"The General Assembly,

"Reaffirming the Declaration on the Right to Development,⁴ which it proclaimed at its forty-first session, and noting that the Declaration represents a landmark and meaningful instrument for countries and people worldwide;

"Reaffirming also the commitment contained in the Charter of the United Nations to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

"Recalling its previous resolutions and those of the Commission on Human Rights relating to the Right to Development,

"Also recalling the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,⁵ which reaffirms the right to development as a universal and inalienable right and an integral part of fundamental human rights and reaffirms that the human person is the central subject of development,

"Emphasizing that development-oriented approaches to the promotion of human rights, as expressed by the Declaration on the Right to Development, constitute an important contribution to the development and strengthening of alternative approaches to the promotion of all human rights,

"Further recalling that in order to promote development equal attention and urgent consideration should be given to the implementation, promotion and protection of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and recognizing that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, and that the universality, objectivity, impartiality and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues must be ensured,

"Also recalling the principles proclaimed in the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development of 14 June 1992,⁶ noting the deliberations of the General Assembly at its nineteenth special session, and expressing concern that five years after the adoption of the Rio Declaration, the overall trends for the realization of sustainable development and its impact on the right to development are worse today than they were in 1992 and the commitments made then have not been fulfilled,

"Mindful that the Commission on Human Rights continues to consider this matter, which is directed towards the implementation and further enhancement of the right to development,

"Noting the increasing need for coordination and cooperation throughout the United Nations system for a more effective promotion and realization of the right to development,

"Recognizing that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has important roles to play in the promotion, protection and realization of the right to development, including to seek enhanced support from the relevant bodies of the United Nations system for this purpose,

"Reaffirming that lasting progress towards the implementation of the right to development requires effective development policies at the national level, as well as equitable economic relations and a favourable economic environment at the international level,

"Also recognizing that the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development requires effective development policies and support at the international level through the effective contribution of States, organs and organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations active in this field,

"Expressing its concern at the lack of participation of developing countries in the decision-making process at the global level on macroeconomic policy issues with far-reaching impacts on the world economy, with negative implications for the exercise of the right to development in developing countries,

"Reaffirming the need for action by all States at the national and international levels to realize all human rights, and the need for relevant evaluation mechanisms to ensure the promotion, encouragement and reinforcement of the principles contained in the Declaration on the Right to Development,

"Also reaffirming that all States should promote the establishment, maintenance and strengthening of international peace and security, and to that end should do their utmost to achieve general and complete disarmament under effective international control and to ensure that the resources released by effective disarmament measures are used for comprehensive development, in particular that of developing countries,

"Noting that aspects of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development⁷ adopted by the Conference on 13 September 1994, the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development⁸ adopted by the Summit on 12 March 1995, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action⁹ adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women on 15 September 1995, and the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements and Habitat Agenda¹⁰ adopted by the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) at Istanbul on 14 June 1996 are relevant to the universal realization of the right to development, within the context of promoting and protecting all human rights,

"Affirming the need to apply a gender perspective in the implementation of the right to development, inter alia, by ensuring that women play an active role in the development process,

"Expressing concern that more than 10 years after the adoption of the Declaration on the Right to Development, obstacles to the realization of the right to development still persist at both the national and international levels, and that new obstacles have emerged to the rights stated thereto, including the negative effects of globalization on the right to development, particularly in developing countries,

"Expressing further concern that the Declaration on the Right to Development is insufficiently disseminated and should be taken into account, as appropriate, in bilateral and multilateral cooperation programmes, national development strategies, and policies and activities of international organizations,

"Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the right to development,¹¹ prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/99,

"1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

"2. Reaffirms the importance of the right to development for every human person and all peoples in all countries, in particular the developing countries, as an integral part of fundamental human rights and its contribution to the alternative approaches to the fuller enjoyment of all human rights whose full potential has still to be adequately realized;

"3. Recognizes that the Declaration on the Right to Development⁴ constitutes an integral link between the Universal Declaration on Human Rights¹² and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action⁵ through its elaboration of a holistic vision integrating economic, social and cultural rights with civil and political rights;

"4. Reiterates its commitment to implementing the results of the World Conference on Human Rights, which reaffirms that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, and that democracy, development, and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms are interdependent and mutually reinforcing;

"5. Also reiterates that lasting progress towards the implementation of the right to development requires effective development policies at the national level, as well as equitable economic environment at the international level;

"6. Stresses that the selective interpretation and application of human rights should not be used as an instrument of trade protectionism or leverage for narrow economic or commercial ends, or to constrain unfairly the legitimate development programmes of countries;

"7. Requests the Secretary-General, in implementing his measures and proposals for the reform of the United Nations,¹³ to place emphasis, as a matter of high priority, on the promotion and realization of the right to development;

"8. Calls upon the Commission on Human Rights to consider carefully the report of the second session of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts to elaborate a strategy for the implementation and promotion of the right to development, as set forth in the Declaration on the Right to Development, in its integrated and multidimensional aspects, bearing in mind the conclusions of the Working Group on the Right to Development established by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1993/22 of 4 March 1993, and the conclusions of the World Conference on Human Rights and of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women and the United Nations Conference on Settlements (Habitat II);

"9. Notes the efforts made by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights within her mandate, and encourages her to continue the coordination of various activities with regard to the implementation of the right to development, including a programmatic follow-up to the establishment in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights of a separate new branch with staff dealing specifically with the promotion and realization of the right to development, as well as with commensurate levels of services and resources as part of the effort to implement the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, bearing in mind that the actions taken so far to that effect have been insufficient, to the detriment of the priority treatment that the right to development ought to be given;

"10. Requests the Commission on Human Rights at its next session to:

"(a) Examine ways and means to provide the Declaration on the Right to Development with a profile commensurate with its importance;

"(b) Also examine the desirability of the inclusion of the Declaration on the Right to Development in the International Bill of Human Rights, on an equal footing with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights¹⁴ and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;¹⁴

"11. Also requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, within her mandate, to continue to take steps for the promotion, protection and realization of the right to development, by, inter alia, drawing on the expertise of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system related to the field of development;

"12. Requests the Secretary-General to inform the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-fourth session and the General Assembly at its fiftythird session of the activities of the organizations, funds, programmes and

"13. Calls upon all Member States to make further concrete efforts at the national and international levels to remove the obstacles to the realization of the right to development;

"14. Calls upon also the Commission on Human Rights to continue to make proposals to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, on the future course of action on the question, in particular on practical measures for the implementation and enhancement of the Declaration on the Right to Development, including comprehensive and effective measures to eliminate obstacles to its implementation, taking into account the conclusions and recommendations of the Global Consultation on the Realization of the Right to Development as a Human Right, the reports of the Working Group on the Right to Development and the report of the Intergovernmental Group of Experts to elaborate a strategy for the implementation and promotion of the right to development;

"15. Encourages all States to address, within the declarations and programmes of action adopted by the relevant international conferences convened by the United Nations, the elements for the promotion and protection of the principles of the right to development as set out in the Declaration on the Right to Development;

III. RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE THIRD COMMITTEE

62. The Third Committee recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

DRAFT RESOLUTION I

Respect for the principles of national sovereignty and non-interference in the internal affairs of States in their electoral processes

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purpose of the United Nations to develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and selfdetermination of peoples and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace,

Recalling its resolution 1514 (XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling also its resolution 2625 (XXV) of 24 October 1970, by which it approved the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling further the principle enshrined in Article 2, paragraph 7, of the Charter of the United Nations, which establishes that nothing contained in the Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters that are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the Charter,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States to comply with the principles of the Charter and the resolutions of the United Nations regarding the right to self-determination, by virtue of which all peoples can freely determine, without external interference, their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development,

Recognizing that the principles of national sovereignty and non-interference in the internal affairs of any State should be respected in the holding of elections,

Recognizing also that there is no single political system or single universal model for electoral processes equally suited to all nations and their peoples, and that political systems and electoral processes are subject to historical, political, cultural and religious factors,

Convinced that the establishment of the necessary mechanisms and means to guarantee full and effective popular participation in electoral processes corresponds to States, Recalling all its previous resolutions in this regard, particularly its resolution 50/172 of 22 December 1995,

Welcoming the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993,¹⁵ in which the Conference reaffirmed that the processes of promoting and protecting human rights should be conducted in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter,

1. Reiterates that, by virtue of the principle of equal rights and selfdetermination of peoples enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, all peoples have the right, freely and without external interference, to determine their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect that right in accordance with the provisions of the Charter;

2. Reaffirms that it is the concern solely of peoples to determine methods and to establish institutions regarding the electoral process, as well as to determine the ways for its implementation according to their constitution and national legislation, and that, consequently, States should establish the necessary mechanisms and means to guarantee full and effective popular participation in those processes;

3. Also reaffirms that any activities that attempt, directly or indirectly, to interfere in the free development of national electoral processes, in particular in the developing countries, or that are intended to sway the results of such processes, violate the spirit and letter of the principles established in the Charter and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Further reaffirms that electoral assistance to Member States should be provided by the United Nations only at the request and with the consent of specific sovereign States, in strict conformity with the principles of sovereignty and non-interference in the internal affairs of States, or in special circumstances such as cases of decolonization, or in the context of regional or international peace processes;

5. Strongly appeals to all States to refrain from financing or providing, directly or indirectly, any other form of overt or covert support for political parties or groups and from taking actions to undermine the electoral processes in any country;

6. Condemns any act of armed aggression or threat or use of force against peoples, their elected Governments or their legitimate leaders;

7. Reaffirms that all countries have the obligation under the Charter to respect the right of others to self-determination and to determine freely their political status and pursue their economic, social and cultural development;

 $^{^{\}rm 15}$ A/CONF.157/24 (Part I), chap. III.

8. Decides to consider this question at its fifty-fourth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

DRAFT RESOLUTION II

Human rights and unilateral coercive measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 51/103 of 12 December 1996,

Reaffirming the pertinent principles and provisions contained in the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 3281 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974, in particular article 32 thereof, in which it is declared that no State may use or encourage the use of economic, political or any other type of measures to coerce another State in order to obtain from it the subordination of the exercise of its sovereign rights,

Taking note of the report submitted by the Secretary-General¹⁶ pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1995/45 of 3 March 1995,¹⁷

Recognizing the universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated character of all human rights, and, in this regard, reaffirming the right to development as an integral part of all human rights,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights called upon States to refrain from any unilateral coercive measure not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations that creates obstacles to trade relations among States and impedes the full realization of all human rights,¹⁸

Bearing in mind all the references to this question in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development, adopted by the World Summit for Social Development on 12 March 1995,¹⁹ the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for

Action,²⁰ adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women on 15 September 1995, and the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements and the Habitat Agenda, adopted by the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) on 14 June 1996,²¹

Deeply concerned that, despite the recommendations adopted on this issue by the General Assembly and recent major United Nations conferences, and contrary to general international law and the Charter of the United Nations, unilateral coercive measures continue to be promulgated and implemented with all their extraterritorial effects, inter alia, on the economic and social development of targeted countries and peoples and individuals under the jurisdiction of other States,

Noting the continuing efforts of the Working Group on the Right to Development and reaffirming in particular its criteria according to which unilateral coercive measures are one of the obstacles to the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development,²²

1. Urges all States to refrain from adopting or implementing any unilateral measure not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, in particular those of a coercive nature with all their extraterritorial effects, which create obstacles to trade relations among States, thus impeding the full realization of the rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights²³ and other international human rights instruments, in particular the right of individuals and peoples to development;

2. Rejects unilateral coercive measures with all their extraterritorial effects as tools for political or economic pressure against any country, in particular against developing countries, because of their negative effects on the realization of all the human rights of vast sectors of their populations, in particular children, women and the elderly;

3. Calls upon Member States that have initiated such measures to commit themselves to their obligations and responsibilities arising from the international human rights instruments to which they are party by revoking such measures at the earliest time possible;

²³ Resolution 217 A (III).

4. Reaffirms, in this context, the right of all peoples to selfdetermination, by virtue of which they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development;

5. Urges the Commission on Human Rights to take fully into account the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures, including enactment of national laws and their extraterritorial application, in its task concerning the implementation of the right to development;

DRAFT RESOLUTION IV

Elimination of all forms of religious intolerance

²⁶ Resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex.

Emphasizing that the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief is far-reaching and profound and that it encompasses freedom of thought on all matters, personal conviction and the commitment to religion or belief, whether manifested individually or in community with others,

Reaffirming the call of the World Conference on Human Rights for all Governments to take all appropriate measures in compliance with their international obligations and with due regard to their respective legal systems to counter intolerance and related violence based on religion or belief, including practices of discrimination against women and the desecration of religious sites, recognizing that every individual has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, expression and religion,²⁷

Calling upon all Governments to cooperate with the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief to enable him to carry out his mandate fully,

Alarmed that serious instances of intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance, occur in many parts of the world and threaten the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Deeply concerned that, as reported by the Special Rapporteur, the rights violated on religious grounds include the right to life, the right to physical integrity and to liberty and security of person, the right to freedom of expression, the right not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and the right not to be arbitrarily arrested or detained,²⁸

5. Recognizes that legislation alone is not enough to prevent violations of human rights, including the right to freedom of religion or belief;

6. Emphasizes that, as underlined by the Human Rights Committee, restrictions on the freedom to manifest religion or belief are permitted only if limitations are prescribed by law, are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals, or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others, and are applied in a manner that does not vitiate the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

7. Urges States to ensure that, in the course of their official duties, members of law enforcement bodies, civil servants, educators and other public officials respect different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate against persons professing other religions or beliefs;

12. Encourages Governments to give serious consideration to inviting the Special Rapporteur to visit their countries so as to enable him to fulfil his mandate even more effectively;

13. Also encourages Governments, when seeking the assistance of the United Nations programme of advisory services and technical assistance in the field of human rights, to consider, where appropriate, including requests for assistance in the field of the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

14. Welcomes and encourages the efforts of non-governmental organizations and religious bodies and groups to promote the implementation of the Declaration, and invites them to consider what further contribution they could make to its implementation and dissemination in all parts of the world;

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions, as well as those of the Commission on Human Rights, in particular Commission resolution 1997/75 of

18 April 1997,⁷³ and the conclusions of the World Conference on Human Rights,⁷⁴ which recognized that gross violations of human rights, including in armed conflicts, are among the multiple and complex factors leading to displacement of people,

Acknowledging that, in this regard, a number of positive results have been achieved, but deeply concerned that the overall trends with respect to sustainable development are worse today than they were in 1992,
