COMMENTS BY THE GOVERNMENT OF THE FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF YUGOSLAVIA

regarding sections of the Report by the Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in the former Yugoslavia
Elizabeth Rehn (documents E/CN.4/1998/15 and E/CN.4/1998/63)

General observations

1. The Yugoslav Government appreciates the role played and the contribution made by the Special Rapporteur for Human Rights, Elizabeth Rehn, and reiterates again that it is open for cooperation with all relevant international organizations, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations with a view to promoting respect for and implementing human rights. Accordingly, in March 1996 the Government agreed to the establishment of the office of the Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in the former Yugoslavia based in Belgrade. The Government is opposed to the pressures put by Ms Rehn and the UN Commission on Human Rights to open another similar office in Pristina, in view of the fact that the competent federal and republican authorities have always met the requests of Ms Rehn and enabled and facilitated full freedom of movement and contacts of the Special Rapporteur and her associates with all social factors in Yugoslavia.

The Government of Yugoslavia attaches great significance to the problems related to respect for human rights. In this respect, it reminds that the FR of Yugoslavia ranks at the top of the State Parties which have accepted international instruments in the field of human rights adopted by the United Nations and that the provisions of the human rights instruments have been incorporated into the legal system of Yugoslavia through the legislation.

Consistent with the attention accorded to human rights and the harmonization with international human rights standards, the Yugoslav Government recalls its decision to accede also to the Council of Europe Convention on the protection of minorities as the first comprehensive international instrument to guarantee minority rights. Yugoslavia considers all members of national and other minorities or ethnic groups, independent of their numbers, equal Yugoslav citizens and has guaranteed them by the Constitution and the laws the highest standards in the field of internationally recognized human and minority rights.

Regarding the expressed regret over an unsatisfactory cooperation of the appropriate authorities with the Special Rapporteur in alleged instances of human rights violations, especially in the cases of alleged police abuse coupled with doubts as to the independence of the judiciary in Yugoslavia, the Government of Yugoslavia expresses surprise at such statements contained in the Report by the Special Rapporteur and calls attention to the fact that the appropriate federal and republican authorities have in the past been prepared to offer maximum cooperation and assistance to the Belgrade office and that, to the extent of their capabilities, they have responded to the requests by Ms Rehn and made possible access to every trial in which Special Rapporteur expressed interest.

The Government does not deny that the situation in Kosovo and Metohija is complex. This situation, however, has been brought about by the secessionist aspirations of the political leadership of the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija, which was the source of all other problems created by the members of the Albanian minority - civil disobedience; attempts at introducing parallel institutions; relentless propaganda against the state institutions of Serbia and the FR of Yugoslavia including with respect to their alleged tolerance and peacefulness; manipulations with the numbers of the Albanian national minority, with history, constitutional status, children and pupils; terrorism etc.

The Government deplores that the report by Ms Rehn uses the normal activities by police, undertaken in accordance with the Constitution and their legal powers, in order to instrumentalize and politicize the views in favour of a distorted picture of internal developments in the country. It is irrefutable that police authorities have never responded to instances of non-violent and previously and orderly notified demonstrations, but only when the violence of individuals has threatened to put public security and peace at risk. The Government knows that the Special Rapporteur in her report does not distinguish between those police activities on the one hand and the legitimate efforts to combat terrorism and secession, which other European countries are also facing. The Government strongly opposes the attempt the use of terrorist activities conducted by some members of the Albanian minority in Yugoslavia, which are on the rise in Kosovo and Metohija and which are directed not only against the Serbian people living in the province but also against the persons belonging to the Albanian minority who are opposed to a secessionist policy, for political purposes, qualifying combatting terrorism as a threat to human rights. Therefore, it is very difficult to accept the lack of any criticism and the very mention in the report of the problem of separatism in Kosovo and Metohija. The Government insists on the view that Kosovo and Metohija is an internal problem of the Republic of Serbia and the FR of Yugoslavia, and that it is unacceptable to internationalize this issue and impose outside solutions through precedence regarding the change of borders and that as such they constitute a threat to security and to all future relations, contributing to the heightening of tensions in Kosovo and Metohija.

On the other hand, the authorities of the Republic of Serbia and the FR of Yugoslavia remain consistently committed to the establishment of dialogue with members of all national minorities in Kosovo and Metohija including the Albanian national minority, in order to settle all issues in the mutual interest, without preconditions. Unrealistic ultimatums issued by the Albanian side as preconditions for dialogue concern an open demand for seceding a part of the territory of a sovereign state and for establishing parallel and underground authorities. We recall that in addition to the Albanian minority, persons belonging to other minorities also live in Kosovo and Metohija and that they are all enabled to enjoy the constitutionally and legally guaranteed rights and to the extent to which they want it. The Government notes with regret that the persons belonging to the Albanian minority, unlike the persons belonging to other, say, Turkish and Romany minorities, scared by the threats issued by the militant leaders of some Albanian parties and by some outside factors, have not used some of their basic rights relative to their participation in the political life of their country and in the decision-making process at all levels, in education and schooling etc. However, it notes at the same time the use of some other rights, namely those related to social security (pensions, insurance, etc.).

The Government of the FR of Yugoslavia makes a clear distinction between the rising terrorism perpetrated by the members of the Albanian minority and the very status of Kosovo and Metohija within the FR of Yugoslavia and Serbia. It recalls that the autonomous provinces within the Republic of Serbia - Vojvodina and Kosovo and Metohija - enjoy the degree of autonomy guaranteed by the Constitution and which represents one of the most extensive and all-inclusive degrees of such autonomy in Europe. The Government of Yugoslavia regrets that unlike the other minorities, the persons belonging to the Albanian national minority are the only ones who do not take advantage of the opportunities offered to them by the Constitution.

2. For the sake of avoiding replication of the same data in various UN documents, the Government of the FR of Yugoslavia wishes to point out herewith that it formally submitted its first report to the Committee against Torture for the 1991-1996 period concerning the implementation of the Convention against Torture or Any Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment at the end of 1997. Yugoslavia ratified the Convention on 20 June 1991. The report also contains replies to other observations made in the report by the Special Rapporteur.

3. The Government of the FR of Yugoslavia ratified the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination in 1967. The Consolidated Report on the implementation of this Convention for the 1990-1996 period was considered at the 52nd session of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination in Geneva, 12-12 March 1998. As in the case mentioned above, the Government report also contains some other responses to the observations contained in the report by the Special Rapporteur.

4. The Government of the FR of Yugoslavia notes with regret that these comments must repeat the serious objections over non-compliance with the letter of the Constitution and the laws of the FR of Yugoslavia and those of the Republic of Serbia insofar as territorial division of Serbia is concerned. The previous Special Rapporteurs have used the term "Sandzak" in their reports, even within the framework of a separate section on the subject implying thereby the existence of a separate administrative unit within the Republic of Serbia. In all the previous reports it was pointed out that, unlike the two autonomous provinces of Kosovo and Metohija and Vojvodina, the laws regulating territorial organization or division of the Republic of Serbia know no other territorial units, the so-called Sandzak included. Notwithstanding this, the Special Rapporteur uses the terms from the arbitrary and politicized resolutions of the human rights Commission which contain many inaccuracies and untruths, instead of sticking to the Constitution of the country on which she submits report on the human rights situation.

We reiterate at the end that there are two autonomous provinces - Kosovo and Metohija (not "Kosovo" as it is referred to in the report) and Vojvodina within the Republic of Serbia. Sandzak is an abstract archaic term, a Turkish word describing an area which the sultans gave to their dukes for administration.

5. As far as cooperation between the FR of Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia is concerned, it has been maintained within the framework of the Agreement between the FR of Yugoslavia and the United Nations on the Liaison Office of the Tribunal's Prosecutor in Belgrade. In this context, the FR of Yugoslavia complies with the Tribunal's orders to submit relevant documents; it allows the visits and work of many investigators of the Tribunal on its territory; it offers assistance in the establishment of contacts with victims and possible witnesses; it enables and facilitates cooperation with the competent Yugoslav local authorities in connection with cases pending before the Tribunal. Apart from the Liaison Office, the FR of Yugoslavia is in regular contact with the Registrar of the Tribunal and accepts all visits by officials of the Tribunal, including high-level ones.

Regrettably, it must be noted that there is a drastically uneven approach of the Tribunal regarding the three parties in Bosnia and Herzegovina. So far, only one legal action has been taken for crimes committed against the Serbs (the Celebic case), although there exist hard evidence on many other mass crimes against the Serbs submitted both by the Yugoslav authorities and by UN officials and many NGOs. Consequently, the excuse provided by the Prosecutor that due to the lack of cooperation on the part of the FR of Yugoslavia, they are not in a position to investigate and initiate proceedings against persons who have committed the crimes against Serbs is not adequate. The majority of the persons indicted by the Tribunal are Serbs. The crimes they have been charged with, although they are similar to those of which Muslims and Croats have been accused, as a rule, carry a more serious qualification - crimes of genocide and crimes against humanity. Additionally, the Prosecutor reacts in a very expeditious way and issues indictments against Serbs while delaying the issuing of similar indictments against Croats and Muslims.

Despite the fact that the officials of the Tribunal repeatedly point out that the Tribunal is an independent legal body, it is in actual fact a vehicle used to exert political pressure on the FR of Yugoslavia. Among other things, by making reintegration by the FR of Yugoslavia to international organizations and financial institutions and its participation in those organizations and institutions conditional upon its cooperation with the Tribunal.

The Tribunal also deals with issues that are outside its jurisdiction, such as determining the nature of the conflict in the territory of the former Yugoslavia (international or non-international) and the question of aggression or whether Republika Srpska acted as agent of the FR of Yugoslavia and in that capacity attacked Bosnia and Herzegovina. Tribunal's orders on these issues contravene the positions of the international community and relevant international bodies and cannot be accepted.

These and other elements considerably undermine the confidence of the FR of Yugoslavia and its wider public in the impartiality of the Tribunal. On the other hand, this also provides the basis for the activities of the BH and Croatian parties aimed at revising the Dayton Agreement, which can in no way contribute to the consolidation of peace in the region.

Kosovo and Metohija

The Government of the FR of Yugoslavia notes with regret that the report by the Special Rapporteur fails systematically and fully to implement an objective and consistent value judgment insofar as the portrayal of the situation in Kosovo and Metohija province is concerned.

Namely, the report does not use the Province's constitutional name - "Kosovo and Metohija" but exclusively the name "Kosovo" which is used by the separatist leadership of the Albanian national minority.

No open and organized terrorist actions, including murders of innocent civilians and police officers, attacks on State institutions, refugee reception centres in Kosovo and Metohija, etc., have so far been condemned by the Special Rapporteur in clear and unequivocal terms, or without the unjustified need to make a balancing act.

Although all the previous reports elaborately deal with the elections held at all levels over the past few years in Serbia and the FR of Yugoslavia, they never condemned the boycott of those federal and republican parliamentary and presidential elections by the separatist leadership of the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija. Similarly, no view is expressed regarding the underground elections announced by the separatist leadership there and "scheduled" for the end of March 1998, which is, should it stay that way, fully contrary to the approach, ambitions and consistency applied in reporting on all other issues related to the FR of Yugoslavia.

The reports do not refer to the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija as a "minority" or as the "persons belonging to the national minority", which is their constitutional status in the Republic of Serbia. Failure by the Special Rapporteur to use the constitutionally defined status and the name "the Albanian national minority" creates the impression of an indirect support to the leadership of the separatist political parties of the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija advancing a theory that the persons belonging to the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija are not a national minority but a "nation", supporting it with the "argument" about their large numbers. It is worth mentioning that, within the framework of the general boycott, the persons belonging to the Albanian national minority deliberately refused to take part in the last census of 1991, so that this "argument" of theirs is not possible to verify officially.

Regrettably, even the official policy of neighbouring Albania has of late spoken about "a divided nation", claiming that the members of the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija are on their own land and that they are not a national minority. Those positions are along the lines of the Albanian policy of carving out the so-called Greater Albania against the interests of peace and stability in the region. Albania has, in violation of the UN Charter, the OSCE principles and a good-neighbourly cooperation, recognized the unconstitutional creation of the Albanian separatists in Kosovo and Metohija called "Republic of Kosovo" and enabled free activities of its "representation" in Tirana, thus directly interfering in the internal affairs of the FR of Yugoslavia and supporting separatism in Kosovo and Metohija.

The Government of the FR of Yugoslavia recalls this time again that persons belonging to national minorities and to other ethnic or religious groups in the FR of Yugoslavia are guaranteed all civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights in the broadest sense of the term, without any limitations or discrimination. The FR of Yugoslavia Government has provided detailed information to the Human Rights Commission and treaty bodies entrusted with the task of monitoring the implementation of the provisions of the human rights conventions which Yugoslavia has accepted long ago.

Regarding terrorism in Kosovo and Metohija *1), the FR of Yugoslavia Government wishes to point out some facts:

During the course of 1991, the Albanian separatists carried out 10 terrorist attacks in the Autonomous Province of Kosovo and Metohija area; in 1992 twelve such attacks; in 1993 eight of them; in 1994 six attacks; in 1995 eleven, and in 1996 as many as 30 terrorist attacks. Between January and 15 August 1997, seventeen terrorist actions were undertaken in the territory of the province.

Most of the terrorist acts in 1996 and until 15 August 1997 targeted primarily the facilities and officers of the Interior Ministry (31), then accommodations provided to the refugees from Republika Srpska and Krajina (7), civilians (6) and other establishments (3). One terrorist attack was launched against Yugoslav Army members. A total of 37 people died in these terrorist actions. Of this number 18 were police officers and 19 civilians, including 7 members of the Albanian national minority who were loyal to the FR of Yugoslavia and Serbia and for this reason, were on the Albanian terrorists' "hit" list. Fourteen persons (four police officers and 10 civilians) were killed, while 9 (5 police officers and 4 civilians) sustained light injuries.

In the course of 1997, 55 armed terrorist attacks were launched by Kosovo Albanian separatists, of this number 31 attacks were launched against the members and facilities of the Ministry of the Interior, 14 against the civilians, one against a justice administration official, one against a refugee centre and eight against other facilities.

*1) Survey of the acts of terrorism perpetrated by the separatists of the Albanian minority in the region of Kosovo and Metohija in 1996-1997 is given in the Annex thereto.

In these attacks eleven people have been killed including one member of the Interior Ministry and 10 civilians. Fifteen people (8 Interior Ministry members and 7 civilians) have sustained serious injuries and 12 minor injuries (5 Interior Ministry members, two justice administration officials and 5 civilians). The attacks have also caused damage to 12 Interior Ministry facilities; seven tenements; two Orthodox Church temples; the seat of the municipality of Podujevo, 2 official and 18 private vehicles.

In order to repel attacks, Police have used firearms and shot dead 5 terrorist attackers.

Out of the above-mentioned number of terrorist attacks, 11 were mounted in the area of the Srbica municipality; nine in the areas of the Podujevo municipality; six in the Decani and Klina municipalities; five in the Pec and Glogovac municipalities; three in the Vucitrn and Pristina municipalities; two in the Suva Reka municipality; one each in the municipalities of Djakovica, Prizren, Urosevac, Orahovac and Stimlje.

In these terrorist attacks the Kosovo Albanian separatists have used individually or in groups machine guns 24 times, machine guns and hand grenades six times, machine guns and a portable rocket launcher four times, machine guns and a self-propelling rocket once; a machine gun, hand grenade and a portable rocket launcher once; explosives eleven times; pistols and revolvers four times; hand grenades and a self-propelling rocket three times.

In the period from January to 2 March 1998, 63 organized armed terrorist attacks were carried out by the Albanian terrorists. Out of these, 15 were attacks on the facilities and members of the Interior Ministry of the Republic of Serbia (in Srbica 4 attacks; in Klina 3 attacks; in Orahovac and Podujevo 2 attacks each; in Stimlje, Urosevac, Glogovac and Decane one attack each). In these attacks, five members of the Interior Ministry were killed, four received serious and one slight injuries. In ten of the cases, the police officers were attacked while pursuing their duties. In four cases accommodations and homes of police officers came under attack, and in one case masked terrorist gunmen stopped and attacked private cars.

Forty-six terrorist attacks were launched on civilians, in which eight civilians died (in Klina two Serbs and one ethnic Albanian; in Glogovac two ethnic Albanians; in Srbica one Serb and one ethnic Albanian; in Decani one Serb), three people sustained serious injuries (in Pec two Serbs; in Decani one ethnic Albanian), while two Serbs and one ethnic Albanian were slightly injured.

Two attacks were launched on other facilities (Podujevo and Obilic) in which, except for the material damage done, there were no casualties.

In these attacks, the Albanian terrorists have used individually or in groups machine guns 21 times, machine guns and portable rocket launchers 14 times, an explosive device and hand grenades on one occasion, and physical force also on one occasion. In the remaining 25 cases, the Albanian terrorists issued threats to use firearms.

Forty-four criminal charges were pressed against unidentified perpetrators for the criminal act under Article 124 of the Penal Code of the FR of Yugoslavia.

In addition to terrorist attacks, 13 cases of stopping cars and asking for ID's and searches of vehicles and passengers by masked armed Albanian terrorists on some roads in AP Kosovo and Metohija were reported and three cases of intruders forcing their way into homes and other facilities.

On the basis of the measures taken, criminal proceedings have been instituted against the members of terrorist groups who participated in the preparation and staging of a large number of terrorist attacks on Interior Ministry members and civilians in Kosovo and Metohija during the 1993-1997 period. Some of these persons have been found to have received military training abroad, from where they illegally imported weapons intended for terrorist actions and an armed rebellion.

In 1996 and till 15 August 1997, criminal charges were filed against 74 persons who perpetrated acts of terrorism in the area of Kosovo and Metohija. Among those, the majority were members of illegal organizations and groups masterminding and directly involved in carrying out terrorist actions, who were found with the blueprints and sketches of military and police installations, post offices, medical centres, etc., which proves that they had planned extensive terrorist actions.

Legal guarantees for the protection of human rights

The right to a fair trial

Institutional mechanisms

1. The assessment of the report that international human rights covenants are almost never implemented in Yugoslav courts is beside the point. In light of the fact that the FR of Yugoslavia is a State Party to all these instruments and their provisions are built into its legal system through laws.

2. The question of detention and free access of lawyers to the arrested person or the harmonization of the Criminal Procedure Code with the Constitution will be addressed in the course of the forthcoming amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code.

3. The report also contains expressions like: serious doubt about whether the accused should have been found guilty. Such statements can only compromise the report and the Special Rapporteur since the courts are only authorized to determine whether a fact or a testimony may be taken as true and it is the court which is empowered to decide on whether defendant is guilty or not. Everything else may be qualified only as arbitrary interference with the work of independent judiciary.

4. As far as the proposal of the Special Rapporteur that the FR of Yugoslavia should introduce an Ombudsman-like mechanism is concerned, it is pointed out that this question will also be examined during the forthcoming process of improving the legal system.

5. Similarly, the issue of ratification of the Optional Protocols will be addressed as well. Regarding abolition of the death penalty, the discrepancy in this respect between the Federal Constitution and the constitutions of the Republics, attention is drawn to the fact that this issue cannot be dealt with in isolation from the crime situation in Yugoslavia which is, inter alia, also marked by very serious criminal offences which are defined by the laws of the Republics (e.g. grand larceny) and which have been committed in the last seven years. Bearing in mind that the FR of Yugoslavia will adopt a single Penal Code, the question of the death penalty will be dealt with in accordance with the Federal Constitution.

In practice, the death penalty is not frequently imposed and never as the only main punishment, rather it is commuted to term sentences.

The death penalty may be imposed only for the most serious criminal offences which carry such sentence by law. Death sentence may not be passed on a person under 18 or on a pregnant woman. The death sentence may be imposed on a person of age who has not turned 21 at the time of the commission of a criminal offence only for a crime against humanity and international law or against the armed forces of the FR of Yugoslavia.

Liberty and security of the person
Police ill-treatment, torture and impunity

1. As a rule police shall immediately inform the family of the arrested. Failures in that respect are possible, however, efforts are being made to prevent them from happening.

2. Instances of ill-treatment are extremely rare. The competent authorities officially reply to all justified enquiries regarding alleged abuse of position or police powers, whether made by the Special Rapporteur for the question of torture, Mr Rodley or by Special Rapporteur Elizabeth Rehn herself.

3. Criminal proceedings have been conducted in the Fourth Municipal Court in Belgrade regarding the Barovic case.

Right to life

1. The judicial authorities are conducting appropriate criminal proceedings in the cases of Blakcori and Restelica.

2. As regards the Pramenkovic case, the District Public Prosecutor of Uzice has said that the death of the above named has not been reported to him. In view of the fact that the Public Prosecutor is informed of every case where there is doubt about violent death, it is clear that the death did not occur in the territory of the FR of Yugoslavia.

Administration of justice

As far as the criteria for the appointment of judges are concerned, moral qualities of candidates and their professional skills are only taken into account.

Missing persons

Regarding the part of Elizabeth Rehn's report concerning missing persons, it does not project an objective picture reflecting the full complexity and difficulties encountered by the Yugoslav side in tracing missing persons, primarily in the Republic of Croatia. In particular, we point out that the report does not show that the Republic of Croatia has done nothing to locate the whereabouts of a large number of persons detained in Croatian prisons or whose fate is definitely known to the Croatian authorities. These involve numerous tracing requests by the Yugoslav side. For example, it has been 6 years that five Yugoslav pilots have been unaccounted for, although their fate is known to the Croatian authorities. Also, there is a case of seven former JNA soldiers who had been in the army less than three months before they were arrested as well as the case of eleven reservists of the Niksic group and three reservists of the Sarnik group. Of the 1079 case files related to the Croatian military offensives "Lightning" and "Storm", the Croatian side has, despite the obligation it has undertaken and despite the assurances given to the international organizations that this is the exact number, handed in only 347 files. That number is relevant inclusive the latest meeting of the two national commissions held in Zagreb in February 1998.

If the Special Rapporteur has made an objective analysis, it would clearly demonstrate that Croatia has most flagrantly violated the provisions of the Geneva Convention and the Dayton Peace Agreement, as well as the Agreement on Normalization of Relations between the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Republic of Croatia and the Cooperation Protocol between the commissions of the FR of Yugoslavia and the Republic of Croatia which spelled out all the obligations very clearly.

On the other hand, by handing in 393 remaining files, the FR of Yugoslavia has fully complied with its obligations towards the Croatian side under the Cooperation Protocol.

More details about these issues which are of great importance to the Yugoslav side and first and foremost to the unfortunate families of the missing persons who by and large live in the FR of Yugoslavia, are to be found in a separate document of the question of the missing persons submitted by the FR of Yugoslavia at the current Commission session.
