Economic and Social Council under rule 79^a of the rules of procedure for participation in the Council's deliberations on questions within the scope of their activities. Of these, 25 were participating on a continuing basis and 9 on an ad hoc basis.⁽⁴⁾

By decision 1989/165 of 24 July, the Council decided that the Arab Security Studies and Training Center and the Customs Co-operation Council could participate on an ad hoc basis, without the right to vote, in the Council's deliberations on questions within the scope of their activities.

Work programme

At its 1989 organizational session, the Economic and Social Council considered its draft basic programme of work for 1989 and 1990, as submitted by the Secretary-General;⁽⁵⁾ on 10 February it adopted decision 1989/101.

In section I of the decision, the Council approved the list of items for consideration in 1989—

14 items for the first regular session and 13 for the second regular session—and allocated the items to its sessional committees and plenary meetings. Subject to the decision to be taken by the General Assembly at its resumed forty-third session (see PART THREE, Chapter I), the Council would consider the inclusion in the agenda of an item relating to the General Assembly's 1990 special session on international economic co-operation, in particular the revitalization of economic growth and development in the developing countries. It also decided to take note of a request from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization(6) for inclusion in the agenda of an item on co-operation in the field of informatics. The question of interregional co-operation in international trade facilitation was to be considered at the second regular session, under the item on regional co-operation. That session would also consider the report of the UNCTAD Trade and Development Board on the second part of its thirty-fifth session, the Secretary-General being authorized to transmit the report of the first part of its thirty-sixth session directly to the General Assembly. An in-depth review of the report of the World Food Council on the work of its fifteenth session was allocated to the second regular session, at which recommendations would be made for submission to the Assembly. The Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee of the Whole for the Preparation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade was invited to make an oral report to the Council at the second regular session. The Council decided, when reviewing the report of the Commission on Human Settlements, to limit consideration to specific proposals requiring Council action or relating to the co-ordination aspect of the Commission's work. One plenary meeting of the second regular session was to be devoted to the question of convening a UN conference on environment and development.

The Council also decided: to authorize the Secretary-General to transmit directly to the Assembly the report of the Intergovernmental Committee on Science and Technology for Development on its tenth session; to carry out at its second regular session the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development; and to request the Secretary-General to make available the revisions to the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 in the economic, social and human rights fields.

By section II of the decision, the Council took note of the list of questions for inclusion in its 1990 work programme.

Agenda of 1989 sessions

On 9 February, the Economic and Social Council adopted a five-item agenda for its organizational session. The annotated provisional agenda for the first regular session(7) was adopted on 2 May in decision 1989/161. The Council also added several items to that agenda.

By decision 1989/162 of 24 May, the Council approved the draft provisional agenda and the draft programme of work for its second regular session, as orally revised.(8) It decided, by decision 1989/105 of 5 May, to focus, in its general discussion of international economic and social policy, on the question of structural changes and imbalances in the world economy and their impact on international economic co-operation, particularly with developing countries. It further decided to select major policy themes with a view to adoption of action-oriented recommendations, pending approval of a multi-year work programme. Those items were: a comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system; environment and development; revitalization of the Council; national disaster reduction; and the interrelated issue of money, finance, trade, external debt and development. An open-ended task force, to be convened by the Council President, would consider what Council documentation might be redundant, had lost its usefulness or could be issued less frequently.

By decision 1989/163, the Council, on 5 July, adopted the agenda and approved the organization of work for its second regular session.(9)

For the agenda lists, see APPENDIX IV.

Calendar of meetings

By decision 1989/190 of 28 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1990 and 1991,(10) as orally revised.

Limitation of documentation

On 26 July, by decision 1989/174, the Council decided to discontinue for a further two years, from 1990, summary records for its three sessional committees and for 11 subsidiary bodies.

Report for 1989

The work of the Economic and Social Council during 1989 was summarized in its annual report to the General Assembly.(4) Parts of the report were considered by the plenary Assembly and others by the Second (Economic and Financial) and Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committees.

On 21 December, by decision 44/441, the Assembly took note of the parts of the Council's report considered by the Fifth Committee. By decision 44/457 of 22 December, it took note of those parts considered in the plenary. Also on 22 December, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, the Assembly took note of a number of documents relating to the Council's report (decision 44/455).

Co-ordination in the UN system

ACC activities

The Administrative Committee on Co-ordination held three sessions in 1989, (1) two regular sessions (Geneva, 19-21 April; New York, 19-20 October) and one special session (Geneva, 5 July).

During the year, ACC gave priority attention to four substantive issues: debt and development; preparation of the international development strategy for the fourth UN development decade; international drug abuse control; and questions related to the environment. ACC also considered appropriate system-wide responses to a number of other issues, ranging from the prevention and control of AIDS to nutrition, recognizing the need to further strengthen inter-agency co-operation to meet the challenges of the 1990s. It recognized that the Pervasive nature of the debt problem was crippling growth in a large number of developing countries, particularly in Africa and Latin America. The social and human aspects of adjustment programmes were reviewed and discussed, as was the impact of the current debt strategy, with acknowledgement that a strengthened debt strategy and debt reduction needed to be quickly implemented in a larger number of countries.

ACC proposed for consideration by the Economic and Social Council its suggestions regarding the content of the new international development strategy for the fourth UN development decade (see PART THREE, Chapter I). It also submitted a statement to the Council on the need to accelerate the international fight against drug abuse and commenced work on a system-wide plan of action for international drug abuse control, as called for by the General Assembly in resolution 44/141. ACC welcomed the increased emphasis on environmentally sound and sustainable development, believing that the UN Conference on Environment and Development, to be held in 1992, could lead to a strengthening of the capacities of developing countries, as well as the organizations of the UN system, to carry out concrete measures and identify the requisite resources.

ACC carried out a review of policy formulation and management of operational activities for development. It adopted a statement to the Economic and Social Council on the role and functioning of the UN development system in the 1990s (see PART THREE, Chapter II), which reaffirmed its unequivocal resolve to continue to adapt to major changes that had taken place on the development scene and recognized the importance of further strengthening the links between the operational activities of the system and the goals and strategies of the 1990s.

With regard to financial, administrative and personnel issues, ACC continued to be concerned with the financial difficulties faced by the UN system. Noting that the system was the scene of renewed and revitalized interest on the part of Member States, ACC concluded that the plans, programmes and budgets developed to meet the priorities of Member States could be translated into effective action through the system only with solid financial support. Member States were called on to pay promptly and in full their contributions to the organizations of the system. As to personnel policies and practices, ACC was of the view that more needed to be done to improve the conditions of service in order to maintain an international civil service of the highest quality.

At its special session, which was devoted to a comprehensive review of conditions of service of the Professional and higher categories of staff, ACC adopted a statement expressing grave concern that the conditions of employment and the purchasing Power of UN common system staff had been and continued to be significantly eroded throughout the world (see PART SIX, Chapter II).

ACC's principal subsidiary bodies met as follows:

Organizational Committee (New York, 15-17 February, 9-11 October; Geneva, 10-12 and 21 April, 3 and 5 July); Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (CCAQ) (Personnel and General Administrative Questions) (special session, New York, 15-18 January; seventieth session, Vienna, 2-17 March; second special session, Geneva, 29-30 June; seventy-first session, New York, 24 July-4 August); CCAQ (Operational Activities) (first regular session, Geneva, 3-6 April; second regular session, New York, 2-4 October); CCAQ (Financial and Budgetary Questions) (seventieth session, Copenhagen, Denmark, 6-10 March; seventy-first session, New York, 11-15 September).

Bodies on specific subjects met as follows:

Technical working group of the Task Force on Long-term Development Objectives (Geneva, 24-26 January); ad hoc inter-agency meeting on co-ordination in matters of international drug abuse control (Vienna, 11 February; Paris, 4-6 September); Sub-Committee on Nutrition (fifteenth session, New York, 22 February-3 March); Inter-Agency Group on New and Renewable Sources of Energy (Geneva, 9-10 March); Task Force on Science and Technology for Development (tenth session, Vienna, 13-16 March); Task Force on Long-term Development Objectives (seventeenth session, New York, 28-31 March; eighteenth session, New York, 18-21 September); thirteenth ad hoc inter-agency meeting on women (Vienna, 10-11 April); ad hoc inter-agency meeting on commodities (Geneva, 1-3 May); Task Force on Rural Development (17th meeting, Vienna, 31 May-2 June); Sub-Committee on Statistical Activities (twenty-third session, Geneva, 19-23 June); Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems (fifth session, Geneva, 18-21 September); ninth inter-agency consultation on the follow-up to the Substantial New Programme of Action for the 1980s for the Least Developed Countries (Geneva, 19-20 September); ad hoc inter-agency meeting on outer space activities (Geneva, 27-29 September).

The ACC annual overview report for 1988(2) was considered by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) at its May/June session.(3) The Committee felt that more emphasis should be given to system-wide co-ordination in specific sectors of activity, identifying problems and suggesting remedial measures. It recommended examination of possible substantial modifications of the report so that it would be more forward-looking and analytical and would provide inter-governmental bodies with alternative suggestions on policy measures for major programmes. The Committee recommended that ACC take action to make its role more effective, to review its working methods and to make its work more visible and transparent. It recommended that the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly consider the ACC report in more detail.

By decision 1989/180 of 27 July, the Council took note of the 1988 ACC report.

CPC activities

In 1989, CPC met in New York for an organizational meeting on 10 April and for its twenty-ninth session from 8 May to 5 June.(3)

In reviewing the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, the Committee considered the Secretary-General's report(4) on the implementation of a 1986 General Assembly resolution on the matter,(5) which had approved the 1986 recommendations of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations (Group of 18).(6) CPC noted that the Secretary-General's report did not cover the entire three-year period required by the Assembly and therefore could not be considered a final report. In general, it found that significant progress had been achieved due to the joint efforts of Member States, the Secretary-General and staff of the Organization, but the recommendations of the Group of 18 had not been implemented in a balanced manner. Concrete progress had been achieved in political affairs and administration and management, but results were uneven in carrying out recommendations addressed to intergovernmental bodies and Member States, particularly in the economic and social sectors. There was a need to strengthen the Secretary-General's role regarding co-ordination within the UN system, as well as the role of Member States through intergovernmental bodies. The Committee noted that while the financial situation had improved somewhat recently, it had not been conducive to a co-ordinated implementation of reforms. It stressed the importance for Member States to monitor closely the financial situation and to fulfil strictly their financial obligations under the Charter. To carry out successfully the process of reform and restructuring, it was essential that the current financial uncertainties be dispelled. The Committee recommended that the Secretary-General submit to the Assembly in 1990 an update on implementation of the Assembly's 1986 resolution, and suggested a structure for that report.

The Committee discussed the introduction to and overview of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991, referring, in pursuance of established practice, to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions all non-programmatic sections of the budget. After commenting and making recommendations on various aspects of the programme budget, the Committee recommended that the Assembly approve the budget's programme narratives and sections. The Committee considered a report of the Secretary-General on all aspects of priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget,(7) concluding that it was a first step in the direction of re-examining priority-setting. Since the Committee did not have sufficient time to consider fully that very complex issue, it referred the report to the Economic and Social Council and to the Assembly for further consideration (see PART SIX, Chapter I).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, adopted resolution 1989/109 without vote.

Report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-ninth session,

Recalling the provisions of Chapters IX and X of the Charter of the United Nations and, in particular, the role of the Economic and Social Council in co-ordination in the economic and social fields within the United Nations system,

Reaffirming the importance of the programming and co-ordinating functions carried out by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination as the main subsidiary organ of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly for planning, programming and co-ordination,

Recognizing that programme performance reports, programme evaluations, system-wide programme analyses and other relevant co-ordination instruments should be significant tools for promoting effectiveness and better integration, as appropriate, of the programming and co-ordination processes and for enabling the United Nations to fulfil its role and functions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-ninth session and endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained therein;

2. Requests the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination to intensify its efforts on such important matters as priority-setting, evaluation methodologies, the format and presentation of the medium-term plan, and relevant co-ordination instruments;

3. Affirms that the implementation of the present resolution shall take into account relevant decisions of the Council on revitalization of the Economic and Social Council.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/109

27 July 1989 Meeting 36 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (E/1989/133) without vote, 21 July (meeting 16); draft by Chairman (E/1989/C.3/L.12/Rev.1); agenda item 9.

On 26 July, the Council, also on the recommendation of its Third Committee, adopted resolution 1989/97 without vote.

Programme questions

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling rule 31 of the rules of procedure of the Economic and Social Council,

Noting the importance of the additional responsibilities in the budget process assigned to the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination by the General Assembly in its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 1988/77 of 29 July 1988, in which the Council decided that it would, inter alia, examine in depth the relevant sections of the proposed programme budget of the United Nations in the light of the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, with a view to submitting appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly on the overall and programme priorities of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on all aspects of priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget,

Emphasizing the importance of priority-setting in the planning and budget process,

Having considered the relevant sections of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-ninth session,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 42/211 of 21 December 1987, in which the Assembly decided that the date for submission of the outline of the programme budget should be 15 August of the off-budget year,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on programme questions, in particular on sections 4 to 24 of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991;

2. Stresses the need for the sectoral, functional and regional intergovernmental bodies to consider in a timely manner the draft programmes of work within their areas of responsibility, in order that their recommendations may be taken into account by the Secretary-General when he prepares his proposed programme budget;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination regarding priority-setting;

4. Notes that the thirtieth session of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, which will be of six weeks' duration, in accordance with paragraph 8 of the annex to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008(LX) of 14 May 1976, will be held in two parts and that the second part will be devoted to consideration of the outline of the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993;

5. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination that the General Assembly consider the possibility of adjusting the calendar of meetings so that the sessions of the Committee would start later in May.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/97

26 July 1989 Meeting 35 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (E/1989/134) without vote, 20 July (meeting 15); draft by Chairman (E/1989/C.3/L.13); agenda item 11 (a).

Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC

The twenty-fourth series of Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC was held in New York from 16 to 18 October 1989.(8) By decision 1989/103 of 10 February, the Economic and Social Council had set the dates and venue of the Meetings and requested CPC, in consultation with ACC, to agree on a topic. The topics agreed on were drug abuse control and the international development strategy for the fourth UN development decade (see PART THREE, Chapter I).

In general conclusions and recommendations, the Joint Meetings stated that ACC's annual report should be strengthened to realize its potential as an effective instrument to provide Member States with an overview of system-wide activities, plans and resource allocations. The Meetings provided a unique instrument for Member States and organizations of the system to exchange views and formulate recommendations on issues of relevance for improved co-ordination. The Meetings should take place annually in New York, it was stated.

Cross-organizational programme analyses

In response to a 1988 CPC request,(9) the Secretary-General submitted a March note(10) concerning a 1988 Economic and Social Council resolution,(11) in which it was proposed that cross-organizational programme analyses (COPAs) be replaced in their current form by brief analyses or major priority themes in the medium-term plan. The Secretary-General would submit to the Council draft proposals on a multi-year programme for analyses immediately after the General Assembly's adoption of the medium-term plan in 1990. He also reported on the scope and general approach of the COPA on industrial development,⁽¹²⁾ to be considered in 1990, and the COPA on the advancement of women.⁽¹³⁾

CPC stated⁽³⁾ that there was still a need for programme analyses across the system. It suggested that the Council consider the topic of human resources development as a future subject for a COPA. As to the industrial development topic, CPC reiterated that the analysis should reflect the central co-ordinating role of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO). Noting that UNIDO was currently experiencing financial difficulties, it recommended that financial questions be taken into account in the proposed analysis. It also recommended in-depth examination of what had been done within the system regarding industrialization in developing countries, particularly the least developed countries, and a review of progress in implementing the Industrial Development Decade for Africa (1980-1990) and of the role of women in industrialization.

With regard to the COPA related to the advancement of women, CPC considered that the Secretary-General's report would serve as an indicator of the system-wide effort to implement the 1985 Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,⁽¹⁴⁾ serving as a benchmark against which progress and results of the system-wide medium-term plan for women could be measured.

Other institutional arrangements

Work programmes of Assembly's Second and Third Committees

Second Committee

By decision 43/461 of 7 March, the General Assembly approved the biennial programme of work for its Second (Economic and Financial) Committee for 1989-1990.

By decision 44/456 of 22 December, the Assembly approved the Committee's biennial programme of work for 1990-1991.

Third Committee

The Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee had before it a note by the Secretariat⁽¹⁾ transmitting a draft decision concerning its programme of work. Originally submitted in 1986, consideration of the draft had been deferred three times—until 1987, then until 1988, when it was deferred until 1989.⁽²⁾

As originally submitted, the draft would have had the Assembly decide to consider the following items every two years, beginning at its 1986 session: the question of aging; implementation of the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons and the United Nations Decade of Disabled Persons; elimination of all forms of religious tolerance; human rights and scientific and technological developments; and alternative approaches and ways and means within the UN system for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms (with the exception of the question related to the right to development).

By decision 44/435 of 15 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the draft until 1990.

International decades

In accordance with a 1988 General Assembly decision,⁽³⁾ the Economic and Social Council considered further the guidelines for international decades, which it had recommended to the Assembly for adoption in 1988.⁽⁴⁾

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 May, the Council adopted resolution 1989/84 without vote.

Guidelines for international decades in economic and social fields

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1980/67 of 25 July 1980, in which it adopted guidelines for international years and anniversaries,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 42/171 of 11 December 1987, in which the Assembly requested the Council to submit recommendations on guidelines for the designation of future international decades,

Recalling further its resolution 1988/63 of 27 July 1988, in which it recommended guidelines for international decades for adoption by the General Assembly,

Taking note of General Assembly decision 43/434 of 20 December 1988, in which the Assembly decided to refer the issue to the Council in 1989 for further consideration as appropriate, with a view to enabling the Assembly at its forty-fourth session to consider and take appropriate action on guidelines for international decades, Recommends that the General Assembly consider further and take appropriate action on the revised guidelines for international decades contained in the annex to the present resolution, on the understanding that these guidelines are not intended to apply to United Nations development decades.

ANNEX

Guidelines for international decades in economic and social fields

A. Selection of subjects for and timing of international decades

1. The subject proposed for a decade should be consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations, as stated in the Charter. It should be of priority concern in the economic, social, cultural, humanitarian or human rights field and should require long-term action at the international or regional level and at the national level. Action on the subject should contribute to the strengthening of international peace and to the development of international co-operation towards the proclaimed objectives of the decade.

2. In areas where effective programmes already exist, international decades may be proclaimed provided that the decade can be expected to advance the implementation of the objectives of those programmes.

3. While taking exceptions into account, in general decades should not overlap. A new international decade may be initiated provided it is clear that the United Nations system has the substantive, administrative and financial capacity to play an effective role in the implementation of a programme for the decade.

4. Before a new decade is proposed, consideration should be given to the possibility of an observance for a shorter period of time.

B. Requirements for the proclamation of international decades

5. Proposals for international decades should include a draft programme of action with well-defined objectives and activities to be carried out at the international, regional and national levels. The activities should be directed towards clearly defined objectives. The draft programme of action should indicate the proposed organizational arrangements and modalities for financing, from both budgetary and extrabudgetary sources, as well as procedures for monitoring implementation. Provision should also be made for public information activities and, where appropriate, for advisory services upon request from Governments.

6. The draft programme of action should indicate a lead agency or agencies for the decade and the mechanisms to be used for co-ordinating the activities of the organizations of the United Nations system, as well as those of the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned.

7. At the national level, the programme of action should provide for the establishment of national committees or other mechanisms to mobilize public support and carry out activities connected with the decade.

C. Procedures for the proclamation of international decades

8. Proposals for international decades should be submitted to the Economic and Social Council so that it may review the purpose and timing, drawing on the views of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and other intergovernmental bodies concerned.

9. The General Assembly should proclaim an international decade after the proposal has been thoroughly reviewed by the intergovernmental bodies concerned and the views of all Member States and of the non-governmental organizations concerned have been taken into consideration. For this purpose, while taking exceptions into account, in general there should be an interval of two years between the introduction of the proposal in the Economic and Social Council and the proclamation of the decade by the General Assembly.

10. There should be sufficient time between the proclamation of the decade by the General Assembly and the start of the decade to allow for preparatory work at the international, regional and national levels.

11. When a subsequent decade on a particular subject is proposed, the following should be taken into consideration, on the understanding that exceptions may be possible:

(a) There should be a two-year preparatory period between the end of a decade and the start of the subsequent decade for drafting the programme of action for the subsequent decade;

(b) Steps should be taken to ensure that the expertise and experience acquired during a decade are retained in order to ensure the prompt implementation of activities once a subsequent decade is launched;

(c) The mid-term and end-term reviews of a decade should be used as a baseline for the programme of action for the subsequent decade;

(d) A subsequent decade should be proclaimed in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2 of the present guidelines, provided that the objectives of the first decade have not been fully attained, particularly in cases where projects or programmes of the first decade have reached an advanced stage of implementation.

D. Review and appraisal of the implementation of the programme of action for the decade

12. The implementation of the programme of action for the decade should normally be reviewed by an appropriate intergovernmental body at the mid-point and end of the decade. When a world conference on the subject of an international decade is convened within the period of the decade, such a conference should serve, inter alia, as an instrument for the review and appraisal of the implementation of the programme of action for the decade.

PART FOUR

Trusteeship and decolonization

Chapter I

Questions relating to decolonization

Decolonization remained a concern of the United Nations in 1989. The main body dealing with the issue, the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization), continued to consider decolonization questions in general, as well as the individual situations of Non-Self Governing Territories (NSGTs), including 13 small territories. The Committee also considered the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (see next chapter) and Namibia (see Chapter III of this Part).

The Assembly endorsed a Programme of Activities in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the 1960 Declaration (resolution 44/100). Having declared the 1990s the Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, the Assembly recommended that the Secretary-General again solicit suggestions from States for incorporation into a final report to be submitted at the forty-fifth (1990) session which would enable the Assembly to adopt an action plan for the elimination of colonialism (44/429).

In relation to specific Territories, the Assembly deferred consideration of the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) to its forty-fifth (1990) session (44/406), after receiving letters from Argentina and the United Kingdom stating that all hostilities between the two countries had ceased and that substantive talks had taken place. The Assembly welcomed talks on the question of Western Sahara between His Majesty King Hassan II of Morocco and a high-level delegation from the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (POLISARIO Front) (44/88).

1960 Declaration on decolonization

During 1989, the United Nations continued to focus its decolonization efforts on implementation of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.⁽¹⁾ The Special Committee on decolonization held two sessions in 1989, both in New York—the first on 2 February, at which it considered organizational questions, and the second from 1 to 16 August.⁽²⁾

Its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance held meetings between 14 March and 27 May, and the Sub-Committee on Small Territories met between 10 March and 20 June. On their recommendations, the Committee took action on the implementation of the Declaration by international organizations, on the dissemination of information on decolonization and on reports on the Territories supplied by the administering Powers and by the Committee's visiting missions.

Implementation of the Declaration

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/101 by recorded vote.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration, and 35/118 of 11 December 1980, the annex to which contains the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration, as well as 40/56 of 2 December 1985, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration,

Also recalling all its previous resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, in particular resolution 43/45 of 22 November 1988, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Deeply conscious of the urgent need to take all necessary measures to eliminate forthwith the last vestiges of colonialism, and, in that respect, recalling its resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988,

Reiterating its conviction that the total eradication of racial discrimination, apartheid and violations of the basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories will be achieved most expeditiously by the faithful and complete implementation of the Declaration,

Conscious that the success of national liberation struggles and the resultant international situation have provided the international community with a unique opportunity to make a decisive contribution towards the total elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations in Africa,

Welcoming the successful conclusion of the elections in Namibia under the supervision and control of the United Nations and the establishment of a Constituent Assembly as an embodiment of the sovereign will of the people of Namibia, and in this regard expressing the hope for the early emergence of Namibia as an independent State,

Noting with satisfaction the work accomplished by the Special Committee with a view to securing the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Noting also with satisfaction the co-operation and active participation of the administering Powers concerned in the relevant work of the Special Committee, as well as their continued readiness to receive United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under their administration,

Stressing the importance of the participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee and noting with concern the negative impact which the non-participation of certain administering Powers has had on the work of the Special Committee, depriving it of an important source of information on the Territories under their administration,

Keenly aware of the pressing need of the newly independent and emerging States for assistance from the United Nations and its system of organizations in the economic, social and other fields,

Mindful that the year 1990 will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions on decolonization and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the dependent peoples of the Territories concerned to exercise fully and without further delay their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

2. Affirms once again that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations—including racism, apartheid, those activities of foreign economic and other interests contrary to the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as the violations of the right to self-determination and basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories and continuous policies and practices to suppress legitimate national liberation movements—is incompatible with the Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and poses a serious threat to international peace and security;

3. Reaffirms its determination to take all necessary steps with a view to the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and to the faithful and strict observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the guiding principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its recognition of the legitimacy of the struggle of the peoples under colonial and alien domination to exercise their right to self-determination and independence by all the necessary means at their disposal;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 1989, including the programme of work envisaged for 1990;

6. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system within their respective spheres of competence, to give effect to the recommendations contained in the report of the Special Committee for the speedy implementation of the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

7. Condemns the activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration with respect to the colonial Territories;

8. Strongly condemns all collaboration, particularly in the nuclear and military fields, with the Government of South Africa and calls upon the States concerned to cease forthwith all such collaboration;

9. Calls upon the colonial Powers to withdraw immediately and unconditionally their military bases and installations from colonial Territories, to refrain from establishing new ones and not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States;

10. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide all moral and material assistance to the people of Namibia, both during the transitional period and after independence, and, in respect of the other Territories, requests the administering Powers, in consultation with the Governments of the Territories under their administration, to take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) in all Territories that have not yet attained independence and, in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

(b) To make concrete suggestions which could assist the Security Council in considering appropriate measures under the Charter with regard to developments in colonial Territories that are likely to threaten international peace and security;

(c) To continue to examine the compliance of Member States with resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(d) To continue to pay special attention to the small Territories, in particular through the dispatch of visiting missions to those Territories whenever the Special Committee deems it appropriate, and to recommend to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

(e) To take all necessary steps to enlist world-wide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations having a special interest in decolonization, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

12. Calls upon the administering Powers to continue to co-operate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants, and urges, in particular, those administering Powers which do not participate in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its 1990 session;

13. Requests the Secretary-General and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide or continue to provide to the newly independent and emerging States all possible assistance in the economic, social and other fields;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the various resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

The Assembly took related action in resolution 44/79, by which it affirmed that the universal realization of the right of all peoples to self-determination was a fundamental condition for the guarantee of human rights (see PART THREE, Chapter X).

Implementation of Declaration by UN organizations

In response to a 1988 request of the General Assembly,(3) the Secretary-General in 1989 invited 25 specialized agencies and other international organizations to provide information on their activities aimed at implementing the 1960 Declaration, and submitted a report(4) summarizing the responses received from 18 of the organizations.

In response to a 1988 request of the Economic and Social Council,(5) the Council's President and the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization reported(6) on consultations they had held on the implementation of the 1960 Declaration by specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations. They noted that some bodies had extended or formulated programmes of assistance to NSGTs, in addition to acting as executing agencies for projects funded by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). While they noted with satisfaction the close co-operation with Governments of front-line States and newly independent countries, they felt that these organizations must intensify their assistance to those countries.

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the issue and adopted a resolution(7) which formed the basis of a draft forwarded to the Assembly for consideration.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 1989/95 adopted by recorded vote on 26 July, the Economic and Social Council recommended that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the UN system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration and other related UN resolutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/85 by recorded vote.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Having considered the reports submitted on the item by the Secretary-General and the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity,

Welcoming the emplacement on 1 April 1989 of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group in Namibia

and encouraged by the beginning of the independence process under the terms of Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978,

Deeply conscious of the continuing critical need of the people of Namibia, particularly during the period of transition to independence and immediately after the attainment of independence, for concrete assistance from the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

Noting the assistance extended thus far to colonial Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, and considering that such assistance should be expanded further, commensurate with the pressing needs of the peoples concerned for external assistance,

Stressing the importance of securing additional resources for funding expanding programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of the major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Noting with deep concern that South Africa's practice of apartheid and acts of destabilization against the front-line and neighbouring States continue to present a serious threat to international peace and security,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the necessary measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full and speedy implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, particularly those relating to the extension of assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories,

Expressing its appreciation to the General Secretariat of the Organization of African Unity for the continued co-operation and assistance it has extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in connection with the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and convinced that closer contacts and consultations between the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of assistance programmes to the peoples concerned,

Expressing its appreciation to the Governments of the front-line States for the consistent support extended to the people of Namibia in their quest for independence and aware of the particular needs of those Governments for international assistance,

Considering that the retention of any links with the racist régime of South Africa is tantamount to support for, or endorsement of, the repressive policy and practice of apartheid pursued by that régime against the people of South Africa and its policy of destabilization against the neighbouring African States,

Bearing in mind the importance of the activities of non-governmental organizations aimed at putting an end to the assistance which is still being rendered to South Africa by some specialized agencies,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item;

2. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute, within their spheres of competence, to the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reaffirms also that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entails, as a corollary, the extension by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of all the necessary moral and material assistance to those peoples and their national liberation movements;

4. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to co-operate in varying degrees with the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and urges all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to accelerate the full and speedy implementation of the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

5. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render or continue to render, as a matter of urgency, all possible moral and material assistance to the colonial peoples, bearing in mind that such assistance should not only meet their immediate needs but also create conditions for development after they have exercised their right to self-determination and independence;

6. Also requests all specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render concrete assistance to the people of Namibia, in particular during the period of transition to independence and immediately after the attainment of independence;

7. Once again requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to provide all moral and material assistance to the newly independent and emerging States so as to enable them to achieve genuine economic independence;

8. Reiterates its recommendation, that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system should initiate or broaden contacts and co-operation with the colonial peoples and the administering Powers concerned, directly or, where appropriate, through regional organizations, in order to intensify programmes of assistance and to facilitate and accelerate the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

9. Urges the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in co-operation with the regional and other organizations where appropriate, to submit to their governing and legislative organs concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant United Nations decisions, particularly specific programmes of assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements;

10. Once again urges the executive heads of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to draw the attention of their governing bodies to the present resolution and urges them to introduce flexible procedures to prepare specific programmes for the peoples of the colonial Territories;

11. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not already done so to include in the agenda of the regular meetings of their governing bodies a separate item on the progress they have made in the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

12. Also urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to extend substantial material assistance to the Governments of the front-line States in order to enable them to resist the acts of the destabilization being perpetrated by the racist régime of South Africa;

13. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to take, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, all necessary measures to withhold any financial, economic, technical or other assistance from the Government of South Africa and to refrain from taking any action that might imply support for, or endorsement of, the repressive policy and practice of apartheid pursued by the racist regime against the people of South Africa and its policy of destabilization against the neighbouring African States;

14. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to co-operate with the Action for Resisting Invasion, Colonialism and Apartheid Fund, established by the non-aligned countries, with the common objective of providing emergency assistance to the front-line States and national liberation movements in southern Africa in their struggle against the apartheid régime;

15. Recommends that all Governments should intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to ensure the full and effective implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations and, in that connection, should accord priority to the question of providing assistance on an emergency basis to the peoples of the colonial Territories;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

17. Requests the Economic and Social Council to continue, as appropriate, to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, appropriate measures for co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

18. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General on their implementation of the present resolution;

19. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

General Assembly resolution 44/85

Thirtieth anniversary of Declaration

In response to a 1988 request of the General Assembly,(8) the Special Committee on decolonization, in February 1989, addressed the programme of activities for the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration and referred it to its working group for consideration and recommendations. The Committee approved(2) without objection the recommendations made by the working group, which contained the Programme of Activities in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. It also decided that the motto for the anniversary should be "Complete decolonization—objective 2000".

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/100 by recorded vote.

Programme of Activities in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having considered the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the

Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Bearing in mind that the year 1990 will mark the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Emphasizing the importance of the occasion to evaluate the progress achieved during the period in the process of decolonization, in particular in the implementation of the Declaration during the past thirty years, as well as the role played by the United Nations and its system of organizations in that regard, and to formulate specific measures for the elimination of all remnants of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations in various areas of the world,

1. Approves the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and endorses the Programme of Activities in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples set out in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Commends the Programme, for appropriate action, to all States, the United Nations bodies concerned, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and the non-governmental organizations active in the field of decolonization;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to assist in the implementation of the present resolution and, in particular, to make adequate resources available for undertaking the measures envisaged in the Programme;

4. Request the Special Committee to follow closely the implementation of the Programme and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

ANNEX

1. The commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples would be an appropriate occasion to evaluate the progress achieved during the past thirty years in the implementation of the Declaration, as well as the role played by the United Nations and its system of organizations in that regard. It would also, in the light of General Assembly resolution 43/47, of 22 November 1988, on the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, provide the opportunity to formulate specific measures for the elimination of all remnants of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations in various areas of the world. To this end, the following special programme of activities is envisaged.

A. Activities at the international level

Commemorative meeting of the General Assembly

2. The General Assembly shall hold a special commemorative meeting in observance of the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration, it being understood that the specific modalities and procedures for the commemoration (recognition of contributions made by individuals) would be the subject of subsequent consultations between the President of the General Assembly and the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

(a) The meeting shall be held at United Nations Headquarters in early October 1990 when a number of heads of State or Government are present.

(b) Statements might be made by the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, the Chairman of the Special Committee and the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid, and by the representatives of the regional groups.

Commemorative declaration to be adopted by the General Assembly

3. The Special Committee shall prepare the draft text of a commemorative declaration to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session. The declaration would not only highlight the work accomplished during the past thirty years but would also take into account the plan of action for the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Seminars to be held by the special Committee

Regional seminars

4. The Special Committee shall hold in 1990 two regional seminars on the subject of decolonization.

5. Those seminars would be an appropriate occasion for the participants to reflect upon the specific concerns and problems of the small dependent islands. In that connection, the following themes might be considered:

(a) Self-determination and economic and social development: the case of small islands;

(b) Heightening of awareness of options concerning future political status;

(c) Colonialism and racial discrimination;

(d) Self-determination: the constraints faced by small Territories-prospects and challenges for the future;

(e) Self-determination and regional integration of small islands;

(f) Advantages and disadvantages of foreign economic interests and/or activities in the small Territories: the views of the populations concerned;

(g) Consequences of the military use of small islands;

(h) Environmental problems affecting small islands;

(i) Protection of land for island populations and dangers of foreign exploitation;

(j) Protection of natural resources, particularly marine resources, for the benefit of the populations of small islands and Territories.

6. The working papers prepared by the Secretariat on specific Territories for the 1990 session of the Special Committee could serve as a basis for discussions. Participants will also be asked to submit papers on the above themes.

7. The seminars will be held in the Caribbean and the Asia/Pacific regions at the appropriate time prior to the session of the Special Committee to be held in July/August 1990.

8. Seminars may be attended by the following:

(a) Up to five members of the Special Committee, one from each region;

(b) The representative of the Secretary-General;

(c) The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid;

- (d) Representatives of the host Government;
- (e) Representatives of the administering Powers;
- (f) Representatives of specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system;
- (g) Representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in the regions concerned—at least one per Territory—should be invited to participate in those seminars (the modalities for their participation to be determined in consultation with the administering Powers concerned);

(h) Up to 30 representatives of non-governmental organizations based in the region; three eminent personalities in the field of decolonization.

Seminar at United Nations Headquarters

9. The Special Committee shall organize, in close consultation with the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, a seminar on dissemination of information on decolonization to be held at United Nations Headquarters. Participants would include journalists accredited to the United Nations and representatives of non-governmental organizations, universities and other educational and research institutions, etc.

Activities by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, other international organizations and the non-governmental organizations concerned

10. The organizations concerned are requested to undertake various activities in commemoration of the anniversary during 1990. These activities may include the preparation of special publications and studies and the holding of exhibits, seminars and symposia. An account of activities related to decolonization would be highlighted with a view to enhancing the assistance of those organizations to the ongoing decolonization process.

11. The organizations concerned are requested to draw up concrete programmes of assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories.

Dissemination of information on decolonization

12. The Secretary-General is requested to take concrete measures to give widespread and intensified publicity to the situation in the Territories concerned and to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization. In particular, the Department of Public Information and the Department for Special Political Questions, Regional Co-operation, Decolonization and Trusteeship, in consultation with the Special Committee, should:

- (a) Prepare special publications devoted to the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration, including special issues of the Decolonization bulletin and Objective: Justice;
- (b) Hold public screenings of films concerning the process of decolonization;
- (c) Prepare and distribute audio-visual materials on decolonization to national radio and television stations;
- (d) Hold exhibitions of photographs and publications related to decolonization, both at United Nations Headquarters and at various United Nations information centres;
- (e) Organize special briefings of non-governmental organizations and other interested groups on the subject of decolonization.

Other activities

13. The motto for the anniversary shall be: "Complete decolonization—objective 2000".

14. The Secretary-General is requested to arrange, through the United Nations Postal Administration, for a special postal cancellation to mark the thirtieth anniversary of the Declaration.

B. Activities at the regional level

15. Intergovernmental regional organizations are requested to intensify their activities to help eliminate the last manifestations of colonialism and, to that end, to increase their collaboration with one another. They are also encouraged to hold commemorative meetings and seminars, prepare special studies on various aspects of colonial questions and adopt measures to increase moral and material assistance to the peoples concerned.

C. Activities at the national level

16. Heads of State and Government, high-ranking officials and representatives of political movements, religious organizations, trade unions and other national organizations are called upon to issue special messages on the occasion of the anniversary.

17. Governments may be invited to establish, in co-operation with national United Nations associations, national committees for the commemoration of the anniversary to plan and co-ordinate various activities to be undertaken in 1990, such as publicizing the work of the United Nations on decolonization through publications, educational programmes in schools and universities, special studies, seminars and radio-television programmes, including the widest possible dissemination in their national languages of the Declaration and the various resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on decolonization, and through the issuance of a commemorative postage stamp and other activities.

18. In undertaking the above activities, particular attention shall be devoted to the various manifestations of colonialism, including racial discrimination and apartheid

Military activities in Territories

Pursuant to a 1988 request of the General Assembly,(9) the Special Committee on decolonization continued to consider the issue of military activities and bases in colonial countries. On 15 August, it adopted a decision(10) which became the basis of a draft recommendation to the Assembly. On 18 August,(11) the Committee's Chairman transmitted the decision to the Security Council, drawing attention to a paragraph in which the Committee urged the Council to make the arms embargo against South Africa more effective and comprehensive.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/425 by recorded vote.

Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text:

"1. The General Assembly, having considered the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to an item on the agenda of the Special Committee entitled 'Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples', and recalling its decision 43/410 of 22 November 1988 on the question, deplores the fact that the colonial Powers concerned have taken no steps to implement the request that the Assembly has repeatedly addressed to them, most recently in paragraph 10 of its resolution 43/45 of 22 November 1988, to withdraw immediately and unconditionally their military bases and installations from colonial Territories and to refrain from establishing new ones.

"2. In recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, the General Assembly reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and that it is the responsibility of the administering Powers to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the populations of the Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration. Furthermore, aware of the presence of military bases and installations of the administering Powers concerned and other countries in those Territories, the Assembly urges the administering Powers concerned to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration.

"3. The General Assembly reiterates its condemnation of all military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration that are detrimental to the rights and interests of the colonial peoples concerned, especially their right to self-determination and independence. The Assembly once again calls upon the colonial Powers concerned to terminate immediately and unconditionally such activities and to eliminate such military bases in compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Assembly, in particular with paragraph 9 of the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 35/118 of 11 December 1980.

"4. The General Assembly reiterates that the colonial Territories and areas adjacent thereto should not be used for nuclear testing, dumping of nuclear wastes or deployment of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction.

"5. The General Assembly notes with serious concern that, in southern Africa in general, a critical situation continues to prevail as a result of South Africa's inhuman repression of the people of South Africa. The Assembly declares that the policy of apartheid and destabilization pursued by Pretoria not only undermines the peace and stability of the southern African region but also constitutes a threat to international peace and security.

"6. The General Assembly condemns the continued military, nuclear and intelligence collaboration between South Africa and certain countries, which constitutes a violation of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa by the Security Council in its resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977 and poses a threat to international peace and security. The Assembly urges the Council to consider, as a matter of urgency, the report of the Committee established under its resolution 421(1977) of 9 December 1977 and adopt further measures to widen the scope of resolution 418(1977) in order to make it more effective and comprehensive. The Assembly also calls for the scrupulous observance of Security Council resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984 enjoining all States to refrain from importing armaments from South Africa. The Assembly is particularly mindful in that regard of a series of resolutions adopted by the Security Council, the General Assembly, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, the Special Committee against Apartheid and the United Nations Council for Namibia, as well as the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization of African Unity, the Commonwealth and a number of intergovernmental and regional organizations.

"7. The General Assembly reaffirms the legitimacy of the struggle of the people of Namibia to achieve their freedom and independence and appeals to all States to render sustained assistance in all fields in support of the faithful implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978.

"8. The General Assembly considers that the acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability by the racist régime of South Africa, with its infamous record of violence and aggression, constitutes a further effort on its part to terrorize and intimidate independent States in the region into submission while also posing a threat to all mankind. The Assembly condemns the continuing support to the racist régime of South Africa in the military and nuclear fields. In this context, the Assembly expresses its concern at the grave consequences for international peace and security of the collaboration between the racist régime of South Africa and certain Western Powers, Israel and other countries in the military and nuclear fields. It calls upon the States concerned to end all such collaboration and, in particular, to halt the supply to South Africa of equipment, technology, nuclear materials and related training, which increases its nuclear capability.

"9. The General Assembly strongly condemns the continuing collaboration of certain countries with the racist régime in the political, economic, military and nuclear fields and expresses its conviction that such collaboration is in contravention of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Security Council resolution 418(1977) and undermines international solidarity against the apartheid régime. The Assembly thus calls for the termination forthwith of all such collaboration.

"10. The General Assembly urges all Governments, the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to provide increased material assistance to the thousands of refugees who have been forced by the apartheid régime's oppressive policies in South Africa to flee into the neighbouring States.

"11. The General Assembly deprecates the continued alienation of land in colonial Territories for military installations. The large-scale utilization of local economic and manpower resources for this purpose diverts resources that could be more beneficially utilized in promoting the economic development of the Territories concerned and is thus contrary to the interests of their populations.

"12. The General Assembly requests the Secretary-General to continue, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, an intensified campaign of publicity with a view to informing world public opinion of the facts concerning the military activities and arrangements in colonial Territories which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV).

"13. The General Assembly requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session."

Information dissemination

The Special Committee on decolonization considered(2) the question of disseminating information on decolonization. In its deliberations on the subject, it examined reports of the Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance on its consultations with the United Nations Secretariat,(12) as well as with non-governmental organizations (NGOs),(13) and with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and various national liberation movements.(14) The Committee endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of the Sub-Committee with the understanding that consultations would be held in connection with the implementation of specific recommendations as necessary, and that the reservations expressed by members would be reflected in the record of the meeting. The Committee also paid due regard to information supplied by representatives of the African National Congress of South Africa, the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania, and NGOs.

Among the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee were requests to the relevant UN departments to intensify publicity efforts regarding decolonization; to disseminate information on the remaining colonial Territories more widely; to provide NGOs with more information; and to increase press coverage of the situation in southern Africa to counter the destructive and hostile propaganda campaign being waged against the national liberation movements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/102 by recorded vote.

Dissemination of information on decolonization
The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/46 of 22 November 1988,

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the aims and purposes of the Declaration and mindful of the continuing pressing need to take all possible steps to acquaint world public opinion with all aspects of the problems of decolonization with a view to assisting effectively the peoples of the colonial Territories in achieving self-determination, freedom and independence,

Noting with deep concern the measures of censorship imposed by the racist régime of South Africa upon the local and international media with respect to the policies and practices of apartheid,

Aware of the increasingly important role being played in the widespread dissemination of relevant information by a number of non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization, and noting with satisfaction the intensified efforts of the Special Committee in enlisting the support of those organizations in that regard,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization;

2. Considers it incumbent upon the United Nations to continue to play an active role in the process of self-determination and independence and to intensify its efforts for the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with a view to the further mobilization of international public opinion in support of complete decolonization;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, having regard to the suggestions of the Special Committee, to continue to take concrete measures through all the media at his disposal, including publications, radio and television, to give widespread and continuous publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization, and, inter alia,

(a) To continue, in consultation with the Special Committee, to collect, prepare and disseminate basic material, studies and articles relating to the problems of decolonization and, in particular, to continue to publish the periodical Objective Justice and other publications, special articles and studies, including the Decolonization series, and to select from them appropriate material for wider dissemination by means of reprints in various languages;

(b) To seek the full co-operation of the administering Powers concerned in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To Intensify the activities of all United Nations information centres;

(d) To maintain a close working relationship with the Organization of African Unity by holding periodic consultations and by systematically exchanging relevant information with that organization;

(e) To enlist, with the close co-operation of United Nations information centres, the support of non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization in the dissemination of the relevant information;

(f) To continue to provide full press release coverage for all meetings of the Special Committee and its subsidiary bodies;

(g) To ensure the availability of the necessary facilities and services to that end;

(h) To report to the Special Committee on the measures taken in implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, in particular the administering Powers, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization, to undertake or intensify, in co-operation with the Secretary-General and within their respective spheres of competence, the large-scale dissemination of the information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Week of solidarity with the peoples of Namibia and other colonial Territories

In 1989, the UN Secretariat undertook a series of public information activities assisted by UN information centres throughout the world, in observance of the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Namibia and All Other Colonial Territories, as well as Those in South Africa, Fighting for Freedom, Independence and Human Rights (22-26 May). In commemoration of the Week, the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization issued a statement on 22 May. He reviewed developments regarding decolonization, particularly in southern Africa, and appealed to Member States and the UN system, as well as NGOs, to mobilize material and moral support for colonial peoples.

Role of NGOs

The Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance held consultations in 1989 with a number of NGOs with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. In its conclusions and recommendations,(13) the Sub-Committee stated that NGOs played an important role in the decolonization process, particularly by disseminating information and by assisting colonial peoples and liberation movements. It encouraged NGOs to intensify their efforts and suggested that they be assisted in disseminating information.

In resolution 44/102 (see above), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to publicize the work of the United Nations on decolonization and to enlist the support of NGOs.

International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

In accordance with a 1988 General Assembly resolution(15) declaring the period 1990-2000 as the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, the Secretary-General invited all States and organizations of the UN system to submit suggestions for the preparation of an action plan aimed at ushering a world free of colonialism in the twenty-first century. An interim report,(16) submitted in November 1989, reproduced the replies received from 16 Member States, one from a non-Member State and three from organizations within the UN system. He noted that at the Ninth Conference of Heads of State or Governments of Non-Aligned Countries (Belgrade, Yugoslavia, 4-7 September), members created a working group to contribute to the UN plan of action for the Decade. In addition, members of the Organization of American States had recently adopted a resolution committing their organization to full participation in UN activities for the Decade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/429 by recorded vote.

International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1989, the General Assembly took note of the interim report of the Secretary-General on the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism and recommended that the Secretary-General should request those States and organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet done so to reply not later than 1 April 1990 to his communication of 31 January 1989, and that he should invite them once again to submit suggestions so that they may be taken into account in the final report which would be submitted to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session and which would enable the Assembly to consider and adopt an action plan aimed at ushering in, in the twenty-first century, a world free from colonialism.

Puerto Rico

In August 1989, the Special Committee on decolonization considered, as a separate item, its 1988 decision(17) on Puerto Rico. The Committee heard statements by representatives of 57 organizations and on 17 August, adopted a resolution(18) by 9 votes to 2, with 11 abstentions, reaffirming the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence, and expressing the hope that the people of Puerto Rico might exercise that right without hinderance. The text of the resolution was transmitted to the United States.

Scholarships

In accordance with a 1988 General Assembly request,(1) the Secretary-General reported(2) on offers made by Member States to provide study and training facilities for inhabitants of non-self-governing territories (NSGTs). The report listed the 42 Member States which had over the years offered scholarships: Australia, Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malta, Mexico, New Zealand, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, and Yugoslavia. Information on those offers was included in the twenty-fifth edition of the handbook Study Abroad, published by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. The scholarships were for study and training of university standard as well as for post-primary, technical, and vocational training. Applications for scholarships received by the United Nations Secretariat from inhabitants of NSGTs were transmitted to the offering States for consideration and to the administering Powers for information. Applications from Namibian students were referred to the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia and to the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa, as well as to offering Governments.

Australia reported that it had 5 subsidized students from New Caledonia and 10 from the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands; Canada had offered 12 awards to residents of Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Montserrat, St. Helena, and the Turks and Caicos Islands; and Cuba informed the Secretary-General that 1,714 Namibian and 1,559 Saharawi students were studying in Cuba. Cyprus offered one two-year scholarship, Czechoslovakia offered 20 scholarships, and Egypt granted 139 scholarships. The Federal Republic of Germany offered 78 scholarships for professional training in that country for Namibians and a further 163 in Africa. Scholarships to NSGT students were also offered by New Zealand, Poland, Sudan and Turkey. The Ukrainian SSR informed the Secretary-General that, during the academic year 1988/1989, 20 NSGT students had received training; 220 had received training in the USSR; and in the United Kingdom, 176 students from British Dependent Territories had benefited from assistance in 1988 plus 67 from Namibia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 44/87 without vote.

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/32 of 22 November 1988,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;
3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;
4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Request the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Information on conditions in Territories

States responsible for the administration of NSGTs continued to be required, under Article 73 e of the United Nations Charter, to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General information on the Territories' economic, social and educational conditions. In 1988, the General Assembly had requested⁽³⁾ the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories. In a September 1989 report,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General stated that he had received information on NSGTs from administering countries as follows:

New Zealand: Tokelau

United Kingdom: Anguilla, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Pitcairn, Turks and Caicos Islands

United States: American Samoa, Guam

On 24 April 1989,⁽⁵⁾ Portugal informed the Secretary-General that it had nothing to add to the information it had provided in 1979⁽⁶⁾ when it had stated that conditions in East Timor had prevented it from assuming its responsibilities for the Territory's administration.

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of information from NSGTs and, on 9 August, adopted a resolution⁽⁷⁾ that became the basis of a draft recommendation to the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 44/83 by recorded vote.

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and the action taken by the Special Committee in respect of that information,

Having also examined the report of the Secretary-General on this item,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 43/28 of 22 November 1988, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

3. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit or continue to transmit to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in connection with the preparation of the working papers relating to the Territories concerned, to continue to ensure that adequate information is drawn from all available published sources;

5. Requests the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Visiting Missions

In 1989, the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization, as requested by the Committee, continued to consult with the administering Powers of NSGTs on the question of permitting access of visiting missions to the Territories. In an August report(8), he stated that New Zealand and the United States had reiterated their readiness to continue to provide the Committee with all relevant information on the Territories under their administration, to participate in the work of the Committee and to receive visiting missions. Noting the decision of the United Kingdom not to take part in the related work of the Committee, and that the United Kingdom had permitted visiting missions to its Territories in the past, the Chairman expressed the hope that the Committee would again receive invitations from that country in the near future.

On 9 August, the Committee adopted a resolution(9) in which it stressed the need to periodically dispatch visiting missions to colonial Territories and called on administering Powers to co-operate with the United Nations in that regard. It also urged the United Kingdom to reconsider its decision not to participate in the work of the Committee and to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories under its administration.

In resolution 44/101 (see above), the General Assembly called on administering Powers to co-operate with the Committee and to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories for the purpose of securing first-hand information and ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the inhabitants. Those administering Powers that did not participate in the work of the Committee were urged to do so in 1990. The Assembly also addressed this topic in resolutions on individual Territories (see below).

Territories under review

In 1989, the Special Committee on decolonization continued to consider the peaceful settlement of the dispute over the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), the conflict in Western Sahara, the questions of New Caledonia and East Timor, and the situation in a number of other small colonial Territories. It also considered the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (see next chapter) and Namibia (see Chapter III of this Part).

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

Committee action. The Falkland Islands (Malvinas) question was considered by the Special Committee on decolonization at its August session,(1) during which it heard statements by Argentina, Cuba, two representatives of the Falkland Islands Legislative Council and two other petitioners. It also had before it a Secretariat working paper on political, economic and social developments in the Territory.(2) The United Kingdom, the administering Power, did not participate.

In a resolution(3) of 15 August, the Committee reiterated its position that the way to end the special and particular colonial situation of the Falklands was through a negotiated settlement. Regretting that the implementation of the General Assembly resolutions on this question had not yet started, it urged Argentina and the United Kingdom to resume negotiations, and restated its support for the renewed good offices mission of the Secretary-General.

Report of the Secretary-General. In October, the Secretary-General submitted a report(4) on developments regarding the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas). In accordance with the agreement reached between the representatives of the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom in August,(5) a meeting took place in Madrid from 17 to 19 October,(6) at which the two Governments agreed to a formula protecting the position of each side with regard to sovereignty or territorial and maritime jurisdiction over the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and surrounding maritime areas. They also noted that all hostilities between them had ceased and agreed to re-establish consular relations.

In welcoming the improvement in bilateral relations between the two Governments, the Secretary-General expressed his continued willingness to assist in any manner in accordance with the mandate entrusted to him by the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 44/406 of 1 November, the General Assembly decided to defer consideration of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) question and to include it in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth (1990) session.

Western Sahara

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, on 6 March,(7) reaffirmed that the issue of Western Sahara was one of decolonization and again requested the parties to the conflict, Morocco and the POLISARIO Front, to negotiate a cease-fire and create the necessary conditions for a referendum for self-determination. The Commission welcomed the efforts of the Secretary-General and the Chairman of OAU's Assembly of Heads of State and Government to promote a solution, and decided to consider the situation in 1990 as a high-priority matter.

Committee consideration. The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Western Sahara at its August session,(1) during which it heard a statement by a representative of the POLISARIO Front. The Committee also had before it a working paper by the Secretariat on political and military developments in the Territory.(8) Following a meeting in Marrakech on 4 January between a high-level delegation of the POLISARIO Front and King Hassan of Morocco, the Secretary-General of the POLISARIO Front, on 27 January, announced that his forces would observe a cease-fire throughout February to encourage dialogue and the search for peace; a Moroccan Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Morocco saw the cease-fire as proof of POLISARIO's goodwill. At the end of the month, however, a second meeting had not taken place and POLISARIO resumed its operations against Morocco on 1 March.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, pursuant to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(9) submitted a report(10) in October 1989 on the results of meetings he, his representatives and the OAU Chairman had held between October 1988 and September 1989 with Morocco and the POLISARIO Front. Significant developments included the appointment of the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Western Sahara, the meeting in January 1989 between King Hassan II and the POLISARIO Front, and the Secretary-General's June visit to the area and meetings with both sides. Progress was also made in processing the data contained in the 1974 Spanish census of Western Sahara, which was to serve as the basis of a voters' list for the proposed referendum.

The Secretary-General held discussions with African leaders during the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU at its twenty-seventh ordinary session (Addis Ababa, 23-26 July). The Ninth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries (Belgrade, 4-7 September) urged the Secretary-General and the OAU Chairman to intensify their efforts to resolve the remaining problems. Following the acceptance by the two parties in August 1988 of the Settlement Proposals for resolving the question of Western Sahara,(11) the effort of the OAU Chairman and the Secretary-General had been directed towards clarifying specific matters raised by the parties on some aspects of the Proposals. On 30 June, the Secretary-General established the Technical Commission under his chairmanship, to facilitate and accelerate the implementation of the Settlement Proposals. He reported that concerns expressed by the parties included in the case of Morocco, the question of security and peace in the Territory during the referendum, and in the case of the POLISARIO Front, assurances for a free and fair referendum.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 44/88 without vote.

Question of Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Having considered in depth the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling the inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 43/33 of 22 November 1988 on the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) on Western Sahara, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its nineteenth ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 6 to 12 June 1983,

Taking note with appreciation of the final document on Western Sahara adopted by the Ninth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Belgrade from 4 to 7 September 1989,

Recalling Security Council resolution 621(1988) of 20 September 1988 concerning the question of Western Sahara,

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the question of Western Sahara,

Reiterating its support for the joint good offices process initiated in New York on 9 April 1986 by the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations with a view to promoting a just and definitive solution of the question of Western Sahara, in accordance with resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) and General Assembly resolution 40/50 of 2 December 1985,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the question of Western Sahara;

2. Reaffirms that the question of Western Sahara is a question of decolonization which remains to be completed on the basis of the exercise by the people of Western Sahara of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

3. Stresses the importance of the agreement in principle given on 30 August 1988 by the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to the joint proposals of the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations with a view to the holding of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, organized and supervised by the United Nations in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity;

4. Welcomes the efforts of the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to promote a just and definitive solution of the question of Western Sahara, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 40/50;

5. Also welcomes the progress achieved by the joint good offices process and urges the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to continue and intensify their efforts with a view to resolving the remaining problems, and thus to fulfil the necessary conditions for the holding of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, without any administrative or military constraints, organized and supervised by the United Nations in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity;

6. Takes note with appreciation of the establishment of a technical commission to assist the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations in their joint good offices with a view to resolving the question of Western Sahara;

7. Welcomes the talks in Marrakech between His Majesty King Hassan II of Morocco and a high-level delegation from the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro, and endorses the hope of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity that there will be further meetings of this nature to improve the prospects for the success of the peace process;

8. Expresses its conviction that the continuation of direct dialogue between the two parties to the conflict could contribute to the completion of the joint good offices process of the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations, to the restoration of peace in Western Sahara and to stability and security in the whole region;

9. Appeals once again to the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to display the co-operation and the political goodwill necessary for the success of the joint good offices process of the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations;

10. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara as a matter of priority and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

11. Invites the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity to keep the Secretary-General of the United Nations informed of the progress achieved in the implementation of the decisions of the Organization of African Unity relating to Western Sahara;

12. Invites the Secretary-General to follow the situation in Western Sahara closely with a view to the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

New Caledonia

The General Assembly had determined in 1986(12) that New Caledonia was an NSGT within the meaning of the United Nations Charter and affirmed the right of its people to self-determination and independence in accordance with the 1960 Declaration on decolonization;(13) however, France (the administering Power) did not consider New Caledonia an NSGT. It had organized a referendum on 13 September 1987 in which, it maintained, the people of the Territory had had the opportunity to express their views and had favoured remaining with France.(14)

In July 1989, a Secretariat working paper(15) reported that despite the assassinations of the head of the six-party coalition Front de libération nationale kanak socialiste (FLNKS) and his deputy in May, elections were held on 11 June for three new provincial assemblies. Voter turn-out was almost 70 per cent, in an electorate of 92,000. According to official results, FLNKS won 19 seats and the Ras-semblement pour la Calédonie dans la République (RPCR) won 27 seats, out of the total of 54 seats. Front uni de libération Kanak (FULK), a dissident party of the FLNKS coalition, had reportedly stated that it would intensify its campaign to speed up the independence process for New Caledonia; FULK refused to meet with French authorities in June, on the grounds that the Government was not prepared to discuss redrafting previous agreements on the status of New Caledonia.

Committee action. The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of New Caledonia at four meetings in August 1989.⁽¹⁾ It had before it the Secretariat working paper⁽¹⁵⁾ and heard statements by FULK and FLNKS, among others.

On 15 August, the Committee adopted a resolution⁽¹⁶⁾ in which it urged all the parties involved to maintain their dialogue and to refrain from acts of violence, and which formed the basis for a draft forwarded to the Assembly. The text of the resolution was transmitted to France for its attention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 44/89 without vote.

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Noting the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in co-operation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia;

2. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia, to maintain their dialogue and, in the spirit of harmony, to refrain from acts of violence;

3. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights of all New Caledonians;

4. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

11 December 1989 Meeting 80 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/44/738) without vote, 25 October (meeting 16); draft by Special Committee on decolonization (A/44/23); agenda item 18. Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 4th Committee 5, 7-16; plenary 80.

East Timor

The General Assembly, on 22 September, decided to defer the consideration of the question of East Timor until 1990. The Secretary-General, however, continued substantive, high-level talks with Portugal—considered to be the legal administering Power by the United Nations—and Indonesia, which had maintained that decolonization in East Timor was complete and that its people had chosen independence through integration with Indonesia.

Committee consideration. The Special Committee on decolonization considered the East Timor question at three meetings between 7 and 14 August,⁽¹⁾ and heard statements by Indonesia and Portugal, as well as by a representative of the Frente Revolucionária de Timor Leste Independente (FRETILIN) and NGOs. The Committee had before it a Secretariat working paper⁽¹⁷⁾ on political developments, human rights and economic and social conditions in East Timor. The paper mentioned reports of frequent small-scale clashes between FRETILIN and the Indonesian military, and the killing of 37 Indonesian troops by FRETILIN fighters in the Laline region in January. It also cited a report of the United States which stated that, over the past years, the Indonesian Government had sought to win over FRETILIN rebels through more peaceful means; authorities had encouraged East Timorese with contacts within FRETILIN to advertise the benefits that Indonesian development had brought to East Timor, particularly in social services. In addition, the Indonesian Government had continued its amnesty programme, under which FRETILIN rebels who surrendered were permitted to settle, under the guardianship of the local church and authorities.

Communications. Indonesia and Portugal, in letters to the Secretary-General, expressed their positions on the issue of East Timor. On 24 January⁽¹⁸⁾ and 28 March,⁽¹⁹⁾ Indonesia categorically rejected allegations that the people of East Timor were being denied the exercise of self-determination and human rights.

On 24 April,⁽²⁰⁾ Portugal informed the Secretary-General that it had nothing to add to the information it had provided in 1979⁽²¹⁾ as required by Article 73 e of the Charter, at which time it had stated that conditions in East Timor had prevented it from assuming its responsibilities for the Territory's administration.

In letters of 4 and 14 August to the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization,⁽²²⁾ Indonesia stated that the decolonization process of East Timor had been carried out in conformity with the provisions of the Charter and Assembly resolutions on decolonization, and that East Timor had been formally integrated into Indonesia in 1976. It reiterated its view that consideration of the question of East Timor by the Committee was therefore inappropriate and would constitute interference in a sovereign State's internal affairs, and expressed strong opposition to the participation of the petitioners in the deliberation of the Committee.

In a letter of 28 November,(23) Portugal strongly protested the announcement of the creation of a "zone of co-operation in an area between the Indonesian province of East Timor and Northern Australia (Timor Gap)" by Australia and Indonesia, stating that Indonesia lacked the legitimacy to undertake any commitments regarding East Timor. It said that the two countries planned to exploit petroleum resources in the maritime area between Australia and the NSGT of East Timor.

Report of the Secretary-General. In a September progress report,(24) the Secretary-General stated that during the preceding year he had consulted on several occasions with the Presidents and Foreign Ministers of Indonesia and Portugal, and had obtained a reaffirmation from both sides of their commitment to achieving a comprehensive and internationally acceptable solution to the question of East Timor. The Secretary-General was present when the substantive talks between Indonesia and Portugal were formally resumed at a meeting held on 9 May. Although he said the pace of progress had not been constant, he was encouraged by the increased frequency of discussions between the two sides in recent months. The Secretary-General expressed hope at the possibility of a proposed visit to the territory by a delegation from the Portuguese Parliament. He believed such a visit could help create a conducive atmosphere for achieving a solution.

American Samoa

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of American Samoa on 7 August and had before it a working paper by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory.(25) The text of the Committee's conclusions and recommendations was transmitted to the United States for its attention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/97 without vote.

Question of American Samoa
The General Assembly,
Having considered the question of American Samoa,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to American Samoa, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/43 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to promote progress towards the full implementation of the Declaration in respect of American Samoa,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United States of America, as the administering Power,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting that the current Chief Justice of the Territory is the first indigenous American Samoan appointed to that position,

Recalling the dispatch in 1981 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and reaffirming the value of sending, at an appropriate time, a further visiting mission to American Samoa,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to American Samoa;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of American Samoa to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to American Samoa;

4. Calls upon the Government of the United States of America, as the administering Power, to take all necessary steps, bearing in mind the rights, interests and wishes of the people of American Samoa as expressed freely in any act of self-determination, to expedite the process of decolonization of the Territory in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration and reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of American Samoa of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

5. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, to promote the economic and social development of American Samoa and calls upon the administering Power to intensify its efforts to strengthen and diversify the economy of the Territory;

6. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of American Samoa to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

7. Reiterates its appeal to the administering Power to consider favourably the expressed request of the people of the Territory to appoint the Chief Justice and other members of the Territory's judiciary themselves;

8. Also urges the administering Power to continue to foster close relations between the Territory and other island communities in the region and promote co-operation between the territorial Government and regional institutions, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system;

9. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to American Samoa at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, taking into account, in particular, the wishes of the people of the Territory, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Anguilla

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Anguilla on 7 August and had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory⁽²⁶⁾ and on foreign economic and other interests.⁽²⁷⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/94 without vote.

Question of Anguilla

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Anguilla,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Anguilla, including in particular General Assembly resolution 43/36 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting that the revision of the laws of Anguilla remains a priority of the Government of the Territory,

Taking note of the results of the general elections of February 1989 and the statement of the Chief Minister that the Government of Anguilla had no intention of moving towards independence during its current term of office,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Noting that the decisions of the House of Assembly on the report of the Constitutional Review Committee were released in August 1988 for public review, discussion and consent and that the report would be considered by the United Kingdom Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory, and noting the continued growth of the economy of the Territory in 1988 as a result of the expansion of tourism,

Expressing its concern at the continued illegal operation of foreign fishing vessels within the territorial waters of Anguilla and welcoming the measures taken by the territorial Government to protect and conserve marine resources and to control the activities of foreign fishermen operating illegally in the area,

Stressing the importance of an efficient and effective civil service and noting the measures being taken by the territorial Government aimed at alleviating the problem of unemployment and providing increased job opportunities,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Noting the contribution to the development of the Territory by specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Recalling that in 1987 Anguilla became a member of the Eastern Caribbean Central Bank and that it continues to participate and maintain an active interest in the related activities of other regional organizations,

Recalling, also the dispatch in 1984 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Anguilla;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Anguilla to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Anguilla;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in Anguilla as will enable its people to exercise freely and without interference, from a well-informed standpoint as to the available options, their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV) and all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirm that it is ultimately for the people of Anguilla themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

6. Calls upon the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy and to increase its assistance to programmes of diversification;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue the assistance necessary to increase employment of the local population in the civil service and other sectors of the economy;

8. Also urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of Anguilla to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

9. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to counter problems related to drug trafficking;

10. Reiterates its request to the administering Power to continue to enlist the assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other international and regional bodies, in the development and strengthening of the economy of Anguilla;

11. Also reiterates its request to the administering Power to continue to make every effort to facilitate and encourage the participation of the Territory in regional and international organizations;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Bermuda

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Bermuda on 7 August, at which time it had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory(28), on foreign economic and other interests,(29) and on military activities.(30)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/92 without vote.

Question of Bermuda

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Bermuda,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Bermuda, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/39 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Noting the active discussions in the Territory, both within and outside the territorial Government, on the future status of Bermuda,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Noting with appreciation the assistance extended to the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a visiting mission to Bermuda at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Bermuda;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Bermuda to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Bermuda;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of Bermuda to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of Bermuda of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of that right;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of Bermuda themselves to determine their own future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration;

6. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter;

7. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve Bermuda in any offensive acts or interference directed against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

8. Also urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of Bermuda to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

9. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to counter problems related to drug trafficking;

10. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to provide assistance for the development needs of Bermuda;

11. Reaffirms the value of sending a visiting mission to the Territory and requests the administering Power to facilitate the dispatch of such a mission at the earliest possible opportunity;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to Bermuda at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

British Virgin Islands

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the British Virgin Islands on 7 August and had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory.(31)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/95 without vote.

Question of the British Virgin Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the British Virgin Islands, Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the British Virgin Islands, including in particular General Assembly resolution 43/41 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Reaffirming that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory and noting that while economic growth was recorded in tourism, other economic sectors continued to play a minor role in the Territory's economy,

Expressing its concern over the continued illegal operations of foreign fishermen and stressing that this uncontrolled exploitation could deplete current fish stocks and adversely affect future yields,

Noting the critical need for the cadre training of nationals in all fields and noting with satisfaction the measures being taken by the territorial Government in that connection,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Welcoming the contribution to the development of the Territory by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, particularly the United Nations Development Programme, as well as by regional organizations,

Noting the continued participation of the Territory in regional and other international organizations,

Expressing its sympathy to the people of the British Virgin Islands for the extensive damage caused by hurricane Hugo in September 1989,

Recalling the dispatch in 1976 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the British Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. 4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of the British Virgin Islands to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV) and all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the British Virgin Islands themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

6. Calls upon the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take measures with a view to strengthening and diversifying the Territory's economy;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

8. Calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take further measures in the cadre training of nationals so as to facilitate their wider participation in the decision-making process in all sectors;

9. Also calls upon the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to counter problems related to drug trafficking;

10. Reiterates its appeal to the administering Power to continue to facilitate the participation of the British Virgin Islands in various international and regional organizations and in other organizations of the United Nations system;

11. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as the regional organizations concerned, to intensify measures to accelerate progress in the social and economic development of the Territory;

12. Urges Member States and specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to extend all possible assistance with a view to rehabilitating and reconstructing the Territory, devastated by hurricane Hugo;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Cayman Islands

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the Cayman Islands on 7 August and had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on political developments and economic conditions in the Territory⁽³²⁾ and on foreign economic and other interests.⁽³³⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/91 without vote.

Question of the Cayman Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Cayman Islands, Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Cayman Islands, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/37 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting the measures being taken by the territorial Government to promote agricultural production with a view to reducing the Territory's dependence on imported provisions,

Expressing its concern that property and land continue to be owned and developed largely by investors from abroad,

Noting that a large proportion of the labour force of the Territory consists of expatriates,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Noting with appreciation the continued contribution of the United Nations Development Programme, as well as regional institutions, to the development of the Territory,

Recalling the dispatch in 1977 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Cayman Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Cayman Islands;

2. Reaffirm the inalienable right of the people of the Cayman Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Gibraltar

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Gibraltar on 15 August and had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on recent developments and current conditions in the Territory. (34) The Committee decided to continue consideration of Gibraltar at its next session subject to any General Assembly directives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/426 without vote.

Question of Gibraltar

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, recalling its decision 43/411 of 22 November 1988 and recalling at the same time that the statement agreed to by the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at Brussels on 27 November 1984 stipulates, inter alia, the following:

" 'The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting co-operation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution' "

takes note of the fact that, as part of this process, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs have held annual meetings alternatively in each capital, and urges both Governments to continue their negotiations with the object of reaching a definitive solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations."

Guam

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Guam on 7 August, and had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on political developments and economic conditions in the Territory⁽³⁵⁾ and on military activities.⁽³⁶⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/98 without vote.

Question of Guam

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Guam,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Guam, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/42 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory, Having heard the statement of the representative of the United States of America, as the administering Power,

Recalling the approval, in referendums held in Guam in 1987, of a draft Commonwealth Act, which, upon its enactment by the United States Congress, would reaffirm the right of the people of Guam to draft their own Constitution and to govern themselves,

Noting that the draft Commonwealth Act provides that the Congress of the United States would recognize the inalienable right to self-determination of the Chamorro people, for which provisions would be made in the Guam Constitution,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Taking note of the statement of the representative of the administering Power that legislation had been introduced in the United States Congress to release 1,431 hectares of land no longer required by the Department of Defense and that the 100th Congress of the United States had considered the issue, and noting that a decision has yet to be taken on the matter,

Noting the potential for diversifying and developing the economy of Guam through commercial fishing and agriculture,

Taking note of the statement of the representative of the administering Power concerning the growth in tourism and the desire of the Government of Guam for balanced economic growth,

Taking note also of the statement of the representative of the administering Power that the cultural identity of the Chamorro people, the indigenous inhabitants of Guam, would be recognized,

Recalling the dispatch in 1979 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and reiterating that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Guam;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Guam to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reaffirms its conviction that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the implementation of the Declaration, which fully applies to Guam;

4. Reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of Guam of the possibilities open to them with regard to their right to self-determination and calls upon the United States of America, as the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to expedite the process of decolonization strictly in accordance with the expressed wishes of the people of the Territory;

5. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

6. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

7. Reaffirm the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, to promote the economic and social development of Guam and, in that connection, calls upon the administering Power to take further steps to strengthen and diversify the economy of the Territory, with a view to reducing its economic dependence on the administering Power;

8. Reiterates that one of the obstacles to economic growth in Guam is the holding of large tracts of land by the United States federal authorities, and calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to expedite the transfer of land to the people of the Territory and to take the necessary steps to safeguard their property rights;

9. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of Guam to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, as well as to support measures by the territorial Government aimed at removing constraints to growth in commercial fishing and agriculture;

10. Reaffirms the importance of continued efforts by the territorial Government, with the support of the administering Power, to promote and develop Guam's unique cultural identity;

11. Urges the administering Power to give full recognition to the status and rights of the Chamorro people;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Montserrat

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Montserrat on 7 August. It had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory⁽³⁷⁾ and on foreign economic and other interests.⁽³⁸⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/96 without vote.

Question of Montserrat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Montserrat,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Montserrat, including in particular General Assembly resolution 43/38 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Recalling the discussions held between an adviser to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of the United Kingdom and the Executive Council of Montserrat in May 1988 and the wish expressed by the Chief Minister of Montserrat to transfer some of the reserved powers of the Governor to the elected Government,

Taking note of the statement by the Chief Minister that a referendum should precede any move towards political independence and that his Government favoured both independence and participation in the political union among the countries of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting the measures being taken by the territorial Government to improve the efficiency of the civil service, the priority it places on cadre training and the strengthening of the educational system and its efforts to promote the integration of women in all phases of national development, and drawing attention to the need to associate the Territory in the related work of the United Nations bodies concerned in that regard,

Welcoming the contribution to the development of the Territory by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system operating in Montserrat, in particular the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Children's Fund,

Noting with concern the continued dissociation of the Territory from the activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization since the withdrawal by the administering Power of the associate membership of Montserrat from that organization in 1983, and aware of the active interest of the Government of Montserrat in the readmission of the Territory as an associate member of the agency,

Expressing its sympathy to the people of Montserrat for the extensive damage caused by hurricane Hugo in September 1989,

Recalling the dispatch in 1975 and 1982 of United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Montserrat;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Montserrat to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Montserrat;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of Montserrat to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV) and all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of Montserrat themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and reiterates its call upon the administering Power to launch programmes, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to foster an awareness among the people of Montserrat of the possibilities available to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

6. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of Montserrat and calls upon the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy of the Territory and to increase its assistance to programmes of diversification;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of Montserrat to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

8. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to overcome shortages in human resources by providing appropriate incentives to assist nationals in finding better opportunities at home and to attract qualified nationals from abroad;

9. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other international and regional organizations, to intensify their efforts to accelerate progress in the economic and social life of the Territory;

10. Urges Member States and specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to extend all possible assistance with a view to rehabilitating and reconstructing the Territory devastated by hurricane Hugo;

11. Calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take urgent steps to facilitate the readmission of Montserrat as an associate member of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Pitcairn

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Pitcairn on 7 August, at which time it had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on political developments and social and economic conditions in the Territory.(39)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/427 without vote.

Question of Pitcairn

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Pitcairn to self-determination in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, which fully applies to the Territory. The Assembly further reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory. The Assembly urges the administering Power to continue to respect the very individual life-style that the people of the Territory have chosen and to preserve, promote and protect it. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session."

St. Helena

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of St. Helena on 7 August, and had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on political and other developments in the Territory.(40)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/428 by recorded vote.

Question of St. Helena

At its 80th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of St. Helena to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960. The Assembly urged the administering Power, in consultation with the Legislative Council and other representatives of the people of St. Helena, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory and, in that connection, reaffirmed the importance of promoting an awareness among the people of St. Helena of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination. The Assembly expressed the view that the administering Power should continue to implement infrastructure and community development projects aimed at improving the general welfare of the community, including the unemployment situation, and to encourage local initiative and enterprise, particularly in the areas of fisheries development, forestry, handicrafts and agriculture. The Assembly, in view of the serious developments in South Africa, noted with concern the trade and transportation dependency of the Territory on South Africa. The Assembly reaffirmed that continued development assistance from the administering Power, together with any assistance that the international community might be able to provide, constituted an important means of developing the economic potential of the Territory and of enhancing the capacity of its people to realize fully the goals set forth in the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. The Assembly, in that connection, welcomed the assistance rendered by the United Nations Development Programme and invited other organizations of the United Nations system to assist in the development of the Territory. The Assembly noted with deep concern the continued presence of military facilities on the dependency of Ascension Island and, in that regard, recalled all the United Nations resolutions and decisions concerning military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories. The Assembly urged the administering Power to take all the necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference against neighbouring States by the racist regime of South Africa. The Assembly considered that the possibility of dispatching a United Nations visiting mission to St. Helena at an appropriate time should be kept under review, and requested the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of St. Helena at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Tokelau

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Tokelau on 7 August. It had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on political and economic developments in the Territory.(41)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/90 without vote.

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Tokelau, in particular General Assembly resolution 43/35 of 22 November 1988,

Having heard the statement of the representative of New Zealand, the administering Power,

Noting the continuing devolution of power to the local authority, the General Fono (Council), and mindful that the cultural heritage and traditions of the people of Tokelau should be taken fully into account in the evolution of Tokelau's political institutions,

Noting with satisfaction the continued progress in the preparation of a legal code to conform with the traditional laws and cultural values of Tokelau and noting the express wish that the General Fono share additional responsibility in the process of law-making,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting the inspection of the Tokelau Public Service and its staff at Apia undertaken by the New Zealand State Services Commission in early 1989, and expressing the hope that the completion of this inspection will contribute to the development of the Public Service of the Territory,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory and noting the measures being taken by the Government of New Zealand in that regard,

Recalling the decision of the General Fono to include Tokelau in a fisheries treaty between countries in the region and stressing the importance of safeguarding the right of the people of Tokelau to the full enjoyment of their marine resources,

Noting the strong opposition expressed by the people of Tokelau to nuclear testing in the Pacific region and their concern that those tests constitute a grave threat to the natural resources of the Territory and its social and economic development,

Recalling with appreciation the assistance extended to Tokelau by the administering Power, other States Members of the United Nations and organizations of the United Nations system, in particular by the United Nations Development Programme, for the rehabilitation and reconstruction of the islands following the natural disasters in 1987,

Welcoming the reports that new telecommunications equipment has been installed on Fakaofo and is fully operational,

Recalling the dispatch in 1976, 1981 and 1986 of United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Tokelau at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Tokelau;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Tokelau to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the implementation of the Declaration, which fully applies to Tokelau;

4. Urges the Government of New Zealand, the administering Power, to continue to respect fully the wishes of the people of Tokelau in carrying out the Territory's political and economic development, in order to preserve their social, cultural and traditional heritage;

5. Calls upon the administering Power, in consultation with the General Fono (Council) of Tokelau, to continue to expand its development assistance to Tokelau;

6. Urges the administering Power, other Member States and organizations of the United Nations system to continue to extend to Tokelau the maximum assistance possible for the rehabilitation and reconstruction of the islands in order to overcome the losses incurred in natural disasters in 1987;

7. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other international and regional institutions, to extend or continue to extend all possible assistance to Tokelau, in consultation with the administering Power and the people of Tokelau;

8. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Tokelau at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Turks and Caicos Islands

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Turks and Caicos Islands on 7 August, and had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory⁽⁴²⁾ and on foreign economic and other interests.⁽⁴³⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/93 without vote.

Question of the Turks and Caicos Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Turks and Caicos Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands, including in particular General Assembly resolution 43/40 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory, Having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Noting the stated policy of the Government of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, that it remains ready to respond positively to the express wish of the people of the Territory on the question of independence,

Noting that the efforts of the administering Power to resolve the 1986 constitutional crisis in the Territory resulted in the drafting of a new Constitution by the administering Power and the subsequent holding of general elections in March 1988,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Turks and Caicos Islands and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability and develop a wider economic base for the Territory,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Noting the continuing contribution of the United Nations Development Programme to the economic and social development of the Territory,

Recalling the dispatch in 1980 of two United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the obligation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV) and all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

6. Reaffirms that it is the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter to develop its dependent Territories economically and socially and urges the administering Power, in consultation with the Government of the Turks and Caicos Islands, to take the necessary measures to promote the economic and social development of the Territory;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

8. Also urges the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to continue to provide the necessary assistance for the localization of the civil service at all levels and for the training of local personnel;

9. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to counter problems related to drug trafficking;

10. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as the regional institutions concerned, to continue to pay special attention to the development needs of the Turks and Caicos Islands;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

United States Virgin Islands

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the United States Virgin Islands on 7 August. It had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on developments in the Territory (44) on foreign economic and other interests⁽⁴⁵⁾ and on military activities.⁽⁴⁶⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/99 without vote.

Question of the United States Virgin Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the United States Virgin Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the United States Virgin Islands, including in particular General Assembly resolution 43/44 of 22 November 1988,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the United States of America, as the administering Power,

Recalling the statement of the representative of the administering Power that the participation of the people of the Territory in the electoral process demonstrated that they exercised responsibility for local government and local political affairs and recalling also that the representative of the administering Power re-emphasized the policy of her Government to respond to the wishes of the people regarding their future political status whenever they indicated the direction in which they wished to proceed,

Noting with satisfaction that the territorial Commission on Status and Federal Relations started its work in September 1988 in preparation for the referendum on the Territory's future political status that had been scheduled to be held on 14 November 1989,

Noting, however, that the devastation to the Territory caused by hurricane Hugo resulted in an indefinite postponement of the referendum,

Noting also that legislation of July 1988 would lengthen from 30 to 90 days the residency requirement for voting in general elections and that a ruling of the United States Supreme Court could render the new law inoperative before it is due to take effect at the general elections to be held in the Territory in 1990,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting the measures being taken by the territorial Government with a view to strengthening the Territory's financial viability and facilitating its economic development,

Taking note of the statement of the representative of the Territory that his Government shares the concern of other Caribbean countries over the rapid depletion of the region's marine resources due to massive overfishing, mostly by large extraregional vessels, and bearing in mind the measures taken by the territorial Government and the administering Power to address this problem,

Noting the stated position of the Government of the United States Virgin Islands on the disposition of Water Island as well as the need for the Territory to exercise control over its own resources,

Noting also the continued concern expressed by a petitioner at the reclamation and development of submerged land at Long Bay in the Charlotte Amalie Harbour, and taking note of the statement of the representative of the administering Power that the issue had been settled by litigation and that those activities were subject to the regulatory powers of the Government of the Territory,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities,

Noting the active interest of the Government of the United States Virgin Islands in participating in the related work of the international and regional organizations concerned,

Expressing its sympathy to the people of the United States Virgin Islands for the extensive damage caused by hurricane Hugo in September 1989,

Recalling the dispatch in 1977 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and considering that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the United States Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the United States Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the United States Virgin Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United States of America, as the administering Power, to continue to create such conditions in the United States Virgin Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with resolution 1514(XV);

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the United States Virgin Islands themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, in that connection, calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to facilitate programmes of political education in the Territory in order to foster an awareness among the people of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

6. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter to continue to promote the economic and social development of the United States Virgin Islands, and urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to take measures with a view to strengthening and diversifying the Territory's economy;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of the United States Virgin Islands to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources;

8. Expresses its concern about the continued depletion of the Territory's marine resources and urges the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to take the necessary steps to reverse this trend;

9. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to counter problems related to drug trafficking;

10. Urges the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the United States Virgin Islands in various international and regional organizations;

11. Urges Member States and specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to extend all possible assistance with a view to rehabilitating and reconstructing the Territory devastated by hurricane Hugo;

12. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, particularly in the light of the referendum referred to in the seventh and eighth preambular paragraphs of the present resolution, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Chapter II

International Trusteeship System

During the year, the Trusteeship Council continued to monitor the status of Palau, the single remaining entity of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, which had not completed the process of self-determination. In 1989, the Trust Territory was the last still under the International Trusteeship System.

In April, a Visiting Mission was dispatched to Palau. The Council in June invited the United States, the Administering Authority, to take into account the Mission's recommendations.

The live-member Trusteeship Council—China, France, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States—held its nineteenth special session in New York on 16 and 17 March, and its fifty-sixth session, also in New York, from 15 May to 1 August. The Council considered the Administering Authority's annual report, heard 10 petitioners and examined 125 written petitions and 14 communications regarding the Territory.

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, designated as a strategic area and administered by the United States in accordance with the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the Security Council in 1947,⁽¹⁾ consists of more than 2,100 islands and atolls scattered over an area of some 7.8 million square kilometres of the western Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator. It had 168,431 inhabitants in 1986 and was composed of four constitutional Governments: the Federated States of Micronesia, Marshall Islands, Northern Mariana Islands and Palau.

In 1986, the United States signed legislation enacting a Commonwealth Covenant with the Northern Mariana Islands, and Compacts of Free Association with the Marshall Islands and with the Federated States of Micronesia, which entered into force the same year.⁽²⁾

With regard to Palau, a Compact of Free Association was favoured by 73 per cent of Palauans in an August 1987 plebiscite.⁽³⁾ A group of Palauan citizens, however, challenged the plebiscite on the grounds that the Constitution had been improperly amended, when a law passed by the Palau National Congress altered the majority required for approval of the Compact from 75 per cent to a simple majority. The Palau Supreme Court found for the plaintiffs and handed down a verdict declaring the plebiscite null and void.

In February 1989, the Government of Palau established a Commission on Future Palau/United States Relations, with a mandate to improve the provisions of the Compact of Free Association before it was again put to the voters in an eventual referendum. Negotiations were conducted with the United States authorities on a number of proposals for revision of the Compact, particularly regarding capital improvement projects and land compensation. In May, the representatives of Palau and the United States announced that they had signed an Agreement concerning Special Programs Relating to the Entry into Force of the Compact of Free Association. In December, the United States passed the Implementation Act to authorize the entry into force of the Compact of Free Association with Palau.

Conditions in the Trust Territory

In a working paper submitted to the Trusteeship Council in May,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretariat provided an outline of conditions in the Trust Territory covering political, economic, social and educational advancement. An updated report⁽⁵⁾ described constitutional developments and progress towards self-government (see above), and summarized the structure of the four constitutional Governments, including the legislature, executive, state and municipal governments, and the civil service. Under the 1987 status arrangements, the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia were defined as "sovereign and self-governing" and the Northern Mariana Islands as "self-governing".

Funding for government operations in the Trust Territory was derived mainly from an annual grant provided by the U.S. Department of the Interior. The second and third largest sources of income were federal grants and revenues locally collected from taxation. Total revenues during fiscal year 1988/89 amounted to $45.7 million, which balanced annual expenditures ($45.7 million) for the same period. For 1988/89, the grant from the Administering Authority to the Trust Territory totalled approximately $36 million, of which $14.7 million represented funds from the Department of the Interior, $9.7 million was federal grants and $12.4 million was Capital Improvement Program funds. Local revenues amounted to $9 million, derived from taxes and reimbursements for the use of public utilities.

Palau's total revenue for 1988/89 amounted to approximately $23 million, of which approximately $14.7 million was derived from the Department of the Interior and $8.8 million from taxes and payments for utilities. During the same period, expenditures amounted to approximately $23.2 million, leaving a budgetary deficit of approximately $469,000. The total accumulated value of Palauan government property at the end of 1988/89 was estimated at $13 million, while personal property, exclusive of the value of land and improvements, was estimated at $13.4 million.

War damage claims by the inhabitants of the Trust Territory fell into two categories, namely claims against the Governments of the United States and Japan, mainly for damages sustained by the indigenous inhabitants during the Second World War (Title I claims), and post-war claims against the Government of the United States (Title II claims). All claims under Title II (a total of $32.6 million) had already been settled. As regards Title I claims (a total of $34.3 million), the remaining balance due (about $10 million) was appropriated in the fiscal year 1989 budget and combined with the fiscal year 1988 appropriation.

Subsistence farming is the main agricultural activity in the Trust Territory. Local production of agricultural commodities in Palau increased in 1989, as did the number of private businesses, mostly in construction, transportation and services.

Trusteeship Council consideration. The Trusteeship Council held its fifty-sixth session in New York from 15 May to 1 August.⁽⁶⁾ It had before it the most recent annual report⁽⁷⁾ of the Administering Authority and a working paper prepared by the Secretariat.⁽⁴⁾ By a note of 10 May,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General transmitted the Administering Authority's report to the Security Council.

On 1 June,⁽⁶⁾ the Trusteeship Council adopted a set of conclusions and recommendations regarding the Trust Territory by 4 votes to 1. It noted the formation in Palau in February 1989 of the Commission on Future Palau/United States Relations to address certain concerns with regard to the proposed future relationship between the United States and Palau, and it welcomed the fact that the negotiations between representatives of the Commission and U.S. authorities had resulted in the signing, on 26 May, of an agreement between the two sides. The Council expressed its hope that the agreement would help to achieve an early completion of the process of approval of the Compact of Free Association, in accordance with the wishes of the people of Palau.

In its conclusions, the Council also: noted that the peoples of the Trust Territory had elected to assume full responsibility for administration in the economic, social and educational fields; considered that any difficulties over the interpretation of the new status agreements should be resolved bilaterally by the parties concerned; noted the particular concern of the Government of Palau about poaching by foreign fishing vessels; and noted with satisfaction the assurances given by the Administering Authority that it would continue to fulfil its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations and under the Trusteeship Agreement.

On 1 August,⁽⁶⁾ the Council adopted, by 4 votes to 1, its report to the Security Council covering the period 20 July 1988 to 1 August 1989.

Consideration by Special Committee on decolonization. The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization)⁽⁹⁾ considered the question of the Trust Territory on 7 August and endorsed the conclusions and recommendations made by its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. In considering the question, the Committee had before it a Secretariat working paper on developments in the Territory.⁽¹⁰⁾

The Committee reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of the Territory to self-determination and independence in conformity with the UN Charter and the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.⁽¹¹⁾ It reiterated its appeal to the Administering Authority to reconsider its non-participation in the work of the Sub-Committee during its consideration of the Territory, and to resume its participation in the work of the Committee. Recognizing that it was ultimately for the people of the Trust Territory to decide their political destiny, the Committee called upon the Administering Authority not to fragment the Territory or take any action against the wishes of the people as expressed in any genuine act of self-determination. It urged the Authority to continue to take measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference against other States, and to take measures to safeguard the right of the people of the Territory to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory.

The text of the conclusions and recommendations was transmitted on 30 August to the President of the Security Council⁽¹²⁾ and to the President of the Trusteeship Council.⁽¹³⁾ The Committee also recommended to the General Assembly for its adoption a draft resolution on the question of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY CONSIDERATION

On 25 October, the Chairman of the General Assembly's Fourth Committee, following consultations with the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization and with delegations concerned, suggested that no action be taken on a draft resolution submitted by the latter Committee. The suggestion was adopted without objection.(14)

Visiting mission

By letters dated 1 March(15) and 3 March 1989,(16) the United States invited the Trusteeship Council to send at its earliest convenience a visiting mission to observe current conditions in Palau, and requested that a special session of the Council be convened to consider that invitation. Having received the support of the majority of delegations, the nineteenth special session was held in New York on 16 and 17 March.(6)

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL ACTION

On 17 March, the Trusteeship Council adopted resolution 2190(S-XIX) by vote.

Arrangements for the dispatch of a visiting mission to observe current conditions in Palau,
Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands
The Trusteeship Council,

Recalling its resolution 2183(LIII) in which, inter alia, it expressed the view that the United States of America, as the Administering Authority, had satisfactorily discharged its obligations under the terms of the Trusteeship Agreement,

Aware that the proposed Compact of Free Association between the United States and Palau has not yet come into effect,

Having been invited by the Administering Authority to dispatch a mission to observe current conditions in Palau,

1. Decides to dispatch a visiting mission to Palau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, in April 1989 for approximately two weeks;

2. Further decides that the Visiting Mission should be composed of members of the Council wishing to participate, except the Administering Authority, which may provide an escort officer;

3. Directs the Visiting Mission to observe the steps being taken in Palau towards bringing into effect the proposed Compact of Free Association;

4. Directs the Visiting Mission, as may be appropriate in the light of discussions in the Trusteeship Council and of resolutions adopted by it, to obtain first-hand information concerning political, economic and social developments in Palau;

5. Directs the Visiting Mission to receive petitions, without prejudice to its action in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Council, and to examine on the spot such of the petitions as, in its opinion, warrant special examination;

6. Requests the Visiting Mission to submit to the Council as soon as practicable a report on its visit containing its findings, with such observations, conclusions and recommendations as it may wish to make;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and facilities to assist the Visiting Mission in the performance of its functions.

Trusteeship Council resolution 2190(S-XIX)

17	March	1989	Meeting	1660	3-1

Meeting members. TC 1659, 1660

In a statement after the vote, the USSR said that the draft resolution had been put to a vote and adopted by the majority without taking the views of its delegation into account. The USSR had on many occasions drawn attention to the arbitrary, illegal and unilateral actions by the United States to alter the Trust Territory status of the Territory, in violation of the Charter, the 1947 Trusteeship Agreement and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. The resolution totally ignored those facts, and the USSR had voted against it.

The United Kingdom, in response to the statement by the USSR, noted the suggestion that it should have engaged in more dialogue on the draft resolution with a view to reaching a consensus, but said there had been no evidence of new thinking; it had heard the same charges and accusations year after year. The United Kingdom could not accept the view that there was a violation of the Charter if the people of a Trust Territory were allowed to determine their own future.

Report of the Visiting Mission. The Trusteeship Council's 1989 Visiting Mission to Palau,(17) composed of one representative each from France and the United Kingdom, began its visit at Koror, Palau, on 10 April and ended it on 17 April. The Mission was to observe the steps taken towards bringing into effect the proposed Compact of Free Association, to obtain first-hand information on political, economic and social developments in Palau, and to receive petitions.

In its conclusions and recommendations, the Mission stated that very few of those to whom it talked questioned the status of free association as the basis for future relations between Palau and the Administering Authority. The Mission therefore concluded that free association with the United States remained the preferred future status option of the overwhelming majority of the people of Palau. Nevertheless, some Palauans seemed to view the end of the Trusteeship with anxiety as a step into the unknown, and concern was also expressed that the Trusteeship might be terminated prematurely, i.e., before the Compact of Free Association had entered into force. The Mission drew attention to assurances given by the Administering Authority that it would continue to fulfil its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations and the Trusteeship Agreement, and assured those to whom it talked that the Trusteeship Council would continue to carry out its responsibilities as long as the Trusteeship Agreement remained in force.

The Mission felt that the United Nations should be able to provide more effective assistance to the economic planning process than at present. It recommended that, following the resolution of the question of Palau's future political status, consideration be given to the assignment of a full-fledged expert or the dispatch of an interregional adviser from the Department of Technical Co-operation for Development to review the Government's need for UN assistance.

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL ACTION

On 1 June,(6) at its fifty-sixth session, the Trusteeship Council adopted resolution 2191(LVI) by 4 votes in favour to 1 against, by which it took note of the report of the Visiting Mission, and expressed its appreciation of the work it had accomplished. It decided that it would continue to take the recommendations of the Visiting Mission into account in future examination of matters relating to the Trust Territory, and invited the Administering Authority to consider them also, as well as the comments made thereon by members of the Trusteeship Council.

Hearings, petitions and communications

On 16 and 17 May, the Trusteeship Council heard 10 petitioners on issues concerning the conditions in and status of the Trust Territory.(6)

At its meetings between 19 and 23 May, the Council considered 14 communications and 125 petitions. On 22 May, it took note of those communications, and with respect to 118 petitions, it decided to draw the attention of the petitioners to the observations made during the session by the Administering Authority and members of the Council.

Other aspects of the International Trusteeship System

Fellowships and scholarships

Under a scholarship programme launched in 1952,(1) 11 Member States had in the past made scholarships available for students from Trust Territories: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Tunisia, the USSR and Yugoslavia. In a report to the Trusteeship Council covering the period from 18 May 1988 to 19 May 1989,(2) the Secretary-General stated that he had received information from one offering State, the USSR, which said that during the academic year 1988/89 no inhabitants from the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands were studying in the country.

On 23 May,(3) the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Information dissemination

A May report(4) by the Secretary-General covering the period from 1 May 1988 to 30 April 1989 described the dissemination by the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) of UN documents and information materials, including taped radio and video programmes, in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. Those activities, primarily carried out through the United Nations Information Centre (UNIC) at Tokyo, were aimed at keeping the people of the Territory aware of UN activities, particularly with respect to the Trusteeship System. Other departments, including the secretariat of the Trusteeship Council, assisted in the distribution of information.

Information materials provided by DPI consisted of press releases in English and French dealing with the Trusteeship Council and photo coverage of the proceedings of the Council. DPI also prepared for the UN Chronicle a report on the Council's deliberations.

In the Trusteeship Council, the USSR expressed regret that a control file on materials sent to the Territory was not available to the Council, and called for details of taped radio and video programmes distributed by DPI. The representative of DPI stated that he had noted the request of the USSR and that the Department had assembled a list of materials distributed, which was annexed to the Secretary-General's report on the dissemination of information. To maintain a separate file for each item for each place of distribution would, however, be cumbersome. He also stated that it was difficult to obtain systematic evaluation of the effectiveness of the materials, to identify target audiences and to see if the materials were useful.

On 18 May,(3) the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Co-operation with Special Committee on decolonization

In 1989,(3) the Trusteeship Council considered jointly two items of its agenda: the attainment of self-government and independence by the Trust Territory, and co-operation with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

During the discussion in the Council, the USSR stated that under the Administering Authority's policy, which promoted the fragmentation of a single Trust Territory and imposed on each of them unequal agreements, the Micronesian people had no real opportunity to enjoy their right to self-determination and independence. Referring to the regret expressed by the Committee over the Authority's failure to participate in its work and its lack of co-operation with the Trusteeship Council, he said that the Committee's appeal to the Administering Authority to resume its participation deserved the Council's very real consideration.

On 1 June,⁽³⁾ the Trusteeship Council drew the Security Council's attention to the conclusions and recommendations it had adopted at its fifty-sixth session concerning the attainment of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory, and to the statements made by Trusteeship Council members on those questions.

In 1989, the Trusteeship Council decided to consider jointly the question of co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and the matter of the Second Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination.

During the discussion in the Council, the USSR stated that, as a result of the position of the Administering Authority of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, supported by some Council members, the Trusteeship Council was on the sidelines of the UN measures being taken regarding the Second Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1983-1993).⁽⁵⁾ In the USSR's view, the Council should invite representatives of CERD to attend meetings of the Council, and should provide CERD full documentation on the situation with regard to the civil, social, economic, political and cultural rights of the people of the Territory, as well as information on developments in the constitutional process, which had often been requested by the Committee.

On 25 May, the Council took note of the statement by the USSR.

Chapter III

Namibia

The year 1989 saw the beginning of the end of colonialism in Africa, as Namibia—the largest Territory with a colonial background anywhere in the world—began an irreversible march to independence. As a pre-First World War German colony known as South West Africa, it was the only one of seven African Territories once held under the League of Nations Mandate System that was not placed under the United Nations Trusteeship System, due to the fact that South Africa refused to accept UN competence, and despite Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and opinions of the International Court of Justice asserting the Organization's primary role in the Territory.^a As early as 1969, the Security Council called on South Africa to withdraw its illegal administration,^b and in 1976 it demanded that South Africa accept elections for the Territory under UN supervision and control.^c The Territory was then renamed Namibia, rather than South West Africa, under a 1968 General Assembly resolution^d stating that that was the name desired by the people. In 1976, the Assembly decided^e that any independence talks must include the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), which the Assembly recognized as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people. In 1978, at a special session, the General Assembly expressed support for the armed liberation struggle of the Namibian people, stating that any settlement must be arrived at with SWAPO's agreement and within the framework of UN resolutions.^f

The United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG), the fundamental role of which was decolonization, moved into place in the Territory on 1 April 1989, mandated through 31 March 1990. South Africa, which had administered the Territory for some 70 years, thereafter began its withdrawal, though renewed fighting between its forces and the national liberation movement, SWAPO, during the first few days of April briefly threatened to derail the UNTAG operation. Once the cease-fire was reinstated and forces of both parties had returned to agreed bases and positions, UNTAG began to focus on creating conditions for elections to a Constituent Assembly, which was to draw up a constitution for an independent Namibia, scheduled to come into existence in early 1990.

While elections eventually took place without incident in November 1989, under UN supervision and control, and were subsequently certified free and fair by the Secretary-General's Special Representative—a validation accepted by the parties—the Security Council had to take actions earlier in the year to ensure that the UN operation was able to fulfil its mandate. In August, it acted regarding Koevoet, the South African counter-insurgency group, as well as regarding election procedures (resolution 640(1989)), followed by a further resolution on the same issues in October (643(1989)). In a statement in November, the Council deplored what it found to be false allegations by South Africa about concentrations of SWAPO combatants in southern Angola. For its part, the General Assembly approved UNTAG financing (resolution 44/191), and adopted other resolutions on activities of transnational corporations in Namibia (44/84) and on torture and inhuman treatment of children in detention in South Africa and Namibia (44/143). Preparing for the post-independence period, other United Nations bodies, particularly the Council for Namibia, launched assistance programmes, while continuing to oversee programmes already in operation.

UN Transition Assistance Group

Pre-operational aspects
(January-April 1989)

By resolution 435(1978),⁽¹⁾ the Security Council endorsed a plan for Namibian independence, based on a proposal submitted by Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States—the Western members of the Council of that year—and authorized the establishment of UNTAG. In 1980, South Africa accepted the proposal of the five Western Powers, and in 1981(2) it participated in a pre-implementation meeting in Geneva. However, South Africa ultimately set out new conditions, in particular one linking Namibian independence with the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola. It was not until December 1988(3) that the latter issue was resolved, when a tripartite agreement between Angola, Cuba and South Africa, mediated by the United States, was signed at UN Headquarters, and a UN observer mission, the United Nations Angola Verification Mission, was created.(4) South Africa then undertook to co-operate with the Secretary-General to ensure Namibia's independence through free and fair elections, and SWAPO agreed to the cessation of all hostile acts. The starting date for implementation of the independence plan was set for 1 April 1989, after the Security Council had launched the much-delayed UN decolonization operation by adopting two resolutions in January.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

Following the December 1988 signing of the tripartite(3) and bilateral(5) agreements regarding Angola and Namibia, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 628(1989) on 16 January 1989.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 626(1988) of 20 December 1988,

Taking note of the agreement between the People's Republic of Angola, the Republic of Cuba and the Republic of South Africa, signed on 22 December 1988,

Taking note also of the agreement between the People's Republic of Angola and the Republic of Cuba, signed on 22 December 1988,

Emphasizing the importance of these two agreements in strengthening international peace and security,

1. welcomes the signature of the agreement between the People's Republic of Angola, the Republic of Cuba and the Republic of South Africa on the one hand, and of the agreement between the People's Republic of Angola and the Republic of Cuba on the other hand;

2. Expresses its full support for these agreements, and to that effect decides to follow closely the developments in their implementation;

3. Calls upon all parties concerned, as well as all Member States, to co-operate in the implementation of these agreements;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council fully informed on the implementation of this resolution.

Security Council resolution 628(1989)

16 January 1989 Meeting 2842 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/20399).

Also on 16 January, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 629(1989).

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its relevant resolutions, in particular, resolutions 431(1978) of 27 July 1978 and 435(1978) of 29 September 1978,

Taking note of its resolution 628(1989) of 16 January 1989,

Noting that the parties to the Protocol of Brazzaville agreed to recommend to the Secretary-General that 1 April 1989 be established as the date for the implementation of resolution 435(1978),

Recognizing the progress in the south-western Africa peace process,

Expressing its concern at the increase in the police and paramilitary forces and the establishment of the South-West Africa Territorial Force since 1978, and stressing the need to ensure conditions under which the Namibian people will be able to participate in free and fair elections under the supervision and control of the United Nations,

Noting also that these developments make appropriate a re-examination of the requirements for the United Nations Transition Assistance Group effectively to fulfil its mandate which include, inter alia, keeping borders under surveillance, preventing infiltration, preventing intimidation and ensuring the safe return of refugees and their free participation in the electoral process,

Recalling the approval by the Security Council of the Secretary-General's statement on 29 September 1978 to the Council,

Emphasizing its determination to ensure the early independence of Namibia through free and fair elections under the supervision and control of the United Nations, in accordance with its resolution 435(1978),

Reaffirming the legal responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia,

1. Decides that 1 April 1989 shall be the date on which implementation of resolution 435(1978) will begin;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to proceed to arrange a formal cease-fire between the South West Africa People's Organization and South Africa;

3. Calls upon South Africa to reduce immediately and substantially the existing police forces in Namibia with a view to achieving reasonable balance between these forces and the United Nations Transition Assistance Group so as to ensure effective monitoring by the latter;

4. Reaffirms the responsibility of all concerned to co-operate to ensure the impartial implementation of the settlement plan in accordance with resolution 435(1978);

5. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare at the earliest possible date a report to the Council on the implementation of resolution 435(1978), taking into account all relevant developments since the adoption of that resolution;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General, in preparing his report, to re-examine requirements necessary for the Group in order to identify wherever possible tangible cost-saving measures without prejudice to his ability fully to carry out the mandate as established in 1978, namely, to ensure the early independence of Namibia through free and fair elections under the supervision and control of the United Nations;

7. Calls upon Members of the United Nations to consider, in co-ordination with the Secretary-General, how they might provide economic and financial assistance to the Namibian people, both during the transitional period and after independence.

Security Council resolution 629(1989)

16 January 1989 Meeting 2842 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/20400).

Report of the Secretary-General (January). A week after the adoption of the two Council resolutions, the Secretary-General submitted a further report,(6) dated 23 January, in his series concerning the implementation of the 1978 UN plan for Namibia's independence.(1)

Before detailing his own concept for UNTAG operations, the Secretary-General described the different views of the live permanent members of the Security Council and of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries. The permanent Council members, pointing out they would be paying 57 per cent of the operation's cost, said they believed it would be possible to achieve a maximum reduction of costs by considering a reduction in the envisaged military component, given positive developments in the south-western Africa peace process. On the other hand, the Non-Aligned Movement, together with SWAPO, believed the circumstances, including consolidation of the South African military, police and administrative presence, required an increase in the UNTAG military component, if free and fair elections were to ensue.

The Secretary-General commented that, in his contacts with both groups, he had consistently stressed that the 1978 Security Council plan had called for a certain level of resources. If the Council wished fewer resources to be made available, he said it should indicate which tasks in the settlement proposal were no longer required. Since the 1 April date for launching implementation of the plan should not be jeopardized, he would submit to the Council a concept of operations which might not be wholly satisfactory to either side, nor to the Secretary-General, but which would offer the best available prospect for fulfilling his mandate of ensuring Namibia's early independence through free and fair elections under UN supervision and control, while at the same time enjoying the necessary financial support of the Members of the Organization.

His concepts were based on the settlement proposal of the then Secretary-General of 29 August 1978,(7) which called for every adult Namibian, without discrimination or fear of intimidation from any source, to be eligible to vote, campaign and stand for election to the Constituent Assembly. Provision was made for secret ballot and full freedom of speech, assembly, movement and the press. Electoral machinery must ensure that all political parties, without regard to their political views, had a full and fair opportunity to organize and participate in the electoral process. The proposal urged the repeal of all remaining discriminatory or restrictive measures which might abridge the objective of free and fair elections and the release of all political prisoners or detainees so that they could fully and freely participate in the electoral process, without fear of arrest, detention, intimidation or imprisonment. The proposal also provided for the peaceful return of all Namibians in exile, so that they too might fully and freely participate in the elections. It stipulated that all Namibians should be given a full and voluntary choice whether to return. The Secretary-General declared that those criteria would be his guiding principle in the Namibian peace process and would be scrupulously ensured by his Special Representative and his staff.

Continuing, he said that the civilian component of UNTAG would consist of two elements: electoral and civil police. As regards the electoral element, the Secretary-General proposed that about 800 electoral supervisors be provided. Civil police duties would include taking measures against any intimidation or interference with the electoral process. The primary responsibility for maintaining law and order during the transition period would rest with existing police forces. The Secretary-General recommended that the organizational and deployment format of UNTAG police monitors follow that of existing police forces. They should come under the authority of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General from his headquarters in Windhoek, and should operate through a number of district headquarters situated throughout Namibia. The stations would be so located as to enable the police monitors to visit all existing police stations in the Territory. The Secretary-General proposed that the number of police monitors should be 500, an increase from the original 1978 proposal of 360, since the South African police force in 1989 would be substantially greater than those present in the Territory in 1978, amounting to about 6,000.

Military aspects

In his January report, (6) the Secretary-General said that, under the existing plan, the military component would account for more than 75 per cent of UNTAG costs. Its tasks would include the monitoring of: cessation of hostile acts by all parties; the restriction of South African Defence Force (SADF) troops to base, and their subsequent reduction to the agreed strength of 1,500 men, who would be restricted to certain agreed locations; such SADF personnel as continued to perform civilian functions during the transitional period; the dismantling of the command structures of citizen forces, commando units and ethnic forces, the withdrawal of all SADF personnel attached to those forces and the confinement of all arms and ammunition of such forces to agreed locations; and the restriction of SWAPO troops to base in Angola and Zambia. It would also keep the borders under surveillance, prevent infiltration, ensure that all military installations along the northern border were deactivated or placed under UN supervision, and provide security for vital installations in the northern border area. Lieutenant-General Dewan Prem Chand (India) was appointed Force Commander.

The Secretary-General recommended the following concept of operations: (1) the Force Commander would concentrate on the tasks of monitoring the disbandment of the citizen forces, commando units and ethnic units, including the South-West Africa Territorial Force (SWATF), monitoring SADF forces in Namibia, as well as SWAPO forces in neighbouring countries, and supervising and securing installations in the northern border area; (2) the authorized upper limit for the military component of UNTAG would remain at 7,500; (3) three enlarged infantry battalions, each averaging 850 all ranks, would be deployed initially, with other battalions held in reserve (that would provide as many operational troops as five battalions of the size envisaged in the earlier deployment plan, but with the overall numbers being reduced because of the regrouping of the operational troops, and the consequent elimination of some headquarters and administrative elements); (4) the military observer element would be increased from 200 to 300 officers to permit the transfer of certain tasks from infantry to military observers; (5) the logistic elements deployed initially would total about 1,700 all ranks and would be appropriate for a force of three enlarged infantry battalions and 300 military observers, taking into account also the need for military logistic elements to support the civilian component. The total number involved in the military component was envisaged at about 4,650. Should it become apparent during the operation that a military component of that size was insufficient, the Secretary-General would inform the Security Council and, if there was no objection, the reserve battalions would be deployed as necessary and urgent financial support sought from the General Assembly. Preliminary costs of the civilian and military components of UNTAG were estimated at $416 million. A special appeal would be launched by the Secretary-General for funds needed by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for the return of Namibians currently in exile.

Regarding a cease-fire between South Africa and SWAPO, envisaged to begin under the 1978 plan at the beginning of the plan's implementation, the Secretary-General had asked that both South Africa and SWAPO agree to the de facto cessation of hostilities, with effect from 10 August 1988, as provided for in the Geneva Protocol of 5 August 1988.⁽⁸⁾ The Secretary-General also proposed to send identical letters to South Africa and SWAPO, setting out a specific date and hour for a formal cease-fire to begin, and requesting that they inform him in writing of their agendas.

In an explanatory statement of 9 February,⁽⁹⁾ the Secretary-General, commenting on his further consultations, confirmed his proposals of 23 January, stating that no tasks had been eliminated, and that final and definitive decisions concerning functional priorities and deployment could be taken only in the light of circumstances prevalent at the time of implementation. He said he had been assured by all Council members, including the permanent members, that they would respond promptly to any need for additional military personnel, up to the authorized upper limit of 7,500. Following representations from a number of delegations, the Secretary-General had decided to make an exception to the standard peace-keeping practice of military observers not carrying weapons, and had given the UNTAG Force Commander discretion to authorize their carrying defensive weapons. With those clarifications, he hoped the Security Council could approve his report and make its final determination for UNTAG's emplacement in Namibia by 1 April, in accordance with the decision it had already taken.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (February)

On 16 February, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 632(1989).

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its relevant resolutions, in particular, resolutions 431(1978) of 27 July 1978, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978 and also 629(1989) of 16 January 1989,

Reaffirming also that the United Nations plan contained in its resolution 435(1978) remains the only internationally accepted basis for the peaceful settlement of the Namibian question,

Confirming its decision contained in paragraph 1 of resolution 629(1989) that 1 April 1989 shall be the date on which implementation of resolution 435(1978) will begin,

Having considered the report of 23 January 1989 submitted by the Secretary-General and his explanatory statement of 9 February 1989,

Taking into account the assurances given to the Secretary-General by all the members of the Council as contained in paragraph 5 of his explanatory statement,

Reaffirming the legal responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia until independence,

1. Approves the report of the Secretary-General and his explanatory statement concerning the implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibia;

2. Decides to implement its resolution 435(1978) in its original and definitive form to ensure conditions in Namibia which will allow the Namibian people to participate freely and without intimidation in the electoral process under the supervision and control of the United Nations leading to early independence of the Territory;

3. Expresses its full support for and pledges its co-operation with the Secretary-General in carrying out the mandate entrusted to him by the Security Council under resolution 435(1978);

4. Calls upon all parties concerned to honour their commitments to the United Nations plan and to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council fully informed on the implementation of the present resolution.

Security Council resolution 632(1989)

16 February 1989 Meeting 2848 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/20466).

UNTAG composition

In a letter(10) dated 21 February 1989, the Secretary-General proposed to the Security Council that the various units in the military component of UNTAG be contributed by the following countries: Bangladesh, Finland, Kenya, Malaysia, Togo, Venezuela, Yugoslavia (infantry battalions); Bangladesh, Czechoslovakia, Finland, India, Ireland, Kenya, Malaysia, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Poland, Sudan, Togo, Yugoslavia (military observers); Australia, Canada, Denmark, Italy, Poland, Spain, United Kingdom (logistic units). In addition, the logistic units would include civilian elements contributed by the Federal Republic of Germany and Switzerland. On 23 February, the President of the Council informed(11) the Secretary-General that the Council agreed with those proposals.

Financing

On 16 February, the Secretary-General requested(12) the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's forty-third session of an additional item on the financing of UNTAG.

On 1 March, the Assembly, following consideration of the report of the Secretary-General(13) and the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ),(14) adopted resolution 43/232, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, without vote.

Financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the direct and legal responsibility of the United Nations for Namibia until independence, as indicated in its resolution 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966 and its subsequent relevant resolutions on the question of Namibia,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, by which the Council established the United Nations Transition Assistance Group for a period of up to twelve months, as well as Council resolutions 629(1989) of 16 January 1989 and 632(1989) of 16 February 1989,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Noting, as indicated in paragraph 5 of the explanatory statement of the Secretary-General of 9 February 1989 approved by the Security Council in its resolution 632(1989), that the mandate of the military component of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group, as approved by the Council in its resolution 435(1978), remains unchanged,

Considering that, in the light of paragraphs 11 and 14 of the report of the Secretary-General and of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, in particular paragraphs 6, 8, 9 and 42 of that report, and taking into account that the number of troops to be deployed initially would be 4,650 all ranks while at the same time the figure of 7,500 would be maintained as the upper limit, additional resources may be required for the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) in its original and definitive form,

Recognizing that the costs of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the United Nations Transition Assistance Group with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Urging all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the United Nations Transition Assistance Group in full and on time, especially in view of the urgent need for and the magnitude of the start-up costs required for the Group,

Recognizing that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the United Nations Transition Assistance Group, a different procedure is required from the one applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the United Nations Transition Assistance Group,

1. Concurs with the observations, recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Decides to appropriate an amount of 416,162,000 United States dollars, inclusive of the amount of 450,000 dollars authorized by the Secretary-General for pre-implementation expenses and of the amount of 10 million dollars authorized with the concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, under the terms of General Assembly resolution 42/227 of 21 December 1987, for the operation of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group for its mandate period beginning on 1 April 1989 as authorized by the Security Council, bearing in mind that this amount corresponds, in part, to the deployment of 4,650 troops all ranks of the authorized upper limit of 7,500 troops all ranks, and requests the Secretary-General to establish a special account for the Group;

3. Decides, as an ad hoc arrangement, to apportion:

(a) An amount of 240,083,840 dollars for the above-mentioned period among the States permanent members of the Security Council in the proportions determined by the scale of assessments for the years 1989, 1990 and 1991;

(b) An amount of 165,091,465 dollars for the above-mentioned period among the economically developed Member States that are not permanent members of the Security Council in the proportions determined by the scale of assessments for the years 1989, 1990 and 1991;

(c) An amount of 10,786,919 dollars for the above-mentioned period among the economically less developed Member States in the proportions determined by the scale of assessments for the years 1989, 1990 and 1991;

(d) An amount of 199,776 dollars for the above-mentioned period to the following of the economically less developed Member States in the proportions determined by the scale of assessments for the years 1989, 1990 and 1991: Afghanistan, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bangladesh, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cape Verde, Chad, Comoros, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominica, Ethiopia, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Mozambique, Nepal, Niger, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sudan, Suriname, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Vanuatu, Yemen and Zimbabwe;

4. Decides that, for the purpose of the present resolution, the term "economically less developed Member States" in paragraph 3 (c) above shall mean all Member States except Australia, Austria, Belgium, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, the German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, South Africa, Sweden, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and the Member States referred to in paragraphs 3 (a) and (d) above;

5. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 3 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 9,541,000 dollars approved for the above-mentioned period;

6. Invites voluntary contributions to the United Nations Transition Assistance Group both in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure established by the General Assembly in section II of its resolution 43/230 of 21 December 1988;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to avail himself of the widest possible sources of procurement, consistent with the requirements of the mandate and with economy and efficiency, taking into account the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to proceed without delay with the necessary arrangements for the funding of the programme of repatriation of refugees and exiles, which is to be carried out by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, as indicated in paragraph 42 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, taking into account that the repatriation programme is an integral part of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group operation;

9. Recognizes that follow-up activities to the repatriation programme, including assistance in the resettlement of refugees and exiles, are to be carried out by United Nations bodies, including, inter alia, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the World Food Programme and the World Health Organization, and will continue past the end of the mandate of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the United Nations Transition Assistance Group is administered with the maximum of efficiency and economy, bearing in mind the relevant observations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fourth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group",

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its forty-fourth and forty-fifth sessions, detailed performance reports on the budget of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group, as recommended by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 45 of its report.

General Assembly resolution 43/232

1	March	1989	Meeting	89	Adopted	without	vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/43/998) without vote, 28 February (meeting 58); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/43/L.24), following informal consultations; agenda item 154.

Meeting numbers. GA 43rd session: 5th Committee 54-58; plenary 89.

Political aspects

On 16 March, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the text of a 10 March agreement(15) between the United Nations and South Africa concerning the status of UNTAG in Namibia. It stated that UNTAG members should refrain from any activity of a political nature in the Territory and from any action or activity incompatible with the impartial and international nature of their duties, or inconsistent with the spirit of the arrangements in the agreement, while South Africa undertook to respect the exclusively international nature of UNTAG. Specific provisions covered tax exemptions; display of UN flags and vehicular markings; communications; freedom of movement; imports, exports and local purchases; privileges and immunities; visa exemptions; carrying of arms; discrepancy jurisdiction; and settlement of disputes.

Pursuant to Council resolutions 629(1989) and 632(1989) (see above), the Secretary-General's Special Representative, Martti Ahtisaari, arrived in Windhoek on 31 March 1989, mandated with the supervision and control of free and fair elections in Namibia on the basis of Council resolution 435(1978).

On 30 March, the Secretary-General informed(16) the Security Council that South Africa and SWAPO had confirmed their agreement to abide by the formal cease-fire to begin at 0400 hours Greenwich mean time on 1 April 1989.

Operational aspects

April clashes

On 2 April 1989, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of South Africa, in a letter(1) to the Secretary-General, stated that a grave situation had arisen on the northern border of South West Africa/Namibia as a result of continued and escalating violations by SWAPO of the agreements signed in New York on 22 December 1988 by Angola, Cuba and South Africa. He said that the incontrovertible facts were that during the night of 31 March and on 1 April 1989, an estimated 600 to 800 SWAPO elements crossed the border from Angola to Namibia, and the figure could be as high as 1,000. They were heavily armed, with AK-47 semi-automatic rifles, mortars and ground-to-air missiles, and had entered the Territory in uniform. On the basis of information from those captured, they had been ordered to cross the border in order to establish bases in Namibia. Reliable information indicated between 4,000 and 5,000 SWAPO elements below latitude 16° S, even though SWAPO under the agreements was required by 1 April to have all personnel confined to bases north of that latitude. The Foreign Minister said that SWAPO's leadership would have to account for the unnecessary carnage of SWAPO elements, the callous disregard for human life and contempt for international agreements. Since UNTAG should, under the agreements, be monitoring SWAPO bases, he asked the Secretary-General if it was, in fact, doing so. He trusted that the Secretary-General and the Security Council would make it possible for South Africa to continue to co-operate and fulfil its commitments in terms of the agreements, and he appealed to them to take a firm and clear stand on the act of defiance by SWAPO.

In a further letter(2) of 4 April, the Foreign Minister said that more than 1,000 SWAPO forces had infiltrated into Namibia. Unless action and effective measures were taken to stem the rapid deterioration of the situation, the whole peace process in Namibia was in danger of collapse. South Africa could not be expected to implement its undertakings under the agreements while SWAPO continued to act in flagrant violation of them with the acquiescence, tacit or otherwise, of the Security Council. Under the circumstances, South Africa had the undoubted right to suspend compliance with its obligations.

On 4 April, South Africa also circulated as a Security Council document(3) the Protocol of Geneva, signed on 5 August 1988 by Angola, Cuba and South Africa, which covered South Africa's withdrawal of forces from Angola and SWAPO's deployment of forces north of the 16th parallel.

On 5 April, in a letter(4) to the Secretary-General, the Foreign Minister said his Government felt encouraged by the firm and positive reaction of various Governments in endorsing the provisions of the Geneva Protocol, including the SWAPO obligation to remain north of the 16th parallel. He repeated his urgent appeal to the Secretary-General to bring influence to bear on the SWAPO leadership to cease its senseless course. He said a further 300 SWAPO armed personnel crossed the border from Angola on 4 April, having received radioed orders that day. The South African Government had requested its Administrator-General in Namibia to broadcast an appeal to the infiltrators to surrender and to lay down their arms or to withdraw northwards to Angola. SWAPO members laying down their arms in peace would be given safe conduct to assembly points under UNTAG supervision, from where they could be transported safely to suitable points north of latitude 16° S, with the co-operation of the Angolan authorities. SWAPO members wishing to return northwards into Angola would not be pursued.

In a communiqué issued in New York on 6 April,(5) the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries expressed shock and dismay at the campaign of the illegal occupation regime of South Africa against the Namibian people at a time when the process of bringing genuine independence to Namibia was already under way. The Bureau was scandalized to learn that UNTAG was wholly unprepared to assume its responsibilities by 1 April, the designated date for commencement of the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978).(6) The Bureau reaffirmed that the SWAPO combatants who, it was well known, had always been operating on the ground inside Namibia since the beginning of their liberation struggle, had a legitimate right to remain in their country and to be assigned to bases of confinement. It called on the Secretary-General to confine the South African forces to their bases without delay and to effect the immediate full deployment of the 7,500 personnel of the UNTAG military component in Namibia.

In a letter(7) of 7 April to the Secretary-General, the South African Foreign Minister stated that there were continued orchestrated SWAPO incursions. He invited the Security Council to dispatch a fact-finding mission. SWAPO had had no military bases in Namibia on 1 April. He noted that a meeting of the Joint Commission (created under the Angola/Namibia agreements), comprising representatives of Angola, Cuba and South Africa, with observers from the United States and the USSR, would take place in Namibia on 8 April.

On 17 April, the Secretary-General circulated, at the request of the Joint Commission, its Mount Etjo (Namibia) Declaration, adopted on 9 April.(8) It reaffirmed the obligations of the 22 December 1988 accord and urged the Secretary-General urgently to adopt all necessary measures for the most rapid and complete deployment of UNTAG. It set out a withdrawal procedure aimed at restoring the situation in existence on 31 March. A period would be established during which SWAPO forces would be granted free passage to border assembly points in a procedure executed under UNTAG supervision. Angola committed itself to receive on its territory SWAPO forces leaving Namibia and to ensure that those and other forces on its territory were confined north of latitude 16° S under UNTAG supervision. As of 9 April, SWAPO troops still in Namibia should present themselves to border assembly points or to established assembly points south of the border. All assembly points would be under UNTAG supervision. At the border assembly points, joint border control posts manned by forces of Angola and South Africa would be established with the presence of UNTAG to guarantee the control of the crossing of SWAPO forces. SWAPO forces turning themselves over to UNTAG custody were to lay down their weapons with UNTAG. SWAPO members presenting themselves to assembly points would be transferred to bases north of latitude 16° S under UNTAG supervision. By 15 April, SWAPO would inform the Special Representative about the conclusion of the removal of its forces from Namibia.

Cahama Minute

At a meeting of representatives of Angola, Cuba and South Africa on 15 and 19 May, the three reached an agreement known as the Cahama Minute,(9) noting in particular UNTAG information that SWAPO armed elements were confined to base under UNTAG monitoring, north of the 16th parallel. Both the United Nations Special Representative and the Administrator-General confirmed that South African forces were again confined to bases under UNTAG monitoring, and that a de facto cessation of hostilities had been re-established in northern Namibia. The South African Government, in transmitting the Cahama Minute, reiterated that responsibility for the administration of Namibia during the transitional period rested with its own Administrator-General, including responsibility for maintaining law and order. Particularly in the light of the incursions as from 31 March, and to avoid any misunderstanding in the future, the South African Government made clear that the Administrator-General had the right to use such measures and means he would deem appropriate to counter activities of an aggressive, violent or intimidating nature, emanating from whatever quarter.

In a letter(10) of 24 May to the South African Foreign Minister, the Secretary-General said he could not accept any implication that the South African Government, or any other party to the delicate process, could unilaterally resort to any measures or means not provided for in the UN plan, as approved by the Security Council.

On 23 May,(11) the Secretary-General wrote to the President of Zimbabwe, Chairman of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, regarding comments made by the Movement on the April events. He stated that it was prolonged disagreement among Member States over the UNTAG military component that had led to the unfortunate delay in intergovernmental decisions necessary for the timely establishment and deployment of the Group. Moreover, had the cease-fire arrangements and related undertakings been scrupulously observed, as required by the UN plan, the tragic events that occurred in April could well have been avoided. In that connection, he reiterated that UNTAG did not have powers of enforcement. To be successful, it had to rely on the full co-operation of all parties, who must fulfil their obligations to adhere strictly to the agreements and understandings to which they had committed themselves.

Report of the Secretary-General. In an October report,(12) the Secretary-General detailed developments since UNTAG had first become operational.

Immediately preceding implementation of the UN plan on 1 April 1989, the strength of South African security forces in Namibia had been 30,743, composed of 9,895 SADF, of which 1,015 were serving with citizen forces, commando units and ethnic forces; 5,450 citizen forces; 6,128 commando units; and 9,270 ethnic forces. Included in the above was a counter-insurgency unit known as "Koevoet".

Restriction to base of SADF personnel by UNTAG came into effect at the beginning of implementation on 1 April. However, following the outbreak of hostilities later that day between SWAPO and the South African security forces, some SADF personnel had moved out of their bases, and full confinement was not restored until 13 May. Thereafter, the withdrawal of the bulk of SADF personnel from Namibia was rapidly implemented, and their strength was reduced to just under 1,500 by 24 June, in accordance with the UN plan. The remaining personnel, known as the Merlyn Force, were confined to base, under close monitoring of UNTAG, at Grootfontein and Oshivello, as provided for in the plan. About 800 SADF personnel also remained to perform certain essential civilian functions, with 495 running four airfields and the others performing medical, teaching, veterinary and other services. All were unarmed, in civilian clothes and closely monitored by UNTAG. Discussions were under way to substitute civilians for these SADF personnel, and an International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) mission was advising on arrangements for the four airfields. Some 156 other SADF personnel provided bimonthly payments to the demobilized ethnic forces. Early reduction in numbers and rank level had been requested. The citizen forces and commandos were demobilized by 31 March, immediately before the beginning of implementation of the UN plan, and their arms, military equipment and ammunition were thereafter deposited in drill halls, where they remained guarded by the military component of UNTAG. The demobilization of the ethnic forces known as SWATF was completed by 27 May, with the exception of two bushmen battalions.

The bushmen battalions, numbering 1,351 soldiers, were not demobilized because their personnel had become completely alienated from their traditional way of life. Their families lived with them in the camps, and they would have no other means of livelihood if sent away from the camps. They were closely monitored by UNTAG to ensure that they did not leave the camps or undertake military activities. Command structure had, in the view of the UNTAG Force Commander, been dismantled.

As for the counter-insurgency unit "Koevoet", the Secretary-General reported that, after its disbandment, it had been absorbed into the South-west Africa Police (SWAPOL). After the clashes which occurred in early April, the South African authorities reconstituted Koevoet as a unit, on the grounds that SWAPO combatants had crossed the border from Angola into Namibia. In mid-May, the South African authorities stated that Koevoet had again been disbanded, but some 3,000 of its personnel, estimated at two thirds of its total, had again been reabsorbed into SWAPOL, an arrangement inconsistent with the UN plan. Although ostensibly members of SWAPOL, many ex-Koevoet personnel continued to operate in the same manner as they had before the disbandment of Koevoet, including use of "Casspir" armoured personnel carriers mounted with heavy machine-guns. That activity was also inconsistent with the UN plan, which specified that police forces would be limited to the carrying of small arms in the normal performance of their duties. It became clear that many ex-Koevoet personnel had not fulfilled the condition of suitability for continued employment in the police forces during the transition period. The Secretary-General took the position that all ex-Koevoet personnel should be removed immediately from SWAPOL and any other security-related duties. UNTAG received many complaints of intimidation and other unacceptable conduct by ex-Koevoet personnel, and UNTAG police monitors were themselves, on a number of occasions, witnesses of such behaviour.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 10 August, the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries met in New York to consider the situation in Namibia, hearing a statement from a representative of SWAPO regarding continuing serious irregularities in the implementation of the independence plan. He said that South Africa had refused to comply with some key aspects of resolution 435(1978), and asked the Security Council to take action.

At the request of the Chairman of the Group of African States(13) and of the Chairman of the Co-ordinating Bureau, (14) the Security Council convened between 16 and 29 August to consider the deteriorating situation in Namibia.

At the opening meeting, the Chairman of the African Group assessed the situation in Namibia, expressing serious concern over what he described as the continued presence and violent activities of Koevoet; loopholes in the Voter Registration Proclamation which would allow South African nationals to register and vote in the elections; the draft proclamations issued by the Administrator-General, which attempted to exclude a substantial number of SWAPO members, especially its leadership, from registering and voting in the elections, as well as from being qualified to be elected; and the excessive power that the various proclamations vested in the Administrator-General.

After meetings on 16, 17, 18, 21 and 22 August, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 640(1989) on 29 August.

The Security Council,

Having critically reviewed the implementation process of resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978 since its commencement and noting with concern that all its provisions are not being fully complied with,

Concerned at reports of widespread intimidation and harassment of the civilian population, in particular by Koevoet elements in the South-West Africa Police,

Recognizing the efforts being exerted by the United Nations Transition Assistance Group to carry out its responsibilities in spite of obstacles thus placed in its way,

Recalling and reaffirming all its resolutions on the question of Namibia, particularly 435(1978), 629(1989) of 16 January 1989 and 632(1989) of 16 February 1989,

Reiterating that resolution 435(1978) must be implemented in its original and definitive form to ensure conditions in Namibia which will allow the Namibian people to participate freely and without intimidation in the electoral process, under the supervision and control of the United Nations, leading to early independence of the Territory,

Recalling and reaffirming its firm commitment to the decolonization of Namibia through the holding of free and fair elections under the supervision and control of the United Nations and in which the Namibian people will participate without intimidation or interference,

1. Demands strict compliance by all parties concerned, especially South Africa, with the terms of resolutions 435(1978) and 632(1989);

2. Also demands the disbandment of all paramilitary and ethnic forces and commando units, in particular Koevoet, as well as the dismantling of their command structures as required by resolution 435(1978);

3. Calls upon the Secretary-General to review the actual situation on the ground with a view to determining the adequacy of the military component of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group in relation to its ability to carry out its responsibilities as authorized under resolutions 435(1978) and 632(1989) and to inform the Security Council;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to review the adequacy of the number of police monitors in order to undertake the process for any appropriate increase that he may deem necessary for the effective fulfilment of the Group's responsibilities;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in his supervision and control of the electoral process, to ensure that all legislation concerning the electoral process is in conformity with the provisions of the settlement plan;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all proclamations conform with internationally accepted norms for the conduct of free and fair elections and, in particular, that the proclamation on the Constituent Assembly also respects the sovereign will of the people of Namibia;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure the observance of strict impartiality in the provision of media facilities, especially on radio and television, to all parties for the dissemination of information concerning the election;

8. Appeals to all the parties concerned to co-operate fully with the Secretary-General in the implementation of the settlement plan;

9. Expresses its full support for the Secretary-General in his efforts to ensure that resolution 435(1978) is implemented in its original and definitive form and requests him to report to the Council before the end of September on the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Security Council resolution 640(1989)

29 August 1989 Meeting 2882 Adopted unanimously

7-nation draft (S/20808/Rev.1).

Meeting numbers. SC 2876-2882.

In his October report(12), the Secretary-General took the position that all ex-Koevoet personnel should be immediately removed from SWAPOL and other security-related duties. In September, some 1,200 ex-Koevoet members of SWAPOL, or approximately 45 per cent of SWAPOL personnel in the Oshakati district (Ovamboland, in the north), were being demobilized. UNTAG closely monitored the situation, while the Secretary-General continued to press for demobilization of the remaining ex-Koevoet personnel and for an end to payments which the South African authorities continued to make, both to them and to the demobilized personnel of SWATF, payments the South African authorities intended to pay until after the elections.

Demobilization of 1,207 ex-Koevoet members was completed on 28 October, and of a further 418 on 30 October.(15)

UNTAG military aspects

In his October report,(12) the Secretary-General stated that the strength of the UNTAG military component had been sufficient to enable it to carry out its tasks. UNTAG military monitors had monitored the restriction of SADF troops to base, the withdrawal of most of those troops to South Africa and the restriction of the remaining 1,500 (Merlyn Force) to base at Grootfontein and Oshivello. In addition, UNTAG personnel had monitored the demobilization of citizen forces, commando units and ethnic forces, the dismantling of their command structures and the confinement of their arms and ammunition to drill halls guarded by UNTAG. The infantry battalions had also guarded bases and other installations, including the reception centres set up by UNHCR. UNTAG also established a detachment of military monitors in Lubango, Angola, with a liaison office in Luanda, to verify confinement to base by the Angolan Armed Forces of SWAPO combatants remaining in Angola. In that aspect UNTAG had encountered problems, particularly at the start of its mandate in April (see above). The great majority of SWAPO combatants had, however, by October returned to Namibia as unarmed civilians under the UNHCR repatriation programme, with fewer than 300 of them remaining in Angola in the vicinity of Lubango.

The UNTAG military component had also been able to play an important role in monitoring the cessation of hostile acts by all parties, keeping the borders under surveillance and preventing infiltration. All crossing points from South Africa and Walvis Bay were monitored by means of permanently manned check-points established by military monitors of UNTAG, who also patrolled along the borders. In the north, the Finnish and Malaysian battalions of UNTAG mounted as many daily patrols as their strength permitted. That work was shared with UNTAG police monitors, who accompanied the SWAPOL border patrols. Experience had shown that the military component could make a further contribution to creation of conditions for free and fair elections by regularly patrolling populated areas in order to strengthen confidence by advertising UNTAG'S presence.

UNTAG financing

Report of the Secretary-General. (For approval of the budget, see above, under "Pre-operational aspects".) In a December report,(16) the Secretary-General stated that assessments totalling $409,555,646 had been apportioned among Member States. Of that amount, contributions of $314,945,088 had been received as at 30 November. Contributions in the amount of $94,610,558 remained outstanding. The following donated voluntary contributions in cash and in kind: Federal Republic of Germany ($4.2 million), Greece ($350,000), Japan ($13 million), Switzerland ($1.6 million) and the United States ($4 million). The Secretary-General estimated the total requirements through 31 March 1990 at $366,890,000 (gross), which was $49,272,000 (gross) less than the original estimates; that figure included estimated liquidation costs of $6,469,000.

The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly defer until 1990 action as might be called for in consequence of the outstanding contributions of Member States. He requested Assembly approval of proposals regarding the disposition of UNTAG property upon completion of the mandate. Where suitable, equipment would be kept in reserve for other peace-keeping operations while other equipment would be made available to UN agencies in the process of establishing a presence in Namibia. Surplus equipment would be contributed to the duly recognized Government of Namibia.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in a December report,(17) noted that voluntary contributions in cash totalled $13,050,000 and the valuation of contributions in kind amounted to $10,103,109. It recommended that the costs associated with the liquidation and the closing of the accounts be met from the appropriations approved by the Assembly in resolution 43/232. It supported the Secretary-General's proposal to defer action concerning the outstanding contributions and agreed in principle to his proposed course regarding disposition of UNTAG property.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/191 without vote.

Financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group

The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989,

Reaffirming the direct and legal responsibility of the United Nations for Namibia until independence, as indicated in its resolution 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966 and its subsequent relevant resolutions on the question of Namibia,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, by which the Council established the United Nations Transition Assistance Group for a period of up to twelve months, as well as Council resolutions 629(1989) of 16 January 1989 and 632(1989) of 16 February 1989,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the Group and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking note, in particular, of paragraphs 9 and 10 of the report of the Secretary-General and paragraphs 10, 12 and 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee,

Recognizing that the costs of the Group are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of the Group,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Group with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Concerned that, as mentioned in paragraph 7 of the report of the Secretary-General, assessments totalling approximately 94.6 million United States dollars remain uncollected,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Group,

1. Concur with the observations, recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions to the United Nations Transition Assistance Group in full and on time;

3. Approves the request of the Secretary-General that he proceed with the disposition of the property of the Group upon completion of its mandate in the manner set out in annex III, paragraph 4, to his report and paragraph 10 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

4. Decides that the costs associated with the liquidation of the Group and the closing of the accounts, amounting to 6,469,000 dollars gross (5,625,000 dollars net), shall be met from the appropriations made available by the General Assembly in its resolution 43/232;

5. Also decides, taking into account the outstanding assessed contributions due to the Special Account of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group, to defer any action on the estimated unencumbered balance of the appropriations as may be called for until its forty-fifth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Group is administered with the maximum of efficiency and economy, bearing in mind the relevant observations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group";

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its forty-fifth session, a detailed performance report on the budget of the Group, in accordance with the observations made by the Advisory Committee in its report, in particular those made in paragraphs 7 and 8 thereof.

General Assembly resolution 44/191

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/891) without vote, 18 December (meeting 58); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/44/L.13); agenda item 136.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 56, 58; plenary 84.

Civilian police monitors

In January, the Secretary-General recommended that the number of civilian police monitors (CIVPOL) be increased from the 360 previously envisaged to 500, because of the substantial increase in SWAPOL numbers since 1978.(18)

In a 24 May letter(19) to the President of the Security Council, the Secretary-General recalled that, in consultations of 11 May, he had informed the Council that he had accepted in principle his Special Representative's recommendation that CIVPOL be further increased to 1,000. He was undertaking urgent consultations on the matter, including notification to ACABQ of the cost implications, following which he intended to dispatch an additional 500 CIVPOL to Namibia, starting in mid-June. On 26 May,(20) the Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council agreed to his proposal. Subsequently, experience on the ground led the Special Representative to recommend a further increase of 500 officers,(21) and the Council approved that increase on 28 September.(22)

The Secretary-General noted in an October report(12) that the UN plan entrusted to the South African Administrator-General the primary responsibility for the maintenance of law and order, for which he was to use existing police forces—SWAPOL. It had always been clear that SWAPOL's conduct would be one of the factors determining whether conditions existed for free and fair elections. Experience had confirmed the necessity of monitoring SWAPOL very closely. In that regard, the Secretary-General referred to the Koevoet issue (see above) and the misconduct of such personnel, who did not appear to understand or appreciate the role of civilian police officers. Wherever possible, CIVPOL accompanied SWAPOL on its patrols; it also conducted independent patrols of its own, on foot and by vehicle, including using mine-resistant vehicles in the north. In September, nearly 5,000 patrols were undertaken,

1,967 jointly with SWAPOL. The organizational and deployment format of UNTAG police monitors followed that of the existing police forces. They came under the authority of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General from his headquarters at Windhoek, and operated through a number of district headquarters situated throughout the Territory. Each district had several sub-stations or posts at strategic locations.

At the time of the October report, police monitors were contributed by the following 26 Member States: Austria, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Cameroon, Canada, Egypt, Germany, Federal Republic of, Fiji, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Jamaica, Kenya, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Singapore, Sweden, Tunisia.

The Secretary-General stated that CIVPOL had encountered a certain lack of co-operation by SWAPOL in some crucial areas of its operations. It had not been possible to reach agreement on the right of CIVPOL to visit detainees in the custody of SWAPOL stations. CIVPOL had been prevented by SWAPOL from being present when statements were taken from SWAPOL members accused of offences. In some instances, SWAPOL failed to inform CIVPOL accurately of patrol scheduling, making it difficult to ensure that all SWAPOL patrols were monitored, a particular problem when ex-Koevoet personnel were involved. SWAPOL did not always share with UNTAG information relevant to the security situation in Namibia, although it had itself made unsubstantiated allegations of imminent infiltration of SWAPOL combatants from southern Angola. The SWAPOL investigations of complaints from Namibians were closely monitored by CIVPOL, but in many cases they proceeded very slowly, so that several, including some serious cases of homicide, would not be completed within the transition period. CIVPOL also played an important role in the electoral process, attending and monitoring political gatherings, at which it had a calming effect, the Secretary-General stated. During the registration of voters, CIVPOL deployed monitors at all registration centres. During the elections, CIVPOL would be present at all polling stations.

In a November report,(15) the Secretary-General stated that the 1,500 police monitors would be adequate to enable CIVPOL to carry out its functions in current conditions. There had been an improvement in co-operation between SWAPOL and CIVPOL. Of the 1,500, some 1,100 would be deployed to specific duties relating to the election, including monitoring polling stations, round-the-clock guarding of ballot boxes (together with SWAPOL), and being present at the counting of votes, among other things. Their number was ade-

Amnesty and exile repatriation

The Secretary-General noted in an October report⁽¹²⁾ that, in accordance with the UN plan, granting of full and unqualified amnesty to all Namibian exiles was considered an essential prerequisite for their voluntary repatriation under UNHCR auspices. The draft Amnesty Proclamation proposed by the South African Administrator-General had made a distinction between political crimes and common law/statutory crimes, a distinction unacceptable to the Secretary-General. Protracted discussions between the Secretary-General and the South African authorities, in both Windhoek and New York, eventually led to agreement on an unqualified amnesty for all Namibian exiles. That was promulgated on 6 June 1989 and permitted the beginning of the repatriation operation, which had been delayed for several weeks pending agreement on the amnesty. The operation was entrusted to UNHCR, which established three air and three land entry points and five reception centres in central and northern Namibia to receive, register and materially assist the returnees. By 29 September, more than 41,000 Namibians from 46 countries had returned home, and all but 579 had resettled into their former communities. The cost had been $39.1 million (compared with the original estimate of $38.5 million). So far, $30.2 million had been pledged by the donor community, leaving $8.9 million still to be raised.

The return of so many exiles had created a reintegration problem. In order to address that situation, an inter-agency mission comprising representatives from the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), UNHCR and the World Health Organization (WHO), in consultation with the World Food Programme-visited Namibia in July/August and formulated proposals for an emergency rehabilitation programme of some $20 million regarding shelter, agriculture, health, education, water, income generation and family support.

Political prisoners and detainees

In an October report,⁽¹²⁾ the Secretary-General noted that the UN plan required the release of all Namibian political prisoners or political detainees. On 24 May, UNTAG military observers stationed in Angola were enabled to interview 201 former detainees who had been released by SWAPO. On 4 July, 153 ex-detainees, including 18 children, were repatriated to Namibia from Angola, followed by two further groups of 63 and 16, on 29 July and 8 August, respectively. On 20 July, 25 Namibian political prisoners were released by the South African authorities from the central prison in Windhoek. In the case of both the South African authorities and SWAPO, it was alleged that additional persons remained in detention and were yet to be released. Regarding South Africa, the Administrator-General had replied that persons on the lists submitted to him in 1989 had either been released or were unknown to the South African authorities. As for SWAPO, it had stated that it no longer held any detainees and it had invited the international community to investigate allegations that a number of people were still in SWAPO detention in Angola and Zambia or were otherwise unaccounted for.

A UN mission on detainees was sent to Angola and Zambia in September to ascertain whether any Namibians were still detained by SWAPO. The mission visited virtually all sites where people had reportedly been detained, and concluded (23) that there were no detainees in any of the alleged detention centres and other places which it had visited; that most locations, particularly in Angola, where detainees were allegedly held, had been evacuated and abandoned several weeks previously and were incapable of being used for detention purposes; that the vast majority of SWAPO members in both countries had already been repatriated; and that many of those remaining behind in the refugee settlements had already been to Namibia, registered for the elections and returned either to Angola or Zambia.

Repeal of laws

In his October report, (12) the Secretary-General noted that, in accordance with the UN plan, two Repeal Proclamations had been enacted regarding laws which might abridge or inhibit the holding of free and fair elections. The first was widely considered to have repealed the bulk of the discriminatory laws. At the request of the Special Representative, that Proclamation made provision for further repeals at the request of the public, while not prejudicing the Special Representative's right himself to call for further repeals. No member of the public had taken advantage of the provision. The Secretary-General and his Special Representative had, however, drawn the Administrator-General's attention on several occasions to the continued existence of the system of ethnic administration, whose repeal had been requested by the great majority of political parties in Namibia. The Administrator-General had so far taken the position that repeal of that system was outside the scope of the UN plan, as it did not abridge or inhibit the holding of free and fair elections. The Secretary-General continued to believe that the spirit, if not the letter, of the plan required the repeal of the legislation in question (Proclamation AG 8).

Media impartiality

In his October report,(12) the Secretary-General observed that the South West African Broadcasting Corporation (SWABC), for whose activities the Administrator-General had ultimate responsibility, was, in effect, the last essentially political body that had not been dissolved following agreement on the UN plan's implementation. Given SWABC's monopoly and the high degree of dependence on it by a society with a high illiteracy rate, there was a need to achieve total impartiality and even-handedness. Substantial reform was especially necessitated by the rapid change taking place in Namibia as a result of the long-delayed implementation of the transition to independence. In response to the Special Representative's repeated representations regarding equal access by the political parties to SWABC broadcasting facilities, the Administrator-General informed him on 15 September that registered parties would have equal access to set periods of air time, on both radio and television. The parties also agreed on the manner in which SWABC would give coverage to political meetings, news conferences and media releases. They also agreed to establish a standing consultative committee at which they would regularly meet with SWABC management. To ensure impartial editorial decision-making, the Special Representative was insisting that a management or editorial committee be created.

The Secretary-General reported that a full and integrated UNTAG information operation was under way, with daily radio broadcasts transmitted in all the main languages of the country since 12 June 1989, dealing with all aspects of the UNTAG mandate. Texts were regularly carried by the local news agencies and newspapers. Programmes were focused on familiarizing the electorate with all aspects of the electoral process, emphasizing such basic themes as the secrecy of the voting process. Since July, a weekly television slot had also been available to UNTAG at a peak viewing hour. Those programmes, and other materials produced by UNTAG, were also made available to the UNTAG regional and district offices. The offices played an important role in providing prompt and accurate information about the election to the people in their area. UNTAG civilian personnel had addressed countless meetings in every part of the country, the Secretary-General stated, and had made early and continuing contacts with community, party and other opinion-leaders. Many UNTAG offices had become established as the principal sources of objective and reliable information.

In his November report,(15) the Secretary-General reported that the Governing Board of SWABC had been pronounced to be in recess until further notice, with its position to be reconsidered after the election. The problem of editorial impartiality, however, remained unresolved. The Secretary-General said he would continue to press for essential reforms.

Elections

Pre-election activities

Electoral legislation

The basic objectives of Security Council resolution 435(1978)(1) were the withdrawal of South Africa's illegal administration from Namibia and transfer of power to the people of the Territory through free and fair elections under UN supervision. In accordance with the resolution, voters were to exercise their inalienable right to self-determination by choosing their representatives to a Constituent Assembly charged with drafting a constitution for an independent Namibia. The elections, to be held in November 1989, were to be supervised and controlled by UNTAG.

In an October report, (2) the Secretary-General stated that prolonged and difficult negotiations had been required to obtain agreement on amendments necessary to the Administrator-General's 21 July draft to make the Election (Constituent Assembly) Proclamation acceptable to the Secretary-General and his Special Representative. The negotiations were concluded on 6 October and published in an extraordinary Official Gazette on 13 October after being finalized by the Secretary-General's Special Representative and the Administrator-General.

The Secretary-General stated that because of the slow progress of the negotiations, it had been necessary to take earlier, separate action on the registration of political parties for the election, and an agreed Registration of Political Organization (Constituent Assembly) Proclamation was promulgated on 4 September. The polling period was set from Tuesday, 7 November, to Saturday, 11 November. In Windhoek, 11 political parties submitted applications to the Registration Court on or before its first sitting on 12 September. Of those, nine were immediately considered qualified, with the requisite 2,000 signatures of registered voters, and a further party qualified later, so that 10 parties were eligible to participate in the election.

In July, the Secretary-General convened at UNTAG headquarters in Windhoek a meeting of leaders of all the major political parties, at which he suggested they should have regular meetings with his Special Representative. Those took place fortnightly thereafter, and, as a result, with the Special Representative as witness, nine of the parties signed a code of conduct on 12 September, mutually agreeing to regulate their electoral behaviour. The code contained 16 articles, dealing with such questions as intimidation; carrying of weapons; regulation and non-disruption of meetings and rallies; use of violent or inflammatory language; secrecy of the ballot; non-destruction of others' campaign materials; access to all voters; systems of communications and liaison; and self-policing and self-enforcement. Most importantly, the parties also undertook to accept and respect the outcome of the elections if certified as free and fair by the Special Representative. Meetings of all parties, similar to those held in Windhoek, took place throughout the Territory at virtually all UNTAG regional and district offices, chaired by the UNTAG regional director or district head, to discuss matters of common concern arising from the electoral process.

The Secretary-General reported(3) that registration of voters began on 3 July and ended on 23 September. He said the process took place in an orderly way, without serious incident and under the close supervision and control of UNTAG. More than 701,000 voters were registered, with only 593 applications rejected in the 23 electoral districts. Some 350 polling stations were to be established, with the possibility of 15 more in the most populated areas. An issue of concern had been the presence among the registrants of approximately 10,000 persons normally resident in South Africa, who were made eligible to vote under the applicable legislation.(4)

In a letter to the Security Council(5) dated 10 October, the Secretary-General stated that the estimated number of electoral supervisors was too low; some 1,395 would be required to supervise the voting. The Security Council agreed to that proposal on 17 October.(6) Subsequently in November, the Secretary-General reported(3) that 1,695 electoral personnel were in Namibia, their training was complete and they had been deployed to their electoral regions. Besides UN and agency staff, those included 885 electoral personnel made available by 27 Governments.

Obstacles

On 18 October, Kenya, on behalf of the African Group, requested(7) an urgent meeting of the Security Council regarding the grave situation prevailing in Namibia. Also on 18 October, Kenya transmitted to the Secretary-General a statement(8) issued by the African Group on his October report,(2) which the Group said had exposed some serious continuing obstacles to implementing the UN plan. It confirmed that South Africa had not fully complied with the plan's letter and spirit; the Group said that raised serious concerns as to whether conditions existed for the holding of free and fair elections. In particular, the Group commented on the failure to demobilize two bushmen battalions; Koevoet elements in SWAPOL; the late issuance of the Electoral Proclamation; non-issuance of legislation on the Constituent Assembly; non-repeal of the system of ethnic administration; and registration of South Africans to vote.

South Africa transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a communiqué(9) issued on 18 October following a further meeting of the Joint Commission of Angola, Cuba and South Africa. Among other things, the Commission called for an urgent solution to the Koevoet issue, to which South Africa undertook to provide a timely response, and took measures to confirm, on the spot, the demobilization of the bushmen battalions.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

On 31 October, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 643(1989).

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its relevant resolutions on the question of Namibia, in particular resolutions 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 629(1989) of 16 January 1989, 632(1989) of 16 February 1989 and 640(1989) of 29 August 1989,

Reaffirming also that the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, contained in resolution 435(1978), remains the only internationally accepted basis for the peaceful settlement of the Namibia question,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 6 October 1989 and the addendum thereto of 16 October 1989,

Note with deep concern that, one week before the scheduled elections in Namibia, all the provisions of resolution 435(1978) are not being fully complied with,

Noting the progress made so far in the implementation of the settlement plan and the remaining obstacles placed in its way as well as the efforts being exerted by the United Nations Transition Assistance Group to carry out its responsibilities,

Reaffirming the continuing legal responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia until the full attainment by the Namibian people of national independence,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General and the addendum thereto;

2. Expresses its full support for the Secretary-General in his efforts to ensure that resolution 435(1978) is fully implemented in its original and definitive form;

3. Expresses its firm determination to implement resolution 435(1978) in its original and definitive form in order to ensure holding of free and fair elections in Namibia under the supervision and control of the United Nations;

4. Reaffirm its commitment in carrying out the continuing legal responsibility over Namibia until its independence to ensure the unfettered and effective exercise by the people of Namibia of their inalienable rights to self-determination and genuine national independence in accordance with resolutions 435(1978) and 640(1989);

5. Demands immediate, full and strict compliance by all parties concerned, in particular South Africa, with the terms of resolutions 435(1978), 632(1989) and 640(1989);

6. Reiterates its demand for the complete disbandment of all remaining paramilitary and ethnic forces and commando units, in particular the Koevoet and the South-West Africa Territorial Force as well as the complete dismantling of their command structures, and other defence-related institutions as required by resolutions 435(1978) and 640(1989);

7. Requests the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts to ensure the immediate replacement of the remaining South African Defence Force personnel in accordance with resolution 435(1978);

8. Demands the immediate repeal of such remaining restrictive and discriminatory laws and regulations as inhibit the holding of free and fair elections and that no such new laws be introduced and endorses the position of the Secretary-General as expressed in his report that Proclamation AG 8 should be repealed;

9. Invites the Secretary-General to keep under constant review the adequacy of the number of police monitors in order to undertake the process for any appropriate increase that he may deem necessary for the effective fulfilment of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group's responsibilities;

10. Demands that the South-West Africa Police extend full co-operation to the Group civil police in carrying out the tasks entrusted to it under the settlement plan;

11. Mandates the Secretary-General to ensure that all necessary arrangements are made in accordance with the settlement plan to safeguard the territorial integrity and security of Namibia in order to ensure a peaceful transition to national independence, and to assist the Constituent Assembly in the discharge of responsibilities entrusted to it under the settlement plan;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare appropriate plans for mobilizing all forms of assistance, including technical, material and financial resources, for the people of Namibia during the period following the elections for the Constituent Assembly until the accession to independence;

13. Urgently appeals to Member States, United Nations agencies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to extend, in co-ordination with the Secretary-General, generous financial, material and technical support to the Namibian people, both during the transitional period and after independence;

14. Decides that, if the pertinent provisions of the present resolution are complied with, the Security Council shall convene as required before the elections to review the situation and consider appropriate action;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution as soon as possible;

16. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Secretary-General (November).

In a 3 November report,(3) the Secretary-General stated that in the past month the situation in Namibia had remained calm. However, UNTAG had received numerous allegations from South Africa that concentrations of SWAPO combatants were present in parts of southern Angola, allegations denied by Sam Nujoma, President of SWAPO, who said the entire People's Liberation Army of Namibia had been demobilized and that virtually all its personnel had returned, unarmed, to Namibia. Moreover, the entire SWAPO leadership had returned to the Territory. Patrols conducted by UNTAG and the Angolan Armed Forces had found no evidence of the concentrations alleged by South Africa. The most recent South African allegation was made on 1 November, claiming that intercepted internal UNTAG messages had reported an imminent incursion into Namibia from Angola by SWAPO combatants. The Secretary-General stated that he had established that the messages were fraudulent, not emanating from any UNTAG source.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (November)

On 3 November, following consultations, the President of the Security Council issued a statement(10) deploring South Africa's false alarm of 1 November and calling on South Africa to desist from any such further actions. The Council expressed profound concern about the incident, as well as the political implications for the elections of the initial South African reaction.

Election results

Report of the Secretary-General. In a post-election report,(11) the Secretary-General said elections for a Constituent Assembly of 72 members were held from 7 to 11 November. Some 358 polling stations were established in Namibia for the voting, comprising 215 fixed locations and 143 mobile polling stations. The Special Representative was assisted in the process by some 1,700 electoral supervisors drawn from the UN system, including the military component of UNTAG, and from 27 Member States of the United Nations. Additionally, 1,023 police monitors participated in the exercise. UNTAG electoral personnel supervised some 2,500 counterparts appointed by the Administrator-General in connection with the poll. UNTAG electoral supervisors were trained in their functions of supervision and control of the electoral process at four training centres in the Territory over a four-day period.

In accordance with the provisions of the UN plan, the elections were organized and conducted by the Administrator-General under the supervision and control of the UN Special Representative. More than 96 per cent of the electorate was estimated to have participated in the elections. After the poll and prior to commencement of the count, the Special Representative announced that, while there had been a few minor incidents, he was satisfied that the process had gone smoothly and that it had been free and fair, and in accordance with the provisions of Security Council resolution 435(1978).⁽¹⁾ The counting of the votes began on 13 November and was completed early on 14 November. The elections resulted in the following distribution of seats (based on proportional representation) in the Constituent Assembly: SWAPO, 41 (57.3 per cent of vote); Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DTA), 21 (28.5 per cent); United Democratic Front, 4 (5.6 per cent); Aksie Christelik Nasionaal, 3 (3.5 per cent); National Patriotic Front of Namibia, 1 (1.6 per cent); Federal Convention of Namibia, 1 (1.6 per cent); and Namibia National Front, 1 (0.8 per cent). The Christian Democratic Action for Social Justice, Namibia National Democratic Party and South West Africa People's Organization—Democrats did not obtain sufficient votes to obtain an Assembly seat.

On 14 November, after full scrutiny of the procedures, and after contacting the Secretary-General, the Special Representative certified that the electoral process, at every stage, had been free and fair and conducted to his satisfaction.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 November, following consultations, the President of the Security Council issued a statement⁽¹²⁾ on behalf of the Council members, in which they welcomed with satisfaction the successful conclusion of the elections in Namibia, paving the way for the convening of the Constituent Assembly and Namibia's early independence, at a date to be determined by the Assembly.

Constituent Assembly

Report of the Secretary-General. In a further November report,⁽¹³⁾ the Secretary-General stated that the Constituent Assembly held its first meeting on 23 November at the Tinten Palast, Windhoek, presided over by Sam Nujoma, President of SWAPO, the majority party, as provided for in the Constituent Assembly Proclamation. In a secret ballot for the office of Chairman of the Assembly, Hage Geingob (SWAPO) was elected over A. Matjila (DTA). The Assembly endorsed by acclamation that the 1982 principles concerning the Constituent Assembly and the Constitution for an independent Namibia⁽¹⁴⁾ would serve as the framework for the drafting of the Constitution. On 28 November, the Assembly adopted its rules of procedure. Discussions on the draft Constitution continued through the remainder of the year.

Special Committee mission

The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples decided in August to send a visiting mission to Namibia to monitor the decolonization process, in particular to observe the preparations for the elections and the elections themselves. The mission visited Namibia from 29 October to 17 November. In a December report⁽⁴⁾ to the General Assembly, it reviewed the situation in Namibia before and during the elections and concluded that the elections had been held in conformity with established UN standards of decolonization. The people of Namibia had freely chosen representatives to determine their political future, the mission stated.

Economic and social issues

Transnational corporations

The Commission on Transnational Corporations (TNCs) held its fifteenth session in New York in April⁽¹⁾ (see PART THREE, Chapter V). In regard to Namibia, it had before it three reports of the Secretary-General: a February report, ⁽²⁾ in response to a 1980 Economic and Social Council resolution,⁽³⁾ regarding the responsibilities of home countries with respect to TNCs operating in Namibia in violation of UN resolutions and decisions; another February report⁽⁴⁾ on activities of TNCs in Namibia and collaboration of such corporations with the racist minority régime; and a March report⁽⁵⁾ on follow-up to the recommendations of the Panel of Eminent Persons that had conducted public hearings on TNCs in Namibia in 1985.⁽⁶⁾

In a July report,⁽⁷⁾ the United Nations Centre on TNCs gave an overview of the Namibian economy, especially the activities of TNCs in Namibia, and future prospects for foreign investments after independence. Stating that the Namibian economy had evolved as an appendage of the South African economy and reflected the latter's apartheid structure, the report stressed that the new Namibian Government would need to take urgent policy decisions on the role of TNCs.

In an August report,(8) the Centre stated that TNCs in Namibia had contributed little to its economic development, and those operating in mining and fishing had operated at levels that depleted scarce resources. The high profits had been repatriated, usually to South Africa, with little or no new investment. As a result, net investment had been negative for some time. In addition, TNCs had made no attempt to educate the local labour force, the report stated.

The Commission on TNCs, after detailed discussions, took note(1) of the three reports of the Secretary-General. It also approved an information programme for the public hearings on the role of TNCs in South Africa and Namibia, to be held in September (see PART TWO, Chapter I).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/84 by recorded vote.

Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Namibia and in all other Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Namibia and in all other Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration, 35/118 of 11 December 1980, the annex to which contains the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration, and 40/56 of 2 December 1985 on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration, as well as all other resolutions of the United Nations relating to the item,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming also that any economic or other activity that impedes the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and obstructs efforts aimed at the elimination of colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa and other colonial Territories is in direct violation of the rights of the inhabitants and of the principles of the Charter and all relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Reaffirming further that the natural resources of all Territories under colonial and racist domination are the heritage of the peoples of those Territories and that the depletive exploitation of those resources by foreign economic interests constitutes a direct violation of the rights of the peoples and of the principles of the Charter and all relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity,

Condemning the intensified activities of those foreign economic, financial and other interests that continue to exploit the natural and human resources of the colonial Territories and to accumulate and repatriate huge profits to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants, thereby impeding the realization by the peoples of the Territories of their legitimate aspirations for self-determination and independence,

Strongly condemning the investment of foreign capital in the production of uranium and the collaboration by certain Western and other countries with the racist minority régime of South Africa in the nuclear field which, by providing that régime with nuclear equipment and technology, enable it to develop nuclear and military capabilities and to become a nuclear Power, thereby strengthening its abhorrent system of apartheid,

Concerned about any foreign economic, financial and other activities which continue to deprive the indigenous populations of colonial Territories, including certain Territories in the Caribbean and the Pacific Ocean regions, of their rights over the wealth of their countries, and concerned that the inhabitants of those Territories continue to suffer from a loss of land ownership as a result of the failure of the administering Powers concerned to restrict the sale of land to foreigners, despite the repeated appeals of the General Assembly,

Conscious of the continuing need to mobilize world public opinion against the involvement of foreign economic, financial and other interests in the exploitation of natural and human resources, which impedes the independence of colonial Territories and the elimination of racism, particularly in South Africa, and emphasizing the importance of action by local authorities, trade unions, religious bodies, academic institutions, mass media, solidarity movements and other non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, in applying pressure on transnational corporations to refrain from any investment or activity in South Africa, in encouraging a policy of systematic divestment of any financial or other interest in corporations doing business with South Africa and in counteracting all forms of collaboration with the apartheid régime,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of dependent Territories to self-determination and independence and to the enjoyment of the natural resources of their Territories, as well as their right to dispose of those resources in their best interests;

2. Reiterates that any administering or occupying Power that deprives the colonial peoples of the exercise of their legitimate rights over their natural resources or subordinates the rights and interests of those peoples to foreign economic and financial interests violates the solemn obligations it has assumed under the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirm that, by their depletive exploitation of natural resources, the continued accumulation and repatriation of huge profits and the use of those profits for the enrichment of foreign settlers and the perpetuation of colonial domination and racial discrimination in the Territories, the activities of foreign economic, financial and other interests operating at present in the colonial Territories constitute a major obstacle to political independence and racial equality, as well as to the enjoyment of the natural resources of those Territories by the indigenous inhabitants;

4. Condemns those activities of foreign economic and other interests in the colonial Territories that are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination;

5. Strongly condemns the collaboration of the Governments of certain Western Powers, Israel and other countries with the racist minority régime of South Africa in the nuclear field and calls upon those and all other Governments concerned to refrain from supplying that régime, directly or indirectly, with installations, equipment or material that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium and other nuclear materials, reactors or military equipment;

6. Strongly condemns the collaboration with the racist minority régime of South Africa of the Governments of certain Western and other countries as well as transnational corporations that continue to make new investments in South Africa and supply the régime with armaments, nuclear technology and all other materials that are likely to buttress it and thus aggravate the threat to world peace;

7. Calls upon all States, in particular certain Western and other States, to take urgent, effective measures to terminate all collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa in the political, economic, trade, military and nuclear fields and to refrain from entering into other relations with that régime in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and of the Organization of African Unity;

8. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of its resolutions 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970 and 43/29 of 22 November 1988, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in colonial Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises and to prevent new investments that run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories;

9. Calls upon those oil-producing and oil-exporting countries that have not yet done so to take effective measures against the oil companies concerned so as to terminate the supply of crude oil and petroleum products to the racist regime of South Africa;

10. Reiterates that the exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of colonial Territories by foreign economic interests, including the activities of those transnational corporations that are engaged in the exploitation and export of the natural resources of the Territories, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, are illegal and are a grave threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

11. Reiterates its request to all States, pending the imposition of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa, to take legislative, administrative and other measures, individually or collectively, as appropriate, in order effectively to isolate South Africa politically, economically, militarily and culturally, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and encourages those Governments that have recently taken certain unilateral sanction measures against the South African régime to take further measures;

12. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system, having regard to the relevant provisions of the Declaration on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, contained in General Assembly resolution 3201(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, and of the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, contained in Assembly resolution 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, to ensure, in particular, that the permanent sovereignty of the colonial Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

13. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the colonial Territories to their natural resources, as well as their right to establish and maintain control over the future development of those natural resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

14. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to abolish all discriminatory and unjust wage systems and working conditions prevailing in the Territories under their administration and to apply in each Territory a uniform system of wages to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, a sustained and broad campaign with a view to informing world public opinion of the facts concerning the pillaging of natural resources in colonial Territories and the exploitation of their indigenous populations by foreign economic interests;

16. Appeals to mass media, trade unions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to co-ordinate and intensify their efforts to mobilize international public opinion against the policy of the apartheid régime of South Africa and to work for the enforcement of economic and other sanctions against that regime and for encouraging a policy of systematic and genuine divestment from corporations doing business in South Africa;

17. Decides to continue to monitor closely the situation in the remaining colonial Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interests of the indigenous peoples, at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories and at speeding their accession to independence and, in that connection, requests the administering Powers concerned to ensure that the peoples of the Territories under their administration are not exploited for political, military and other purposes detrimental to their interests;

18. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Women and children

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its thirty-third session (29 March-7 April)(9) (see PART THREE, Chapter XIII), following consideration of a report by the Secretary-General on developments in the situation of women and children in Namibia(10) (see also PART TWO, Chapter I), recommended a resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 May, on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/31 without vote.

Women and children in Namibia

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the full implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, concerning the independence of Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 1988/24 of 26 May 1988, in which it expressed deep concern at the suffering of Namibian women under South African occupation,

Recalling also the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 259, which calls for the speedy and effective implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978),

Recognizing that the agreement recently reached on Namibian independence under Security Council resolution 435(1978) provides a historic opportunity for the Namibian people to realize their right to self-determination following 104 years of colonial domination,

Noting that with the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) on 1 April 1989, Namibia faces a crucial transitional period, with an election campaign commencing on 1 July 1989 and the election scheduled for early November 1989, and that it is incumbent upon the international community to take immediate action to ensure that the elections render the justice and freedom to which the Namibian people have the right,

Bearing in mind that the repatriation of Namibian refugees from neighbouring States, which is scheduled to take place from 15 May to 30 June 1989, poses special problems that require massive humanitarian assistance,

1. Urges Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to make resources available to assist in making the repatriation process as smooth as possible and to continue material and financial support to Namibian women and children during the transitional period;

2. Urges all parties to respect the process of implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978), in order to ensure independence for Namibia;

3. Invites the Commission on the Status of Women to help raise international consciousness of the special circumstances and concerns of Namibian women;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to encourage and give special attention to the full and equal participation of Namibian women, in both registration and voting;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session a comprehensive report on the implementation and monitoring of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women regarding women and children in Namibia.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/31

24 May 1989 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/90) without vote, 16 May (meeting 16); draft by Commission on women (E/1989/27/Rev.1); agenda item 10.

Human Rights Commission action. By a resolution(11) of 23 February 1989, the Commission on Human Rights reiterated its condemnation of the detention, torture and inhuman treatment of children in South Africa and Namibia; appealed to the international community to adopt concrete and effective measures to bring pressure to bear against the Government of South Africa until it dismantled apartheid; and requested the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa to pay special attention to the question of detention, torture and other inhuman treatment of children in South Africa and Namibia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December 1989, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/143, on torture and inhuman treatment of children in detention in South Africa and Namibia, in which the Commission on Human Rights was requested to pay special attention to the children of Namibia who had been victims of torture, detention and other inhuman treatment by the apartheid régime, with a view to rehabilitating them.

Other UN activities

Council for Namibia

In its annual report to the General Assembly,(1) the United Nations Council for Namibia made an assessment of the political situation in the Territory, stating that a convergence of factors had pushed the South African régime towards a political settlement. One factor was the escalating cost of its continued military occupation of Namibia, estimated at $1.5 million a day in 1984 and reported to have risen to $1 billion annually by 1988. At the same time, South Africa had sustained heavy losses in men and equipment during its 1988 incursions into Angola, and high casualties among white soldiers had made the war increasingly unpopular among white segments of the population.

While the Council continued to carry out its mandate as legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, in view of the commencement on 1 April 1989 of the implementation of resolution 435(1978) (see above, under "UN Transition Assistance Group"), it adjusted its work programme to focus on mobilization of development assistance to Namibia. During the year, it organized three major seminars-on contingency planning for technical assistance to Namibia during the transition to independence (Vienna, 24-28 July);(2) on the integration of Namibia into the regional structures for economic co-operation and development in southern Africa (Harare, Zimbabwe, 23-27 October);(3) and on the role of the United Nations regarding technical assistance for an independent Namibia (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 4-8 December).(4)

ing the transition to independence and the immediate post-independence period; to draw up proposals for sectoral contingency plans which would ensure the functioning of essential services during that time; and to consider the co-operation and assistance of donors, international agencies and other organizations during the same period. It was attended by 50 participants, including 12 Namibian experts, representatives of specialized agencies, other UN organizations and national and international aid agencies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The seminar noted that, in a number of areas, appropriate channels for assistance in the immediate term already existed via Namibian NGOs, such as the Council of Churches in Namibia and other church groups, but there was still a need to provide assistance to maintain certain crucial services currently being provided by territorial government units responsible to the South African Administrator-General. In its final document, the seminar made specific recommendations for immediate technical assistance in the 10 socio-economic sectors under consideration.

The purpose of the Harare seminar was to assess areas of Namibia's economic dependence on South Africa, to develop plans and programmes intended to reduce such dependence in the context of the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference and other regional structures for economic co-operation and development in southern Africa, and to define and assess priority areas of international assistance in the implementation of those measures and programmes. The overall conclusion was that Namibia's economic dependence on South Africa was almost total. The seminar concluded that the integration of its economy into that of South Africa was unparalleled in southern Africa. The reduction of economic dependence on South Africa would be difficult and a long-term exercise, but prospects were good because there was no natural dependence. The seminar made recommendations regarding the mining sector; agricultural and food security; fisheries; industrial development; energy; transport and communications; manpower development; trade development; water resources development; and the financial and monetary system.

The purpose of the Rio de Janeiro seminar was to assess the development and technical assistance needs of an independent Namibia, to increase understanding and support for those needs in the international community, and to consider the role of the UN system in mobilizing resources to meet them. Participants included representatives of the United Nations, specialized agencies, other inter-governmental and regional organizations, the Brazilian Agency for Co-operation, and a delegation of Namibians who were expected to assume important policy-making technical positions in Namibia after independence. In its final document, the seminar made recommendations in all areas concerning economic and social development in Namibia, divided into sections on agriculture, rural development and fisheries; trade and industry; utilities, transport and communications; health, shelter, education, labour and human resources development; and monetary and fiscal matters.

UN Commissioner for Namibia

The annual report⁽¹⁾ of the Council for Namibia summarized the work of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, stating that in 1989 the Commissioner, acting through his offices in New York, Gaborone (Botswana), Luanda (Angola) and Lusaka (Zambia), continued to protect Namibian interests through the issuance of travel documents and through efforts to ensure implementation of the 1974 Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia.⁽⁵⁾ The Commissioner was also engaged in the provision of assistance to Namibians and the mobilization of international support for the Namibian cause. His Office administered assistance programmes under the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see below).

The Luanda Office of the Commissioner, where SWAPO maintained its provisional headquarters and in a country where over 90 per cent of Namibians in exile were based, continued to play an active role in the co-ordination of assistance to Namibians and the monitoring of political developments in Namibia. Under the field attachment programme, the Office helped place Namibians in various training fields. It co-operated in the crash-course training in the United Republic of Tanzania of 400 Namibian students as immigration, customs and excise officers. Following agreements on resolving the conflicts in south-western Africa, which resulted in the commencement of the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978), the Luanda Office collaborated with the UNHCR in the registration and repatriation of 35,000 Namibian exiles to Namibia to enable them to participate in the independence process. It also issued 500 travel documents of the Council for Namibia to Namibians.

UN Fund for Namibia

The Council for Namibia, in its annual report,⁽¹⁾ summarized the international assistance programmes of the UN Fund for Namibia. The Fund, for which voluntary contributions were the major financial source, continued to serve in the first half of 1989 as the main instrument through which the Council for Namibia, acting as its trustee, channelled assistance to the Namibians. The Fund had three main programmes with special accounts: the Nationhood Programme for Namibia; the United Nations Institute for Namibia; and educational, social and relief assistance (General Account). Fund expenditures for the three programmes totalled $5,590,765 from January to June 1989 as follows: Nationhood Programme, $787,221; Institute, $1,529,849; and General Account, $3,273,695.

The Nationhood Programme consisted of two major components: manpower training programmes, and surveys and analyses of Namibian economic and social sectors, including identification of development tasks and policy options. Under manpower training, hundreds of Namibians continued their training at various institutions, mostly in African countries. They were trained in a variety of professions, trades and crafts, including land use and human settlements development, food distribution, labour administration, radio programming, rural development, agriculture, truck mechanics, cartography, cargo handling, port management, fish processing, air traffic control, health services, mining, railway operations and leatherwork. The UN Vocational Training Centre at Cuacra, Angola, continued to operate during 1989 at full capacity. It offered six trades: auto mechanics, machine shop and fitting, electrical installations, plumbing, carpentry, and building and construction. During 1989, a transitional plan for the gradual phasing out of the Centre in Angola and the transfer of activities to an independent Namibia was prepared.

The UN Institute for Namibia, located in Lusaka, continued to train middle-level skilled manpower for an independent Namibia and carried out applied research in various sectors of the Namibian economy. In 1989, the tenth graduating group, comprising 123 students, was awarded diplomas in management and development studies, bringing the total number of Institute graduates in that field to 888. The Institute's diploma was underwritten by the University of Zambia. In addition, 29 students were awarded teaching diplomas in basic education, and 36 students received certificates in secretarial training programmes, bringing the Institute's total number of graduates from its various programmes since its inception to 1,266.

In January 1989, the Senate Research Committee, created to guide all Institute research, adopted a transitional plan for the gradual transfer of the Institute's activities to an independent Namibia. In accordance with the plan, no new intake of students was accepted for 1989. The Namibian Extension Unit, established in 1981, continued during the first half of 1989 to expand its distance education programme for Namibians who had been denied education by the South African administration in Namibia. It continued to serve several thousand Namibian adults and youths in Zambia and Angola, and plans were drawn up for the transfer of its activities to an independent Namibia. The total expenditure of the Institute during the first six months of 1989 was $1,529,849.

Educational, social and relief assistance, especially in the form of scholarships, was the main activity financed by the Fund's General Account in 1989. It was also used to finance vocational and technical training; provide assistance in health and medical care, nutrition and social welfare; acquire books and periodicals for Namibian refugee camps and SWAPO offices; and facilitate the attendance of Namibian representatives at international seminars, meetings and conferences. During 1989, the demand for scholarships continued to increase. As at 30 June, 255 Namibians were being sponsored under the scholarship programme.

In the first half of the year, 38 countries contributed more than $8 million to the Fund: $2,023,706 to the Nationhood Programme, $5,090,394 to the Institute, and $1,246,853 to the General Account. In addition, the Fund received financing from the UN regular budget; for 1989, the General Assembly allocated $1.5 million from the regular budget. Funding was also provided by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP): in 1988,(6) the UNDP Governing Council had increased the indicative planning figure for Namibia for the 1987-1991 programming cycle to $10.6 million.

UN Educational and Training Programme

In a report to the General Assembly,(7) the Secretary-General stated that the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa, between 1 September 1988 and 31 August 1989, granted 11 new scholarships to Namibians and extended 431, in addition to those financed by the UN Fund for Namibia.

System-wide activities

UNDP

By a 30 June 1989 decision,(8) the Governing Council of UNDP urged the Administrator to establish a trust fund for Namibia to mobilize resources for preparatory activities and the preparation of contingency plans during the transitional period leading to independence. The UNDP Trust Fund for Namibia was established on 18 September and became operational on 23 November, following the approval of the first project to be financed from the Fund's resources.(9) Representatives of the UN Department of Technical Cooperation for Development, in collaboration with the UN Statistical Office, undertook a mission to Namibia from 22 October to 10 November to prepare population estimates and estimates of gross domestic product.

Other agencies

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly on agency assistance to Namibia in 1989. UNESCO contributed to the education of Namibian refugees in southern Africa and, after the start of the repatriation, within Namibia by: providing teaching material and educational equipment; paying for support staff for SWAPO education centres; executing UNDP-financed education projects, providing training for candidates sponsored by SWAPO; and training teachers for SWAPO education centres. UNESCO assistance was also designated to provide a basis for planning a post-apartheid society. The International Labour Organisation (ILO) actively collaborated with the UN Commissioner for Namibia, especially in programmes of technical assistance within the framework of the Nationhood Programme. ILO activities covered vocational training, rehabilitation, employment planning and creation, rural development, migrant workers and fellowship schemes. ICAO provided advice to the Commissioner for Namibia regarding placement of trained personnel in the civil aviation departments and airlines of other African countries to obtain practical experience.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) indicated its readiness to help Namibia in areas of IMF competence, as and when asked by the Secretary-General. WHO organized a joint mission composed of staff of WHO Headquarters and the African Regional Office to Namibia during 1989. FAO assisted SWAPO with emergency food and carried out surveys and analyses of policy options on various aspects of Namibia's agriculture. Projects included contingency plans for fisheries, formulation of plans for the protection of food supplies and nutrition, preparation of agrarian reform and settlement programmes, formulation of programmes for agricultural education and an assessment of land suitability for various types of agricultural activity.

PART FIVE

Legal questions

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 1989, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) continued to deal with five contentious cases. Three new disputes were referred to it, and a request for an advisory opinion was received. During the year, the Court delivered one Judgment, one advisory opinion and 10 Orders.

The General Assembly and the Security Council independently held elections in April to fill a vacancy created by the death in 1988 of Judge Nagendra Singh. In December, the Court, following the death of one of the ad hoc judges in one of the Chambers, issued an Order on the composition of that Chamber.

On 8 February and 7 August, Zaire and Guinea-Bissau, respectively, deposited with the Secretary-General a declaration recognizing as compulsory the jurisdiction of the Court, as contemplated by Article 36 of the ICJ Statute.

In November, the General Assembly declared 1990-1999 to be the United Nations Decade of International Law. In December, for the fourth time the Assembly called for full and immediate compliance with the Court's 1986 Judgment in the case concerning Military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States).

Judicial work of the Court

In 1989, at the request of the Economic and Social Council, the Court delivered an advisory opinion in the case of the Applicability of Article VI, Section 22, of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations. A Chamber of the Court gave a Judgment in the case concerning Elettronica Sicula S.P.A. (ELSI) (United States v. Italy).

The 1989 activities of ICJ were described in two reports to the General Assembly, covering the periods 1 August 1988 to 31 July 1989⁽¹⁾ and 1 August 1989 to 31 July 1990.⁽²⁾ By decision 44/405 of 1 November 1989, the Assembly took note of the 1988/89 report.

Military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States)

The question of responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in Nicaragua had been before ICJ since 1984.⁽³⁾ In its Judgment of 27 June 1986⁽⁴⁾ on the merits of the case, the Court had found, inter alia, that the United States was under an obligation to make reparation to Nicaragua for all injury caused by certain breaches of obligations under international law committed by the United States. It had further decided that the form and amount of such reparation, failing agreement between the Parties, would be settled by the Court in the subsequent procedure of the case. After a 1987 Court Order⁽⁵⁾ had fixed specific time-limits for written proceedings on the form and amount of reparation, Nicaragua duly filed its Memorial on 29 March 1988,⁽⁶⁾ but the United States did not file a Counter-Memorial within the prescribed time-limit. No further developments took place.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 December 1989, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/43 by recorded vote.

Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 27 June 1986 concerning military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua: need for immediate compliance

The General Assembly,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 530(1983) of 19 May 1983 and 562(1985) of 10 May 1985, and General Assembly resolution 41/31 of 3 November 1986, 42/18 of 12 November 1987 and 43/11 of 25 October 1988,

Aware that, under the Charter of the United Nations, the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations and that each Member undertakes to comply with the decision of the Court in any case to which it is a party,

Considering that Article 36, paragraph 6, of the Statute of the Court provides that "in the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court",

Recalling the Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 27 June 1986 in the case of "Military and Paramilitary Activities in and against Nicaragua",

Having considered the events that have taken place in and against Nicaragua since the Judgment was rendered, in particular the continued financing by the United States of America of military and other activities in and against Nicaragua,

Emphasizing the obligation of States, under customary international law, not to intervene in the internal affairs of other States,

1. Reiterates once again its urgent call for full and immediate compliance with the Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 27 June 1986 in the case of "Military and Paramilitary Activities in and against Nicaragua" in conformity with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly informed on the implementation of the present resolution;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 27 June 1986 concerning military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua: need for immediate compliance".

7 December 1989 Meeting 77 91-2-41 (recorded vote)

Draft by Nicaragua (A/44/L.52); agenda item 26.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Barbados, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cape Verde, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Kenya, Kuwait, Leo People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Mexico, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Seychelles, Solomon Islands, Spain, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Bahrain, Belgium, Brunei Darussalam, Central African Republic, Chad, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, Gambia, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Guatemala, Honduras, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Liberia, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritius, Morocco, Netherlands, Oman, Portugal, Rwanda, Samoa, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, United Kingdom, Yemen.

Border and transborder armed actions (Nicaragua v. Honduras)

Nicaragua had instituted proceedings on 28 July 1986⁽⁷⁾ alleging border and transborder armed actions, military attacks and threats of force from Honduras against it. In its Judgment of 20 December 1988,⁽⁸⁾ the Court had found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the Nicaraguan Application and that the latter was admissible. By an Order of 21 April 1989,⁽⁹⁾ the President of the Court fixed 19 September 1989 as the time-limit for the Memorial of Nicaragua and 19 February 1990 for the Counter-Memorial of Honduras. In an Order of 31 August,⁽¹⁰⁾ the President of the Court extended the time-limit for the Memorial to 8 December 1989 and reserved the question of extension of the time-limit for the Counter-Memorial. The Nicaraguan Memorial was filed within the prescribed time-limit.

On 13 December, the Agents of both Parties transmitted to the Court the text of an agreement⁽¹¹⁾ between the Presidents of the Central American countries, which included an agreement between the Presidents of Nicaragua and Honduras to seek an extra-judicial settlement of the dispute, and requesting the postponement of the date for fixing the time-limit for the Honduran Counter-Memorial until 11 June 1990. It was decided by a Court Order of 14 December 1989,⁽¹²⁾ that the time-limit would be extended to a date to be fixed by a subsequent Order after 11 June 1990.

Maritime delimitations in the area between Greenland and Jan Mayen (Denmark v. Norway)

On 16 August 1988, Denmark had instituted proceedings against Norway, requesting the Court to decide where a boundary should be drawn between Denmark's and Norway's fishing zones and continental shelf areas in the waters between the east coast of Greenland and the Norwegian island of Jan Mayen. In October 1988,⁽¹³⁾ the Court set time-limits for written proceedings. The Memorial of Denmark was duly filed on 1 August 1989.

Aerial incident of

3 July 1988 (Iran v. United States)

On 17 May 1989, Iran filed an Application instituting proceedings against the United States over the destruction of an Iranian aircraft and its 290 passengers and crew in Iranian airspace on 3 July 1988 by missiles launched from the guided-missile cruiser USS Vincennes. Iran contended that the United States had violated certain provisions of the 1944 Chicago Convention on International Civil Aviation and the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Civil Aviation and was responsible to pay compensation to Iran.

By an Order of 13 December 1989,⁽¹⁴⁾ the Court fixed 12 June 1990 as the time-limit for the filing of the Iranian Memorial and 10 December 1990 for the Counter-Memorial of the United States. Judge Oda appended a declaration to the Order of the Court; Judges Schwebel and Shahabuddeen appended separate opinions.

Certain phosphate lands in Nauru (Nauru v. Australia)

On 19 May 1989, the Republic of Nauru filed an Application instituting proceedings against Australia in a dispute concerning the rehabilitation of certain phosphate lands mined under Australian administration before Nauruan independence. Nauru claimed that Australia had breached the trusteeship obligations it had accepted under the Charter of the United Nations and the 1947 Trusteeship Agreement for Nauru.

On 18 July, the Court issued an Order⁽¹⁵⁾ fixing 20 April 1990 as the time-limit for the Memorial of Nauru and 21 January 1991 for the Counter-Memorial of Australia.

Arbitral award of

31 July 1989 (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal)

On 23 August 1989, Guinea-Bissau filed an Application instituting proceedings against Senegal in a dispute concerning the validity of the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 by the Arbitration Tribunal formed to determine the maritime boundary between the two States. In its Application, Guinea-Bissau claimed that the Tribunal's decision, though supposed to serve as an award, did not in fact amount to one, and asked the Court to declare the decision inexistent, null and void, and that Senegal was not justified in seeking to require Guinea-Bissau to apply it. Guinea-Bissau chose Hubert Thierry as judge ad hoc.

By an Order of 1 November 1989,(16) the Court fixed 2 May 1990 as the time-limit for the Memorial of Guinea-Bissau and 31 October 1990 for the Counter-Memorial of Senegal.

Land, island and maritime frontier dispute (El Salvador/Honduras)

In 1986,(17) El Salvador and Honduras had submitted to the Court a Special Agreement requesting the formation of a Chamber to deal with their frontier dispute. The Court had acceded to the request in 1987,(18) and fixed 1 June 1988 as the time-limit for the filing of Memorials. Both Parties complied with the prescribed time-limit.

Following a joint request by El Salvador and Honduras, the President of the Chamber extended the time-limits for Counter-Memorials and Replies to 10 February 1989 and 12 January 1990, respectively, by Orders made on 12 January 1989(19) and 13 December 1989.(20) Each Party duly filed its Counter-Memorial.

On 17 November, Nicaragua made an Application for permission to intervene in the case, stating as its object the protection of the legal rights of Nicaragua in the Gulf of Fonseca and adjacent maritime areas. Nicaragua further expressed the view that its request for permission to intervene was a matter exclusively within the procedural mandate of the full Court. On 14 December, the Court invited the Parties to the case to submit their observations on whether the Nicaraguan Application should be decided by the full Court or by the Chamber.

In an Order of 13 December 1989,(21) the Court took note of the death of Judge ad hoc Virally and of the nomination by Honduras of Santiago Torres Bernárdez to replace him. Judge Shahabuddeen appended a separate opinion to the Order.

Case concerning Elettronica
Sicula S.p.A. (ELSI) (United States v. Italy)

In 1987,(22) the United States had instituted proceedings against Italy in a dispute concerning the requisition by Italy of the plant and assets of Elettronica Sicula S.p.A. (ELSI), an Italian company stated to have been 100 per cent owned by two United States corporations. The Court decided to accede to the request by both Parties for the constitution of a Chamber and the Parties filed their initial pleadings within the prescribed time-limits in 1987. In 1988, the United States

Reply and the Italian Rejoinder were filed within the time-limits set by the Court.

Oral proceedings took place from 13 February to 2 March 1989. On 20 July, at a public sitting, the Chamber delivered its Judgment,(23) the operative paragraph of which read as follows:

The Chamber,

(1) Unanimously,

Rejects the objection presented by the Italian Republic to the admissibility of the Application filed in this case by the United States of America on 6 February 1987;

(2) By four votes to one,

Finds that the Italian Republic has not committed any of the breaches, alleged in the said Application, of the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation between the Parties signed at Rome on 2 February 1948, or of the Agreement Supplementing that Treaty signed by the Parties at Washington on 26 September 1951.

In favour: President Ruda; Judges Oda, Ago and Sir Robert Jennings;

Against: Judge Schwebel.

(3) By four votes to one,

Rejects, accordingly, the claim for reparation made against the Republic of Italy by the United States of America.

In favour: President Ruda; Judges Oda, Ago and Sir Robert Jennings;

Against: Judge Schwebel.

Judge Oda appended a separate opinion and Judge Schwebel a dissenting opinion to the Judgment.

Applicability of article VI, section 22, of the Convention on UN privileges and immunities

On 24 May 1989, the Economic and Social Council, by resolution 1989/75, requested the Court to give, on a priority basis, an advisory opinion on the applicability of article VI, section 22, of the Convention on Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations in the case of Dumitru Mazilu as a special rapporteur of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities. The letter from the Secretary-General transmitting the request was received in the Registry of the Court on 13 June 1989.

By an Order of 14 June,(24) the President of the Court found that the United Nations and States that were parties to the Convention were likely to be able to provide information on the matter. The Order fixed 31 July 1989 as the time-limit for written statements and 31 August 1989 for subsequent comments on those statements. The United Nations, Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Romania and the United States filed their statements within the fixed time-limit, and the Secretary-General submitted to the Court a dossier of documents pertaining to the matter.

Public sittings were held on 4 and 5 October. On 15 December, the Court delivered an advisory opinion,⁽²⁵⁾ the operative paragraph of which read as follows:

The Court,
Unanimously,

Is of the opinion that Article VI, Section 22, of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations is applicable in the case of Mr. Dumitru Mazilu as a special rapporteur of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.

Judges Oda, Evensen and Shahabuddeen appended separate opinions to the advisory opinion.

Other questions

Two international conferences held in the Hague in 1989 called for an expanded role for ICJ. In its declaration of 11 March,⁽²⁶⁾ the conference on global warming and the deterioration of the ozone layer emphasized the need for a UN environmental authority whose decisions would be subject to the control of the Court. The Hague Declaration adopted by the ministerial meeting of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on peace and the rule of law in international affairs (26-29, June)⁽²⁷⁾ called for the enhancement of the Court's role in the peaceful settlement of disputes. It emphasized the supremacy of international law in the preservation of peace and the promotion of justice, and requested the General Assembly to declare a decade of international law. On 17 November, the Assembly acted on the request in its resolution 44/23, declaring 1990-1999 the United Nations Decade of International Law, the main purposes of which were to promote methods for the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to ICJ, as well as respect for, development and dissemination of international law.

On 28 February,⁽²⁸⁾ the USSR informed the Assembly that it had, as of 10 February 1989, withdrawn its previous reservations and accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court with respect to the following international treaties: the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide; the 1949 Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others; the 1952 Convention on the Political Rights of Women; the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination; the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; and the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

On 11 April,⁽²⁹⁾ the Byelorussian SSR recognized the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court over the same treaties.

Organizational questions

Vacancy in the Court

The Secretary-General, on 20 December 1988,⁽³⁰⁾ informed the Security Council of the death, on 11 December, of Judge Nagendra Singh, and of the resulting vacancy in the Court. The procedure for nominating and electing a candidate in the General Assembly and the Security Council was outlined in the Secretary-General's memorandum⁽³¹⁾ of 12 April 1989. On 6 April, the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Statute of the Court, submitted to the Assembly and the Council a list of candidates⁽³²⁾ for the vacancy nominated by national groups, along with their curricula vitae.⁽³³⁾ The list was subsequently expanded on 17 April⁽³⁴⁾ and revised on 18 April.⁽³⁵⁾

Elections to the Court

On 9 January 1989, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 627(1989).

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the death of Judge Nagendra Singh on 11 December 1988,

Noting further that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of the deceased judge has thus occurred and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council, Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 18 April 1989 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the forty-third session of the General Assembly.

Security Council resolution 627(1989)

9 January 1989 Meeting 2838 Adopted unanimously

By a Security Council decision of 18 April 1989, and by General Assembly decision 43/327 of the same date, Raghunandan Swarup Pathak was elected to fill the vacancy on the Court.

Trust Fund to assist in the settlement of disputes

At a meeting of the General Assembly on 1 November 1989,⁽³⁶⁾ the Secretary-General announced the establishment of his Trust Fund to assist States in the settlement of disputes through ICJ, which was intended to provide financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in a dispute submitted to the Court by way of a Special Agreement, or in the execution of a Judgment resulting from such an Agreement. The Secretary-General appealed to all parties concerned to make financial contributions to the Fund. The United Kingdom and Senegal formally supported the announcement, and the Court took note of it in its 1989/90 report.⁽²⁾

Publications of the Court

In November 1987, the General Assembly's Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee considered a 1986 Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) report on the possibility of publishing the Court's judgments and advisory opinions in UN official languages other than English and French (the official languages of the Court) at no additional cost.⁽³⁷⁾ Pursuant to a 1987 resolution of the Assembly,⁽³⁸⁾ the Secretary-General submitted, on 23 October 1989, the Court's and his comments⁽³⁹⁾ on the matter.

The Court stated its agreement with the proposal, to publish its judgments in other languages, given proper means and available resources. It opposed, however, some of the recommendations contained in the JIU report, such as the omission of separate or dissenting opinions, limiting the number of copies to be published, and other changes to the existing system, which ICJ considered detrimental. Consequently, the Secretary-General expressed his intention not to implement the JIU recommendations. In December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's comments in its resolution 44/201 A, section II.

Chapter II

Legal aspects of international political relations

Continuing its efforts to develop legal measures for promoting friendly international political relations, the General Assembly in December 1989 again urged States to observe and promote the 1982 Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes and stressed the need to settle such disputes through progressive development and codification of international law and through enhancing the effectiveness of the United Nations in this field. The Assembly commended the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization for completion of the draft on resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations, and decided that it should be brought to the attention of States. Also in December, the Assembly invited the International Law Commission (ILC) to continue its elaboration of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind, including the elaboration of a list of crimes.

The Assembly adopted and opened for signature and ratification or accession the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries. It condemned all acts of terrorism, called on States to fulfil their obligations under international law to refrain from participating in terrorist acts and urged them to take effective measures for the elimination of international terrorism. It further called for the release of all hostages and abducted persons and called on States to use their political influence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law, to secure their release.

In July, the Security Council had likewise condemned all acts of hostage-taking and abduction and demanded the immediate safe release of all hostages and abducted persons. The Council also condemned all acts of unlawful interference against the security of civil aviation and called upon States to cooperate in devising and implementing measures to prevent acts of terrorism, including those involving explosives. It urged the International Civil Aviation Organization to intensify its work on devising an international régime for the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection.

ILC continued in 1989 to consider draft articles on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses.

Maintenance of international peace and security

In accordance with a General Assembly resolution of 1988,(1) the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization met in New York from 27 March to 14 April 1989(2) and accorded priority to the question of the maintenance of international peace and security. It additionally devoted attention to the rationalization of procedures of the United Nations (see PART FIVE, Chapter V). The Committee further examined the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and the progress report of the Secretary-General on the elaboration of the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States

The General Assembly considered again in 1989 the peaceful settlement of disputes. In December, it urged States to observe the provisions of the 1982 Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes.(3) The Assembly commended the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization for completion of the draft on the resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations.

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its March/April 1989 session,(2) continued work on the peaceful settlement of disputes. Its open-ended Working Group considered a proposal contained in a working paper(4) on the resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations. First introduced in 1983 by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania and revised by Romania in 1987(5) and 1988,(6) the proposal for a commission(7) had been under Committee consideration each year since 1983.

As a result of the 1989 meetings and consultations, the Special Committee completed its consideration of the proposal. There was general agreement that the discussions had contributed to a better understanding of the importance and usefulness of good offices, mediation or conciliation as means for the settlement of disputes. The Committee was of the opinion that States should consider the proposal as useful guidance and recommended that the General Assembly bring it to the attention of States.

The Committee further examined the progress report of the Secretary-General on preparation of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States.⁽⁸⁾ The report, introduced by the Legal Counsel on 3 April, gave information on a 1988 meeting under his chairmanship of the Consultative Group composed of competent individuals from among permanent missions of States Members of the United Nations, where a further portion of the draft handbook dealing with arbitration, prepared by the Secretariat, was reviewed.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, as requested by the General Assembly in 1988,⁽⁹⁾ submitted in August 1989 a report with a later addendum⁽¹⁰⁾ containing replies received from nine Member States, eight international intergovernmental organizations and a communication from the International Law Association on the implementation of the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes and on ways and means of increasing its effectiveness.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/31 by recorded vote.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States
The General Assembly,

Having examined the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes between States",

Recalling its resolution 37/10 of 15 November 1982, by which it approved the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, annexed thereto,

Recalling also its resolutions 38/131 of 19 December 1983, 39/79 of 13 December 1984, 40/68 of 11 December 1985, 41/74 of 3 December 1986, 42/150 of 7 December 1987 and 43/163 of 9 December 1988,

Recalling further its resolution 43/51 of 5 December 1988, by which it approved the Declaration on the Prevention and Removal of Disputes and Situations Which May Threaten International Peace and Security and on the Role of the United Nations in this Field, annexed thereto,

Considering that the world political climate has improved and that, although sources of disputes and tension in international relations still remain, including the use of force and the threat thereof, encouraging progress has been made towards finding peaceful solutions to regional and global problems,

Taking into account the need to exert the utmost effort in order to settle any situations and disputes between

States on the basis of sovereign equality and exclusively by peaceful means, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations, and to avoid any military actions and hostilities against other States, which can only make more difficult the solution of existing problems,

Considering that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes should represent one of the central concerns for States and for the United Nations and that efforts for strengthening the process of peaceful settlement of disputes should be continued,

Emphasizing the responsibility of every State for the promotion of a policy of respect for the national independence and sovereignty of other States, non-interference in internal affairs, and good understanding and co-operation, which is a basic requirement for reducing tension and for establishing a climate of peace and mutual confidence in the world,

Bearing in mind the decision in its resolution 44/23 of 17 November 1989 to proclaim the period 1990-1999 the United Nations Decade of International Law, which will contribute to the strengthening of all means of peaceful settlement of disputes between States,

Taking note with interest of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted in accordance with its resolution 43/163, which contains useful opinions, proposals and considerations for a broader implementation of the Manila Declaration,

1. Again urges all States to observe and promote in good faith the provisions of the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes in the settlement of their international disputes;

2. Stresses the need to continue efforts to strengthen the process of the peaceful settlement of disputes through progressive development and codification of international law and through enhancing the effectiveness of the United Nations in this field;

3. Calls upon Member States to make full use, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, of the framework provided by the United Nations for the peaceful settlement of disputes and international problems;

4. Request the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session a further report containing the replies of Member States, relevant United Nations bodies and specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and interested international legal bodies on the implementation of the Manila Declaration and on ways and means of increasing the effectiveness of this instrument;

5. Decides that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States shall be considered at its forty-fifth session as a separate agenda item, in conjunction with the item of the provisional agenda entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/44/764) by recorded vote (103-0-21), 22 November (meeting 46); 59- nation draft (A/C.6/44/L.7), orally revised; agenda item 141.

Amendments(11) to the draft resolution were rejected by recorded votes in the Sixth Committee.(12) Introduced by Denmark and sponsored by Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom, the amendments would have replaced the fifth preambular paragraph by "Welcoming the growing tendency to settle regional conflicts by peaceful means,;" deleted operative paragraph 4; and replaced operative paragraph 5 by a new operative paragraph 4. The new operative paragraph 4 would have read as follows: "4. Decides, in view of General Assembly resolution 44/23 of 17 November 1989, that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States will be examined in the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law".

Explaining its vote in the Assembly, Finland, on behalf of the five Nordic countries-Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Sweden and Finland-stated that they abstained in the voting on the draft resolution because of voting results on its co-sponsored amendments in the Sixth Committee. Since the amendments could not be adopted, they consequently abstained in the voting on the draft as a whole.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted decision 44/415 without vote.

Resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations

At its 72nd plenary meeting, on 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, commended the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization for the completion of the work on the draft document on resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations, and decided that the present decision, to which that document is annexed, should be brought to the attention of States so that it might become generally known.

ANNEX

Resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations

States parties to disputes may wish to avail themselves of the possibility to resort to third-party assistance in the form of a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation in order to settle their disputes by peaceful means. In doing so, they may be guided by the following:

1. Resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations may be considered by States as a procedure at their disposal for the peaceful settlement of international disputes in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations.

2. Such a commission may be established for each particular case, in accordance with modalities described below, through the agreement of the States parties to a dispute, or, with their agreement, on the basis of a recommendation of the Security Council, or of the General Assembly or following the contacts of the States parties to a dispute with the Secretary-General. Other modalities and conditions may also be agreed upon by the States parties to a dispute for the establishment of such a commission.

3. When the States parties to a dispute accept to resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation as described in paragraph 2 above, the designation of members of the commission is proceeded with.

4. For each particular case the commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation may be constituted of persons nominated by up to three States, which are not parties to the dispute concerned.

Such States will be designated by the States parties to the dispute or, with their agreement, as the case may be, by the President of the Security Council or by the President of the General Assembly or by the Secretary-General.

5. Each designated State will appoint, upon approval by the States parties to the dispute, a highly qualified person, with adequate experience, who will act in the commission in his individual capacity.

The chairman of the commission will be selected from among its members by the States parties to the dispute. They may also agree in a particular case that the chairman be appointed by the Secretary-General.

6. The proceedings of the commission may take place at United Nations Headquarters in New York, or in any other place agreed upon by the States parties to the dispute.

7. After taking note of the elements of the respective dispute, on the basis of submissions made by the States parties and, as appropriate, of information provided by the Secretary-General, the commission in performing its good offices functions will seek to bring the parties to enter immediately into direct negotiations for the settlement of the dispute, or to resume such negotiations or to resort to another means of peaceful Settlement.

If the States parties to the dispute so request, the commission will seek to establish the aspects on which the States parties agree, as well as their differences of opinion and perception, and to elucidate the elements related to the dispute with a view to making suggestions for the beginning or the resuming of negotiations, including their framework and stages, as well as problems to solve.

8. If the States parties to the dispute request the commission, at any time, to mediate, the commission will offer to the parties proposals which it deems adequate for facilitating the negotiations and seeking through mediation to bring closer their positions until an agreement is reached.

9. The States parties to the dispute may agree at any moment of the procedure to entrust the commission with functions of conciliation. The States parties to the dispute determine the legal basis on which the commission should perform its functions. If such a basis is not determined, the commission should be guided mainly by the rights and duties of States resulting from the Charter and by the applicable principles of international law. In performing its functions, the commission formulates the terms which it deems adequate for the amicable settlement of the dispute and submits them to the parties.

The States parties to the dispute will be requested to pronounce themselves on these terms within a period of time established by the commission, which may be prolonged if the States parties to the dispute deem it necessary.

10. A period of time during which the commission should discharge its mission may be established by the States parties to the dispute or, where appropriate, following their contacts with the Secretary-General.

11. The States parties to the dispute may wish that the commission work in confidentiality. As long as the commission continues its efforts, no statement will be made public on its activity without the agreement of the States parties to the dispute.

12. The States parties to the dispute may wish that, upon conclusion of the commission's activity, the commission prepare a report and communicate it to them. The States parties to the dispute will decide if the report is to be made public.

Where appropriate, the commission may submit a report to the United Nations organ concerned in the form accepted by the States parties to the dispute.

13. Unless otherwise provided, any expenses of the commission shall be borne by the States parties to the dispute. They may request the Secretary-General to provide the commission with reasonable assistance and facilities as it may require.

14. The States parties to the dispute, as well as other States, shall act in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and shall refrain from any action whatsoever which may aggravate the situation, endanger the maintenance of international peace and security or make more difficult or impede the peaceful settlement of the dispute.

15. Nothing in the present document shall be construed as prejudicing in any manner the provisions of the Charter, in particular those relating to the peaceful settlement of disputes.

General Assembly decision 44/415

Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/44/768) without vote, 21 November (meeting 44); draft by Chairman (A/C.6/44/L.15); agenda item 146. Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 6th Committee 7-15,44; plenary 72.

Draft code of crimes against peace and security

In 1989, at its forty-first session from 2 May to 21 July,(13) the International Law Commission (ILC) continued examining the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind. ILC in 1982 had resumed work on the topic,(14) whose title in English had been amended by the Assembly in 1987,(15) replacing the word "offences" by "crimes". The draft Code, originally prepared by ILC in 1954(16) in response to a 1947 Assembly request,(17) defined crimes under international law for which the responsible individual was to be punished.

ILC consideration. ILC discussed in 1989 the seventh report by its Special Rapporteur on the draft Code, Doudou Thiam (Senegal).(18) The report contained in particular two draft articles respectively entitled "War crimes" and "Crimes against humanity". The Commission referred both articles to its Drafting Committee. ILC provisionally adopted, on the recommendation of the Drafting Committee, three new articles on the topic, with commentaries thereto for inclusion in part II of the draft devoted to crimes against peace, namely article 13, "Threat of aggression"; article 14, "Intervention"; and article 15, "Colonial domination and other forms of alien domination".

The three articles provisionally adopted in 1989 were transmitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General.(19)

In resolution 44/35 on the work of LIC, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account the comments of Governments, LIC should continue its work on the topic.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in August 1989 a report(20) containing replies from four Governments in response to the Assembly's 1988 invitation(21) for views on the 1983 conclusions of ILC.(22)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/32 by recorded vote.

Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind

The General Assembly

Mindful of Article 13, paragraph 1 a, of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolution 177(II) of 21 November 1947, by which it directed the International Law Commission to prepare a draft code of offences against the peace and security of mankind,

Having considered the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind prepared by the Commission and submitted to the General Assembly in 1954,

Reaffirming its belief that the elaboration of a code of offences against the peace and security of mankind could contribute to strengthening international peace and security and thus to promoting and implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter,

Recalling also its resolution 36/106 of 10 December 1981, in which it invited the Commission to resume its work with a view to elaborating the draft Code and to examine it with the required priority in order to review it, taking into account the results achieved by the process of the progressive development of international law,

Bearing in mind that the Commission should fulfil its task on the basis of early elaboration of draft articles thereof,

Having considered chapter III of the report of the Commission on the work of its forty-first session,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the subject,

Taking into account the views expressed during the debate on this item at its forty-fourth session,

Recognizing the importance and urgency of the subject,

1. Invites the International Law Commission to continue its work on the elaboration of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind, including the elaboration of a list of crimes, taking into account the progress made at its forty-first session, as well as the views expressed during the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly;

2. Notes the approach currently envisaged by the Commission in dealing with the judicial authority to be assigned for the implementation of the provisions of the draft Code, and encourages the Commission to explore further all possible alternatives on the question;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to seek the views of Member States regarding the conclusions contained in paragraph 69 (c) (i) of the Commission's report on the work of its thirty-fifth session;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to include the views received from Member States in accordance with paragraph 3 of the present resolution in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind", to be considered in conjunction with the examination of the report of the Commission.

General Assembly resolution 44/32

4 December 1989 Meeting 72 133-5-14 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/44/765) by recorded vote (95-5-13), 21

Draft convention against mercenaries

The General Assembly, in 1989, adopted and opened for signature and ratification or accession the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, which was annexed to resolution 44/34. The question of the use of mercenaries as a means of impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination was also considered in a report⁽²³⁾ by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on the question of mercenaries. The report, having examined, among other things, the situation in Angola, the Maldives and in Central America, recommended that United Nations principles and declarations on mercenary practices must be maintained and strengthened by the addition of provisions that may help to eliminate all types of such activity. It recommended that States include in their national legislation adequate sanctions against mercenary activities. States should be called upon to exercise the utmost vigilance and ensure that their territory and others under their control, as well as their nationals, were not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries (see PART THREE, Chapter X).

Ad Hoc Committee consideration. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries was convened in 1989 in accordance with a General Assembly resolution of 1988,⁽²⁴⁾ and met in New York from 30 January to 17 February.⁽²⁵⁾ Its Drafting Group, established in 1989, held 10 meetings between 31 January and 17 February and approved a set of draft articles for an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/34 without vote.

International Convention against the
Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries

The General Assembly,

Considering that the progressive development of international law and its codification contribute to the implementation of the purposes and principles set forth in Articles 1 and 2 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of the need to conclude, under the auspices of the United Nations, an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries,

Recalling its resolution 35/48 of 4 December 1980, by which it established the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries and requested it to elaborate at the earliest possible date an international convention to prohibit the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries,

Having considered the draft convention prepared by the Ad Hoc Committee in pursuance of the above-mentioned resolution and finalized by the Working Group on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, which met during the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly, Adopts and opens for signature and ratification or for accession the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution.

ANNEX

International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and
Training of Mercenaries

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Being aware of the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries for activities which violate principles of international law, such as those of sovereign equality, political independence, territorial integrity of States and self-determination of peoples,

Affirming that the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries should be considered as offences of grave concern to all States and that any person committing any of these offences should be either prosecuted or extradited,

Convinced of the necessity to develop and enhance international co-operation among States for the prevention, prosecution and punishment of such offences,

Expressing concern at new unlawful international activities linking drug traffickers and mercenaries in the perpetration of violent actions which undermine the constitutional order of States,

Also convinced that the adoption of a convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries would contribute to the eradication of these nefarious activities and thereby to the observance of the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter,

Cognizant that matters not regulated by such a convention continue to be governed by the rules and principles of international law,

Have agreed as follows:

Article 1

For the purposes of the present Convention,

1. A mercenary is any person who:

(a) Is specially recruited locally or abroad in order to fight in an armed conflict;

(b) Is motivated to take part in the hostilities essentially by the desire for private gain and, in fact, is promised, by or on behalf of a party to the conflict, material compensation substantially in excess of that promised or paid to combatants of similar rank and functions in the armed forces of that party;

(c) Is neither a national of a party to the conflict nor a resident of territory controlled by a party to the conflict;

(d) Is not a member of the armed forces of a party to the conflict; and

(e) Has not been sent by a State which is not a party to the conflict on official duty as a member of its armed forces.

2. A mercenary is also any person who, in any other situation:

(a) Is specially recruited locally or abroad for the purpose of participating in a concerted act of violence aimed at:

(i) Overthrowing a Government or otherwise undermining the constitutional order of a State; or

(ii) Undermining the territorial integrity of a State;

(b) Is motivated to take part therein essentially by the desire for significant private gain and is prompted by the promise or payment of material compensation;

(c) Is neither a national nor a resident of the State against which such an act is directed;

(d) Has not been sent by a State on official duty; and

(e) Is not a member of the armed forces of the State on whose territory the act is undertaken.

Article 2

Any person who recruits, uses, finances or trains mercenaries, as defined in article 1 of the present Convention, commits an offence for the purposes of the Convention.

Article 3

1. A mercenary, as defined in article 1 of the present Convention, who participates directly in hostilities or in a concerted act of violence, as the case may be, commits an offence for the purposes of the Convention.

2. Nothing in this article limits the scope of application of article 4 of the present Convention.

Article 4

An offence is committed by any person who:

(a) Attempts to commit one of the offences set forth in the present Convention;

(b) Is the accomplice of a person who commits or attempts to commit any of the offences set forth in the present Convention.

Article 5

1. States Parties shall not recruit, use, finance or train mercenaries and shall prohibit such activities in accordance with the provisions of the present Convention.

2. States Parties shall not recruit, use, finance or train mercenaries for the purpose of opposing the legitimate exercise of the inalienable right of peoples to self-determination, as recognized by international law, and shall take, in conformity with international law, the appropriate measures to prevent the recruitment, use, financing or training of mercenaries for that purpose.

3. They shall make the offences set forth in the present Convention punishable by appropriate penalties which take into account the grave nature of those offences.

Article 6

States Parties shall co-operate in the prevention of the offences set forth in the present Convention, particularly by:

(a) Taking all practicable measures to prevent preparations in their respective territories for the commission of those offences within or outside their territories, including the prohibition of illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of such offences;

(b) Co-ordinating the taking of administrative and other measures as appropriate to prevent the commission of those offences.

Article 7

States Parties shall co-operate in taking the necessary measures for the implementation of the present Convention.

Article 8

Any State Party having reason to believe that one of the offences set forth in the present Convention has been, is being or will be committed shall, in accordance with its national law, communicate the relevant information, as soon as it comes to its knowledge, directly or through the Secretary-General of the United Nations, to the States Parties affected.

Article 9

1. Each State Party shall take such measures as may be necessary to establish its jurisdiction over any of the offences set forth in the present Convention which are committed:

(a) In its territory or on board a ship or aircraft registered in that State;

(b) By any of its Nationals or, if that State considers it appropriate, by those stateless persons who have their habitual residence in that territory.

2. Each State Party shall likewise take such measures as may be necessary to establish its jurisdiction over the offences set forth in articles 2, 3 and 4 of the present Convention in cases where the alleged offender is present in its territory and it does not extradite him to any of the States mentioned in paragraph 1 of this article.

3. The present Convention does not exclude any criminal jurisdiction exercised in accordance with national law.

Article 10

1. Upon being satisfied that the circumstances so warrant, any State Party in whose territory the alleged offender is present shall, in accordance with its laws, take him into custody or take such other measures to ensure his presence for such time as is necessary to enable any criminal or extradition proceedings to be instituted. The State Party shall immediately make a preliminary inquiry into the facts.

2. When a State Party, pursuant to this article, has taken a person into custody or has taken such other measures referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, it shall notify without delay either directly or through the Secretary-General of the United Nations:

(a) The State Party where the offence was committed;

(b) The State Party against which the offence has been directed or attempted;

(c) The State Party of which the natural or juridical person against whom the offence has been directed or attempted is a national;

(d) The State Party of which the alleged offender is a national or, if he is a stateless person, in whose territory he has his habitual residence;

(e) Any other interested State Party which it considers it appropriate to notify.

3. Any person regarding whom the measures referred to in paragraph 1 of this article are being taken shall be entitled:

(a) To communicate without delay with the nearest appropriate representative of the State of which he is a national or which is otherwise entitled to protect his rights or, if he is a stateless person, the State in whose territory he has his habitual residence;

(b) To be visited by a representative of that State.

4. The provisions of paragraph 3 of this article shall be without prejudice to the right of any State Party having a claim to jurisdiction in accordance with article 9, paragraph 1 (b), to invite the International Committee of the Red Cross to communicate with and visit the alleged offender.

5. The State which makes the preliminary inquiry contemplated in paragraph 1 of this article shall promptly report its findings to the States referred to in paragraph 2 of this article and indicate whether it intends to exercise jurisdiction.

Article 11

Any person regarding whom proceedings are being carried out in connection with any of the offences set forth in the present Convention shall be guaranteed at all stages of the proceedings fair treatment and all the rights and guarantees provided for in the law of the State in question. Applicable norms of international law should be taken into account.

Article 12

The State Party in whose territory the alleged offender is found shall, if it does not extradite him, be obliged, without exception whatsoever and whether or not the offence was committed in its territory, to submit the case to its competent authorities for the purpose of prosecution, through proceedings in accordance with the laws of that State. Those authorities shall take their decision in the same manner as in the case of any other offence of a grave nature under the law of that State.

Article 13

1. States Parties shall afford one another the greatest measure of assistance in connection with criminal proceedings brought in respect of the offences set forth in the present Convention, including the supply of all evidence at their disposal necessary for the proceedings.

The law of the State whose assistance is requested shall apply in all cases.

2. The provisions of paragraph 1 of this article shall not affect obligations concerning mutual judicial assistance embodied in any other treaty.

Article 14

The State Party where the alleged offender is prosecuted shall in accordance with its laws communicate the final outcome of the proceedings to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit the information to the other States concerned.

Article 15

1. The offences set forth in articles 2, 3 and 4 of the present Convention shall be deemed to be included as extraditable offences in any extradition treaty existing between States Parties. States Parties undertake to include such offences as extraditable offences in every extradition treaty to be concluded between them.

2. If a State Party which makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty receives a request for extradition from another State Party with which it has no extradition treaty, it may at its option consider the present Convention as the legal basis for extradition in respect of those offences. Extradition shall be subject to the other conditions provided by the law of the requested State.

3. States Parties which do not make extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall recognize those offences as extraditable offences between themselves, subject to the conditions provided by the law of the requested State.

4. The offences shall be treated, for the purpose of extradition between States Parties, as if they had been committed not only in the place in which they occurred but also in the territories of the States required to establish their jurisdiction in accordance with article 9 of the present Convention.

Article 16

The present Convention shall be applied without prejudice to:

(a) The rules relating to the international responsibility of States;

(b) The law of armed conflict and international humanitarian law, including the provisions relating to the status of combatant or of prisoner of war.

Article 17

1. Any dispute between two or more States Parties concerning the interpretation or application of the present Convention which is not settled by negotiation shall, at the request of one of them, be submitted to arbitration. If, within six months from the date of the request for arbitration, the parties are unable to agree on the organization of the arbitration, any one of those parties may refer the dispute to the International Court of Justice by a request in conformity with the Statute of the Court.

2. Each State may, at the time of signature or ratification of the present Convention or accession thereto, declare that it does not consider itself bound by paragraph 1 of this article. The other States Parties shall not be bound by paragraph 1 of this article with respect to any State Party which has made such a reservation.

3. Any State Party which has made a reservation in accordance with paragraph 2 of this article may at any time withdraw that reservation by notification to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 18

1. The present Convention shall be open for signature by all States until 31 December 1990 at United Nations Headquarters in New York.

2. The present Convention shall be subject to ratification. The instruments of ratification shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

3. The present Convention shall remain open for accession by any State. The instruments of accession shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 19

1. The present Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day following the date of deposit of the twenty-second instrument of ratification or accession with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

2. For each State ratifying or acceding to the Convention after the deposit of the twenty-second instrument of ratification or accession, the Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after deposit by such State of its instrument of ratification or accession.

Article 20

1. Any State Party may denounce the present Convention by written notification to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

2. Denunciation shall take effect one year after the date on which the notification is received by the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 21

The original of the present Convention, of which the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall send certified copies thereof to all States.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned, being duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have signed the present Convention.

General Assembly resolution 44/34

4 December 1989 Meeting 72 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/44/766) without vote, 21 November (meeting 44); 5-nation draft (A/C.6/44/L.10); agenda item 144.

Sponsors: Democratic Yemen, Ethiopia, Italy, Suriname, Ukrainian SSR. Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 6th Committee 41, 42, 44; plenary 72.

In explanation of its position on the draft resolution, Nicaragua believed that the definition of mercenaries should not be confined to non-nationals of any given country. It was public knowledge that the world had seen a marked trend towards nationals of a country being contracted in large numbers by other countries to carry out mercenary activities from outside against their country of origin. Consequently, Nicaragua felt that the fact that the definition of mercenaries in the Convention did not include nationals whose very existence and activities depended on a foreign Power was a serious deficiency.

On 8 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/81 on the use of mercenaries as a means to violate human rights and to impede the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination.

Prevention of terrorism

The prevention of terrorism in all its aspects continued to be a concern of the United Nations in 1989. In December, the Assembly condemned all acts of terrorism and urged States to take effective measures for the elimination of international terrorism. It further called for the release of all hostages and abducted persons. The Security Council in July condemned all acts of hostage-taking and abduction and demanded the immediate safe release of those persons. It also condemned acts of unlawful interference against the security of civil aviation and called upon States to prevent acts of terrorism, including those involving explosives. The Council urged the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) to intensify work on devising an international régime for the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in August a report with a later addendum,⁽²⁶⁾ containing replies received from 13 Member States and six intergovernmental organizations in response to invitations in 1988 by the Secretary-General and the Legal Counsel, and as requested by the General Assembly in 1987.⁽²⁷⁾

Annexed to the report was information, as at 15 August, on the state of signatures of, and ratifications of or accessions to, a number of international conventions relating to terrorism, including two adopted by the General Assembly for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions: the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,⁽²⁸⁾ and the 1979 International Convention against the Taking of Hostages,⁽²⁹⁾ In 1989, the 1973 Convention was acceded to by Bhutan and Kuwait. The 1979 Convention was ratified by Haiti and acceded to by Côte d'Ivoire, Kuwait and Turkey. As at 31 December 1989, the two instruments had 76 and 70 parties, respectively.⁽³⁰⁾

On 4 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/29 without vote.

Measures to prevent international terrorism which endangers or takes innocent human lives or jeopardizes fundamental freedoms and study of the underlying causes of those forms of terrorism and acts of violence which lie in misery, frustration, grievance and despair and which cause some people to sacrifice human lives, including their own, in an attempt to effect radical changes:

(a) Report of the Secretary-General;

(b) Convening, under the auspices of the United Nations, of an international conference to define terrorism and to differentiate it from the struggle of peoples for national liberation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3034(XXVII) of 18 December 1972, 31/102 of 15 December 1976, 32/147 of 16 December 1977, 34/145 of 17 December 1979, 36/109 of 10 December 1981, 38/130 of 19 December 1983, 40/61 of 9 December 1985 and 42/159 of 7 December 1987,

Recalling also the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on International Terrorism contained in its report to the General Assembly at its thirty-fourth session,

Recalling further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, the Definition of Aggression and relevant instruments on international humanitarian law applicable in armed conflict,

Recalling moreover the existing international conventions relating to various aspects of the problem of international terrorism, inter alia the Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft, signed at Tokyo on 14 September 1963, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, signed at The Hague on 16 December 1970, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, concluded at Montreal on 23 September 1971, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, adopted in New York on 14 December 1973, the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted in New York on 17 December 1979, the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, adopted at Vienna on 3 March 1980, the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts of Violence at Airports Serving International Civil Aviation, supplementary to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, signed at Montreal on 24 February 1988, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, done at Rome on 10 March 1988, and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf, done at Rome on 10 March 1988,

Convinced that a policy of firmness and effective measures should be taken in accordance with international law in order that all acts, methods and practices of international terrorism may be brought to an end,

Noting the ongoing work within the International Civil Aviation Organization regarding research as to the detection of plastic or sheet explosives and the devising of an international régime for the marking of such explosives for the purposes of detection, and taking note of Security Council resolution 635(1989) of 14 June 1989 relating thereto,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 638(1989) of 31 July 1989 on the taking of hostages,

Deeply disturbed by the world-wide persistence of acts of international terrorism in all its forms, including those in which States are directly or indirectly involved, which endanger or take innocent lives, have a deleterious effect on international relations and may jeopardize the territorial integrity and security of States,

Calling attention to the growing connection between terrorist groups and drug traffickers,

Convinced of the importance of the observance by States of their obligations under the relevant international conventions to ensure that appropriate law-enforcement measures are taken in connection with the offences addressed in those conventions,

Convinced also of the importance of expanding and improving international co-operation among States, on a bilateral, regional and multilateral basis, which will contribute to the elimination of acts of international terrorism and their underlying causes and to the prevention and elimination of this criminal scourge,

Convinced further that international co-operation in combating and preventing terrorism will contribute to the strengthening of confidence among States, reduce tensions and create a better climate among them,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism,

Mindful also of the necessity of maintaining and protecting the basic rights of, and guarantees for, the individual in accordance with the relevant international human rights instruments and generally accepted international standards,

Reaffirming the principle of self-determination of peoples as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the inalienable right to self-determination and independence of all peoples under colonial and racist régimes and other forms of alien domination and foreign occupation, and upholding the legitimacy of their struggle, in particular the struggle of national liberation movements, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the efforts and important achievements of the International Civil Aviation Organization and the International Maritime Organization in promoting the security of international air and sea transport against acts of terrorism,

Recognizing that the effectiveness of the struggle against terrorism could be enhanced by the establishment of a generally agreed definition of international terrorism,

Taking into account the proposal made at its forty-second session to hold an international conference on international terrorism, as referred to in agenda item 139 (b) of the forty-fourth session,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Once again unequivocally condemns, as criminal and unjustifiable, all acts, methods and practices of terrorism wherever and by whomever committed, including those which jeopardize friendly relations among States and their security;

2. Deeply deplores the loss of human lives which results from such acts of terrorism, as well as the pernicious impact of these acts on relations of co-operation among States;

3. Calls upon all States to fulfil their obligations under international law to refrain from organizing, instigating, assisting or participating in terrorist acts in other States, or acquiescing in or encouraging activities within their territory directed towards the commission of such acts;

4. Urges all States to fulfil their obligations under international law and take effective and resolute measures for the speedy and final elimination of international terrorism and to that end, in particular:

(a) To prevent the preparation and organization in their respective territories, for commission within or outside their territories, of terrorist and subversive acts directed against other States and their citizens;

(b) To ensure the apprehension and prosecution or extradition of perpetrators of terrorist acts;

(c) To endeavour to conclude special agreements to that effect on a bilateral, regional and multilateral basis;

(d) To co-operate with one another in exchanging relevant information concerning the prevention and combating of terrorism;

(e) To take promptly all steps necessary to implement the existing international conventions on this subject to which they are parties, including the harmonization of their domestic legislation with those conventions;

5. Appeals to all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming party to the international conventions relating to various aspects of international terrorism referred to in the preamble to the present resolution;

6. Urges all States, unilaterally and in co-operation with other States, as well as relevant United Nations organs, to contribute to the progressive elimination of the causes underlying international terrorism and to pay special attention to all situations, including colonialism, racism and situations involving mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms and those involving alien domination and foreign occupation, that may give rise to international terrorism and may endanger international peace and security;

7. Firmly calls for the immediate and safe release of all hostages and abducted persons, wherever and by whomever they are being held;

8. Calls upon all States to use their political influence in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law to secure the safe release of all hostages and abducted persons and to prevent the commission of acts of hostage-taking and abduction;

9. Expresses concern at the growing and dangerous links between terrorist groups, drug traffickers and their paramilitary gangs, which have resorted to all types of violence, thus endangering the constitutional order of States and violating basic human rights;

10. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the International Civil Aviation Organization aimed at promoting universal acceptance of, and strict compliance with, international air-security conventions, and welcomes its recent adoption of the Protocol for the Suppression of

Unlawful Acts of Violence at Airports Serving International Civil Aviation;

11. Also welcomes the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf;

12. Urges the International Civil Aviation Organization to intensify its work on devising an international régime for the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purposes of detection;

13. Requests the other relevant specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations, in particular the Universal Postal Union, the World Tourism Organization and the International Atomic Energy Agency, within their respective spheres of competence, to consider what further measures can usefully be taken to combat and eliminate terrorism;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue seeking the views of Member States on international terrorism in all its aspects and on ways and means of combating it, including the convening, under the auspices of the United Nations, of an international conference to deal with international terrorism in the light of the proposal referred to in the penultimate preambular paragraph of the present resolution;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the ways and means of enhancing the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism, as well as on proposals made during the debate on this item in the Sixth Committee at the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General to follow up, as appropriate, the implementation of the present resolution and to submit a report in this respect to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

17. Considers that nothing in the present resolution could in any way prejudice the right to self-determination, freedom and independence, as derived from the Charter of the United Nations, of peoples forcibly deprived of that right referred to in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, particularly peoples under colonial and racist régimes or other forms of alien domination, or the right of these peoples to struggle legitimately to this end and to seek and receive support in accordance with the principles of the Charter, the above-mentioned Declaration and the relevant General Assembly resolutions, including the present resolution;

18. Decides to include the item in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session.

General Assembly resolution 44/29

4 December 1989 Meeting 72 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/44/762) without vote, 1 December (meeting 48); draft by Chairman (A/C.6/44/L.22); agenda item 139.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 6th Committee 17-23, 48; plenary 72.

Explaining its position on the draft resolution in the Assembly, Ghana said it had reservations on the insertion of the phrase "and not justifiable" in paragraph 1, because it could only lead to confusion in the absence of an agreed definition of who was a terrorist. It also reserved its position on the insertion of the word "legitimately" in the language of paragraph 17, which it considered inconsistent with the import of that paragraph. Ghana's intention was to draw a line between terrorist activities and the just fight of peoples under colonial domination for self-determination, freedom and independence.

Question of hostage-taking and abduction

The Security Council on 31 July considered the question of hostage-taking and abduction. The Council President made a statement, pointing out that the meeting took place under the shadow of recent events and the cruel reports that Lieutenant-Colonel Higgins, who served the United Nations on a peace-keeping mission in Lebanon, may have been murdered that day. This illustrated with the utmost clarity the necessity for effective international action on the subject of hostage-taking and abduction.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Council, on the same day, unanimously adopted resolution 638(1989).

The Security Council,

Deeply disturbed by the prevalence of incidents of hostage-taking and abduction, and the continued protracted incarceration of many of those held hostage,

Considering that the taking of hostages and abductions are offences of grave concern to all States and serious violations of international humanitarian law, having severe adverse consequences for the human rights of the victims and their families and for the promotion of friendly relations and co-operation among States,

Recalling its resolutions 579(1985) of 18 December 1985 and 618(1988) of 29 July 1988 condemning all acts of hostage-taking and abduction,

Bearing in mind the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted on 17 December 1979, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, adopted on 14 December 1973, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, signed on 23 September 1971, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, signed on 16 December 1970, and other relevant conventions,

1. Condemns unequivocally all acts of hostage-taking and abduction;

2. Demands the immediate safe release of all hostages and abducted persons, wherever and by whomever they are being held;

3. Calls upon all States to use their political influence in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law to secure the safe release of all hostages and abducted persons and to prevent the commission of acts of hostage-taking and abduction;

4. Expresses appreciation for the efforts of the Secretary-General in seeking the release of all hostages and abducted persons and invites him to continue such efforts whenever so requested by a State;

5. Appeals to all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, the Convention for the Suppression of unlawful Seizure of Aircraft and other relevant conventions;

6. Urges the further development of international co-operation among States in devising and adopting effective measures which are in accordance with the rules of international law to facilitate the prevention, prosecution and punishment of all acts of hostage-taking and abduction as manifestations of terrorism.

Marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection

The Security Council on 14 June met to discuss the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Council, on the same day, unanimously adopted resolution 635(1989).

The Security Council,

Conscious of the implications of acts of terrorism for international security,

Deeply concerned by all acts of unlawful interference against international civil aviation,

Mindful of the important role of the United Nations in supporting and encouraging efforts by all States and intergovernmental organizations in preventing and eliminating all acts of terrorism, including those involving the use of explosives,

Determined to encourage the promotion of effective measures to prevent acts of terrorism,

Concerned about the ease with which plastic or sheet explosives can be used in acts of terrorism with little risk of detection,

Taking note of the International Civil Aviation Organization Council resolution of 16 February 1989, in which it urged its member States to expedite current research and development on detection of explosives and on security equipment,

1. Condemns all acts of unlawful interference against the security of civil aviation;

2. Calls upon all States to co-operate in devising and implementing measures to prevent all acts of terrorism, including those involving explosives;

3. Welcomes the work already undertaken by the International Civil Aviation Organization, and by other international organizations, aimed at preventing and eliminating all acts of terrorism, in particular in the field of aviation security;

4. Urges the International Civil Aviation Organization to intensify its work aimed at preventing all acts of terrorism against international civil aviation, and in particular its work on devising an international régime for the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection;

5. Urges all States, and in particular the producers of plastic or sheet explosives, to intensify research into means of making such explosives more easily detectable, and to co-operate in this endeavour;

6. Calls upon all States to share the results of such research and co-operation with a view to devising, in the International Civil Aviation Organization and other competent international organizations, an international régime for the marking of plastic or sheet explosives for the purpose of detection.

Security Council resolution 635(1989)

14 June 1989 Meeting 2869 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/20690).

Draft articles on non-navigational uses of international watercourses

In 1989, ILC continued work on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses,(13) as recommended by the General Assembly in 1988.(31) It discussed the matter on the basis of the fifth report by its Special Rapporteur, Stephen C. McCaffrey (United States),(32) which contained in particular two draft articles(33) respectively entitled "Water-related hazards, harmful conditions and other adverse effects" and "Water-related dangers and emergency situations". At the conclusion of its discussion, the Commission heard a presentation by the Special Rapporteur of the concluding section of his fifth report,(34) containing in particular two draft articles respectively entitled "Relationship between navigational and non-navigational uses; absence of priority among uses" and "Regulation of international watercourses". That section of the report was not discussed by the Commission for lack of time.

Chapter III

States and international law

In 1989, the United Nations continued to be involved in the promotion and development of international law governing States, as well as their international treaties and agreements.

The Secretary-General in November reported on measures to protect diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. The International Law Commission (ILC) continued its work on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier. In December, the General Assembly expressed its appreciation to the Commission for its work and decided to hold consultations at its forty-fifth session to study draft articles on the matter (resolution 44/36). ILC also examined state responsibility, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, and relations between States and international organizations.

The Secretariat continued its depositary functions for agreements, conventions, and treaties deposited with the Secretary-General.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomats

As at 31 December 1989, the number of parties to the various international instruments relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations⁽¹⁾ was as follows: 153 States were parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations,⁽²⁾ with South Africa ratifying in 1989; 42 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality;⁽³⁾ and 54 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes,⁽³⁾ with Bulgaria and Hungary having acceded in 1989.

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations⁽⁴⁾ had 126 parties, with the Byelorussian SSR, Bulgaria, Mongolia, South Africa, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR acceding in 1989; 35 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality,⁽⁵⁾ with Bulgaria acceding in 1989, and 42 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes,⁽⁵⁾ with Bulgaria and Hungary acceding in 1989.

The 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,⁽⁶⁾ had 76 States parties, with Bhutan and Kuwait having acceded in 1989.

Report of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions of 1987⁽⁷⁾ and 1988,⁽⁸⁾ the Secretary-General requested States to submit information on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as to inform him of their views on any measures needed to enhance such protection and safety. In November, the Secretary-General submitted a report⁽⁹⁾ to the Assembly which contained the reports and views received from States, as well as a list of States parties, as at 1 October 1989, to the relevant conventions (see above).

Austria reported that, on 28 March 1989, demonstrators in front of the Embassy of Iraq at Vienna physically attacked an Embassy employee and threw stones, damaging the building. Five to ten persons forcibly entered the Embassy and shots were fired inside the building. Sixty-five persons of Kurdish origin from Turkey and Iran were arrested and temporarily detained. Bolivia informed the Secretary-General of the 6 December 1988 slaying of the Naval Attaché of the Peruvian Embassy. Bulgaria reported that, on 28 May 1989, during a demonstration in front of the Consulate General of Bulgaria at Istanbul, Turkey, shots were fired and stones were thrown at the building and the residence accommodating families of the consular staff, inflicting considerable damage. Participants in the demonstration tried to break into the Consulate premises and called upon the crowd to commit acts of violence against members of the Consulate General.

Chile drew attention to a 30 September 1988 attempt to occupy its Consulate General at Amsterdam, Netherlands, by a group of some 30 Chileans and Netherlands, and an attempt to occupy its Consulate General at Montreal, Canada, by approximately 20 persons on 13 October 1988. Denmark provided information on the 20 May attack against the Embassy of Belgium at Copenhagen by approximately 15 persons, who threw stones and glasses filled with paint through windows of the building. Demonstrations in front of South Africa's new Consulate General building at Copenhagen led to some incidents and caused damage to the building.

Finland reported that, on 30 August 1989, Iraq's Embassy at Helsinki was attacked by two Finnish persons with an automatic weapon, who fired shots and inflicted damage to the Embassy. Police arrested the offenders. Iran provided information on a 7 February attack by 50 persons against its Embassy at The Hague, Netherlands, that caused considerable damage to the premises. On 14 December, six persons forced their way into Iran's Consulate General at Geneva, Switzerland. They behaved violently, threatened the personnel and caused considerable damage to the building. According to a note verbale of Israel on 16 January, its Embassy in London received a letter bomb addressed to the Ambassador. The device was dismantled safely and there were no injuries. On 23 August, a bomb exploded at Israel's Consulate General at Istanbul, causing considerable damage to the building. The Netherlands reported that, on 16 February, the Second Secretary at the Netherlands Embassy at Bogota, Colombia, surprised burglars breaking into his residence. A fight ensued but the Secretary was unharmed.

Status of diplomatic bags and couriers

In 1989, the International Law Commission, at its forty-first session,⁽¹⁰⁾ continued work on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier. In response to a 1987 General Assembly request,⁽¹¹⁾ the Commission received in 1989 an additional reply,⁽¹²⁾ from the United States, on a set of draft articles on the topic. ILC provisionally adopted the articles in 1986.⁽¹³⁾

In 1989, ILC completed a second reading of that set of 32 draft articles. The Commission had before it the eighth report⁽¹⁴⁾ of its Special Rapporteur, Alexander Yankov (Bulgaria), which contained an analytical survey of comments and observations presented by Governments on the 1986 articles, as well as revised texts prepared by the Special Rapporteur. ILC, on the recommendation of its Drafting Committee, adopted the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier, as well as two draft optional protocols devoted, respectively, to the courier and bag of special missions and to the courier and bag of international organizations of a universal character. It recommended to the General Assembly that it convene a conference to study the three drafts and to conclude a convention on the subject.

The 32 articles as well as the draft optional protocols adopted in 1989 were transmitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General.⁽¹⁵⁾

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted resolution 44/36 without vote.

Consideration of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and of the draft optional protocols thereto

The General Assembly,

Noting that the International Law Commission, taking into account the written comments of Governments and views expressed in debates in the Assembly, completed at its forty-first session the second reading of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and also prepared a draft optional protocol on the status of the courier and the bag of special missions and a draft optional protocol on the status of the courier and the bag of international organizations of a universal character,

Taking note of the recommendation of the International Law Commission that the General Assembly should convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries to study the draft articles concerned and the draft optional protocols thereto and to conclude a convention on the subject,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its valuable work on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and to the Special Rapporteur on the topic for his contribution to this work;

2. Decides to hold informal consultations at the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly to study the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and the draft optional protocols thereto, as well as the question of how to deal further with these draft instruments with a view to facilitating the reaching of a generally acceptable decision in the latter respect;

3. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session an item entitled "Consideration of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and of the draft optional protocols thereto".

4 December 1989 Meeting 72 Adopted without vote

State responsibility, liability, immunities and relations

In response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,⁽¹⁾ ILC, at its 1989 session,⁽²⁾ continued its work on four aspects of international law concerning States: State responsibility, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, and relations between States and international organizations.

In December, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account Government comments, ILC should continue its work on those and other topics (resolution 44/35).

Draft articles on State responsibility

In 1989, ILC (2) considered the preliminary report⁽³⁾ of its Special Rapporteur, Gaetano Arangio-Ruiz (Italy) on State responsibility. The report contained in particular two draft articles entitled "Cessation of an internationally wrongful act of a continuing character" and "Restitution in kind". Both articles were referred to the Drafting Committee. The second report⁽⁴⁾ of the Special Rapporteur was not considered for lack of time.

Draft articles on State liability

In 1989, ILC(2) continued its consideration of draft articles on international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law. It examined the fifth report⁽⁵⁾ of its Special Rapporteur on the topic, Julio Barboza (Argentina). The report contained a revised text for the 10 articles of chapters I and II, which had been referred to the Drafting Committee in 1988,⁽⁶⁾ and eight new articles for Chapter III (notification, information and warning by the affected State). The first 9 articles were referred to the Drafting Committee. The new articles were: assessment, notification and information (article 10); procedure for protecting national security or industrial secrets (11); warning by the presumed affected State (12); period for reply to notification; obligation of the State of origin (13); reply to notification (14); absence of reply to notification (15); obligation to negotiate (16); and absence of reply to the notification under article 12 (17).

Draft articles on State immunities

At its 1989 session, ILC considered jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, basing its discussion on a set of 28 draft articles adopted on first reading by the Commission in 1986,⁽⁷⁾ and the preliminary report⁽⁸⁾ and second report⁽⁹⁾ of its Special Rapporteur on the issue, Motoo Ogiso (Japan). The reports contained an analytical survey of comments and observations presented by Governments on the draft articles adopted in 1986, as well as revised texts prepared by the Special Rapporteur for consideration by the Commission on its second reading. After discussion, ILC referred to the Drafting Committee articles 1 to 11 bis and agreed to examine articles 12 to 28 at its next session.

Draft articles on State relations

ILC resumed consideration of relations between States and international organizations (second part of the topic). Its Special Rapporteur, Leonardo Díaz-González (Venezuela), presented his fourth report,⁽¹⁰⁾ which contained in particular 11 draft articles concerning general provisions, legal personality and property, and funds and assets. The report was not discussed for lack of time.

Treaties and agreements

In 1989, the Secretariat continued to act as depositary for bilateral and multilateral agreements deposited with the Secretary-General.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations,⁽¹⁾ which was not in force, had 6 parties as at 31 December 1989.⁽²⁾

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 1989, some 729 international agreements and 349 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 352 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performs depositary functions.

The texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded are published in the United Nations Treaties Series in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. In 1989, the following volumes of the Treaty

Series covering treaties registered or filed in 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981 were issued:

1044, 1107, 1122, 1128, 1131, 1141, 1142, 1146, 1150, 1151, 1154, 1157, 1161, 1165, 1171, 1172, 1178, 1180, 1194, 1195, 1201, 1209, 1210, 1215, 1240.

Multilateral treaties

New multilateral treaties concluded under United Nations auspices

The following treaties, concluded under United Nations auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 1989:(2)

Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 20 November 1989

Second Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights aiming at the abolition of the death penalty, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 15 December 1989

Convention on Civil Liability for Damage caused during Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road, Rail and Inland Navigation Vessels (CRTD), done at Geneva on 10 October 1989
International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 4 December 1989
International Agreement on Jute and Jute Products, 1989, concluded at Geneva on 3 November 1989

Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal, concluded at Basel on 22 March 1989

Multilateral treaties
deposited with the Secretary-General

The number of multilateral treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions stood at 399 at the end of 1989. During the year, 92 signatures were affixed to treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions and 374 instruments of ratification, accession or acceptance and approval or notifications were transmitted to him. In addition, he received 182 communications from States expressing observations or declarations and reservations made at the time of signature, ratification or accession.

The following multilateral treaties for which the Secretary-General acts as depositary came into force during 1989:(2)

Regulations of the Agreement concerning the Adoption of Uniform Conditions of Approval and Reciprocal Recognition of Approval for Motor Vehicle Equipment and Parts, done at Geneva on 20 March 1958:

Regulation No. 80: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of seats of large passenger vehicles and of these vehicles with regard to the strength of the seats and their anchorages; Regulation No. 81: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of rear-view mirrors, and of two-wheeled power-driven vehicles with or without side car with regard to the installation of rear-view mirrors on handlebars;

Regulation No. 82: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of moped headlamps equipped with filament halogen lamps (HS2); Regulation No. 83: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of vehicles with regard to the emission of gaseous pollutants by the engine according to the engine fuel requirements

Chapter IV

Law of the sea

The 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea continued in 1989 to set the legal standards for the use of the world's seas and oceans, exerting a dominant influence on the maritime practices of States even before the entry into force of the Convention. In the light of the significant change in the international political climate, the Secretary-General expressed renewed hope for universal participation in the Convention and urged recognition of its importance in environmental issues.

The Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, at its seventh session, continued to examine issues related to the implementation of the obligations of the four registered pioneer investors in the international sea-bed "Area" (the sea-bed beyond national jurisdiction), and to prepare draft agreements, rules, regulations and procedures for the Authority.

In November, the General Assembly called on all States that had not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention and to observe its provisions when enacting national legislation. It requested the competent international organizations to intensify financial, technological, organizational and managerial assistance to the developing countries in their efforts to realize the benefits of the régime established by the Convention.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

During 1989, five States (Antigua and Barbuda, Kenya, Oman, Somalia and Zaire) ratified the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, bringing the number of ratifications to 42.(1) The Convention was to enter into force 12 months after receipt of the sixtieth instrument of ratification or accession.

The Convention was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982.(2) When the period for signature closed in 1984, it had received 159 signatures.(3)

Developments relating to the Convention

In response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(4) the Secretary-General reported in November 1989(5) on developments relating to the Convention and on the implementation of that resolution. The report brought the Assembly up to date on the status of the Convention and outlined the Convention's impact on State practice and national policy, the settlement of conflicts and disputes, peace and security issues, maritime law, and protection and preservation of the marine environment. It also reviewed marine scientific research, fisheries management and the work of the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, and described the activities of the Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, including assistance to the Preparatory Commission and Member States, monitoring of developments and dissemination of relevant information, and co-operation within the United Nations system.

According to the report, the Convention continued to influence the maritime practices of States, particularly the delimitation of maritime jurisdictional zones. By November 1989, 107 States had established territorial seas not exceeding 12 nautical miles, 18 States had a territorial sea claim over 12 nautical miles, 74 States had proclaimed exclusive economic zones and 18 States had claims to exclusive fishing zones. The report emphasized an increasing number of negotiated agreements between States on the issue of maritime boundaries and provided recent examples of such agreements. It was noted that, in compliance with the Convention, some States had referred their boundary disputes and other disputes pertaining to the law of the sea to the International Court of Justice (see PART FIVE, Chapter I). The report also pointed out an agreement between Australia and Indonesia, providing for the establishment of a joint development zone for exploitation of petroleum resources in the Timor Sea.

Another area that received growing attention of the international community was the integrated management of coastal and ocean resources. A number of initiatives and projects were undertaken in this field by some countries in an effort to combine into a single plan the management of both coastal and wider marine areas under national jurisdiction.

The report further outlined efforts to enhance safety at sea and to prevent pollution of the marine environment, including protocols adopted at the end of 1988 amending the 1974 International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea⁽⁶⁾ that aimed to establish a Global Maritime Distress and Safety System and a new harmonized system of survey and certification for ships. Those protocols were expected to enter into force on 1 February 1992. It also indicated considerable support for the development of a multilateral agreement on the prevention of incidents at sea beyond the territorial sea, based on the existing bilateral arrangements and taking into account instruments such as the International Maritime Organization 1972 Convention on Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea.⁽⁷⁾

An International Convention on Salvage was adopted in London on 25 April 1989 in order to update decades-old international rules on salvage operations at sea. The Convention recognized the major contribution of timely salvage to the safety of vessels and environmental protection and provided guarantees of special compensation to the salvor if the work performed had prevented or minimized damage to the environment.

Issues pertaining to the protection and preservation of the marine environment, including oil pollution, special and particularly sensitive sea areas, ocean dumping, transboundary movement of hazardous wastes and radioactive waste disposal continued to be addressed by the UN and its specialized agencies, and received a detailed consideration in the Secretary-General's special report to the Assembly (see below).

The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) and the Inter-secretariat Committee on Scientific Programmes Relating to Oceanography (ICSPRO) remained engaged in matters related to marine scientific research and ocean services, promoting international co-operation through the framework known as the Long-term and Expanded Programme of Oceanic Research. The framework set out priority areas for international co-ordination in research on the oceans, the "last frontier", including global climate research programmes, research and monitoring of marine pollution, study of the marine environment and accelerated development of ocean services.

The report also described the state of world fisheries, their management and development, and paid special attention to the issue of driftnet fishing, noting an agreement made in September 1989 between the Soviet Union and the United States to co-operate in monitoring driftnet operations by some Pacific countries, with particular concern for the declining numbers of salmon, and the adoption of the Tarawa Declaration by the Twentieth South Pacific Forum (Tarawa, Kiribati, 10-11 July),⁽⁸⁾ which had affirmed that driftnet fishing was not consistent with international legal requirements for high seas fisheries conservation and management. Pursuant to that Declaration, the South Pacific Driftnet Conference (Wellington, New Zealand, 21-24 November)⁽⁹⁾ adopted a convention banning driftnet operations in the region.

Marine environment

In response to a 1988 General Assembly request,⁽⁴⁾ the Secretary-General reported in September 1989⁽¹⁰⁾ on developments related to the protection and preservation of the marine environment in the light of the relevant provisions of the Convention on the Law of the Sea. The report gave an overview of the Convention as a global framework for new environmental law, analysed its relevant provisions and related multilateral treaties, assessed the current state of the marine environment and identified major areas for future actions.

The Convention struck an important balance between the protection of the marine environment and the use of ocean resources and was an instrument for environmentally sustainable development, incorporating new or emerging principles and concepts regarding the global environment that could serve as a model for future international law. The Convention placed States under the responsibility to protect and preserve the marine environment and, for that purpose, to prevent, reduce and control all sources of marine pollution. It paid special attention to transboundary effects of pollution and formulated three major obligations of States: to co-operate in the implementation of international environmental law; to provide assistance to developing countries; and to establish rules, standards and recommended procedures as part of the pollution control system. The Convention also addressed the conservation of the marine living resources in the exclusive economic zone and the high seas, laying down States' duties regarding the protection of marine biodiversity.

The report described the provisions on major pollution sources and certain enforcement measures contained in the Convention, and outlined the framework for the settlement of disputes relating to the subject. The Convention specifically did not prejudice the duties assumed by States under other international agreements, but those obligations were to be carried out in a manner consistent with the Convention's principles and objectives.

According to the assessment based on the work of the Joint Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Pollution (GESAMP), contamination of ocean resources and sea litter resulting from coastal development, sewage disposal and near-shore activities caused serious concern and could have long-term environmental effects. The report stated that, although there was a large body of existing international law on the marine environment, additional regulations were needed on land-based and atmospheric pollution, dumping at sea and pollution from sea-bed activities and oil spills, as well as on the issue of liability and enforcement of existing laws.

The necessity of new environmental agreements in the framework of the Convention was also emphasized at the ad hoc inter-agency meeting convened by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Law of the Sea in July 1989.

Preparatory Commission

The Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea met twice in 1989: it held its seventh session at Kingston, Jamaica (27 February-23 March), and a summer meeting in New York (14 August-1 September).⁽⁵⁾ Major issues considered were the preparation of draft agreements, rules, regulations and procedures for the Authority and the implementation of resolution II,⁽¹¹⁾ adopted in 1982 by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, regarding obligations of the registered pioneer investors in deep sea-bed mining (France, India, Japan and the Soviet Union).⁽¹²⁾

In need of technical assistance, the Commission mandated a meeting⁽¹³⁾ of its Group of Technical Experts (New York, 7-16 August), which submitted to the General Committee a two-stage exploration plan and a report identifying the priority disciplines for personnel training, required skills and areas of training. It was decided to resume the consultations on the pioneer investors' obligations at the Commission's eighth session.

Concerning the preparation of draft agreements, rules, regulations and procedures for the International Sea-bed Authority, the Commission completed in 1989 the first reading of the draft Agreement between the Authority and Jamaica regarding the Authority headquarters, provisionally approved a substantial number of articles, and decided to complete the consideration of the Agreement at the Commission's eighth session. The Commission also discussed a proposal on the voting rights of international organizations, submitted by the European Economic Community, and identified some procedural issues for further consideration. With regard to the establishment of a finance committee to provide assistance and advisory expertise to the Assembly and the Council of the Authority, the issues discussed both in the plenary and during an informal consultation included the Committee's composition, functions and decision-making.

The Commission approved a long-term plan of work for the plenary, providing for the examination in 1990 of the draft rules of the finance committee, the draft protocol on the privileges and immunities of the Authority and the draft staff rules and regulations, as well as consideration in 1991 of the draft Agreement on relations between the Authority and the United Nations, and the draft financial rules and regulations. The Commission's activities were described in its Chairman's statements in March⁽¹⁴⁾ and August.⁽¹⁵⁾

Special Commissions

The Preparatory Commission's four Special Commissions continued to work in accordance with their respective mandates.

Developing land-based producer States

Special Commission 1, mandated to study ways to minimize the difficulties of developing land-based producer States whose economies might be affected by sea-bed mineral production, began its first reading of 66 provisional conclusion⁽¹⁶⁾ on which to base its recommendations to the Authority. They covered: projection of production from the sea-bed area beyond territorial seas ("the Area"); relationship between production from the Area and existing land-based production; identification, definition and measurement of effects on developing land-based producer States; determination of the problems of those affected; and formulation of measures to minimize their difficulties. At the recommendation of its Bureau, the Special Commission added to the list five new topics dealing with production and trading of copper, nickel, cobalt and manganese. The Commission considered 17 provisional conclusions and decided to continue the discussion at its next session.

The Ad Hoc Working Group of the Special Commission continued its deliberations on the criteria for identifying developing land-based producer States actually or likely to be affected by sea-bed production, and on a system of compensation and assistance to the States affected. The Group accepted, with two modifications and one exception, suggestions formulated by its Chairman both on the criteria⁽¹⁷⁾ and on three stages of remedial measures⁽¹⁸⁾ involving assistance through international, regional and subregional organizations, bilateral arrangements between the affected States and sea-bed miners, and the Authority's own compensation fund. The Group was to continue discussions on unresolved issues in 1990. The Chairman of Special Commission 1 reported in March⁽¹⁹⁾ and August⁽²⁰⁾ on the progress of its work.

The Enterprise

Special Commission 2, charged with preparing for the establishment of the Enterprise-the operational arm of the Authority-completed, in 1989, an article-by-article review of the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea relating to the structure and or organization of the Enterprise. According to March(21) and August(22) reports of its Chairman, the Special Commission identified a number of provisions where annotations to the Convention were called for. Those included: qualifications of nominees to the Governing Board of the Enterprise; the relationship between the Governing Board and the Director-General and between the Council of the Authority and the Governing Board; the Board's auditing and decision-making powers; the confidentiality issue; and the initial fund of the Enterprise.

The Chairman's Advisory Group on Assumptions continued to monitor metal price movements, long-term projections and technological developments relating to sea-bed mining. It reported an escalation of nickel, copper and manganese prices and concluded that, although deep mining of those metals was not economically viable yet, the price increase might reach a level at which it would become feasible.

The Commission's Ad Hoc Working Group on Training, set up to prepare draft principles, guidelines and procedures for the training programme, completed its work in March 1989. In August, the Preparatory Commission adopted the Training Programme for the Enterprise,(23) submitted by the Chairman of Special Commission 2. In a statement(24) accompanying the Programme, the Chairman noted that its adoption represented the first concrete preparatory measure taken by the signatories to the Convention with regard to the future Enterprise of the Authority.

The Special Commission's plan of work for 1990 included the implementation of the Training Programme, discussion of transitional arrangements for the Enterprise and matters dealing with exploration.

Sea-bed mining code

Special Commission 3, established to prepare the rules, regulations and procedures for the exploration and exploitation of the deep sea-bed, completed its first reading of the draft regulations on technology transfer until 10 years after the commencement of commercial production by the Enterprise. The issues discussed included limitations on undertakings, scope of the regulations and the procedure for obtaining technology.

In August, the Commission began its preliminary first reading of the draft regulations on production authorizations, taking into consideration a working paper by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, which, taking into account the production policies and production control formula contained in the Convention, elaborated upon the two-step procedure in the authorization system based on that formula. During the examination of the draft regulations, particular attention was paid to the articles dealing with authorization for commercial production, the time-limit for submission of applications and their consideration by the Legal and Technical Commission, and the setting of a production ceiling. The Special Commission hoped to finish with the full first reading in 1990.

On 15 and 17 August, Special Commission 3 held a seminar on production policies, which examined the Convention's provisions on the authorization system and discussed matters relating to the "floor", ceiling and safeguard clauses of production policy. The activities of Special Commission 3 were described in its Chairman's reports in March(25) and August.(26)

International Tribunal

Special Commission 4, set up to recommend practical arrangements for the establishment of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, completed its examination of the draft Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and requested the secretariat to revise it in the light of the suggestions made. It then began to consider principles governing relationship agreements between the Tribunal and the United Nations, its specialized agencies with relevant competences, the Authority, the International Court of Justice and other international organizations.

The Commission's Chairman continued informal consultations with the Chairman of the Group of 77 and interested delegations on matters relating to the seat of the Tribunal, some important elements of which required further consideration. Consultations were also completed on the prompt release of vessels and crews, and the Commission decided that redrafts of two articles of the draft rules should be incorporated into the revised draft rules of the Tribunal.

The agenda recommended by the Bureau to the Special Commission for its next session included consideration of the institutional structure and initial staffing needs of the Tribunal and continued examination of the main content of relationship agreements to be concluded with other bodies. The Special Commission's Acting Chairman reported in March(27) and its Chairman reported in August(28) on progress made.

Functions of the Secretary-General

Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

The Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, in conformity with a 1988 resolution of the General Assembly,(4) provided services to the Preparatory Commission, Member States and intergovernmental and other organizations in preparing for the entry into force of the Convention and for the commencement of the functioning of the International Sea-bed Authority and the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. In 1989, it provided information, advice and assistance to States as well as to global, regional and subregional organizations, academic institutions, scholars and others on various aspects of the Convention and its implementation. It also monitored and reported on marine-related developments, including a special report on the protection and preservation of the marine environment (see above) and another on economic and technical aspects of marine affairs,⁽²⁹⁾ and prepared studies and analyses to facilitate a better understanding by States of the Convention and its effect on their rights and duties.

As the focal point for marine affairs within the United Nations, the Office continued to participate in and support inter-agency programmes and activities such as a meeting of experts sponsored by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (Vienna, 21 April), which discussed the establishment of a Mediterranean regional centre for research and development in marine industrial technology. A seminar of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 6-10 February) focused on offshore installations and structures in exclusive economic zones. A Meeting of Experts for the Co-operation on Ocean Mining and Uses of the Sea (Quito, Ecuador, 12-16 June) considered scientific, technical, legal, environmental and planning components of the question. In February and in April, the Office participated in, respectively, the third session of the joint Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the twenty-fifth session of the Inter-secretariat Committee on Scientific Programmes Relating to Oceanography and was represented at the nineteenth session of GESAMP in May. It assisted the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean in preparing guidelines and recommendations on sea-use planning and coastal management for the States of the region and provided support to the ongoing activities of the Conference on Indian Ocean Marine Affairs Co-operation and the Zone of Peace and Co-operation of the South Atlantic. In the formulation and conduct of the annual training programme by the World Maritime University (Malmö, Sweden, 20-26 August), the Office examined various aspects relating to the exclusive economic zone. It continued its support and assistance to the Marine Affairs Institute in Trinidad and Tobago, as well as to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the establishment of an oceanographic institute in Yemen.

To facilitate research and study on the law of the sea, its implementation and related marine affairs, the Office offered annually the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, established in 1981⁽³⁰⁾ in honor of the first President of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. The fourth annual fellowship, providing post-graduate research and study and a subsequent internship with the Office, was awarded to Patricia Sobion of the Ministry of Legal Affairs of Trinidad and Tobago.

The Office in 1989 published, completed or was preparing for publication a number of legislative histories concerning navigation on the high seas;⁽³¹⁾ archipelagic States; exclusive economic zones; artificial islands; offshore installations and structures; and passage through straits. The first two volumes (1985-1987)⁽³²⁾ of the Annual Review of Ocean Affairs: law and policy, main documents were published, providing a comprehensive compilation of documents on current developments in legal and policy matters relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea.

As to State practice, work was completed on three volumes dealing with maritime jurisdiction and the regime applicable to it,⁽³³⁾ national legislation on the continental shelf⁽³⁴⁾ and marine scientific research in areas under national jurisdiction (legislation, regulations and supplementary documents).⁽³⁵⁾ Two issues of the Law of the Sea Bulletin appeared in English, French and Spanish (Nos. 13 and 14).

Analytical studies on economic and technical aspects of marine affairs, prepared by the Office, dealt with prevention and resolution of conflicts in sea-use planning, a simulation exercise for such planning, sea-bed mineral development, and the practical implementation of the regime for marine scientific research in areas under national jurisdiction. A 1988 study on baselines and relevant provisions of the Convention⁽³⁶⁾ was reissued in 1989 for technical reasons.

The Law of the Sea Information System (LOSIS) was further developed in 1989. The system, composed of a group of databases, each containing information on different aspects of the law of the sea, was being supplemented by the collection of additional marine-related data. The Country Marine Profile Database had 98 categories of information for more than 240 countries and entities. References to legislation and regulations had been coded into the National Marine Legislation Database, comprising 3,641 entries. The Minerals Database contained 25 categories of information on copper, nickel, manganese and cobalt, by country and globally, covering production, consumption, import and export of the minerals in various forms at various prices for the period 1971-1986. To assess the impact of data changes in the assumptions of future mineral situations, two new databases had been developed: PRODAUTH, concerning provisions of the Convention dealing with the production ceiling for sea-bed mining; and FIN-TERM, for financial terms applicable for sea-bed mining contractors.

The Office also continued to support the development of the Aquatic Sciences and Fisheries Information System (ASFIS) as an international coordinating input centre for the Aquatic Sciences and Fisheries Abstracts, a major information module for ASFIS.

By decision 1989/180 of 27 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's report on economic and technical aspects of marine affairs.⁽²⁹⁾ By the same decision, it also took note of an IOC report on its long-term and expanded programme of oceanographic research.⁽³⁷⁾

On 20 November 1989, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/26 by recorded vote.

Law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/66 of 3 December 1982, 38/59 A of 14 December 1983, 39/73 of 13 December 1984, 40/63 of 10 December 1985, 41/34 of 5 November 1986, 42/20 of 18 November 1987 and 43/18 of 1 November 1988, regarding the law of the sea,

Recognizing that, as stated in the third preambular paragraph of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, the problems of ocean space are closely inter-related and need to be considered as a whole,

Convinced that it is important to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose,

Emphasizing the need for States to ensure consistent application of the Convention, as well as the need for harmonization of national legislation with the provisions of the Convention,

Considering that, in its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, it proclaimed that the sea-bed and ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction (hereinafter referred to as "the Area"), as well as the resources of the Area, are the common heritage of mankind,

Recalling that the Convention provides the régime to be applied to the Area and its resources,

Welcoming the expressions of willingness to explore all possibilities of addressing issues, as referred to in the statements made at the end of the meeting of the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, held in New York from 14 August to 1 September 1989, in order to secure universal participation in the Convention,

Recognizing the need for co-operation in the early and effective implementation by the Preparatory Commission of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea,

Noting with satisfaction the progress made in the Preparatory Commission since its inception, including the registration in 1987 as pioneer investors of the Institut français de recherche pour l'exploitation de la mer

(IFREMER), the Government of India, Deep Ocean Resources Development Co., Ltd. (DORD) and Yuzh-morgeologiya, whose applications were submitted by the Governments of France, India, Japan and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, respectively, bearing in mind that such registration entails both rights and obligations,

Noting also with satisfaction the designation by the Preparatory Commission of reserved areas for the Authority from the application areas submitted by the pioneer investors pursuant to resolution II,

Noting that the Preparatory Commission has decided to hold its eighth regular session at Kingston from 5 to 30 March 1990 and to hold a summer meeting in New York in 1990,

Noting also the increasing needs of countries, especially developing countries, for information, advice and assistance in the implementation of the Convention and in their developmental process for the full realization of the benefits of the comprehensive legal régime established by the Convention,

Concerned that the developing countries are as yet unable to take effective measures for the full realization of these benefits owing to the lack of resources and of the necessary scientific and technological capabilities,

Recognizing the need to enhance and supplement the efforts of States and competent international organizations to enable developing countries to acquire such capabilities,

Recognizing also that the Convention encompasses all uses and resources of the sea and that all related activities within the United Nations system need to be implemented in a manner consistent with it,

Noting with appreciation the important initiative of the Secretary-General in convening inter-agency consultations on international and regional developments in ocean affairs and the law of the sea,

Deeply concerned at the current state of the marine environment,

Mindful of the importance of the Convention for the protection of the marine environment,

Noting with concern the use of fishing methods and practices that can have an adverse impact on the conservation and management of marine living resources,

Taking special note of the report of the Secretary-General on the protection and preservation of the marine environment prepared in pursuance of paragraph 15 of General Assembly resolution 43/18,

Conscious of the urgent need to increase the scientific knowledge of the marine environment,

Taking note of activities carried out in 1989 under the major programme on marine affairs, set forth in chapter 25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989, in accordance with the report of the Secretary-General, as approved in General Assembly resolution 38/59 A, and the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling its approval of the financing of the expenses of the Preparatory Commission from the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking special note of the report of the Secretary-General prepared in pursuance of paragraph 14 of General Assembly resolution 43/18,

1. Recalls the historic significance of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea as an important contribution to the maintenance of peace, justice and progress for all peoples of the world;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the increasing and overwhelming support for the Convention, as evidenced, inter alia, by the one hundred and fifty-nine signatures and forty-two of the sixty ratifications or accessions required for entry into force of the Convention;

3. Invites all States to make renewed efforts to facilitate universal participation in the Convention;

4. Calls upon all States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention at the earliest possible date to allow the effective entry into force of the new legal regime for the uses of the sea and its resources;

5. Calls upon all States to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose;

6. Also calls upon States to observe the provisions of the Convention when enacting their national legislation;

7. Notes the progress being made by the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea in all areas of its work;

8. Reiterates its conviction that the early, satisfactory and successful conclusion of the current consultations in the Preparatory Commission on the implementation of the obligations of the registered pioneer investors and the certifying States would constitute an important contribution to the overall progress in the work of the Commission;

9. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his efforts in support of the Convention and for the effective execution of the major programme on marine affairs set forth in chapter 25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989 and requests him to take into account the prospective entry into force of the Convention and the increased needs of States for assistance in the implementation of the Convention in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997;

10. Also expresses its appreciation for the report of the Secretary-General prepared in pursuance of paragraph 14 of General Assembly resolution 43/18 and requests him to carry out the activities outlined therein, as well as those aimed at the strengthening of the legal régime of the sea, special emphasis being placed on the work of the Preparatory Commission, including the implementation of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea;

11. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to assist States in the implementation of the Convention and in the development of a consistent and uniform approach to the legal régime thereunder, as well as in their national, subregional and regional efforts towards the full realization of the benefits therefrom, and invites the organs and organizations of the United Nations system to co-operate and lend assistance in these endeavours;

12. Requests the competent international organizations, in accordance with their respective policies, to intensify financial, technological, organizational and managerial assistance to the developing countries in their efforts to realize the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention and to examine means of strengthening co-operation among themselves and with donor States in the provision of such assistance;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth and forty-sixth sessions a report identifying the needs of States in regard to the development and management of ocean resources and the measures currently taken by States and by the competent international organizations in responding to those needs, and to suggest methods and mechanisms for maximizing opportunities for the early realization for all States, during the decade beginning in 1990, of the benefits of the comprehensive legal régime established by the Convention;

14. Approves the decision of the Preparatory Commission to hold its eighth regular session at Kingston from 5 to 30 March 1990 and to hold a summer meeting in New York in 1990;

15. Recognizes that the protection of the marine environment will be significantly enhanced by the implementation of applicable provisions of the Convention;

16. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his report on the protection and preservation of the marine environment and requests him to make the report available to the intergovernmental meetings to be held in preparation of the proposed 1992 United Nations conference on environment and development;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare an updated and expanded report on the protection and preservation of the marine environment as a contribution to the proposed 1992 conference, taking into account, inter alia, the comments thereon;

18. Calls upon States and other members of the international community to strengthen their co-operation in the conservation of marine living resources, including the prevention of the use of fishing methods and practices that can have an adverse impact on the conservation and management of marine living resources;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare for the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session a study on marine scientific research in the light of the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea;

20. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on developments pertaining to the Convention and all related activities and on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Law of the sea".

Chapter V

Other legal questions

In 1989, the United Nations continued its work on various aspects of international law and international economic law.

In December, the General Assembly took note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization and requested it to accord priority, at its 1990 session, to the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations, and to continue work on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States. It requested the Secretary-General to continue the preparation of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes (resolution 44/37).

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider in 1989 the relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, its host country. In December, the Assembly urged the host country, in the light of travel regulations issued by the United States, to continue to bear in mind its obligations to facilitate the functioning of the United Nations and its missions, and stressed the importance of a positive perception of the United Nations and its role in the strengthening of international peace and security (44/38).

In November, the Assembly declared the period 1990-1999 as the United Nations Decade of International Law, the main purposes of which would be to promote acceptance of and respect for international law; promote means for the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to and full respect for the International Court of Justice (ICJ); encourage the progressive development of international law and its codification; and encourage its teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation (44/23).

The International Law Commission (ILC) continued to elaborate on the progressive development and codification of international law. At its forty-first session (Geneva, 2 May-21 July 1989), ILC adopted 32 draft articles and 2 draft optional protocols on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier. It recommended to the Assembly that it convene a conference to study the three drafts and conclude a convention on the subject. The Commission also provisionally adopted three new articles of the Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind. In December, the Assembly took note of the report of the Commission (44/35).

The twenty-fifth session of the International Law Seminar was held at Geneva from 12 to 30 June and was attended by 22 participants of different nationalities, mostly from developing countries. The Assembly requested States and interested organizations to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law (44/28). The Assembly requested ILC to address, at its forty-second session, the question of establishing an international criminal court or other international criminal trial mechanism with jurisdiction over persons alleged to have committed crimes that may be covered under a draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind, including persons engaged in illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs across national frontiers (44/39).

Legal aspects of international economic law and the new international economic order continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the General Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee. At its twenty-fourth session, UNCITRAL dealt primarily with a Draft Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade, which was adopted by its Working Group on International Contract Practices. The Assembly decided that an international conference of plenipotentiaries should be convened at Vienna in 1991 to consider the draft convention prepared by the Commission and to embody the results of its work in a convention on the subject. It repeated its invitation to States that had not yet done so to sign, ratify or accede to the conventions elaborated under the auspices of the Commission (44/33).

The Assembly also requested the Secretary-General to seek proposals of Member States concerning the most appropriate procedures to be adopted with regard to the codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order (44/30).

International organizations and international law

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

The Secretary-General, in his annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization (see p. 3) stated that no realistic view of human experience from 1945 to the present could ignore the transformation of the world scene reflected by the presence of the United Nations. It was under the auspices of the Organization that an international agenda encompassing all matters of common concern to nations had taken shape and a massive change in international life had been effected and, by and large, peacefully absorbed.

The Secretary-General said, however, that the cold war had left the United Nations in the position of waiting until common sense and the dynamics of the world situation would induce a return to the manner of handling international affairs outlined in its Charter. He noted that it had not yet been two years since the United Nations had begun to witness signs of such a return. The two major power blocs had started an assiduous search for bases of stable peace between them. In addition, a growing determination to work together by the permanent members of the Security Council had facilitated purposeful diplomatic efforts towards the resolution of some long-standing disputes. In an increasing number of cases, the role of the United Nations was being looked upon as pivotal in the settlement of problems that not too long before had appeared intractable. The assistance of the Organization was being sought more than ever before in its history. There was recognition that around the world lasting solutions to international problems must be based on universally accepted principles as laid down in the Charter. The Secretary-General cited progress towards independence for Namibia as a special example of international co-operation.

Regarding the new demand and enthusiasm for peace-keeping operations, the Secretary-General stated that it was imperative to keep this situation under constant scrutiny so that the best could be made of the Organization's peace-keeping capacity, and also so that it could be developed in a positive and constructive way. Three main areas needed to be kept under constant review: function, capacity and performance, and support. The question of enhancing the credibility and authority of peace-keeping operations needed to be examined at the United Nations by Member States, he said, and especially by members of the Security Council. The degree of training for peace-keeping in national armies needed to be enhanced as a measure of readiness for United Nations peace-keeping duties. The Secretary-General hoped that Member States would address the financial problems of peace-keeping urgently and with imagination. A promising possibility would be the establishment of a special reserve fund for peace-keeping, supported by all Member States. Such a fund would vastly facilitate the timely launching of operations mandated by the Security Council. The Secretary-General noted that peace-keeping had been operated on a shoe-string, and nowhere had the inadequacy of present arrangements been more evident than in the area of logistical support, which needed to be made more reliable and responsive. Here again the new political climate, he said, should allow a much freer exchange and more co-operation. In particular, he hoped that countries with large and far-ranging military establishments would work together to establish a more dependable and responsive logistical framework. For the longer term, the United Nations needed to consider where peace-keeping fitted into the underlying effort to build the international rule of law and a reliable system for the maintenance of international peace and security.

The United Nations, the Secretary-General said, needed to demonstrate its capacity to function as the guardian of the world's security. What was needed was an improvement of existing mechanisms and capabilities in the light of the demands of the unfolding international situation, rather than any changes in the Organization's structure. In order to activate the potential of the United Nations for averting wars, earlier discussion of potentially explosive situations was needed, for which timely, accurate and unbiased information was a prerequisite. The current pool of material available to the Secretary-General, consisting of information provided by government representatives supplemented by the collection and analyses of published reports and comments, was manifestly insufficient in cases where more than anticipatory diplomacy was required. The Secretary-General needed to have at his disposal information that was dependable prima facie. Only then could he be in a position to assess whether an issue needed to be brought to the attention of the Security Council under Article 99 of the Charter. Arrangements could be made to receive information from space-based and other technical surveillance systems.

The Secretary-General said that he wanted the United Nations to play a key role, as envisaged in the Charter, in promoting social progress and better standards of life for people throughout the world. There was an opportunity to extend to the economic and social spheres the same spirit of co-operation as had recently emerged in the political field. Discussions were continuing over the restructuring of the intergovernmental machinery in the economic and social sectors, including the revitalization of the Economic and Social Council. Although the Council had made progress in enhancing its effectiveness, what was required above all was an increased commitment by Member States to utilize and support the Organization in its economic and social activities. Only thus could the full potential of the United Nations in this sphere be realized.

The Secretary-General concluded by noting that the capabilities of the United Nations would be best employed if the Organization as a whole was used more purposefully by its Member States than in the recent past. The decision-making process on political matters had vastly improved with the emergence of a collegial spirit among permanent Security Council members and with daily co-operation between the Council as a whole and the Secretary-General. But more was demanded: agreement among the major Powers must carry with it the support of a majority of Member States if it was to make the desired impact on the world situation.

Activities of the Special Committee

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization met in New York from 27 March to 14 April 1989. It reported(1) on its discussion of proposals on the maintenance of international peace and security, in addition to the rationalization of existing UN procedures and the peaceful settlement of disputes between States (see PART FIVE, Chapter II) as requested by the General Assembly in 1988.(2)

The Committee's Working Group discussed a working paper(3) submitted by Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand and Spain on fact-finding by the United Nations to assist in the maintenance of international peace and security. It also examined a document(4) submitted by Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic devoted to the same issue. Careful note of all comments on each document was taken by the co-sponsors, who planned to work on the revision of the documents for the future work of the Committee.

The Working Group had before it a working paper(5) submitted by France and the United Kingdom and a conference room paper by the USSR pertaining to the rationalization of procedures of the United Nations. The Working Group called upon the sponsors of both papers and other interested delegations to conduct informal consultations under the chairmanship of the Committee's chairman. After an extensive round of consultations, France and the United Kingdom indicated that they would submit a revised version of their working paper at the Committee's next session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/37 without vote.

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh, thirty-ninth, fortieth, forty-first, forty-second, forty-third and forty-fourth sessions, as well as the views and comments expressed on them by Member States,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization on the work of its session held in 1989,

Expressing its satisfaction at the completion of the work on the draft document on the resort to a commission of good offices, mediation or conciliation within the United Nations and at the recommendation of the Special Committee that it should be annexed to a decision to be adopted by the General Assembly at its present session,

Mindful of the desirability of further work being done by the Special Committee in the field of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States,

Noting with appreciation the progress achieved in the elaboration of the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 12 February to 2 March 1990;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 1990, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 below;

(a) To accord priority to the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context, to consider:

(i) Primarily, the question of fact-finding activities by the United Nations on the basis of proposals and suggestions before it;

(ii) Other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security that might be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 1990;

(b) To continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context:

(i) To consider proposals relating to this question that might be submitted to the Special Committee;

- (ii) To examine the progress report of the Secretary-General on the elaboration of the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;
- 4. Requests the Special Committee to keep the question of the rationalization of the procedures of the United Nations under active review;
- 5. Also requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever that has significance for the outcome of its work;
- 6. Decides that the Special Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States in its meetings, including those of its working group;
- 7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, on a priority basis, the preparation of the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, on the basis of the outline elaborated by the Special Committee and in the light of the views expressed in the course of the discussions in the Sixth Committee and in the Special Committee, and to report to the Special Committee at its session in 1990 on the progress of work, before submitting to it the draft handbook in its final form, with a view to its approval at a later stage;
- 8. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;
- 9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

In resolution 44/21 of 15 November, the Assembly called upon States to intensify their practical efforts to ensure international peace and security in all its aspects through co-operative means in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations. It also reaffirmed its support of the validity and relevance of the Charter and urged all States to abide by it (see PART ONE, Chapter I).

Host country relations

In 1989, the Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider relations between the United Nations diplomatic community and the United States, its host country, as requested by the General Assembly in 1988.(6) The Committee's annual report to the Assembly(7) contained summaries of discussions held at five meetings between March and November, and of communications from Member States on the security of their missions and the safety of their personnel. In May, the Committee set up a Working Group to explore the possibility of establishing a commissary at UN headquarters to assist diplomatic personnel and staff. The Committee also organized, in co-operation with the Secretariat and the United States mission, a talk on matters relating to the use of motor vehicles, including parking problems.

Topics dealt with by the Committee included travel regulations, acceleration of immigration and customs procedures, exemption from taxes, transportation and other matters. On 19 January, the United States advised the Secretary-General that all Chinese employees of the United Nations assigned to New York would be required to submit written notification for non-official travel in the United States. China objected to the travel restrictions and limitations imposed by the United States, characterizing them as illegal and unfair. Bulgaria, the USSR and Czechoslovakia also described the restrictions as discriminatory. The United States asserted that travel regulations had been adopted by the host country for national security reasons, which, in no way however, affected official travel nor created impediments in travelling to or from the Headquarters district. The legal position of the United Nations with respect to the new regulations was that they constituted an unjustified and unmotivated measure which discriminated against staff members of the Secretariat solely on the basis of their nationality.

On 10 November, the Committee urged the host country to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions; took note of positions of affected Member States, the Secretary-General and the host country regarding travel regulations; called upon missions to co-operate fully with the United States authorities in cases affecting the security of missions and their personnel; and appealed to the host country to review the measures relating to diplomatic vehicles with a view to responding to the needs of the diplomatic community. The Committee stressed the importance of a positive perception of the increasingly important work of the United Nations, and urged that efforts be continued to build public awareness of the vital role played by the United Nations and missions in the solution of global and regional problems and in the strengthening of international peace and security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/38 without vote.

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations and the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recalling also that any problems related to the privileges and immunities of all missions accredited to the United Nations, the security of the missions and the safety of their personnel are of great importance and concern to Member States, as well as the primary responsibility of the host country,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

Conscious of the increased interest shown by Member States in participating in the work of the Committee,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 45 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations is in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States and urges the host country to continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country and hopes that outstanding problems raised at the meetings of the Committee will be duly settled in a spirit of co-operation and in accordance with international law;

4. Urges the host country, in the light of the consideration by the Committee of travel regulations issued by the host country, to continue to bear in mind its obligations to facilitate the functioning of the United Nations and the missions accredited to it;

5. Stresses the importance of a positive perception of the work of the United Nations, and urges that efforts be continued to build up public awareness by explaining, through all available means, the importance of the role played by the United Nations and the missions accredited to it in the strengthening of international peace and security;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

7. Requests the Committee to continue its work, in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

United Nations Decade of International Law

In 1989, Zimbabwe, on behalf of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, requested(8) the General Assembly to include on its agenda an item concerning a United Nations Decade of International Law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 November 1989, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/23 without vote.

United Nations Decade of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that one of the purposes of the United Nations is to maintain international peace and security, and to that end to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace,

Recalling the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes,

Recognizing the role of the United Nations in promoting greater acceptance of and respect for the principles of international law and in encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Convinced of the need to strengthen the rule of law in international relations,

Stressing the need to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law,

Noting that, in the remaining decade of the twentieth century, important anniversaries will be celebrated that are related to the adoption of international legal documents, such as the centenary of the first International Peace Conference, held at The Hague in 1899, which adopted the Convention for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes and created the Permanent Court of Arbitration, the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Charter of the United Nations and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Declares the period 1990-1999 as the United Nations Decade of International Law;

2. Considers that the main purposes of the Decade should be, inter alia:

(a) To promote acceptance of and respect for the principles of international law;

(b) To promote means and methods for the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to and full respect for the International Court of Justice;

(c) To encourage the progressive development of international law and its codification;

(d) To encourage the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States and appropriate international bodies, as well as of non-governmental organizations working in the field, on the programme for the Decade and on appropriate action to be taken during the Decade, including the possibility of holding a third international peace conference or other suitable international conference at the end of the Decade, and to submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

4. Decides to consider this question at its forty-fifth session in a working group of the Sixth Committee with a view to preparing generally acceptable recommendations for the Decade;

5. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "United Nations Decade of International Law".

International Law Commission

In its report⁽¹⁾ on its forty-first session (Geneva, 2 May-21 July), ILC described its work on the progressive development and codification of international law.

In 1989 it adopted a set of 32 draft articles and 2 draft optional protocols on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier, and recommended to the Assembly that it convene a conference to study the drafts and conclude a convention on the subject (see PART FIVE, Chapter 111). The Commission also provisionally adopted three new articles of the Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind (see PART FIVE, Chapter II). The draft articles adopted by ILC in 1989 were subsequently transmitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly.⁽²⁾

The Commission also considered the issues of State responsibility, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, relations between States and international organizations (see PART FIVE, Chapter III), and the law of non-navigational uses of international watercourses (see PART FIVE, Chapter II).

The Commission held 54 public meetings. In addition, its Drafting Committee held 36 meetings, the Enlarged Bureau of the Commission, 3 meetings, and the Bureau's Planning Group, 9 meetings. Based on their recommendations regarding its programme, procedures and working methods and efforts to improve the ways in which the Commission's report was considered in the Sixth Committee, ILC adopted on 18 July paragraphs on its present and future programme of work; the role of the Drafting Committee; the relationship of the Commission with the General Assembly; the duration of the session and other matters. The Secretariat prepared for ILC's attention a topical summary⁽³⁾ of the Assembly's Sixth Committee's discussion in 1989 on the ILC report for the previous year.

ILC continued to co-operate in 1989 with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee, the European Committee on Legal Co-operation and the Inter-American Juridical Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/35 without vote.

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-first session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-first session,

Emphasizing the need for the progressive development of international law and its codification in order to make it a more effective means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and to give increased importance to its role in relations among States,

Recognizing the importance of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission further to enhance their contributions to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Considering that experience has demonstrated the usefulness of structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention on each of the main topics dealt with in the report, and that this process is facilitated when the Commission indicates specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments are of particular interest for the continuation of its work,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-first session;

2. Recommends that, taking into account the comments of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission should continue its work on the topics in its current programme, listed as items 2, 3 and 5 to 8 in paragraph 7 of its report;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts of the International Law Commission to improve its procedures and methods of work and to formulate proposals on its future programme of work;

4. Requests the International Law Commission:

(a) To keep under review the planning of its activities for the term of office of its members, bearing in mind the desirability of achieving as much progress as possible in the preparation of draft articles on specific topics;

(b) To consider further its methods of work in all their aspects, bearing in mind that the staggering of the consideration of some topics might contribute, inter alia, to a more effective consideration of its report in the Sixth Committee;

(c) To pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, those specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest for the continuation of its work;

5. Invites the International Law Commission, when circumstances so warrant, to request a special rapporteur to attend the session of the General Assembly during the discussion of the topic for which that special rapporteur is responsible and requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements within existing resources;

6. Recommends the continuation of efforts to improve the ways in which the report of the International Law Commission is considered in the Sixth Committee, with a view to providing effective guidance for the Commission in its work;

7. Decides that the Sixth Committee, in structuring its debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly, should continue to bear in mind the possibility of reserving time for informal exchanges of views on matters relating to the work of the Commission;

8. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly commence on 29 October 1990;

9. Takes note of the comments of the International Law Commission on the question of the duration of its session, as presented in paragraph 743 of its report, and expresses the view that the requirements of the work for the progressive development of international law and its codification and the magnitude and complexity of the subjects on the agenda of the Commission make it desirable that the usual duration of its sessions be maintained;

10. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the increased role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the summary records and other documentation of the International Law Commission;

11. Urges Governments and, as appropriate, international organizations to respond in writing as fully and expeditiously as possible to the requests of the International Law Commission for comments, observations and replies to questionnaires and for materials on topics in its programme of work;

12. Reaffirms its wish that the International Law Commission continue to enhance its co-operation with intergovernmental legal bodies whose work is of interest for the progressive development of international law and its codification;

13. Once again expresses the wish that seminars will continue to be held in conjunction with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants from developing countries will be given the opportunity to attend those seminars, appeals to States that can do so to make the voluntary contributions that are urgently needed for the holding of the seminars and expresses the hope that every effort will continue to be made by the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to provide the seminars with adequate services, including interpretation, as required;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate.

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

International Law Seminar

Pursuant to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(4) the twenty-fifth session of the International Law Seminar was held at Geneva, 12-30 June 1989. For post-graduate students of international law and young professors or government officials dealing with international law, the seminar took place during the ILC 1989 session. Twenty-two participants of different nationalities, mostly from developing countries, and three United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) fellows participated, attending ILC meetings as well as lectures specifically organized for them. Austria, Finland, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ireland, Mexico, Sweden and Switzerland made voluntary financial contributions making possible 12 full fellowships and four partial fellowships for participants in 1989. Since the first seminar in 1964, fellowships had been awarded to 280 of 558 participants representing 124 nationalities.

The General Assembly appealed for voluntary contributions to the seminars in resolutions 44/35 and 44/28.

Other activities

A number of additional training courses were offered in 1989 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law.(5) Under the annual joint United Nations-UNITAR Fellowship Programme and as authorized by the General Assembly in 1987,(6) 16 middle-grade governmental legal officers and young teachers of international law from developing countries attended courses for six weeks at The Hague Academy of International Law (Netherlands), as well as special lectures and seminars organized by UNITAR. Some fellows also participated in the International Law Seminar in Geneva (see above), and others received practical training at legal offices of the United Nations and related organizations. Because of lack of funds, UNITAR did not implement the regional training and refresher course in international law which had been scheduled in 1989 for the African region.

In response to a 1987 General Assembly request,(6) the Secretary-General recommended that, for the biennium 1990-1991, the programme should continue to be conducted by the Secretariat along the same lines as in the past, leaving room for new initiatives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/28 without vote.

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

The General Assembly,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law and the recommendations made by the Secretary-General and adopted by the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, which are contained in that report,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Bearing in mind the objectives of the United Nations Decade of International Law,

Noting with appreciation the efforts made by States at the bilateral level to provide assistance in the teaching and study of international law,

Convinced, nevertheless, that States and international organizations and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme and to increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming its resolutions 2464(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2550(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2838(XXVI) of 18 December 1971, 3106(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, 3502(XXX) of 15 December 1975, 32/146 of 16 December 1977, 36/108 of 10 December 1981 and 38/129 of 19 December 1983, in which it stated that in the conduct of the Programme it was desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international organizations and others, as well as its resolutions 34/144 of 17 December 1979, 40/66 of 11 December 1985 and 42/48 of 7 December 1987, in which it also expressed the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, account would be taken of the need to secure representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

Noting that the publication of the United Nations Juridical Yearbook in languages other than French and English contributes to the wider dissemination, study and teaching of international law,

Recalling the provisions of Article 39 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice,

Taking into account the circumstances surrounding the recommendations made by the Joint Inspection Unit to publish in languages other than French and English the judgments of the International Court of Justice and, in particular, the difficulties to which the Court has drawn attention,

1. Approves the recommendations of the Secretary-General contained in section III of his report on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, in particular those designed to achieve the best possible results in the administration of the Programme within a policy of maximum financial restraint;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out in 1990 and 1991 the activities specified in his report, including the provision of:

(a) A minimum of fifteen fellowships each in 1990 and 1991, at the request of Governments of developing countries;

(b) A minimum of one scholarship each in 1990 and 1991 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, subject to the availability of new voluntary contributions made specifically to the fellowship fund;

(c) Assistance in the form of a travel grant for one participant from each developing country who will be invited to the regional courses to be organized in 1990 and 1991;

and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget, when appropriate, as well as from voluntary financial contributions earmarked for each of the activities concerned, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 10, 11 and 12 of the present resolution;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his constructive efforts to promote training and assistance in international law within the framework of the Programme in 1988 and 1989, in particular for the organization of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth sessions of the International Law Seminar, held at Geneva from 6 to 24 June 1988 and 12 to 30 June 1989, respectively, and for the participation of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and its Codification Division in the conduct of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, as well as for the activities related to the award of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea;

4. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for its participation in the Programme, particularly for its efforts in the organization of regional courses and in the administration and organization of the fellowship programme in international law jointly sponsored and conducted by the United Nations and the Institute;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for its participation in the Programme, in particular for the efforts it has made to support the teaching of international law;

6. Also expresses its appreciation to the Government of Brazil for its willingness to co-sponsor the regional training and refresher course for Latin American and Caribbean countries, held at Brasilia from 21 November to 1 December 1988, and for acting as host to the course;

7. Further expresses its appreciation to the Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contributions it has made to the Programme by enabling international law fellows under the sponsorship of the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to attend its annual international law courses and by providing facilities for seminars organized under the fellowship programme in international law in conjunction with the Academy courses, and for its constructive efforts in organizing the regional training and refresher courses held at Dakar in 1988 and at Bogota in 1989;

8. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by the Hague Academy of International Law to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of, and, if possible, an increase in their financial contributions in order to enable the Academy to carry on with the above-mentioned activities;

9. Urges all Governments to encourage the inclusion of courses on international law in the programmes of legal studies offered at institutions of higher learning;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

11. Reiterates its request to Member States and to interested organizations and individuals to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme, in particular for the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, for the International Law Seminar and for the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals that have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

12. Urges in particular all Governments to make voluntary contributions with a view to covering the amount needed for the financing of the daily subsistence allowance for up to twenty-five participants in each regional course organized by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible for the Institute to continue to organize the regional courses;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session on the implementation of the Programme during 1990 and 1991 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme in subsequent years;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to study alternative means of making the publications of the International Court of Justice available in all the other official languages in addition to French and English within existing appropriations in a way which meets the concerns expressed by the Court and to present the result of his considerations to the General Assembly;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law"

Establishment of an international criminal court on drug trafficking

In 1989, Trinidad and Tobago requested⁽⁷⁾ the General Assembly to include on its agenda the question of international criminal responsibility of individuals and entities engaged in illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs and other transnational criminal activities, and the establishment of an international criminal court with jurisdiction over such crimes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/39 without vote.

International criminal responsibility of individuals and entities engaged in illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs across national frontiers and other transnational criminal activities: establishment of an international criminal court with jurisdiction over such crimes

The General Assembly,

Mindful that, in accordance with Article 13, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations, the General Assembly is called upon to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recognizing that there is an established link between illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs and other organized criminal activities which endanger the constitutional order of States and violate basic human rights,

Mindful of the adoption on 19 December 1988 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, which recognizes that illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs is an international criminal activity,

Bearing in mind the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development of international law and its codification,

1. Requests the International Law Commission, when considering at its forty-second session the item entitled "Draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind", to address the question of establishing an international criminal court or other international criminal trial mechanism with jurisdiction over persons alleged to have committed crimes which may be covered under such a code, including persons engaged in illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs across national frontiers, and to devote particular attention to that question in its report on that session;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the International Law Commission any views expressed by Member States pursuant to paragraph 3 of resolution 44/32 of 4 December 1989, as well as the summary records of the debate on the present agenda item during the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly;

3. Decides to consider the question of establishing an international criminal court or other international criminal trial mechanism at its forty-fifth session when examining the report of the International Law Commission.

International economic law

In 1989, aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

Report of UNCITRAL

In its report(1) on its twenty-second session (Vienna, 16 May-2 June 1989), UNCITRAL summarized its deliberations over the Draft Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade. The session also addressed international payments, the new international economic order, guarantees and stand-by letters of credit, international counter-trade, status of conventions, training and assistance, and relevant General Assembly resolutions and other matters (see below). UNCITRAL's report was forwarded for comments to UNCTAD.

In response to a 1987 General Assembly request,(2) the Secretary-General submitted a report(3) containing replies by Governments concerning their intention to become party to conventions relating to international trade. Such information was received from Australia, Austria, Burkina Faso, Canada, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, the Federal Republic of Germany, Greece, Japan, Kenya, Mexico, the Netherlands, the Philippines, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

Unification of trade law

Draft Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in international Trade

At its twenty-second session, the Commission had before it the text of the draft Convention,(4) as well as two reports by the Secretary-General, one being a compilation of comments by Governments and international organizations on the draft Convention,(5) and the other containing draft final clauses for the Convention.(6)

The Commission established a drafting group and requested it to incorporate into the text of the draft Convention the decisions taken by the Commission and to review the draft articles to ensure linguistic consistency within each language version and correspondence among them. The draft articles, as modified and submitted by the drafting group, were subsequently reviewed by the Commission. On 2 June, the Commission decided to submit the draft Convention to the General Assembly and recommended that the Assembly convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries in 1991 to conclude a Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/33 without a vote.

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-second session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade, as well as its resolution 43/166 of 9 December 1988,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would significantly contribute to universal economic co-operation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-second session,

Noting that the Commission adopted a draft convention on the liability of operators of transport terminals in international trade and recommended in the decision in paragraph 225 of its report that the General Assembly should convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries for a duration of three weeks in 1991 to conclude, on the basis of the draft convention, a convention on the liability of operators of transport terminals in international trade,

Recognizing the need for the Commission to have adequate sources of funding for its programme of training and assistance in international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-second session;

2. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to co-ordinate legal activities in this field in order to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law and, in this connection, recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, should continue to maintain close co-operation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

3. Calls upon the Commission to continue to take account of the relevant provisions of the resolutions concerning the new international economic order, as adopted by the General Assembly at its sixth and seventh special sessions;

4. Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for the valuable work done in preparing a draft convention on the liability of operators of transport terminals in international trade;

5. Decides that an international conference of plenipotentiaries shall be convened at Vienna from 2 to 19 April 1991 to consider the draft convention prepared by the Commission and to embody the results of its work in a convention on the liability of operators of transport terminals in international trade;

6. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To invite all States to participate in the conference;

(b) To invite representatives of organizations that have received a standing invitation from the General Assembly to participate in the sessions and the work of all international conferences convened under its auspices in the capacity of observers to participate in the conference in that capacity, in accordance with Assembly resolutions 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976;

(c) To invite representatives of the national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity in its region to participate in the conference in the capacity of observers in accordance with General Assembly resolution 3280(XXIX) of 10 December 1974;

(d) To invite the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, as well as interested organs of the United Nations and interested international organizations, to be represented at the conference by observers;

7. Reaffirming the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and assistance in the field of international trade law and the desirability for it to sponsor seminars and symposia, in particular those organized on a regional basis, to promote such training and assistance, and, in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing the symposium on international trade law held in conjunction with the twenty-second session of the Commission and to the Governments whose contributions enabled the symposium to take place;

(b) Invites Governments, the relevant United Nations organs, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries, and in the award of fellowships to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such seminars and symposia;

8. Repeats its invitation to those States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the conventions elaborated under the auspices of the Commission;

9. Approves the initiative of the Commission to have prepared an official Arabic language version of the Convention on the Limitation Period in the International Sale of Goods, of 14 June 1974, as amended by the Protocol of 11 April 1980.

International payments

The Commission in 1989 had before it the reports of the seventeenth(7) and eighteenth(8) sessions of the Working Group on International Payments, which had decided that provisions should be prepared in the form of a model law, and that the scope of application should be limited to those credit transfers that were international in nature. It specified, however, that the model law should apply to all international credit transfers, whether they were in electronic or paper-based form, and decided that the draft provisions should be entitled draft Model Law on International Credit Transfers.

The Commission recommended that the Working Group continue its efforts with a view to presenting a text to UNCITRAL for consideration at its twenty-fourth session.

Guarantees and stand-by letters of credit

The Commission had before it the report(9) of its Working Group on International Contract Practices from its twelfth session. It noted that the Working Group had reviewed the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) draft Uniform Rules for Guarantees, and had discussed the desirability and feasibility of achieving greater uniformity at the statutory level. UNCITRAL noted the recommendation of the Working Group that the preparation of a uniform law, whether in the form of a model law or a convention, be initiated. The Commission decided that the work on a uniform law should be undertaken by the Working Group, and requested the Secretariat to prepare the necessary documentation.

International countertrade

The Commission considered a report(10) on a draft outline of a legal guide on drawing up international countertrade contracts. UNCITRAL considered whether it should continue work in the area. The prevailing view was that such a guide should be prepared by UNCITRAL, and that, because it was a specialized legal body including States at different levels of economic development, its work would not duplicate that of other bodies. The Commission requested the Secretariat to prepare for its next session draft chapters of the legal guide. It considered that the draft outline of the possible content and structure of such a guide already prepared by the Secretariat provided a good basis for the commencement of its future work.

Co-ordination of work

The Commission reviewed a report(11) of the Secretary-General on current activities of international organizations related to the harmonization and unification of international trade law. The report dealt with international commercial contracts, commodities, industrialization, transnational corporations, transfer of technology, industrial and intellectual property law, international payments, international transport, international commercial arbitration, private international law, trade facilitation, and other topics of international trade law, congresses and publications.

The Secretary of the Commission noted that, while it had been the practice to submit a report on the current activities of international organizations every three years, the Secretariat intended in the future to submit them on a more frequent basis.

Training and assistance

In 1989, the Commission had before it a note(12) by the Secretariat describing training and assistance carried out during the prior year, as well as possible future activities. The note indicated that the Secretariat had endeavoured to plan a more extensive programme of activities than previously; in doing so, it had kept in mind the 1981 decision by UNCITRAL that a major purpose of training and assistance activities should be the promotion of texts that had been prepared by the Commission.

UNCITRAL continued to co-operate and participate in seminars and symposia on international trade law. It held a symposium on UNCITRAL activities during its 1989 session. Funds were made available for 32 scholarships covering travel expenses of participants from developing countries, and an additional 48 individuals participated in the symposium without financial support. A seminar was held at New Delhi, India (12-16 October) and was conducted jointly with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee (AALCC). UNCTAD and the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (UNIDROIT) also sponsored the seminar, which was intended to promote awareness in the Asian States members of AALCC of the conventions and other legal texts prepared by the sponsoring organizations. The majority of participants were from the embassies of the respective States at New Delhi. It was also attended by members of the Indian Council of Arbitration.

In resolution 44/33 of 4 December 1989, the General Assembly reaffirmed the importance of such training and assistance, particularly for developing countries, and called for contributions to the trust fund for UNCITRAL to finance seminars and symposia.

Legal aspects of the new international economic order

In 1989, legal aspects of the new international economic order (NIEO) continued to be dealt with by UNCITRAL and the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

UNCITRAL consideration. In 1989, the Commission had before it a report⁽¹³⁾ of the Working Group on the New International Economic Order. The Working Group had engaged in an examination of major issues arising in connection with procurement and had discussed ways in which those issues might be treated. It had decided to begin preparing a model procurement law to assist countries in restructuring or improving their procurement laws and procedures, or to help them establish sound procurement laws in cases where none currently existed.

The Commission endorsed the Working Group's view of the desirability of greater participation by developing countries in the Working Group, and requested it to proceed with its work on NIEO expeditiously.

Report of the Secretary-General. In August,⁽¹⁴⁾ a report was submitted by the Secretary-General in response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution⁽¹⁵⁾ regarding NIEO. The report contained views and comments received from seven Member States on a 1984 UNITAR study⁽¹⁶⁾ on the codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December 1989, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 44/30 by recorded vote.

Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the General Assembly is called upon to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic co-operation and 35/56 of 5 December 1980, the annex to which contains the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recalling also its resolutions 34/150 of 17 December 1979 and 35/166 of 15 December 1980, entitled "Consolidation and progressive development of the principles and norms of international economic law relating in particular to the legal aspects of the new international economic order", and its resolutions 36/107 of 10 December 1981, 37/103 of 16 December 1982, 38/128 of 19 December 1983, 39/75 of 13 December 1984, 40/67 of 11 December 1985, 41/73 of 3 December 1986, 42/149 of 7 December 1987 and 43/162 of 9 December 1988, entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order",

Bearing in mind the urgent need to adopt measures to reactivate the process of international economic co-operation and the negotiations undertaken for that purpose, particularly in view of the economic difficulties encountered by the developing countries,

Considering the close link between the establishment of a just and equitable international economic order and the existence of an appropriate legal framework,

Recognizing the need for the codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order,

Recalling the analytical study submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research,

1. Notes with appreciation the views and comments submitted by Governments pursuant to resolutions 40/67, 41/73, 42/149 and 43/162;

2. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To continue to seek proposals of Member States concerning the most appropriate procedures to be adopted with regard to the consideration of the analytical study, as well as the codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order;

(b) To include the proposals received in accordance with paragraph 2 (a) of the present resolution in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

3. Recommends that the Sixth Committee should consider making a final decision at the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly on the question of the appropriate forum within its framework which would undertake the task of completing the elaboration of the process of codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order, taking into account the proposals and suggestions which have been or will be submitted by Member States on the matter;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session the item entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

Administrative and budgetary questions

Chapter I

United Nations financing and programming

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly at the close of the year that the Organization had very narrowly avoided bankruptcy during 1989 and prospects were very grim indeed. The only real solution to the continuing financial crisis (resulting from the withholding of assessed contributions to the Organization's regular budget and for peace-keeping operations) was the payment by all Member States of their assessed contributions in full and on time. Unless and until that basic legal obligation under the Charter was honoured by all Member States without exception, the threat of financial collapse would continue to haunt the United Nations.

As at 8 December, more than a third of the 1989 regular budget assessment remained unpaid; total assessed contributions outstanding, including for prior years, were $529.2 million, of which $430.1 million, including about $213.9 million of past arrears, was owed by one Member State. On the basis of present assumptions, all reserves would be exhausted and cash depletion would occur in the last quarter of 1990.

To maintain the United Nations' financial viability, according to the Secretary-General, it was essential to at least double the Working Capital Fund from its present level for the biennium 1990-1991, and for the membership to assume collective responsibility and authorize the necessary assessments on all Member States. However, on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions this proposal was deferred to 1990.

The financial crisis was not restricted to the United Nations itself but extended to the UN system as a whole. Unpaid assessments by mid-year amounted to $1,034 million, or more than 51 per cent of total 1989 assessment. In addition, some $618 million in arrears due to prior years, corresponding to nearly 31 per cent of total 1989 assessments, remained outstanding.

The Secretary-General submitted his final report on the administrative and financial reforms recommended by the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations (Group of 18) covering reforms since 1 January 1987. Proposed post reduction for the biennium 1990-1991 included 11 posts at the Under-Secretary-General and Assistant Secretary-General level, while the overall post reduction between the programme budget for the biennium 1988-1989 and then for 1990-1991 was 1,368 posts, a reduction of about 12 per cent (from 11,422 posts to 10,054).

Final budget appropriations for the biennium 1988-1989 were decreased by $16.4 million from the $1,788.7 million appropriated in 1988. The Secretary-General submitted a proposed programme budget for 1990-1991 of $1,983,863,400 which he stated represented a negative real growth rate of 0.4 per cent. Actual appropriations approved by the General Assembly amounted to $1,974,634,000. ACABQ calculated that the grand total of UN expenditures for the biennium, including the net estimate for the regular budget, support services, substantive activities and operational projects, to be about $4.2 billion. The Advisory Committee also calculated that the regular budgets (or budget estimates) of the United Nations, the specialized agencies (excluding the International Fund for Agricultural Development and the International Atomic Energy Agency (m) for 1990 would amount to $2,306,839,721, of which $2,178,378,229 would be covered by assessed contributions. Further assessed contributions for the United Nations were likely to arise in 1990 for peace-keeping operations, ACABQ said; 1989 assessments totalled $720.7 million. Regarding the established posts for 1990 authorized or requested against the regular budget, ACABQ noted a decrease of 1,132 compared to the 1989 total. ACABQ also calculated that as at 30 September 1989 contributions of $609.6 million were outstanding to the United Nations and $675.2 million to the specialized agencies and IAEA, representing 63.45 per cent of total net contributions of Member States actually payable in respect of 1989, as compared to a corresponding figure of 58.01 per cent as at 30 September 1988.

The General Assembly also adopted resolutions on the scale of assessments (44/197 A), assessment procedures for non-member States (44/197 B), financial reports, audited financial statements and reports of the Board of Auditors (44/183), programme planning (44/194), and the Joint Inspection Unit (44/184).

United Nations financing

Financial crisis

Reports of the Secretary-General. On 29 November, the Secretary-General submitted a report(1) analyzing the UN's financial emergency, in response to a 1988 General Assembly request.⁽²⁾ He noted that the origin and nature of the financial difficulties had been discussed year after year, and every year since 1965, the Assembly had included an item entitled "Financial emergency of the United Nations" on its agenda. Nevertheless, fundamental solutions had not been found and the situation continued to be precarious.

The level of unpaid assessed contributions, the Secretary-General reported, had risen from $83.4 million at the end of 1978 to $394.9 million at the end of 1988—far exceeding the $255.5 million then available from the Working Capital Fund. The Secretary-General believed it was essential to increase the Working Capital Fund from its present level of $100 million to not less than $200 million for the biennium 1990-1991. He recalled that the Working Capital Fund had been established in 1946 for the purpose of providing sufficient liquidity to enable the Secretary-General to advance from it such sums as might be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending receipt of contributions. It had been based on a percentage of authorized appropriations, but whereas it had reflected 43.1 per cent of the annual budget in 1963, with the growth of appropriations for peace-keeping operations, the current level of the Fund as a percentage of the combined regular budget and peace-keeping operations for 1989 was 6 per cent.

The Secretary-General listed four options for financing the proposed Working Capital Fund increase: apportionment among all Member States as part of their assessments; assessing the increase over several years rather than at one time; financing through voluntary contributions; and crediting to the Fund all or part of the amounts realized from suspension of financial regulation provisions in respect of surpluses under the regular budget.

Regarding peace-keeping operations, outstanding contributions as at 31 October 1989 to the five peace-keeping operations from assessed contributions totalled $569.9 million. The dramatic increase in the number of peace-keeping operations had also focused attention on the problem of start-up financing for such operations—funds needed in advance of General Assembly approval of financing for an operation. The Working Capital Fund was now insufficient for the purpose.

In December, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a report⁽³⁾ on the current financial crisis and funding prospects. As of 8 December, $261.9 million or 33.7 per cent of 1989's total regular budget assessments of $777 million remained unpaid. Together with arrears of $267.3 million for prior years, total assessed contributions outstanding amounted to $529.2 million. Cash reserves were replenished only during the first four months of the year and had been drawn down since to meet current operating requirements. The pattern of membership payment as a whole was much less encouraging in 1989 than in previous years despite the efforts of some Member States. By 8 December, only 72 Member States had fully paid their assessed contributions to the regular budget, in contrast to 79 at the same time in 1988. Of the 87 Member States still in arrears, 44 owed more than their 1989 assessments, and 19 owed an amount equal to their 1989 assessment. At the same date, 22 Member States had made no payment at all, compared to 14 at the same time the previous year.

The Organization had managed to avoid insolvency so far only by repeated use of its reserves, together with lower expenditures than expected, resulting primarily from currency fluctuations and consistently high vacancy rates. If actual receipts followed the projected pattern—an element heavily dependent on one Member State—at the end of 1989 the Organization's reserves (the Working Capital Fund and the Special Account) would be replenished only by $48.1 million, leaving a deficit in the reserves of $166.4 million. Unpaid assessed contributions at that point would stand at the unprecedented level of $456.1 million.

The Secretary-General recalled that he had indicated to the General Assembly the previous year that expanding responsibilities for peacemaking and peace-keeping had placed new strains on the Organization's already precarious financial situation. If Member States did not meet their legal obligations in 1990 to pay all assessed contributions in full and on time, the Organization would be even more likely to face insolvency in 1990. With income for 1990 expected to be $772.9 million and disbursements amounting to $849.5 million, a shortfall of $76.6 million would result.

The Secretary-General concluded that the fragility of the Organization's financial situation would continue so long as its reserves were not fully funded. The financial situation could deteriorate even more rapidly and dramatically should additional demands arise from existing or new peace-keeping operations, or through the negative effect of acute currency fluctuations or inflation. So long as the Organization's reserves were not fully re-established, he would continue to seek agreement of Member States to a substantial increase in the level of the Working Capital Fund. He paid tribute to all Member States that had paid their 1989 assessments in full and in a timely manner, as well as to the one Member State which, by advancing the payment of its 1989 regular budget assessment to December 1988, had helped bridge the 1988 cash problem. He again requested those Member States able to do so to make advance payment in December 1989 on their estimated 1990 assessments and urged all Member States to pay their 1990 regular budget assessment in January 1990 or as early as possible. He again appealed to those Member States in arrears, especially the major contributor, to meet their legal obligations so that the Organization's reserves could be restored. The Secretary-General urged the General Assembly to address the cash and the reserve aspects of the financial crisis in concrete terms during its current session.

ACC Consideration. In October, the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC), at its second regular session of 1989, adopted a decision(5) stating that the financial difficulties from which the UN system was now suffering had one common cause: the failure of a number of Member States to pay, promptly and in full, their contributions. The international co-operation of which UN organizations were instruments was jeopardized by a lack of resources, and contributions owed had reached record levels. A common feature of measures taken by the UN organizations to deal with the cash shortage was the curtailment of programmes and activities, which had inflicted serious damage on the infrastructure of international, political, economic and social co-operation.

ACABQ action. On 13 December, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), having considered the two reports of the Secretary-General, stated(4) that the reports did not provide sufficient basis for ACABQ to formulate and submit definitive recommendations concerning increasing the level of the Working Capital Fund and modalities for financing such an increase. It recommended deferral of consideration of the Secretary-General's proposal to increase the Fund's level until 1990. The Advisory Committee would then return to the matter on a priority basis at its spring 1990 session, with a view to preparing a comprehensive report attempting to address all major aspects of the issue and submitting definitive recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly adopted together resolutions 44/195 A and B without vote.

Current financial crisis and financial emergency of the United Nations

A

The General Assembly,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and, in particular, Article 17,

Recalling also its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/211 and 42/212 of 21 December 1987 and 43/215 of 21 December 1988,

Deeply concerned that the current financial crisis threatens the financial solvency, stability and work of the Organization,

Reaffirming the need for a durable, reliable and lasting financial foundation for the Organization, in accordance with the Charter,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the current financial crisis of the United Nations and of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking note also of the views expressed by Member States in the Fifth Committee on the financial situation, especially the current financial crisis of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms the legal obligation of all Member States, under the Charter of the United Nations, to finance the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly;

2. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full and in a timely manner in accordance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

3. Requests those Member States which are in arrears to make every effort to pay their outstanding contributions;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to monitor the financial situation of the United Nations and to keep the President of the General Assembly and the chairmen of the regional groups informed so as to facilitate consideration by Member States if the situation so requires;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to communicate to all Member States the latest information on the current financial crisis facing the Organization and to submit a report thereon in a timely and comprehensive manner to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

B

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/220 of 21 December 1988 and all previous relevant resolutions,

Noting the increased importance of the role of the Organization in peace-keeping and other related activities,

Mindful of the report of the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations and of the views expressed by Member States thereon in the Fifth Committee at the thirty-second session of the General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Noting with camera that the short-term deficit of the Organization, although marginally reduced during the year, is expected to reach approximately 315 million United States dollars as at 31 December 1989,

Concerned at the precarious financial situation of all peace-keeping operations and noting that troop-contributing Member States, including the developing-country troop contributors of past and present peace-keeping operations, have borne most of the burden of the deficit,

Noting with camera long delays in and partial payments and non-payment of assessed contributions to past and current peace-keeping operations,

Reiterating earlier appeals to Member States, without prejudice to their position of principle, to make voluntary contributions to the Special Account referred to in annex VI to the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations,

Taking note of the proposal of the Secretary-General in paragraph 29 of his report on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations to increase the level of the Working Capital Fund,

Taking into account the views expressed by Member States in the Fifth Committee during the forty-fourth session,

1. Reaffirms its commitment to seek a comprehensive and generally acceptable solution to the financial problems of the United Nations, based on the principle of the collective financial responsibility of Member States and in strict compliance with the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Urges all Member States to meet their financial obligations under the Charter by paying promptly and in full all assessed contributions and advances to the Working Capital Fund;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in addition to sending his official communications to the permanent representatives of Member States, to approach, as and when appropriate, the Governments of Member States for the purpose of encouraging expeditious payment in full of all outstanding assessed contributions to all peace-keeping operations, as well as seeking further voluntary contributions for peace-keeping operations;

4. Expresses its appreciation to all Member States that pay their assessed contributions in full within thirty days of the receipt of the Secretary-General's communication, in accordance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

5. Requests the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations to keep the financial situation of the Organization under review and to report, as and when appropriate, to the General Assembly;

6. Concurs with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 12 of its report;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the financial emergency of the United Nations to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session by 10 October 1990, including therein a comprehensive analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations and results of his efforts in implementation of paragraph 3 of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolutions 44/195 A and B

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/699 & A/44/900) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.21, part A); agenda items 40 & 125.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 56-59; plenary 84.

Also on 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/204 without vote.

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1990-1991
The General Assembly,

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 1990-1991 in the amount of 100 million United States dollars;

2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 1990;

3. There shall be set off against this allocation of advances:

(a) Credits to Member States resulting from transfers made in 1959 and 1960 from surplus account to the Working Capital Fund in an adjusted amount of 1,025,092 dollars;

(b) Cash advances paid by Member States to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1988-1989 under General Assembly resolution 42/228 of 21 December 1987;

4. Should the credits and advances paid by any Member State to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1988-1989 exceed the amount of that Member State's advance under the provisions of paragraph 2 of the present resolution, the excess shall be set off against the amount of the contributions payable by the Member State in respect of the biennium 1990-1991;

5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:

(a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for the purpose;

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments which may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 44/203 of 21 December 1989 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as may be necessary to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities, which, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed 200,000 dollars; advances in excess of the total of 200,000 dollars may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund;

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 of the present resolution prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 1990-1991, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 1341(XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/905) without vote, 20 December (meeting 61); agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 11-16, 19, 23-32, 34, 36, 37, 39, 45, 46, 48, 61; plenary 84.

Reform efforts

Report of the Secretary-General. In April 1989, the Secretary-General submitted his final report(6) on the implementation of a 1986 General Assembly resolution(7) on the review of UN efficiency and functioning that had endorsed the recommendations of the Group of 18. Earlier progress reports had been submitted, in 1987(8) and 1988.(9) The final report was requested by the Assembly in 1988.(10)

The report presented a factual review of all actions taken by the Secretary-General since 1 January 1987 to implement the 1986 resolution, as well as actions taken by the Assembly itself on a number of related issues. The Secretary-General noted that, at the same time that it embarked on an unprecedented reform programme, the Secretariat continued to face one of its most serious financial crises, which required measures in 1986 and 1987 that hampered his efforts to implement the 1986 resolution.(7) Considerable effort had to be devoted to crisis management rather than to structural reform. Reductions in staff resulted less from planned implementation of post reduction than from financial restrictions, since posts were often left vacant that were never intended for abolition but could be filled neither through staff redeployment nor recruitment, owing to lack of funds.

Despite these circumstances, a substantial number of recommendations of the Group of 18 had been implemented. The Secretary-General discussed progress regarding recommendations pertaining to the intergovernmental machinery and its functioning, structure of the Secretariat, personnel monitoring, evaluation and inspection, and planning and budget procedure.

The Group of 18, noting the expansion of the UN agenda and corresponding growth in intergovernmental machinery, had felt that there was ample room for reduction in the volume of meetings and documentation. The Secretary-General reported that the expected reductions had not been achieved, but a number of intergovernmental bodies were still considering aspects of the recommendations. He also stated that a more effective use of the time and conference facilities by the General Assembly and its subsidiary organs was contingent primarily upon the co-operation of Member States.

The restructuring of the Secretariat's political sector was now completed but that of the economic and social sectors was still pending. Delays were attributed to the fact that the Secretariat's structure and work programme was closely linked to the structure of the intergovernmental machinery and also to Assembly instructions to the Secretary-General to take into account decisions by the intergovernmental machinery when proceeding with reforms. The Secretary-General therefore believed that the reform period for the economic and social sectors should be extended. Major reorganization had occurred in the political, administrative and information areas, though the Secretariat's review had revealed that there was little real duplication.

The Secretary-General noted that he had presented his proposals for post reduction to the General Assembly through the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) and ACABQ, and the Assembly had decided(10) that 12.1 per cent of posts funded by the regular budget should be abolished by the end of 1989, with a 10 per cent reduction in conference service staffing in New York and Geneva. Regarding the 25 per cent reduction in posts at the Assistant Secretary-General and Under-Secretary-General level,(11) the Secretary-General proposed abolition of two posts at the Under-Secretary-General level and 8 at the Assistant Secretary-General level, to be reflected in the proposed 1990-1991 programme budget.(12)

The Secretary-General concluded that while resolution 41/213 envisaged implementation of the various recommendations over three years, some recommendations could not be implemented within a fixed period, but were of an ongoing nature, particularly in the area of human resources management. Furthermore, actions by the Secretary-General had to be based on decisions yet to be taken by Member States in the General Assembly or its subsidiary bodies. He therefore viewed implementation of the 1986 resolution not as a finite process but as one that would continue to contribute to a more effective and efficient Secretariat.

An October report(13) of the Secretary-General related to the establishment and operation of a reserve fund. The General Assembly had requested formulation of a set of procedures for such a fund in 1988.(14) The Secretary-General said the purpose of a reserve fund seemed to be to minimize, during any given biennium, changes in the level of the programme budget resulting from variations in the forecast included in the programme budget in respect of currency fluctuation, inflation in non-staff costs and statutory cost increases for staff. There were two alternatives for a reserve: a separate fund outside the programme budget, or a section within the programme budget, with either being funded through assessed contributions. The Secretary-General concluded that the second approach was to be preferred, and suggested guidelines for its operation.

ACABQ reported in November(15) that it had a number of difficulties with the Secretary-General's suggestions. For example, the idea of financing the fund from the outset through assessment, even before the need for recourse to it had been identified, presented Member States with an unnecessary additional burden. It said that further thought needed to be given to the question and recommended consideration be deferred to 1991.

In 1988, the General Assembly had established(14) the contingency fund at a level of $15 million, based on preliminary estimates, for the biennium 1990-1991. By resolution 44/201 A, Section IX, the Assembly, on 21 December, noted that a balance of $13,120,500 remained in the contingency fund.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolutions 44/200 A and B without vote.

Implementation of General Assembly resolution 41/213

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986 on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations and its resolutions 42/211 of 21 December 1987 and 43/213 of 21 December 1988 on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 41/213,

Reaffirming that measures to improve the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations and to improve the planning, programming and budgeting process should aim at and contribute to strengthening the effectiveness of the Organization in dealing with political, economic and social issues in order better to achieve the purposes of and respect for the principles set out in the Charter of the United Nations,

Emphasizing that this process requires careful monitoring and the continuing support of Member States, including in financial terms, so as to permit its orderly and balanced implementation and to avoid negative impact on programmes,

Recognizing that the process of implementation of its resolution 41/213 has taken place in a situation of persistent financial crisis,

Reaffirming that all Member States must honour, promptly and in full, their financial obligations as set out in the Charter,

Reiterating its support for the Secretary-General in the fulfilment of his responsibilities as chief administrative officer of the Organization,

Noting the progress made in the implementation of its resolution 41/213, including in the new budgetary process,

Noting also that further efforts are required in implementing, in a balanced manner, the various recommendations approved in its resolution 41/213, including those related to personnel issues,

Recognizing that the implementation of certain recommendations approved in its resolution 41/213 depends upon further review by intergovernmental bodies,

Recalling its request contained in its resolution 43/213 for the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session an analytical report on the implementation of resolution 41/213,

Having considered the relevant reports of the Secretary-General and noting that the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 41/213 did not cover the entire three-year period foreseen in recommendation 71 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations,

Having considered also the relevant parts of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-ninth session, and of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking into account the views expressed by Member States during the consideration of this item at its forty-fourth session,

1. Renews its appeal to Member States to demonstrate their commitment to the United Nations by, inter alia, meeting their financial obligations on time and in full, in accordance with the Charter and the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

2. Stresses that, in order to carry out successfully the process of reform and restructuring, it is essential that the present financial uncertainties be dispelled;

3. Encourages the Secretary-General and Member States to intensify their efforts with respect to implementation of the provisions of its resolution 41/213 that fall within their respective purviews, particularly those aspects which have not been implemented;

4. Stresses that implementation of its resolution 41/213 must not have a negative impact on mandated programmes and activities;

5. Emphasizes in this respect that, in accordance with the existing regulations and rules, while output revisions in programme budgets may be proposed in order to comply more efficiently with the objectives of those programmes and activities, outputs specifically requested in mandates should be fully delivered;

6. Reiterates that further implementation of its resolution 41/213 should be carried out in a balanced way and with flexibility, so as to improve, inter alia, the structure and composition of the Secretariat;

7. Decides, with regard to recommendation 15 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations:

(a) To recognize the progress achieved to date in the implementation of the overall post reduction mandated by the General Assembly in resolution 43/213;

(b) To acknowledge that the Secretary-General is not in a position at the present stage to propose further post reductions;

(c) To consider, in the light of the analytical report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, proposals that may be put forward by the Secretary-General for further implementation of recommendation 15 as approved by the Assembly in resolution 41/213;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to implement recommendation 37 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twenty-ninth session, as contained in paragraph 19 of its report;

9. Concurs with the observations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, in paragraph 21 of its report, regarding the provision of conference services;

10. Reiterates its request that, in implementation of recommendation 5 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts, the Secretary-General should ensure close adherence to the schedule outlined in his report to the General Assembly at its forty-third session;

11. Stresses the need for greater transparency and coherence in personnel management, especially in the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, as set out in paragraph 18 of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination;

12. Also stresses the need to strengthen the role of the Secretary-General with respect to co-ordination within the United Nations system, as well as the role of Member States through the relevant intergovernmental bodies throughout the United Nations system;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to consider appropriate organizational arrangements for the secretariat of the Committee with a view to ensuring its adequacy in addressing the increasing responsibilities of the Committee;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session a compendium of mandates of subsidiary administrative and budgetary bodies of the Assembly, together with information on relevant reviews carried out over the past five years, on the understanding that the decisions of the Assembly relating to those mandates remain valid;

15. Renews its request to the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session an analytical report assessing the effect of the implementation of its resolution 41/213 on the Organization and its activities, as a whole, and the way in which it has enhanced the efficiency of its administrative and financial functioning;

16. Recommends that the report should be structured along the following lines:

(a) The first part should be an exhaustive presentation of recommendations fully implemented, partially implemented and not implemented, as well as those which, in the view of the Secretary-General, could not be implemented;

(b) The second part of the report should provide explanations with regard to such implementation and an assessment of its impact on programmes, giving particular emphasis to those programmes which have been terminated or completed;

(c) The final part should provide a general critical assessment of the implementation of its resolution 41/213 in the light of the objective of that resolution, namely, the enhancement of the administrative and financial functioning of the Organization.

B

The General Assembly.

Recognizing the need for improvement in the format and methodology of the programme budget and its outline, including the question of comparability of estimates in those two instruments,

Mindful of the fact that the operation and use of the contingency fund is still at an experimental stage and that statements of programme budget implications play an important role in the budget process,

Recognizing the need for a comprehensive solution to the problem of all additional expenditures, including those deriving from inflation and currency fluctuation,

Recognizing also the growing level of extrabudgetary resources available to the United Nations and the need to define more precisely their impact on the activities and programmes of the Organization,

1. Endorses the relevant conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the relevant observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take into account the relevant comments and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the format and methodology of the programme budget and its outline, when submitting the outline and the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to extend progressively, in accordance with paragraph 28 of his report on statements of programme budget implications and in so far as feasible, the provision of statements of programme budget implications to all subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, in order to facilitate their decision-making process, and to keep under review the format and content of statements of programme budget implications in the context of the new budgetary process;

4. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, and in the light of the experience gained during the implementation of the programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991, a single report on the review of the procedures for the provision of statements of programme budget implications and for the use and operation of the contingency fund;

5. Decides, given the shortcomings of the present system, to keep under review the question of a comprehensive solution to the problem of all additional expenditures, including those deriving from inflation and currency fluctuation, and to consider it again at its forty-sixth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to take fully into account the conclusions, recommendations and observations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the treatment of extrabudgetary resources when preparing and presenting the outline and the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993.

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/901) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Vice-Chairman followings informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.24, parts A and B); agenda item 38.

UN budget

Budget for 1988-1989

Final appropriations

In December, the Secretary-General submitted his second programme budget performance report(16) on the 1988-1989 budget. Taking into account actual expenditures so far and projections to the end of the 1988-1989 biennium, the Secretary-General reported a net increase of $3,165,200 compared with the net amount approved by the General Assembly in 1988.(17)

In a 14 December report,(18) ACABQ pointed out that, because of the repayment provisions of a loan by the United Nations to the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO),(19) the Secretary-General was ultimately reporting a net decrease of $12,834,800 in expenditure requirements for the biennium 1988-1989. ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve the Secretary-General's revised estimates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted together resolutions 44/193 A and B without vote.

Final budget appropriations for the biennium 1988-1989

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1988-1989:

1. The amount of 1,788,746,300 United States dollars appropriated by its resolution 43/218 A of 21 December 1988 shall be decreased by 16,432,600 dollars as follows:

Section	Amount appropriated by resolution 43/218 A	Increase or (decrease) (US dollars)	Final appropriation
PART I. Overall policy-making, direction and co-ordination

General Assembly resolutions 44/193 A and B

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/894) without vote, 18 December (meeting 58); agenda item 122.

Budget for 1990-1991

In submitting his proposed programme budget for 1990-1991,(20) the Secretary-General noted that this was the first budget prepared in accordance with the budgetary procedures established by the General Assembly in 1986,(7) which had been a major step in the reform process begun with the establishment of the Group of 18.

The proposed budget, at $1,983,863,400, reflected an increase of $195,117,100 over the revised appropriation of $1,788,746,300 for the biennium 1988-1989 and a negative real growth rate of 0.4 per cent. Inflation in 1990-1991 was calculated at 7.2 per cent. The level of resources for the proposed programme budget showed an increase of $1,339,700 over the preliminary estimate of $1,982,523,700 approved for the programme budget outline in 1988,(14) an increase attributable to the impossibility of fully absorbing the costs of posts restored under another 1988 resolution.(10)

Regarding the $80.8 million requested for non-recurrent items, $58 million related to construction and major maintenance, $8.5 million to modernization of administrative systems and $3.5 million to conference services, including for acquisition and installation of office automation and reproduction equipment. The remaining $10.8 million was distributed among other activities not expected to continue beyond 1991. Proposed recurrent growth, showing a decrease of $7,700,800, was accounted for partly by discontinuation of the provision for repayment of the UN bond issue—a reduction of $3,500,000—and partly by the net effect of increases and reduction under a variety of expenditures. The programme budget reflected the medium-term plan, which had been extended to 1991; it contained 153 programmes and 472 subprogrammes, representing a large element of programme continuity, both in distribution of resources and in the objectives pursued in response to legislative mandates.

Compared with the budget for the biennium 1988-1989, the proposed programme budget for 1990-1991, with 10,054 posts (of which 28 were temporary), showed a difference of 1,368 posts or a reduction of about 12 per cent.

In May, CPC considered the Secretary-General's proposed budget for the biennium 1990-1991 at its 1989 session. In its recommendations, CPC recalled that the new budgetary procedure established by the General Assembly in 1986(7) aimed at a more intense participation by Member States in preparation of the programme budget, the widest possible agreement on the budget, and an increase in management efficiency. It made a number of recommendations to improve presentation of future programme budgets. Regarding the negative growth rate of 0.4 per cent, the Committee stressed the relative magnitude of that growth rate, given the methodology used and the lack of clarity on the relationship between such growth and the programmatic content of the budget. It therefore recommended refining the methodology with a more thorough analysis of the relationship between rate of growth in the programme budget and its impact upon the activities of the Organization. It stressed the necessity of avoiding negative effects of the proposed rate of real growth on programme implementation. CPC noted that there was unevenness in the presentation of outputs and priorities in different sections of the budget. It recommended that, in the context of consideration of the proposed programme budget, the Secretary-General submit proposals for priorities.

ACABQ, in its first report(22) to the Assembly on the proposed programme budget for 1990-1991, said there was still much to be done before arriving at an acceptable methodology and procedure for the preparation and consideration of the budget outline. Indeed, the whole budget process was still in its formative steps, with contingency fund procedures yet to be tested and formulation of reserve fund procedures still to be agreed upon. The Committee said the grand total of the budget, including the net estimate for the regular budget, was $4,179,105,300. ACABQ recommended total reductions of $6,898,000 in the expenditure estimate (of which $1.5 million was provisional) and an increase of $6,200 in the income estimate. In later addenda,(23) ACABQ took account of the Secretary-General's revised estimates, which responded to measures taken by the Economic and Social Council and other matters.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/201 B, sections II, V, VI, VII and X without vote.

Questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991

B

The General Assembly

II

Functions and posts related to global social development issues in sections 6 and 8 of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991

1. Decides that the activities related to global social development issues identified in paragraphs 6.14 and 8.2 of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991 and the corresponding resources shall be in section 6 of the programme budget;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to review the functions and administrative support of the departments having mandates relating to global social development issues, bearing in mind the need for an integrated approach to development;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals, as appropriate, to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session for the strengthening of the United Nations Office at Vienna;

Section 3. Political affairs, trusteeship and decolonization

1. Accepts the estimate and proposal of the Secretary-General for section 3C (Namibia) of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991, as endorsed by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, notes that the Secretary-General will submit revised estimates for that section and requests him to do so no later than at the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, taking full account of the priority attached by the General Assembly to activities against apartheid and of the views expressed by Member States at the forty-fourth session, to ensure optimum utilization of resources within section 3, including the possibility of redeployment of staff resources, when submitting revised estimates and priorities for section 3 to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

V I

Section 5A. Office of the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation

Notes that the reference to "peace-keeping" in section 5A of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991 refers only to humanitarian assistance activities related to peace-keeping operations;

V II

Section 6. Department of International Economic and Social Affairs: programmatic content of programme B.3 (analysis of the world population)

Requests the Secretary-General to implement programme B.3 (Analysis of the world population) of section 6 of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991, within the framework of the recommendations of the International Conference on Population, 1984, and the World Population Plan of Action, and in this context to give special attention to the question of the relationship between population and development, taking into account paragraph 6.9 and noting that the word "sustainable" should not be part of paragraph 6.42;

Section 20. International drug control

Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in paragraphs 20.4 and 20.7 to 20.9 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the conclusions and recommendations contained in paragraph 217 of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination;

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the biennium 1990-1991

The General Assembly

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and subject to the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and the provisions of paragraph 3 of the present resolution, to enter into commitments in the biennium 1990-1991 to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to that biennium, provided that the concurrence of the Advisory Committee shall not be necessary for:

(a) Such commitments, not exceeding a total of 3 million United States dollars in any one year of the biennium 1990-1991, as the Secretary-General certifies relate to the maintenance of peace and security;

(b) Such commitments as the President of the International Court of Justice certifies relate to expenses occasioned by:

- (i) The designation of ad hoc judges (Statute of the Court, Article 31), not exceeding a total of 250,000 dollars;
- (ii) The appointment of assessors (Statute, Article 30) or the calling of witnesses and the appointment of experts (Statute, Article 50), not exceeding a total of 75,000 dollars;
- (iii) The holding of sessions of the Court away from The Hague (Statute, Article 22) not exceeding a total of 100,000 dollars;

(c) Such commitments, in an amount not exceeding 300,000 dollars, in the biennium 1990-1991, as the Secretary-General certifies are required for inter-organizational security measures pursuant to section IV of General Assembly resolution 36/235 of 18 December 1981;

2. Resolves that the Secretary-General shall report to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth and forty-sixth sessions all commitments made under the provisions of the present resolution, together with the circumstances relating thereto, and shall submit supplementary estimates to the Assembly in respect of such commitments;

3. Decides that, for the biennium 1990-1991, if a decision of the Security Council results in the need for the Secretary-General to enter into commitments relating to the maintenance of peace and security in an amount exceeding 10 million dollars in respect of that decision, the matter shall be brought to the General Assembly or, if the Assembly is suspended or not in session, a resumed or special session of the Assembly shall be convened by the Secretary-General to consider the matter.

Assessed contributions

The Committee on Contributions, at its forty-ninth session (New York, 5-28 June 1989),(1) considered such matters as assessments scale methodology, ad hoc adjustments (mitigation), representations by Member States, collection of contributions, payments of contributions in currencies other than United States dollars and assessments of non-member States.

In response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(2) the Committee began a comprehensive review of all aspects of the existing methodology of the determination of the scale of assessments, which is used to transform national income into assessable income for the determination of individual assessment rates. A summary of the evolution of the scale methodology was included.

The Committee considered representations made by India, the Islamic Republic of Iran and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya regarding their assessments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/197 A without vote.

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

A

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the scale of assessments, in particular resolutions 39/247 B of 12 April 1985, 42/208 of 11 December 1987 and 43/223 B of 21 December 1988,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions, and noting the efforts of the Committee, particularly in the context of the difficulties it encountered in performing its tasks,

Taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee during the forty-fourth session,

1. Reaffirms that:

(a) The capacity to pay is the fundamental criterion for determining the scale of assessments;

(b) The scale of assessments should be determined on the basis of reliable, verifiable and comparable data;

(c) The methodology for determining the scale of assessments should be simplified as far as possible with a view to making it more transparent and stable over time;

2. Takes note of the possible areas for adjustments to the existing methodology identified in the report of the Committee on Contributions;

3. Requests the Committee on Contributions:

(a) To continue its work on the following elements of the existing methodology:

(i) The statistical base period;

(ii) The debt adjustment factor;

(iii) The per capita income limit;

(iv) The scheme to avoid excessive variations of individual rates of assessment between successive scales;

(b) As a means further to improve the current methodology:

(i) To examine fully the use of other factors, including the situation of countries having the economic characteristics outlined in resolution 43/223 B, paragraph 3;

(ii) To continue its work on the price-adjusted rates of exchange methodology;

(c) To continue, in conformity with the mandate set out in resolution 43/223 B, paragraph 2 (e), its consideration of ad hoc adjustments to the machine scale, which should be uniformly applied, based on broad, objective, rational and transparent criteria, including those mentioned in paragraph 38 of the report of the Committee on Contributions, and which should be limited in scope and made on a voluntary and multilateral basis;

4. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to submit to the General Assembly, at its forty-fifth session, recommendations on adjustments, if necessary and where appropriate, to the elements and factors referred to in paragraph 3 of the present resolution;

5. Invites the Committee on Contributions, in conducting the work mentioned in paragraph 3 of the present resolution, to continue to examine the interrelationship of each of the elements and factors as a part of the overall methodology;

6. Requests the Committee on Contributions to proceed with the further exploration of alternative income concepts and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

7. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to consider excluding the allocation of any additional points, as a result of the application of the scheme of limits, to those Member States having a very low per capita income, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

8. Further requests the Committee on Contributions to include in its report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session illustrative examples, consistent with the statistical annexes to its report to the Assembly at its forty-fourth session, of the implications of using the elements and factors mentioned in the present resolution, including different alternatives for ceiling and floor amounts.

General Assembly resolution 44/197 A

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/896) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.18, part A); agenda item 129.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 13, 17, 18, 20-23, 25, 59; plenary 84.

On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/197 C, also without vote.

C

The General Assembly,

Recalling rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly,

1. Requests the Committee on Contributions to examine the question of providing access of Member States to information on how the Committee, being an expert body, arrives at its decisions on the scale of assessments, and to submit specific recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on how to establish an effective mechanism of communication between Member States and the Committee, in particular by holding information meetings at its regular sessions before the preparation of a new scale and during the consideration of ad hoc adjustments, to enable interested Member States to convey their views and request the Committee to take those views into account in the preparation of the new scale;

2. Decides to continue at its forty-fifth session its consideration of the functioning of the Committee on Contributions on the basis of the views to be expressed by that Committee in its report.

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/896) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.18, part C); agenda item 129.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 13, 17, 18, 20-23, 25, 59; plenary 84.

Status of contributions

On 6 December, the Secretary-General reported⁽³⁾ on the status of contributions. Of the almost $1,171.5 million in contributions to the UN regular budget payable as of 1 January 1989 (including for prior years), $642.2 million had been collected as at 30 November, leaving some $529.2 million outstanding.

By a 14 February letter, the Secretary-General informed⁽⁴⁾ the President of the General Assembly that 10 Member States—Benin, Central African Republic, Congo, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Nicaragua, Romania, Sao Tome and Principe, South Africa—were more than two years in arrears in the payment of their budget contributions. In subsequent letters,⁽⁵⁾ the Secretary-General reported that Benin, the Central African Republic, the Congo, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Nicaragua, Romania and Sao Tome Principe had made the necessary payments to reduce their arrears below the two-year limit to maintain voting privileges, as specified in Article 19 of the UN Charter. On 11 December 1989,⁽⁶⁾ he stated that South Africa remained $35,184,200 in arrears.

Contributions from non-member States

In 1989, the Committee on Contributions recommended⁽¹⁾ to the General Assembly that it endorse a sliding scale of flat annual fee rates and periodic review procedures for the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Holy See, Liechtenstein, Monaco, Nauru, the Republic of Korea, San Marino, Switzerland and Tonga. Participation levels of non-member States would be reviewed every five years on the basis of self-reporting by non-member States in response to a survey by the UN Secretariat. The sliding scale of flat annual fee rates would be adjusted as required.

On 21 December, by resolution 44/197 B, the General Assembly endorsed the Committee's recommendations.

Board of Auditors

In August, the Secretary-General transmitted(1) to the General Assembly a summary of the principal findings and conclusions and recommendations for remedial action of the Board of Auditors based on the audit of accounts for the financial period ended 31 December 1988, which had been prepared in response to a 1988 resolution.(2) Among other things, the auditors found continued weaknesses in United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) budgetary control, with 35 field offices out of 114 exceeding their 1988 allotments, compared to 23 in 1987. Regarding the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), the Board found that both UNITAR funds had exceeded their allotments and some projects had incurred expenditures even though no allotments had been issued. Also, UNITAR was to incur substantial losses for long outstanding receivables and deferred charges for which no records were available to determine their nature. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) operations pertaining to the school voluntary assistance fund were not accounted for in compliance with regular procedures and the amounts shown in the fund statements could not be ascertained. In the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the Board recommended that action be taken to correct the wrong recording of an outstanding contribution of some $6 million, and that appropriate action be initiated for its collection. Gross financial mismanagement of a project by an implementing agency was found in UNHCR, while a number of UNHCR field offices were operating ad hoc and informal arrangements with host countries. Basic cash management guidelines remained lacking at the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA). The Board of Auditors recommended specific remedial action for these and other cases.

In September, the Secretary-General reported(3) on implementation of recommendations of the Board of Auditors and ACABQ. He noted that, during the period under review, the normal practice of issuing allotment advices on an annual basis had been temporarily suspended; measures to deal with the financial crisis had been instituted and allotments issued to cover shorter periods, as availability of funds permitted. These measures resulted in savings of some $125 million. He regretted that in a few cases expenditures had temporarily exceeded allotments, but noted that allotments were once again being issued on an annual basis and frequent reviews of expenditure reports were being undertaken. The Secretary-General also addressed questions related to unliquidated obligations, International Narcotics Control Board (INCB), multinational programming and operational centres (MULPOCs), utilization of programme support funds, programme performance reports, payroll procedures, dependency allowances, reviews of appointment status, staff training, payment of benefits and allowances at offices away from Headquarters, the Pan-African Documentation and Information System, procurement at Headquarters and offices away from Headquarters, computer operations, the UN Postal Administration, expendable and non-expendable property, project implementation and progress performance reporting, and establishment and management of trust funds.

Also in September, the Secretary-General submitted a report(4) on the preservation and format of financial statements and accounting policies of all audited organizations and programmes. He concluded that the framework within which financial statements were prepared and prescribed, while not completely standard, was generally harmonized, and the form of presentation was, to a large extent, comparable. However, he said, the General Assembly might wish to request such statements be fully comprehensive, beginning with financial statements for the current year or biennium. The Board of Auditors could be invited to keep each organization's accounting policies under review and to draw the Assembly's attention to any specific area in which it considered a comparative review of such policies to be required.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/183 without vote.

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the financial reports and audited financial statements for the period ended 31 December 1988 of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and the United Nations Population Fund, the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors, the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the concise summary of the principal findings, conclusions and recommendations of common interest contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors, the report on the presentation and format of financial statements and accounting policies of all audited organizations and programmes and the reports submitted in accordance with paragraphs 6 and 7 of General Assembly resolution 43/216 of 21 December 1988,

Noting with concern that the Board of Auditors, for the reasons stated in its reports, issued qualified audit opinions on the financial statements of the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Population Fund, and also issued a qualified audit opinion on compliance with the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and with legislative authority in the transactions of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research,

Noting also with concern the delay in the issuance of some reports related to this item for consideration by the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session,

Noting the efforts by a number of United Nations organizations and programmes to improve the presentation and format of financial statements and the accounting policies followed,

Taking into consideration the views expressed by delegations, by the Board of Auditors and by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions during the debate in the Fifth Committee on this item, and the widely expressed support for measures to improve the efficiency, effectiveness, management, financial accountability, budgetary control and standardization of the presentation of financial statements and accounting policies, and the accounting practices and procedures of the United Nations organizations and programmes concerned,

Stressing the need to standardize the presentation and format of financial statements and accounting policies among United Nations organizations and programmes,

Stressing also the importance of an effective internal audit function in those organizations and programmes on which the Board of Auditors reports,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the audit opinions and reports of the Board of Auditors regarding the aforementioned organizations;

2. Requests the governing bodies of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to require the executive heads concerned to take immediate steps within their competence to correct or improve the conditions that gave rise to the qualification of audit opinions of the Board of Auditors;

3. Urges the administrations and governing bodies of the executing agencies and other relevant parties concerned to solve the technical problems identified by the Board of Auditors with regard to the certification of programme expenditures and programme support costs in co-operation with the United Nations Development Programme and with the United Nations Population Fund;

4. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions as contained in their respective reports;

5. Requests the competent governing bodies to ensure that the executive heads concerned take necessary steps to implement the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions as contained in their respective reports, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of United Nations organizations and programmes concerned to take without delay appropriate measures within their competence and in the light of the comments, observations and recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, as endorsed in the present resolution, in particular those relating to accounts and financial reporting, programme expenditure, assets and liabilities, including unliquidated obligations, budgetary controls, cash management, trust funds accounts and management issues such as hiring of consultants, award of contracts and project formulation, and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, through the governing bodies of those organizations and programmes;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of United Nations organizations and programmes concerned to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, through the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on specific measures taken to implement the recommendations of the Board, and to explain if any of those recommendations have not yet been implemented, and requests the Board and the Advisory Committee to evaluate the efficacy of those measures and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

8. Recommends that all future reports of the Board of Auditors continue to include separate sections that summarize recommendations for corrective action to be taken by the organizations and programmes concerned, with an indication of relative urgency;

9. Also recommends that the Board of Auditors continue to submit to the General Assembly a concise document summarizing its principal findings, conclusions and recommendations of common interest, classified by audit area and, where appropriate, identifying the audited organization;

10. Approves the changes in the financial procedures of the United Nations Development Programme, as recommended by the Governing Council of the Programme in its decision 89/61, and the United Nations Population Fund, as recommended by the Governing Council of the Programme in its decision 89/49;

11. Requests the governing bodies of those audited organizations and programmes which are on biennial budget cycles to review at their next session the question of the periodicity of audit reports, bearing in mind the desirability of annual reporting on management issues;

12. Requests the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to continue to cover in their reviews of the organizations and programmes, including peace-keeping operations, the areas relating to the efficiency and effectiveness of the financial procedures and controls, the accounting system and related administrative and management areas, in accordance with regulation 12.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, and to recommend measures, as appropriate, to strengthen financial and management controls;

13. Also requests the Board of Auditors to continue to study the desirability and feasibility of conducting its reviews as stipulated in regulation 12.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations in a more comprehensive manner and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

14. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of United Nations organizations and programmes concerned, in consultation with the Board of Auditors, to develop further, with a view to prompt completion, the general accounting framework within which financial statements may be prepared, having regard to the relevant financial regulations and rules and also to generally accepted accounting principles, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

15. Invites the Board of Auditors to keep under review the stated accounting policies of each organization and programme and to draw the attention of the General Assembly to specific areas in which it considers that there are differences in accounting policies, having regard to the respective mandates of each entity and with a view to greater harmonization;

16. Requests all administrations and governing bodies concerned, in co-operation with the Board of Auditors, to complete the review and clarification of their accounting policies with respect to the recording of unliquidated obligations, taking into account generally accepted accounting principles and regulations 4.3 and 4.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

17. Invites Governments that are represented on the governing bodies of organizations and programmes for which audited financial statements have been considered by the General Assembly to ensure that full consideration is given to the reports of the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the comments made thereon in the Fifth Committee;

18. Encourages all governing bodies of organizations and programmes to invite a representative of the Board of Auditors to be present at their meetings when considering the reports of the Board;

19. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of United Nations organizations and programmes concerned to ensure that their respective internal audit units carry out follow-up audit work to assess the corrective action taken by the administrations in response to the main recommendations of the Board of Auditors;

20. Requests the administrations concerned and the Board of Auditors to ensure that comments of the administrations on the observations of the Board are available to the Board prior to the finalization of its reports;

21. Requests the executive heads of the organizations and programmes concerned to apply existing controls and procedures in order to ensure that expenditures do not exceed the level of funds provided under allotments in accordance with financial rules and to enforce existing disciplinary measures with a view to enhanced accountability and budgetary discipline;

22. Requests the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to review the liquidity position held by all United Nations organizations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

23. Also requests the Board of Auditors to carry out an audit examination of substantive matters, including management issues, for the United Nations Children's Fund in respect of the first year of each biennium and to submit a report on its findings and recommendations, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly and to the Executive Board of the Fund;

24. Further requests the Board of Auditors to review the administrative instructions issued in implementation of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, in particular rule 114.1, and to report on their adequacy and efficacy to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

UN programmes

Programme planning, performance and evaluation

Reports of the Secretary-General. In April, the Secretary-General reported,(1) in response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(2) on monitoring, evaluation and management information. The report addressed the need to improve the monitoring and evaluation functions in the United Nations so as to provide adequate feedback for the formulation of the medium-term plan and programme budgets; to ensure the effective implementation of programmes; and to provide Member States with a basis for more informed decision-making. It covered such matters as self-evaluation and training; refinement of evaluation methodologies; monitoring and programme performance reporting; and management improvement and information.

Also in April, the Secretary-General submitted a report(3) regarding statements of programme budget implications of draft resolutions and decisions as requested by the General Assembly in 1988.(2) He concluded that there was a need to replace the perception that the statements be prepared to justify the need for additional resources with a conviction that legislative bodies ought to be better informed on the programmatic consequences of draft resolutions and decisions. The time allowed for preparation of the statements should be extended to 72 hours, he said. The statements should indicate whether revisions of the medium-term plan were required, and the provision of statements should be progressively extended to all General Assembly and Economic and Social Council subsidiary bodies.

In July, the Secretary-General submitted a report⁽⁴⁾ on all aspects of priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget, as requested by the General Assembly in 1988.⁽⁵⁾ The Secretary-General proposed a modification of the current system of priority-setting, with the aim of starting a dialogue between Member States and the Secretariat. The primary focus of priority-setting would be the medium term plan. The Secretary-General suggested that the modified system of priorities be implemented for a trial period and that CPC and ACABQ review the results after completion of the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993.

In its first report on the proposed programme budget for 1990-1991,⁽⁶⁾ ACABQ agreed with the Secretary-General's suggestion that the medium-term plan be the point of departure for the establishment of priorities in the programme budget outline, but said that much had to be done to improve the form and content of the medium-term plan itself.

CPC consideration. CPC considered the question of planning and evaluation at its twenty-ninth session (New York, 8 May-5 June) and made recommendations on the consultation procedures for preparation of the programme budget, priority setting in future outlines of the budget, evaluation and co-ordination. CPC recommended that the Assembly request relevant intergovernmental bodies to hold meetings in accordance with a calendar that would enable the Secretary-General to take into account their recommendations in the preparation of the proposed programme budget. Its conclusions and recommendations dealt with such topics as political affairs and peace-keeping, policy-making organs for economic and social activities, activities on global social development issues, decisions regarding functioning of MULPOCs, the evaluation report on the disarmament programme, the human rights programme, public information, international protection and assistance to refugees, the review of the programme on development issues and policies and the activities of various UN entities. CPC also addressed co-ordination questions and the rationalization of co-ordination instruments.

Regarding joint meetings of CPC and ACC, CPC recommended that the topic to be considered for 1989 be the preparation of the international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade and drug abuse control; for 1990, natural disaster reduction and improvement of co-ordination in the UN system; and for 1991, implementation of the international development strategy for the fourth United Nations development decade and another topic to be decided, possibly environment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/194 without vote.

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 31/93 of 14 December 1976, 32/197 of 20 December 1977, 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A and B of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/215 of 21 December 1987 and 43/219 of 21 December 1988,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolutions 2008(LX) of 14 May 1976 and 1988/77 of 29 July 1988 and taking note of Council resolutions 1989/97 of 26 July 1989, 1989/109 of 27 July 1989 and 1989/114 of 28 July 1989,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-ninth session and the relevant parts of the report of the Economic and Social Council for 1989,

Having considered also the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having considered further the reports of the Secretary-General on all aspects of priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget, on statements of programme budget implications, and on monitoring, evaluation and management information,

Reaffirming the importance of an appropriate consultation procedure of functional, sectoral and regional bodies on the planning, programming and budgeting process,

Reaffirming also the importance of priority-setting as an integral part of the planning, programming and budgeting process,

Emphasizing the importance of a reliable methodology for monitoring programme performance,

Stressing the importance of evaluation for the systematic and objective determination of the relevance, efficiency, effectiveness and impact of programmes and activities in relation to their objectives,

Recognizing that co-ordination should aim at greater compatibility and mutual complementarity of the activities and programmes of the United Nations system,

Recognizing also the co-ordinating role of the Economic and Social Council in the economic and social sectors,

Reaffirming the importance of the programming and co-ordinating functions within the United Nations carried out by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, as the main subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for planning, programming and co-ordination,

Noting the co-ordinating role of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination at the secretariat level,

Reaffirming, in this regard, the role of the Secretary-General of the United Nations as the Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination in co-ordinating the activities of the United Nations system,

Taking into account the comments and observations made in the Fifth Committee concerning programme planning,

I

Role of intergovernmental bodies

1. Approves the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the consultation procedure for the preparation of the proposed programme budget;

2. Takes note of the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the extent of involvement of specialized bodies in the planning and programming process;

3. Invites the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Committee on Conferences to take appropriate action, within their respective mandates, with a view to assisting the functional, sectoral and regional bodies in playing a more effective role in the planning, programming and budgeting process in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

4. Invites also the functional, sectoral and regional intergovernmental bodies to consider, in a timely manner, the draft medium-term plan and programme budget proposals within their areas of responsibility, in order that their recommendations may be taken into account by the Secretary-General when he prepares the proposed medium-term plan and the proposed programme budget;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary advice to the organs and bodies mentioned in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the present section, in order to enable them effectively to carry out the tasks entrusted to them in the present resolution;

II

Priorities

1. Approves the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget;

2. Takes note of the relevant comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Requests all relevant entities and bodies to continue to make every effort to set and apply priorities in accordance with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

4. Requests the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination to complete at its thirtieth session consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on all aspects of priority-setting in future outlines of the proposed programme budget, including the relationship between priorities and extrabudgetary resources and taking into account the pertinent observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and to make recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

III

Programme performance monitoring

1. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the methodology for monitoring and reporting on programme performance so that implementation rates may more meaningfully reflect programme performance and that a better comparison may be made between actual delivery of final output and commitments set out in the programme narratives of the approved programme budget;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to develop a methodology for the harmonization of programme performance and budget performance reporting;

IV

Evaluation

1. Approves the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on evaluation;

2. Welcomes the efforts made by the Secretariat to refine the methodology for evaluation, stresses the need for further improvements, and urges the Secretariat to adopt a more qualitative approach in its evaluation analyses wherever justified by programmatic considerations;

3. Stresses the importance of self-evaluation in relation to the preparation and implementation of the medium-term plan and of the programmatic content of the programme budget;

4. Renews its request to the Secretary-General, made in section III, paragraph 8, of its resolution 43/219, that programme performance and evaluation reports, together with the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination thereon, as endorsed by the General Assembly, should be submitted to the relevant intergovernmental and expert bodies to ensure follow-up action;

Co-ordination questions

1. Approves the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on co-ordination;

2. Requests the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination to modify substantially the format and content of its annual overview report in accordance with the relevant conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination;

3. Invites the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination to consider in greater detail the annual overview report of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, in accordance with their respective mandates;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit the annual overview report of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination for 1989 to the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its thirtieth session and to the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1990 and subsequently to make it available to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, together with the relevant conclusions and recommendations of those bodies on the report in accordance with existing practice;

5. Invites the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, at their joint meeting in 1990, to discuss, in a thorough manner, all measures for improving the efficacy of the joint meetings, including their structure and level of participation;

VI Implementation

Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of all aspects of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

VII

Other conclusions and recommendations

Approves those other conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twenty-ninth session which have not otherwise been approved by the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session.

General Assembly resolution 44/194

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/902) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Vice-Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.23); agenda item 124.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 11-16, 18, 19, 23-32, 34, 36, 37, 39, 45, 46, 48, 59; plenary 84.

Joint Inspection Unit

In August, JIU reported(8) on progress in its 1989 work programme, and summarized inspection, review or evaluation of selected UN programmes carried out between 1 July 1988 and 30 June 1989.

JIU noted that Member States had supported its efforts to improve its functioning and the quality and effectiveness of its reports, in accordance with a 1988 General Assembly resolution.(9) JIU had taken a more contemplative approach to the formulation of its work programmes and had limited the 1990-1991 nucleus to five studies, compared with eight in the previous work programme. It had been unable to implement completely the recommendation to give greater attention to management, budgetary and administrative issues because of the short interval between the adoption of the resolution(9) and the formulation of the work programme; JIU noted, however, that 60 per cent of the studies inscribed in the work programme dealt with management, budgetary and administrative matters.

JIU summarized its previous reports on such matters as the evaluation systems for technical co-operation projects, the representation of UN organizations at conferences and meetings, UN public information activities and the reorganization of the Department of Public Information, evaluations of certain rural development and regional projects and its concluding report on the implementation of a 1977 General Assembly resolution(10) on the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the UN system.

Reports of the Secretary-General. In February, the Secretary-General transmitted(11) JIU's 1989 work programme and the nucleus of the 1990-1991 work programme to the General Assembly. In September, the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the recommendations contained in six JIU reports. The recommendations dealt with the role of UNHCR, drug abuse control activities, UN support for technical co-operation among developing countries, technical co-operation in Central America and the Caribbean and field representation of UN organizations.

CPC consideration. In June, CPC considered(7) selected JIU reports. It decided to transmit the reports to the General Assembly and to consider at its 1990 session the possibility of a better means of considering the Unit's reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/184 without vote.

Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 40/259 of 18 December 1985, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/218 of 21 December 1987 and 43/221 of 2 December 1988,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on its activities during the period 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989, the work programme of the Unit for 1989 and the nucleus of its work programme for 1990-1991, and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit,

Welcoming the continuing reform measures employed by the Joint Inspection Unit to enhance the quality and effectiveness of its work in all respects, as described in section VI of its report,

Reiterating the importance of a detailed and timely consideration of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit, particularly by Member States and the organizations concerned,

1. Take note of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit and of its work programme for 1989, as well as of the detailed information contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

2. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit, in the development of its work programme, to give even greater attention to management, budgetary and administrative issues relevant to the agendas of the governing bodies of its participating organizations and to their main and common concerns;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to standardize the format of his reports relating to the work and recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit in order to include therein the recommendations of the Unit and any decisions of the General Assembly and other governing bodies before making his comments;

4. Urges the Secretary-General, in preparing his report on the implementation of the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit, and the Unit, in preparing its annual report, to co-ordinate their efforts in order to submit to the General Assembly the maximum possible information on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

5. Invites the Joint Inspection Unit to continue to make every possible effort to issue its reports well in advance of meetings of the governing bodies of its participating organizations, in particular the General Assembly, and of the relevant subsidiary bodies, to ensure that the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, where pertinent, are issued in accordance with existing regulations for the timely receipt of documentation;

6. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit to make every effort to shorten its reports, using comparative tables and graphics whenever appropriate, and to include therein an executive summary of its recommendations in order to facilitate the consideration of its reports;

7. Also requests the Joint Inspection Unit to take into account the guidelines outlined in the present resolution in finalizing its work programme for 1990-1991;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of the executive heads of the participating organizations of the Joint Inspection Unit.

General Assembly resolution 44/184

19 December 1989 Meeting 83 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/675) without vote, 19 October (meeting 14); draft by Vice-Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.4); agenda item 127.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 4, 5, 7, 13, 14; plenary 83.

Financing of peace-keeping

In October, the Secretary-General reported(13) on administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of UN peace-keeping operations (see PART ONE, Chapter I). A subsequent report(14) dealt with voluntary contributions of supplies and services for peace-keeping operations, whether as a loan, advance or outright grant. The report included draft technical guidelines concerning the nature and purpose, acceptability, basis for valuation and budgetary treatment and accounting of such contributions. Another report(15) considered the rates of reimbursement to troop-contributing States. The Secretary-General discussed possible revision of the standardized rates in the light of absorption factors (that part of the costs to troop contributors that is not compensated for by the standard rates and hence must be absorbed by the respective Member State). He concluded that because usable data from 5 of the 13 contributors was absent, a further, more comprehensive review was needed.

In November, ACABQ considered(16) the Secretary-General's reports, bearing in mind its own visits to a number of peace-keeping operations during its spring 1989 session. ACABQ addressed such questions as economies of scale in procurement; the use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations, which was growing rapidly; start-up problems of operations; rates of reimbursement; and voluntary contributions. The Advisory Committee recommended that a study be made of the feasibility of establishing a Secretariat planning and monitoring group to address the need for greater co-ordination among the various units involved in the preparation for and management of peace-keeping operations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolutions 44/192 A-C without vote.

Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations

A

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/230 of 21 December 1988 on the financing of the United Nations Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group and its decision 43/455 of 21 December 1988 on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations,

Recalling also its resolution 44/49 of 8 December 1989 on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peace-keeping operations in all their aspects,

Recognizing the mutual relevance of the work of the Special Committee on Peace-keeping Operations and the work done by the Fifth Committee in connection with matters relating to peace-keeping operations,

Having considered with appreciation the reports of the Secretary-General on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations, on the review of the background and development of reimbursement to Member States contributing troops to peace-keeping operations and on voluntary contributions of supplies and services, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Bearing in mind the views expressed by Member States on those reports at the forty-fourth session,

Recognizing that each peace-keeping operation has special characteristics, which thus calls for flexibility in addressing the administrative requirements of each operation,

Recognizing also that all necessary action should be taken to ensure that peace-keeping operations are administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy,

Bearing in mind the significant increase in United Nations peace-keeping activities and the resulting increased demands on the human, material and financial resources of the Organization and of Member States,

Noting that, as a result of the recent expansion in peace-keeping activities, an absorptive capacity in respect of trained and experienced United Nations staff members with the technical skills required in peace-keeping operations is no longer available,

Taking into account the observations of the Advisory Committee on the need for greater co-ordination among the various Secretariat units involved in preparing and managing peace-keeping operations,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide peace-keeping operations with the necessary financial resources, especially those essential for the start-up of such operations to enable them to fulfil their mandates in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Aware of the extremely difficult financial situation of the existing peace-keeping operations and of the heavy burden on troop-contributing States,

Emphasizing the need to ensure a secure and sound financial basis for peace-keeping operations,

1. Urges all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to peace-keeping operations in full and on time, in accordance with their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Takes note of the observations and proposals made by the Secretary-General on economies of scale, start-up problems and the establishment of a reserve stock of equipment and supply items, and endorses the relevant recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Also takes note of the observations and proposals of the Secretary-General on the criteria and procedures by which Governments may offer the services of civilian personnel for peace-keeping operations, concurs with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee, in particular that standard administrative procedures to govern the provision of such personnel should be established, consistent with existing rules and practices and taking into consideration the practical and legal concerns and the experience gained in the newly established peace-keeping operations, and requests the Secretary-General to submit those standard administrative procedures to the Advisory Committee at its spring session in 1990;

4. Invites States willing to participate in peace-keeping operations to submit to the Secretary-General, with his assistance, detailed inventories of specialized civilian individuals or units, including numbers of personnel and equipment, that they would be prepared to provide for those tasks and services identified by the Secretary-General in his report and in the manner outlined therein, consistent with General Assembly resolution 44/49, paragraphs 2 and 3;

5. Takes note of the observations and proposals of the Secretary-General on the technical guidelines relating to the treatment and valuation of voluntary contributions in the form of supplies and services, and endorses the observations of the Advisory Committee;

6. Also takes note of the proposals of the Advisory Committee on the need for greater co-ordination among the various Secretariat units involved in preparing and managing peace-keeping operations and, in this respect, welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to establish a planning and monitoring group on the basis described in his report;

7. Further takes note of the proposals of the Secretary-General to establish an account for programme support of peace-making and peace-keeping operations, and endorses the views of the Advisory Committee in that respect;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the measures taken in accordance with the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee contained in its reports and to provide further information covering, inter alia:

- (a) Economies of scale;
- (b) Start-up problems;
- (c) The establishment of a reserve stock of equipment and supply items;

(d) The use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations;

(e) Problems related to overload posts and the proposed establishment of a support account for peace-keeping operations;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to keep under review the format of his reports on the financing of United Nations peace-keeping operations and the amount of information that should be included therein, in order to assist Member States in the scrutiny and evaluation of those reports;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-fifth session the item entitled "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations".

B

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the composition of the existing groups of Member States for the apportionment of the costs of peace-keeping operations financed through assessed contributions,

Recalling its resolution 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and its subsequent resolutions relating to the composition of the existing groups, the latest of which is resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989 on the financing of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group,

Recalling also paragraph 3 of resolution 44/44 of 7 December 1989 on the financing of the United Nations Observer Group in Central America, in which it, inter alia, refers to the decision to be taken, at its forty-fourth session, on the composition of groups "a", "b", "c" and "d" of Member States,

Welcoming the proposal made by the Government of Spain to reclassify Spain from group "c" to group "b",

Having considered the requests of Poland for reclassification from group "b" to group "c" and of the Central African Republic, Equatorial Guinea, the Gambia, Myanmar, Sierra Leone and Togo for reclassification from group "c" to group "d",

Having identified grounds for anomalies on the basis of the information contained in the report of the Secretary-General, particularly concerning the least developed countries,

Decides, as an ad hoc arrangement:

(a) To accept the proposal made by the Government of Spain and to place Spain among the Member States referred to in paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 43/232 and, in accordance with that proposal, to apportion its share of the costs of peace-keeping operations financed through assessed contributions on the basis of the proportion determined by the scale of assessments in the following manner: 50 per cent in 1990, 80 per cent in 1991 and 100 per cent in 1992 and subsequent years;

(b) To place Poland among the Member States referred to in paragraph 3 (c) of resolution 43/232;

(c) To place the Central African Republic, Equatorial Guinea, the Gambia, Mauritania, Myanmar, Sierra Leone and Togo among the Member States referred to in paragraph 3 (d) of resolution 43/232.

C

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 42/224 of 21 December 1987,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the review of the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 42/224, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Noting with concern the delay by some Member States in submitting the data requested by the Secretary-General, thus preventing him from making a substantive recommendation on the revision of the current rates of reimbursement,

1. Urges all those troop-contributing States which the Secretary-General requested to provide data and which have not yet done so to provide complete data as soon as possible and at the latest by 1 February 1990;

2. Notes with concern that, in consequence of the shortfall of financial contributions, troop-contributing States are not being reimbursed to the full extent of the established rates for some operations, thus bearing considerably larger portions of the costs for their troops serving in the United Nations peace-keeping forces than those indicated by the Secretary-General in his report;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, to the extent possible, to make the payment of arrears due to current and former troop-contributing States;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to complete the review of the rates of reimbursement on receipt of the outstanding information and to submit, through the Advisory Committee on Administrative and budgetary Questions, his report for the consideration of the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to include in each of his reports on the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations relevant information on the status of reimbursement to the troop-contributing States.

General Assembly resolutions 44/192 A-C

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/892) without vote, 18 December (meeting 58); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.17, part A); agenda item 137.

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination in UN system

The administrative and budgetary co-ordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) was the subject of a report submitted to the General Assembly on 7 November 1989 by ACABQ.⁽¹⁾ In accordance with its terms of reference, ACABQ met with the executive heads (or their senior representatives) of 10 organizations, and received the required data by correspondence from 3 others, whose agreements with the United Nations provided for transmittal of their budgets for review by the General Assembly.

These organizations were ILO, FAO, UNESCO, ICAO, UPU, WHO, ITU, WMO, IMO, WIPO, IFAD, UNIDO and IAEA.

The regular budgets (or budget estimates) of the United Nations and the specialized agencies (excluding IFAD) and IAEA for 1990 would total $2,306.8 million, of which $2,178.4 million would be covered by assessed contributions. In addition, further assessed contributions for the United Nations were likely to arise in 1990 for peace-keeping operations; 1989 assessments for peace-keeping totalled $720.7 million. The total number of established posts authorized or requested under the regular budgets of the specialized agencies (excluding IFAD) and IAEA for 1990 was 13,230, 33 more than the 1989 total of 13,197 (excluding IFAD). Since the number of established posts authorized or requested under the UN regular budget for 1990 was 10,004, a grand total of 23,234 established posts for 1990 had been authorized or requested, a decrease of 1,132 posts compared to the 1989 total of 24,366 (excluding IFAD).

Total outstanding contributions as at 30 September 1989 equalled 63.45 per cent of total net contributions of Member States actually payable in respect of 1989, compared to 58.01 per cent as at 30 September 1988. Of the total, $609.6 million was owed to the UN and $675.2 million to the specialized agencies and IAEA.

According to the report, cash payments received by the UN system from voluntary contributions (extrabudgetary funds) totalled $2,911.3 million in 1987 and $3,360.8 million in 1988, of which Member States contributed $2,730.6 million in 1987 and $3,180.5 million in 1988. Some $97.2 million was contributed by non-members in 1988, compared to $91.5 million in 1987. Extrabudgetary fund expenditures totalled $3,657.3 million in 1987 and $4,386.8 million in 1988.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 44/414 of 22 November, the General Assembly took note with appreciation of the Advisory Committee's report and decided to support its intention to revert to its former practice of in-depth studies of individual agencies of the United Nations system every other year with a view to making appropriate recommendations whenever required. It also invited the Advisory Committee to consider conducting in-depth studies of administrative and budgetary aspects of topics of system-wide concern.

Chapter II

UN staff matters

In 1989, the Secretary-General submitted a final report on implementation of the 1986 General Assembly-approved recommendations for restructuring. However, after considering it, the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) recommended a further report to the 1990 Assembly, in order to assess the impact of the administrative and financial reforms.

During the year, the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) submitted a report on its comprehensive review of the conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories, while the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) called for at least a 5 per cent remuneration increase for all staff, as a beginning step towards restoration of the margin envisaged in the Noblemaire principle of UN staff remuneration, in comparison to the highest-paid national civil service.

The General Assembly, in acting on the ICSC report, noted with concern that it had not been possible for the Commission to recommend the introduction of a revised remuneration structure and urged it to submit final and complete conclusions to the Assembly in 1990. In regard to the Secretary-General's report on implementation of the recommendations of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations (Group of 18), the Assembly stressed that in order to successfully carry out the process of reform and restructuring, it was essential that the present financial uncertainties facing the Organization be dispelled. It recognized the progress achieved so far in implementing overall post reduction, while acknowledging that the Secretary-General was not in a position at present to propose further reductions. It renewed its request to the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly in 1990 an analytical report assessing the effect of the reforms, and made recommendations for the structure of that report.

Also in 1989, the Secretary-General reported on the establishment of a fully revised internal justice system; changes were made in the UN pension scheme to re-establish actuarial viability; and the General Assembly agreed to increase the mandatory retirement age of staff from 60 to 62 years in respect of new staff members.

There were continued disturbing reports about officials of the UN system who had been arrested and detained or who had disappeared in various places throughout the world, a situation given tragic emphasis by the apparent murder of a senior United Nations Truce Supervision Operation (UNTSO) officer serving with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

In 1989, the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) held its second special session in New York (16-19 January), its twenty-ninth session in Vienna (6-23 March) and its thirtieth session in New York (31 July-25 August). The Commission examined issues derived from General Assembly decisions as well as from its own Statute. In its fifteenth annual report to the Assembly,⁽¹⁾ ICSC focused attention on a comprehensive review of service conditions of Professional and higher salary staff, conducted by a Working Group of ICSC members and its secretariat as well as representatives of both the Organization and staff, which was the subject of the second volume of the report. The financial implications resulting from the Commission's 1989 decisions and recommendations for the United Nations common system totalled approximately $90 million a year.

The Commission reported that it had adopted guidelines to supplement the working methods approved at its twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions.⁽²⁾ It decided to examine facts and alternatives in open, as opposed to executive, sessions; to limit executive sessions to the taking of decisions; and to continue to monitor progress and to review its rules of procedure as appropriate. Because of the unique requirements of the comprehensive review, representatives of organizations and the staff could attend Commission meetings at which substantive determinations were made regarding decisions on the comprehensive review.

Noblemaire principle

The Noblemaire principle, first adopted under the League of Nations, provides that the salaries of Professional and higher category staff should be adequate to attract staff from all countries, including the country with the highest-compensated civil service, known as the comparator.

In 1989, the Commission continued to review the relationship between the levels of net remuneration of the United Nations and the United States federal civil service (the current comparator) under the Noblemaire principle. In 1988, the General Assembly had stated⁽³⁾ that the Noblemaire principle should continue to serve as the basis for comparison between UN emoluments and those of the highest-paying civil service. Based on the margin between the net remuneration of the United States federal civil service and the UN system, ICSC decided to implement a class 10 post adjustment for New York effective in May 1989.

Remuneration issues

A change in methodology for adjustments to the pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories was recommended to the General Assembly, in view of the fact that UN pensionable remuneration had been adjusted by 9.3 percentage points beyond the adjustment applied to the comparator's scale. The Commission decided thenceforth to consider pensionable remuneration annually. It also recommended that the mandatory age of separation for new staff members appointed after 1 January 1990 be raised from 60 to 62, and decided to continue to monitor the situation.

By resolution 44/185 D of 19 December, the General Assembly approved the amendment of the staff regulations to raise the mandatory separation age to 62 and asked the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly in 1990 on the implications of the change for staff recruitment, mobility, career development and promotion, staffing structure, representation of Member States in the Secretariat and long-term staff expenditures.

Supplementary payments and deductions

The Commission in 1989 continued to study the issue of supplementary payments to and deductions from the remuneration of common system staff by certain Member States. In 1987,⁽⁴⁾ the General Assembly had requested all Member States and common system organizations to provide ICSC with information on the subject. In 1988,⁽³⁾ the Assembly asked the Commission to continue its review of the matter.

The Commission deplored that, after repeated requests, 64 Member States had still not responded to the Chairman's latest inquiry, and noted that the non-responding States included four permanent members of the Security Council. It reviewed further information provided by three Member States that made supplementary payments, and decided to continue to pursue its inquiry into the matter. It reiterated its position that supplementary payments and deductions by Member States contravened the Organization's staff regulations; recalled its previous request to the General Assembly to take appropriate action to discourage those practices; and requested the Secretary-General, together with other executive heads, to contact Member States, if necessary at the highest level, to eliminate such practices.

Comprehensive review

The Commission addressed six major areas in the context of the comprehensive review of the conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories, requested by the General Assembly in 1987⁽⁴⁾ in order to provide a sound and stable methodological basis for staff remuneration. The Commission considered various alternatives to the current remuneration system, but stated that further testing was needed before definite conclusions could be reached.

The six major areas were: competitiveness of the current UN salary system related to recruitment and retention needs; matters relating to the comparator and the margin; the post adjustment system; mobility and hardship; motivation and productivity; and allowances. The effective date for implementation of decisions taken on the comprehensive review would be 1 July 1990.

Regarding competitiveness, the Commission recommended the establishment of new base salary levels and a 5 per cent general increase in remuneration for staff in Professional and higher categories, the cost of which would total some $61 million.

As to the comparator and margin, the Commission confirmed that in the application of the Noblemaire principle as the basis for determining the conditions of service of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories, the comparator should continue to be the highest-paid national civil service. A check should be made every five years to ensure that the current comparator was still the highest-paid national civil service. The current margin range should continue to apply, and should be allowed to fluctuate freely within the range; corrective measures would be recommended by the Commission if the margin dropped below the lower limit or exceeded the top of the range. The existing cumulative margin procedure and the four-month waiting period between the granting of successive classes of post adjustment for New York should be discontinued. Comparisons would be based on the net remuneration of UN officials in grades P-1 through D-2 in New York and that of their comparator counterparts in Washington, D.C.; the cost-of-living differential between New York and Washington should continue to be taken into account; average salaries at each grade should be used on both sides of the comparison; and bonuses and performance awards not considered to be included in base salary should be excluded from comparisons.

Regarding the post adjustment system, the Commission made a range of recommendations relating to various operational aspects of the system, including simplification through the elimination of special measures for high inflation, for abrupt or continuous devaluation and for duty stations with a low or negative post adjustment classification.

The Commission recommended a new mobility and hardship scheme incorporating incentives and payments for hardship, mobility and the existing assignment allowance. The scheme provided for a number of other measures related to the assignment grant (formerly the installation grant), removal entitlements, home leave and boarding costs for educational facilities. Time off for medical/dental check-ups was recommended to be discontinued.

In respect of motivation and productivity, the Commission recommended structural improvements to the salary scale for staff in the Professional and higher categories. The Commission reiterated earlier recommendations regarding cash awards for outstanding performance, non-monetary awards such as pins, plaques and certificates, and environmental motivators in areas of security, health, education and briefing and other work-related conditions. Regarding allowances, the Commission made recommendations in three areas—the education grant, dependency allowances and separation payments—with the Commission reaffirming that the education grant was to remain solely an expatriate benefit. Existing dependency allowances remained unchanged, with the exception of the children's allowance for a disabled child, which was set at double the amount of the children's allowance. The existing scale of separation payments should be abolished and, with the exception of the commutation of unused annual leave, all separation payments were to be calculated in the future using the base/floor amount for the remuneration system. Unused annual leave was to be calculated on the basis of net remuneration at the duty station where the staff member had served prior to separation.

ACC consideration. In April, the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination adopted a statement⁽⁵⁾ for submission to ICSC, in which it said that in comparison with expatriate staff of the comparator civil service, especially those in the field, the conditions of common system staff were highly unfavourable. Similar comparisons with staff of bilateral or other multilateral financial and aid agencies revealed that employment conditions of the common system were less than adequate. Conditions of service in the system were no longer competitive or attractive, ACC stated; in many instances: they acted as a disincentive to continuing in service. It was increasingly difficult to find qualified and experienced staff to fill vacancies, which was a very real day-to-day problem. It was expected that the outcome of the ICSC review would be the restoration of the competitiveness of the UN system as an employer. ACC identified the key elements in an improved remuneration system as more responsive treatment of the housing component; a more meaningful mobility and hardship allowance; more flexibility in managing and operating the margin; establishment of a more meaningful floor remuneration level; and appropriate incentives to motivate staff and improve productivity. The building up of the integrated package of proposals should not be unduly affected by cost considerations, ACC said.

In another decision,⁽⁶⁾ regarding staffing levels, ACC recommended that the secretariat of ICSC should be reduced by one P-4, two P-3 and two General Service posts.

On 5 July, ACC convened a special session at which it adopted a further statement⁽⁷⁾ for submission to ICSC. It repeated its grave concern that conditions of employment and the purchasing power of UN common system staff continued to be eroded and that good staff were leaving. ICSC was requested to give the closest attention in proposing a revised system to several factors, including substantially improved remuneration for all staff at all duty stations, starting with at least a 5 per cent across-the-board increase, with a mechanism of continuing yearly increases until the competitive level of take-home pay was restored.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December 1989, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/198 without vote.

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission
The General Assembly,

Having considered the fifteenth annual report of the International Civil Service Commission and other related reports,

I

Comprehensive review of the conditions of service of the staff in the Professional and higher categories

Recalling that, in section III of its resolution 42/221 of 21 December 1987, it requested the International Civil Service Commission to undertake a comprehensive review of the conditions of service of the staff in the Professional and higher categories,

Recalling also the guidance it provided on this comprehensive review in section III of its resolution 42/221 and in section I of its resolution 43/226 of 21 December 1988,

Recalling further, in respect of the request contained in section I, paragraph 4 (c), of resolution 43/226, that the overall costs of all the elements of the solutions proposed in the comprehensive review should, as far as possible, be comparable to the costs of the current remuneration system,

Noting that only upon completion of the comprehensive review in all its aspects can the decisions covered in section I of the present resolution be considered final,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to make all necessary efforts to absorb in 1991 and subsequent years a significant portion of the additional costs arising in respect of the regular budget of the United Nations as a result of the adoption of the present resolution;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to emphasize to the executive heads of the specialized agencies the importance of assisting the respective governing bodies in taking parallel measures to the same effect;

A. Remuneration structure

Noting with concern that it has not been possible for the Commission to recommend the introduction of a revised remuneration structure,

1. Takes note of the views of the Commission with regard to the proposal that housing should be treated separately from the rest of the remuneration package and of the decision of the Commission, relating to undertaking further work on remuneration structures, contained in paragraph 196 of volume II of its report;

2. Urges the Commission to complete its consideration of all issues related to the introduction of a revised remuneration structure for the United Nations common system, including its impact on margin consideration and on the housing needs of staff in hardship duty stations, and to submit its final and complete conclusions to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

B. Comparator

1. Reaffirms that the Noblemaire principle should continue to serve as the basis of comparison between United Nations emoluments and those of the highest-paying civil service—currently the United States federal civil service—which, by its size and structure, lends itself to such comparison;

2. Endorses the recommendation of the Commission to conduct periodic checks, every five years, to determine which is the highest-paying civil service, and consequently requests the Commission to propose to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session a methodology for carrying out such checks;

C. Margin considerations

Recalling that, in section I, paragraph 2, of its resolution 40/244 of 18 December 1985, it approved a range of 110 to 120 with a desirable mid-point of 115, for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable mid-point of 115 over a period of time,

1. Confirm that the current concept of the margin should continue to apply;

2. Also confirm that the current margin range of 110 to 120 should continue to apply;

3. Endorses the methodological approach, as outlined in paragraph 173 (d) of volume II of the report of the Commission, for the calculation of the net remuneration margin;

4. Requests the Commission to continue to report the net remuneration margin on an annual basis;

5. Also requests the Commission to monitor the annual net remuneration margin over the five-year period beginning in the calendar year 1990 with a view to ensuring, to the extent possible, that by the end of that period the average of the successive annual margins is around the desirable mid-point of 115, and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session on the experience gained and, in the mean time, to submit to the Assembly at its forty-seventh session an interim report on the net remuneration margin for the period 1990-1991;

D. Post adjustment

1. Requests the Commission to reconsider the decision contained in paragraph 250 (a) of volume II of its report relating to the granting of post adjustment increases due to cost of living;

2. Takes note of all other decisions taken by the Commission in respect of the operation of the post adjustment system as reflected in chapter VI of volume II of its report;

3. Endorses, with effect from 1 July 1990, the recommendations contained in paragraph 261 of volume II of the report of the Commission regarding the removal of regressivity from the post adjustment system and the inclusion of pension contributions as a separate item in the post adjustment index, on the understanding that, as indicated in paragraph 262, the current remuneration correction factor and floor protection measures will be discontinued;

4. Instructs the Commission to complete as soon as possible, and preferably by the end of 1991, a round of place-to-place surveys using the methodology outlined in chapter VI of volume II of its report, on the understanding that the surveys at the seven headquarters duty stations and at other duty stations with more than 150 Professional staff members will be finalized by the end of 1990 and that, at duty stations with small numbers of staff members, every effort will be made to utilize to the maximum the external data sources as outlined in paragraph 235 of volume II of the report of the Commission;

5. Requests the executive heads and the staff to co-operate with the Commission during the place-to-place survey process;

6. Requests the Commission to devise appropriate measures to deal with those duty stations where, upon implementation of a place-to-place survey, there exists a significant difference between the post adjustment index and the actual multiplier;

7. Confirms that, following the introduction of the revised salary scale referred to in section I.H, paragraph 3, of the present resolution and pending the outcome of the respective place-to-place surveys in those locations where the index reflected in the post adjustment multipliers exceeds the post adjustment index, net remuneration will continue to be adjusted only to reflect currency fluctuations until the post adjustment index surpasses the index reflected by the post adjustment multipliers;

E. Mobility and hardship

1. Approves, with effect from 1 July 1990, the introduction of a mobility and hardship allowance as outlined in paragraphs 313 to 322 and 328 of volume II of the report of the Commission, an assignment grant as outlined in paragraphs 323 to 327 and the provisions relating to the reimbursement of boarding costs contained in paragraph 329, on the understanding that the amounts indicated in the matrix for staff serving at Headquarters or in North American and European duty stations and similar designated locations will be payable from their fourth assignment only if they have served in at least two field duty stations;

2. Requests the Commission to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the operation of the mobility and hardship allowance and the assignment grant;

F. Motivation and productivity

1. Endorses, with effect from 1 July 1990, the recommendations contained in paragraph 356 of volume II of the report of the Commission concerning structural improvements to the salary scale, which should be appropriately reflected in the scale of pensionable remuneration, and also endorses the recommendation contained in paragraph 357 (a) relating to the modification of promotion policy;

2. Invites the organizations of the United Nations common system to take appropriate steps to introduce the Commission's recommendations as outlined in paragraphs 357 (d) and (e) in respect of non-monetary awards and environmental motivators;

3. Invites the Commission again to review performance evaluation systems in all organizations of the United Nations common system with a view to:

(a) Ensuring that such systems are objective and transparent;

(b) Tying within-grade step increments and promotions to merit, as indicated in the performance evaluation reports, rather than primarily to longevity;

G. Allowances

1. Endorses, with effect from 1 July 1990, the recommendations contained in chapter IX of volume II of the report of the Commission and the consequential amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, with respect to:

(a) The children's allowance in respect of disabled children, as outlined in paragraph 429 (e);

(b) The calculation of the commutation of unused annual leave, as outlined in paragraph 453 (d);

(c) The scale of separation payments, as outlined in paragraph 453 (g);

2. Takes note of the conclusions of the Commission reflected in paragraphs 406 and 453 (a), (e) and (f) and confirms, with respect to paragraph 453 (b) and (c), that the terms and conditions of payment of the repatriation grant should remain unchanged in all respects;

3. Requests the Commission to collect the necessary information on the practices of the organizations of the United Nations common system regarding the granting of expatriate entitlements to staff members living in their home countries while stationed at duty stations located in another country in order to assess the feasibility of harmonizing practices among organizations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

4. Also requests the Commission to reconsider the methodology for the determination of dependency allowances in the light of the tax practices of the comparator and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

5. Further requests the Commission to provide an overview of the package of common system allowances, including the level, rationale and procedure for review of each allowance, inter alia, by reference to the package of allowances provided by the comparator, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

H. Base salary scale

1. Approves, with effect from 1 July 1990, the establishment of a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service;

2. Also approves, with effect from 1 July 1990, revised rates of staff assessment for staff members with neither a dependent spouse nor a dependent child, to be used in conjunction with gross base salaries and gross amounts of separation payments and, consequently, approves as at the same date an amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations as set forth in annex I to the present resolution, to replace, for staff in the Professional and higher categories, the present scale of staff assessment for staff with neither a dependent spouse nor a dependent child;

3. Further approves, with effect from 1 July 1990, the revised scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories contained in annex II to the present resolution, and the consequential amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, together with the procedures for its construction and implementation that are reflected in annex III to the present resolution;

II

Functioning of the International Civil Service Commission

Recalling that, in section VIII of its resolution 42/221, it requested the International Civil Service Commission to undertake a study of its functioning with a view to enhancing its work,

Recalling also its request to the Commission in section II of its resolution 43/226 to expand the review of its functioning in consultation with the organizations of the United Nations common system and staff representatives and to submit proposals thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session,

Noting that the action of the Commission has been limited so far to considering the format of its annual report and to agreeing to practical arrangements for the conduct of its work during its sessions,

1. Requests the Secretary-General, together with his colleagues in the Administrative Committee on Coordination and after consultations with the representatives of staff participating in the International Civil Service Commission, to review the functioning of the Commission and to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session a report on the matter together with

2. Requests the Commission to continue to seek improvements in the presentation of its report;

Commends to the attention of the governing bodies of the organizations of the United Nations common system the recommendation of the International Civil Service Commission to increase the mandatory age of separation to 62 for staff members entering into service on or after 1 January 1990;

B

Urges the organizations of the United Nations common system to provide the fullest information to the Commission on the introduction of special measures for the recruitment of women so as to enable the Commission to analyse appropriately the progress achieved and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

C

2. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the specialized agencies to take appropriate steps to bring an end to these practices.

ANNEX III

A. Construction of the salary scale

The salary scale in annex II to the present resolution has been derived from the current net base salary scale applicable to staff with a dependent spouse or child through a combination of the following:

- Consolidation of 12 multiplier points of post adjustment on a no gain/no loss basis on the basis of the existing methodology for such consolidation;
- Elimination of regressivity in accordance with section I.D, paragraph 3, of the present resolution;
- Introduction of structural changes in accordance with section I.F, paragraph 1, of the present resolution;
- Inclusion, on an overall average basis, of the remuneration adjustment recommended by the International Civil Service Commission in paragraph 125 of volume II of its report;
- Determination of gross salary through reverse application of the current staff assessment rates for staff with a dependent spouse or child;
- Determination of net salary for staff with neither a dependent spouse nor a dependent child through the application of the revised staff assessment rates contained in annex I to the present resolution.

B. Implementation measures

1. Upon implementation, on 1 July 1990, of the salary scale contained in annex II to the present resolution, a revised post adjustment multiplier and a revised post adjustment index will be established at each duty station.

2. At the base of the system, New York, the revised post adjustment multiplier applicable on 1 July 1990 will be determined, using if necessary partial classes of post adjustment, so as to arrive at total net emoluments, which, when compared with the corresponding net emoluments that would have been applicable on 1 July 1990 on the basis of the current system, on an overall average basis, represent the percentage adjustment recommended by the Commission in paragraph 125 of volume II of its report.

3. At all other duty stations, the revised post adjustment multipliers applicable on 1 July 1990 will be determined, using if necessary partial classes of post adjustment, so as to arrive at total net emoluments, which, when compared to the net emoluments that would have been applicable on 1 July 1990 at that duty station on the basis of the current system, represent an adjustment equivalent in amount to that applicable at the base of the system.

4. After 1 July 1990, at each duty station, the first change in the post adjustment classification resulting from cost-of-living movement will take place when the post adjustment index applicable prior to the introduction of the new salary scale reaches the level that would have triggered the next full class of post adjustment under the operation of the post adjustment system. Thereafter, changes will be effected on the basis of the movement of the revised post adjustment index.

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/898) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.19); agenda item 131.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 28, 31, 33, 35, 38, 44, 59; plenary 84.

By resolution 44/201 A, section VII, of 21 December, relating to the proposed budget for the biennium 1990-1991, the General Assembly decided on rates for the emoluments of members of the Committee on the Rights of the Child.

Other staff issues

Effects of restructuring

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General's final report(1) on the implementation of a 1986 Assembly resolution) endorsing recommendations made by the Group of 18 to further improve the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations was transmitted to the Assembly in April (see PART SIX, Chapter I).

The Secretary-General noted that some recommendations, particularly in the area of human resources management, were of an ongoing nature. The report illustrated the progress accomplished in a number of areas, many of them affecting personnel. Staff reductions resulting from financial considerations and pressures often left posts vacant that were never intended for abolition but could be filled neither through redeployment of staff nor through recruitment. There was now, however, a clearer distribution of responsibilities in a number of organizational entities, such as the political, social and common service area. Some actions, such as the establishment of an integrated information system in the administrative area, would not yield results immediately, but would improve the functioning of the Organization in the long run.

The Secretary-General reported on specific measures to implement the Group of 18 recommendations regarding personnel management,(3) which had held that the organizational structure was too complex and top-heavy. He proposed abolition of two Under-Secretary-General posts and eight Assistant Secretary-General posts. The recommendation to fill entry-level posts at the P-1 and P-2 levels through competitive examinations, either internal or external, had been fully implemented; so far, 33 Member States had participated in national competitive examinations. P-3 examinations had to be postponed until the biennium 1990-1991 owing partly to a lack of resources. As recommended, the proportion of appointments at the P-1 to P-3 levels (55 per cent) was higher than at the other levels of the Professional category. Regarding the recommendation that no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group of States, the report stated that that was being taken into account when posts became vacant.

On 21 December, by resolution 44/200 A, the General Assembly recognized that the implementation of the Group of 18's approved recommendations took place against a background of financial crisis, and noted that further efforts were needed to implement, in a balanced manner, the various recommendations, including those related to personnel issues. It stressed the need for greater transparency and coherence in personnel management, and recognized progress in post reduction while acknowledging that the Secretary-General was not then in a position to recommend further reductions. The Assembly encouraged the Secretary-General and Member States to intensify their efforts to implement the recommendations.

On the same date, by resolution 44/201 B, section I, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to continue his efforts, as soon as possible in the course of the biennium 1990-1991, to identify four further high-level posts for reduction. In section XIII of the same resolution, concerning the Office of General Services at Headquarters, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to devise a more satisfactory system for the reimbursement to the regular budget of the cost of accommodation for posts related to extrabudgetary activities and to report thereon to the next Assembly.

Staff composition

In October, the Secretary-General presented to the General Assembly his annual report(4) on the composition of the UN Secretariat by nationality, sex and type of appointment, for the period 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989. The total number of staff of the Secretariat as at 30 June 1989 was 13,561, of whom 9,155 were paid from the regular budget. Staff in the Professional category and above numbered 3,749; staff in the General Service and related categories, 8,816; and project personnel, 996.

During the reporting period, 134 appointments were made to Professional posts subject to geographical distribution.

On 30 June, there were 11 unrepresented Member States, as compared to 10 at the beginning of the reporting period. There were 26 under-represented Member States, compared to 27 the previous year. Changes in the representation of Member States resulted not only from staff appointments and separations, but also from changes in the status of some staff members, reduced recruitment activities, and adjustments to the desirable ranges based on assessed contributions.

During the reporting period, 36 women were appointed to posts subject to geographical distribution, representing 26.8 per cent of the appointments made. This compared with 28.8 per cent during the previous reporting period.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/185 A without vote.

Composition of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming its resolutions 33/143 of 20 December 1978, 35/210 of 17 December 1980, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/220 A of 21 December 1987 and 43/224 A of 21 December 1988,

Emphasizing the independent international status of the staff of the Secretariat,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the composition of the Secretariat,

Noting the progress among nationals of some Member States who have served primarily on fixed-term contracts in accepting long-term and permanent contracts for service with the Secretariat,

Noting with satisfaction the positive results derived from holding national competitive examinations as a recruitment tool for nationals of unrepresented and under-represented Member States,

Noting that there continues to be some unevenness between the number of appointments made to posts subject to geographical distribution of nationals of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States and those of Member States within range or over-represented,

Noting also the efforts made and still required to fill posts in organizational units with high vacancy rates, particularly in the regional commissions,

Bearing in mind the views on personnel questions expressed by Member States in the Fifth Committee during the forty-fourth session,

1. Reiterates its full support for the Secretary-General as chief administrative officer of the Organization and his prerogatives and responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Urges the Secretary-General, whenever making appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution, to make every effort to recruit nationals of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, including candidates successful in the national competitive examinations, taking also into consideration paragraph 4 of resolution 41/206 A of 11 December 1986, in order to ensure that all such countries come closer to the midpoint of their desirable ranges;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to take every available measure to ensure, at the senior and policy formulating levels of the Secretariat, the equitable representation of Member States, in particular of developing countries and other Member States with inadequate representation at those levels, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session, bearing in mind that no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group of States and with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts aimed at improving the composition of the Secretariat by ensuring a wide and equitable geographical distribution of staff in the Professional and higher categories in all main departments and offices, bearing in mind that paramount consideration shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to monitor closely the effects of the reduction of posts on geographical distribution, particularly at the senior levels, and to take appropriate measures to redress any imbalances;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to endeavour to complete the work on the development of a methodology for holding national competitive examinations for posts at the P-3 level in all Member States and to submit a progress report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to complete his efforts towards the development of a comprehensive career development plan for all staff that allows for fair and transparent post-bidding throughout the Secretariat by integrating the vacancy management programme, ensures adequate, equitable and transparent promotion procedures and recognizes merit through a rational performance evaluation and reporting system;

8. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on:

(a) The review of rules, regulations and criteria used for the promotion of staff;

(b) Efforts to ensure transparency in the work of the appointment and promotion bodies;

(c) The inclusion of effective and expeditious appeal and recourse mechanisms in the vacancy management programme;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to develop a personnel policy to increase the mobility of staff, keeping in view the functional requirements of the Organization, and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the measures proposed;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare proposals for groupings of Member States in presenting tables in his report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the composition of the Secretariat, taking into account the views expressed by Member States;

11. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Status of women in the Secretariat

In his final report(1) on the implementation of the approved 1986 recommendations of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts (see above), the Secretary-General said that the proportion of women successful in national competitive examinations to fill entry-level posts at the

P-1 and P-2 levels had increased in recent years, reaching 44 per cent in 1987. The Secretary-General had so far approved 51 special measures to improve the status of women, based on the action programme and the recommendations of a high-level steering committee established by the Secretary-General in 1985.⁽⁵⁾ As a consequence, the proportion of women in posts subject to geographical distribution had risen from 23.1 per cent as at 30 June 1985 to 26.5 per cent as at 31 January 1989. The number of women promoted to decision- and policy-making levels had increased substantially; the number of women at the D-2 level had increased from 3 to 7 in the past four years.

At the highest levels, it was recorded in the Secretary-General's report on the composition of the Secretariat⁽⁴⁾ that women held two (8.3 per cent) of 24 Under-Secretary-General positions; none of 17 Assistant Secretary-General positions; 7 of 85 D-2 positions (8.2 per cent); and 15 of 235 D-1 positions (6.4 per cent).

In October, the Secretary-General issued the fifth report⁽⁶⁾ in a series dealing with the status of women in the Secretariat. He stated that despite retrenchment and the 12 per cent reduction in the total number of posts, the number of women in the Secretariat had increased slightly. The most noteworthy increase was at the D-2 level. The 30 per cent target for promotions of women set by the vacancy management system had been exceeded. The Secretary-General noted that the system appeared to be an effective tool for the advancement of women into management positions. He also recalled that on 8 March, a senior woman had been selected at the D-1 level to act as the focal point for questions relating to women in the Secretariat.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 May, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1989/29.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the decision of the Secretary-General to deploy on a full-time basis a senior-level officer, preferably a woman, within existing resources, in a position designated as the focal point within the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat to monitor and facilitate the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,

Noting the absence of the progress report requested by the General Assembly in resolution 43/224 C of 21 December 1988,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 43/101 of 8 December 1988 on the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, 43/103 of 8 December 1988 and 43/224 C of 21 December 1988 on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and 43/226 of 21 December

1988 on the United Nations common system, and all of their relevant provisions, as well as other related resolutions and decisions and their relevant provisions,

Recalling also the priorities identified by the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat in its fourth report,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts and to consider additional measures to increase the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution, particularly in senior policy-making and decision-making posts, with a view to achieving an overall participation rate of 30 per cent of the total by 1990;

2. Also requests that such additional measures meet the goal of ensuring equitable representation of women from developing countries;

3. Reiterates the request to all Member States to continue to support the efforts of the United Nations and its specialized agencies to increase the proportion of women in the Professional category and above by, inter alia, nominating more women candidates and encouraging women to apply for vacant posts and to participate in national competitive examinations;

4. Urges the Secretary-General to take note of the view of the Commission on the Status of Women that budgetary constraints should not interfere with the important goal, in accordance with the action programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, of rectifying the underrepresentation of women in the Secretariat and, in particular, of recruiting and promoting women to senior policy-making and decision-making positions;

5. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue monitoring the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat and within the United Nations system;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the progress achieved in the continued implementation of the action programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat to the Economic and Social Council and to the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session, as well as to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/29

24 May 1989 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1989/90) without vote, 16 May (meeting 16); draft by Commission on women (E/1989/27); agenda item 10.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/75 without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling the relevant paragraphs of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in which importance is attached to the appointment of women at senior decision-making and managerial levels,

Noting the deployment of a senior-level officer in a position designated as the focal point for women in the office of the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management, to be responsible for all aspects of the action programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,

Recalling its resolutions 43/101 of 8 December 1988 on the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies, 43/103 of 8 December 1988 and 43/224 C of 21 December 1988 on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and 43/226 of 21 December 1988 on the United Nations common system, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/29 of 24 May 1989 on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, as well as other related resolutions and decisions,

Recalling also the recommendations for action contained in the fourth report of the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat of 30 June 1988,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General of 16 October 1989 on the composition of the Secretariat, in which it is stated that of the twenty-four Under-Secretary-General positions, twenty-two are held by men and only two are held by women (8.3 per cent), that seventeen Assistant Secretary-General positions are held by men and none by women, that of the eighty-five D-2 positions, seventy-eight are held by men and seven by women (8.2 per cent), and that of the two hundred and thirty-five D-1 positions, two hundred and twenty are held by men and fifteen by women (6.4 per cent),

1. Requests the Secretary-General, in full conformity with Articles 8, 97 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, to intensify his efforts to increase the number of women employed throughout the United Nations system, particularly in senior policy-level and decision-making posts, in order to achieve an overall rate of participation by women of 30 per cent by 1990, in accordance with paragraph 3 of its resolution 40/258 B of 18 December 1985;

2. Requests that renewed efforts be made to ensure more equitable representation of women from developing countries in posts subject to geographical distribution, subject to Article 101 of the Charter;

3. Urges the Secretary-General to take note of the view of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council that, within budgetary constraints, the achievement of the goal of rectifying the underrepresentation of women in the Secretariat, in particular at the policy-making levels, as well as the career development of women already in the Secretariat, in accordance with the action programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, should not be impeded;

4. Reiterates its request to Member States to continue to support efforts of the United Nations and its specialized agencies to increase the proportions of women in the Professional categories and above by, inter alia, nominating more women candidates and encouraging women to apply for vacant posts;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session through the appropriate bodies, including the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-fourth session, an outline of a programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat for the period 1991-1995, based on specific goals and appropriate monitoring to ensure a substantially higher rate of participation by women from all geographic regions, especially in senior-level posts, by 1995;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that his annual report on progress achieved and future strategies to implement action programmes on the status of women in the Secretariat and the relevant mandates adopted by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council is submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women and to the General Assembly for consideration by the Third Committee, under the item on the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women.

General Assembly resolution 44/75

8 December 1989 Meeting 78 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (A/44/803) without vote, 20 November (meeting 49); 45-nation draft (A/C.3/44/L.27), orally revised; agenda item 104 (C).

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 3rd Committee 21-28, 36, 49; plenary 78.

On 19 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/185 C without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The General Assembly,
Recalling Articles 8, 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also all relevant resolutions on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and the relevant paragraphs of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraphs 315, 356 and 358,

Noting with satisfaction that the question of the improvement of the status of women in the secretariats of the United Nations system continues to be a standing item on the agenda of the Administrative Committee on Coordination,

Reaffirming the goal of increasing by 1990 the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution to 30 per cent of the total,

Noting, however, the inadequate increase in the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution and in the appointment of women to the senior and policy-formulating levels, particularly with regard to women from developing countries, keeping in view that recruitment overall has been affected by the implementation of recommendation 15 of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations during the period 1987-1989,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and of section II.E of the report of the Secretary-General on the composition of the Secretariat,

1. Reiterates its full support for the Secretary-General as the chief administrative officer of the Organization and his prerogatives and responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Urges the Secretary-General to strengthen his efforts to increase the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution, in particular at the senior and policy-formulating levels, with a view to achieving to the extent possible an overall participation rate of 30 per cent of the total by 1990, taking into account the principle that the paramount consideration shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity and with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to increase the representation of women from developing countries, including at the senior and policy-formulating levels, in view of the small proportion of women from those countries;

4. Reiterates its request to all Member States to support the efforts of the Secretary-General referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3 of the present resolution by nominating more women candidates and encouraging more women to apply for posts subject to geographical distribution, in particular those at the senior and policy-formulating levels;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in seeking to achieve more tangible progress for women in the Secretariat, not to lose sight of equality of opportunity for all staff in the Secretariat;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report in the future on all aspects of the status of women in the Secretariat in one single document, taking into account the importance of comprehensiveness, transparency and analysis in the presentation;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session information on, inter alia:

(a) The implementation of the action programme for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat;

(b) The implementation of the recommendations made by the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat, as well as all relevant resolutions on that subject;

(c) The recruitment of women from developing countries to posts subject to geographical distribution;

(d) The appointment of women to posts at the senior and policy-formulating levels;

(e) The respective roles of the focal point in the office of the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management and of the Steering Committee;

(f) Recommendations for further action, including his approach to the setting of new targets for the period 1991-1995;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to make available the information referred to in paragraph 7 of the present resolution to all relevant bodies, as set out in General Assembly resolutions and paragraph 358 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women.

Staff rules

In September 1989, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his annual report(7) containing the texts of provisional amendments made to the staff rules since his previous report in 1988.(8) The changes concerned hours of work, official holidays, inter-agency loans of staff, non-acceptance of external honoraria or remuneration, salaries and related allowances, staff assessments, education grants, mission salary and allowances, assignment allowances, annual leave, special leave, home leave, sick leave, maternity leave, travel and removal expenses, expenses connected with assignment and separation, and disciplinary measures and procedures. Many changes were a consequence of the recommendations of the Group of 18 approved in 1986.(2)

On 19 December, the General Assembly, by decision 44/439, took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Staff representation

By a 3 November note,(9) the Secretary-General transmitted to the Fifth Committee a document submitted by the staff unions and associations of the UN Secretariat, pursuant to a 1980 General Assembly resolution.(10) In the document, the staff representative stated that the financial crisis, the Group of 18 report and the retrenchment process had presented a serious challenge to UN staff. The document said that there had been an unstated but clear implication that the staff was somehow to blame for UN problems. The staff had been sensitive to the unstated message that if there were fewer staff members, or if they did their work better or more cheaply, somehow the problems would disappear. The entire process had neither improved morale nor increased efficiency. Ironically, the dénouement of retrenchment came at a time when demands on the United Nations and its staff were at their peak. Yet no significant effort had been made to address the staffing needs or the efficiency of the Organization.

The report covered staff views on retrenchment and "reform"; vacancy management and mobility; career development; the need for a unified personnel structure; disappointing progress in advancing the status of women; staff management allocations; security and independence of the international civil service; and administration of justice.

Privileges and immunities

In response to a 1988 General Assembly resolution,(11) the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee, on behalf of and with the approval of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), a 2 November report(12) on respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the UN system during the period 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989.

The period had been marked by one particularly disturbing development: the report of the brutal murder of Lieutenant Colonel William Richard Higgins, a United States officer serving as chief of a group of military observers assigned to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL). He was abducted on 17 February 1988, and on 13 July 1989 an announcement at Beirut by his captors stated that he had been killed. The Secretary-General said that while he would continue to try to establish that fact, he had regretfully concluded that it was almost certain that Colonel Higgins was dead. If his fears were confirmed he would try to recover the body (for Security Council action, see PART TWO, Chapter IV).

The Middle East, with the most cases of arrest, detention and abduction of officials, continued to be an area of prime concern, the Secretary-General said. Efforts to improve the situation had not produced encouraging results. The number of cases of arrest and detention without charge or trial of staff members of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) remained very high. Elsewhere, also, to the Secretary-General's great regret and disappointment, the number of cases of arrest, detention or disappearance of officials for which the Organization had not been able fully to exercise their rights had increased substantially in the reporting period.

The Secretary-General reported that 157 UNRWA staff had been arrested or detained, an increase over the 151 cases reported in the period 1 July 1987 to 30 June 1988. There had been a decrease in the number of staff detained by one or another of the militia groups in Lebanon, from 24 in the last reporting period to 11 in the current one. In no case had UNRWA received adequate and timely information on the reason for arrest and detention, despite requests to the authorities. Several staff were being held in prisons in Israel, having been transferred there from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

While he was able to report the release of some staff in Chad, Egypt, Ethiopia, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, the Secretary-General regretted to report the death in prison of an UNRWA staff member detained in Lebanon by Syrian armed forces. There had been no resolution regarding the arrest and expulsion of staff members in Mauritania.

The Secretary-General also reported on restrictions on official and private travel of United Nations and other officials, including the difficulties of UNRWA as to staff movement into and out of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and restrictions, due to United States regulations, on travel beyond a 25-mile radius of Columbus Circle in New York City by staff members and their dependants who were citizens of particular countries, and unauthorized taxation of officials by some States, including Burundi, Egypt and Switzerland.

As to the case of Dumitru Mazilu, a former member of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, charged by the Sub-Commission in 1985 with preparing a report on human rights and youth, the Secretary-General reported that Romanian authorities had not permitted Mr. Mazilu to travel to Geneva to present his report. (See PART THREE, Chapter X.)

An appendix to the document(9) submitted by the staff unions and associations of the United Nations Secretariat listed staff members whose basic rights were stated to have been violated in Afghanistan, Argentina, Chad, Chile, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Jordan, Kenya, Lebanon (by either Syrian armed forces or members of unknown elements), Mauritania, Nepal, Pakistan, Rwanda, Somalia, the Syrian Arab Republic, Zambia, and by Israeli authorities in the Gaza Strip and West Bank.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, by decision 44/440, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, requested the Secretary-General to intensify efforts to make his report on respect for the privileges and immunities of United Nations and other officials available to Member States well in advance of the subject's consideration.

Also on 19 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/186.

Respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations

The General Assembly,

Recalling, under Article 100 of the Charter of the United Nations, that each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities and that the Secretary-General and the staff shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization,

Recalling that, under Article 105 of the Charter, all officials of the Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Member States such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization,

Recalling the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the United Nations Development Programme Standard Basic Assistance Agreements,

Recalling also its resolution 76(I) of 7 December 1946, in which it approved the granting of the privileges and immunities referred to in articles V and VII of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations to all members of the staff of the United Nations,

Recalling further its resolution 43/173 of 9 December 1988, the annex to which contains the Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, including the principle that all persons under arrest or detention shall be provided whenever necessary with medical care and treatment,

Reiterating the obligation of all officials of the Organization in the conduct of their duties to observe fully both the laws and regulations of Member States and their duties and responsibilities to the Organization,

Mindful of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General to safeguard the functional immunity of all United Nations officials,

Mindful also of the importance in this respect of the provision by Member States of adequate and timely information concerning the arrest and detention of staff members and, more particularly, their granting of access to them,

Bearing in mind the considerations of the Secretary-General to guarantee minimum standards of justice and due process to United Nations officials,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 42/219 of 21 December 1987 and 43/225 of 21 December 1988,

1. Takes note with grave concern of the report submitted by the Secretary-General, on behalf of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, and of the developments indicated therein, in particular the reported case of abduction and killing, as well as the, once again, very high number of new cases of arrest and detention and the very negative developments in respect of various previously reported cases under this category;

2. Deplores the increase in the number of cases in which the safety, functioning and well-being of officials have been placed in jeopardy;

3. Also deplores the substantially increased number of cases of arrest or detention of officials for which the organizations of the United Nations system have not been able fully to exercise their rights during the reporting period;

4. Calls upon all Member States scrupulously to respect the privileges and immunities of all officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations and to refrain from any acts that would impede such officials in the performance of their functions, thereby seriously affecting the proper functioning of the organizations;

5. Urges those Member States holding under arrest or detention officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations to enable the Secretary-General or the executive head of the organization concerned fully to exercise the right of functional protection inherent in the relevant multilateral conventions and bilateral agreements, particularly with respect to immediate access to detained staff members;

6. Calls upon all Member States otherwise impeding officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations in the proper discharge of their duties to review the cases mentioned in the report of the Secretary-General and to co-ordinate efforts with the Secretary-General or the executive head of the organization concerned to resolve every case with all due speed;

7. Calls upon the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures in order to promote knowledge of and compliance with the Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, including the principle that all persons under arrest or detention shall be provided whenever necessary with medical care and treatment;

8. Calls upon the staff of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations fully to comply with the provisions of Article 100 of the Charter of the United Nations and with the obligations resulting from the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, in particular regulation 1.8, and from the equivalent provisions governing the staff of the other agencies;

9. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General that have led to the release of many staff members who were previously reported as being under arrest or detention;

10. Also welcomes the Secretary-General's determination to continue to work together with the respective executive heads and with the authorities of Governments concerned to ensure strict implementation of the international agreements concerning privileges and immunities of international organizations and their officials;

11. Calls upon the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to bring about an expeditious solution of the cases still pending, which were referred to in his report;

12. Notes with concern the restrictions on duty travel of officials as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General;

13. Takes note with concern of the information in the report of the Secretary-General related to taxation on salaries and emoluments as well as the status, privileges and immunities of officials;

14. Calls upon the Secretary-General, as chief administrative officer of the United Nations, to continue personally to act as the focal point in promoting and ensuring the observance of the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations by using all such means as are available to him;

15. Urges the Secretary-General promptly to follow up all cases of arrest, detention and any matters relating to the security and proper functioning of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to review and appraise the measures already taken to enhance the proper functioning, safety and protection of international civil servants.

Pensions

According to the report(13) of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to the General Assembly, during 1989 the number of participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund had increased from 54,006 to 56,222. As at 31 December, there were 29,566 periodic benefits in award: 9,888 retirement benefits, 5,024 early retirement benefits, 5,232 deferred retirement benefits, 3,775 widows' and widowers' benefits, 5,019 children's benefits, 581 disability benefits and 47 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, 3,020 lump-sum withdrawals and other settlements were paid. The principal of the Fund increased from $6,810,774,123 to $7,579,591,411. Investment income totalled $735,093,188, comprising $457,822,273 in interest and dividends and $277,270,915 in net profit on sales of investments. After deductions of investment management costs of $8,787,091, net investment income was $726,306,097.

Over the previous 39 years, the total book value of the portfolio had risen from $13 million to $6,813 million, a compound increase of 17.4 per cent a year. During the 1988 calendar year, investment income from interest and dividends amounted to $395.6 million, an increase of 11.6 per cent over 1987. Total new funds that became available for investment amounted to $396 million (contributions plus investment income, minus benefit payments and investment expenses). Realized capital gains amounted to $302 million.

As at 1 January 1989, the Joint Staff Pension Board consisted of 33 members, an increase from 21, mandated by a 1987 General Assembly resolution.(14) The Board held its thirty-eighth session (12-21 July, New York),(15) and dealt with actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1988; a study of measures to restore over the long term the actuarial balance of the Fund; arrangements for a comprehensive review of the methodology for determination of the scale of pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories; evolution of the pensionable remuneration of such staff since the last comprehensive review in 1986; and preliminary examination of the methodology for determining pension remuneration and consequent staff pensions in the General Service and other locally recruited categories.

ACABQ submitted its comments(16) on the 1989 report of the Board and the report of the Secretary-General on Fund investments (see below). It recommended approval of $30,573,400 for expenses chargeable to the Fund for the biennium 1990-1991. It also recommended approval of new posts and resources for data processing, and said that the staffing situation of the Fund should be carefully monitored.

Pension Fund investments

The annual report(17) of the Secretary-General for the year ended 31 March 1989 on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund was submitted to the Assembly in October.

The market value of the Fund's assets had increased to $7,632 million from $7,229 million a year earlier, an increase of 5.57 per cent and $819 million above book value. Total investment return for the year ending 31 March 1989 was 5.9 per cent which, after adjusting for inflation, represented a "real" rate of return of 0.9 per cent. The Fund remained one of the most diversified pension funds in the world. Investments were held in 29 currencies and 44 countries; 50 per cent of the assets were invested in currencies other than the United States dollar, the Fund's unit of account. The appreciation in the relative value of the United States dollar during the year under review had influenced market values of investments outside the United States when expressed in dollars, and had consequently also had an impact on positive rates of return in local currencies when expressed in dollar terms. Equities constituted 42 per cent of the assets as at 31 March, down from 43 per cent in the previous year. Bonds accounted for 34 per cent, the same as in the previous year, while real estate-related securities amounted to 12 per cent, compared to 11 per cent in 1988.

Considering the volatility of the major financial markets and fluctuations of exchange rates, the Secretary-General regarded the 5.9 per cent investment return for the financial year as satisfactory. He considered the policy of diversification and careful selection of investments, including active investigation of opportunities in developing countries, to be the best way to achieve the goal of preserving the principal and enhancing the Fund's investment return over the medium and long term.

Actuarial balance

The Board stated(15) its strong belief that measures were required to restore the Fund's actuarial balance. It therefore recommended the increase of the normal retirement age under the Fund's Regulations from age 60 to 62 for new participants; elimination of cost-of-living adjustments for future deferred retirement benefits until the separated participants reached ages 55, rather than 50; increasing the reduction factor to 6 per cent a year for early retirement at age 55 and 56 for new participants; and the increase of the contribution rate from 22.5 per cent to 23.7 per cent of pensionable remuneration. The package would constitute actuarial savings (percentage of pensionable remuneration) of 3.54 per cent. Implementation should be as soon as possible, the Board said, preferably at 1 January 1990 but not later than 1 January 1991.

Administrative expenses

By resolution 44/199 (see below), the General Assembly approved expenses chargeable to the Fund totalling $30,573,400 (net) for the biennium 1990-1991 for administration of the Fund. This comprised $10,259,400 for administrative costs and $20,314,000 for investment costs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/199 without vote.

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 43/227 of 21 December 1988,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 1989 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, chapter III of volume I of the report of the International Civil Service Commission, the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Measures to restore the actuarial balance of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling section I, paragraph 2, of its resolution 42/222 of 21 December 1987 and section I, paragraph 2, of its resolution 43/227, in which the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board was requested to complete the study of all possible measures to restore the actuarial balance of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund over the long term for presentation to the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session, together with the results of the twentieth actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1988,

Recalling also its resolutions 37/131 of 17 December 1982, 38/233 of 20 December 1983 and 39/246 of 18 December 1984, in which it indicated that a co-operative effort by member organizations, participants and beneficiaries is required if the actuarial imbalance is to be reduced or eliminated, thereby securing an adequate level of benefits under the Fund,

Noting the continuing actuarial imbalance of the Fund as revealed by the valuation as at 31 December 1988,

Taking note of the proposals made by the Board to restore the actuarial balance of the Fund over the long term,

Approves, without retroactive effect, the following measures, including the necessary amendments to articles 1, 25 and 29 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, and changes in the pension adjustment system, as set out in annexes I and II to the present resolution:

(a) For participants who enter or re-enter the Fund on or after 1 January 1990, the normal retirement age shall be 62;

(b) For participants who enter or re-enter the Fund on or after 1 January 1990, and who take early retirement before reaching age 57, the reduction factors applicable for ages 55 and 56 shall be 6 per cent for each year;

(c) For participants who separate from service on or after 31 December 1989 and who elect a deferred retirement benefit, adjustments of the benefit, in accordance with the pension adjustment system, shall commence only when the separated participant reaches age 55;

(d) The rate of contribution shall be increased, with effect from 1 January 1990, from 22.5 to 23.7 per cent of pensionable remuneration, of which the employing member organization shall pay 15.8 per cent and the participant 7.9 per cent;

II

Pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories

Recalling its request in section I, paragraph 6, of its resolution 41/208 of 11 December 1986 that the International Civil Service Commission undertake, in full co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, a further comprehensive review of the methodology for the determination of the scale of pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories, for monitoring the level of the scale and for its adjustment in between comprehensive reviews, and submit its recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session,

Recalling also that in section I, paragraph 2, of its resolution 41/208 the General Assembly approved the procedure for adjusting the scale of pensionable remuneration in between comprehensive reviews,

1. Takes note of the arrangements agreed upon by the International Civil Service Commission, as set out in paragraphs 50 and 51 of volume I of its report, and by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in paragraphs 82 and 83 of its report, to ensure full co-operation in the conduct of the comprehensive review;

2. Requests the Commission, in undertaking, in full co-operation with the Board, the comprehensive review of the pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories, to take into account:

(a) The relevant recommendations on the remuneration structure;

(b) The considerations set out in paragraphs 34 to 41 of volume I of the report of the Commission and paragraphs 84 to 95 of the report of the Board in studying the desirability of establishing a margin range between the pensionable remuneration of staff in the United Nations common system and staff in comparable grades in the comparator civil service; and to submit its report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

3. Approves, pending the completion of the comprehensive review, the modification of the procedure for adjusting pensionable remuneration as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 42 of volume I of its report;

4. Amends accordingly, with effect from 1 January 1990, article 54 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as set out in annex I to the present resolution;

III

Other amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Approves, with effect from 1 January 1990, an amendment to article 36 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex I to the present resolution, to provide for commencement of the payment of a disabled child's benefit at the same time as an early retirement benefit;

IV

Proposal of the International Telecommunication
Union to establish a Pension Purchasing Power Protection Fund

Taking note of the information provided in paragraphs 106 to 116 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the proposal of the International Telecommunication Union to establish a Pension Purchasing Power Protection Fund for its staff in the Professional and higher categories,

Reaffirming the strong concern expressed by the General Assembly in section IV of its resolution 38/233 about the need to maintain the unity, cohesion and integrity of the United Nations joint staff pension system and to avoid any action which may have an adverse effect on that system,

Endorses the conclusions of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board as set out in paragraphs 115 and 116 of its report, that the proposal of the International Telecommunication Union should be studied, within the context of the comprehensive review of pensionable remuneration, as one possible long-term approach to the adjustment of pensions in local currency terms and that the International Telecommunication Union should not proceed with the implementation of its proposal as that would weaken the United Nations common system;

Application for membership of the World Tourism Organization

Notes the suspension of the application of the World Tourism Organization for membership in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund;

VI

Emergency Fund

Authorizes the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund to supplement the voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund, for the biennium 1990-1991, by an amount not exceeding 200,000 United States dollars;

Administrative expenses

Approves expenses, chargeable directly to the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, totalling 30,573,400 United States dollars (net) for the biennium 1990-1991, and a reduction in expenses of 295,000 dollars (net) for the biennium 1988-1989, for the administration of the Fund;

VIII

Other questions

Takes note of the other questions considered in the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board;

IX

Investments of the United Nations
Joint Staff Pension Fund

Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund.

ANNEX I

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Article 1

Definitions

1. Add a new paragraph (n) to read as follows:

"(n) 'Normal retirement age' shall mean age 60, except that it shall mean age 62 for a participant whose participation commences or recommences on or after 1 January 1990."

2. Reletter existing paragraphs (n) to (v) as (o) to (w).

Article 25

Contributions

Replace paragraph (a) by the following text:

"(a) Contributions by the participant and by the employing member organization shall be payable to the Fund concurrently with the accrual of contributory service under article 22 (a) at the percentage rates of pensionable remuneration specified below:

A	B	C
For periods of contributory service	Participants (percentage)	Employing member organizations (percentage)
Before 1984	7.00	14.00
As from 1 January 1984 to 30 June 1988	7.25	14.50
As from 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989	7.40	14.80
As from 1 July 1989 to 31 December 1989	7.50	15.00
As from 1 January 1990	7.90	15.80."

Article 29

Early retirement benefit

Replace paragraphs (a) and (b) by the following text:

"(a) An early retirement benefit shall be payable to a participant whose age on separation is at least 55 but less than the normal retirement age and whose contributory service was five years or longer.

"(b) The benefit shall be payable at the standard annual rate for a retirement benefit, reduced for each year or part thereof by which the age of the participant on separation was less than the normal retirement age, at the rate of 6 per cent a year, except that:

- (i) If the contributory service of the participant was 25 years or longer but less than 30 years, 2 per cent a year in respect of the period of contributory service performed before 1 January 1985, and 3 per cent a year in respect of the period of such service performed as from 1 January 1985; or
- (ii) If the contributory service of the participant was 30 years or longer, 1 per cent a year, provided, however, that the rate in (i) or (ii) above shall apply to no more than five years."

Article 36 Child's benefit

Replace paragraph (c) by the following text:

"(c) A child's benefit shall, notwithstanding (a,) above, not become payable if the participant has chosen an early retirement benefit until he dies or reaches the normal retirement age, except to a child under the age of twenty-one, found by the Board to be disabled."

Article 54 Pensionable remuneration

Replace paragraph (b) by the following text:

"(b) In the case of participants in the Professional and higher categories, the scale of pensionable remuneration effective 1 May 1989, set out in the appendix hereto, shall be adjusted on the same date as the net remuneration amounts of officials in the Professional and higher categories in New York are adjusted. Such adjustment shall be by a uniform percentage equal to the weighted average percentage variation in the net remuneration amounts, as determined by the International Civil Service Commission, except that:

"(i) The amount of the first adjustment due after 1 January 1990 shall be reduced by 2.8 percentage points;

"(ii) The scale of pensionable remuneration determined by the International Civil Service Commission as corresponding to the revised salary structure entering into effect on 1 July 1990 shall become effective on the same date."

ANNEX II

Changes in the pension adjustment system

J. Deferred retirement benefit

Replace paragraph 27 by the following text:

"27. (a) For participants whose date of separation was before 31 December 1989, no adjustment will be applied to deferred retirement benefits prior to the beneficiary's reaching age 50. Commencing at age 50 or the date of separation, if later, the dollar base pension under paragraph 5 (a) above is adjusted by the United States CPI in accordance with section H above without retroactive effect. The two-track system will become operative on the date of commencement of the payment of the periodic benefit. At that time a local currency base amount will be established by applying to the adjusted dollar amount the average exchange rate over 36 consecutive months up to and including the month of first payment.

"(b) For participants separating on or after 31 December 1989, no adjustment shall be applied to deferred retirement benefits prior to the beneficiary's reaching age 55. Commencing at age 55 or the date of separation, if later, the adjustment procedures set out in (a) above will be applied to the deferred retirement benefits of such beneficiaries."

General Assembly resolution 44/199

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/897) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.20); agenda item 132.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 28, 31, 33, 35, 38, 44, 59; plenary 84.

By resolution 44/201 B, section XIV, of 21 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit to the 1990 Assembly, through ACABQ, a comprehensive review of the after-service health insurance programme.

Travel-related matters

In 1989, the Secretary-General continued to keep under review the travel and related entitlements of representatives of Member States attending United Nations meetings, as requested by the General Assembly in 1987.(18) He submitted a report(19) in October on standards of accommodation for air travel, listing the cost of first-class travel for heads of delegations of least developed countries to regular and special sessions of the Assembly from 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989 ($246,707); exceptions to the non-first-class travel practice for medical conditions and advanced age ($13,184); for immediate aides or security officers accompanying the Secretary-General ($15,836); cases when no lower-class seat was available ($7,495); eminent persons and entertainers donating services free of charge ($12,306); consecutive overnight flights on long trips without a rest day ($9,055); and other exceptions.

ACABQ noted that during the period 1 July 1988 to 30 June 1989, 58 exceptions were granted to the rules on standards of accommodation for air travel as set forth by the Assembly in 1987,(18) at an additional cost of $61,197. This compared with 42 exceptions in the period from 1 January 1988 to 30 June 1989. The Advisory Committee recommended that, in the future, the Secretary-General should submit his annual report on the question directly to the Committee, with the Committee then reporting to the Assembly as necessary.

On 21 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, took note of the Secretary-General's report by decision 44/442.

Administration of justice

In October, the Secretary-General reported(21) to the General Assembly on implementation of a 1988 resolution(22) requesting him to establish by 1989 a fully revised internal justice system, pursuant to the recommendations of the Group of 18, approved in 1986,(2) and to finish putting into place improved disciplinary rules and procedures at the earliest stage, as well as revised appellate procedures. In 1988, ACABQ had also recommended that the Secretary-General submit a proposal for possible revision of the Staff Regulations and/or Rules in the disciplinary area, addressed in the Secretary-General's proposed revisions(7) in 1989 (see above).

The Secretary-General noted that the steady increase in the number of pending cases before the Headquarters Joint Advisory Board (JAB) had been a matter of serious concern, placing a critical strain on the management of the administrative justice system. In 1989, Headquarters JAB had succeeded in reducing the number of pending appeals to 30, and had virtually eliminated its backlog of cases pending for more than one year. Average age of pending cases was now four-and-a-half months, as compared to two or more years previously. No further action was envisaged beyond ensuring the smooth operation of the streamlined system and optimum utilization of resources. The Secretary-General's policy of accepting unanimous JAB reports, except where a major question of law or principle was involved, continued to be applied. During 1989, the Secretary-General took decisions on some 50 reports from various JABs, accepting the recommendations in full regarding 32 cases and in part in 4 cases, and rejecting them in 5. He took note of 9 reports where the Board decided it was not competent to address the matter.

While staff representatives had stated they would wish further consultations regarding revised disciplinary rules to replace Chapter X of the Staff Rules, intended to be promulgated on 1 January 1990, the Secretary-General was of the view that adequate consultations had already taken place since 1987, and to delay implementation of reform any further would constitute failure to comply with the General Assembly's specific directions.

The principal changes in the disciplinary process resulting from the Staff Rules revisions were: a description of unsatisfactory conduct; staff charged with misconduct would be entitled to have their cases considered by a Joint Disciplinary Committee; flexibility would allow cases to be referred to a JDC at a different duty station; provision for creating ad hoc JDCs to hear cases at duty stations not having a standing JDC; regulation of the use of appeals provisions against summary dismissals; greater flexibility in the range of disciplinary measures and specification of actions available to the Secretary-General including recovery of monies; clarification of suspension circumstances; elimination of the separation of staff-elected members of JDC into salary groups; enlargement of access to counsel to include returned staff members; and introduction of the concept of the Presiding Officer with an outline of his powers. Work had begun on devising rules of procedure of JDCs.

In 1989, the number of members of the Panel of Counsel was 86. During the first eight months of the year, the Co-ordinator of the Panel of Counsel received 112 cases. As to grievance panels, the Secretary-General had established panels to investigate allegations of discriminatory treatment at Headquarters, at Geneva and in various agencies. These informal procedures were designed to supplement, rather than replace, the formal ones of JAB, the Administrative Tribunal and specialized appeal bodies. Since their establishment, grievance panels had handled about 100 cases a year, the Secretary-General said.

The first phase of reform reported to the 1988 General Assembly(23) had focused on the appellate area. The current phase dealt mainly with the disciplinary area, and the third phase would focus on improvement of informal procedures for amicable resolution of staff grievances. The Secretary-General said promulgation of revised rules and procedures in a specific area of administration of justice did not mark the end of the process in that area; assessment of their effectiveness would take place in consultations with members of the joint advisory bodies, the Panel of Counsel and the staff representatives. Accordingly, the subject of administration of justice had been inscribed on the agenda of the forthcoming Staff Management Co-ordination Committee meeting as a standing agenda item.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 44/185 B without vote.

Administration of justice in the Secretariat
The General Assembly,

Noting the importance of a just and efficient internal justice system in the Secretariat,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the administration of justice in the Secretariat,

Welcoming the further improvements in the internal justice system and the progress achieved during the current year, including the reduction of the backlog of pending cases, largely due to the introduction of procedural improvements, and the completion of work on the revision of disciplinary rules to be promulgated effective January 1990,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General on the administration of justice in the Secretariat;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to proceed without delay with the promulgation of the revised set of disciplinary rules effective 1 January 1990 and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session on the operation of the new system;
3. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue with the reforms in the administration of justice in the Secretariat, in particular with regard to improving the informal procedures for amicable settlements of staff grievances, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

General Assembly resolution 44/185 B

19 December 1989 Meeting 83 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/880) without vote, 14 December (meeting 56); draft by Vice-Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/44/L.10); agenda item 130 (c).

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 28, 37, 39-42, 44, 55, 56; plenary 83.

Single administrative tribunal

In 1989, the Secretary-General reported⁽²⁴⁾ on responses from Member States to a 1988 Assembly decision⁽²⁵⁾ inviting them to submit written comments on proposals set out by the Secretary-General to harmonize the statutes, rules and practices of the administrative tribunals of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and the United Nations.

As of 19 September, the Secretary-General had received substantive comments from eight Member States.

On 22 November by decision 44/413, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided, pending further consideration, to retain the existing statute of the Administrative Tribunal of the United Nations. The Secretary-General was requested to revert to the matter, when appropriate, taking into account the views of Member States.

Chapter III

Other administrative and management questions

In 1989, the Committee on Conferences continued to examine ways in which conference resources within the UN system could be used more effectively. In December, the General Assembly requested the Committee to review the methodology of conference-servicing utilization rates in order to provide, if possible, a more accurate assessment of the overall use of conference resources, so that optimum use could be made of those services (resolution 44/196 A). It also asked the Secretary-General to analyze the printing requirements of the Organization and to recommend proposals to maximize the cost-effectiveness of external and internal printing (resolution 44/196 B). The Assembly endorsed the Secretary-General's view that a single conference-servicing facility at the Vienna International Centre would represent the ideal solution for servicing the UN system there, and requested him to expedite consultations within the system to that end (resolution 44/201 A). An in-depth review of the operation of common services at Vienna was also requested (resolution 44/201 B). The Assembly expressed deep concern at the delay in completion of reports on work-load statistics and standards regarding conference and library services, as earlier requested by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ). It also requested that the Secretary-General begin implementing an optical disc system for storage and retrieval of digital material and to submit to the Assembly in 1990 a report providing a comprehensive plan for full implementation of that system, including by regional commissions and at other duty stations.

Regarding the general introduction of electronic data processing and new technologies in the United Nations, the Assembly asked for a report in 1990 assessing results and outlining future plans (resolution 44/200 C).

Conferences and meetings

In 1989, the Committee on Conferences approved the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the biennium 1990-1991.⁽¹⁾ It also considered improved utilization of conference-servicing resources; the draft calendar of the subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council for the biennium; control and limitation of documentation; UN publication policy; the possibility of central planning and co-ordination of all organizational aspects of conference servicing; programme performance of the Department of Conference Services for the biennium 1986-1987; the medium-term plan of Conference and Library Services for 1992-1997; meetings of organs of programmes not funded by the regular budget of the United Nations; and the application of new technology to conference services.

In 1988, the General Assembly had decided⁽²⁾ to retain the Committee on Conferences as a permanent subsidiary body, to be composed of 21 members, with one third of the membership retiring annually. Retiring members were eligible for reappointment. The composition of the Committee was to be six members from African States, five from Asian States, four from Latin American and Caribbean States, two from Eastern European States, and four from Western European and other States. As a transitional arrangement, the Committee decided at its 1 March organizational meeting to appoint one third of the membership for a one-year term, one third for two years and one third for three years. By a communication of 3 January 1989, the President of the General Assembly informed the Secretary-General of the composition of the Committee. The Committee also decided that, in principle, the chairmanship would rotate annually among regional groups.

The Committee met on 8 June to discuss the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the Economic and Social Council, and held its substantive session in New York from 21 to 25 August. In its report, the Committee submitted three draft resolutions which served as the basis for Assembly resolutions.

Calendar of meetings

In February 1989, the Secretariat circulated a note⁽³⁾ containing as an annex the calendar of UN conferences and meetings for 1989, as adopted by the General Assembly in 1988⁽⁴⁾ and amended by subsequent Assembly resolutions and decisions. The note also contained the calendar of conferences and meetings of the principal organs of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). An earlier note⁽⁵⁾ circulated a list of meetings scheduled to be held in 1989 by intergovernmental and expert bodies in the economic, social and related fields.

At its organizational meeting on 1 March, the Committee agreed that proposed changes in the calendar that did not have programme budgetary implications could continue to be dealt with by the Secretariat, in consultation with the Committee Bureau. The Committee was advised of a number of such changes during 1989.

Calendar for 1990-1991

In introducing the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the biennium 1990-1991,(1) a representative of the Secretariat informed the General Assembly that it had been drawn up in accordance with the Committee's terms of reference,(2) and with a 1988 Committee decision(6) relating to the need to be as up to date as possible regarding Economic and Social Council decisions. The Committee approved the draft calendar as amended and submitted it to the Assembly for adoption.

Regarding the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of Economic and Social Council subsidiary organs for 1990-1991, the Committee noted steps taken by the Council on the biennialization of its subsidiary bodies, and encouraged the Council to continue consideration of the question.

Conference and meeting services

The Committee on Conferences considered a March report(7) on the utilization of conference-servicing resources by certain UN bodies meeting in New York, Geneva and Vienna in 1988. The report indicated that the bodies in the sample had consistently improved their performance between 1980 and 1987, with utilization rising collectively from 58 per cent to 77 per cent, thus exceeding the 1983 benchmark (75 per cent) set by the Committee as a minimum standard of efficiency. In 1988, however, despite marked improvements in the ratings of a number of individual bodies and a continuing strong performance by others, the rate of utilization of the sample as a whole fell slightly from the 1987 level. Of the two complementary methods used to calculate the utilization factor, one put it at 76 per cent, and the other at 74 per cent. Pursuant to a Committee request in 1988, the Secretariat also provided reports showing the meeting statistics of bodies related to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and of the principal organs of the United Nations. In 1988,(6) the Committee Chairman had sent letters to the Chairmen of bodies failing to make adequate use of conference resources, and that communication, together with replies received, was also before the Committee.(8)

The Committee agreed on a refined methodology which would include information on the holding of informal meetings, together with information on time lost owing to late starting or early ending of meetings. While noting with appreciation the improved utilization by a number of UN organs, it again recommended that the General Assembly urge those UN organs failing to make adequate use of the conference services allocated to them to consider reducing their request for such services. The Chairman was again asked to write letters to organs utilizing less than 75 per cent of their conference-servicing resources. The Committee decided to remain seized of the matter on the basis of further reports of the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/196 A without vote.

Report of the Committee on Conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences,

1. Approves the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the biennium 1990-1991 as submitted by the Committee on Conferences;
2. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments in the calendar of conferences and meetings for the biennium 1990-1991 that may become necessary as a result of action and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its forty-fourth session;
3. Notes with appreciation the efforts made by a number of United Nations organs to improve the utilization of conference-servicing resources;
4. Requests the Committee on Conferences to review the methodology on conference-servicing utilization rates in order to provide, if possible, a more accurate assessment of the overall use of conference resources with a view to enabling United Nations bodies to make the optimum use of conference services and to facilitate, where necessary, continued rationalization of their meeting requirements;
5. Urges all United Nations organs to intensify their efforts to improve their utilization of conference-servicing resources, taking into account the need to reduce costs without adversely affecting their efficiency;
6. Requests the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences and the Secretary-General to maintain their contacts with United Nations organs that have failed to make adequate use of the conference-servicing resources provided to them in order to assist those organs in making better use of those resources;
7. Recommends that the Chairmen of those organs bring the concerns about the utilization of conference-servicing resources to the attention of the organs concerned;
8. Requests the Committee on Conferences to remain seized of the matter on the basis of further reports from the Secretary-General;

9. Welcomes the intention of the Committee on Conferences to consider further the draft chapter of the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997 on conference and library services, bearing in mind that this strategy should have, inter alia, the objective of utilizing to the optimum and in the most cost-effective manner, the conference services, resources and facilities world wide, in accordance with relevant General Assembly resolutions and the rules and principles governing conference planning;

10. Takes note of the intention of the Committee on Conferences to play a role in the review of the Department of Conference Services envisaged by the Secretary-General, on the understanding that the role to be determined by the Committee at its 1990 session will be in full accordance with its mandate and in conformity with resolution 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, as adopted by the General Assembly;

11. Invites the Committee on Conferences to adopt a more comprehensive programme of work, taking into account its responsibilities as established by the General Assembly.

General Assembly resolution 44/196 A

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/895) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/44/L.22) following informal consultations, orally revised; agenda item 128.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 5, 8-10, 59; plenary 84.

Language and interpretation services

The Secretary-General in September 1989 reported(9) on the implementation of a 1987 Assembly resolution,(10) reaffirmed by the 1988 Assembly,(11) requesting the Secretary-General to provide adequate conference-servicing personnel to ensure equal treatment of all official languages of the United Nations (Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish). In response to the need to maintain adequate conference-servicing resources, the General Assembly in 1988,(12) inter alia, approved adjusted staffing of conference services within the appropriations for the 1988-1989 biennium, which was reflected by the Secretary-General in section 29 of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1990-1991.(13)

Regarding implementation of a 1981 Assembly resolution(14) on simultaneous distribution of UN documents in all applicable languages, the Secretary-General reported that since adoption of the resolution, no exception had been permitted to that requirement without an express request from the body concerned, and the number of such requests had been very small.

The Committee on Conferences took note(1) of the Secretary-General's report, stressing the importance of the item and agreeing to follow the item closely and to return to it at an appropriate time on the basis of further reports by the Secretary-General.

On 21 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 44/196 C, requested the Secretary-General to continue to implement its 1987 resolution(10) and decided to remain seized of the matter.

Representation at conferences

In February, the Secretary-General transmitted(15) to the Assembly a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) regarding specialized agency representation at conferences and meetings. It was the second part of a JIU report on its examination of the effectiveness of participation by Secretariat staff members in meetings, together with recommendations on increasing efficiency and reducing the costs involved. The first part,(16) on UN participation, was submitted in 1988.

In the report on specialized agencies, JIU recommended that executive heads of organizations assure periodic reviews on overall representational activity, particularly from the point of view of effectiveness and costs. To achieve substantial savings and better utilization of human resources, attendance at international meetings should be limited, as a general policy rule, to one representative, and only to the period of discussions of the agenda item of direct interest to the organization. Consideration should be given to use of new technologies such as teleconferencing in representation situations.

The Secretary-General, in an April note,(17) commented on the JIU report on UN representation at conferences and meetings,(18) which the Secretary-General welcomed as timely and relevant to his own efforts to ensure maximum restraint in official travel in the light of the serious financial situation of the Organization. In regard to technological innovations, he said limited experiments were already under way. The use of facsimile machines to permit control and translation of documents at Headquarters for meetings at locations away from Headquarters, as well as other forms of off-site conference-support services, had so far proved more immediately useful than vanguard techniques, teleconferencing in particular, but the Secretary-General would continue to explore its potential.

Documents and publications

Documents limitation

In May, the Secretary-General published an updated version of a note(1) setting forth the policies laid down by the General Assembly regarding the control and limitation of documentation, as requested by the General Assembly in 1969,(2) and taking into account policies adopted by the Assembly up to the end of 1988. The note was distributed to all Member States. The policies applied, for the most part, to the documentation of the Assembly and its subsidiary bodies, although other UN organs, in particular the Economic and Social Council, and bodies such as the UNCTAD Trade and Development Board, had been invited to apply the same policies.

The document set out specific recommendations for the control of meeting records, statements, reports and studies, annexes and supplements to official records, documentation for treaty bodies, and statements of programme budget implications. Annexes to the note contained a list of meeting record entitlements and revised guidelines for the format and content of reports of Assembly subsidiary organs, as well as guidelines for the control and limitation of documentation for special conferences of the United Nations.

In accordance with a decision taken at its organizational meeting on 1 March 1989, the Committee on Conferences deferred discussion of the control and limitation of certain documents until 1990.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/196 B without vote.

Control and limitation of documentation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2292(XXII) of 8 December 1967, 2538(XXIV) of 11 December 1969, 3415(XXX) of 8 December 1975, 34/50 of 23 November 1979, 35/10 B of 3 November 1980, 36/117 of 10 December 1981, 37/14 C of 16 November 1982, 38/32 E of 25 November 1983, 40/243, section III, of 18 December 1985, 41/177 D of 5 December 1986, 42/207 of 11 December 1987 and 43/222 C of 21 December 1988,

1. Decides to extend for a further year the experimental period established under its resolution 37/14 C, during which no subsidiary organ of the General Assembly shall be entitled to summary records, with the exception of the following:

- (a) Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean;
- (b) Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;
- (c) International Law Commission;
- (d) Legal Sub-Committee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space;
- (e) Special Committee against Apartheid;
- (f) United Nations Commission on International Trade Law;
- (g) United Nations Council for Namibia;

2. Takes note of the decision of the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to discontinue its request for summary records;

3. Takes note also of the decision of the Committee on Conferences to review the issue of control and limitation of documentation in more detail at its 1990 substantive session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to analyse the printing requirements of the Organization and recommend proposals to maximize the cost-effectiveness of external and internal printing, through the Committee on Conferences and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

General Assembly resolution 44/196 B

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/895) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/44/L.22) following informal consultations; agenda item 128.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 5, 8-10, 59; plenary 84.

Recurrent publications

In June, the Secretary-General submitted to the Committee on Conferences a report(3) on recurrent publications of the United Nations. A total of 233 publications were subject to review. The Committee decided(4) to consider the matter in more detail at its 1990 session, on the basis of further Secretariat reports.

UN premises

Conference facilities

Addis Ababa and Bangkok

An October report of the Secretary-General(1) on the construction of conference facilities at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and Bangkok, Thailand, reviewed progress since 1988 and contained updated timetables for construction and related financial considerations, as approved by the General Assembly in 1984.(2) Activities in 1989 related to the expansion of conference facilities of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) at Addis Ababa included the signing of contracts with the quantity surveyor and the architect/engineers; completion of the schematic design and preparation of detailed design drawings; and completion of a detailed topographical survey of the construction site.

Up-to-date project estimates were prepared by the quantity surveyor and a projection was made of the necessary financial commitments to be entered into during construction. While the need for further geotechnical investigation necessitated some revision of the project timetable, completion of the main construction by the second half of 1993 was still envisaged. While in September 1988 a composite annual inflation rate of 4.5 per cent had been projected, it was now considered that, for the balance of the project, the rate should be increased to 5.5 per cent compounded. Construction costs, including furniture and equipment, estimated at $54.4 million in 1988, were now estimated at $60.7 million. The overall cost estimate of $73,501,000 was now revised to $93,889,500.

Regarding the conference facilities of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) at Bangkok, activities in 1989 included the receipt of 8 tenders from the 11 contractors/consortia representing firms from six countries who had been invited to submit them, and the subsequent signing, in April 1989, of a construction contract with the lowest bidder of the eight tenders received. Construction began in May and was scheduled to take 30 months, with main construction to be completed by December 1991. The construction contract was for 955 million baht ($37.6 million, at the April 1989 exchange rate), which, because of inflation, represented a sizeable increase from the previous estimate of $36.8 million. The current estimate for construction, furnishings and equipment was slightly more than $39 million; however, on the assumption that no major change in the current situation occurred, the total project cost of $44,177,700 already approved by the Assembly was considered to be sufficient.

On 21 December, the Assembly, by resolution 44/201 A, section V, took note of the Secretary-General's report and requested him to proceed as recommended by ACABQ.(3)

Vienna

In November 1989, the Secretary-General reported(3) on conference services for UN meetings held in Vienna, Austria. He said that, after several years of experience of the operation of common services at Vienna, including conference services, an in-depth review of such services was needed during the coming biennium. Regarding conference services, the Secretary-General remained convinced that, as proposed in 1985,(4) a single conference-servicing facility at the Vienna International Centre would represent the ideal solution from the standpoint of cost efficiency and that, in view of its mandate to provide a full range of servicing operations for its deliberative bodies, the United Nations was best suited to assume the responsibility of providing conference services to all organizations at the Centre. Since the language and documentation requirements of the United Nations and the Vienna-based United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) were similar, and many substantive matters were dealt with by both organizations, the language staff recruited and trained by the United Nations would be able to meet UNIDO requirements as well, and the United Nations could draw upon its world-wide resources to meet the needs of both organizations at Vienna.

In November, ACABQ issued a report(5) in which it agreed with the Secretary-General's views regarding unified conference services at Vienna, and stated that the time had come for urgent action in that regard. It recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to take early action to reopen consultations with all interested parties on the subject, with a view to arriving at practical arrangements for the establishment of unified conference services at Vienna at the earliest possible date. The Secretary-General should submit a report on the outcome of the consultations to the General Assembly, at the latest by its 1990 session, ACABQ said.

On 21 December, by resolution 44/201 A, section VIII, the Assembly endorsed the view that a single conference-servicing facility represented the ideal solution from the standpoint of cost efficiency and that a unified service operated by the United Nations was best equipped for this purpose. The Secretary-General was requested to expedite consultations with UNIDO and other interested parties as recommended by ACABQ. On the same date, by resolution 44/201 B, section XV, the Assembly concurred with the Secretary-General's view regarding the need for an in-depth review of the operation of common services at Vienna and requested him to report at the most appropriate time on the progress of consultations regarding necessary improvements.

Venue of sessions

By resolution 44/201 B, section III, the Assembly requested the Human Rights Committee and the Legal Sub-Committee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to take fully into account the recommendations of ACABQ,(6) including the need for optimum use of resources, when deciding on the venue of their future sessions, and to report to the Assembly at its forty-fifth session.

Information systems and computers

Technological innovations

Integrated management information system (IMIS)

In October, the Secretary-General submitted a progress report(1) on the integrated management information system (IMIS), approved by the Assembly in 1988.(2) A project team had been established and, to ensure involvement from the outset of major duty stations away from UN Headquarters, a network of central focal points for the project had been established at each major duty station. An initial work plan had been developed for Phase I of the project, as well as a preliminary timetable for system development between October 1989 and October 1992. A consulting firm was to be selected in October 1989 to begin the user requirement study early in November, at which point a meeting of focal points would be held at Headquarters. A cost-benefit analysis would be available in 1990 so that a detailed report could be given to the Assembly that year.

The Assembly, on 21 December, by resolution 44/201 A, section IV, took note of the Secretary-General's progress report. By section III, it approved budget estimates for 1990 of $11,260,400 for the International Computing Centre.

Optical disc system

In October 1989, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the JIU report(3) regarding the optical disc pilot project of the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG), begun in April 1988, which the Inspectors judged a success, and endorsing the UNOG Interdepartmental Working Group's recommendation that the 1990-1991 budget fund it on an operational basis in Geneva. The Inspectors were particularly struck by the implications of the project, above all by the convenience and savings it promised to the missions of Member States. For very little expenditure, each mission could receive and print in its own office whatever conference documents were available in the system. Major savings and improvements in efficiency were certain to accrue when all conference documents, from the beginning of the Organization, were entered on optical discs (at an estimated contractual cost of about $5 million). Other implications included extension of the system beyond missions to the specialized agencies, capitals of Member States, educational institutions, libraries and UN system field offices.

In commenting on the JIU recommendations, the Secretary-General said it did not seem appropriate at this stage to install a fully operational optical disc system for storage and retrieval of recent and future documentation in the UN Secretariat. He believed a more measured development was required in order to resolve the problems inevitably encountered when introducing a new system. Based on experience of that phase, proposals regarding the system would be included in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993, rather than 1990-1991 as suggested by JIU.

In a December report,(4) ACABQ said it fully shared the JIU conclusion and that of the Secretary-General that optical disc technology held great promise for the Organization and should be utilized. It approved establishment of an optical disc system in the UN Secretariat, but believed it should be implemented on a phased basis, taking into account the availability of funds and in the light of technological developments. The Committee did not believe there was a need for an additional appropriation in the biennium 1990-1991 for that purpose. Requirements estimated at $1.2 million should be financed from redeployment of resources and other savings. The Secretary-General should explore further the possibility of voluntary contributions in cash and/or in kind towards the optical disc system. Resource requirements for the system in the biennium 1992-1993 should be proposed by the Secretary-General in the context of his proposed programme budget outline for that biennium.

On 21 December, the Assembly, by resolution 44/201 B, section XVI, requested the Secretary-General to implement the optical disc system in accordance with the ACABQ recommendation and to submit a comprehensive plan on full implementation of the system to the 1990 Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 44/200 C without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the importance of technological innovations in relation to the search for efficiency in the Organization,

Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, for submission to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session, a report on the status of the introduction of electronic data-processing and new technologies in the United Nations, which should include:

(a) A review and assessment of current policies and processes;

(b) A review and assessment of co-ordinating mechanisms, including those between the Department of Conference Services of the Secretariat and other units within the United Nations system;

(c) A preliminary assessment of the results obtained with the introduction of technological innovations, including cost-benefit analyses, utilization capacity and budgeting and accounting practices;

(d) An outline of future plans and anticipated results for the efficiency of the Organization.

General Assembly resolution 44/200 C

21 December 1989 Meeting 84 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/44/901) without vote, 19 December (meeting 59); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/44/L.24), following informal consultations: agenda item 38.

Meeting numbers. GA 44th session: 5th Committee 11-16, 18, 46, 49, 59; plenary 84.

Co-ordination of information systems

The Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) issued a report in December(5) on the fifth session of its Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems (Geneva, 18-21 September). The Advisory Committee considered the use of the United Nations Telecommunications Network by the specialized agencies, welcoming the decision by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) to allow such use as a landmark decision, 37 years after the proposal had first been made. It decided to establish a technical panel to advise and assist the United Nations in discharge of its mandate to enhance the UN telecommunications network. It drew the attention of ACC to the far-reaching consequences of the shift from a paper environment to an electronic one, giving its opinion that close co-operation between records management, data administration and communications management would be required to tackle the problem.

UN Postal Administration

In 1989, gross revenue of the United Nations Postal Administration (UNPA) from the sale of philatelic items at United Nations Headquarters and at overseas offices totalled more than $15.8 million, up from about $12.6 million in 1988. Revenue from the sale of stamps for philatelic purposes was retained by the United Nations. Under the terms of an agreement between the United Nations and the United States, revenue from the sale of United States dollar-denominated stamps used for postage from Headquarters was reimbursed to the United States Postal Service. Similarly, postal agreements between the United Nations and the Governments of Switzerland and Austria required that revenue derived from the sale of Swiss franc- and Austrian schilling-denominated stamps for postage use be reimbursed to the Swiss and Austrian postal authorities, respectively.

Six commemorative stamps issues, one definitive stamp, two souvenir cards and 13 pieces of postal stationery were released by UNPA during the year.

On 27 January, a set of six commemorative stamps in denominations of 25 and 45 United States cents, 0.80 and 1.40 Swiss francs (SwF) and 5.50 and 8 Austrian schillings (S) were issued on the theme of "World Bank". A souvenir card accompanied the issue.

Stamps commemorating "Nobel Peace Prize 1988—United Nations Peace-keeping Forces" were issued on 17 March, together with 13 pieces of postal stationery. The stamps, in denominations of 25 cents, SwF 0.90 and S 6, remained on sale for an additional one year in recognition of that special award. A 45-cent definitive stamp was issued on the same date.

The "World Weather Watch" was commemorated by a set of six stamps in denominations of 25 cents, 36 cents, SwF 0.90 and 1.10, and S 4 and 9.50, which were issued on 21 April. A souvenir card accompanied the issue.

On 23 August, the "United Nations Office at Vienna—10th Anniversary" was marked by the release of six commemorative stamps carrying denominations of 25 cents, 90 cents, SwF 0.50 and 2.00, and S 5 and 7.50.

The tenth group of 16 stamps in the commemorative "Flag Series" was released on 22 September. Each stamp was denominated 25 cents.

The human rights commemorative stamp series was inaugurated on 17 November with the release of the first six stamps illustrating articles 1 to 6 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights.(1) The denominations of the stamps were 25 cents, 45 cents, SwF 0.35 and 0.80, and S 4 and S 6.

In 1989, a total of 61,337,000 stamps were printed for UNPA. In the same year, a total of 2,615,766 envelopes received first day of issue cancellations.

Intergovernmental organizations related to the United Nations

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), established in 1957 to foster the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, continued in 1989 to promote the exchange of scientific and technical information, to establish and administer safeguards and health and safety standards, and to provide technical assistance to its members.

The thirty-third session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, 25-29 September) adopted resolutions relating to Israeli nuclear capabilities and threat; measures to strengthen international co-operation in matters of nuclear safety and radiological protection; the dumping of nuclear wastes; the 1987 Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material;^a a production of low-cost potable water using nuclear heat reactors in sea-water desalination; and the nuclear capabilities of South Africa.

The IAEA Board of Governors held five meetings in 1989, in February, June, September, October and December.

IAEA membership remained at 113 in 1989. In September, the General Conference resolved to take a decision at its 1990 session on the suspension of South Africa from the exercise of the privileges and rights of membership of IAEA.

Nuclear safety

During 1989, IAEA continued to emphasize nuclear safety and radiation protection, with activities that focused on advancing the operational safety of nuclear plants, safety assessment techniques, defining safety requirements for nuclear installations and improving public understanding of radiation risk. At the request of the USSR, arrangements began for a team of international experts under IAEA auspices to carry out an assessment of the concept of enabling the population to live safely in areas affected by radioactive contamination following the 1986 Chernobyl (Ukrainian SSR) accident and evaluate the effectiveness of steps taken to safeguard the health of the population.

In June, the Agency signed a memorandum of understanding with the recently established World Association of Nuclear Operators. The aim of the Association, which held its inaugural meeting in Moscow in May, was to improve plant operational safety by strengthening existing links and co-operation among operators of the world's nuclear electricity plants.

The Operational Safety Review Team (OSART) conducted 11 missions in 1989, 3 of which were pre-operational missions to China, Poland and the USSR. The Assessment of Safety Significant Events Team (ASSET) visited nuclear power plants in Pakistan and the USSR, systematically analysing the root causes of safety-related events and the effectiveness of steps taken to prevent their recurrence. In late 1989, there was a significant increase in requests from the countries of Eastern Europe for OSART, ASSET and other missions to assess and upgrade water-cooled and moderated reactor nuclear plant operational safety, and work began on ways to meet the demand. Radiation Protection Advisory Teams conducted 10 missions to member States; they recommended long-term strategies for assistance and co-operation in the use and control of ionizing radiation.

The Incident Reporting System received 189 reports of nuclear power incidents and malfunctions during 1989, bringing to more than 800 the number of reports in the data base. In October, IAEA sponsored a meeting with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to define a common severity scale for use when communicating nuclear events to the public. A draft scale was expected to be ready by mid-1990 for trial use. Through the Integrated Safety Assessments of Research Reactors programme, missions visited reactors in Hungary and Viet Nam.

Under the radiation protection programme, IAEA set up the 24-hour Emergency Response System to meet its obligations under the 1986 Convention on the Early Notification of a Nuclear Accident^b and under the 1987 Convention on Assistance in the Case of a Nuclear Accident or Radiological Emergency.^a In November, some 250 experts participated in an IAEA symposium, which reviewed world-wide experience of recovery operations following a major nuclear accident or a radiological emergency. The accidents at Three Mile Island (United States, 1979) and Chernobyl served as starting-points for reviewing the lessons learned about recovery operations.

Nuclear power

The total installed nuclear power-generating capacity in the world increased by about 3 per cent, reaching 318 gigawatts (electrical) by the end of 1989. Five countries—Belgium, France, Hungary, the Republic of Korea and Sweden—generated close to half or more of their total electricity using nuclear power and 13 countries relied on nuclear power plants to supply at least one fourth of their total electricity needs. The 426 nuclear power plants in operation accounted for some 16.8 per cent of the world's electrical generation, representing an accumulated operating experience of about 5,200 reactor-years.

During the year, 12 nuclear power plants came on line, in the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, India, Japan, Mexico (the first in that country), the Republic of Korea, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States. Construction work started on five plants in Japan, the Republic of Korea and the USSR. Five reactors, with a total capacity of 1,370 megawatts, permanently shut down in the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States.

IAEA continued to provide assistance to member States through 15 technical support projects in quality assurance in Bangladesh, Bulgaria, China, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Hungary, Indonesia, Pakistan, Poland, the Republic of Korea and Yugoslavia. In addition, 28 training courses and seminars covering such topics as quality assurance, inspections and safety systems for nuclear power plants were conducted in several countries. In March, the Agency's Power Reactor Information System (PRIS) opened for on-line access to member States. The System contained information on 426 power reactors with an accumulated 4,645 reactor-years of experience at the end of the year. In mid-year, the micro-PRIS project began; the objective was to make PRIS data available through personal computers.

Nuclear fuel cycle

In 1989, in addition to publishing an array of reports and guidebooks, including the Red Book containing statistical data on uranium resources, IAEA conducted a comprehensive analysis of the dominant trends in the world nuclear fuel cycle and Agency projects in that area. With the continued downward trend in uranium spot market prices, a number of uranium producers ceased production during the year. IAEA sponsored 34 technical co-operation projects on uranium exploration and resources development in 33 countries, as well as 10 studies on nuclear fuel fabrication, materials, development and related topics in eight countries.

Since spent fuel storage was of crucial importance to many countries, IAEA paid special attention to the improved technology of storage with emphasis on safety and reliability. As part of the programme, it finalized the Guidebook on Spent Fuel Storage, to be used for critical comparison of existing approaches and for justification of national solutions.

Radioactive waste management

The 18-member International Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee was established in 1989 to provide guidance on the scope, content and direction of the waste management programme, including technical, safety, environmental and regulatory aspects. The Committee held its first meeting in April and strongly endorsed proposals to establish a new series of Radioactive Waste Safety Standards publications to facilitate international harmonization of safety-related activities in waste management.

During the year, the Board of Governors approved the issuance of safety standards, reflecting for the first time an international consensus on criteria for the safe underground disposal of high-level wastes. The Agency conducted expert missions to eight developing countries, providing assistance on the establishment and implementation of national radioactive waste management programmes. It also helped to sponsor a symposium in Paris on the safety assessment of radioactive waste repositories.

Food and agriculture

The Joint Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)/IAEA Division of Nuclear Technology in Food and Agriculture continued to assist member States to improve agriculture and food production. During the year, 39 co-ordinated research programmes and 12 regional and interregional training courses were in progress, and technical supervision was provided for 233 technical co-operation projects in 67 countries.

The Joint Division developed and introduced radiotracer-aided research methods for evaluating local agricultural practices, identifying problems related to pesticide use and monitoring pesticide residues. In 1989, there were 317 research reactors in 56 countries, which were also producing radioisotopes for use in industry, agriculture and medicine.

In October, an FAO/IAEA/United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP)/World Health Organization (WHO) International Symposium on Environmental Effects Following a Major Nuclear Accident (Vienna) reviewed the extent and magnitude of environmental contamination that would arise after a large injection of radioactive materials, and considered methods to monitor, assess and limit the short- and long-term effects on the environment, agriculture and human health.

Programmes in the area of animal production and health focused on indigenous breeds and types of animals kept by smallholder farmers in tropical and subtropical countries, and included studies on camelids in Latin America and water buffaloes in Asia. Radioimmunoassay methods, used to measure reproductive performance in indigenous ruminant livestock, continued to be successfully employed in several developing countries. Using the sterile-insect technique, several North African States initiated a regional co-operation programme to determine the feasibility of Mediterranean fruit fly (medfly) eradication, and IAEA joined FAO in developing plans to eradicate the New World screwworm, which had become established in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. Other activities supported by the joint IAEA/FAO efforts included studies related to biofertilizers, plant breeding and irradiation as a means of food preservation.

Nuclear medicine

IAEA continued to provide support in areas of nuclear medicine, applied radiation biology and radiotherapy, dosimetry, and nutritional and health-related environmental studies. Scientific and other support was provided to 52 new technical co-operation projects in the area of nuclear medicine. Research support focused on quality control procedures for nuclear medicine instruments in Asia and Latin America; radioaerosol inhalation for the diagnosis of respiratory diseases in developing countries; immunodiagnosis of tuberculosis; immunodiagnostic techniques for human schistosomiasis; and the monitoring of malaria vectors.

A new set of procedures was developed to improve quality control of radiation sterilization and a revised code of practice for the radiation sterilization of disposable medical supplies. Other projects focused on the use of radiation to improve fermentation, sewage recycling and cancer treatment.

During 1989, the number of calibrations performed by the IAEA network of Secondary Standard Dosimetry Laboratories increased significantly and the biannual intercomparison service showed improved accuracy of the dosimeters used.

Nuclear and isotopic techniques continued to play an important role in human nutrition studies. In October, the results of an IAEA study on human daily dietary intakes of nutritionally important trace elements as measured by nuclear and other techniques—the first international study of its kind—was presented at the first WHO/FAO/IAEA Expert Consultation on Trace Elements in Human Nutrition.

The Marine Environmental Studies Laboratory of the International Laboratory of Marine Radio-activity in Monaco organized world-wide intercalibration exercises for trace metals and chlorinated hydrocarbons (pesticides) with the participation of 143 laboratories from 57 member States. As part of an ongoing co-operative programme with UNEP, the Laboratory continued to co-ordinate the development, testing and revision of reference methods and guidelines for marine pollution measurements.

Physical and earth sciences

IAEA continued to promote the exchange of information in the physical and earth sciences and to assist States with the application of nuclear technologies in environmental studies, ore processing, hydrology, analytical and applied chemistry, radiation chemistry, radiation processing, biomedicine and bioengineering and industry.

In the area of isotope hydrology, the Agency supported 44 technical co-operation projects in 34 member States, participated in three regional projects in Africa, the Middle East and Latin America, and executed 69 research contracts in 30 countries. Isotope hydrology was used to locate leakages from hydraulic structures, study the movement of sediments in rivers and harbours, determine the economic viability of ports and guard against erosion.

The Agency fulfilled more than 820 requests from 64 member States for experimental and evaluative data, data-processing computer codes and publications on the subject of nuclear measurements and instrumentation. An interregional project involving 23 nuclear analytical laboratories in 14 developing countries reflected deficiencies in instrumentation and proper utilization of techniques.

Some 4,100 scientists took part in the activities of the International Centre for Theoretical Physics in Trieste, Italy, and in the programme for training at Italian laboratories. The Centre, which celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in October, was operated jointly with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Main fields of research and training at the Centre in 1989 included fundamental, condensed matter, atomic and molecular physics; mathematics; physics and energy; physics and the environment; physics of space; applied physics and high technology; and science, high technology and development.

Technical co-operation

In 1989, the IAEA annual programming cycle for technical co-operation activities was replaced with a two-year cycle. A total of 165 projects were completed and 191 new projects approved during the year. In addition, some 2,144 expert assignments were undertaken, training programmes were devised for 924 fellows and visiting scientists, and 106 regional and interregional training courses for 1,265 participants were organized. New resources for technical co-operation totalled $50.1 million, a 10 per cent increase over 1988.

Agency safeguards responsibilities

During 1989, 2,196 safeguards inspections were performed by IAEA, which concluded that the nuclear material under its safeguards remained in peaceful nuclear activities or was otherwise adequately accounted for. As at 31 December, 172 safeguards agreements were in force with 101 States, compared to 168 agreements with 98 States and Taiwan at the end of 1988.

Safeguards were applied in 43 States and Taiwan under agreements pursuant to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT)^c and/or the 1967 Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco).^d Safeguards agreements were in force with 82 States pursuant to NPT. Of 51 non-nuclear-weapon States party to NPT which did not have safeguards agreements in force, safeguards were being applied in three of them, the only ones with significant nuclear activities. Safeguards agreements had been concluded with 10 of the 11 signatories of the 1985 South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (Rarotonga Treaty),^e and safeguards were applied in one of those States. Safeguards agreements had been concluded with 19 of the 23 States parties to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, 16 of which were in force; two States with territories in the zone of application of the Tlatelolco Treaty had concluded similar agreements.

As at 31 December 1989, 515 nuclear facilities were under safeguards or contained safeguarded material; 10 of them were in nuclear-weapon States. A further 405 locations outside nuclear facilities contained small amounts of safeguarded material and there were two safeguarded non-nuclear installations.

Nuclear information

Mongolia joined the International Nuclear Information System in 1989, bringing its membership to 79 IAEA member States and 15 international organizations. During the year, the System's Advisory Committee approved changes in the subject scope of the literature to be covered, the most significant being the exclusion of cosmology and astrophysics and the inclusion of economic and environmental aspects of all energy sources, nuclear and non-nuclear. By the end of the year, the bibliographic data base of nuclear literature contained 1,352,356 records.

Secretariat

At the end of 1989, the number of staff members of the IAEA secretariat totalled 2,171—825 in the Professional and higher categories, 1,202 in the General Service category and 144 in the Maintenance and Operatives Service category.

Budget

The regular budget for 1989 was $152,520,000, of which $143,749,000 was to be financed from contributions by member States on the basis of the 1989 scale of assessment, $5,045,000 from income from work for others and $3,726,000 from other miscellaneous income. Actual expenditures amounted to $147,831,764, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $4,688,236.

The target for voluntary contributions to the Technical Assistance and Co-operation Fund in 1989 was established at $42 million, of which $35,680,915 had been pledged by member States by the end of the year.

Chapter II

International Labour Organisation (ILO)

During the year, the International Labour Organisation (ILO), established in 1919 as an autonomous institution associated with the League of Nations, continued its standard-setting, technical co-operation, research and publishing activities in six major areas of work: promoting policies to create employment and satisfy basic human needs; developing human resources; improving working conditions and environment; promoting social security; strengthening industrial relations and tripartite (government/employer/worker) co-operation; and advancing human rights in the social and labour fields.

ILO membership in 1989 remained at 150.

Meetings

The seventy-sixth session of the ILO Conference, held at ILO headquarters (Geneva, 7-28 June), adopted a revised convention on indigenous and tribal peoples and began a two-year process of setting new safety standards for the use of chemicals and night work. The International Labour Conference also considered the annual reports of the ILO Governing Body and of the Director-General, which focused on economic recovery and employment, and a special report on the effect of apartheid on labour and employment in South Africa. The Conference monitored the application of ILO standards in all regions and adopted conclusions on the application of the ILO Declaration concerning Action against Apartheid in South Africa and Namibia. The Conference also adopted a draft protocol to revise the Convention on night work for women in industry. A tripartite (government/employer/worker) committee again examined the application of ILO conventions and recommendations by member States and reviewed the application of ILO standards concerning social security.

The first of a planned series of meetings to follow up the 1987 High-level Meeting on Employment and Structural Adjustment was held—a tripartite symposium (Nairobi, Kenya, 16-19 October) on structural adjustment and employment in Africa. Attended by representatives of 12 Governments and employers' and workers' organizations, the meeting proposed policy guidelines for sustainable development.

The ninth session of the Committee of Work on Plantations (Geneva, 12-20 April) adopted conclusions on conditions of employment and work on plantations and the role of that sector in rural development. The first session of the Hotel, Catering and Tourism Committee (Geneva, 6-14 December) adopted conclusions aimed at improving conditions of work and stepping up productivity and training.

International standards

During the year, priority was given to promoting wider observance of international labour standards and fuller respect for those human rights falling within the ILO mandate.

With that objective, advisory missions concerning various Conventions visited Brazil, the Central African Republic, Ecuador, Liberia and Zambia. In addition, regional advisers and ILO officials visited 33 countries to promote international standards. Courses and seminars were held to familiarize national labour administrations and workers' and employers' representatives with the obligations and ILO procedures relating to Conventions and Recommendations. Officials from 22 countries participated in training at ILO headquarters. Numerous regional and subregional meetings and seminars were held during the year. National tripartite seminars on labour standards took place in Bolivia, Equatorial Guinea and Guinea, and ILO also took part in other meetings on national and international standards in over 20 countries.

A number of activities were undertaken on links between international labour standards and technical co-operation, including publication of a brochure entitled International Labour Standards Development and Social Justice and workshops in Barbados, Indonesia, the Philippines, Thailand, and Trinidad and Tobago. In order to enhance the impact of international labour standards, emphasis was placed on assisting ILO constituents, particularly in developing countries, to participate more actively in their elaboration and implementation. At its November session, the ILO Governing Body discussed the inclusion of flexibility devices in Conventions, taking into account differences between countries and levels of development.

Standard-setting

At its 1989 session, the General Conference adopted the revised Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention to help improve the situation and status of those people in the light of developments which had taken place since the adoption of the Indigenous and Tribal Populations Convention (No. 107) in 1957.

The Conference also continued consideration of proposals for a new Convention on safety in the use of chemicals at work and for a new Convention and Recommendation concerning night work as well as a Protocol revising the Night Work (Women) Convention (Revised), 1948.

During the year, 62 ratifications of ILO Conventions on basic human rights and tripartism by 26 member States were registered, bringing total ratifications at the end of 1989 to 5,463. There were also three denunciations unaccompanied by the ratification of a revised Convention.

Supervision of standards

At its annual meeting in March, the Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations dealt with 1,547 reports from Governments regarding compliance with the ILO Constitution and international labour standards, as well as 154 observations from workers' and employers' organizations. The Committee examined the application of Conventions in export processing zones and enterprises and of the Employment Policy Convention (No. 122), 1964, and surveyed national law and practice in ILO member States as to the Social Security (Minimum Standards) Convention (No. 102), 1952, and the Invalidity, Old-Age and Survivors' Benefits Convention (No. 128) and Recommendation (No. 131), 1967, with regard to old-age benefits.

The Governing Body dealt with a number of representations and complaints as provided for under the ILO Constitution. Its Committee on Freedom of Association met three times in 1989 to consider eight reports on 77 cases of complaints of violations of freedom of association.

Following the General Conference's consideration of the special report of the Director-General on the application of the Declaration concerning Action against Apartheid in South Africa and Namibia, and adoption of the report of the Committee on Action against Apartheid, a new expert group to monitor sanctions and other actions against apartheid throughout the world held its first meeting in New York in October. The group established its programme for 1990, emphasizing studies of an embargo on South African coal, effective financial sanctions and severance of air links with South Africa.

Employment and development

To ensure close co-ordination in following up on the conclusions of the 1987 High-level Meeting on Employment and Structural Adjustment, an interdepartmental Task Force on Structural Adjustment, Employment and Training was established in early 1989 and met four times during the year. ILO also undertook a variety of studies, training workshops, preparatory assistance missions and other advisory services in several countries as part of an ongoing effort to strengthen the capacity of member States to design and implement labour market policies and employment plans. Additional activities in 1989 addressed rural development and employment; technology, employment and development; and international migration for employment.

Working environment

Under its international programme for the improvement of working conditions and employment, ILO continued to assist countries in promoting occupational safety and health and improving general working conditions. Consultations and fellowships were provided in 14 developing countries, and projects carried out in about a dozen countries during 1989 dealt with the promotion of occupational safety and health, mine safety, major hazard control, and training in occupational safety and health. Services provided by the International Occupational Safety and Health Information Centre (CIS) were expanded, while co-operation continued with the World Health Organization and the United Nations Environment Programme within the International Programme on Chemical Safety and with the International Atomic Energy Agency on radiation protection.

Draft codes of practice on major hazard control, on safety and health in construction and on opencast mines were prepared, as were a guide to safety and health in the use of agrochemicals and a training manual on the use of chemicals at work. In addition to a number of specific studies, ILO published a special issue of 1,800 annotated references entitled Laws, Regulations and Directives and the cis bimonthly bulletin Safety and Health at Work.

Technical co-operation activities aimed at improving working conditions and productivity in small and medium-sized enterprises included training for small entrepreneurs, programmes on abolition of child labour and a project on welfare facilities for women workers. In addition to a meeting of experts on special protective measures for women and equality of opportunity and treatment (Geneva, 10-17 October), several tripartite seminars were held at subregional and regional levels on equality of opportunity. Studies were in progress on policy aspects of female participation in the labour force, access of rural women to land, women's involvement in afforestation, the role of women in small enterprise development, working conditions of women in the informal sector, and self-employment schemes for female-headed households.

Field activities

The volume of ILO operational activities increased significantly during the year, in terms of both annual expenditure and new project approvals. Operational activities expenditures in 1989 rose for the fifth consecutive year, to $143.4 million, or 14 per cent more than 1988. Of the total, $16.1 million was funded from the regular budget of ILO, while the United Nations Development Programme continued to provide the bulk of external funding ($64.1 million) and the rest came from trust funds, multi- and bilateral arrangements and the United Nations Population Fund.

As in previous years, Africa remained the leading region in terms of operational expenditure, receiving 53.7 per cent of the total. The share of least developed countries, most of them in Africa, in overall programme expenditure increased to 37.3 per cent. Employment promotion, human resources development and sectoral activities remained the main fields of ILO activity, accounting for 80 per cent of all expenditure. Operational activities in support of employers' and workers' organizations increased by some 30 per cent. Regular budget for technical co-operation resources amounting to some $16 million continued to be especially significant in supporting activities directly benefiting workers' and employers' organizations and ILO regional projects and centres in the fields of employment, training and labour administration.

Special emphasis was placed on raising the capability of field offices to promote more links between international labour standards and operational activities.

The profile of ILO experts changed during the year, with nearly 38 per cent of all experts on duty being nationals of developing countries and the number of national professional personnel increasing.

Training and research

In 1989, ILO training concentrated on assisting member States to define and implement an effective approach to entrepreneurship, small enterprises and management development, and strengthening national, regional and interregional institutions. Its vocational training programme aimed at increasing, particularly in the urban informal sector and the rural sectors, the efficiency of national training systems and the availability of skilled manpower. Efforts were made to promote greater self-reliance through trade and development training and increased training opportunities for specific groups, particularly women and out-of-school youth. ILO's vocational rehabilitation programme was geared towards furthering equal training and employment opportunities for disabled persons. Over 60 countries received technical assistance or advice and the number of advisers, experts, UN volunteers and external collaborators involved increased to over 100.

Emphasis was placed on assisting countries through advisory services, the regional vocational training centres in Africa, Asia and Latin America, and technical co-ordination with other international agencies and institutions. Projects included strengthening African training institutions focused on the development of marketing strategies and client-based market policies for francophone institutions, and skills development in eight Arab countries to enhance their response to changing manpower needs in the public and private sectors. The diversification of women's training and employment was the theme of major technical co-operation programmes in Africa and Asia.

The International Centre for Advanced Technical and Vocational Training (Turin, Italy) provided group training and fellowships as well as teaching materials, publications and advisory services, with a major focus on educational technology and higher management training. In 1989, the Centre organized 75 courses and seminars for 1,391 participants, 23 per cent of whom were women, mainly from developing countries. A large number of courses, seminars and advisory services took place in the field, in an effort to strengthen national technical skills. The number of fellowships rose to 850. During the year, the Centre took further steps to strengthen collaboration with Governments, the European Community and the UN system.

The International Institute for Labour Studies at Geneva, the ILO centre for education and research, held its twenty-fourth international internship course on active labour policy development (Geneva, 10 May-9 June), which focused on tripartism and the role of workers' and employers' organizations, as well as on ILO's standard-setting activities and supervisory machinery. The Institute also collaborated in organizing a national seminar in Rwanda on human resources and a tripartite subregional seminar in Senegal on the role of co-operatives in economic and social development. Under its new industrial organization programme, the Institute addressed trends in industrial restructuring and the reorganization of enterprises. The promotion of regional networks of researchers remained a priority within the labour market programme. Several activities were aimed at developing further labour market analysis techniques. One of the Institute's main educational activities was a pilot project for training labour market specialists from francophone Africa. A two-volume reference book on workers' participation was being prepared for publication.

Publications

During the year, ILO published the fourth volume of the World Labour Report, which surveyed the employment conditions of public service employees and reviewed recent employment and labour income trends. In addition to at least 17 new volumes on a variety of issues related to its work, ILO also continued to produce the bimonthly International Labour Review, the quarterly Social and Labour Bulletin and the biannual Legislative Series.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, full-time staff under permanent, fixed-term and short-term appointments at ILO headquarters and elsewhere numbered 3,148, including 1,427 in the Professional and higher categories, and 1,721 in the General Service or Maintenance categories. Of the Professional staff, 688 were assigned to technical co-operation projects.

Budget

The International Labour Conference in June adopted a budget of $330.4 million for the 1990-1991 biennium.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

In 1989, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to assist farmers, fishermen and foresters to improve their standards of living and produce more foods using techniques that did not degrade the environment. Established in 1945 to raise levels of nutrition, improve agricultural productivity and better the condition of the rural poor, FAO's main objective remained the achievement of global food security, where everyone would have access at all times to the food needed for an active and healthy life. The organization also continued to monitor food supply conditions world wide and provide emergency relief.

The FAO Conference, the organization's governing body, held its twenty-fifth biennial session at FAO headquarters (Rome, Italy, 11-29 November). It approved the organization's programme of work and budget for 1990-1991 and adopted resolutions on various aspects of food, agriculture and rural development. The Conference noted that global food and agricultural production had been at exceptionally low levels in 1987 and 1988 and that, despite an increase in production in 1989, cereal production was expected to be below consumption for the third consecutive year. It also noted that per capita staple food production had declined in many developing countries, especially in Africa, and that developing countries required differential treatment in the light of their economic problems and falling prices for certain agricultural commodities, notably coffee and cocoa.

The Conference approved the conclusions of a two-year review of certain aspects of the organization's goals and operations, carried out by the FAO Programme and Finance Committees, with the assistance of an independent panel of experts, at the request of the 1987 Conference. The review recommended, among other things, strengthening FAO's field operations, including the creation of a project identification and formulation facility, and improved co-ordination and co-operation with other UN bodies, particularly the World Bank group.

As part of FAO's activities to promote environmentally sound practices in agriculture, the Conference approved a Prior Informed Consent clause to the International Code of Conduct on the Distribution and Use of Pesticides, adopted in 1985, which called for participating countries to be notified when a pesticide was banned or severely restricted in the country of origin or by other importing countries.

The Conference unanimously endorsed a Plan of Action for the Integration of Women in Agricultural and Rural Development, designed to ensure that rural women were accorded equal rights and opportunities and increased access to land, credit, extension services, rural organizations, decision-making and improved technology. Aiming to increase acceptance of the International Undertaking on Plant Genetic Resources, adopted in 1983, the Conference endorsed an agreed interpretation of the Undertaking, which recognized the rights of both plant breeders and farmers in relation to the exploration, development and conservation of plant germplasm. It also established an International Fund for Plant Genetic Resources.

The Conference also decided to move the FAO Regional Office for the Near East from headquarters back to its old premises in Cairo, Egypt, to improve the quality and impact of its activities.

During the year, FAO membership remained unchanged at 158 countries.

More than 140 countries observed World Food Day on 16 October.

World food situation

World food production rose by 3.2 per cent in 1989 to nearly 3,600 million tonnes, a growth rate well above the average of the 1980s, reflecting mainly a sharp recovery in crop production in North America, as well as significant increases in Eastern Europe and the USSR. Despite the better overall performance of global agriculture, which appeared to recover from the stagnation of 1987 and 1988, set-backs were recorded in many developing countries. In all the developing regions except the Far East, the 1989 agricultural growth rate fell below the 1980s average. Per capita production fell in 75 per cent of African countries, two thirds of countries in the Near East, and more than a third of the countries in the Far East, while population growth exceeded production in 64 of 108 developing countries, compared to only 56 in 1988.

Global cereal production rose by 7 per cent in 1989 to 1,865 million tonnes, but global cereal stocks remained at a record low, with their volume standing at 17 per cent of consumption, the minimum FAO considered necessary to safeguard world food security. Among other major food commodities, growth in animal products was slow, especially in developed countries. While sugar and coffee output showed little improvement, cocoa production rose 9 per cent and oilseed output was well above 1988 levels following good harvests in North and Latin America.

Activities in 1989

Emergency assistance

While food supply conditions in Africa as a whole improved during 1988-1989, FAO reported that grave difficulties persisted in several countries, particularly in Mozambique and southern Sudan. Exceptional food emergencies were also declared in Angola, Malawi, Sierra Leone and Somalia. Harvests in 1989 were down sharply in Botswana, Lesotho and Zimbabwe, and the food situation was deemed precarious in 10 other African countries. A UN emergency programme, Operation Lifeline Sudan, launched in April 1989 (see PART THREE, Chapter III), brought some relief to strife-torn southern Sudan. By August, some 108,000 tonnes of food had been delivered with the help of the World Food Programme. In Mozambique, food shortages were severe with starvation-related deaths widely reported, especially in inaccessible areas. At the end of the year, the FAO Director-General warned of famine threats in parts of Africa and called for special assistance to Ethiopia to avert widespread loss of life from famine.

In other regions, serious food supply problems were reported in several populous Asian countries—Afghanistan, Bangladesh, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Sri Lanka—as well as in Haiti, Lebanon, Nicaragua and Peru.

FAO estimated food-aid shipments in 1989/90 at about 11.6 million tonnes, compared to 10 million tonnes in the previous year. Twenty-two countries—including four developing ones—contributed some 424,000 tonnes of cereals and other food commodities to the multilateral International Emergency Food Reserve during 1989. A further 188,000 tonnes was channelled through UN relief and rehabilitation programmes to the Afghan people.

Northern Africa, which had suffered in 1988 its worst desert locust plague since the 1950s, did not experience an expected upsurge of desert locusts in 1989 due to an FAO-led spraying campaign, as well as a massive locust migration into the Atlantic Ocean and a failure to breed around the Red Sea in winter. However, by mid-1989, grasshopper infestations affected some 9.2 million hectares in Sahelian countries, causing severe damage to crops in Chad, Mali and the Niger before being controlled by a $60 million chemical spraying operation co-ordinated by FAO.

During the year, FAO spearheaded a campaign in North Africa to halt an invasion of the New World screwworm, a lethal insect pest of livestock. Some 1.7 million insecticide and wound-treatment kits were distributed in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and experts were sent to investigate the possible use of the sterile-insect technique, which had successfully eradicated the New World screwworm from North America.

Field programme

During 1989, FAO provided developing countries with technical advice in all areas of food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. In 1989, 2,583 field projects were under way for a total annual expenditure of $358 million, financed through contributions from the United Nations Development Programme ($164.3 million or 45.9 per cent), trust funds from Governments and international funding sources ($163.8 million or 45.7 per cent) and from FAO's regular budget ($29.9 million or 8.4 per cent). During the year, international financing institutions approved some $2,309 million in funding for agricultural and rural development projects that were prepared with the assistance of FAO's Investment Centre.

Rural development

Following a 1988 decision to expand the scope of its food security assistance, FAO set up task forces to assist Chad, the Niger, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zambia in drawing up comprehensive national food security programmes. The task forces, which consisted of FAO experts familiar with each country, were to help government counterparts design a long-term food security policy framework and formulate projects for its implementation.

Through FAO's People's Participation Programme, under way in 10 countries, some 14,000 poor farmers were assisted in forming small groups and pooling their efforts to receive training, access to credit and other farm inputs. Through its Rural Energy Planning Programme, FAO continued to promote a strategy to improve access to both conventional and renewable sources of energy. In 1989, the strategy, which stressed closer co-ordination between energy authorities and agricultural ministries, was presented to a meeting in Beijing of staff from agricultural and energy ministries of 13 Asian countries. Similar activities were planned for Africa and Latin America and the Caribbean.

Crops

Many FAO projects in 1989 contributed to improving crop production. The organization set up an integrated data base on agrometeorology to assess the effect of rainfall and other weather factors on crop growing conditions world wide. Among projects in developing countries was a strategy for soil conservation in Lesotho, where every year some 39 million tonnes of soil were swept away from farmland. The strategy focused on improving farming practices rather than controlling the run-off. FAO and the European Space Agency were developing a satellite communications system to transmit information from FAO's environmental monitoring system on crop and vegetation conditions to receiving stations in Africa.

To help introduce higher yielding and more resistant varieties of crop plants, FAO continued to sponsor the exchange and storage of breeding materials between crop research centres. In 1989, it promoted the cultivation of improved sesame and safflower seeds—important sources of edible oil in the developing world—by collecting samples of safflower hybrids from donors in China, India, Israel, Mexico and the United States and distributing them to eight countries in Asia and Africa. Samples of sesame varieties, donated by four countries, were sent to breeders in Guatemala, India, Iran, Kenya and Pakistan.

The FAO Prevention of Food Losses (PFL) Programme sent an expert to find new potato-processing methods for women farmers in isolated areas of north-west Cameroon. During the year, some 35 PFL projects were implemented in developing countries. In Indonesia, for example, farmers helped design processing equipment for soybeans, maize, ground-nuts and cassava.

Livestock

One focus of FAO activities related to livestock during 1989 was the development and promotion of dairy farming. Milk production in 13 districts in western Kenya, for example, was increased by an average of 70 per cent through an FAO project that introduced high-yielding fodder grasses and legumes.

A variety of other activities were carried out to strengthen animal production and health. A pilot project eliminated the tsetse fly—a major obstacle to livestock production in large areas of Africa—from a 500-square-kilometre area in southern Ethiopia, using cloth screens impregnated with insecticide. Another project helped strengthen poultry-meat quality control and food testing in Thailand after its agricultural exports suffered a set-back when Japan found unacceptable levels of pesticide in a shipment of frozen chicken. FAO tested a programme to use sugar cane as feed for livestock in several Caribbean countries and helped Caribbean island States to control the spread of tropical bont tick, the cause of the cattle disease heartwater, through improved veterinary services and animal handling services, stricter quarantine procedures and regular treatment of livestock and dogs.

Other areas of FAO activity included veterinary services development; parasitic and vector-borne disease; non-infectious disease and reproductive diseases; tropical animal feeds; animal breed preservation and development; improved animal husbandry and animal product processing; and the production of the Animal Health Yearbook (a reference book on more than 135 infectious diseases).

Fisheries

FAO expanded activities in aquaculture and inland fisheries during the year, starting programmes on fish diseases, fish nutrition and fishery genetics. Increasing emphasis was placed on integrating fish culture into general agricultural practices, with the organization's fisheries department undertaking many activities in tandem with other departments to facilitate the introduction of fish into farming.

Activities under way in 1989 as part of FAO's $7.7 million Bay of Bengal project—launched in 1987 to improve techniques and the incomes of small-scale fishing communities in seven countries—included a radio programme for fisherfolk in Sri Lanka, seaweed farming trials in India, oyster growing in peninsular Malaysia, and testing of fish-hauling equipment in Maldives.

In Africa, highly productive cropping systems for rain-fed swamp rice were introduced in Sierra Leone and other countries, combining rice cultivation with vegetable and fish farming, and plans were made to extend a successful credit scheme for poor fishermen on Lake Tanganyika to fishing communities throughout the United Republic of Tanzania.

In addition to providing fishery statistics and data bases, FAO in 1989 launched the Fishery Project Information Service to collect and disseminate information on externally assisted fishery and aquaculture projects in developing countries. FAO's Legal Office prepared a study of the legal and institutional aspects of managing estuaries and deltas, considered an overlooked area of fisheries law.

Forestry

FAO continued activities to integrate trees and forests with other land uses, particularly in arid lands and mountainous watersheds, and to promote self-sustained forestry programmes and appropriate forest-based industries. In Nepal, for example, it helped plant hundreds of thousands of trees during 1989 to protect the severely eroded Shivapuri watershed serving the Kathmandu valley. The project reduced pressure on forests in the watershed that were being destroyed by local farmers for fuelwood and fodder. Farmers were also encouraged to increase their incomes through beekeeping, horticulture and mushroom cultivation.

The Tropical Forestry Action Plan, launched in 1986, continued to be a major focus of FAO efforts to conserve and regenerate the world's tropical forest resources and to help 60 countries make maximum sustainable use of them. Activities included preparation of national, subregional and regional plans. In 1989, FAO drew up a five-year plan for Bolivia after studies found that forest destruction and soil erosion were most intense in the country's highly populated altiplano, while lumbering and ranching had destroyed valuable forest stands in low-lying areas. Some 75 projects were developed for fuelwood plantations, erosion control, forest industry development, conservation of forest ecosystems and the strengthening of forestry institutions.

During the year, FAO data services were expanded to provide global resource assessments for both tropical and temperate forests. The organization launched a project to assess changes in forest cover and set up a global forest-monitoring system. Vegetation maps were completed for Africa and Asia and the Pacific, and a data base was prepared for Latin America as part of the FAO Geographic Information System. Projects were also carried out for collecting, conserving, evaluating and exchanging genetic materials guided by recommendations of the FAO Panel of Experts on Forest Gene Resources.

Environment

In 1989, FAO's work on environment and sustainable development was co-ordinated through an Interdepartmental Working Group on Environment and Energy, which oversaw the work of subgroups in such areas as policy and planning, biological diversity, climate change, desertification control, integrated coastal area management and energy, with the aim of seeking solutions to environmental problems in different agro-ecological zones of the developing world.

The theme of World Food Day 1989 was food and the environment. During the year, FAO finalized an international scheme for the conservation and rehabilitation of Africa's forests, pastures and croplands, which provided a framework for formulating national plans, co-ordinating regional programmes and enlisting international support for land restoration; the scheme was to be reviewed at the FAO Regional Conference for Africa in 1990.

The conservation and use of plant and animal genetic resources received renewed support from the FAO Conference in November, which also called for strengthening FAO programmes for environmental protection and sustainable development. Work began on setting up a global programme for the preservation of the world's threatened livestock breeds. An updated FAO-United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Soil Map of the World was published, which included several changes in diagnostic principles, soil units and nomenclature.

Nuclear techniques

In 1989, the Joint FAO-International Atomic Energy Agency Division, which celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, undertook a wide range of activities in soil fertility, plant production, pest control, animal production, agrochemicals and food irradiation. Among its achievements during the year, the Division enhanced efforts to control the Mediterranean fruit fly by developing methods of determining its sex by colour.

The Division undertook soil studies, using radioactive and stable isotopes to measure nutrients, in the search for techniques to reduce reliance on costly fertilizers. It carried out in vitro experiments for breeding several species of tropical crop plants, including bananas, plantains yams and cassava. Other activities included evaluating tropical fodder species, distributing diagnostic kits for livestock diseases and to measure animal fertility, and testing controlled-release agrochemicals in efforts to reduce the amounts required of pesticides and herbicides. In addition, the Division sponsored hundreds of seminars and exchange programmes for scientists from developing countries.

Information

Hundreds of information booklets, technical papers and reference materials were compiled and published by FAO in 1989. Major periodicals included Ceres (general topic, bimonthly, a review of agriculture and development), Unasylva (forestry, quarterly), World Animal Review (quarterly), State of Food and Agriculture (annual), Quarterly Bulletin of Statistics, FAO Production Yearbook, Commodity Review and Outlook, Plant Protection Bulletin (quarterly) and FAO's yearbooks on trade, fertilizers, forest products, fishery statistics and animal health.

Grass-roots publications, training manuals, film strips and radio and video programmes were produced, covering a wide array of topics, from improved farming techniques to animal husbandry, aquaculture and soil conservation. To reach the millions of small farmers and extension workers who could not use the organization's official languages (Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Spanish), FAO encouraged the adaptation, translation and distribution of its publications in local languages. It also published a series of handbooks on farm systems management for seven developing countries and helped publish the first complete review in English of livestock breeds in the USSR.

Secretariat

At the end of 1989, the number of staff employed at FAO headquarters was 3,175, including 1,175 in the Professional and higher categories. Field project personnel and those in regional and country offices numbered 3,052, including 1,302 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,750 in the General Service category. There were also 70 Associate Experts working at headquarters and 311 at regional and country offices or in the field.

Budget

The FAO regular programme budget was financed by the organization's 158 member States according to a scale of contributions set by the FAO Conference. The Conference in 1989 approved a total working budget for 1990-1991 of $568.8 million, an increase of $76.4 million over the previous biennium, mostly to cover rising costs. Unpaid arrears amounted to some $175 million.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational,
Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued throughout 1989 to promote co-operation among nations in education, natural and social sciences, culture and communication. To pave the way for the future, particular attention was given during the year to increasing the efficiency of UNESCO, bringing its work more into the public eye, enhancing its credibility and developing its operational capabilities.

The twenty-fifth session of the UNESCO General Conference, which convened at the organization's headquarters in Paris (17 October-16 November), adopted the Convention on Technical and Vocational Education and approved the medium-term plan for 1990-1995, as well as the programme and budget for 1990-1991. The third medium-term plan set out priorities for future action in the organization's spheres of competence, striking a balance between continuity and innovation, with a view to responding more effectively to the changing needs of the world community, particularly the developing countries and disadvantaged groups.

Membership of UNESCO increased in 1989 to 161 States (plus three associate members) with the admission of the Cook Islands, Djibouti and Kiribati.

Education

During the year, UNESCO educational programmes focused on fighting illiteracy, expanding primary education and formulating new education policies to meet the demands of the twenty-first century. The organization continued as lead agency in preparations for the International Literacy Year (ILY) (see PART THREE, Chapter XII) and for the World Conference on Education for All in 1990, the latter in co-ordination with the World Bank, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). The programme for ILY was launched at a ceremony at UN Headquarters on 6 December. UNESCO also undertook a wide range of projects and publications aimed at improving child and adult education; modernizing science, mathematics and technology teaching; promoting educational equality for girls and women; facilitating access to schooling for rural populations; and promoting the right to education for marginalized groups, such as disabled persons, refugees and migrant workers.

UNESCO co-operated in framing national, regional and international strategies and plans for the eradication of illiteracy by the year 2000 and conducted several national and regional workshops for the training of key literacy personnel. During the year, the organization awarded four literacy prizes: the Nadezhda K. Krupskaya Prize to the Jamaican Movement for the Advancement of Literacy; the International Reading Association Literacy Award to the Adult Education Department of the University of Ibadan, Nigeria; the Noma Prize to the Directorate of Community Education of the Ministry of Education and Culture of Indonesia; and the Iraq Literacy Prize to the Secretariat of State for Literacy and Religious Education in Mauritania.

The forty-first session of the International Conference on Education (Geneva, 9-17 January) focused on the diversification of post-secondary education in the light of the employment situation. An international congress on education and informatics (Paris, 12-21 April), attended by some 500 participants from 90 member States and by 30 international and non-governmental organizations, highlighted ways of making better use of informatics to develop and improve educational processes and systems.

Natural sciences and environment

UNESCO continued to promote co-operation in science and technology for development through training and research courses, workshops and seminars for specialists, most of them from developing countries, on biology, biotechnology, chemistry, mathematics and physics.

The intergovernmental programme on Man and the Biosphere (MAB) continued to advance interdisciplinary research on and training in land resource management through a series of international research networks and 293 biosphere reserves in 74 countries, to which seven new reserves were added. The organization issued the first publications in the newly launched MAB Book Series and MAB Digest Series and continued publishing its quarterly review Nature and Resources.

The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission implemented programmes covering ocean sciences and services, education and mutual assistance. It promoted research on ocean dynamics and climate, living and non-living resources, marine pollution and ocean mapping. Under the Integrated Global Ocean Services System, ocean data were collected jointly with the World Meteorological Organization through drifting buoys and about 300 observation ships from 26 nations. Some 550 scientists and technicians were trained through courses and workshops in Africa, Asia and Central and Latin America on data and information management, marine geology, physical oceanography, marine pollution research and monitoring, fish recruitment estimations and sea-level measurement. Thirty grants were awarded for shipboard training and study at oceanographic institutions.

The International Hydrological Programme completed its third phase (1984-1989), with the combined efforts of 145 co-operating member States, 9 participating international scientific and non-governmental organizations, more than 30 national and international organizations and several hundred individual water experts.

UNESCO trained some 300 engineering staff in curriculum design and innovative teaching methodology, educated 40 students, mostly from the Mediterranean and the Middle East, in earthquake engineering and took steps towards the creation of a first UNESCO masters degree course in energy engineering.

As part of its human settlements programme, UNESCO continued working on the rehabilitation of the Barrio Rio Salado, a squatter settlement of 4,500-5,000 people in La Romana, Dominican Republic. A water supply and sewage system was installed as a first step towards creating necessary infrastructures and socio-cultural facilities. The organization contributed to similar rehabilitation projects in Córdoba, Argentina, and Caracas, Venezuela.

With 90 established national committees, the International Geological Correlation Programme, undertaken jointly with the International Union of Geological Sciences, continued to stimulate international collaboration in the earth sciences through 51 research projects in which scientists from 122 countries were involved. Geological maps of Africa and Asia were completed and work continued on the geological maps of Europe and a geological map of the world.

In environmental education, emphasis was placed on improving and disseminating environmental information, innovation in content and methods of such education, and drawing greater attention to environmental issues in national educational policies, plans and programmes. UNESCO-supported studies and pilot projects focused on issues such as incorporating environmental education into agricultural education, the concept and development of environmental ethics, and, within the framework of the World Decade for Cultural Development (1988-1997), the role of ecomuseums and the natural and cultural heritage in the promotion of environmental education.

Social and human sciences

The International Congress on Peace in the Minds of Men (Yamoussoukro, Côte d'Ivoire, 26 June-1 July), organized by UNESCO in co-operation with the Houphouët-Boigny International Foundation for Peace, adopted the Yamoussoukro Declaration, which defined peace positively-not as the mere absence of war-and called for development of a "peace culture" based on justice among human beings and a harmonious partnership of humankind with the environment. The UNESCO Prize for Peace Education was awarded to the International Peace Research Association and to Robert Muller (France), Chancellor of the United Nations University for Peace in Costa Rica.

UNESCO organized or co-operated in training sessions, seminars and workshops on human rights in a number of countries in 1989. An international meeting of experts (Ottawa, Canada, December) discussed implementation in UNESCO's fields of competence of the two 1966 International Covenants on Human Rights. In co-operation with the World Federation of Modern Language Associations, an international symposium was held on languages and human rights (Paris, 25 April). To study the concept of the rights of peoples and the relationship of those rights with human rights, UNESCO organized an international meeting of experts (Paris, 27-30 November).

As part of its programme dedicated to eliminating prejudice, intolerance and racism, UNESCO emphasized teacher training and commissioned a study on discriminatory stereotypes in school textbooks and children's books. It also undertook a variety of activities to support the struggle against apartheid in South Africa and supported a wide variety of projects relating to women, including the contribution of women to development, as well as literacy and civic education for women in five countries in Africa, the Arab States and Asia. Co-operation with international youth organizations was stepped up and activities aimed at associating young people with development were carried out. An interregional group and several studies addressed the effects of structural adjustment policies and highlighted proposals that could mitigate their negative impact on socio-cultural life. Also in 1989, a new framework of co-operation was negotiated between UNESCO and the World Bank, which resulted in collaboration that extended beyond education to sectors such as the sciences and technology, the environment, statistics and the development of human resources.

Culture

UNESCO functioned as lead agency for the World Decade for Cultural Development (1988-1997) (see PART THREE, Chapter XII). It designated 231 of 300 submitted projects as Decade activities, while 48 new projects in the arts, crafts, documentation, the collection and safeguarding of cultural traditions, and the media were financed by the International Fund for the Promotion of Culture.

The World Heritage Committee, established under the 1972 Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage, held its thirteenth session (Paris, 11-15 December). Seven sites were added to the World Heritage List, bringing to 322 the number of cultural and natural properties in 69 countries protected by the Convention, to which 111 States were parties in 1989. Within the framework of its programme for training young creative and performing artists, UNESCO awarded short-term travel scholarships to candidates from different geocultural regions and working in different disciplines.

During the year, two new campaigns for the safeguarding of cultural heritage were launched, raising the number of such campaigns in progress to 24. Advisory services were provided for preservation projects in 20 countries and for museological projects in seven countries. UNESCO continued efforts to preserve cultural identities through the publication of histories of Africa, Latin America, the Caribbean and Central Asian civilizations, as well as its work on Islamic culture. Seventeen titles were produced on cassette and compact disc as part of the UNESCO collection of traditional music.

Mexican and Bengal poetry anthologies were issued as the first two volumes in the new UNESCO Library of World Poetry series. Among its regular publications, the magazines Copyright Bulletin and Museum continued to be published quarterly.

Communication

Focusing on the socio-cultural impact of new communication technologies, UNESCO supported a variety of studies and research projects. The World Communication Report was published, comprising basic information on communication statistics worldwide, training and research institutions, and new technology. The UNESCO Mass Communication Thesaurus was revised and updated. An international survey of some 500 communication training institutions was completed. At UNESCO's initiative, the Arab Network of Documentation Centres on Communication Research and Policies was strengthened.

In its efforts to develop communication worldwide, UNESCO gave assistance to nine communication training institutions in all regions and trained more than 2,000 communication specialists in 30 workshops and courses. The 35-member Intergovernmental Council of the International Programme for the Development of Communication (IPDC), at its tenth session (Paris, 7-13 March), allocated some $1.6 million to 18 projects. The IPDC-UNESCO prize for rural communication, awarded every two years in recognition of innovative activity in communication in rural communities of developing countries, was awarded in 1989 to the Asociación Nacional de Agricultores Pequeños of Cuba and the Acción Cultural Popular of Colombia.

UNESCO's General Information Programme continued to assist countries, particularly in the developing world, to increase their capacity to gather, organize, diffuse and utilize scientific information. UNESCO supported 11 national and subregional meetings on the formulation and implementation of information policies in developing countries, including those in Bangladesh, Jordan, Senegal and Uruguay. A Handbook on the Formulation, Approval, Implementation and Operation of National Information Policies was published. The Programme helped to strengthen co-operation between regional information networks by initiating pilot projects on community information services, issuing guidelines for the use of environmental information, and training some 75 decision makers and key scientists. Two international symposia were held on the revival of the Library of Alexandria, Egypt.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, UNESCO had a full-time staff of 2,727, of which 1,045, drawn from 128 nationalities, were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,682 in the General Service category.

Budget

Regular budget expenditures in 1988-1989 totalled $336.4 million, or $14.4 million less than the budgeted amount of $350.8 million. Extra-budgetary expenditures totalled $155.5 million, of which $92.1 million was financed through UNDP, the United Nations Population Fund and other UN sources, and $63.4 million from other extra-budgetary sources. The General Conference in 1989 approved regular budget appropriations of $378.8 million for the 1990-1991 biennium.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

The World Health Organization (WHO), established in 1948, continued during 1989 to serve as the directing and co-ordinating authority on international health. The World Health Assembly, the governing body of WHO, at its forty-second session (Geneva, 8-19 May), endorsed proposals related to the work of the organization in the following areas: strengthening the basic infrastructure of health systems based on primary health care; improving management, information support and research capabilities; ensuring the development and transfer of appropriate technology to countries; developing and re-orienting human resources in line with new strategies; and mobilizing and making best use of all possible financial and material resources for sustainable development. The Assembly also adopted a plan of action to eradicate poliomyelitis, as well as vigorous measures against malaria, dracunculiasis, acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), and the abuse of tobacco, alcohol and drugs. It approved a budget of $653.7 million for the 1990-1991 biennium.

During 1989, the membership of WHO remained at 166, with one associate member.

Strategy for health for all

The Assembly endorsed the second report on monitoring progress in implementing strategies for health for all and urged action on five critical challenges to the health sector: sustained political commitments to the principles of primary health care and the reduction of social inequity; intensification of efforts to strengthen managerial capacities; strengthening health infrastructure, particularly on the district and community levels; strengthening health research and development for the implementation of national health strategies; and increased support to the least developed countries, especially those with high infant mortality.

As part of the organization's continuing support of education for health-for-all leaders, during 1989 some 200 senior officials from approximately 35 countries participated in inter-regional, inter-country and national colloquiums and training workshops in Guyana, India, Indonesia, Thailand, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe.

Health policy and infrastructure

The International Conference for the Tenth Revision of the International Classification of Diseases (Geneva, 26 September-2 October) proposed a new coding system that would allow for the coding of almost twice as many conditions in classifying morbidity for hospital in-patients and general medical practice. The Conference also considered proposals to facilitate trend assessments and projection studies and the comparison of health information between countries.

To provide a link between the producers and users of health systems research and clinical epidemiology, a new international newsletter, Bridge, began publication in 1989 in collaboration with the International Clinical Epidemiology Network and the Foundation for Health Services Research, and with the support of the Rockefeller Foundation.

The third meeting of the Consultative Group on the Organization of Health Systems Based on Primary Health Care was held in Manila, Philippines, in March to review the recommendations of the Riga (Latvia) meeting of the previous year, with particular emphasis on health financing and management, primary health care in urban areas, quality assurance in health systems, and health in public policy.

Also during the year, in collaboration with other international organizations and Governments, WHO participated in a variety of intersectoral initiatives related to primary health care systems, including a study on the effects of development policies on health status and training courses on equipment maintenance management.

The organization also worked to redefine cooperation in the area of human resources development, revising policy and refining the guidance given in manuals: reports of expert committees and study groups. The 1989 report of the Expert Committee on Management of Human Resources for Health stressed opportunities to improve motivation and productivity through the application of sound managerial principles and techniques. An inter-regional seminar on financing human resources for health was held in Bangkok, Thailand, in March and an interregional workshop on nursing leadership development was conducted in Copenhagen, Denmark, in August.

Following the 1988 World Conference on Medical Education, ministerial meetings in 1989 (in July in Abuja, Nigeria, for the African region and in October in Jakarta, Indonesia, for South-East Asia) discussed the establishment of a regional task force on medical education in order to monitor progress in curriculum reorientation.

In relation to national drug policies, more than 100 countries had adopted or adapted the WHO Model List of Essential Drugs by the end of the year. WHO continued to promote the scientific evaluation of traditional remedies to ensure that the selection of medicinal plants in health systems balanced efficacy and side-effects. The fifth International Conference of Drug Regulatory Authorities (Paris, October) discussed ways to develop and introduce appropriate national policies, regulations and control measures to ensure the safety of remedies. The organization also adopted a standard acupuncture nomenclature for international use.

Public information and education for health

In addition to celebrating World Health Day—under the theme “Let’s Talk Health” in 1989—WHO continued to support a No-Tobacco Day on 31 May and a World AIDS Day on 1 December. Growing international awareness of the need for measures to make health education more effective led to a Conference on Effectiveness of Health Education in Rotterdam, Netherlands, which stressed the importance of evaluation.

Through inter-country workshops in several regions, WHO continued to emphasize the role of young people by involving them in the promotional aspects of health development. In Europe, for example, it collaborated on a project to promote the health of young people, underlining the importance of integrating AIDS-related education programmes for young people and school-age children.

WHO also published a manual on training in the community for people with disabilities, developed guidelines and training material for intermediate-level personnel for specific countries and encouraged modifications in the training of rehabilitation specialists.

Health protection and promotion

A WHO Interregional Workshop on Leadership and Participation of Women in Maternal and Child Health and Family Planning (Mauritius, December), held with the support of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), discussed the involvement of women and women’s organizations in programmes and policies to enable them to regulate their own fertility as a means of both improving the health of mothers and children and enabling women to participate fully in social and overall development. In July, WHO convened a consultation in Geneva on emerging needs in family health for the 1990s in the broad context of reproductive health and child growth and development. Workshops and seminars facilitated by WHO focused on the benefits of improved water supply and sanitation facilities for women (Kupang, Indonesia), the control of iodine deficiency disorders (New Delhi, India), community safety programme planning (Indonesia, March), epidemiology and prevention of burn injuries (Cyprus), and improvement of emergency medical services (Seoul, Republic of Korea).

In the area of food and nutrition, WHO participated in a symposium on women and nutrition during the fifteenth session of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination’s Sub-Committee on Nutrition (New York, February/March), which considered as closely related issues the role of women in determining nutrition of households and societies and the nutritional status of women.

The First World Conference on Accident and Injury Prevention (Stockholm, Sweden, September), co-sponsored by WHO, discussed experiences in community safety and adopted a manifesto on the essential principles for a global policy for safety in communities. A meeting of representatives of ministries of health of five African countries convened in Brazzaville, Congo, in April to prepare policy for the health sector in road safety as WHO’s contribution to the Second African Road Safety Congress organized by the Economic Commission for Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, October).

As to the protection and promotion of mental health, the eighth meeting of the Global Coordinating Group for the WHO Mental Health Programme in October emphasized the need to maintain a broadly defined mental health programme dealing with human behaviour in health and ill-health, as well as with specific problems, such as those linked to alcohol and drug abuse, and with the prevention and treatment of mental and neurological disorders. As part of a programme undertaken with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to produce training manuals on mental health services in refugee camps, WHO made visits to camps of displaced Khmer populations on the Thai border under the jurisdiction of the UN Border Relief Operations to assess mental health and psychosocial problems and to recommend preventive and remedial measures. In October, WHO finalized the first of three instruments to permit standardized assessment of mental disorders. During the year, the organization convened experts from its network of collaborating centres on biological psychiatry and psychopharmacology to produce consensus statements on the pharmacology of depressive disorders, the pharmacology of schizophrenia and pharmacotherapy in old age.

Health of specific populations

WHO continued its advocacy of safe motherhood, sponsoring workshops and training in midwifery and essential obstetric care with the financial support and collaboration of other UN agencies and organizations and publishing a monograph on preventing maternal deaths.

The Global Programme on Health of the Elderly was moved in 1989 to WHO headquarters in order to respond with an integrated approach to the growing problems associated with the aging. The Programme continued to focus on community-based health care for the elderly, with particular attention on information, research and ways to preserve and encourage care in the family.

Also during the year, a joint WHO/UNFPA/UNICEF statement was published on objectives for improved adolescent reproductive health, and the tenth meeting of the Joint International Labour Organisation (ILO)/WHO Committee on Occupational Health published its report on the epidemiology of work-related diseases and accidents.

Environment, health and development

In 1989, the WHO Director-General expressed his intention to redefine and restructure the organization's approach to environmental health and proposed the convening of a high-level technical expert commission on health and the environment to review current knowledge of the impact of environmental factors on health. The commission's finding would form the basis of the WHO contribution to the UN Conference on Environment and Development in 1992.

During the year, WHO collaborated with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), the World Bank and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in formulating health and technical guidelines for waste-water reuse in agriculture and aquaculture. The joint WHO/ILO/UNEP International Programme on Chemical Safety continued to provide information on the risks of potentially toxic chemicals to human health and the environment, and guidance in the safe use of chemicals. The FAO/International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)/WHO International Consultative Group on Food Irradiation, which had a membership of 30 countries, sponsored a consultation (Geneva, May/June) to propose microbiological criteria for foods to be further processed by methods including irradiation. The first phase of the Human Exposure Assessment Location Project was completed. An inter-regional training course in nuclear medicine for developing countries (Berlin, September/October) was held in collaboration with IAEA. In addition,

WHO conducted seminars and workshops in several regions on health and housing and on urbanization and health.

Disease prevention and control

Throughout the year, the global number of AIDS cases continued to rise rapidly. By 31 December 1989, 203,559 cases had been reported for 152 of 177 countries and areas. However, taking into account under-reporting and delays in reporting, the actual number was estimated at about 600,000 cases by the end of the year. In June, the annual International Conference on AIDS was held in Montreal, Canada. In November, an international conference in Paris issued the Paris Declaration on Women, Children and AIDS. The Global Commission on AIDS, established in 1989 to provide the WHO Director-General with broad policy and scientific guidance, held its first and second meetings in Geneva in May and in Brazzaville, Congo, in November. WHO continued to assert its directing and co-ordinating role by further developing its global strategy for the prevention and control of AIDS. Under the Global Programme on AIDS, WHO consultants undertook more than 1,300 missions, and 75 posts were established in national programmes. At the end of the year, 120 countries had short-term AIDS programmes and 95 countries had formulated a medium-term plan for their national AIDS programmes.

The organization's cancer control programme remained based on three main priorities: prevention; early detection followed by efficient therapy; and palliative care, including cancer pain relief. In July, an expert committee recommended expansion of the cancer pain relief programme and established guidelines for the control of other cancer symptoms and the training of health care professionals. WHO sponsored workshops on national cancer control plans in China, Indonesia and the United Arab Emirates. It also received requests for assistance with national cancer control programmes from Cameroon, Cuba and Spain.

Prevention continued to be the main objective of WHO's cardiovascular diseases programme. In September, the third international WHO MONICA (multinational monitoring of trends and determinants in cardiovascular diseases) congress was held in Nice, France, in conjunction with the eleventh European Congress on Cardiology. A MONICA session also took place at the second International Conference on Preventive Cardiology in Washington, D.C., in June.

The WHO Diarrhoeal Diseases Control Programme collaborated with more than 100 countries in the implementation of national programmes and related research. Some 200 diarrhoeal diseases control training units had been established in 76 countries since 1980. In addition, more than 2,500 participants from some 140 countries had attended programme managers' courses and training courses for national health staff. During the year, WHO, in collaboration with UNICEF, initiated local production of oral rehydration salts (ORS) in three countries, bringing the total number of producing countries to 61. The number of packets of ORS or similar products produced in 1989 was estimated at 350 million litre equivalents, of which more than 75 per cent were manufactured in developing countries.

Through its Expanded Programme on Immunization, WHO continued its efforts to reduce morbidity resulting from diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, measles, poliomyelitis and tuberculosis. Figures issued in 1989 indicated that at least one of the vaccines under the Programme reached some 73 per cent of the developing world. However, differences in the success of the immunization programmes between the WHO regions generally reflected their levels of socio-economic development. In Africa, for example, success ranged from 12 per cent in Guinea to 99 per cent in Botswana. Following its call in 1988 for the eradication of poliomyelitis by the year 2000, the World Health Assembly endorsed two additional goals for the Expanded Programme on Immunization to be achieved by 1995: the elimination of neonatal tetanus and the reduction of measles incidence by 90 per cent.

The number of registered cases of leprosy decreased to 3.85 million in 1989 from 5.4 million in 1985, a 28.7 per cent drop within a four-year period. In South-East Asia, which had 71.4 per cent of the world's registered leprosy cases, improvement of case-finding and holding and expansion of coverage with multidrug therapy produced a decline from 3.7 million cases in 1985 to 2.75 million in 1989. In Africa, which had 470,000 registered cases, Governments participating in the WHO interregional conference on leprosy control (Brazzaville, Congo, November) affirmed their commitment to multidrug therapy. In the western Pacific region, the number of cases decreased from 250,000 to 190,000 cases between 1982 and 1989. A number of countries in the South Pacific reported that very few cases remained.

A report published in 1989 on the world malaria situation, 1986-1987, indicated that about 30 per cent of the world population lived in areas where successful malaria eradication was being maintained, while 34 per cent lived in endemic areas where malaria transmission had returned and the situation was unstable or deteriorating and 9 per cent lived in areas where no national antimalarial programme had been implemented, mainly in tropical Africa. In November, the nineteenth meeting of the WHO Expert Committee on Malaria provided practical guidance for malaria-endemic countries on diagnosis and treatment, epidemiological indicators, criteria for selecting areas where specific vector control might be introduced and the management of malaria epidemics.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, WHO employed a total of 4,453 full-time staff on permanent and fixed-term contracts. Of those, 1,468 staff members from 130 nationalities were in the Professional and higher categories and 2,985 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The WHO working budget for the 1988-1989 biennium, as revised by the Director-General in 1988, was $609 million. The forty-second World Health Assembly approved an effective working budget of $653.7 million for the 1990-1991 biennium.

Chapter VI

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) continued during 1989 to assist developing countries to progress economically and socially by providing loans and other assistance. Lending commitments by the Bank totalled $16.4 billion for the fiscal year ending 30 June 1989, an 11 per cent increase over fiscal 1988. During the year, the Bank sought to strengthen its efforts in several key policy areas, including reducing poverty in the developing world; increasing assistance to highly indebted middle-income countries undertaking adjustment measures; integrating environmental considerations into its policy and operational work; and launching an action programme to provide an increased role for the private sector in the Bank's developing member countries.

Membership in the Bank rose to 152 in 1989 with the admission of Angola.

Lending operations

In the fiscal year ending 30 June 1989, the World Bank made a total of 119 loans to 38 countries, amounting to $16,433,200,000. This brought the cumulative total of loan commitments by the Bank since it began operations in 1946 to $171,482 million.

In the agriculture and rural development sector, the Bank made 24 loans to 17 countries, totalling $2,066.1 million; major borrowers included Algeria, India, Morocco and Turkey. Nine loans totalling $2,223 million were made to strengthen development finance companies in seven countries, including China, Mexico, the Philippines and Venezuela. Another nine loans totalling $441.6 million were extended by the Bank to education projects in nine countries, including Colombia, Morocco and Tunisia. The Bank extended $3,408 million in loans to 11 countries for energy projects; the largest recipients included India, Indonesia and Mexico. Those three countries were also among nine countries receiving $1,858 million in loans for the industrial sector. Ten non-project loans totalling $2,692 million were granted during fiscal 1989.

For population, health and nutrition projects, the Bank granted loans totalling $399.5 million to seven countries, including Brazil, Jordan and Turkey. Five countries, including Colombia, Indonesia and Nigeria, received loans totalling $585 million to support small-scale enterprises. The Bank made two loans to Argentina and one to Uruguay, totalling $41 million for technical assistance, and two loans totalling $53.1 million were granted to Ecuador and Fiji for telecommunications projects. Ten countries received 13 loans amounting to $1,137.7 million for the development of their transportation systems and seven urban projects totalling $959 million were approved for six countries. The Bank also granted $569.2 million in loans for water supply and sewerage programmes in five countries.

Economic Development Institute

Fiscal year 1989 marked the final year of a live-year plan instituted by the Economic Development Institute (EDI) in 1984. During that period, EDI activities, which focused on the transfer of knowledge rather than of funds, shifted towards policy-related training in the form of senior policy seminars and of macro-economic and sector-management seminars. Some 44 per cent of EDI's training and assistance activities focused on sub-Saharan Africa in fiscal 1989, compared with 30 per cent in fiscal 1984.

The Institute's work programme in fiscal 1989 was strongly oriented towards structural-adjustment policy and implementation issues at the macro-economic level, including the social costs of adjustment. At the sectoral level, increased attention was given to issues in the financial sector, health, natural-resource management and public-expenditure planning. External sources of support for EDI programmes in developing countries continued to expand. While UNDP continued to be the largest external contributor to EDI, bilateral aid agencies, the World Health Organization and the UN Commission on Human Settlements were important collaborators with the Institute.

Co-financing

The total volume of co-financing anticipated in support of World Bank-assisted operations reached $9.9 billion in fiscal 1989. The Bank contributed some $9.3 billion for 131 co-financed projects, an increase of about $5.5 billion over fiscal 1988. For the first time, more than half of all Bank-assisted projects and programmes attracted some form of co-financing. The largest source of co-financing continued to be official bilateral aid agencies and multilateral development institutions, which, together, accounted for $5.7 billion. Export-credit flows increased, reaching an estimated $3.2 billion, while commercial bank co-financing accounted for $1.1 billion.

Fiscal 1989 was the second year of a three-year, multi-donor special programme of assistance (SPA) in support of adjustment programmes in sub-Saharan Africa. In addition to $2.3 billion in co-financing to the African region as a whole, some $1.1 billion in co-ordinated financing (quick-disbursing financing administered by donors) was provided to the group of 22 countries eligible for SPA funding.

Financing activities

During fiscal 1989, the Bank raised an equivalent of $9.3 billion through medium- and long-term borrowings in 17 currencies. About 99 per cent of its borrowings, after swaps, were in United States dollars, Japanese yen, deutsche mark and Swiss francs.

Of the 710 new borrowing operations that the Bank conducted during the year, 703 were in the private sector, accounting for 84 per cent ($7.8 billion) of total new funds borrowed. The Bank's outstanding debt, net of discounts and premia, decreased by $4.2 billion to $80.3 billion as at 30 June 1989. Those obligations were denominated in 23 different currencies and currency units.

Capitalization

As at 30 June 1989, the subscribed capital of the Bank totalled $115.7 billion, an increase of $24.2 billion over fiscal 1988.

Income, expenditures and reserves

The Bank's gross revenues totalled $8.3 billion in fiscal 1989, down $275 million, or 3.2 per cent, from the previous year. Net income was $1.1 billion, $263 million less than it should have been, owing to interest income not accrued for countries that were six months or more in arrears on debt service to the Bank. Expenses decreased by 5 per cent to $7.1 billion; administrative costs totalled $462 million.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 1989, the World Bank staff totalled 5,695, of whom 3,648 were in the Professional or higher categories, drawn from 116 countries.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

Established in 1956 as an independent affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), the International Finance Corporation (IFC) continued in 1989 to further economic growth in developing member countries by promoting productive private investment. IFC provided long-term loans and risk capital without government guarantees to private sector enterprises. It also continued to provide the technical assistance and advisory services needed to make good use of investment opportunities in developing countries and to encourage the flow of private capital to them.

During fiscal year 1989 (1 July 1988-30 June 1989), IFC membership remained at 133.

Financial and advisory services

During fiscal 1989, IFC approved 90 investments in 37 countries with a total value of $1,709 million and overall project costs of $9,694 million. It mobilized $8,403 million in funds from other investors and lenders for its projects, up from $3,971 million in fiscal 1988. Disbursements for IFC's own account increased to $870 million, 14 per cent more than in fiscal 1988.

During IFC's latest live-year programme, which ended in 1989, the volume of investment approvals grew by an average of 28 per cent per year. In fiscal 1989, the Corporation approved $1,291 million in investments of all types for its own account, compared with $391 million in fiscal 1984. The IFC-disbursed portfolio also grew during the five-year programme, from $1,447 million in fiscal 1984 to $2,793 million at the end of fiscal 1989. IFC disbursed $749 million in loans and $121 million in equity in fiscal 1989, compared with $212 million in loans and $26 million in equity in 1984. Funds mobilized by IFC through joint financings, syndications and underwritings increased by some 37 per cent per year to $8,403 million, compared with $2,092 million in fiscal 1984.

During fiscal 1989, IFC established a Corporate Finance Services Group to strengthen its capacity to provide advisory services in two areas: the restructuring of potentially viable enterprises needing assistance in coping with a difficult economic environment and the privatization of public sector enterprises, as developing member countries sought to increase the role of the private sector in their economies. The Corporation also established a new International Securities Group within the Capital Markets Department to assist corporations in developing countries to raise capital on international markets.

A new IFC office was opened in Casablanca, Morocco, to serve the Maghreb countries, and the Caribbean Project Development Facility opened an office in Barbados to make its services more accessible to entrepreneurs in the eastern Caribbean.

Regional projects

The 90 new projects approved by IFC in fiscal 1989 included one regional project and one of international scope. Of the total approvals, 38, accounting for $418 million, were located in low-income developing countries with per capita incomes of $835 or less.

Sub-Saharan Africa remained one of the Corporation's priority areas. The Africa Project Development Facility, launched in 1986 in co-operation with the UN Development Programme and the African Development Bank, provided assistance to small and medium-sized enterprises in Africa. In fiscal 1989, IFC launched the African Management Services Company to address the need for better management in Africa by seconding senior executives to African enterprises for fixed terms and providing management training to local staff. Loans and equity financing totalling some $282 million were approved for 19 projects in Africa in 1989, including capital markets projects. IFC concentrated on promising sectors, such as mining, fishing, agribusiness, food processing and shipping. At the end of the fiscal year, IFC had committed investments of $624 million in 123 companies in 33 countries in Africa, consisting of $550 million in loans and $74 million in equity.

IFC investment in Asia focused on infrastructure projects, funding of small and medium-sized companies and advisory services. Infrastructure financing involved the use of both the build-operate-transfer (BOT) concept and the support of a few private companies already active in their respective fields. The Corporation's advisory work in the region included providing advice on privatization and BOT possibilities in Indonesia, Malaysia, Nepal, Pakistan and the Philippines, as well as undertaking a feasibility study in Thailand. During fiscal 1989, total financing of $321 million in loans and equity investments was approved for 25 projects in Asia, including capital markets projects. At the end of the fiscal year, IFC had committed investments of $729 million in 109 companies in 12 countries in Asia-$566 million in loans and $163 million in equity.

In Europe and the Middle East, IFC initiatives concentrated on expanding private sector participation in the manufacturing and service sectors. The majority of projects in the region were in Turkey and the Eastern European countries. During fiscal year 1989, IFC approved $259 million in loans and equity investments for 15 projects, including capital markets projects. At the end of the fiscal year, the Corporation had committed investments of $756 million in 74 companies in 12 countries in Europe and the Middle East-$685 million in loans and $71 million in equity.

Investment in Latin America and the Caribbean focused on the exploration for and development of natural resources, such as the mining, petrochemical and pulp industries. Total IFC financing in the region during fiscal 1989 amounted to $842 million for 30 projects, including capital markets projects. At the end of the fiscal year, the Corporation had committed investments of $1.9 billion in 160 companies in 22 countries in the region-$1.7 billion in loans and $236 million in equity.

Financial performance

In fiscal year 1989, IFC's net income reached $196.5 million, a 95 per cent increase over fiscal 1988. The increase was due in large part to the performance of the equity portfolio, which yielded capital gains of $118.6 million, compared with $32.9 million the previous year. The Corporation collected dividends of $30.8 million, compared with $15.5 million in fiscal 1988, and fees from investment and advisory services totalled $25.3 million, compared with $11.8 million in fiscal 1988.

Capital and retained earnings

The Corporation's net worth as at 30 June 1989 was $1,583 million, up from $1,288 million at the end of fiscal 1988. Paid-in capital totalled $948 million and retained earnings, including the fiscal year net income, amounted to $635 million. Some $165 million of IFC's subscribed capital had not been paid in at the end of fiscal 1989.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 1989, IFC's staff totalled 541 from 74 countries, including from 56 developing countries.

Chapter VIII

International Development Association (IDA)

The International Development Association (IDA), which was established in 1960 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), continued to provide concessionary assistance, primarily to low-income countries and on easier terms than the Bank. During fiscal year 1989 (1 July 1988-30 June 1989), IDA concentrated on the very poor countries—those with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $480 (in 1987 United States dollars).

IDA resources, called credits to distinguish them from World Bank loans, were derived mostly from subscriptions in convertible currencies from members; general replenishments from its more industrialized members; and transfers from the Bank's net earnings. Credits were made only to Governments and had 35- to 40-year maturities, including a 10-year grace period, and were interest-free.

Negotiations for the ninth replenishment of IDA resources (IDA-9) were launched in February 1989 at a meeting of IDA deputies in Washington, D.C. The deputies then met in London on 17 and 18 May to consider issues related to allocation, eligibility and the size of the ninth replenishment. Further meetings were scheduled for the remainder of calendar year 1989 in Copenhagen, Denmark, Washington, D.C., and Kyoto, Japan.

As at 30 June 1989, cumulative IDA commitments totalled $52 billion. During fiscal 1989, IDA approved 115 credits totalling $4.93 billion to 43 developing countries. The majority of funding went to Africa, $2.3 billion to 28 countries, and Asia, $2.2 billion to nine countries. India was the largest borrower, with six credits amounting to $900.3 million, followed by China, with live credits totalling $515 million, and Bangladesh, with four credits totalling $423.1 million. Credits financed projects primarily in the agriculture and rural development, education, energy, industry, transportation, and population, health and nutrition sectors.

During the year, a total of 21 countries received 30 credits totalling $1.4 billion for agriculture and rural development. IDA granted credits totalling $141.7 million to assist development finance companies in eight countries. It also granted credits totalling $134.3 million to eight countries for technical assistance, live credits totalling $229.5 million for urban development, live credits totalling $222 million for water supply and sewerage projects, and 18 non-project credits totalling $726.5 million to assist 16 countries with economic recovery, structural adjustment and financial reform programmes. In addition, 10 countries received credits totalling $449.1 million for the education sector; eight received $455.6 million for the energy sector; four received $124.5 million for the industrial sector; live received $107.9 million for the telecommunications sector; 10 received $693.1 million for the transportation sector; and six received $223.5 million for projects related to population, health and nutrition.

IDA membership increased to 138 in 1989, with the admission of Angola.

Secretariat

Though legally and financially distinct from the World Bank, the staffing and headquarters of IDA are the same as those of the Bank.

Chapter IX

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) in 1989 continued to serve as a permanent forum for the discussion of global monetary issues and related economic matters, to assist its members to develop sound economic policies and to promote conditions conducive to a healthy world economy. The Fund's primary activities included advising on economic and financial policies; providing information and technical assistance; and making loans to members undertaking economic reforms to overcome balance-of-payments difficulties. Each member contributed to IMF's pool of financial resources—measured in special drawing rights (SDRs)—and the amount of its contribution determined each member's voting power and how much it could borrow from the Fund.

In 1989, IMF membership increased to 152, with the admission of Angola.

IMF facilities and policies

During fiscal year 1989, which covered the period 1 May 1988 to 30 April 1989, the Fund's Interim Committee of the Board of Governors encouraged the Executive Board—the Fund's permanent decision-making body—to strengthen surveillance in the areas of economic indicators and structural policies in order to improve the appropriateness, consistency and timely implementation of policies adopted by the industrial countries. IMF continued to monitor the international monetary system and to promote an adequate supply of international liquidity.

The Fund conducted consultations with member States annually or at intervals of up to 24 months to gather up-to-date economic and financial information, review economic policies and developments, examine members' fiscal, monetary and balance-of-payments accounts, and assess the impact of policies on exchange rates and external accounts. The Fund completed 99 full consultations in 1989—the fourth successive annual decline in the number of such consultations.

IMF's provision of financial resources to member States was contingent on certain conditions designed to encourage appropriate economic adjustment and ensure that the use of Fund credit was temporary and otherwise consistent with the Fund's purposes. Generally, the Fund provided direct financial support in the way of stand-by arrangements, covering adjustment programmes lasting one to two years, or extended arrangements, covering programmes of three years, with a possible one-year extension.

Low-income countries obtained concessional financial assistance under the structural adjustment facility (SAF), established in 1986, and the extended structural adjustment facility (ESAF), which became operational in 1988. At the end of fiscal year 1989, 62 countries were eligible to borrow under SAF and ESAF. As at 30 April 1989, commitments under SAF and ESAF totalled SDR 2.5 billion, up from SDR 1.4 billion a year earlier.

The Fund's compensatory and contingency financing facility was designed to help stabilize the earnings of countries exporting primary commodities. Under the facility's contingency mechanism, the Fund provided additional financing to countries whose structural adjustment programmes might be threatened by external disruptions that could cause economic variables to deviate from those originally forecast.

The Fund also provided emergency assistance to member countries to meet payments problems arising from sudden and unforeseen natural disasters. During fiscal 1989, emergency assistance was approved for Bangladesh for SDR 71.8 million and Jamaica for SDR 36.2 million.

Financial assistance

Commitments of Fund resources increased substantially during fiscal 1989. Amounts approved under stand-by, extended Fund facility, SAF and ESAF arrangements increased by about 50 per cent in fiscal 1989 to SDR 4.6 billion. The bulk of the 46 Fund arrangements in effect at the end of the fiscal year entailed relatively strict conditions, corresponding to drawings in the upper credit tranches.

While commitments of Fund resources increased, actual drawings in the General Department declined from SDR 4.1 billion in fiscal 1988 to SDR 2.1 billion in fiscal 1989. The Fund's concessional lending under SAF and ESAF increased from SDR 445 million to SDR 554 million, reflecting progress made by low-income member States in adopting structural adjustment programmes.

Repurchases and repayments in fiscal 1989 totalled SDR 6.7 billion, including advance repurchases by a number of countries whose external positions had improved. Outstanding Fund credit declined from SDR 29.5 billion as at 30 April 1988 to SDR 25.5 billion as at 30 April 1989.

During the fiscal year, 12 stand-by arrangements (Brazil, Cameroon, Guatemala, Hungary, Jamaica, Madagascar, Mali, Morocco, Nigeria, Pakistan, Trinidad and Tobago, Yugoslavia), one extended arrangement (Tunisia), four SAF arrangements (Equatorial Guinea, Lesotho, Mali, Pakistan) and seven ESAF arrangements (Bolivia, Gambia, Ghana, Malawi, Niger, Senegal, Uganda) came into effect. This resulted in a total of 14 stand-by arrangements, two extended arrangements, 23 SAF arrangements and seven ESAF arrangements in effect at the end of fiscal 1989.

Liquidity

The Fund's liquid resources consisted of usable currencies, SDRs and borrowed resources. As at 30 April 1989, the Fund's usable ordinary resources totalled SDR 42.9 billion, compared with SDR 41 billion a year earlier. The increase resulted from the inflow of repurchases in the General Resources Account, partially offset by the use of ordinary resources to repay SDR 0.8 billion of short-term borrowing.

IMF borrowed from official sources to supplement its resources and to finance members' purchases under the enlarged access policy. At the end of fiscal 1989, available borrowed resources amounted to SDR 3.3 billion, representing a decline of SDR 2 billion over the year before. The use of borrowed resources also declined. The Fund's liquid liabilities, comprising reserve tranche positions and loan claims, declined from SDR 31.3 billion at the end of fiscal 1988 to SDR 27.3 billion in 1989.

SDR activity

The overall level of SDR activity decreased in fiscal 1989 from the record high in 1988, but was nevertheless higher than in any other year except fiscal 1984. The number of institutions prescribed by IMF as eligible to accept, hold and use SDRs remained unchanged at 16 during the year. Holdings of SDRs by participants declined to SDR 19.9 billion from SDR 20.6 billion in 1988.

Almost half of all transfers of SDRs in fiscal 1989 took place between participants and the Fund. Receipts of SDRs by the General Resources Account declined to SDR 4.26 billion from SDR 4.61 billion in 1988. Transfers from the General Resources Account to participants fell by 30 per cent to SDR 4.05 billion. Participants and prescribed holders also used SDRs for a swap, settlement of financial obligations and Fund-related transfers other than those involving the General Resources Account. In addition, SDRs were used in other operations involving SAF, ESAF and Trust Fund loans, including their repayment and interest payments, payment of special charges and subsidy payments to members.

Policy on arrears

Overdue financial obligations remained a serious problem in 1989. The amount of overdue obligations at the end of the fiscal year totalled SDR 2.9 billion, while the amount in arrears by six months or more increased to SDR 2.8 billion due from 11 members, compared with SDR 1.9 billion due from nine members at the end of fiscal 1988. During the fiscal year, IMF declared one member ineligible to use the general resources of the Fund in the light of its overdue obligations. Earlier declarations of ineligibility with respect to seven members remained in effect.

To help eliminate overdue obligations, the IMF Board of Governors developed, and in some cases implemented, a strategy involving the prevention of new arrears, intensified collaboration to resolve existing cases of protracted arrears and remedial action to be taken if a country with protracted arrears failed to collaborate with the Fund.

Technical assistance and training

IMF provided technical assistance related to general economic policy, balance-of-payments adjustment programmes, legal matters, debt management, problems arising from inflation, exchange and trade systems, public finance issues, financial sector issues, accounting, statistics and data processing. During fiscal 1989, training through the IMF Institute in Washington, D.C., included 15 courses and three high-level seminars, attended by 559 participants. In addition, the Institute organized 27 briefings at IMF headquarters for 232 visiting officials.

During the year, the Fiscal Affairs Department assisted authorities in 57 countries through 34 staff missions and advice from 61 fiscal panel members. The Central Banking Department undertook 31 advisory missions and participated in five joint World Bank-Fund missions for 51 countries and four regional organizations. The Bureau of Statistics participated in 58 technical assistance missions to 34 countries and provided training at headquarters to officials from nine member States.

IMF-World Bank collaboration

IMF and the World Bank agreed in 1989 to define better the responsibilities stemming from the Articles of each institution and to build on previous agreements by adopting additional administrative and procedural steps. During the year, collaboration between the two institutions included joint participation in missions, attendance at each other's Executive Board meetings and participation in conferences and seminars. In addition, Fund staff attended a number of aid coordination meetings held under World Bank auspices and provided background documents for some of those meetings.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, the total full-time staff of IMF, including permanent and fixed-term employees, was 1,864, drawn from 107 countries.

Chapter X

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), an intergovernmental regulatory body whose objectives were set down in annexes to the 1944 Convention on International Civil Aviation, continued in 1989 to prescribe standards for and facilitate the safety and efficiency of civil air transport.

In 1989, traffic on the world's scheduled airlines increased by 5.4 per cent over 1988, to 224 billion tonne-kilometres. The airlines carried about 1.1 billion passengers, an increase of almost 2 per cent over 1988. As the number of seats offered increased at the same rate as passengers carried, the estimated passenger load factor remained at 68 per cent. Air freight increased by more than 7 per cent, to some 57 billion tonne-kilometres. Airmail traffic increased by 5 per cent.

The ICAO Assembly held its twenty-seventh session in Montreal, Canada, from 19 September to 6 October. It elected a new Council, reviewed ICAO's activities and approved a work programme.

The ICAO Council held three regular sessions in 1989. Concerned with acts of unlawful interference with international civil aviation, especially the destruction over Lockerbie, Scotland, of Pan American flight 103 in December 1988, the Council decided, in June, to include as a priority in the general work programme of the Legal Committee preparation of a new legal instrument regarding the marking of explosives for detectability.

In 1989, ICAO membership increased to 162 with the admission of Bhutan and Mongolia.

Activities in 1989

Air navigation

ICAO efforts during 1989 in the field of air navigation were mainly directed towards updating and implementing specifications, guidance materials and regional plans. Air navigation meetings covered a wide range of subjects and recommended changes to ICAO specifications contained in three annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation and one annex to the Procedures for Air Navigation Services. Revisions were made to regional plans setting forth air navigation facilities and services required in the nine ICAO regions. ICAO regional offices continued to assist States with implementation of regional plans.

During the year, special attention was given to technical projects dealing with accident investigation and prevention; aerodromes; aeronautical information services; airworthiness; audio-visual training aids; aviation medicine; flight safety and human factors; illicit transport of drugs; meteorology; obstacle clearance; personnel licensing and training; rules of the air and air traffic services; future air navigation systems; and telecommunications.

Air transport

ICAO continued its programmes of regulatory and economic studies; economic research, analysis and forecasting; air carrier tariffs; collection and publication of air transport statistics; airport and route facility management; and the promotion of greater facilitation in international air transport. Meeting in April, the Statistics Division reviewed all aspects of the ICAO statistics programme. An airport economics panel met twice in 1989 and worked on the development of an airport economics manual. A panel on fares and rates completed an extensive review of the organization's policy and guidance in that area and reached agreement on a detailed text of models of bilateral tariff clauses. In December, a technical advisory group undertook a preliminary review of specifications for machine-readable visas.

Legal matters

In November, the ICAO Council approved the inclusion of the subject of preparation of a new international instrument regarding the marking of explosives for detectability in the Legal Committee's work programme and decided to convene a special Legal Sub-Committee to consider the matter in Montreal in January 1990.

During the year, the following ratifications, adherences or successions to conventions and protocols on international air law concluded under ICAO auspices were received:

Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air (Warsaw, 1929)
Mauritius

Protocol to Amend the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air Signed at Warsaw on 12 October 1929 (The Hague, 1955)
Mauritius

Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft (Tokyo, 1963)

Technical assistance

During 1989, ICAO provided technical assistance to 141 countries in the form of resident expertise, equipment, fellowships, scholarships or short-term expert missions, and had resident missions in 52 of those countries during all or part of the year. The organization employed 459 experts from 51 countries, with 345 on assignment to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and 114 on Trust Fund projects. The total number of experts in the field at the end of 1989 was 191, compared with 200 at the end of 1988.

UNDP-funded country projects decreased slightly in 1989; expenditures on inter-country and inter-regional projects increased to $9,715,145 from $7,835,960 in 1988, while those on country projects fell to $26,529,022 from $30,302,277. During the year, country projects comprised 73 per cent of total UNDP expenditures.

Equipment purchases and sub-contracts continued to represent a substantial proportion of the technical co-operation programme. In addition to UNDP and Trust Fund projects, 57 Governments or organizations had registered with ICAO under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Service. Commitments for equipment and sub-contracts in 1989 totalled $19.02 million.

During the year, 1,456 fellowships were awarded; the average duration of a fellowship was 2.2 months and the average cost was $6,660.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, the total number of staff members employed in the ICAO secretariat stood at 897, comprising 379 in the Professional and higher categories and 518 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

Appropriations for the ICAO budget for 1989 totalled $34,108,000, as modified by the ICAO Council; actual obligations for the year amounted to $33,996,083.

NOTE: For further details on the activities of ICAO in 1989, see Annual Report of the Council—1989.

Chapter XI

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

The Universal Postal Union (UPU), established at Berne, Switzerland, in 1874, continued during 1989 to promote the organization and improvement of postal services and to develop international collaboration. At the request of its members, UPU also participated in various forms of postal technical assistance.

In 1989, UPU membership increased to 170, with the admission of Samoa.

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, the supreme legislative authority of UPU, composed of all member States, held its twentieth session in 1989 (Washington, D.C., United States, 13 November-14 December). The twentieth Congress adopted the Washington General Action Plan, a blueprint outlining commercial and operational strategies for the bodies of the Union and for postal administrations during 1990-1994. It also adopted several decisions on postal services, including a new terminal dues remuneration system, measures to give more freedom to postal administrations with regard to rate-fixing, updated postal financial services agreements, the structure of the Acts of UPU and technical co-operation.

Executive Council

The UPU Executive Council carries out the work of the Union between sessions of the Congress, held at five-year intervals, by maintaining close contact with postal administrations, exercising control over the International Bureau, promoting technical assistance and working with the United Nations and other organizations. The Council, at its 1989 session (Berne, 10-28 April), considered a variety of administrative matters and examined studies concerning international mail referred to it by the 1984 Congress.

The twentieth Congress elected a new Executive Council, which met for the first time in Washington, D.C. (11-12 December). Among its tasks were implementation of the Washington General Action Plan, postal service quality control at world level, the permanent project to modernize and enhance the quality of the international postal service, the second phase of the transfer to the Council of part of the legislative functions of the Congress and the structure of the technical Acts of the Union.

Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS)

The Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS), elected by the twentieth Congress, met in Washington, D.C. (12-13 December). Its 1989-1994 work programme adopted by the Congress comprised 17 studies and a number of sub-studies. A review of CCPS activities during the live-year period from 1984 to 1989 reflected a focus on issues such as competition, product marketing, responding to customer needs, monitoring the quality of service and development of new products and services.

Prior to the Congress, a meeting of CCPS/Electronic Transmission Standards Group was held (Berne, September) to study, among other issues, the consideration of proposals on telematics and bar codes to be submitted to the Congress, examination of the work of the International Air Transport Association/UPU Operations Working Group and future collaboration with the International Standards Organization.

International Bureau

The International Bureau, which functions as the UPU secretariat, continued to serve the postal administrations of member States as an organ for liaison, information and consultation. During the year, the Bureau collected, co-ordinated, published and disseminated international postal service information; conducted inquiries at the request of postal administrations; and acted as a clearing-house for settling certain accounts between members.

As at 31 December 1989, the UPU Bureau employed 143 permanent and temporary staff members, 59 of whom were in the Professional and higher categories and 84 in the General Service category. Also, as French remained the sole official UPU language, the Union employed 14 officials in the Arabic, English, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish translation services.

Technical co-operation

UPU technical assistance totalled about $3.9 million in 1989, of which some $2.5 million was financed by the United Nations Development Programme. Assistance was also provided through the UPU regular budget and its special fund, consisting of voluntary contributions in cash and kind from member States.

During the year, 101 expert and consultant missions were carried out and 311 training fellowships were granted, with the emphasis placed on the quality of postal services, primarily to the benefit of African countries.

The twentieth Congress decided to strengthen and develop technical assistance so as to help postal administrations implement the Washington General Action Plan. With a view to enhancing UPU's technical assistance, the Congress adopted six resolutions dealing with technical co-operation, focusing on UPU's technical assistance priorities and principles; financing technical assistance; technical co-operation among developing countries; an increased UPU presence in the field with regard to technical assistance; UPU action on behalf of the least developed countries; and guidelines to be emphasized in UPU technical assistance activities. The Congress also adopted a document on human resources and training.

Budget

Under the Union's self-financing system, contributions are payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. The budget approved for 1989 amounted to 22,205,265 Swiss francs net expenditure.

In 1989, the Executive Council approved the 1990 budget at a total of 24,389,550 Swiss francs net expenditure.

NOTE: For details of UPU activities, see Report of the Work of the Union, 1989, published by UPU.

Chapter XII

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU), which was founded in 1865 as the International Telegraph Union, became a specialized agency of the United Nations in 1947 to promote the development and efficient operation of telecommunications facilities world-wide. In 1989, ITU also continued to offer technical assistance in its areas of expertise and to encourage adoption of a global approach to telecommunications.

The ITU Plenipotentiary Conference at its thirteenth session (Nice, France, 23 May-30 June) adopted a new constitution and convention to supersede the convention adopted at Nairobi, Kenya, in 1982.

The ITU Administrative Council held its forty-fourth session (Geneva, 30 January-3 February; Nice, 24 May) and opened its forty-fifth session (Nice, 30 June), reviewing financial and administrative matters and approving the ITU budget for 1990. It also examined the report of the Advisory Board of the Centre for Telecommunications Development. At an extraordinary session (Geneva, November), convened in accordance with a decision of the Plenipotentiary Conference, the Council established a high-level committee to review the structure and functioning of ITU and decided to continue its forty-fifth ordinary session in Geneva from 11 to 22 June 1990.

ITU membership remained at 166 in 1989, with no new admissions during the year.

Conferences

The 1989 ITU Plenipotentiary Conference decided to hold two World Administrative Radio Conferences (WARC): the first in Spain in 1992 to deal with specific allocation issues, including mobile and mobile-satellite services and broadcasting, and a high-frequency broadcasting planning conference in 1993.

The second session of the Regional Administrative Conference for the planning of VHF/UHF (very high frequency/ultra high frequency) television broadcasting in the African Broadcasting Area and neighbouring countries (AFBC-2) (Geneva, 8-13 November) aimed to establish an agreement for television broadcasting in the various frequency bands. The session adopted Final Acts comprising an Agreement and an associated Plan containing the frequency assignments of 10,285 television stations in Africa, an appendix containing the assignments of 118 stations and annexes with technical data. The Agreement was to enter into force on 1 July 1992. In December 1989, African members of ITU agreed that the new Plan would replace the 1963 agreement for the African Broadcasting Area.

Radio and telecommunication activities

The final study group of the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR) prepared in 1989 171 new and revised recommendations for CCIR's seventeenth plenary assembly (scheduled for 1990), representing significant progress in the areas of television and sound broadcasting, fixed and mobile satellite systems and mobile communications. CCIR continued to provide technical services and advice for all administrative radio conferences. It assisted in two training courses, on telecommunication science and on theoretical and experimental radio propagation physics (Trieste, Italy, January/February), organized especially for developing countries. The CCIR secretariat published in the ITU Telecommunication Journal information pertaining to computer programs for radio frequency management submitted by Czechoslovakia, Japan, Poland, Sweden and the United States. Important modifications were made to the VHF and UHF broadcasting antenna system to permit calculations of more complex systems with up to 60 individual radiators.

The activities of the International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT) in 1989 focused mainly on preparing an 18,500-page blue book containing recommendations pertaining to its scope of work. Publication of the book, originally planned for 1989, was delayed due to the large volume of recommendations. CCITT study groups established working parties, designated rapporteurs and laid down guidelines for the study of questions assigned to them; in addition, they followed up on the work carried out before the 1988 CCITT plenary assembly and drew up nine draft recommendations which were transmitted to the members for approval. Three questions were approved for study. CCITT also helped select experts for technical cooperation projects.

At the end of the year, 229 private operating agencies and scientific or industrial organizations, as well as 37 international organizations, were registered as participants in the work of CCITT, in addition to the ITU member administrations.

Following the closure of its laboratory, the CCITT secretariat was restructured slightly.

Major activities of the ITU International Frequency Registration Board (IFRB) during 1989 included follow-up action on decisions of the May Plenipotentiary Conference, as well as various radio conferences of previous years. The Board also undertook activities related to implementation of further modules for the IFRB Frequency Management System (FMS) and continuing development of the system with a view to improving and rationalizing services.

Telecommunication training and development

During the year, 582 ITU expert missions were carried out under various technical co-operation programmes. In addition, 686 fellows were undergoing training abroad and equipment valued at $9,786,755 was delivered, mainly to telecommunication training centres. Total assistance amounted to $32.47 million for 189 projects in 70 countries. Of those, 150 were country projects, while 37 were regional and 2 were interregional projects. Expenditures by region were as follows: $12.9 million for 70 projects in Africa, $7.7 million for 41 projects in the Americas, $7.2 million for 48 projects in Asia and the Pacific, $2.9 million for 17 projects in the Middle East, $0.4 million for 11 projects in Europe, and $1.3 million for interregional projects.

A main goal of ITU technical co-operation continued to be developing regional communications networks and their integration into the world-wide telecommunication system, in accordance with objectives established by ITU's World and Regional Plan Committees. For example, the pan-African telecommunication network (PANAFTEL), aimed at interconnecting the countries of Africa without the need for extra-continental transit, continued to make steady progress, except in the Central African subregion. Of the 45 countries south of the Sahara, 41 had satellite earth stations, as well as overland and/or submarine cable networks. Additional funds were needed to bridge some 7,600 kilometres of land links, 7 international switching centres and 4 earth stations.

Other objectives of ITU technical co-operation included strengthening the telecommunication technical and administrative services in developing countries and developing human resources required for telecommunications. Particular focus was placed on efforts to strengthen national telecommunications technical and administrative services.

By the end of the year, 630 training courses were available through the ITU sharing system and 244 more were being developed. The computerized data base of training opportunities was updated, reaching a total of 589 openings for trainees. Regional training meetings, symposia and seminars were held for Europe and the Arab States (Darmstadt, Federal Republic of Germany, September), for eastern and southern Africa (Nairobi, Kenya, November), for the countries of the EUROTELDEV project (Zruec, Czechoslovakia, September), and for the least developed countries (Geneva, September). In addition, some 430 participants took part in ITU training workshops, and nine missions to assist and advise on training matters were carried out in Cape Verde, Colombia, Ecuador, Guinea-Bissau, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Swaziland and Viet Nam.

The ITU Centre for Telecommunications Development, which became operational in 1987, completed five projects during 1989 on: rural/urban network planning in Egypt; provincial/rural telecommunications in the Gambia; telecommunication feasibility and development in Nepal; rural telecommunications development in the United Republic of Tanzania; and establishment of a nucleus for the training centre in Democratic Yemen. Missions were undertaken to the Gambia, Malta, Mozambique, the United Republic of Tanzania and Uruguay.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, the total number of ITU staff at headquarters or in the field (excluding staff on short-term contracts and project staff) was 745. Of those, 9 were elected officials, 589 had permanent contracts and 147 had fixed-term contracts; 74 nationalities were represented in those posts subject to geographical distribution.

Budget

The ITU budget for 1989 totalled 138,839,800 Swiss francs (SwF), including SwF 112,269,200 for ordinary budget expenditures, SwF 1,802,900 for regional administrative conferences, SwF 9,667,700 for technical co-operation and SwF 15,100,000 for publications. Total expenditures were offset by the equal amount of income, of which SwF 114,072,100 came from contributions by member States and private operating agencies, SwF 9,667,700 from the United Nations Development Programme and funds-in-trust for technical co-operation, and SwF 15,100,000 from the sale of publications.

Chapter XIII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

The World Meteorological Organization (WMO), established in 1950 to facilitate world-wide co-operation related to meteorological information and the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, agriculture and other human activities, continued during 1989 to implement its scientific and technical programmes along the lines indicated by its highest body, the World Meteorological Congress, in May 1987.

The forty-first session of the 36-member Executive Council (Geneva, 5-16 June) made several important decisions related to climate change and protecting the global atmosphere, including establishment of the Global Atmosphere Watch early warning system. On 8 September, WMO and the Government of Japan signed an agreement designating the Japan Meteorological Agency as the WMO World Data Centre for Greenhouse Gases, to commence operations in 1990.

WMO was also involved in planning the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction whose aim was, during the 1990s, to reduce the impact of extreme natural calamities through co-ordinated global action.

As at 31 December 1989, WMO membership had increased to 161—156 States and 5 territories—with the admission of Antigua and Barbuda.

World Weather Watch

As the core programme of WMO, the World Weather Watch (www) Programme continued to co-ordinate observations, data processing and the exchange of data, weather analyses and forecasts between meteorological centres. The www essential elements were the Global Observing System (GOS), the Global Telecommunication System (GTS) and the Global Data-processing System.

On 21 April, the UN Postal Administration issued a set of six stamps to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of www.

Operational WWW Systems Evaluations (OWSES) were continued to ensure the smooth incorporation of new technologies and procedures into www and the efficient transfer of knowledge and technology to developing countries. Following the successful OWSE for the North Atlantic, planning for OWSE-Africa, aimed at improving the telecommunication system over the continent, began. During 1989, equipment was installed in Ethiopia, Kenya and the Sudan, with further installations scheduled for the early part of 1990.

The activities of GOS continued under its two subsystems, one surface-based and the other space-based. In 1989, there were some 10,000 stations on land, 7,000 ships and buoys at sea, 3,000 aircraft and a system of four polar-orbiting and five geostationary satellites. GOS provided member States with quantitative information, derived from instrument measurements, such as atmospheric pressure, humidity, air temperature and wind velocity, and qualitative information on the state of the sky, forms of clouds and types of precipitation.

Several new satellites were added to GOS in 1989, including METEOSAT-4, the first of a new series of three satellites operated by the European Organisation for the Exploitation of Meteorological Satellites, which was launched on 6 March, and the Geostationary Meteorological Satellite (Japan) (GMS-4), which was launched on 6 September.

GTS, consisting of 245 circuits interconnecting 188 meteorological centres, was further developed in 1989 by the implementation of new satellite circuits, upgrading of the data-signalling rate on several circuits (up to 64 kbit/s) and the introduction of advanced communication protocols. The support of GTS for exchanging data related to other international programmes was maintained or enhanced, including, in particular, the exchange of data related to the early notification of a nuclear accident (International Atomic Energy Agency) and exchange of seismic data contributing to the large-scale experiment organized by the Conference on Disarmament.

WWW Data Management

WWW Data Management provided support functions for the overall management of meteorological data and products of the whole www system, for the most economical use of resources and for the monitoring of data and products both in respect of availability and quality.

A scheme for real-time monitoring of the quality and availability of data and verification of products was established and lead centres were nominated to provide regular feedback to members. A WMO-European Centre for Medium-Range Weather Forecasts (ECMWF) workshop on data quality control procedures was held (Reading, United Kingdom, 6-10 March) to exchange views and recommend procedures for real-time quality control and monitoring.

One of the most important Data Management projects was the introduction and refinement of binary formats for the representation of meteorological data and data fields, as they allowed for faster transmission and processing by computer and reduced storage requirements. A number of refinements to those formats were proposed by the Subgroup on Data Representation, which met in May. Standards for the representation and presentation of meteorological data were the subject of a WMO/ECMWF workshop held in December.

The concept of distributed data bases was developed in October at a meeting of experts, which defined principles and proposed appropriate strategies for their implementation.

WWW Operational Information Service

As in the previous year, the www Operational Information Service continued to collect from and distribute to WMO members and www centres detailed information on available facilities, services, data and products. In view of the progressive automation of www centres, it was becoming increasingly important that basic directories of fixed and mobile stations, composition of bulletins, telecommunication arrangements, lists of stations for global and regional exchange, etc., were kept constantly up to date.

Instruments and methods of observation

The Commission for Instruments and Methods of Observation (tenth session, Brussels, Belgium, 11-22 September) considered the preparation of standard algorithms for surface and upper-air measurements, and publications in the Instruments and Observing Methods Series. It also addressed preparation of the sixth edition of the WMO Guide to Meteorological Instruments and Methods of Observation.

Tropical Cyclone Programme and cyclone research

Under the general component of the Tropical Cyclone Programme (TCP), major emphasis in 1989 was placed on the acceleration of technology transfer and on training, through the provision of expert services, training workshops, publications, exchange programmes and other arrangements for technical co-operation among developing countries.

Under the regional component of TCP, activities were carried out through five regional tropical cyclone bodies for the mitigation of damage resulting from tropical cyclones and associated floods and storm surges. Major accomplishments included a complete review and revision of implementation plans by four of the regional bodies in the light of the objectives of the WMO second long-term plan for the years 1988-1997. Agreement was reached on the establishment of tropical cyclone advisory centres in each of the areas of the five regional tropical cyclone bodies.

With the assistance of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the WMO Voluntary Co-operation Programme and/or bilateral arrangements, activities were continued to improve warning systems through the rehabilitation of weather radars, the upgrading of telecommunications, the transplantation of software in regional computer network projects and relevant training. For the south-west Indian Ocean, which had so far had to rely on national efforts alone, further steps were taken to obtain external (regional) assistance.

The second WMO international workshop on tropical cyclones (Manila, Philippines, 27 November-8 December) considered ways of using research results to alleviate damage caused by hazardous weather in the tropical regions. Among meetings organized under TCP during 1989 were the sixteenth session of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP)/WMO panel on tropical cyclones (New Delhi, India, 21-27 February); a meeting on hurricanes (San Andrés, Colombia, 11-17 April); a workshop on hurricane analysis, forecasting and warning (Miami, Florida, United States, 19-28 April); the ninth session of the Tropical Cyclone Committee for the South-West Indian Ocean (Harare, Zimbabwe, 9-14 October); and the twenty-second session of the ESCAP/WMO Typhoon Committee (Tokyo, Japan, 30 October-6 November).

World Climate Programme

The Commission for Climatology, which played the leading role in organizing the World Climate Data Programme and the World Climate Applications Programme, at its tenth session (Cascais, Portugal, 3-14 April), emphasized that it would contribute to the study of climate change by improving and enlarging the data base for research, assisting in the regional-scale interpretation of climate model predictions and investigating the impacts of climate changes on human life and activities in different parts of the world.

During the year, climate computing (CLICOM) systems were installed in 32 countries, bringing the total number of members having such systems to 84. CLICOM training seminars were held in Barbados, Mali, the Philippines and Portugal, in addition to 26 installation training sessions in other countries. INFOCLIMA, a world climate data and information referral service, provided information on the availability of climate data at various data centres around the globe.

World Climate Impact Studies Programme

The World Climate Impact Studies Programme, organized by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) in co-operation with WMO, continued to develop methods for assessing the economic and social impacts of climate variations, with special regard to agricultural planning, water-resources management and the development of appropriate energy policies. In 1989, UNEP continued to update an inventory on climate impact activities on a global scale and encourage the development of national climate impact programmes and their co-ordination in an international network. Under the programme, a regional seminar on climate impact assessment techniques was organized in Cairo, Egypt, as were workshops on drought forecasting and early warning systems in Ethiopia and Kenya.

World Climate Research Programme

Strong emphasis was placed in 1989 on reinforcing activities under the World Climate Research Programme (WCRP)—a joint undertaking of WMO and the International Council of Scientific Unions—aimed at improving predictions of climate change and monitoring the Earth's climate system. Progress was made in the global energy and water cycle experiment, whose objectives were to observe and model the hydrological cycle and energy fluxes in the atmosphere and at the Earth's surface. The WCRP international satellite cloud climatology project, which assembled cloud and radiance data, was extended until 1995.

Progress was made in implementing the global precipitation climatology project, aimed at providing the first climatological record of monthly mean rainfall totals over the whole Earth (including the oceans) by combining rainfall estimates from satellite observations of clouds with rain-gauge measurements; all the participating centres achieved operational status during 1989 and the first year's data were being processed. The Joint Scientific Committee for WCRP, at its tenth session (Villefranche, France, 13-18 March), decided to constitute a working group on modelling of greenhouse gases.

Three working groups of the WMO/UNEP Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change were charged with assessing information on climate change; assessing the environmental and socio-economic impacts of such change; and formulating response options to address such change. At its second session (Nairobi, Kenya, 28-30 June), the Panel established a committee to promote more effective participation of developing countries in its activities.

Research and development

In response to demonstrated concerns of Governments about the atmospheric pollution arising from human activities, the WMO Executive Council approved measures for strengthening the organization's role in the scientific aspects of that global problem. WMO continued to monitor the global atmosphere using the Background Air Pollution Monitoring Network and the Global Ozone Observing System. The success of those systems motivated WMO to develop a new Global Atmosphere Watch (GAW), which was established by the Executive Council in June to provide atmospheric composition information to complement the weather and climate information provided by www. Some members were already providing vital, centralized data-collection points and services for GAW.

Among the meetings organized by WMO during 1989 were the fifth WMO scientific conference on weather modification and applied cloud physics (Beijing, China, 8-12 May); a conference on mountain meteorology and alpine experiments (Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Federal Republic of Germany, 5-8 June); a conference on measurements and analysis of carbon dioxide data (Hinterzarten, Federal Republic of Germany, 16-21 October); and a technical conference on the monitoring and assessment of the troposphere (Sofia, Bulgaria, 23-27 October).

Applications of meteorology

Agricultural meteorology

The Agricultural Meteorology Programme assisted members in developing sustainable agricultural systems and in improving productivity, quality, cost-effectiveness and efficiency in the use of water, labour and energy, conserving natural resources and reducing pollution caused by agricultural chemicals.

A symposium on the agrometeorology of rain-fed, barley-based farming systems (Tunis, Tunisia, 6-10 March) recommended several new activities to help agricultural research and development planning. Seminars on the use of agrometeorological data and information to assess potential primary production of natural pastures in the rainy season (Syrian Arab Republic, January; Lesotho, November; Botswana, December) helped to estimate the optimum animal-carrying capacity during the dry season. Participants from eastern and southern Africa attended a drought preparedness and management training seminar organized by WMO in co-operation with the United States

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (Gaborone, Botswana, 25-29 September). WMO, together with other organizations, pursued the recommendations of a locust-control workshop to combat the worst locust plague in 30 years affecting many countries in Africa.

WMO promoted the use of the INSTAT software package in many developing countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America for analysing agro-meteorological data using hand-held computers.

Marine meteorology

The Marine Meteorology and Associated Oceanographic Activities Programme continued to provide services in support of marine users. During the year, a global ocean-observing system was established, based on a proposal approved by the WMO Executive Council and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission Assembly.

The Commission for Marine Meteorology (tenth session, Paris, 6-17 February) considered such topics as ocean waves, marine pollution emergency response operations, the potential impact of data obtained from the next generation of oceanographic satellites, training facilities and reorganizing the broadcast of high seas forecasts and warnings to be compatible with the International Maritime Organization's global maritime distress and safety system.

Aeronautical meteorology

WMO co-sponsored with the American Meteorological Society the third international conference on the aviation weather system (Anaheim, California, United States, 29 January-3 February). Meteorologists from 24 countries participated in a seminar on aeronautical meteorology with emphasis on satellite applications (Tallahassee, Florida, United States, 16-27 October), organized by WMO and the United States National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. A meeting attended by WMO, the International Civil Aviation Organization and aviation user groups (Geneva, 2-6 October) suggested that the aeronautical meteorological codes, which had come into force some 20 years earlier, were outdated and needed to be changed.

Hydrology and water resources

In 1989, there were nearly 50 hydrometeorological services among the 161 WMO members, while, among the remainder, where there were separate meteorological and hydrological services, a large proportion of the meteorological products were provided for hydrology and water resources purposes. The Advisory Working Group of the Commission for Hydrology and its three working groups met during the year, addressing the principal parts of WMO's Hydrology and Water Resources Programme: data acquisition and processing systems; hydrological forecasting and applications for water management; and operational hydrology, climate and the environment.

A conference on climate and water (Helsinki, Finland, 11-15 September) examined the impact of climate change on water supply, flood potential, irrigation and drainage, water pollution, navigation, health and the hydrological consequences of sea-level rise. Following a meeting on hydrological aspects of accidental pollution of water bodies (Kiev, Ukrainian SSR, 24-28 April), a practical guide was being prepared for the use of hydrological services and water-supply authorities in the event of nuclear or chemical accidents.

Throughout the year, the Global Run-off Data Centre (Koblenz, Federal Republic of Germany), established in 1988, continued to collect run-off data from the world's hydrological services. At the end of 1989, the data base contained records for 2,268 stations from 120 countries which could be used for studying the world water balance and chemicals discharged into the oceans. During the year, WMO executed some 20 UNDP-funded hydrology technical assistance projects and 20 other projects combining meteorology and hydrology.

Two projects were initiated to improve and update hydrological instrument networks—a basic hydrological network assessment project, and an intercomparison of operational hydrological network design techniques—whose results were to be presented at a workshop in 1991 in order to update WMO guidance on network design. A WMO co-sponsored meeting on intercomparison of methods and models for estimation of areal evapotranspiration (Zurich, Switzerland, 24-27 October) discussed plans for a comparison of some 44 methods for assessing areal evapotranspiration using data from at least 20 countries.

Education and training

The Executive Council in June endorsed the recommendations presented by its panel of experts on education and training (thirteenth session, Cairo, 5-9 February) relating to training and fellowships. A second global survey of members training requirements was undertaken. During the year, 428 people participated in 14 WMO training events in 12 countries, and another 20 training events were co-sponsored or supported by WMO. A computerized data base was being developed to incorporate information on training facilities and programmes in approximately 100 countries. UNDP and other organizations assisted WMO in granting 238 training fellowships.

Technical cooperation

During 1989, the technical co-operation programme of WMO—financed by UNDP (56 per cent), the WMO Voluntary Co-operation Programme (VCP) (25 per cent), trust funds (16 per cent) and the WMO regular budget (3 per cent)—provided assistance totalling $30 million to 130 member States. With UNDP financing, advisory missions to 33 countries were undertaken. Twelve new projects, supported by UNDP, were approved. Under the WMO regular budget, 90 countries received assistance and 24 fellowships were granted. As at 31 December 1989, 143 VCP projects were being implemented in 67 countries. The estimated value of contributions in the form of equipment, services and fellowships during the year amounted to some $7.9 million.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, the total number of full-time staff employed by WMO (excluding 48 professionals on technical assistance projects) on permanent and fixed-term contracts stood at 290. Of those, 134 representing 50 nationalities were in the Professional and higher categories and 156 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

The year 1989 was the second year of the first biennium of the tenth financial period (1988-1991), for which the 1987 WMO Congress had established a maximum expenditure of 170 million Swiss francs (SwF). It had authorized additional expenditures for increases in salaries and allowances. Additional expenditures of no more than SwF 800,000 were authorized to meet urgent, unforeseen programme activities.

The regular budget for 1988-1989 was SwF 82,634,400, including supplementary estimates. Actual expenditure amounted to SwF 79,121,366. Unpaid contributions in respect of assessments for the biennium amounted to SwF 19,269,593 as at 31 December 1989. The 1989 budget for technical co-operation activities, financed from overhead allocations and other extrabudgetary sources, was SwF 3,111,100.

At its June 1989 session, the Executive Council approved a regular budget of SwF 87,871,700 for 1990-1991. Supplementary estimates of SwF 4,800,000 were added later in the year.

Chapter XIV

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

The International Maritime Organization (IMO), which began work in 1959 as the Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization, continued during its thirtieth anniversary year in 1989 to focus on developing international shipping standards and treaties with the aim of improving maritime safety and preventing pollution from ships.

In April, an international conference at IMO headquarters in London adopted the International Convention on Salvage to replace the 1910 convention on the law of salvage. A set of amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS), 1974, entered into force in October 1989. During the year, the IMO Maritime Safety Committee adopted another series of amendments, which were expected to enter into force on 1 February 1992.

In September 1989, the International Maritime Prize for 1988 was awarded to Emil Jansen of Norway, who had been involved in IMO's work since 1966 and had served as Chairman of the Maritime Safety Committee until his retirement in 1988. The prize is awarded annually to the individual or organization judged to have made the most significant contribution to IMO objectives.

The theme for World Maritime Day, which was celebrated at IMO headquarters on 2 September, was "IMO—The First Thirty Years".

In October, the IMO Assembly appointed William A. O'Neil of Canada as IMO Secretary-General for a four-year term beginning on 1 January 1990.

During the year, IMO membership increased to 134, with the admission of Malawi and Monaco. The organization also had one associate member, Hong Kong.

Activities in 1989

IMO Assembly

The IMO Assembly, at its sixteenth biennial session (London, 9-19 October), approved the IMO work programme and budget for the 1990-1991 biennium and the long-term work plan up to 1996. It also elected a new 32-member IMO Council—the IMO governing body between sessions of the Assembly.

Among its major actions during the session, the Assembly adopted Guidelines for the Management of Safe Ship Operation and Pollution

Prevention, designed to provide shipping companies with a framework for the proper development, implementation and assessment of safety and pollution-prevention management. The Guidelines addressed responsibilities of the management, master and crew, and stressed the importance of emergency drills.

The Assembly decided to hold in November 1990 a conference on oil pollution preparedness and response, to adopt a framework convention for international co-operation in combating major oil pollution incidents. It amended Regulation 10 of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1972, to clarify the use of inshore traffic zones in the vicinity of traffic separation schemes. It also adopted six resolutions designed to assist implementation of the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System, to be introduced during the 1990s following the adoption of amendments to SOLAS.

The Assembly adopted a new Code for the Construction and Equipment of Mobile Offshore Drilling Units, to supersede the first code adopted in 1979 and for application to units built on or after 1 May 1991. Other resolutions dealt with the observance of safety zones around offshore structures; guidelines and standards for the removal of unwanted offshore installations; stability criteria for twin-pontoon column-stabilized semi-submersible units; and criteria for a range of positive stability after damage or flooding for such units.

Prevention of pollution

The new International Convention on Salvage provided for a salvor to be rewarded not only for saving the ship and/or its cargo but also for preventing a major pollution incident. The Convention was to enter into force one year after 15 States had ratified or acceded to it.

Also in 1989, the IMO Maritime Safety Committee adopted the twenty-fifth amendment to the 1965 International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code to extend its application to marine pollutants. In October, the North Sea was designated as a "special area" where the environment was under particular threat, under a new amendment to annex V of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto (MAR-POL 73/78). The amendment would ban, in addition to plastics, the disposal into the North Sea of dunnage and wastes which were not ground up. In addition, IMO's technical assistance programme for 1989 included a number of projects designed to combat marine pollution.

Ship security and safety at sea

The IMO Maritime Safety Committee, at its fifty-seventh session, adopted several amendments to SOLAS, 1974. The main changes concerned chapters II-1 and II-2 of the Convention, concerning, respectively, ships' construction and fire protection, detection and extinction. One of the more important amendments to chapter II-1 was designed to reduce the number and size of openings in watertight bulkheads in passenger ships and to ensure they were closed in the event of an emergency. Regulations introduced as part of amendments to chapter II-2 included improvements to fixed-gas fire-extinguishing systems, smoke detection systems, arrangements for fuel and other oils, and the location and separation of spaces.

On 22 October 1989, another series of amendments to SOLAS, designed to improve the safety of ferries, entered into force. The new regulations, added to SOLAS chapter II-1 (ships' construction, subdivision, stability, machinery and electrical installation), required, among other measures, new leakage detection systems and the installation of emergency lighting for roll-on/roll-off passenger ships.

Training facilities

Total enrolment at the World Maritime University in Malmö, Sweden, was 204 students in 1989, double the number of 1988. More than 100 countries had sent students to the University since its opening in 1983. The University was established under IMO auspices to provide two-year advanced training in maritime safety administration, the technical management of shipping companies and maritime education.

During the year, two new institutions established in 1988—the International Maritime Academy and the IMO International Maritime Law Institute—were inaugurated. Located in Trieste, Italy, the Academy received nearly 100 applications from more than 60 countries for 20 places available in its first series of short-term training courses in maritime search and rescue administration, MARPOL 73/78 port State control, and marine accident and incident investigation. The Institute, in Valletta, Malta, provided suitably qualified persons, especially from developing countries, with one-year advanced training and research in international maritime law.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, there were 267 full-time staff members employed at the IMO secretariat in London. Of those, 106 were in the Professional and higher categories and 161 were in the General Service and related categories. In addition, there were 11 Professional and 14 General Service staff employed on technical assistance projects.

Budget

Due to non-payment of contributions by some member States, the IMO budget for 1989 was reduced from 11,053,100 pounds sterling to 10,564,700 pounds. As a result, IMO had to cut its 1989 meetings programme from 24.5 weeks to 12.5 weeks. Contributions from member States for 1989 totalled 10,237,100 pounds. The IMO Assembly in October requested the IMO Council to make proposals for payment of arrears by instalment and for effective application of article 56 of the IMO Convention, which would prohibit any member State in arrears for more than one year from voting in the Assembly or other IMO bodies, unless the Assembly waived the provision. Also requested was a review of the apportionment system of contributions. The Assembly approved budgetary appropriations of 25,410,600 pounds for 1990-1991 (12.1 million pounds for 1990 and 13.3 million pounds for 1991).

Chapter XV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

In 1989, the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued development co-operation, standardization and registration activities to promote respect for the protection and use of intellectual properties, including industrial property and copyrights. During the year, the organization's development co-operation programme further expanded, as did activities related to norm-setting in the exchange of industrial property information and the international registration of marks, patents and industrial designs. During 1989, diplomatic conferences convened by WIPO adopted two new treaties—on the International Registration of Audiovisual Works and on Intellectual Property in Respect of Integrated Circuits—and a new Protocol to the Madrid Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Marks.

The governing bodies of WIPO and the unions administered by it held their twentieth series of meetings (Geneva, 25 September-4 October), and adopted a substantial programme of work and a budget for the WIPO International Bureau for the 1990-1991 biennium. New activities to be undertaken during that period included examination or preparation of: a new protocol to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; a new treaty on the settlement of disputes between States in the field of intellectual property; a new treaty or revision of the Lisbon Agreement on the Protection of Appellations of Origin and Their International Registration; model laws on intellectual property protection in respect of integrated circuits, as well as on counterfeiting and piracy; and a mechanism to provide services for the resolution of disputes between private parties over intellectual property rights.

During 1989, WIPO membership increased to 126 States, with the accession of Democratic Yemen, Liberia, Madagascar, Malaysia and Thailand to the 1967 Convention establishing WIPO, amended in 1979. The number of States adhering to treaties administered by WIPO also increased: to 100 parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property; 84 to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; 24 to the Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Micro-organisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure; 35 to the Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations; 43 to the Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms against Unauthorized Duplication of their Phonograms; 34 to the Nice Agreement Concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purposes of the Registration of Marks; and 43 to the Patent Co-operation Treaty (PCT).

Activities in 1989

Development co-operation activities

During 1989, WIPO continued to assist developing countries in preparing legislation and establishing or modernizing institutions, particularly those related to patent documentation and information services. A total of some 60 developing and industrialized countries and 23 organizations, foremost among them the United Nations Development Programme, provided support for WIPO's development co-operation programme, which benefited 117 developing countries, 17 intergovernmental organizations and one regional commission. During the year, there was a sturdy growth in activities in favour of developing countries. The number of training fellowships granted rose to 376 and over 4,000 people benefited from some 100 courses, workshops, seminars and study visits organized at the national, regional and global levels. Advice on legal matters and institution building was provided to some 80 countries, while 285 advisory missions were undertaken to some 75 developing countries.

A World-wide Symposium on the International Patent System in the Twenty-first Century, organized by WIPO and the Chinese Patent Office (Beijing, November), brought together several hundred participants from more than 50 countries to discuss future trends and developments.

Under the WIPO medal awards programme, instituted in 1979 to promote inventive and innovative activities, particularly for developing countries or to their benefit, WIPO awarded in 1989 37 medals to inventors from Algeria, Benin, Bulgaria, China, Cuba, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, France, Iraq, Italy, Japan, Malaysia, Mali, the Niger, Nigeria, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea, the USSR, the United States, Viet Nam and Yugoslavia. From the start of the programme until 31 December 1989, a total of 199 medals had been awarded to inventors and promoters of inventive activity from 49 countries.

Setting of norms and standards

The major achievements of WIPO in 1989 towards raising the standards of protection for intellectual property rights were the adoption of two new treaties and a protocol. The Treaty on the International Registration of Audiovisual Works, adopted on 18 April, provided for the establishment, under WIPO auspices, of an international register of audiovisual works to record statements concerning who was the owner of what rights in which countries. By 31 December, the Treaty had been signed by 17 States. The Treaty on Intellectual Property in Respect of Integrated Circuits was adopted on 26 May to ensure the protection of layout designs and provide for the settlement of possible disputes between contracting parties. The Protocol Relating to the Madrid Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Marks, adopted in June, introduced changes to the Madrid system intended to remove certain impediments to its wider acceptance. By 31 December, the Protocol had been signed by 28 States.

The harmonization of patent laws advanced considerably during the year. Work on the harmonization of trademark laws began in November when a new committee of experts held its first session. Important progress was made in the committee of experts on model copyright provisions and completion of the work on the text was expected in 1990.

Registration activities

Patent Co-operation Treaty. During the year, 14,874 international patent applications were filed under PCT, a 25 per cent increase over 1988. The PCT Union Assembly decided in October to convene a working group in 1990-1991 to consider further expansion of the internationalization of the grants of patents.

Madrid Agreement. A total of 19,488 registrations and renewals were applied to the International Register of Marks in 1989, an increase of 11 per cent over 1988. In addition, there were 20,380 changes and 38,366 refusals or invalidations recorded during the year. In October, the Madrid

Union Assembly approved an average 8 per cent increase in registration fees, effective as of 1 April 1990. It also approved establishment of a working group in 1990-1991 to prepare new draft regulations and other measures required by the new Protocol to the Madrid Agreement.

Hague Agreement. In 1989, there were 3,176 international industrial design deposits under the Hague Agreement, reflecting a 17.5 per cent increase over 1988. With such growth expected to continue, the Assembly of the Hague Union decided in October to begin computerizing operations during 1990-1991. The Assembly also agreed on convening a working group to consider revising the Agreement or adding a protocol to it, in order to introduce further flexibility and other measures to encourage adherence to the Agreement and to make it easier to use by applicants.

Secretariat

On 1 January 1989, WIPO employed 319 staff members. Of these, 107 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 40 States) and 212 were in the General Service category. In addition, during the year, 149 experts' missions were undertaken by WIPO consultants for technical assistance projects and 222 lecturers participated in meetings sponsored by WIPO.

Budget

The principal sources of income for WIPO derived from international registration services (primarily under PCT and the Madrid Agreement) and contributions from member States. During 1988-1989, WIPO income totalled 137,415,000 Swiss francs (SwF), including SwF 45,617,000 from contributions, SwF 78,133,000 from registration services and SwF 13,665,000 from the sale of publications and other miscellaneous sources. During the same period, total expenditures amounted to SwF 108,739,000.

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

In 1989, the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued to provide concessional financial assistance to agricultural projects in low-income, food-deficit countries to increase food output while retaining environmental sustainability and focusing on support for poor rural women. The Fund paid particular attention to sub-Saharan Africa to generate durable benefits for a large number of the poor in the most deprived areas of the continent.

The year marked several important milestones for IFAD. Negotiations on the third replenishment of the Fund's resources were successfully completed and rebuilding of the Fund's lending levels was further reinforced. A wide range of additional commitments under the Special Programme for Sub-Saharan African Countries Affected by Drought and Desertification (SPA) took place and a new generation of grants for agricultural research on environmentally sound methods of smallholder crop and animal development was introduced. Particularly important in terms of IFAD's preparedness for the coming decade were the gains made in furthering the specificity of its approach to rural poverty alleviation.

The IFAD Executive Board held three regular sessions (April, September, December) and one special session (June) during the year, approving loans for 23 projects, including 7 loans under SPA, as well as 31 technical assistance grants. The Board approved a programme of work for 1990 at 214.4 million special drawing rights (SDR) and endorsed a budget of $38.85 million, plus a contingency of $500,000. It also approved the programme of work in 1990 for SPA (SDR 43.3 million) along with administrative expenses of $3.82 million with a contingency of $150,000.

IFAD membership remained at 143 in 1989, with non-original membership pending on two States, Malaysia and Myanmar. Of the current members, 21 were in category I (developed countries), 12 in Category II (oil-exporting developing countries) and 110 in Category III (other developing countries).

Resources

Successfully completed in 1989, the third replenishment of IFAD's resources generated some $570 million, well above the $476 million pledged for the second replenishment. Member States in the first two categories provided core financing, while the amount pledged in convertible currency by the third category of members rose nearly threefold. The industrialized countries of Category I responded to that increase by matching that raise threefold in their own contributions. External co-financing contributed $186.5 million, while IFAD itself provided $121.1 million for 14 projects.

The Executive Board expressed concern about the delay in deposits of instruments of contribution and payments against pledges to IFAD's second replenishment, bearing in mind that the Governing Council called for the completion of all payments by 31 December 1987.

In 1989, IFAD continued to enter into special funding agreements with member Governments with a view to involving them more actively in those areas of its operations that were of particular interest to them. The bulk of such supplementary funding provided to the Fund was intended to support activities in selected projects. Among the contributions received during the year were $1.5 million from Italy for a technical assistance grant, $1.2 million from Denmark, $1.1 million from the Netherlands, $0.4 million from Australia and $0.3 million from Finland.

Other supplementary funding was provided by Governments and private donors to finance studies, training and workshops on specific issues, such as women's role in development and the environment, and for promotional and educational programmes.

Activities

In 1989, IFAD provided SDR 204.1 million (approximately $259.9 million) in 25 loans and SDR 9.7 million ($12.5 million) in 31 technical assistance grants, making a total of SDR 213.8 million (approximately $272.4 million) for the year under both the Regular Programme and SPA, compared with SDR 183.6 million ($242.6 million) in 1988. Average loan size rose by 27 per cent in 1989.

Agricultural and rural development projects accounted for 27 per cent and 25.6 per cent, respectively, of the projects approved. A common theme running through all components in IFAD projects was the strengthening of women's role in development; almost every project approved in 1989 provided substantial resources to increase the farm productivity and off-farm incomes of women.

IFAD technical assistance activities continued the trend towards greater specificity. Grants for agricultural research, in particular, focused on the development of environmentally safe and sustainable technologies which stressed the needs of resource-poor farmers while protecting their natural resource base.

The number of IFAD beneficiary countries rose to 93 in 1989, with loans being extended for the first time to Angola and Gabon. The beneficiary countries were spread across the developing world, with Africa accounting for 40, Asia 16, Latin America 24 and the Near East and North Africa 13.

By the end of the year, IFAD assistance to Africa under the Regular Programme amounted to SDR 690 million ($806.8 million) in loans and grants for 89 projects in 39 countries. In addition, under SPA, the Fund provided SDR 152.4 million ($193.1 million) for 20 projects in 16 countries. IFAD's total assistance to the region amounted to SDR 842.4 million ($999.9 million), or 35.3 per cent of the total project cost of $2,828.8 million.

In 1989, under the Regular and Special Programmes combined, Africa received SDR 106.6 million in assistance for 12 projects in 11 countries.

By the end of 1989, IFAD assistance to Asia amounted to SDR 872.8 million for 71 projects in 16 countries. Of the total project cost of $4,070.9 million, the Fund contributed 25.4 per cent ($1,033.2 million). During the year, the region received SDR 48.5 million in assistance for five projects in live States. The total cost of those projects amounted to $205.7 million, of which IFAD's share was $62.3 million, or 30.3 per cent. Three were primarily credit projects with rural development components, and two were to a large extent concerned with environmental preservation and maintaining an ecological balance.

IFAD assistance to Latin America and the Caribbean amounted to SDR 326.8 million ($393.5 million) for 46 projects in 24 countries by the end of 1989; of the total project cost of $1,327.8 million, the Fund contributed $393.5 million, or 29.6 per cent. In 1989, under the Regular Programme, the region received SDR 13.5 million in assistance for two projects—involving irrigation in Haiti and rural development in Guatemala—at a total cost of $41.1 million, of which IFAD's share was $17.3 million, or 42.1 per cent.

By the end of the year, IFAD assistance to the Near East and North Africa under the Regular Programme amounted to SDR 390.4 million ($460.8 million) for 40 projects in 13 countries; of the total project costs of $2,836.1 million, the Fund contributed $461.1 million, or 16.3 per cent. In addition, under its Special Programme, IFAD provided SDR 16.3 million ($20.5 million) for three loans and one grant in three countries. Under the Regular and Special Programmes combined, the region received in 1989 SDR 37.3 million in assistance for four projects—agricultural and rural development projects in Djibouti, Somalia and Turkey, and an agricultural credit project in Yemen—at a total cost of $114.8 million, of which IFAD funded $47.7 million, or 41.6 per cent.

Secretariat

At the end of 1989, IFAD's staff totalled 198, of whom 80 drawn from 39 member States were in the Professional category, and 118 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

Total revenue under the Regular Programme for 1989 was $97 million, consisting of $70.5 million in investment income, including gains on the sale of investments of $0.1 million, and $26.5 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total expenses for the year amounted to $29.5 million, compared with a budget before contingency of $35.8 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $67.5 million.

Total revenue under SPA for 1989 was $12.6 million, consisting of $12.5 million of investment income and $0.1 million from interest and service charges on loans. Expenses for the year totalled $3.1 million, compared with a budget before contingency of $4.2 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $9.5 million.

Chapter XVII

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

In 1989, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued its activities in the areas of industrial operations, strategies and promotion. In addition, special programmes calling for multidisciplinary or interdepartmental approaches were designed to support industrial growth and restructuring, which included the first Industrial Development Decade for Africa 1980-1990 (IDDA), assistance to the least developed countries (LDCs), industrial co-operation among developing countries, integration of women in industrial development and co-operation with industrial enterprises and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

A streamlined vision for the industrialization of developing countries was presented at the third session of the General Conference, which took place at Vienna from 20 to 24 November. Attended by 129 countries and some 700 delegates, the Conference addressed such topics as environmental protection; regional industrial programmes for Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, and Asia and the Pacific; industrialization of LDCs; new concepts and approaches for co-operation in industrial development; mobilization of financial resources; and the 1990-1991 programme and budget.

As of 31 December 1989, 151 States were members of UNIDO.

Industrial strategies and operations

A total of 1,896 technical assistance projects with a total value of $133.8 million were implemented by UNIDO in 1989. Africa received 36.7 per cent; Asia and the Pacific received 32.6 per cent; the Arab States (including the African Arab States) received 14.4 per cent; the Americas (Latin America and the Caribbean) received 9 per cent; and Europe received 3.2 per cent. Interregional and global projects accounted for 14.3 per cent.

Major emphasis continued to be placed on the analysis and formulation of the UNIDO perspective on global industrialization, embodied in Industry and Development: Global Report, a publication issued to member States prior to the General Conference in November, which contains a review of the latest trends in the global industrial landscape and of the near-term prospects for industrialization in developing countries. Various policy-oriented documents were also prepared for the Conference, including reports on external debt and industrial development, as well as on the restructuring of world industrial production and redeployment.

Implementation of industrial operations

Agro-industries. Technical co-operation expenditures for agro-industries amounted to $14.6 million, some 60.5 per cent of which was financed from resources of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). Of a total of 162 projects under implementation, Africa accounted for 47.1 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 39.3 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 10 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 9.5 per cent; Europe, 1.5 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 1.6 per cent.

Projects related to agro-industries continued to focus on the production of value-added, agro-based products. Industrial promotion focused on investment, the System of Consultations, and the development and transfer of technology. Four Consultations were convened, on the food-processing industry, the electronics industry, small- and medium-scale enterprises and the capital goods industry. Measures were taken to integrate the consultation process more effectively into other activities of UNIDO, and emphasis was also placed on follow-up activities encompassing the whole of UNIDO as well as other organizations and member States.

Chemical industries. Expenditures for technical co-operation in the chemical sector amounted to $30.2 million, with a total of 356 projects. Some 58 per cent of the total implementation was financed from UNDP resources. Of the total expenditure, Africa accounted for 40.5 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 43.3 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 6.2 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 25.9 per cent; Europe, 4.1 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 4.9 per cent.

The UNIDO activities in the biennium 1988-1989 reflected the adoption of a more integrated approach to the chemical industry, which aimed to create more efficient and competitive products. Increased attention was given to environmental and energy aspects of the industry, such as recycling, waste utilization and waste minimization. Projects associated with the environmental impact of energy production totalled $2 million. Initial steps were taken to strengthen all of these activities by giving special attention to some of the advances in biotechnology and new materials science, from which many of the non- and low-waste technologies are derived.

Metallurgical industries. In 1989, technical co-operation expenditures in metallurgical industries amounted to $9.1 million, with 85 per cent of the total implementation financed from UNDP resources. The number of projects totalled 130, of which Africa accounted for 23.1 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 59.7 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 6.5 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 9.4 per cent; Europe, 2.1 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 7.4 per cent. Special attention was given to the introduction and adoption of new technologies in technical co-operation activities to ensure rationalization of the production process, improve product quality and the management of material and energy resources and to encourage the development of solutions to pressing environmental problems through increased waste utilization. Projects aimed at technology transfer, rehabilitation, restructuring and modernization were strongly promoted, and technical co-operation activities related to the establishment of small-scale metallurgical operations were increased.

Engineering industries. Technical co-operation expenditures for engineering industries amounted to $17.2 million. About 82 per cent of the total implementation was financed from UNDP resources. Of the 210 projects, Africa accounted for 34.7 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 42.4 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 9.1 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 13.3 per cent; Europe, 8.5 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 1.2 per cent.

The focus of these activities remained on rural development in the metal sector, the application of electronic high technology to industry, the use of computer-aided manufacturing (CAM) techniques in the machine tools sector, spare-parts manufacture in the transport industries and equipment development in the energy sector. Activities related to materials and technology for the packaging industry were also initiated, using an integrated approach to serve the industry as a whole, particularly the agro-industrial sector. Repair and maintenance continued to represent a major component of all technical assistance in engineering industries. The servicing of agricultural tools and machinery remained one of the most acute problems facing many developing countries. Therefore, UNIDO established specific maintenance and repair centres and workshops in certain African countries to help local industries maintain production equipment through the introduction of maintenance schemes and local production of spare parts.

Industrial planning. This area encompassed a total of 113 technical co-operation projects, with expenditures amounting to $8.1 million, of which 83 per cent was financed from UNDP resources. Of the total expenditure, Africa accounted for 56.9 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 15.1 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 19 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 6.4 per cent; Europe, 0.3 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 4 per cent.

There was an increase in project approvals due to greater demand for assistance in the area of planning. The quantitative targets for the sub-programme of industrial planning were exceeded, and new approaches were adopted and activities were redirected towards strategic management, enhancement of the productive performance and decision-support systems. Emphasis was placed on efficient co-operation between the public and the private sector to help developing countries adjust to rapid structural change. The introduction of industrial automation technologies, as well as the strengthening of productive performance in the capital-goods sectors continued to underlie the industrial strategies of many developing countries.

Institutional infrastructure. Expenditures in the area of institutional infrastructure totalled $15 million in 1989, of which 81 per cent was funded from UNDP resources. A total of 208 projects were implemented or under implementation. Africa accounted for 40.6 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 22.5 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 15.9 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 16 per cent; Europe, 1.6 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 7.2 per cent. A comprehensive and integrated approach to technical co-operation projects was adopted and applied at various levels in order to render assistance more effective. The promotion and development of small- and medium-scale industries continued to receive high priority as a major programme element. UNIDO continued to assist a number of developing countries in setting up national chambers of commerce and industry in response to the growing demand for help in the industrialization process.

Industrial management and rehabilitation. Technical co-operation expenditures in this sector amounted to $7.5 million, with 82 per cent coming from UNDP resources. A total of 103 projects were under implementation. Of the total expenditure, Africa accounted for 33.6 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 37.7 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 19.7 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 13 per cent; Europe, 4.8 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 0.8 per cent.

In these programmes, emphasis was placed on improving the quality of technical co-operation.

Many large-scale projects dealt with the upgrading and modernization of production and management capability. Increased attention was given to project management in establishing new production facilities, factors in plant performance and managerial improvement such as maintenance and accounting and the modernization of plants and enterprises in general. In addition, industrial management and rehabilitation were addressed by many projects related to specific sectors.

Industrial human resource development. Expenditures for fellowships and training in all technical co-operation projects implemented by UNIDO amounted to $20.2 million. Of that total, $13.6 million was spent on fellowships and study tours and $6.6 million on group training activities and meetings. Technical co-operation expenditures for training that received substantive support from the former Industrial Training Branch (renamed the Industrial Human Resource Branch in 1989) amounted to $6.4 million. About 11 per cent of the expenditure in this area was financed from UNDP resources. A total of 179 projects were implemented. Africa accounted for 42.5 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 3.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 2.2 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 0.6 per cent; Europe, 4.6 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 47.1 per cent.

During 1989, UNIDO training programmes responded to the growing needs of the developing countries for assistance in assimilating new and advanced technology. Special attention was given to strengthening the training capacity of institutions and industry in this area through the instruction of trainers in computer-based advanced training systems and the preparation of related materials. Most of the activities were undertaken in Africa within the framework of IDDA.

Feasibility studies. A total of $7 million was spent on feasibility studies in 1989. Some 64 per cent of the total was financed from UNDP resources, and 125 projects at different stages of implementation were undertaken. Of the total expenditures, Africa accounted for 51.7 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 19.5 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 1.3 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 29.3 per cent; and global and interregional projects, 6.9 per cent.

An increasing number of requests for project appraisals was received from industrialized countries in 1989, which were carried out on a commercial basis against payment of a fee. Continued emphasis was given to the promotion of institution-building to improve capability at the national level for industrial feasibility studies. Thirty-live pre-investment studies were undertaken in developing countries. A quarter of pre-investment studies led to actual investment during the period. In response to the pressing need for developing countries to upgrade the level of skills required for the preparation of pre-investment studies, 50 seminars were carried out in which 900 participants were given training.

Industrial promotion

In 1989, industrial promotion focused on reinforcing links in the areas of consultations, the development and transfer of technology and industrial investment.

System of Consultations. The UNIDO System of Consultations is a mechanism for achieving the goals set out in the Lima Declaration and Plan of Action on Industrial Development and Co-operation,^a specifically, restructuring world industry and increasing the share of developing countries in world production. Four consultations were held during 1989: the Consultation on the Food-Processing Industry with emphasis on fruit and vegetable processing (Tbilisi, USSR, 18-22 September); the First Consultation on Small- and Medium-Scale Enterprises including Co-operatives (Bari, Italy, 9-13 October); the First Consultation on the Electronics Industry (Valletta, Malta, 6-10 November); and the Third Consultation on the Capital Goods Industry with emphasis on rural transport equipment (Vienna, 4-8 December). Measures were taken to integrate the Consultation process more effectively into other activities of the organization and to enhance mutual support between the Divisions.

Several follow-ups to earlier consultations were held in 1989: the Regional Expert Group Meeting on the Development of the Non-ferrous Metals Industry in Latin America (Cordoba, Argentina, March); the Expert Group Meeting on the Pesticides Industry (Hungary, March); and the preparation for an interregional meeting on co-operation among developing countries for the development of the pharmaceutical industry. In addition, a number of technical co-operation proposals were developed as a general follow-up to consultations.

Preparatory meetings were held for consultations in 1990 on the building materials industry, emphasizing the transfer of technology within African and Asian countries, and on the food-processing industry and the wood and wood products industry. Preparatory work and substantive documentation for the selection and finalization of issues for a regional consultation on the petrochemical industry in the Arab countries, scheduled for 1991, were also undertaken.

Development and transfer of technology. A wide variety of programmes were carried out for the development and transfer of technology in 1989. A programme of action was developed by the Conference on National and International Co-operation for the Telecommunications Industry in Africa, held in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, in March. The Conference reinforced the need for UNIDO involvement and for international co-operation. Two five-year projects totalling $42 million were approved by the Preparatory Committee on the Establishment of the International Centre for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology (IGGEB), in order to increase research work in this field.

In the area of new and renewable sources of energy, special attention was given to new developments in solar energy and proposals were evaluated with emphasis on international co-operation. The Second Meeting of the Consultative Group on Solar Energy Research recommended that assistance continue to be provided to developing countries in the formulation of viable projects and studies on market development in solar energy devices.

The activities of the networking system of the Industrial and Technological Information Bank (INTIB) were further developed to provide more efficient direct services to end-users, in particular small- and medium-scale enterprises. Participants in the network included over 70 national focal points.

Industrial investment programme. UNIDO was increasingly called upon to assist developing countries in identifying sound investment projects and finding local investors and overseas partners to implement the projects. As in earlier years, this form of industrial co-operation went beyond investment to include the areas of marketing expertise, plant and equipment, technical know-how and licences, management support and training of local staff. A steady growth in technical co-operation activities of that type reflected the search by developing countries for new sources of financing, particularly foreign direct investment.

The Industrial Investment Division was restructured in 1989 to give it a clearer regional focus, directed at promoting programmes at the sectoral and subsectoral levels.

Industrial Development Decade for Africa (1980-1990)

The mid-term evaluation of the first Industrial Development Decade for Africa (IDDA) was completed and submitted to the African Ministers of Industry at their ninth meeting (Harare, Zimbabwe, May). This report, tracing a new course of development and emphasizing the need for Africa to shift dependence from external to internal engines of growth, played a major role in determining the approach to be adopted in the second Decade covering the period 1991-2000.

Technical assistance under IDDA addressed three main areas: the establishment of pilot and demonstration plants, the accelerated development of human resources and institutional infrastructure for industrial development.

In the course of the biennium 1988-1989, 34 projects valued at $4,065,974 were initiated and implemented. Short-term advisory services were used to contribute to the integrated programming exercise begun in 1989, which was intended to identify projects for funding. Under the technical assistance component, 24 programmes were drawn up for 13 countries, with an additional 22 programmes in preparation. The programmes were related to the priority area set for the biennium, namely agro-industries and related sectors such as fertilizers, pesticides and agricultural machinery.

In addition, UNIDO initiated meetings and workshops in order to secure co-operation within the framework of IDDA and to decide on future industrial development activities. As in previous years, close co-operation was maintained between the secretariats of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) and UNIDO.

Assistance to LDCs

UNIDO participated in various preparatory meetings for the Second United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, which was scheduled to take place in Paris in 1990. As its contribution to the Conference, UNIDO was updating the review of the manufacturing sector in LDCs, which was prepared in 1988. Under an initiative to increase its technical assistance to LDCs, such assistance rose by 31.1 per cent. UNIDO also organized and financed visits by officials from seven countries to its headquarters in order to understand better the perceptions of individual countries. In addition, 15 programme-review and 14 project-formulation missions were undertaken during the year. To review ongoing programmes and define priority areas for UNDP action during its fifth programming cycle, UNIDO participated in UNDP country-programme mid-term reviews.

LDCs also participated in and benefited from UNIDO activities organized at the regional and subregional levels.

Industrial co-operation among developing countries

UNIDO diversified its activities related to industrial co-operation among developing countries in 1989. Programmes for economic and technical co-operation among developing countries (ECDC/TCDC) were focused on enterprise-to-enterprise co-operation, and increased attention was given to the follow-up of preliminary ECDC/TCDC agreements. Promotional activities for co-operation among developing countries in industrial development were pursued, including the examination of some 30 projects by a Solidarity Ministerial Meeting (Conakry, Guinea, December). A number of projects were implemented that resulted from previous preliminary agreements and recommendations, such as co-operation between the Republic of Korea and Turkey on the use of high-sulphur lignite without the resultant excessive pollution.

In 1989, UNIDO continued to make efforts to increase the use of resources from developing countries by awarding contracts to their organizations and institutions and by hiring their experts. Efforts were also made to ensure that bidder lists included companies from developing countries as much as possible. In 1989, 37 per cent of contracts went to organizations and institutions in 34 developing countries,

Integration of women in industrial development

The number of technical co-operation projects specifically targeting women increased in 1989. Twenty-two projects with a total value of over $4.5 million were under implementation, and a further 21 projects with a total value of $7 million were in preparation. Strong emphasis was placed on the development of a more systematic approach to the integration of women into UNIDO activities, especially into the process of industrial development. Another area of concentration was the organization of training programmes specifically for women in fields such as management, industrial project preparation, evaluation, financing and investment promotion, as well as food-processing technology. First steps were taken towards the goal of more visibly integrating women into general projects and programmes.

Environment

In response to 1987 General Assembly resolutions^b on the environmental perspective to the year 2000, measures were undertaken to develop a comprehensive UNIDO environment programme through which environmental aspects could be systematically integrated, as appropriate, in the activities of the organization. Co-operation with other UN organizations on environmental matters was given high priority in 1989, for example in the framework for activities developed with UNEP. In 1989, a total of 41 environment-related projects were implemented and 77 were in preparation.

Secretariat

As of 31 December 1989, there were 1,358 staff members serving at UNIDO headquarters, 442 of whom were in the Professional and higher categories, and 916 in the General Service and related categories. Six hundred and ninety-eight staff members were women; 81 were Professionals and 617 were in other grades. In 1989, a total of 2,131 appointments of project personnel were processed (an increase of 221 from 1988), and a total of 1,061 expert appointments were extended. UNIDO was represented in the field by 37 Senior Industrial Development Field Advisers (SIDFAs) in developing countries, who worked with UNDP resident coordinators. At the end of 1989, 25 UNIDO Country Directors were financed by UNDP, nine from the operational budget and three from voluntary contributions from Germany and Italy. They were assisted by 69 Junior Professional Officers (JPOs) financed by 12 member Governments: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

Budget

For 1989, total expenditures were $231.5 million, comprising $133.8 million for technical co-operation programmes and $97.7 million for headquarters expenditures. Financing came from member States, either directly through their assessed contributions and their voluntary contributions to the Industrial Development Fund (IDF) and trust funds, or indirectly via voluntary programmes such as UNDP. Non-governmental organizations, including enterprises being assisted on a self-financing basis, may also contribute to IDF and trust funds.

Headquarters expenditures, for example, activities other than technical co-operation projects, were financed largely from the regular budget. In 1989, that amount ($82.1 million) was supplemented by $15.6 million derived from a 13 per cent reimbursement for overheads on technical assistance delivery. At its second session, the General Conference approved the regular budget of $154.3 million for the biennium 1988-1989.

Technical co-operation activities were largely financed by the UNDP indicative planning figure. Other sources of financing included the UNDP Special Services programme (set up to respond to specific short-term, urgent requests relating to industrial development), trust funds and self-financing arrangements, IDF and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control.

Chapter XVIII

Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment (Havana, Cuba, November 1947–March 1948) drew up a charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) and established an Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO). The members of the Conference's Preparatory Committee also negotiated tariffs among themselves and drew up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). Since the charter itself was never accepted, ITO was not established. GATT—the only multilateral treaty embodying reciprocal rights and obligations laying down agreed rules for international trade—entered into force on 1 January 1948 with 23 contracting parties; ICITO provided the GATT secretariat.

As at 31 December 1989, the number of contracting parties to GATT remained at 96. Tunisia had acceded provisionally. The contracting parties accounted for nearly 90 per cent of world trade; 28 other countries, to whose territories GATT had been applied before their independence, maintained a de facto application of GATT pending final decisions as to their future commercial policy.

Multilateral trade negotiations

Uruguay Round

Trade Negotiations Committee

In April 1989, the Trade Negotiations Committee, the body responsible for overseeing the Uruguay Round—GATT's eighth "round" of multilateral trade negotiations, launched in 1986^a—met in Geneva at the senior official level to complete the mid-term review of the Round, which had started in 1988.^b In the agricultural negotiations, the Committee approved a detailed negotiating mandate for long-term reform and a short-term freeze on government support and aid. The Committee also defined the issues to be covered by the negotiations on trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights and agreed that substantive negotiations on textiles and clothing and on safeguards should begin in earnest. Following the completion of the mid-term review, the GATT Council of Representatives adopted a new trade policy review mechanism and detailed measures to reform the dispute settlement procedures. It agreed that the Contracting Parties would meet at the ministerial level at least once every two years.

The Surveillance Body, responsible for overseeing the implementation of commitments on standstill and roll-back contained in the 1986 Ministerial Declaration on the Uruguay Round,^c received no notifications of alleged breaches of the standstill commitment during 1989. With regard to the roll-back commitment, 20 requests had been made since 1986, most of which were addressed to the European Community (EC), Japan and the United States, but the frequency of consultations on those requests greatly diminished in 1989. The Surveillance Body also provided a forum for early-warning discussions on 30 cases of impending or threatened trade measures.

Group of Negotiations on Goods

The Group of Negotiations on Goods oversaw the work of the 14 negotiating groups that were established in 1987 to conduct the work outlined in part I of the 1986 Ministerial Declaration. The activities of the negotiating groups, which began to reconvene following the mid-term review in April, dealt with tariffs; non-tariff measures; natural-resource-based products; textiles and clothing; agriculture; tropical products; the review of GATT articles; multinational trade negotiation agreements and arrangements; safeguards; subsidies and countervailing measures; trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights; trade-related investment measures; dispute settlement; functioning of the GATT system; and services.

Implementation of the Tokyo Round agreements

The Tokyo Round—the multilateral trade negotiations that preceded the Uruguay Round—established a number of agreements covering non-tariff measures and certain sectoral matters as well as securing major tariff cuts. Each of the agreements had an overseeing committee or council.

Those bodies dealt with tariffs; anti-dumping practices; subsidies and countervailing measures; government procurement; technical barriers to trade; customs valuation; import licensing; bovine meat; dairy products; and civil aircraft. Settlement of disputes became an increasingly important role for some of those committees.

Other GATT activities

Contracting Parties regular session

The Contracting Parties held their forty-fifth regular session on 4 and 5 December 1989, focusing on the Uruguay Round and the importance of its success. Involvement in GATT was seen as of particular importance for the countries of Eastern Europe, which were initiating widespread political and economic reform.

Council of Representatives

The Council of Representatives, GATT's highest body between sessions of the Contracting Parties, held a special meeting on 11 December 1989 to review major activities of GATT and developments in the trading system. The Council noted some favourable developments in 1989 to which the Uruguay Round negotiations had contributed, such as the implementation of the trade policy review mechanism, the introduction of trade liberalization reform in a number of countries and an increased interest in GATT membership.

The GATT Director-General reported that, despite the contracting parties' determination to conduct trade policies within the GATT rules and framework, there were a number of actions that had been taken outside. At the end of 1989, there were approximately 249 discriminatory export restraint-type arrangements in force involving GATT contracting parties (excluding bilateral quantitative restrictions on textiles and clothing imposed under the Multifibre Arrangement). A majority of the restraints involved food and other agricultural products, textiles and clothing, footwear and machine tools.

Under the trade policy review mechanism agreed at the April mid-term review meeting, the Council was to examine, on a regular basis, each member's trade policies and practices. In December, it conducted a comprehensive examination of the trade policies of Australia, Morocco and the United States, each based on two reports, one prepared by the country concerned and the other by the GATT secretariat.

Trade and development

In 1989, the Committee on Trade and Development continued to review, discuss and negotiate issues of trade interest to developing countries. It reviewed implementation of part IV of the General Agreement and of the Enabling Clause, an agreement resulting from the Tokyo Round, which provided for differential and more favourable treatment of developing countries in various areas of trade policy. With regard to trade between developed and developing countries, the Committee exchanged views on interlinkages between trade, money and finance, and the scope for credit and recognition for trade liberalization measures undertaken by developing countries.

In September, the Sub-Committee on Trade of Least Developed Countries reviewed issues in the Uruguay Round of particular interest to that group of countries. The Sub-Committee's Chairman proposed that the Enabling Clause be opened up further for the least developed countries (LDCs) by exempting them from quantitative restrictions and other non-tariff measures falling outside the scope of the multilateral trade negotiations agreements.

Conciliation and settlement of disputes

In April, the Council of Representatives revised GATT's dispute-settlement mechanism, as agreed at the mid-term review meeting in 1988. A number of disputes were taken up by dispute-settlement panels: a United States complaint about Canada's import restrictions on ice cream and yoghurt; a complaint by Chile about EC import restrictions on dessert apples; a United States complaint about EC import restrictions on apples; a United States complaint about payments and subsidies paid by EC to processors and producers of oilseeds and related animal-feed proteins; an Australian complaint about United States import restrictions on sugar; an EC complaint about United States restrictions on the importation of sugar and sugar-containing products; a United States complaint against EC restraints on exports of copper scrap; a complaint by Canada about Japan's tariff on imports of spruce, pine and fir dimension lumber; three separate complaints by Australia, New Zealand and the United States against the Republic of Korea's restrictions on imports of beef; a United States complaint about Norway's import restrictions on apples and pears; a complaint by Brazil about United States import restrictions on certain Brazilian products; a complaint by Canada about United States countervailing duty on Canadian pork, and an EC complaint regarding section 337 of the United States Tariff Act of 1930.

Among other matters dealt with during the year were a streamlined mechanism for reconciling the interests of contracting parties in the event of trade-damaging acts and the establishment of a working group on the export of domestically prohibited goods and other hazardous substances.

Technical assistance

In 1989, the GATT secretariat's Technical Cooperation Division organized or participated in 18 national trade policy seminars in developing countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America. It also organized a special training course on GATT dispute-settlement procedures and practices (Geneva, November). The Statistics and Information Systems Division organized a seminar/workshop on the integrated data base (Geneva, October), which was attended by some 70 representatives from 34 countries.

Training programmes

Between 1955 and the end of 1989, a total of 1,146 officials from 114 countries and 10 regional organizations had attended GATT trade policy courses. Twenty-four fellowships were granted for each course. Two such courses, one in French and the other in English, were given in 1989.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre, established by GATT in 1964 and jointly operated with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development since 1968, continued to provide trade information and trade promotion advisory services to developing countries. The Centre's technical cooperation activities amounted to $29.6 million in 1989. Some 136 national, 54 regional and 107 interregional projects were under implementation, covering one or more of the Centre's eight programme areas: institutional infrastructure for trade promotion at the national level; specialized national trade promotion services; export market development; commodity promotion; training; import operations and techniques; trade promotion for LDCs; and activities with national chambers of commerce.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1989, the GATT secretariat employed 376 staff members—159 in the Professional and higher categories, 213 in the General Service category and 4 ungraded staff members.

Financial arrangements

Member countries of GATT contributed to the budget in accordance with a scale assessed on the basis of each country's share in the total trade of the contracting parties and associated Governments. The budget for 1989 was 64,861,000 Swiss francs.

(1)Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

(2)On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. By a telegram of 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

(3)On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya Which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an Independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

(4)Formerly Burma: name changed on 18 June 1989.

(5)Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971, and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom, to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS.

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and
4. To be a center for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles.

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco, or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of cooperation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international cooperation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international cooperation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions, and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1(b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1(c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full Years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23¹

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two Years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one Year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.)

Voting

Article 27²

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.
3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.
2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.
3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.
2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims, or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

²Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965. (The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.
2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.
3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfillment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.
2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.
3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional subcommittees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.
2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defense shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.
2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.
3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.
4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COOPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in cooperation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61³

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may coordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connection with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

³Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973. (The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.)

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING

NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories, and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to cooperate with one another and,

when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and

- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighborliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
- b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79, and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defense and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
 - b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
 - c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.
2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations,

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfillment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfillment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, October 30, 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109⁴

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

⁴Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968. (The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-

General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labor cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy despatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.

2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.

2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.

2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.

3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.

4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.

5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.

6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.

7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their traveling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.

2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- the interpretation of a treaty;
- any question of international law;
- the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favor of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V

AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Appendix III

Structure of the United Nations

General Assembly

The General Assembly is composed of all the Members of the United Nations.
