registered and documented people of undetermined nationality, provided access to legal counselling, strengthened the capacity of local and national authorities, engaged in outreach and information campaigns, and undertook legislative reform.

In 2014, UNHCR spent $269.4 million on some 8.7 million people of concern in Asia and the Pacific.

Middle East and North Africa

In 2014, the worsening humanitarian situation in and around Syria was compounded by an escalation of violence in Iraq. Syrians had become the largest refugee population under the UNHCR mandate, with an estimated 3.7 million in the Middle East and North Africa region at the end of the year. UNHCR coordinated the implementation of and reporting on the 2014 Syria Regional Response Plan, under which more than 150 participating organizations responded to the needs of Syrian refugees and members of host communities in the five main refugee host countries (Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Turkey). UNHCR, along with UNDP, also led the Regional Refugee and Resilience Plan 2015–2016, a regional strategy in support of the same countries issued at the end of the year.

Inside Syria, 12.2 million people needed humanitarian assistance at the end of 2014, including 7.6 million IDPs. Pursuant to Security Council resolution 2165(2014) (see p. 583), UNHCR strengthened its coordination and operational response capacity in Jordan and Turkey to assist those most in need in Syria. On 28 October, the Conference on the Syrian Refugee Situation: Supporting Stability in the Region was organized in Berlin with the support of the United Nations. Conference participants adopted the Berlin Communiqué on solidarity with refugees and their hosts [A/69/630], which pointed out the necessity of a political solution to the Syrian conflict as the most important prerequisite for lasting peace and the return of the refugees to their homes.

At the end of 2014, there were more than 200,000 Iraqi refugees being hosted in the region, more than half of whom were newly registered during the year due to the increasing violence in Iraq. Following the declaration of a system-wide level 3 emergency in Iraq in August, UNHCR launched an expanded operation to bring relief supplies by air, land and sea—the largest single aid distribution organized by UNHCR in more than a decade, targeting half a million IDPs.

In Yemen, the political impasse deteriorated into renewed conflict, leading to new displacement in 2014. UNHCR continued to provide life-saving assistance and critical protection to both IDPs and refugees wherever possible. At the end of the year, there were more than 330,000 IDPs and approximately 248,000 refugees in the country. Yemen also continued to be a destination and transit country for people travelling as part of irregular mixed movements.

The security situation in Libya remained volatile. Nearly 37,000 refugees and asylum seekers were registered with UNHCR, the majority from Syria and the rest from more than 30 other countries. Libya also remained a major transit country for migrants and asylum seekers wanting to travel across the Mediterranean Sea to Europe.

The Middle East and North Africa continued to be a region of origin, destination and transit for refugees and migrants. Trafficking and smuggling, as well as loss of life at sea, remained of serious concern. North Africa was particularly affected by irregular mixed movements, including of people in transit to Europe. UNHCR worked on developing standard operating procedures for protection and assistance following disembarkation after rescue at sea operations, and on strengthening institutional protection mechanisms.

UNHCR continued to call on the international community to remain engaged in the Western Sahara refugee situation: Sahrawi refugees living in camps near Tindouf, Algeria, had been displaced for 40 years and were increasingly vulnerable.

Partnerships continued to be crucial in the region and the UNHCR partnership with countries of the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf resulted in substantial support for the Syria situation and other humanitarian responses. Collaboration with the League of Arab States and the Organization of Islamic Cooperation also expanded significantly in 2014.

Several countries in North Africa continued to work towards establishing national asylum legislation, including Mauritania, Morocco and Tunisia. UNHCR also significantly strengthened its capacity to ensure the efficient registration of refugees upon arrival in the countries of asylum. In 2014, almost 745,000 people were registered in the Middle East and North Africa. UNHCR and partners assisted national authorities in preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based violence (sgbv) by promoting gender equality, supporting national protection systems and community-based interventions, improving data collection and analysis, and strengthening advocacy. In countries hosting Syrian refugees, more than 66,300 survivors of sgbv received specialist support in 2014.

In 2014, in coordination with host Governments, more than 174,000 Syrian refugee children and some 17,600 Iraqi refugee children received support from UNHCR to enrol in primary education. Particular attention was also given to health services, with 270 health facilities offering specialized and emergency care for Syrian refugee families being constructed or maintained across the region. With more than 2 million new Iraqi IDPs in 2014, the delivery of basic humanitarian assistance and services was a considerable challenge. UNHCR efforts were focused within the protection, shelter/non-food items, and camp coordination and camp management clusters. Ten IDP camps were built in different parts of Iraq, including seven in the Kurdistan Region. UNHCR distributed over 64,000 kits of core relief items and 19,100 emergency shelters to internally displaced Iraqi families.

In 2014, UNHCR spent $1.2 billion on 15.6 million people of concern.

Europe

In 2014, the number of people of concern to UNHCR in Europe rose significantly. By the end of the year, Turkey had registered more than 1.7 million Syrian refugees and had received around 87,800 non-Syrian asylum seekers. The Russian Federation received more than 235,000 applications for refugee status and temporary asylum, primarily from Ukraine. The 28 member States of the EU together recorded more than 570,800 asylum claims, a 44 per cent increase from 2013 (396,700). Five countries received almost 70 per cent of all applications—Germany (173,100), Sweden (75,100), Italy (63,100), France (59,000) and Hungary (41,400). The largest number of asylum applications (120,600) came from Syrian nationals, who accounted for 22 per cent of all new applications in the EU. Other top countries of origin included Serbia and Kosovo (54,600), Afghanistan (38,100) and Eritrea (36,300). A positive development in 2014 was the increasing number of Syrians who were granted refugee status when compared with the number granted subsidiary protection, reversing the previous trend, with 19 countries having regular resettlement programmes.

During the year, in addition to hosting 1.7 million Syrian refugees, Turkey also saw the arrival of tens of thousands of Iraqi refugees fleeing increasing violence in Iraq. UNHCR continued to provide policy and technical support to the Government of Turkey through advocacy, coordination and capacity-building efforts in areas such as registration, access to territory, documentation, legal counselling and management of urban refugee caseloads.

In 2014 in Ukraine, the number of people internally displaced reached 823,000 and significant numbers of Ukrainians crossed an international border in search of safety.

During the year, the movement of refugees and migrants across the Mediterranean Sea towards Europe continued to take a high toll on human lives: some 3,500 people died or were reported missing in the Mediterranean in 2014, compared to 600 in 2013. The number of people arriving by sea almost quadrupled, from 60,000 in 2013 to more than 218,000 in 2014, half of whom were from Eritrea and Syria. Most of the 170,100 people who disembarked in Italy were rescued by the Italian Navy operation “Mare Nostrum”. Through the Central Mediterranean Sea Initiative, UNHCR proposed guidance for joint European action based on the principles of solidarity, responsibility-sharing and protection for those fleeing persecution and violence, while stressing the need for a joint European search-and-rescue effort, and for the provision of credible legal alternatives to dangerous irregular movements.

The Office remained concerned about reports of asylum seekers being forced back or prevented from accessing territory and procedures in some European countries, and called for these practices to cease immediately. It also called on States of disembarkation to improve the systematic identification of people with international protection needs rescued at sea, as well as reception conditions. The Office encouraged the comprehensive use of the 2003 Dublin Regulation (on ensuring quick access to asylum procedures) to facilitate the transfer of some asylum seekers to other EU countries, including for the purpose of family unity. Following a temporary halt of transfers to Bulgaria under the Dublin Regulation in early 2014, Bulgaria acted to redress certain systemic deficiencies in its reception conditions and asylum procedures, and by April, transfers to Bulgaria resumed.

In spite of increased awareness of the problem of statelessness, more than 600,000 people throughout Europe continued to live without a nationality due to combination of legal, administrative and/or practical factors. In 2014, UNHCR priorities in Europe were to ensure access to territory and asylum procedures; improve the quality of asylum systems, including for people with specific needs; prevent loss of life at sea; secure durable solutions, including by preventing and resolving situations of statelessness; and strengthen the Office's external relations and resource mobilization support. As part of those endeavours, the Office published a report entitled Syrian Refugees in Europe: What Europe Can Do to Ensure Protection and Solidarity, urging European countries to do more to help Syrian refugees who were in growing numbers seeking safety in Europe.

The Office worked closely with the EU border agency Frontex, both bilaterally and as the Chair of the Frontex Consultative Forum. This included supporting the Vega Children initiative to enhance the detection and protection of child victims of smuggling and trafficking at EU airports. UNHCR also continued to advocate for alternatives to detention in law and practice, particularly in countries that routinely detained asylum seekers, and welcomed the participation of Hungary, Lithuania, Malta and the United Kingdom as focus countries for the implementation of its Beyond Detention strategy.

UNHCR also provided assistance to Governments in seeking durable solutions for people displaced from Kosovo. In Serbia, it supported the development of a durable solutions strategy for some 90,000 vulnerable displaced people. It also continued to promote the voluntary return and reintegration of minority groups of displaced people willing to return from Montenegro, Serbia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. In Georgia, UNHCR advocated for improved access to livelihoods and Government-run housing solutions for some 90,000 IDPs in need. In Azerbaijan, it advocated a rights-based approach to government housing and assistance projects for IDPs.

In Ukraine, the Office worked with the Government, local authorities and NGOs to identify and respond to IDPs' immediate and long-term needs in the areas of protection monitoring, shelter and non-food item distribution; the inter-agency cluster approach was activated in December. At the end of the year, UNHCR also adopted the Strategy to Protect and Assist Persons Affected by the Conflict in Eastern Ukraine.

During the year, UNHCR spent $209.3 million for the region—$129.6 million in Eastern Europe, $26.5 million in South-Eastern Europe, and $53.2 million in Northern, Western, Central and Southern Europe—on a total population of 6.5 million persons.

Policy development and cooperation

Partnerships and coordination

According to the High Commissioner's annual report [A/70/12], the Office collaborated with nearly 910 partners; 720 were NGOs, and almost 75 per cent of those were national or local NGOs. NGOs also received approximately 75 per cent of the $1.32 billion in funds disbursed by UNHCR to partners during the year. The World Food Programme remained one of the UNHCR most important operational partners, including in the increasing use of cash- and voucher-based assistance. The Office expanded its partnership with UNICEF, issuing revised guidance for country-level collaboration and establishing joint programmes on community-based health care, immunization and child protection in emergencies. Close coordination with the International Civil Aviation Organization led to the adoption of a resolution requiring all newly issued travel documents for refugees and stateless persons to be machine-readable. UNHCR continued to invest significantly in partnerships with development actors, including the World Bank and UNDP, to enhance the complementarity of humanitarian and development actions from the start of displacement. Along with the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the Office also issued the "Joint note on mixed situations: coordination in practice" in 2014 to clarify roles and responsibilities in mixed internal displacement and refugee situations. The Office continued to roll out the Refugee Coordination Model, which standardized UNHCR best practices from the field, while regional refugee coordinators led the responses for all the largest refugee emergencies, including the Central African Republic, South Sudan and Syria.

Evaluation activities

At its sixty-fifth session, the Executive Committee had before it a report [A/AC.96/1139] of the High Commissioner that reviewed the activities of the Policy Development and Evaluation Service (PDES) from mid-2013 to mid-2014 related to protection, emergency response and durable solutions. In the area of protection, PDES completed a comprehensive review of the UNHCR role in assisting States with the assumption of responsibility for refugee status determination. In the context of emergency response, the Office commissioned independent evaluations of its utilization of the Central Emergency Response Fund, as well as its response to the Syrian refugee emergency in Jordan and Lebanon. Work on solutions included a review of the UNHCR engagement with assisted voluntary return programmes and of the strategic use of resettlement. The Office also commissioned and published reviews of the UNHCR policy and practice on voluntary repatriation and integration of resettled refugees in labour markets. Other issues reviewed included livelihoods programming and the UNHCR mental health and psychosocial support for persons of concern and for staff.

Inspections

At its sixty-fifth session, the Executive Committee had before it a report [A/AC.96/1138] of the High Commissioner activities of the Inspector General's Office from mid-2013 to mid-2014. During that period, the Office conducted four standard inspections of the UNHCR operations in Egypt, Italy and Pakistan and the Regional Support Hub in Kenya using multifunctional inspection teams. During the same period, the cycles for five inspections conducted in 2011 and 2012 were closed. As at 30 June 2014, the rate of compliance with the recommendations stood at 84 per cent.

In his annual report [A/70/12], the High Commissioner indicated that, starting with the 2014 projects, the Office had changed to a risk-based approach to auditing projects implemented by partners using UNHCR funds, and, in November, issued simplified procedures for procurement undertaken by implementing partners in order to align them with the UNHCR own procurement policies and procedures. In December, UNHCR and the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) signed a revised memorandum of understanding to strengthen arrangements for internal audit services. A cross-functional working group was established to assess the strength of the organization's fraud prevention. The Independent Audit and Oversight Committee continued to assist the High Commissioner and the Executive Committee in exercising their oversight responsibilities, focusing on issues including internal audit, inspection, evaluation, fraud prevention, personal accountability and enterprise risk management. An NGO Investigation Specialist Roster, administered on behalf of the Office and its NGO partners by the Danish Refugee Council, was also launched in December to strengthen accountability and performance quality among the UNHCR NGO partners by carrying out investigations, at short notice, for NGO partners that lacked their own investigative capacity.

OIOS activities. In July, OIOS submitted to the Executive Committee a report [A/AC.96/1137] on its internal audit of UNHCR for the period from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014 in the areas of staffing and budget resources; cooperation and coordination; and disclosure of audit reports.

CPC consideration. At its twentieth meeting [A/69/16], on 13 June, the Committee for Programme and Coordination considered programme 21, International protection, durable solutions and assistance to refugees, of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017. The Committee also had before it a conference room paper on the topic [E/AC.51/2014/CRP.1]. The Committee recommended that the General Assembly approve programme 21, subject to a number of modifications indicated in the report.

Financial questions

The annual budget of UNHCR for 2014 amounted to $6.6 billion, comprising an initial budget of $5.3 billion approved by the Executive Committee in 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1168] and almost $1.3 billion for eight supplementary budgets subsequently created to address unforeseen emergency needs. Contributions from donors in 2014 reached a record $3.3 billion, with 53.4 per cent of voluntary contributions provided by its top three donors and 82.2 per cent by top 10 donors. UNHCR received $208.2 million from private donors, surpassing $200 million for the first time and constituting a three-fold increase as compared to 2009. The IKEA Foundation remained the largest private-sector partner, contributing $29 million in 2014. Expenditures during the year totalled $3.35 billion, with $1.1 billion spent in Africa; $1.2 billion in North Africa and the Middle East; $269 million in Asia and the Pacific; $209 million in Europe and $61 million in the Americas.

As at 2014, the biennial programme budget of the Office presented the consolidated budgetary requirements based on a global needs assessment of persons of concern to the Office. Subsequent to the approval of the budget by the Executive Committee, a global appeal was launched for fundraising purposes. The High Commissioner authorized the allocation of funds for the implementation of programmes and projects based on the availability of funds. During the implementation period, the High Commissioner might revise the budget with supplementary budgets that were normally funded through additional appeals. In the first year of the biennium, the High Commissioner submitted to the Executive Committee the revised biennial budget, which updated the requirement for the first year and revised the requirements for the second year.

Biennial programme budget 2014–2015. In a September report [A/AC.96/1136 & Corr.1, Add.1], the High Commissioner revised the estimates of the biennial programme budget for 2014–2015 and requested the Executive Committee to approve the revised requirements. As at 30 June 2014, the budget for 2014 amounted to $6,236.2 million, representing an increase of $928.4 million, or 17.5 per cent, against the original 2014 budget approved in October 2013 of $5,307.8 million. According to UNHCR, this increase was mainly due to the establishment of five supplementary budgets for South Sudan ($415.9 million), the Syria situation ($289.3 million), the CAR situation ($150.8 million), the Iraq situation ($59.9 million) and the mainstreaming of the emergency/non-food item project in the Sudan ($12.5 million). In a September report [A/AC.96/1136/Add.1], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) provided its comments and recommendations on the UNHCR revised biennial programme budget for 2014–2015.

In October, the Executive Committee approved total revised requirements for 2014 amounting to $6,236,218,896, and approved the programmes and budgets for regional programmes, global programmes and headquarters amounting to $6,234,449,630 for 2015.

Accounts (2013). The audited financial statements of voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ending 31 December 2013 [A/69/5/Add.6] showed a total expenditure of $2.7 billion and a total income of $3.2 billion, with a net surplus of $460 million.

Key findings of the Board of Auditors covered issues relating to financial matters, internal audit arrangements, the Syrian situation, health services, implementing partners and counter-fraud measures. The Board noted that multiple refugee crises in 2013 reached levels unseen in the previous decade. In Jordan, the Board found that UNHCR had handled the Syrian situation well, but that more flexible employment practices might have enabled it to respond more quickly. There were good examples of local flexibility and innovative practices, for example, the local procurement of biometric registration systems and enhanced use of cash payments to reach urban beneficiaries. Such approaches, however, created new risks and required different and tailored controls. The provision of health services by UNHCR met a good standard, although scope existed to use available health data to improve strategic planning and target resources on local health priorities as well as to demonstrate the cost-effectiveness of interventions. UNHCR had used International Public Sector

Accounting Standards-based financial information to improve financial management in some areas, such as inventory management, but there remained scope to further review asset holdings. Counter-fraud measures also required a substantial degree of further development. The Board recommended, inter alia, that UNHCR establish appropriate target levels for inventory holdings and other assets; review and further refine its methodology for allocating costs across programme and management categories; evaluate the performance of the biometric registration procedures implemented in Jordan, with a view to providing a standard global system for the biometric identification and registration of refugees; explore whether greater use could be made of partner agreements extending beyond 12 months; adopt more widely a flexible approach to emergency staffing, including the contracting of staff from other organizations; and require country offices to explicitly refer to the main burdens of disease when bidding for health programme resources, to achieve a clearer balance between local needs and global strategic priorities.

In July [A/AC.96/1135 & Corr.1], the High Commissioner submitted a note to the Executive Committee on accounts for the year 2013, as contained in the report of the Board of Auditors to the General Assembly (see above). In a September note [A/AC.96/1135/Add.1], the High Commissioner reported on measures taken in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors for 2013.

Management and administrative matters

At the September session of the Standing Committee [A/AC.96/1141], the Director of the Division of Human Resources Management presented the report on human resources issues, including staff security [EC/65/SC/CRP.20]. She remarked on the challenges of human resources management for an organization that must respond across the globe to rapidly evolving emergencies, as well as support ongoing protracted crises, and whose staff were fully mobile, working in remote and often dangerous locations, frequently separated from their families. She elaborated on some of the tensions the Office must reconcile in supporting the people who served the forcibly displaced and ensuring that they had the personal and professional capacities needed to deliver on the UNHCR mandate.

UNHCR worked in 124 countries with some 458 offices worldwide. As at 1 August, the organization had 9,036 staff, of whom 8,000 were working in the field. In the period from 1 August 2013 through 31 July 2014, UNHCR advertised approximately 1,031 positions and processed 1,278 requests for temporary assistance. To enhance workforce diversity and capacity, the Talent Outreach and Acquisition Section was established in Budapest, Hungary, in January 2014 with the objective of strengthening the Office's outreach strategy and recruitment processes. This change had already been initiated in mid-2013, with the launch of the Entry Level Humanitarian Programme. Also in January, the sixth annual meeting of the Staff Management Consultative Council (SMCC) discussed staff support and welfare, and reviewed progress on prior SMCC recommendations and formulated 16 priority recommendations to the High Commissioner. In the first half of the year, individual support provided by the Staff Welfare Section to staff included 2,662 therapeutic actions in 88 operations worldwide, with the majority of requests made by individuals serving in duty stations with difficult conditions of life and work. The largest category of individual interventions related to working conditions, including work-related stress that interfered with a sense of well-being. New draft policies on UNHCR-provided accommodation in the field and on environmental and occupational health and safety were under consideration.

Health, food and nutrition

In 2014, the United Nations continued to promote health, food security and nutrition worldwide. In response to the outbreak of the Ebola virus disease in West Africa, which on 8 August the World Health Organization (WHO) declared a public health emergency of international concern, the Secretary-General appointed the United Nations System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease as well as the Deputy Ebola Coordinator and Operation Crisis Manager and announced the formation of the Global Ebola Response Coalition to ensure integrated support to affected countries, while helping prevent the spread of the disease to other countries. The Security Council then convened in September an emergency session on the public health crisis. By resolution 2177(2014), the Council declared the Ebola outbreak a threat to international peace and security and called on Member States and UN entities to respond urgently. In turn, by resolution 69/1, the General Assembly addressed measures to contain and combat the Ebola outbreak. The international response to contain the outbreak, treat the infected, ensure essential services and preserve stability was coordinated by the newly established United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola.

In the area of HIV/AIDS, data from the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) indicated that there had been a decline in new infections globally from 3.4 million in 2001 to 2.1 million in 2013, a decrease of 38 per cent. AIDS-related deaths had decreased by 35 per cent over the past eight years (from a peak of 2.3 million in 2005 to 1.5 million in 2013). In spite of those gains, HIV/AIDS remained a serious challenge. In some regions, new infections continued to rise and AIDS-related deaths continued unabated. UNAIDS urged the international community to prioritize HIV/AIDS in the post-2015 development agenda and aim at ambitious targets.

According to WHO, non-communicable diseases (NCDs) were the leading cause of death and disability worldwide, and progress in combating them remained uneven between developed and developing countries. Eighty per cent of NCD fatalities occurred in developing countries, largely due to inadequate technical capacity and financial resources within those countries.

In April, the United Nations Children's Fund and the World Bank convened the third high-level meeting of the Sanitation and Water for All global partnership, at which 55 countries, donors and banks made more than 370 new specific commitments towards ensuring adequate water and sanitation for all. As malaria remained a serious global health challenge, WHO rolled out a new global malaria strategy that set new targets in alignment with the post-2015 development agenda. As at the end of 2014, 179 States and the European Union had become parties to the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, of which 80 per cent had adopted or strengthened tobacco control legislation after ratifying the Convention.

Complex emergencies caused by conflicts and large-scale population displacement continued to have serious implications for food security. The World Food Programme (WFP) concurrently responded to six Level 2 and six Level 3 emergencies, including severe and complex emergencies in the Central African Republic, Iraq, South Sudan and Syria. In total, WFP provided food assistance for 80 million people in 82 countries, most of them women and children. The Programme received its highest-ever level of voluntary contributions, totalling $5.38 billion, 79 per cent of which was directed to emergencies.

According to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), during the period 2012–14, 805 million people worldwide were chronically undernourished—209 million fewer than in the period 1990–1992. The Millennium Development Goals hunger target of halving the proportion of undernourished people in developing countries by 2015 was within reach; however, the developing world was not on track to achieve the World Food Summit target of halving the number of undernourished people by 2015. Thirty-three countries—26 in Africa and 7 in Asia—remained in need of food assistance owing to conflict, crop failures, high domestic food prices or a combination of those factors.

The Second International Conference on Nutrition, organized by FAO and WHO, resulted in the Rome Declaration on Nutrition committing world leaders to establish national policies for eradicating malnutrition in all its forms and transforming food systems so as to make nutritious diets available to all.

The year 2014 was the International Year of Family Farming, which focused global attention on the significant role of family and smallholder farming in ensuring food security and poverty alleviation.

AIDS prevention and control

Implementation of Declaration of Commitment and Political Declaration

Report of Secretary-General. In April, the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/68/825] to the General Assembly on progress made towards achieving the 2015 targets outlined in the 2011 Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS [YUN 2011, p. 1135]. He noted that new HIV infections and AIDS-related deaths globally were declining. The estimated number of new HIV infections globally dropped from 3.4 million in 2001 to 2.3 million in 2012—a decline of 33 per cent—while the annual number of AIDS-related deaths dropped from 2.3 million in 2005 to 1.6 million in 2012—a decline of 30 per cent. The number of children newly infected with HIV in 2012 was 260,000—a 52 per cent drop compared to 2001 and a 35 per cent drop over the preceding three years. In an encouraging sign of the sustainability of the AIDS response, many Governments, including those in low- and middle-income countries, were taking steps to increase domestic public sector financing for HIV-related activities.

Those positive global trends notwithstanding, not all regions and population groups reported progress. New HIV infections continued to increase in Eastern Europe, Central Asia, the Middle East and North Africa, while the pace of AIDS-related deaths in those regions continued unabated. As at December 2012, an estimated 35.3 million people worldwide were living with HIV. Of the 35.3 million cases, 25.1 million, or 71 per cent, were in sub-Saharan Africa, as were 70 per cent of the cases of new HIV global infections and 75 per cent of AIDS-related global deaths. Women comprised 50 per cent of people living with HIV worldwide, and an estimated 58 per cent in sub-Saharan Africa. Outside sub-Saharan Africa, the largest concentration of people living with HIV was in the Asia-Pacific region with 4.8 million people, of whom 36 per cent were women.

Progress in the HIV response effort continued to be held back by the limited availability of antiretroviral drugs in many regions, as well as by HIV-related stigma, discrimination, and punitive laws and practices. As at December 2012, lifesaving antiretroviral treatment had reached only about one in three eligible people worldwide. Access to HIV treatment remained extremely low in Eastern Europe, Central Asia, the Middle East and North Africa, and was also notably lower in West and Central Africa compared to Eastern and Southern Africa. Children were roughly half as likely as adults to obtain antiretroviral therapy, while HIV-related mortality rates among adolescents increased by 50 per cent since 2005. Surveys conducted in 35 countries through the People Living with HIV Stigma Index indicated that discriminatory behaviour towards people living with HIV remained relatively common. Punitive legal frameworks also continued to undermine effective action to address the HIV-related needs of key populations. In 2013, 63 countries maintained HIV-specific provisions that allowed for the prosecution of HIV non-disclosure, exposure and/or transmission. Most countries retained laws that criminalized some aspect of sex work, and in some regions, introduced new punitive laws that further criminalized and/or limited the freedom of association and expression of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender populations.

The Secretary-General recommended that Governments, civil society, international donors, the UN system and other key partners implement a series of joint actions to enhance the AIDS response effort. He highlighted the need to expedite progress towards the 2015 targets; ensure equitable and non-discriminatory access to HIV services for all persons; end punitive laws and law enforcement that acted as barriers to health and HIV services and replace them with protective ones; develop new, ambitious targets to end the AIDS epidemic; and integrate the HIV response as a development priority in the post-2015 agenda (see p. 960).

On 30 June (decision 68/555), the General Assembly took note of the report of the Secretary-General and the recommendations contained therein as input for consideration in the discussions on formulating the post-2015 development agenda. It decided to convene a high-level meeting on HIV/AIDS in 2016, preferably in the second half of the year, and to undertake the necessary consultations to determine the modalities and organizational arrangements for such a meeting during its seventieth session, but no later than December 2015. On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the item entitled “Implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declarations on HIV/AIDS” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS

The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS)—the main advocate for global action on HIV/AIDS—had eleven co-sponsors in 2014: the International Labour Organization, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the United Nations Children’s Fund, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, the World Food Programme (WFP), the World Health Organization (WHO) and the World Bank.

Programme Coordinating Board

The UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board (PCB), at its thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth meetings (Geneva, 1–3 July and 9–11 December) [UNAIDS/PCB (33)/13.23; UNAIDS/PCB (34)/14.16.rev.1], considered the report of its Executive Director; the report of the chair of the Committee of Cosponsoring Organizations; and the performance and financial reports for 2012–2013.

At the thirty-fourth meeting, the Executive Director summarized the latest UNAIDS data as featured in the Global report: UNAIDS report on the global aids epidemic 2013. The data indicated that worldwide there had been a 33 per cent decrease in new HIV infections since 2001, a 30 per cent decrease in AIDS-related mortality since 2005, and a 52 per cent decline in new HIV infections among children since 2001. More than 9.7 million people were accessing HIV treatment at the end of 2012. Significant challenges remained, however: only one out of every three children had access to HIV treatment; just 24 per cent of people living with HIV in sub-Saharan Africa had an undetectable viral load; 50 young women worldwide were infected with HIV every hour; and new infections were on the rise in several regions and countries. The Board further considered, inter alia, an update on the AIDS response in the post-2015 development agenda [UNAIDS/PCB (34)/14.4] and the issue of HIV, adolescents and youth [UNAIDS/PCB (34)/14.5]. At that same meeting, the Board confirmed Australia as Chair and elected Zimbabwe as Vice Chair for the period of 1 January to 31 December 2014. The Board also requested UNAIDS to intensify its coordinated technical support to Governments, civil society and key populations, and to report to the thirty-fifth PCB meeting on concrete actions taken to reduce stigma and discrimination in all its forms, consistent with the United Nations High Level Political Declarations of 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1411] and 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1135], as well as the UNAIDS 2011–2015 Strategy: Getting to Zero [YUN 2010, p. 1222].

At the thirty-fifth meeting, the Executive Director reported that notable gains had been made towards the vision of zero HIV/AIDS discrimination and other goals, but that key challenges remained. He highlighted the urgent need to transform HIV/AIDS data collection and analysis processes, and to address the social, political and economic drivers of HIV. Having taken note of the report of the Executive Director, the Board further considered, inter alia, an update on the AIDS response in the post-2015 development agenda [UNAIDS/PCB (35)/14.20] and the issues of universal access [UNAIDS/PCB (35)/14.22]; paediatric HIV treatment, care and support [UNAIDS/PCB (35)/14.23]; and actions to reduce stigma and discrimination [UNAIDS/PCB (35)/14.24 rev.1]. The Board requested UNAIDS to develop the next phase AIDS strategy beginning in 2018, and to hold, before the end of 2014, a financing dialogue to ensure predictable and sustained funding. The Board also took note of the Report of the Chair of the Committee of Cosponsoring Organizations and its emphasis on responding to HIV among people who injected drugs in Eastern Europe, Central Asia and other regions, as well as on the Committee's partnerships with civil society.

In July, UNDP and UNFPA submitted a joint report [DP/2014/24-DP/FPA/2014/16 & Corr.1] (see p. 1218) that addressed the implementation of decisions and recommendations of the thirty-second and thirty-third PCB meetings that had been held in June and December 2013.

Gap report

In July, UNAIDS released the Gap report containing the latest HIV/AIDS data and serving as a follow-up to the 2013 UNAIDS Global report. According to the Gap report, there were 2.1 million new HIV infections worldwide in 2013—a decline of 38 per cent from the 2001 figure of 3.4 million. In the preceding three years alone, new HIV infections had dropped by 13 per cent. The number of children newly infected with HIV in 2013 stood at 240,000—a 58 per cent decrease from the 2002 peak of 580,000 children. Access to antiretroviral medicines for pregnant women living with HIV had averted more than 900,000 new HIV infections among children since 2009. Globally, there had been a decline in HIV/AIDS related deaths: in 2013, there were 1.5 million deaths—a decrease of 35 per cent from the 2005 peak—and in the preceding three years alone, AIDS-related deaths had fallen by 19 per cent. UNAIDS estimated that $19.1 billion was invested in the AIDS response in low- and middle-income countries in 2013, an increase of about $250 million over the amounts invested in 2012. The increase was largely driven by domestic investments by countries themselves after international HIV/AIDS assistance had flattened in the preceding years.

The Gap report highlighted several opportunities to address challenges and potentially turn the tide of the AIDS epidemic. New HIV infections continued to rise in some regions; fifteen countries accounted for more than 75 per cent of the 2.1 million new HIV infections that occurred in 2013. Many of those countries were in Eastern Europe and Central Asia, where 0.6 per cent of adults were living with HIV; the Middle East and North Africa, where new infections had increased by 31 per cent since 2001; and Western Europe and North America, where new infections had increased by 6 per cent over that same period. Twenty-two million people, or three in five people living with HIV, were still not accessing antiretroviral therapy.

In order to achieve the 2015 global AIDS targets, UNAIDS recommended identifying and addressing HIV/AIDS medicine stock-outs in real time; tracking HIV treatment policy implementation; and projecting future trends to identify countries that were not on track. The report also outlined eight action points for ending the AIDS epidemic, including protecting human rights; investing in communities; focusing on local epidemics and populations; decentralizing delivery of HIV services; expanding the choices for HIV prevention and treatment; integrating HIV programmes with other health and development programmes; and innovating and investing in science for a cure and a vaccine.

Non-communicable diseases

Prevention and control of non-communicable diseases

Inter-Agency Task Force. On 7 April, in response to General Assembly resolution 66/2 [YUN 2011, p. 1146] and Economic and Social Council resolution 2013/12 [YUN 2013, p. 1174], the Secretary-General submitted to the Council a report [E/2014/55] by the WHO Director General on progress achieved since July 2013 by the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases (NCDs), as proposed in an earlier report of the Director General [ibid.]. Annexed thereto was the report of the first meeting (Geneva, 2–3 October 2013) of the Task Force to develop draft terms of reference for consideration by Member States at a formal meeting convened by WHO (Geneva, 13–14 November 2013), including a division of tasks and responsibilities for UN funds, programmes and agencies and other international organizations.

At its second meeting on 29 and 30 January 2014, the Task Force designed a joint work plan for the 2014–2015 period to ensure policy coherence and accountability among UN organizations in their implementation of the WHO Global Action Plan for NCDs 2013–2020 [YUN 2013, p. 1174]. The Director General recommended that the Council continue to encourage Member States to implement the Global Action Plan; and that the Council adopt the Inter-Agency Task Force Terms of Reference, taking into account the recommendations of the 134th WHO Executive Board session and the sixty-seventh World Health Assembly (see p. 1366).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 May [meeting 85], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/271 [draft: A/68/L.45] without vote [agenda item 118].

Scope and modalities of the comprehensive review and assessment of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases

The General Assembly,

Recalling the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and in particular paragraph 65, by which it decided to hold a comprehensive review and assessment in 2014 of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

Recognizing the continued negative impact of non-communicable diseases, including the socioeconomic and development challenges faced by all countries, in particular low- and middle-income countries, and the need for continued concerted action and a coordinated response, including monitoring of the progress at the national, regional and global levels,

Mindful of the need to maintain strong national, regional and international political commitment towards the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Director General of the World Health Organization on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

1. Decides to convene a high-level meeting to undertake the comprehensive review and assessment on 10 and 11 July 2014, consisting of an opening plenary meeting on 10 July from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., followed by plenary meetings from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., and two consecutive round tables on 11 July from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., followed by a closing plenary meeting from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.;

2. Also decides that the comprehensive review and assessment shall take stock of the progress made in implementing the commitments in the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, identify and address gaps and reaffirm the political commitment in response to the challenge of non-communicable diseases;

3. Further decides that the speakers at the opening plenary meeting will be the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, the Director General of the World Health Organization, the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and a representative of civil society who will be chosen by the President of the Assembly from among non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and in consultation with Member States;

4. Decides that the overall theme of the review will be “Taking stock of progress in implementing the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases and scaling up multi-stakeholder and national multisectoral responses to the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, including in the context of the post-2015 development agenda”;

5. Also decides that the organizational arrangements for the round tables will be as follows:

- (a) The specific themes of the round tables will be:
 - (i) Round table 1: “Strengthening national and regional capacities, including health systems, and effective multisectoral and whole-of-government responses for the prevention and control, including monitoring, of non-communicable diseases”;
 - (ii) Round table 2: “Fostering and strengthening national, regional and international partnerships and cooperation in support of efforts to address non-communicable diseases”;
- (b) Each round table will be co-chaired at the ministerial or high official level, with the co-chairs to be appointed by the President of the General Assembly;
- (c) Participation in each round table will include Member States, observers and representatives of entities of the United Nations system, civil society and non-governmental organizations, academic institutions and the private sector;

(d) In order to promote interactive and substantive discussions, there will be no pre-established list of speakers for the round tables;

6. Requests the President of the General Assembly to draw up a list of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council that may participate in the high-level meeting, including the round tables;

7. Also requests the President of the General Assembly to draw up a list of representatives of other relevant non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations, academic institutions and the private sector who may participate in the round tables, taking into account the principle of transparency and the principle of equitable geographic representation, and to submit the proposed list to Member States for their consideration on a non-objection basis and bring the list to the attention of the Assembly;

8. Decides that the closing plenary meeting will comprise the presentation of summaries of the round tables and the adoption of a concise, focused, action-oriented outcome document, requests the President of the General Assembly to produce a draft text and to convene informal consultations as appropriate in order to enable sufficient consideration and agreement by Member States, and also requests the President of the Assembly to appoint, as soon as possible, two co-facilitators for the consultation process;

9. Notes the ongoing regional multi-stakeholder consultations of the World Health Organization, regional commissions and other relevant agencies and their contributions to the preparations for the high-level meeting as well as to the meeting itself;

10. Requests the President of the General Assembly to organize, no later than June 2014, in consultation with representatives of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia, an informal interactive hearing with non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia to provide input to the comprehensive review and assessment;

11. Also requests the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with Member States, to finalize the organizational arrangements for the review, including the list of speakers for the plenary meetings to be held on 10 July 2014, the identification of the civil society representative to speak at the opening plenary meeting, and the assignment of participants to the round tables, taking into account the level of representation as well as equitable geographical representation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 13 June [meeting 24], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2014/10 [draft: E/2014/L.13] without vote [agenda item 10 (f)].

United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2013/12 of 22 July 2013 on the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases,

Taking note of General Assembly resolution 68/271 of 13 May 2014 on the scope and modalities of the comprehensive review and assessment of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases to be held on 10 and 11 July 2014,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Director-General of the World Health Organization on the Task Force,

Acknowledging that the global burden and threat of non-communicable diseases, principally cardiovascular diseases, cancer, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, which are linked to four main risk factors, namely, tobacco use, harmful use of alcohol, an unhealthy diet and lack of physical activity, as well as the global burden of mental health issues constitute major challenges for the economic and social development of many Member States and may lead to increasing inequalities within and between countries and populations,

1. Takes note of the report of the World Health Organization formal meeting of Member States to complete the work on the terms of reference for the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases, and the recommendation of the World Health Assembly to submit the proposed terms of reference to the Economic and Social Council;

2. Endorses the terms of reference for the Task Force, including a division of tasks and responsibilities for United Nations funds, programmes and agencies and other international organizations, as contained in the appendix to the above-mentioned report of the Director-General of the World Health Organization;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its 2015 session on the implementation of its resolution 2013/12, and in this regard decides that, under the agenda item entitled “Coordination, programme and other questions”, the title of the sub-item “Tobacco or health” shall be revised to read “Prevention and control of non-communicable diseases”.

High-level meeting. In accordance with resolution 68/271 (see p. 1343), the General Assembly held a high-level meeting (New York, 10–11 July) to discuss progress achieved in the prevention and control of NCDs since the Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47]. The opening plenary included statements by the General Assembly President, the Secretary-General, the WHO Director General and the UNDP Administrator.

The Assembly President stated that developing countries had the political will to prevent and control NCDs, but were unsuccessful in doing so because they lacked the technical and financial resources needed to address the significant health and socioeconomic impact of NCDs. Development assistance dedicated to health amounted to approximately $31 billion, of which only $377 million was being directed towards NCDs. Integrating NCDs into bilateral and international development cooperation, as well as into national development agendas and prevention strategies, was critical for achieving better utilization of the billions of dollars in health development assistance. The Under-Secretary-General and Chef de Cabinet for the Executive Office of the Secretary-General delivered a statement on behalf of the Secretary-General, who identified NCDs as a major and growing challenge to development. During the preceding three years, Governments had instituted more institutional, legal, financial and service arrangements to prevent and control NCDs. The Secretary-General hoped that the high-level meeting would help frame the concrete actions that countries had to take between 2014 and the third high-level meeting on NCDs in 2018.

The Director General of WHO highlighted the steps taken by Governments worldwide to combat NCDs. Of the 172 countries that reported data in 2014, 95 per cent had a unit or department in the Ministry of Health responsible for NCDs, and about half had instituted an integrated NCD operational plan with a dedicated budget. The proportion of countries conducting NCD risk factor surveys jumped from 30 per cent in 2011 to 63 per cent in 2013. The progress was highly uneven, however, as evidenced by a lack of capacity in the developing world, where 85 per cent of premature deaths from NCDs were occurring. NCDs had also overtaken infectious diseases as the world's leading cause of morbidity and mortality. The public health mindset needed a shift in focus from cure to prevention, and a transition to coordinated, multisectoral and multi-stakeholder action.

The UNDP Administrator stated that low- and middle-income countries were bearing the brunt of NCDs. For those countries, the economic cost of the four main NCDs (cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes) was predicted to exceed $7 trillion between 2011 and 2025, roughly equivalent to $500 billion per year, or 4 per cent of the gross domestic product of low and middle-income countries as measured in 2010. UNDP welcomed ongoing discussions on proposed targets to reduce NCD-related mortality and strengthen the implementation of the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control—the world's first international treaty on a health issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 July [meeting 100], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/300 [draft: A/68/L.53] without vote [agenda item 118].

Outcome document of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the comprehensive review and assessment of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases

Adopts the following outcome document:

Outcome document of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the comprehensive review and assessment of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases

We, Ministers and representatives of States and Governments and heads of delegations, assembled at the United Nations on 10 and 11 July 2014 to take stock of the progress made in implementing the commitments set out in the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 66/2 of 19 September 2011,

Intensifying our efforts towards a world free of the avoidable burden of non-communicable diseases

1. Reaffirm the political declaration, which has catalysed action and retains great potential for engendering sustainable improved health and human development outcomes;

2. Reaffirm our commitment to address the global burden and threat of non-communicable diseases, which constitute one of the major challenges for development in the twenty-first century, undermine social and economic development throughout the world, threaten the achievement of internationally agreed development goals and may lead to increasing inequalities within and between countries and populations;

3. Reiterate that the most prevalent non-communicable diseases, namely, cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, are primarily linked to four common risk factors, namely, tobacco use, harmful use of alcohol, unhealthy diet and physical inactivity;

4. Reiterate our concern regarding the rising levels of obesity in different regions, particularly among children and youth;

5. Recognize that mental and neurological conditions are an important cause of morbidity and contribute to the global non-communicable disease burden, in respect of which there is a need to provide equitable access to effective programmes and health-care interventions, as described in the comprehensive mental health action plan 2013–2020 of the World Health Organization;

6. Recall the Moscow Declaration, adopted at the first Global Ministerial Conference on Healthy Lifestyles and Non-communicable Disease Control, held in April 2011, as well as all the regional initiatives undertaken on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, including the declaration of the Heads of State and Government of the Caribbean Community entitled “Uniting to stop the epidemic of chronic non-communicable diseases”, adopted in September 2007, the Libreville Declaration on Health and Environment in Africa, adopted in August 2008, the statement of the Commonwealth Heads of Government on action to combat non-communicable diseases, adopted in November 2009, the declaration of commitment of the Fifth Summit of the Americas, adopted in June 2009, the Parma Declaration on Environment and Health, adopted by the member States in the European region of the World Health Organization in March 2010, the Dubai Declaration on Diabetes and Chronic Non-communicable Diseases in the Middle East and Northern Africa Region, adopted in December 2010, the European Charter on Counteracting Obesity, adopted in November 2006, the Aruba Call for Action on Obesity of June 2011, and the Honiara Communiqué on addressing non-communicable disease challenges in the Pacific region, adopted in July 2011;

Taking stock: progress achieved since 2011

7. Welcome the development by the World Health Organization, in accordance with paragraph 61 of the political declaration, of the comprehensive global monitoring framework, including the set of 9 voluntary global targets for achievement by 2025 and a set of 25 indicators to be applied across regional and country settings in order to monitor trends and assess progress made in the implementation of national strategies and plans on non-communicable diseases, and the adoption of the framework by the World Health Assembly;

8. Also welcome the endorsement by the World Health Assembly of the Global Action Plan for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases 2013–2020 and its adoption of the nine indicators to inform reporting on progress made in implementing the Global Action Plan;

9. Welcome the establishment of the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases and the endorsement of its terms of reference by the Economic and Social Council on 13 June 2014;

10. Welcome the request that the Director General of the World Health Organization prepare, for consideration during the sixty-eighth World Health Assembly, in consultation with Member States, United Nations organizations and other relevant stakeholders, as appropriate, and within existing resources, a framework for country action, for adaptation to different contexts, taking into account the Helsinki Statement on Health in All Policies, adopted at the Eighth Global Conference on Health Promotion, aimed at supporting national efforts to improve health, ensure health protection, health equity and health system functioning, including through action across sectors on determinants of health and risk factors of non-communicable diseases, based on best available knowledge and evidence;

11. Also welcome the endorsement by the World Health Assembly of the terms of reference for the comprehensive global coordination mechanism for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases;

12. Recognize the remarkable progress achieved at the national level, since September 2011, including an increase in the number of countries which have an operational national non-communicable disease policy with a budget for implementation, from 32 per cent of countries in 2010 to 50 per cent of countries in 2013;

13. Recognize that progress in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases has been insufficient and highly uneven, due in part to their complexity and challenging nature, and that continued and increased efforts are essential for achieving a world free of the avoidable burden of non-communicable diseases;

14. Acknowledge that, despite some improvements, commitments to promote, establish or support and strengthen, by 2013, multisectoral national policies and plans for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and to increase and prioritize budgetary allocations for addressing non-communicable diseases, were often not translated into action, owing to a number of factors, including the lack of national capacity;

15. Acknowledge that many countries, in particular developing countries, are struggling to move from commitment to action and, in this regard, reiterate our call upon Member States to consider implementing, as appropriate, within national contexts, policies and evidence-based, affordable, cost-effective, population-wide and multisectoral interventions, including a reduction of modifiable risk factors of non-communicable diseases as described in appendix 3 to the Global Action Plan for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases 2013–2020;

16. Recognize that affordable interventions to reduce environmental and occupational health risks are available and that prioritization and implementation of such interventions in accordance with national conditions can contribute to reducing the burden of non-communicable diseases;

17. Reiterate our call upon Member States to consider implementing, as appropriate, according to national circumstances, policy options and cost-effective, affordable, multisectoral interventions for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases in order to achieve the nine voluntary global targets for non-communicable diseases by 2025;

Reaffirming our leadership: commitments and actions

18. Reaffirm our commitment to advance the implementation of multisectoral, cost-effective, population-wide interventions in order to reduce the impact of the four common behavioural risk factors for non-communicable diseases, through the implementation of relevant international agreements, strategies, national policies, legislation and development priorities, including educational, regulatory and fiscal measures, without prejudice to the right of sovereign nations to determine and establish their taxation policies and other policies, where appropriate, by involving all relevant sectors, civil society and communities, as appropriate;

19. Recognize that the implementation of the Global Action Plan for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases 2013–2020, the Global Strategy on Diet, Physical Activity and Health, the Global Strategy to Reduce the Harmful Use of Alcohol, the Global Strategy for Infant and Young Child Feeding of the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, and the World Health Organization Set of Recommendations on the Marketing of Foods and Non-alcoholic Beverages to Children, as appropriate, will accelerate efforts to reduce non-communicable diseases, and reiterate our call upon Member States to mobilize political will and financial resources for that purpose;

20. Reiterate our commitment to accelerate the implementation of the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control by States parties, and encourage countries to consider becoming parties to the Convention;

21. Call upon Member States to take steps, including, where appropriate, effective legislation, cross-sectoral structures, processes, methods and resources that enable societal policies which take into account and address the impacts on health determinants, health protection, health equity and health system functioning, and which measure and track economic, social and environmental determinants and disparities in health;

22. Call upon Member States to develop, as appropriate, institutional capacity with adequate knowledge and skills for assessing the impact on health of policy initiatives in all sectors, identifying solutions and negotiating policies across sectors to achieve improved outcomes from the perspective of health, health equity and health system functioning;

23. Recognize the importance of universal health coverage in national health systems, and call upon Member States to strengthen health systems, including health-care infrastructure, human resources for health, and health and social protection systems, particularly in developing countries, in order to respond effectively and equitably to the health-care needs of people with non-communicable diseases throughout the life cycle;

24. Continue to scale up, where appropriate, a package of proven, cost-effective interventions, including those identified in appendix 3 to the Global Action Plan;

25. Reiterate the importance of increased access to cost-effective cancer screening programmes as determined by national situations, as well as the importance of promoting increased access to cost-effective vaccinations to prevent infections associated with cancer, as part of national immunization schedules;

26. Acknowledge that limited progress has been made in implementing paragraph 44 of the annex to General Assembly resolution 66/2, and although an increased number of private sector entities have started to produce and promote food products consistent with a healthy diet, such products are not always broadly affordable, accessible and available in all communities within countries;

27. Continue to encourage policies that support the production and manufacture of and facilitate access to foods that contribute to a healthy diet and provide greater opportunities for the utilization of healthy local agricultural products and foods, thereby contributing to efforts to cope with the challenges and take advantage of opportunities presented by globalization and to achieve food security and adequate nutrition;

28. Reaffirm the primary role and responsibility of Governments in responding to the challenge of non-communicable diseases, including through engaging non-governmental organizations, the private sector and other sectors of society to generate effective responses for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases at the global, national and local levels;

29. Recall that effective non-communicable disease prevention and control requires leadership and multisectoral approaches to health at the governmental level, including, as appropriate, health-in-all-policies and whole-of-government approaches across sectors beyond health, while protecting public health policies for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases from undue influence by any form of real, perceived or potential conflict of interest;

Moving forward: national commitments

30. Commit to addressing non-communicable diseases as a matter of priority in national development plans, as appropriate within national contexts and the international development agenda, and to take the following measures with the engagement of all relevant sectors, including civil society and communities, as appropriate:

(a) Enhance governance:

(i) By 2015, consider setting national targets for 2025 and process indicators based on national situations, taking into account the nine voluntary global targets for non-communicable diseases, building on guidance provided by the World Health Organization, to focus on efforts to address the impacts of non-communicable diseases and to assess the progress made in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases and their risk factors and determinants;

(ii) By 2015, consider developing or strengthening national multisectoral policies and plans to achieve the national targets by 2025, taking into account the Global Action Plan for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases 2013–2020;

(iii) Continue to develop, strengthen and implement, as appropriate, multisectoral public policies and action plans to promote health education and health literacy, with a particular focus on populations with low health awareness and/or literacy;

(iv) Raise awareness about the national public health burden caused by non-communicable diseases and the relationship between non-communicable diseases, poverty and social and economic development;

(v) Integrate measures to address non-communicable diseases into health planning and national development plans and policies, including the design process and implementation of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework;

(vi) Consider establishing, as appropriate to the respective national context, a national multisectoral mechanism, such as a high-level commission, agency or task force for engagement, policy coherence and mutual accountability of different spheres of policymaking that have a bearing on non-communicable diseases, in order to implement health-in-all-policies and whole-of-government and whole-of-society approaches, and to monitor and act on the determinants of non-communicable diseases, including social and environmental determinants;

(vii) Enhance the capacity, mechanisms and mandates, as appropriate, of relevant authorities in facilitating and ensuring action across governmental sectors;

(viii) Strengthen the capacity of ministries of health to exercise a strategic leadership and coordination role in policy development that engages all stakeholders across government, non-governmental organizations, civil society and the private sector, ensuring that issues relating to non-communicable diseases receive an appropriate, coordinated, comprehensive and integrated response;

(ix) Align international cooperation on non-communicable diseases with national plans concerning non-communicable diseases in order to strengthen aid effectiveness and the development impact of external resources in support of non-communicable diseases;

(x) Develop and implement national policies and plans, as relevant, with financial and human resources allocated particularly to addressing non-communicable diseases, in which social determinants are included;

(b) By 2016, as appropriate, reduce risk factors for non-communicable diseases and underlying social determinants through the implementation of interventions and policy options to create health-promoting environments, building on guidance set out in appendix 3 to the Global Action Plan;

(c) By 2016, as appropriate, strengthen and orient health systems to address the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases and the underlying social determinants through people-centred primary health care and universal health coverage throughout the life cycle, building on guidance set out in appendix 3 to the Global Action Plan;

(d) Consider the possible linkages between non-communicable diseases and some communicable diseases, such as HIV/AIDS, call for the integration, as appropriate, of responses to HIV/AIDS and non-communicable diseases, and in this regard call for attention to be given to people living with HIV/AIDS, especially in countries with a high prevalence of HIV/AIDS, in accordance with national priorities;

(e) Continue to promote the inclusion of prevention and control of non-communicable diseases within programmes for sexual and reproductive health and maternal and child health, especially at the primary health-care level, as well as communicable disease programmes, such as those addressing tuberculosis, as appropriate;

(f) Consider the synergies between major non-communicable diseases and other conditions as described in appendix 1 to the Global Action Plan in order to develop a comprehensive response for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases that also recognizes the conditions in which people live and work;

(g) Monitor the trends and determinants of non-communicable diseases and evaluate progress in their prevention and control:

- (i) Assess progress towards attaining the voluntary global targets and report on the results using the indicators established in the comprehensive global monitoring framework, according to the agreed timelines, and use results from monitoring of the 25 indicators and 9 voluntary targets and other sources of data to inform and guide policy and programming, aiming to maximize the impact of interventions and investments on non-communicable disease outcomes;
- (ii) Contribute information on trends in non-communicable diseases to the World Health Organization, according to the agreed timelines on progress made in the implementation of national action plans and on the effectiveness of national policies and strategies, coordinating country reporting with global analyses;
- (iii) Develop or strengthen, as appropriate, surveillance systems to track social disparities in non-communicable diseases and their risk factors as a first step to addressing inequalities, and pursue and promote gender-based approaches for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases on the basis of data disaggregated by sex, age and disability, in an effort to address the critical differences in the risks of morbidity and mortality from non-communicable diseases for women and men;

(h) Continue to strengthen international cooperation in support of national, regional and global plans for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, inter alia, through the exchange of best practices in the areas of health promotion, legislation, regulation, strengthening of health systems, training of health-care personnel and the development of appropriate health-care infrastructure and diagnostics and by promoting the development and dissemination of appropriate, affordable and sustainable transfer of technology on mutually agreed terms for the production of affordable, safe, effective and quality medicines and vaccines, while recognizing the leading role of the World Health Organization as the primary specialized agency for health in that regard;

31. Continue to strengthen international cooperation through North-South, South-South and triangular cooperation in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases to promote at the national, regional and international levels an enabling environment to facilitate healthy lifestyles and choices, bearing in mind that South-South cooperation is not a substitute for, but rather a complement to, North-South cooperation;

32. Continue to explore the provision of adequate, predictable and sustained resources, through domestic, bilateral, regional and multilateral channels, including traditional and voluntary innovative financing mechanisms;

Moving forward: international commitments

33. Invite the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development to consider developing a purpose code for non-communicable diseases in order to improve the tracking of official development assistance in support of national efforts for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases;

34. Reiterate our commitment to actively promote national and international investments and strengthen national capacity for quality research and development, in all aspects relating to the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, in a sustainable and cost-effective manner, while noting the importance of continuing to incentivize innovation in public health, inter alia, as appropriate, through a sound and balanced intellectual property rights system, which is important, inter alia, for the development of new medicines, as recognized in the Doha Declaration on the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) and Public Health;

35. Reaffirm the right to use, to the fullest extent, the provisions contained in the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement), the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration, and, when formal acceptance procedures are completed, the amendment to article 31 of the TRIPS Agreement, which provide flexibilities for the protection of public health, and in particular to promote access to medicines for all and encourage the provision of assistance to developing countries in this regard;

36. Give due consideration to addressing non-communicable diseases in the elaboration of the post-2015 development agenda, taking into account, in particular, their serious socioeconomic consequences and determinants and their links to poverty;

37. Call upon the World Health Organization, in consultation with Member States, in the context of the comprehensive global coordination mechanism for the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, while ensuring appropriate protection from vested interests, to develop, before the end of 2015, an approach that can be used to register and publish contributions of the private sector, philanthropic entities and civil society to the achievement of the nine voluntary targets for non-communicable diseases;

Towards the world we want: follow-up

38. Request the Secretary-General, in collaboration with Member States, the World Health Organization and relevant funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, to submit to the General Assembly, by the end of 2017, for consideration by Member States, a report on the progress achieved in the implementation of the present outcome document and of the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, in preparation for a comprehensive review, in 2018, of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases.

Global status report. Following on its first global report on the prevention and control of NCDs [YUN 2010, p. 1223], WHO, in its second global report in 2014, provided the latest estimates on NCD mortality, available as at 2012. As the leading cause of death globally, NCDs were responsible for 38 million (68 per cent) of the world's 56 million deaths. More than 40 per cent of them (16 million) were premature deaths of people under the age of 70 years. Almost three quarters of all NCD deaths (28 million), and the majority of premature deaths (82 per cent), occurred in low- and middle-income countries. The report also noted the status of such voluntary global NCD targets [YUN 2013, p. 1174] as concerned reducing the harmful use of alcohol; insufficient physical activity; reducing salt/sodium intake; reducing tobacco use and hypertension; halting the rise of obesity and diabetes; and improving coverage of treatment for prevention of heart attacks and strokes and access to basic technologies and medicines.

Tobacco

WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control

The WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC) was adopted by the World Health Assembly in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1251] and entered into force in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1328]. It facilitated an internationally coordinated response to combating the tobacco epidemic, and set out specific steps for Governments to take. At the end of 2014, 179 States and the European Union were parties to the Convention.

Global progress report. The 2014 FCTC global progress report provided an overview of the status of implementation of the Convention, based on information submitted by the Parties in the 2014 reporting cycle. Overall, 80 per cent of the Parties strengthened their existing or adopted new tobacco control legislation after ratifying the Convention, and over two thirds reported recent development, adoption and implementation of national tobacco control programmes, a significant increase over the previous reporting period. The average implementation rate for substantive Articles of the Convention stood at almost 60 per cent, compared with just over 50 per cent in 2010. The proportion of countries levying tobacco excise taxes increased to 92 per cent, up from 67 per cent in 2010 and 85 per cent in 2012. Overall, more than two thirds of Parties increased tobacco tax rates since 2012.

Progress was uneven when it came to the implementation rate for other Articles. For example, the average implementation rate for the Article 5 provisions (General obligations) was 65 per cent, while the average implementation rate for Article 22 (International cooperation) was 37 per cent, and for Article 19 (Liability) only 14 per cent. One third of the Parties were yet to put in place legislative measures in line with the requirements of the Convention; many Parties were also yet to designate a national tobacco control focal point and increase full-time capacity in tobacco control. Strengthening of national capacity and legislation for tobacco control, as well as strengthening of the national coordination mechanism and international cooperation were necessary steps that would have an overarching impact on the Convention's implementation.

Water and sanitation

The United Nations Children's Fund and the World Bank convened the third high-level meeting (Washington, D.C., 11 April) of Sanitation and Water for All (swA), a global partnership of Governments, donors, civil society organizations, the private sector, community-based organizations, research and learning institutions, and several UN agencies working together to achieve universal access to clean water and adequate sanitation, in line with the water and sanitation targets of the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 49]. The meeting was attended by 21 ministers of finance and 35 ministers responsible for water and sanitation, as well as several ministers of health. Other attendees included donors and development banks along with senior representatives of civil society and the United Nations. At the meeting, 55 swA partner countries, donors and banks made some 370 new commitments for increasing and improving the use of financial resources, reducing inequality in access, building the capacity of institutions charged with delivering water and sanitation services, and coordinating resources more effectively.

On 19 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/215 on the International Decade for Action, "Water for Life", 2005–2015, and further efforts to achieve the sustainable development of water resources (see p. 1166).

Malaria

Roll Back Malaria initiative

On 25 April, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report [A/68/854] of the WHO Director General submitted in accordance with Assembly resolution 67/299 [YUN 2013, p. 1178] on consolidating gains and accelerating efforts to control and eliminate malaria, particularly in Africa, by 2015. Using data received from malaria-endemic countries and a range of organizations, the Director General reviewed progress made in the implementation of resolution 67/299; detailed the adoption and scaling-up of interventions recommended by the WHO for malaria-endemic countries; assessed progress towards the 2015 global malaria targets, including Millennium Development Goal 6; and provided recommendations for ensuring that progress was accelerated up to and beyond 2015.

Malaria continued to pose a serious challenge to global health. In 2012, there were an estimated 207 million cases worldwide. Of those, 627,000 involved fatalities affecting mostly children under the age of five in sub-Saharan Africa. Malaria remained concentrated in 17 countries where some 80 per cent of the fatalities occurred. The Democratic Republic of the Congo and Nigeria accounted for approximately 40 per cent of malaria mortality worldwide. The South East Asia region—the second most-affected part of the world—India bore the highest malaria burden, followed by Indonesia and Myanmar.

There had been some notable progress in the fight against malaria. Between 2000 and 2012, a substantial scale-up of malaria interventions led to a 42 per cent decline in malaria mortality rates globally, saving an estimated 3.3 million lives. About 90 per cent or three million of those saved were children under five in Africa. The mortality rate among children under the age of five declined by 54 per cent in Africa and 25 per cent globally. In November 2014, 18 heads of State at the East Asia Summit made a commitment to eliminating the disease from the Asia-Pacific region by 2030. Between 2008 and 2012, Argentina, Egypt, Georgia, Iraq, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation, the Syrian Arab Republic and Uzbekistan reduced their local malaria transmission to zero cases, while Armenia, Morocco and Turkmenistan were certified free of malaria. In the WHO European region, local transmission was confined to three countries in 2012: Azerbaijan, Tajikistan and Turkey; the region was otherwise generally on track to reduce local malaria transmission cases to zero by 2015.

Between 2004 and 2013, international financial disbursements for fighting malaria had expanded tenfold, however, available funding was still substantially less than the $5.1 billion required to achieve universal coverage of malaria interventions. The Director

General urged Member States to step up malaria control and elimination efforts; address the priority actions highlighted in resolution 67/299; and develop both traditional and innovative financing tools to alleviate suffering in the 17 highest-burden countries. In 2013, WHO began developing a new global malaria strategy to provide countries with evidence-based technical guidance for the 2016–2025 period and set new targets in alignment with the post-2015 development agenda.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 September [meeting 108], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/308 [draft: A/68/L.60 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 13].

Consolidating gains and accelerating efforts to control and eliminate malaria in developing countries, particularly in Africa, by 2015

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the period 2001–2010 was proclaimed by the General Assembly as the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa, and that combating HIV/AIDS, malaria, tuberculosis and other diseases is included in the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling also the malaria-related goals and commitments in the outcome document of the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling further its resolution 67/299 of 16 September 2013 and all previous resolutions concerning the struggle against malaria in developing countries, particularly in Africa,

Recalling World Health Assembly resolutions 60.18 of 23 May 2007 and 64.17 of 24 May 2011, urging a broad range of national and international actions to scale up malaria control programmes, and resolution 61.18 of 24 May 2008 on monitoring the achievement of health-related Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling also the commitment made by African leaders to end the epidemic of malaria by ensuring universal and equitable access to quality health care and by improving health systems and health financing, contained in the African Common Position on the post-2015 development agenda,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council relating to the struggle against malaria and diarrhoeal diseases, in particular resolution 1998/36 of 30 July 1998,

Taking note of all declarations and decisions on health issues, in particular those related to malaria, adopted by the Organization of African Unity and the African Union, including the Abuja Declaration on HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases, containing the pledge to allocate at least 15 per cent of national budgets to the health sector, the Abuja call for accelerated action towards universal access to HIV and AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria services in Africa, issued by the Heads of State and Government of the African Union at the special summit of the African Union on HIV and AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria, held in Abuja from 2 to 4 May 2006, the decision of the Assembly of the African Union at its fifteenth ordinary session, held in Kampala from 25 to 27 July 2010, to extend the Abuja call to 2015 to coincide with the Millennium Development Goals, and the declaration of the special summit of the African Union on HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria, held in Abuja from 12 to 16 July 2013,

Recognizing the leadership provided by the African Leaders Malaria Alliance and the continued commitment to help to achieve the 2015 targets, and encouraging the members of the Alliance to continue to provide political leadership at the highest level in the fight against malaria in Africa,

Welcoming the creation of the Asia Pacific Leaders Malaria Alliance, recognizing the leadership and commitment of the Alliance to achieve the 2015 targets, and encouraging the members of the Alliance to continue to provide political leadership at the highest level in the fight against malaria in the Asia-Pacific region,

Taking note of the World Health Organization framework for action for an emergency response to artemisinin resistance in the Greater Mekong subregion of South-East Asia, launched in April 2013,

Welcoming the selection by the Secretary-General of malaria as one of the top priorities of his second mandate and his commitment to develop new partnerships and improve existing ones and to scale up high-impact interventions aimed at significantly reducing the number of deaths from malaria,

Recognizing the linkages among efforts being made to reach the targets set at the Extraordinary Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, held in Abuja on 24 and 25 April 2000, as necessary and important for the attainment of the "Roll Back Malaria" goal and the targets of the Millennium Development Goals by 2010 and 2015, respectively, and welcoming in this regard the commitment of Member States to respond to the specific needs of Africa,

Recognizing also that malaria-related ill health and deaths throughout the world can be substantially reduced with political commitment and commensurate resources if the public is educated and sensitized about malaria and appropriate health services are made available, particularly in countries where the disease is endemic,

Recognizing further that malaria control interventions have a positive impact on overall child and maternal mortality rates and could help African countries and other malaria-endemic countries to reach Millennium Development Goals 4 and 5 of reducing child mortality and improving maternal health, respectively, by 2015,

Acknowledging the progress made in parts of Africa in reversing the high burden of malaria through political engagement and sustainable national malaria control programmes, as well as the progress being made towards achieving by 2015 the goals concerning malaria control set by the World Health Assembly and the Roll Back Malaria Partnership,

Recognizing that, despite the fact that increased global and national investments in malaria control have yielded significant results in decreasing the burden of malaria in many countries and that some countries are moving towards the elimination of malaria, many countries continue to have unacceptably high burdens of malaria and in order to reach internationally agreed development goals, including the health-related Millennium Development Goals, must rapidly increase malaria prevention and control efforts, which rely heavily on medicines and insecticides whose utility is continuously threatened by the development of resistance in humans to antimalarial agents, as well as resistance of mosquitoes to insecticides,

Aware that recent successes in prevention and control are fragile and can be maintained only with sufficient and sustained national and international investment to fund global malaria control efforts fully,

Recognizing the serious challenges relating to substandard, falsified and counterfeit drugs, as well as poor malaria diagnostics,

Expressing concern about the continued morbidity, mortality and debility attributed to malaria, and recalling that more efforts are needed if the Abuja malaria targets and the malaria and Millennium Development Goal targets for 2015 are to be reached on time,

Emphasizing the importance of strengthening health systems to effectively sustain malaria control and elimination,

Commending the efforts of the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Roll Back Malaria Partnership, the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, the World Bank and other partners to fight malaria over the years,

Taking note with appreciation of the Global Malaria Action Plan developed by the Roll Back Malaria Partnership,

1. Welcomes the report prepared by the World Health Organization, and calls for support for the implementation of the recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls for increased support for the implementation of international commitments and goals pertaining to the fight to eliminate malaria as stipulated in the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals;

3. Encourages Member States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system, international institutions, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and civil society to continue to observe World Malaria Day on 25 April in order to raise public awareness of and knowledge about the prevention, control and treatment of malaria as well as the importance of meeting the Millennium Development Goals, and stresses the importance of engaging local communities in this regard;

4. Encourages the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Malaria to continue raising issues relating to malaria in collaboration with other United Nations organizations already working on those issues in the context of the international political and development agendas and to work with national and global leaders to intensify efforts to secure the political commitment, partnerships and funds to drastically reduce malaria deaths by 2015 through increased access to prevention, diagnosis and treatment, especially in Africa;

5. Welcomes the increased funding, while recognizing the need for additional funding, for malaria interventions and for research and development of preventive, diagnostic and control tools from the international community, through funding from multilateral and bilateral sources and from the private sector, as well as by making predictable financing available through appropriate and effective aid modalities and in-country health financing mechanisms aligned with national priorities, which are key to strengthening health systems, including malaria surveillance, and promoting universal and equitable access to high-quality malaria prevention, diagnostic and treatment services, and noting in this regard that a high level of external assistance per person at risk for malaria is associated with a decrease in the incidence of the disease;

6. Urges the international community, United Nations agencies and private organizations and foundations to support the implementation of the Global Malaria Action Plan, including through support for programmes and activities at the country level in order to achieve internationally agreed targets on malaria;

7. Calls upon the international community to continue to support the secretariat of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership and partner organizations, including the World Health Organization, the World Bank and the United Nations Children's Fund, as vital complementary sources of support for the efforts of malaria-endemic countries to combat the disease;

8. Urges the international community to work in a spirit of cooperation towards effective, increased, harmonized, predictable and sustained bilateral and multilateral assistance and research to combat malaria, including support for the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, in order to assist States, in particular malaria-endemic countries, to implement sound national plans, in particular health plans and sanitation plans, including malaria control and elimination strategies which may include evidence-based, cost-effective and context-appropriate environmental management solutions, and integrated management of childhood illnesses, in a sustained and equitable way that, inter alia, contributes to strengthening health system development approaches at the district level;

9. Appeals to the malaria partners to resolve the financial, supply chain and delivery bottlenecks that are responsible for stock-outs of long-lasting insecticide-treated nets, rapid diagnostic tests and artemisinin-based combination therapies at the national level, whenever they occur, including through the strengthening of malaria programme management at the country level;

10. Welcomes the contribution to the mobilization of additional and predictable resources for development by voluntary innovative financing initiatives taken by groups of Member States, and in this regard notes the International Drug Purchase Facility, UNITAID, the International Finance Facility for Immunization, the advance market commitments for vaccines, the GAVI Alliance and the Affordable Medicines Facility for Malaria pilot, and expresses support for the work of the Leading Group on Innovative Financing for Development and its special task force on innovative financing for health;

11. Urges malaria-endemic countries to work towards financial sustainability, to increase, to the extent possible, national resources allocated to malaria control and to create favourable conditions for working with the private sector in order to improve access to good-quality malaria services;

12. Urges Member States to assess and respond to the needs for integrated human resources at all levels of the health system in order to achieve the targets of the Abuja Declaration on Roll Back Malaria in Africa and the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, to take action, as appropriate, to effectively govern the recruitment, training and retention of skilled health personnel, and to give particular focus to the availability of skilled personnel at all levels to meet technical and operational needs as increased funding for malaria control programmes becomes available;

13. Urges the international community, inter alia, to support the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria to enable it to meet its financial needs and, through country-led initiatives with adequate international support, to intensify access to affordable, safe and effective antimalarial treatments, including artemisinin-based combination therapies, intermittent preventive therapies for pregnant women, children under 5 and infants, adequate diagnostic facilities, long-lasting insecticide-treated mosquito nets, including, where appropriate, through the free distribution of such nets and, where appropriate, to insecticides for indoor residual spraying for malaria control, taking into account relevant international rules, including the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants standards and guidelines;

14. Requests relevant international organizations, in particular the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, to assist the efforts of national Governments to provide universal access to malaria control interventions to address all at-risk populations, in particular young children and pregnant women, in malaria-endemic countries, particularly in Africa, as rapidly as possible, with due regard to ensuring the proper use of those interventions, including long-lasting insecticide-treated nets, and sustainability through full community participation and implementation through the health system;

15. Calls upon Member States, in particular malaria-endemic countries, with the support of the international community, to establish and/or strengthen national policies, operational plans and research, with a view to scaling up efforts to achieve internationally agreed malaria targets for 2015, in accordance with the technical recommendations of the World Health Organization;

16. Commends those African countries that have implemented the recommendations of the Abuja Summit in 2000 to reduce or waive taxes and tariffs for nets and other products needed for malaria control, and encourages other countries to do the same;

17. Calls upon United Nations agencies and their partners to continue to provide the technical support necessary to build and enhance the capacity of Member States to implement the Global Malaria Action Plan and meet the internationally agreed goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and looks forward to the timely completion of the second edition of the Global Malaria Action Plan;

18. Expresses deep concern about emerging drug and insecticide resistance in several regions of the world, calls upon Member States, with support from the World Health Organization and other partners, to implement the Global Plan for Artemisinin Resistance Containment and the Global Plan for Insecticide Resistance Management in Malaria Vectors and to strengthen and implement surveillance systems for monitoring and assessing changing patterns of drug and insecticide resistance, calls upon the World Health Organization to support Member States in the development of their national insecticide resistance management strategies and to coordinate support at the international level for countries to ensure that drug efficacy and insecticide resistance testing is fully operational in order to enhance the use of artemisinin-based combination therapies and insecticides, and stresses that the data gathered should be utilized for further research and development of safe and effective therapies and vector control tools;

19. Urges all Member States to prohibit the marketing and use of oral artemisinin-based monotherapies and to replace them with oral artemisinin-based combination therapies, as recommended by the World Health Organization, and to develop the financial, legislative and regulatory mechanisms necessary to introduce artemisinin combination therapies at affordable prices in both public and private facilities;

20. Recognizes the importance of the development of safe and cost-effective vaccines and new medicines to prevent and treat malaria and the need for further and accelerated research, including into safe, effective and high-quality therapies, using rigorous standards, including by providing support to the Special Programme for Research and Training in Tropical Diseases, through effective global partnerships, such as the various malaria vaccine initiatives and the Medicines for Malaria Venture, where necessary stimulated by new incentives to secure their development, and through effective and timely support for the pre-qualification of new antimalarials and their combinations;

21. Calls upon the international community, including through existing partnerships, to increase investment in and efforts towards research to optimize current tools, develop and validate new, safe and affordable malaria-related medicines, products and technologies, such as vaccines, rapid diagnostic tests, insecticides and their delivery modes, to prevent and treat malaria, especially for at-risk children and pregnant women, and testing opportunities for integration in order to enhance effectiveness and delay the onset of resistance;

22. Calls upon malaria-endemic countries to assure favourable conditions for research institutions, including the allocation of adequate resources and the development of national policies and legal frameworks, where appropriate, with a view to, inter alia, informing policy formulation and strategic interventions on malaria;

23. Reaffirms the right to use, to the fullest extent, the provisions contained in the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement), the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, and, when formal acceptance procedures are completed, the amendment to article 31 of the Agreement, which provide flexibilities for the protection of public health, and in particular to promote access to medicines for all and to encourage the provision of assistance to developing countries in this regard, and calls for the broad and timely acceptance of the amendment to article 31 of the Agreement, as proposed by the General Council of the World Trade Organization in its decision of 6 December 2005;

24. Recognizes the importance, in the struggle against malaria, of the World Health Organization Global Strategy and Plan of Action on Public Health, Innovation and Intellectual Property, adopted by the World Health Assembly on 24 May 2008;

25. Calls upon malaria-endemic countries, development partners and the international community to support the timely replacement of long-lasting insecticide-treated nets in accordance with the recommendations of the World Health Organization on the service lives of such nets, in order to prevent the risk of malaria resurgence and a reversal of the gains made to date;

26. Calls upon the international community to support ways to expand access to affordable, effective and safe products and treatments, such as vector control measures, including indoor residual spraying, long-lasting insecticide-treated nets, including through the free distribution of such nets, adequate diagnostic facilities, intermittent preventive therapies for pregnant women, children under 5 and infants, and artemisinin-based combination therapy for populations at risk of falciparum malaria infection in endemic countries, particularly in Africa, including through additional funds and innovative mechanisms, inter alia, for the financing and scaling up of artemisinin production and procurement, as appropriate, to meet the increased need;

27. Recognizes the impact of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership, and welcomes the increased level of public-private partnerships for malaria control and prevention, including the financial and in-kind contributions of private sector partners and companies operating in Africa, as well as the increased engagement of non-governmental service providers;

28. Encourages the producers of long-lasting insecticide-treated nets to continue to accelerate technology transfer to developing countries, and invites the World Bank and regional development funds to consider supporting malaria-endemic countries in establishing factories to scale up production of long-lasting insecticide-treated nets;

29. Calls upon Member States and the international community, especially malaria-endemic countries, in accordance with existing guidelines and recommendations of the World Health Organization and the requirements of the Stockholm Convention related to the use of DDT, to become fully knowledgeable about the technical policies and strategies of the World Health Organization and the provisions of the Stockholm Convention, including for indoor residual spraying, long-lasting insecticide-treated nets and case management, intermittent preventive therapies for pregnant women, children under 5 and infants and monitoring of in vivo resistance studies to artemisinin-based combination therapies, as well as to increase capacity for the safe, effective and judicious use of indoor residual spraying and other forms of vector control, including quality control measures, in accordance with international rules, standards and guidelines;

30. Requests the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund and donor agencies to provide support to those countries that choose to use DDT for indoor residual spraying so as to ensure that it is implemented in accordance with international rules, standards and guidelines, and to provide all possible support to malaria-endemic countries to manage the intervention effectively and prevent the contamination, in particular, of agricultural products with DDT and other insecticides used for indoor residual spraying;

31. Encourages the World Health Organization and its member States, with the support of the parties to the Stockholm Convention, to continue to explore possible alternatives to DDT as a vector control agent;

32. Recognizes the importance of a multisectoral strategy to advance global control efforts, invites malaria-endemic countries to consider adopting and implementing the Multisectoral Action Framework for Malaria developed by the Roll Back Malaria Partnership and the United Nations Development Programme, and encourages regional and intersectoral collaboration, both public and private, at all levels, especially in education, health, agriculture, economic development and the environment, to advance malaria control objectives;

33. Also recognizes the need to strengthen malaria surveillance and data quality in all endemic regions to enable Member States to direct financial resources to the populations most in need and to respond effectively to disease outbreaks;

34. Calls upon Member States and the international community to strengthen mechanisms for country-based coordination of technical assistance to achieve alignment of the best approaches to implement World Health Organization technical guidance and to mobilize support for the sharing and analysis of best practices to address urgent programmatic challenges, to improve monitoring and evaluation and to conduct regular financial planning and gap analysis;

35. Encourages sharing, across regions, of knowledge, experience and lessons learned with regard to the control and elimination of malaria, particularly between the Africa, Asia-Pacific and Latin America regions;

36. Calls upon the international community to support the strengthening of health systems, national pharmaceutical policies and national drug regulatory authorities, to monitor and fight against the trade in counterfeit and sub-standard antimalarial medicines and prevent their distribution and use, and to support coordinated efforts, inter alia, by providing technical assistance to improve surveillance, monitoring and evaluation systems and their alignment with national plans and systems so as to better track and report changes in coverage, the need for scaling up recommended interventions and the subsequent reductions in the burden of malaria;

37. Urges Member States, the international community and all relevant actors, including the private sector, to promote the coordinated implementation and enhance the quality of malaria-related activities, including through the Roll Back Malaria Partnership, in accordance with national policies and operational plans that are consistent with the technical recommendations of the World Health Organization and recent efforts and initiatives, including, where appropriate, the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness and the Accra Agenda for Action, adopted at the Third High-level Forum on Aid Effectiveness, held in Accra from 2 to 4 September 2008;

38. Recognizes the need for political commitment and financial support beyond 2015 to sustain and expand the achievements in the struggle against malaria and to meet the international malaria targets through prevention and malaria control efforts to end the epidemic, while acknowledging the remarkable progress in combating malaria to date;

39. Requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the Director General of the World Health Organization and in consultation with Member States, to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution, and specifically on progress towards achieving the 2015 targets of the Abuja Declaration and those of the Global Malaria Action Plan and Millennium Development Goal 6, including identification of best practices and successes and specific challenges limiting the achievement of the targets and, taking these into account, to provide recommendations to ensure that the targets are reached by 2015.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that agenda item “2001–2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Ebola outbreak in West Africa

In a May report [S/2014/342] to the Security Council on the United Nations Operation in Côte d’Ivoire (see p. 258), the Secretary-General said that an outbreak of the Ebola virus had been confirmed on 22 March in the Guinée Forestière area near Guinea’s border with Liberia and, subsequently, in Conakry. Following an alert from the World Health Organization (WHO) urging heightened surveillance for illnesses consistent with viral haemorrhagic fever, the countries neighbouring Guinea instituted measures along the land borders to protect those at risk and prevent the virus from spreading. Suspected cases of infection had been ruled out in Mali, while in Guinea and Liberia, 143 and 11 related fatalities were recorded, respectively, as at 1 May. No cases of Ebola virus infection had been reported in Côte d’Ivoire.

In an August report [S/2014/598] to the Security Council on the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) (see p. 261), the Secretary-General stated that by 30 July, a total of 383 cases of Ebola virus disease had been reported in Liberia, resulting in 216 deaths, including of health-care workers. The Government of Liberia, supported by the United Nations, had initiated an awareness-raising campaign, including messages in local languages on UNMIL Radio, and revised its national response plan with support from WHO. Tradition, denial and community resistance, however, proved difficult to surmount. WHO and the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) had received $617,000 from the United Nations Central Emergency Response Fund on 14 July.

Subsequently, in an August letter [S/2014/644] to the Security Council President recommending a technical rollover of the mandate of UNMIL (see p. 262) due to the ensuing exceptional circumstances in Liberia, the Secretary-General reported that the Ebola virus disease outbreak in West Africa had escalated so drastically in just a matter of weeks that, on 8 August, WHO had declared it a public health emergency of international concern. To facilitate a coordinated international response, on 12 August, he had appointed Dr. David Nabarro (United Kingdom) to serve as the United Nations System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease. Dr. Nabarro had been in Liberia from 21 to 23 August as part of a regional visit to assess the situation and make recommendations for the response going forward. Ebola was having a devastating impact on Liberia, with the Ministry of Health recording, as at 24 August, a cumulative total of 1,378 cases, resulting in 743 deaths. While the Ebola outbreak began primarily as a medical emergency, it had become more complex, with significant political, security and humanitarian implications. Its long-term effects on the people and the economy of Liberia were likely to be considerable. Earlier, on 6 August, President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf had declared a 90-day state of emergency, noting that the scale and scope of the epidemic exceeded the response capacity of national institutions, requiring extraordinary measures in order to save lives, including the suspension of certain constitutionally guaranteed rights and privileges, for example, by restricting movement and freedom of assembly. The Legislature had endorsed that decision.

Additional measures announced by the President included a moratorium on official travel for government officials and the deployment of the Armed Forces of Liberia and the Liberia National Police to enforce the isolation of the areas of the country most affected by Ebola. Meanwhile, the Government had also established mechanisms to coordinate the national and international response, and allocated emergency funding. On the recommendation of the National Elections Commission, the judiciary was considering the constitutionality of postponing the senatorial elections scheduled for October. Notwithstanding the efforts of the Government to contain the Ebola virus, it continued to spread, fuelled by fear, denial, tradition and lack of public trust in national institutions. Compounding the medical emergency was the surging cost of food, water and other basic goods, particularly in cordoned-off areas.

Meanwhile, the country was becoming increasingly isolated as a result of the decision of some airline companies to cease servicing countries affected by Ebola, which had implications for the humanitarian response. On 20 August, further measures announced by the President to contain the disease, including a nationwide curfew, went into effect. The escalating crisis was having such a profound impact that it would be necessary for all of the international partners of Liberia, including the United Nations, to fully mobilize all resources behind the fight against the epidemic.

Global Ebola Response Coalition. On 1 September, the Secretary-General announced the formation of the Global Ebola Response Coalition, which included the Governments of affected countries and neighbouring countries, African regional and subregional bodies, development partners, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and businesses, along with UN system entities. The coordination mechanism was intended to ensure integrated support to affected countries, while helping prevent the spread of the Ebola virus disease to other countries.

Appointment. On 8 September, the Secretary-General appointed Anthony Banbury (United States) as Deputy Ebola Coordinator and Operation Crisis Manager. Mr. Banbury, who along with the UN System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease would work closely with WHO in managing the overall response to the Ebola crisis, would coordinate the operational work of the UN system, Member States, NGOs and other stakeholders under a single platform, working closely with the various response actors in the region.

Establishment of United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response

Communication. In a 15 September letter [S/2014/669] to the Security Council President, the Secretary-General transmitted a joint letter dated 29 August from Alpha Condé, President of Guinea; Ellen Johnson Sirleaf, President of Liberia; and Ernest Bai Koroma, President of Sierra Leone, that detailed the impact of the Ebola virus disease in their countries and its implications for West Africa and beyond. Presidents Condé, Johnson Sirleaf and Koroma requested a UN resolution on a comprehensive response to the Ebola virus disease outbreak that would include a coordinated international response to end the outbreak; strategic guidance from WHO for overall response and the restoration of basic health service; a coordinated international response to support the societies and economies of affected countries during the outbreak; maintaining trade and transportation links with reasonable precautions; and an international public education campaign.

(For more information on the political and security situation in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, see PART ONE, Chapter II.)

Security Council action. On 15 September, by resolution 2176(2014) (see p. 262), the Security Council expressed appreciation for the appointments of the UN System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease and the Deputy Ebola Coordinator and Operation Crisis Manager operating from the United Nations Operations and Crisis Centre, in order to assist Governments in the region to address the Ebola outbreak, and urged the international community to respond swiftly to the shortage of qualified medical professionals and appropriate equipment and preventive measures necessary to address the Ebola outbreak in West Africa.

Letter of Secretary-General. In identical letters of 17 September [A/69/389-S/2014/679] to the Presidents of the General Assembly and the Security Council, the Secretary-General asserted that the Ebola virus disease crisis was no longer just a public health crisis, but had become multidimensional, with significant political, social, economic, humanitarian, logistical and security dimensions. WHO had reported nearly 5,000 cases, resulting in over 2,500 deaths. Owing to difficulties in monitoring and reporting, the total number of cases and deaths was likely to be much higher. International experts assessed that Ebola was spreading at an exponential rate, with the number of cases doubling approximately every three weeks. The Governments of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone were determined to respond effectively, but, as expressed in their letter of 29 August (see p. 1356), requested assistance and support.

In view of the rapid spread of the Ebola virus disease, the Secretary-General stated that he had decided to establish a UN mission to harness the capabilities and competencies of all the relevant UN actors under a unified operational structure. The singular strategic objective and purpose of the mission would be to work with others to stop the Ebola outbreak. The strategic priorities of the mission would be to stop the spread of the disease; treat the infected; ensure essential services; preserve stability; and prevent the spread to countries currently unaffected. The mission, through its presence in the affected States, would provide needed field-level support to the Governments and peoples of West Africa. At the operational level, the intended United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response (UNMEER) would be headed by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General—appointed following consultation with the WHO Director General—who would report directly to the Secretary-General.

The Secretary-General requested the support of the Security Council, the General Assembly and all Member States to address the crisis. A detailed report outlining required resources would be submitted for the approval and consideration of the Assembly and a trust fund to mobilize voluntary contributions would be established to address any gaps in the activities of UN system partners.

Security Council consideration. On 18 September [S/PV.7268], the Security Council held an emergency session to discuss the Ebola virus disease outbreak in West Africa. The emergency session was the third in the Council's history to examine the security implications of a public health issue. The session featured a statement from the Secretary-General and briefings from Dr. David Nabarro; Dr. Margaret Chan; and Mr. Jackson Niamah, a team leader at a Médecins Sans Frontières treatment centre in Monrovia, Liberia.

The Secretary-General said that the unprecedented scope of the Ebola outbreak required a level of international action unprecedented for an emergency. He articulated his intention to establish UNMEER with its five priorities: stopping the Ebola outbreak, treating the infected, ensuring essential services, preserving stability and preventing further outbreaks. UNMEER would draw on the capacities of many partners and work closely with regional organizations. There was, however, a need to scale up the response effort in order to fulfil critical needs totalling almost $1 billion.

Dr. Nabarro stated that the Ebola response was lagging because the outbreak was advancing at an exponential pace. There was a need for international assistance to go beyond health and fill gaps in areas such as food and supplies, whose delivery had been interrupted in the affected countries. Dr. Chan called on Member States and other partners to support the WHO Ebola Response Roadmap, in which the most urgent needs were outlined along with 12 critical actions. Mr. Niamah called for greater capacity-building support for the Ebola response effort and, in particular, for more specialized care centres, beds and expert personnel, training for medical staff, helicopters, and basic sanitation needs such as soap and buckets.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 September [meeting 7268], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2177(2014). The draft [S/2014/673] was submitted by 134 Member States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 2176(2014), adopted on 15 September 2014, concerning the situation in Liberia and its statement to the press of 9 July 2014,

Recalling also its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Expressing grave concern about the outbreak of the Ebola virus in, and its impact on, West Africa, in particular Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone, as well as Nigeria and beyond,

Recognizing that the peacebuilding and development gains of the most affected countries concerned could be reversed in the light of the Ebola outbreak, and underlining that the outbreak is undermining the stability of the most affected countries concerned and, unless contained, may lead to further instances of civil unrest, social tensions and a deterioration of the political and security climate,

Determining that the unprecedented extent of the Ebola outbreak in Africa constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

Expressing concern about the particular impact of the Ebola outbreak on women,

Welcoming the convening of the Mano River Union Extraordinary Summit, held in Guinea on 1 August 2014, and the commitments expressed by the Heads of State of Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone to combat the Ebola outbreak in the region, including by strengthening treatment services and measures to prevent the outbreak spreading across borders,

Taking note of the measures taken by the Member States of the region, especially Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone, as well as Nigeria, Côte d'Ivoire and Senegal, in response to the Ebola outbreak, and recognizing that the outbreak may exceed the capacity of the Governments concerned to respond,

Taking note also of the letter dated 29 August 2014 from the Presidents of Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea to the Secretary-General, requesting a comprehensive response to the Ebola outbreak, including a coordinated international response to end the outbreak and to support the societies and economies affected by restrictions on trade and transportation during the outbreak,

Recognizing the measures taken by the Member States of the region, in particular Côte d'Ivoire, Cabo Verde, Ghana, Mali and Senegal, to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the most affected countries,

Emphasizing the key role of Member States, including through the Global Health Security Agenda where applicable, to provide adequate public health services to detect, prevent, respond to and mitigate outbreaks of major infectious diseases through sustainable, well-functioning and responsive public health mechanisms,

Recalling the International Health Regulations (2005), which are contributing to global public health security by providing a framework for the coordination of the management of events that may constitute a public health emergency of international concern, and aim to improve the capacity of all countries to detect, assess, notify and respond to public health threats, and underscoring the importance of States members of the World Health Organization abiding by these commitments,

Underscoring that the control of outbreaks of major infectious diseases requires urgent action and greater national, regional and international collaboration, and in this regard stressing the crucial and immediate need for a coordinated international response to the Ebola outbreak,

Commending Member States, bilateral partners and multilateral organizations for the crucial assistance, including financial commitments and in-kind donations, provided to and identified for the affected people and Governments of the region to support the scaling-up of emergency efforts to contain the Ebola outbreak in West Africa and interrupt transmission of the virus, including by providing flexible funds to relevant United Nations agencies and international organizations involved in the response to enable them and national Governments to purchase supplies and enhance emergency operations in the affected countries, as well as by collaborating with public and private sector partners to accelerate development of therapies, vaccines and diagnostics to treat patients and limit or prevent further infection or transmission of the Ebola virus disease,

Expressing deep appreciation to the first-line responders to the Ebola outbreak in West Africa, including national and international health and humanitarian relief workers contributed by the Member States of diverse regions and non-governmental organizations such as Médecins sans frontières and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, and also expressing appreciation to the United Nations Humanitarian Air Service for transporting humanitarian personnel and medical supplies and equipment, especially to remote locations in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, during the outbreak,

Welcoming the efforts of the African Union, in coordination with bilateral partners and multilateral organizations, to craft a united, comprehensive and collective African response to the outbreak, including through the deployment of health-care workers to the region, and also the efforts of the Economic Community of West African States to support steps to contain the spread of the Ebola virus, including through the support of the defence forces of its member States,

Expressing concern about the impact, including on food security, of general travel and trade restrictions in the region, and taking note of the call by the African Union upon its member States to lift travel restrictions to enable the free movement of people and trade to the affected countries,

Emphasizing the role of all relevant United Nations system entities, in particular the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Peacebuilding Commission, in supporting the national, regional and international efforts to respond to the Ebola outbreak, and recognizing in this regard the central role of the World Health Organization, which designated the Ebola outbreak a public health emergency of international concern,

Stressing the need for coordinated efforts of all relevant United Nations system entities to address the Ebola outbreak in line with their respective mandates and to assist, wherever possible, national, regional and international efforts in this regard,

Taking note of the World Health Organization Ebola response road map of 28 August 2014 which aims to stop transmission of the Ebola virus disease worldwide, while managing the consequences of any further international spread, and taking note also of the 12 mission-critical actions, including infection control, community mobilization and recovery, to resolve the Ebola outbreak,

Taking note also of the World Health Organization protocols to prevent the transmission of the Ebola virus disease between individuals, organizations and populations, underlining that the Ebola outbreak can be contained, including through the implementation of established safety and health protocols and other preventive measures that have proven effective, and commending the efforts of the United Nations Mission in Liberia to communicate, including through UNMIL Radio, such protocols and preventive measures to the Liberian public,

Reiterating its appreciation for the appointments by the Secretary-General of Dr. David Nabarro as the United Nations System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease and of Mr. Anthony Banbury as the Deputy Ebola Coordinator and Operation Crisis Manager operating from the crisis response mechanism of the United Nations, which was activated on 8 September 2014 and which aims to consolidate the operational work of the United Nations system, Member States, non-governmental organizations and other partners focused on providing assistance to the affected countries in response to the Ebola outbreak, as well as to ensure United Nations system assistance to developing, leading and implementing an effective response to the broader dimensions of the outbreak that include food security and access to basic health services,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to convene a high-level meeting on the margins of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly to urge an exceptional and vigorous response to the Ebola outbreak,

1. Encourages the Governments of Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea to accelerate the establishment of national mechanisms to provide for the rapid diagnosis and isolation of suspected cases of infection, treatment measures, effective medical services for responders, credible and transparent public education campaigns, and strengthened preventive and preparedness measures to detect, mitigate and respond to Ebola exposure, as well as to coordinate the rapid delivery and utilization of international assistance, including health workers and humanitarian relief supplies, as well as to coordinate their efforts to address the transnational dimension of the Ebola outbreak, including the management of their shared borders, and with the support of bilateral partners, multilateral organizations and the private sector;

2. Also encourages the Governments of Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea to continue efforts to resolve and mitigate the wider political, security, socioeconomic and humanitarian dimensions of the Ebola outbreak, as well as to provide sustainable, well-functioning and responsive public health mechanisms, emphasizes that responses to the Ebola outbreak should address the specific needs of women, and stresses the importance of their full and effective engagement in the development of such responses;

3. Expresses concern about the detrimental effect of the isolation of the affected countries as a result of trade and travel restrictions imposed on and to the affected countries;

4. Calls upon Member States, including of the region, to lift general travel and border restrictions, imposed as a result of the Ebola outbreak, and that contribute to the further isolation of the affected countries and undermine their efforts to respond to the Ebola outbreak, and also calls upon airlines and shipping companies to maintain trade and transport links with the affected countries and the wider region;

5. Calls upon Member States, especially of the region, to facilitate the delivery of assistance, including qualified, specialized and trained personnel and supplies, in response to the Ebola outbreak to the affected countries, and in this regard expresses deep appreciation to the Government of Ghana for allowing the resumption of the air shuttle of the United Nations Mission in Liberia from Monrovia to Accra, which will transport international health workers and other responders to areas affected by the Ebola outbreak in Liberia;

6. Calls upon Member States, especially of the region, and all relevant actors providing assistance in response to the Ebola outbreak to enhance efforts to communicate to the public, as well as to implement, the established safety and health protocols and preventive measures to mitigate against misinformation and undue alarm about the transmission and extent of the outbreak among and between individuals and communities, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to develop a strategic communication platform using existing United Nations system resources and facilities in the affected countries, as necessary and available, including to assist Governments and other relevant partners;

7. Calls upon Member States to provide urgent resources and assistance, including deployable medical capabilities such as field hospitals with qualified and sufficient expertise, staff and supplies, laboratory services, logistical, transport and construction support capabilities, airlift and other aviation support and aeromedical services and dedicated clinical services in Ebola treatment units and isolation units, to support the affected countries in intensifying preventive and response activities and strengthening national capacities in response to the Ebola outbreak and to allot adequate capacity to prevent future outbreaks;

8. Urges Member States, as well as bilateral partners and multilateral organizations, including the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States and the European Union, to mobilize and provide immediately technical expertise and additional medical capacity, including for rapid diagnosis and training of health workers at the national and international levels, to the affected countries and those providing assistance to the affected countries, and to continue to exchange expertise, lessons learned and best practices, as well as to maximize synergies to respond effectively and immediately to the Ebola outbreak, to provide essential resources, supplies and coordinated assistance to the affected countries and implementing partners, and calls upon all relevant actors to cooperate closely with the Secretary-General on response assistance efforts;

9. Urges Member States to implement relevant temporary recommendations issued under the International Health Regulations (2005) regarding the 2014 Ebola outbreak in West Africa, and lead the organization, coordination and implementation of national preparedness and response activities, including, where and when relevant, in collaboration with international development and humanitarian partners;

10. Commends the continued contribution and commitment of international health and humanitarian relief workers to respond urgently to the Ebola outbreak, and calls upon all relevant actors to put in place the necessary repatriation and financial arrangements, including medical evacuation capacities and treatment and transport provisions, to facilitate their immediate and unhindered deployment to the affected countries;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to help to ensure that all relevant United Nations system entities, including the World Health Organization and the United Nations Humanitarian Air Service, in accordance with their respective mandates, accelerate their response to the Ebola outbreak, including by supporting the development and implementation of preparedness and operational plans and liaison and collaboration with Governments of the region and those providing assistance;

12. Encourages the World Health Organization to continue to strengthen its technical leadership and operational support to Governments and partners, monitor Ebola transmission, assist in identifying existing response needs and partners to meet those needs to facilitate the availability of essential data and hasten the development and implementation of therapies and vaccines according to best clinical and ethical practices, and also encourages Member States to provide all necessary support in this regard, including the sharing of data in accordance with applicable law;

13. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

General Assembly consideration. On 19 September, at its third plenary meeting [A/69/PV.3], the General Assembly addressed the Ebola virus disease outbreak in West Africa. The President of the Assembly said that the outbreak was no longer merely a subregional or regional calamity, but rather an international crisis. Women, as primary caregivers, community leaders and front-line health workers, were particularly at risk. Introducing the draft resolution on the establishment of UNMEER, which aimed to bring the UN system competencies into a single, unified structure for a rapid response to the outbreak and provide coherent support to national, regional and international efforts, the President implored the Assembly to add its voice to that of the Security Council in calling on the international community to take immediate steps to support the countries affected by the deadly virus. While a high price had already been paid, the cost of inaction could reach unimaginable proportions.

The Secretary-General stated that the crisis had significant economic, social, humanitarian, political and security dimensions. While WHO had reported that of the nearly 5,000 people infected by the Ebola virus, about 2,500 had died so far, the actual number of casualties was probably higher, due to shortfalls in reporting and monitoring. Cases were doubling every three weeks. The Secretary-General said that WHO had developed a response roadmap and was working with Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone to identify the best possible epidemiological ways to address the outbreak, including through Ebola treatment centres and community care centres. He outlined the five priorities of UNMEER: to stop the outbreak; treat the infected; provide essential services; preserve stability; and prevent outbreaks in non-affected countries. The Mission would also support national efforts, reinforce government leadership and emphasize community outreach and training. Its headquarters would be located in Accra, Ghana, and that country's international airport would be used for a vital air bridge.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 September [meeting 3], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/1 [draft: A/69/L.2, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 124].

Measures to contain and combat the recent Ebola outbreak in West Africa

The General Assembly,

Expressing grave concern at the recent Ebola outbreak in West Africa and its unprecedented nature and scope,

Expressing grave concern also at the rapid deterioration of the situation, in particular in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, and the threat that this poses to their post-conflict recovery,

Expressing deep concern about the potential reversal of the gains made by the affected countries in peacebuilding, political stability and the reconstruction of socioeconomic infrastructure in recent years,

Underscoring the urgent need to contain this public health crisis owing to its possible grave humanitarian, economic and social consequences,

Underlining its strong commitment to responding to this emergency in a timely, effective and coordinated manner,

Recognizing the central role being played by the World Health Organization in leading worldwide support for the courageous responses of countries whose people are affected by, and at risk of, Ebola,

Welcoming all national, regional and international efforts aimed at ending the crisis, and reaffirming the important role of regional and subregional organizations in this regard, in particular, the African Union and the Economic Community of West African States,

Expressing appreciation for the appointment by the Secretary-General of a United Nations System Senior Coordinator for Ebola Virus Disease and a Deputy Ebola Coordinator and Emergency Crisis Manager, in order to assist Governments in the region to address the Ebola outbreak, Noting the adoption by the Security Council of resolution 2176(2014) of 15 September 2014 and resolution 2177(2014) of 18 September 2014,

1. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take such measures as may be necessary for the prompt execution of his intention and to submit a detailed report thereon for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session;

3. Calls upon all Member States, relevant United Nations bodies and the United Nations system to provide their full support to the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response.

Appointments. On 23 September, the Secretary-General announced the appointment of Dr. David Nabarro (United Kingdom) as his Special Envoy on Ebola and Anthony Banbury as his Special Representative and Head of UNMEER. The appointments were made following close consultations with the WHO Director General. The Special Envoy on Ebola would provide strategic and policy direction for a greatly enhanced international response and galvanize essential support for affected communities and countries. The Special Representative and Head of UNMEER would provide the operational framework and unity of purpose to ensure the rapid, effective and coherent action necessary to stop the Ebola outbreak, to treat the infected, to ensure essential services, to preserve stability and to prevent the spread to countries currently unaffected.

Further developments

Report of Secretary-General. On 24 September [A/69/404], in response to resolution 69/1 (see above), the Secretary-General submitted a report to the General Assembly on UNMEER and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola. The report, which contained estimated preliminary resource requirements for UNMEER and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola, outlined five strategic priorities, six guiding principles and resourcing assumptions for UNMEER. The strategic priorities included stopping the spread of disease; treating the infected; ensuring essential services; preserving stability; and preventing the spread of the disease to unaffected countries. The six guiding principles included reinforcing government leadership; delivering a rapid impact on the ground; coordinating and collaborating with actors outside the United Nations; tailoring responses to the needs of different countries; reaffirming WHO leadership on all health issues; and identifying benchmarks for transition post-emergency and ensuring that all actions strengthen systems.

The Special Representative of the Secretary-General would head the Mission and be tasked with building and maintaining a regional operational platform that ensured the rapid delivery of international assistance. The Mission's headquarters, to be established in Accra, Ghana, would have four pillars, including a medical response; operational coordination and planning; essential services response; and an in-country crisis response team in the three affected countries of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone.

The Secretary-General, pending submission of a detailed revised programme budget, requested that the General Assembly approve estimated preliminary requirements for UNMEER and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola amounting to $49,943,600 (net of staff assessment) for the period from 19 September to 31 December 2014. He also proposed that the Assembly authorize him to enter into commitments in an amount not exceeding $49,943,600, pending submission of a detailed revised programme budget during the latter part of the main part of the sixty-ninth (2014) session.

High-level meeting. On 25 September, the Secretary-General convened a high-level meeting on the response to the Ebola virus disease outbreak. Speaking via teleconference were Presidents of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone. The Secretary-General noted that the crisis had highlighted the need to strengthen early identification systems and action and suggested that a stand-by "white coats" corps of medical professionals be formed. While there had been a concerted response from the international communities and organizations, increased contributions were still required. International financial institutions and national Governments announced further pledges at the meeting.

ACABQ report. In a 30 September report [A/69/408], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) conveyed its having been informed that due to the urgency of establishing initial capability on the ground in the countries concerned following the establishment of UNMEER on 19 September, as well as the ongoing planning process, the Secretariat had been unable to conduct a thorough analysis and provide full details to support the request for resources for the Mission and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola for the period of 19 September to 31 December. Inasmuch as UNMEER was the first emergency health mission established by the Organization, the Committee emphasized the need for close coordination and cooperation among all partners in order to ensure the effective and efficient operation of the Mission in light of the involvement of multiple senior officials in leadership roles.

ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide in his detailed budget submission comprehensive information on the UN system's response and the specific functions and tasks of UNMEER and partners. The Secretary-General should detail the Mission's operational targets, benchmarks, indicators of achievement and expected time frames. In addition, there needed to be a rigorous assessment of the envisaged structure and staffing, with the grade levels of the proposed positions closely aligned with their respective functions and responsibilities. The Secretary-General should provide detailed justifications for non-post categories of expenditure, taking into account the total resources made available through the multi-partner trust fund, Member States and other partners, along with any in-kind contributions; and he should make every effort to seek contributions to that multi-partner trust fund.

The Committee recommended that the General Assembly authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in an amount not exceeding $49,943,600 for the Mission for the period from 19 September to 31 December. It emphasized that recommendation was without prejudice to any recommendation it might make to the General Assembly when it considered the detailed budget submission for the Mission or any decision that the Assembly might take with regard to the Mission's organizational structure, staffing and operational requirements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 October [meeting 22], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/69/422], adopted resolution 69/3 without vote [agenda item 132].

United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response and the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Recalls paragraph 24 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and emphasizes that the adoption of the present resolution is without prejudice to any subsequent review of the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response by the General Assembly and any decision it may take with regard to the budgetary arrangements, organizational structure, staffing and operational requirements of the Mission, when it considers the detailed budget submission by the Secretary-General.

High-level meeting. On 23 October, WHO convened a high-level meeting on Ebola Vaccines Access and Financing. More than 90 participants, including scientists, representatives of drug regulatory authorities, NGOs, funding agencies and foundations, the GAVI alliance for childhood immunization and development banks, took part in examining the complex policy issues surrounding access to experimental Ebola vaccines and discussing ways to ensure the fair distribution and financing of such vaccines.

Letter of Secretary-General. In a 12 November letter [A/69/573] to the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General reviewed the activities from 19 September to 31 October that had been carried out by the Special Envoy on Ebola and UNMEER in pursuance of Assembly resolution 69/1 (see p. 1360). The letter reviewed the background of the Ebola virus disease outbreak and the development of the global response; the current situation; the Mission's activities and progress; and outstanding issues that needed to be addressed in order to move forward.

As the first-ever UN emergency health mission, UNMEER combined the technical expertise of WHO with the operational capabilities of other UN agencies, funds and programmes to lead international efforts that supported, reinforced and responded to the national plans of the affected countries of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone. The outbreak called for a massive, proportionate and well-organized global response that could support those Governments, guided by six principles of commitment: to the affected countries' ownership, sovereignty in decision-making and final authority; to reflecting the interests of people affected by the outbreak, by working in ways consistent with their social structures and national interests; to a differentiated but disciplined approach, aligned to a set of objectives ensuring consistency across geographies and situations to the extent feasible; to a dynamically adaptive approach, tailoring resource deployment to supply at any given time and to the scale of the outbreak in specific locations, and recognizing gaps as they existed or might exist; to working on essential systems beyond Ebola and not only to stopping the outbreak, but also to minimizing the impact on health care structures, food security and social and economic situations at local and national levels; and to building for the long term by strengthening health infrastructure in affected countries in the medium term. Furthermore, the Government of Ghana was hosting UNMEER headquarters in Accra to coordinate deliveries of aid to the affected countries.

As at 31 October, a total of 13,567 confirmed, probable and suspected cases of Ebola had been reported in six affected countries (Guinea, Liberia, Mali, Sierra Leone, Spain, United States) and two previously affected countries (Nigeria, Senegal). A total of 4,951 deaths had been reported. The outbreak impacted access to basic health care, food, livelihood and education, with vulnerable groups such as pregnant women, children and elderly persons disproportionately affected. The fragile economies of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone had also experienced rising prices, lower household incomes and greater poverty.

The World Bank estimated that the short-term growth rate of gross domestic product in 2014 had decreased from 4.5 per cent to 2.4 per cent in Guinea; from 5.9 per cent to 2.5 per cent in Liberia; and from 11.3 per cent to 8 per cent in Sierra Leone.

On 10 October, the Global Ebola Response Coalition (see p. 1356) adopted a response framework with near-term objectives over the following 30, 60 and 90 days. In the first 30 days, starting 1 October, the Mission was to establish its presence in the four countries and deploy personnel, aircraft, vehicles, communications and logistical capabilities. At the 60-day mark, the goal was to achieve 70 per cent isolation and 70 per cent safe burials, which would require a high-capacity scale-up of Ebola treatment units and community care centres. The 90-day mark aimed to achieve 100 per cent case isolation and 100 per cent safe burials, along with declining infection rates.

After establishing the Mission, the United Nations had deployed advance teams to Ghana, Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone to prepare for operations and engage with key partners in the region. The Mission also held an operational planning conference (Accra, Ghana, 15–18 October) with UN actors and international partners to produce an operational framework. The Mission's line of action in support of containment included case finding, laboratories and contact tracing; case management; safe dignified burials; and community engagement and social mobilization.

The World Food Programme provided dedicated services for the Ebola response; all staging areas and main hubs in Accra and in the three affected countries were operational. Regional operational staging areas were also established in Accra, Dakar, and Las Palmas, Spain. Eight forward logistics bases across Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone had become operational. Work was also underway to establish 16 additional satellite hubs in the field to facilitate access to both community care and district health centres.

Air operations with dedicated staff and assets were deployed to Guinea, Sierra Leone, Accra and Dakar. Six helicopters and four fixed-wing aircraft were positioned in the region. An air coordination cell at the Copenhagen office of UNICEF was established. Since 19 September, 3,001 tons of ambulances, medical and operational support supplies, water, sanitation and health supplies on 47 UN-coordinated flights were flown into the region. The United Nations Humanitarian Air Service had been providing dedicated common air transport service since August and a humanitarian air corridor opened in Dakar to the affected countries on 25 September. In addition, several Governments provided air and maritime support, including Germany with two C-160 cargo planes operating supply runs from Accra to the three affected countries, Luxembourg with airlift capacity for vital supplies and Denmark committing to maritime sealift support.

By 31 October, gap analyses and planning showed the total revised financial requirement for critical lines of action and enabling functions amounted to $1.5 billion—an increase from the initially foreseen $988 million—for the support of the activities of the UN system and international partners. The increase reflected the changes and scaling up of responses to stop and treat the virus and deliver on community mobilization. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs noted that $799 million had been received, committed or pledged to date; and efforts were aimed at ensuring funds received were translated quickly into demonstrable impact within villages, towns and cities. Overall costs related to immediate needs and beyond were estimated to be in the region of $4 billion, depending on the international and national communities mobilizing and deploying the necessary resources as well as how quickly the crisis could be brought under control.

Despite the deployments and pledges, an additional 14 foreign medical teams were urgently needed. An entire information management system was also needed to develop an effective data management mechanism, including mobile data collection. While efforts were focused on achieving the 60-day goal (see p. 1362), the critical needs of abandoned orphans and people affected by diseases other than Ebola (particularly malaria) also had to be addressed; and the United Nations and NGOs needed staff and resources to do so.

Work was being done to increase the preparedness of all countries, with special attention to those in Africa, particularly 15 States that bordered countries with widespread and intense transmission, or that had strong trade and travel ties with such countries. Those States were prioritized for technical assistance on preparedness from WHO teams and partners. Teams had already been deployed to Côte d'Ivoire and Mali and were working with health authorities there. Urging Member States not to resort to travel restrictions or close their borders, as such was already obstructing response efforts, the Secretary-General maintained that the Ebola virus disease could only be stopped at its source by deploying the essential human resources to contain the outbreak. It was encouraging that, within 30 days, UNMEER had been deployed to four countries, mobilized significant human resource and logistical assets, set up operational capabilities in record time and developed a detailed operational plan in collaboration with the Governments of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone and relevant UN partners and NGOs. Remaining gaps and medical and social challenges, however, needed to be addressed in order to begin containing the disease.

Security Council consideration. On 21 November, the Security Council held a meeting [S/PV.7318] on peace and security in Africa, focusing on the engagement of the Council on the Ebola virus disease outbreak, which it had declared to be a threat to international peace and security (see p. 1357). Addressing the Council, Dr. Nabarro, Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola, said that where the response strategy was being implemented fully, transmission was decreasing, although results were uneven in different countries. Anthony Banbury, Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of UNMEER, told the meeting that while the financial needs were increasing, government revenues of the affected countries were decreasing.

On 21 November [meeting 7318], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2014/24 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reiterates its grave concern about the unprecedented extent of the Ebola outbreak in Africa, which constitutes a threat to international peace and security, and the impact of the Ebola virus on West Africa, in particular Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone. The Council expresses its appreciation for the crucial contributions and commitments made by the Member States of the region to continue to lead the ground-level response against the Ebola outbreak, as well as to address the wider political, security, socioeconomic and humanitarian impact, including on food security, of the Ebola outbreak on communities and the need to plan for the longer-term recovery in the region, including with the support of the Peacebuilding Commission. The Council underscores the continued need for robust contact tracing, social mobilization and community-level engagement efforts, especially outside of major urban areas in the most affected countries.

The Council stresses the importance for the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response to continue to strengthen coordination with the Governments of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone and all national, regional and international actors, including bilateral partners and multilateral organizations, including the Mano River Union, the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the European Union, the World Bank Group and the United Nations system, in order to more readily identify gaps in the response effort and to utilize all Ebola response assistance more fully and efficiently, particularly at the local level. In this regard, the Council requests that the Secretary-General accelerate efforts to scale up the presence and activities of the Mission at the district and prefecture level outside of the capital cities.

The Council expresses its concern about the recent reported Ebola infections in Mali. The Council recognizes the important steps taken by the Government of Mali, including by appointing an Ebola incident coordinator to lead a whole-of-government response. The Council affirms the importance of preparedness by all Member States to detect, prevent, respond to, isolate and mitigate suspected cases of Ebola within and across borders and of bolstering the preparedness of all countries in the region. The Council recalls the International Health Regulations (2005), which aim to improve the capacity of all countries to detect, assess, notify and respond to all public health threats.

The Council welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Mission to provide overall leadership and direction to the operational work of the United Nations system, as mandated by the General Assembly. The Council underscores the need for relevant United Nations system entities, including the United Nations peacekeeping operations and special political missions in West Africa, in close collaboration with the Mission and within their existing mandates and capacities, to provide immediate assistance to the Governments of the most affected countries.

The Council lauds the critical, heroic and selfless efforts of the first-line responders to the Ebola outbreak in West Africa, including national health and humanitarian relief workers, educators and burial team members, as well as international health and humanitarian relief workers contributed by the Member States of diverse regions and non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations. The Council expresses its condolences to the families of the victims of the Ebola outbreak, including national and international first-line responders. The Council urges all Member States, non-governmental, intergovernmental and regional organizations to continue to respond to the outstanding need for medical personnel, as well as related critical gap areas such as personnel with expertise in sanitation and hygiene.

The Council underscores the critical importance of putting in place essential arrangements, including medical evacuation capacities and treatment and transport provisions, to facilitate the immediate, unhindered and sustainable deployment of health and humanitarian relief workers to the affected countries. The Council welcomes the steps announced by Member States and regional organizations to provide medical evacuation capacities for health and humanitarian relief workers, as well as other treatment options in situ.

The Council notes the considerable efforts of the international community to scale up its coordinated response to the Ebola outbreak and the important progress on the ground as a result of these contributions. In this regard, the Council commends those Member States, which, in concert with other actors on the ground, have opened Ebola treatment units and provided other crucial support in the affected countries. The Council urges all Member States, bilateral partners and multilateral organizations to expedite the provision of resources and financial assistance, as well as mobile laboratories; field hospitals to provide non-Ebola related medical care; dedicated and trained clinical personnel and services in Ebola treatment units and isolation units; therapies, vaccines and diagnostics to treat patients and limit or prevent further Ebola infection or transmission; and personal protective equipment for first-line responders. The Council calls upon Member States, especially in the region, to facilitate immediately the delivery of such assistance to the most affected countries.

The Council emphasizes that the dynamic needs on the ground in the most affected countries require that the response of the international community response remain flexible, in order to adapt to changing requirements and rapidly respond to new outbreaks.

The Council strongly urges Member States, as well as airlines and shipping companies, while applying appropriate public health protocols, to maintain trade and transport links with the most affected countries to enable the timely utilization of all efforts aimed at containing the Ebola outbreak within and across borders of the region. While recognizing the important role that appropriate screening measures can play in stopping the spread of the outbreak, the Council expresses its continued concern about the detrimental effect of the isolation of the affected countries as a result of trade and travel restrictions imposed on and to the affected countries, as well as acts of discrimination against the nationals of Guinea, Liberia, Mali and Sierra Leone, including Ebola survivors and their families or those infected with the disease.

Appointment. In identical letters of 9 December [A/69/662-S/2014/877], the Secretary-General informed the Presidents of the General Assembly and the Security Council of his intention to appoint Ismail Ould Cheikh Ahmed (Mauritania) as his Special Representative for UNMEER succeeding Anthony Banbury (United States).

Year-end developments. In a later letter [A/69/720] to the General Assembly President, the Secretary-General gave an overview of developments from 1 November 2014 to 1 January 2015 on progress made in the Ebola virus disease response pursuant to General Assembly resolution 69/1 (see p. 1360) since his letter of 12 November 2014 (see p. 1362). He covered the status of the Ebola outbreak; progress of the operational framework to stop the outbreak, including progress towards meeting key targets and challenges to achieving key response targets; an update on the operational activities carried out by the UN system through UNMEER and its partners, as well as his visit to the region (18–20 December); and activities of the Special Envoy on Ebola and the Global Ebola Response Coalition.

The Secretary-General reviewed efforts on moving forward, including stopping the outbreak and treating the infected; providing essential services and preserving stability; non-Ebola health care; protection; education; food security; water, sanitation and hygiene; economic impact, livelihoods and early recovery planning; and preventing outbreaks in non-affected countries.

As at 31 December, 20,206 deaths confirmed, probable and suspected cases of Ebola were reported in five affected countries (Guinea, Liberia, Mali, Sierra Leone, United Kingdom) and four previously affected countries (Nigeria, Senegal, Spain, United States). While the three most-affected countries (Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone) showed significant progress in slowing down the spread of the disease, within each country, statistics illustrated significant differences. The number of new cases reported was fluctuating in Guinea and decreasing in Liberia, while the western part of Sierra Leone was experiencing the highest incidence of transmission. Although the weekly numbers remained similar, the disease was now more widely dispersed, creating challenges for the response.

Because of cross-border outbreaks in Mali, its Government requested that UNMEER establish an office in Bamako that became operational on 26 November. While the first case of Ebola had not resulted in a chain of transmission, a second case had resulted in six additional cases. Of the eight cases recorded in Mali, six resulted in death, including that of two health-care workers. Completing the 21-day surveillance period that began on 15 December, no further cases had been recorded, demonstrating the success of the Government's efforts to strengthen preparedness in Mali.

Within the reporting period, of the 678 health-care workers who had become infected, 380 had died. Data collection and epidemiological data were still impacted by the inaccessibility of remote areas, unreliable reporting and underreporting by resistant communities. UNMEER was working with international partners and NGOs to address data collection and develop a unified, technology-based reporting system. The operational framework established at a multi-stakeholder conference convened by UNMEER in October resulted in significant progress. The collective efforts of national Governments, affected communities, and the UN system and its partners had resulted in reducing the spread of Ebola through establishing treatment centres and burial teams, and training thousands of contract tracers and social mobilizers in affected countries, which helped communities change their behaviour and traditional practices to prevent transmission.

With 221 trained burial teams, over 90 per cent of individuals reported to have died from Ebola received a safe and dignified burial. In some regions, portions of the population were still carrying out clandestine, unsafe burials, including the washing of the body before the safe burial team was called. Improved geographical coverage and greater mobility of safe burial teams were needed. By the 60-day mark, 70 per cent of people with Ebola in Guinea and Liberia had been isolated and treated. Ebola treatment units and community care centres were reinforced by community-based initiatives.

In Sierra Leone, at the 60-day mark, the target of isolating and treating 70 per cent of people infected with the virus was not reached in four districts, in part due to the shortage of adequate treatment facilities. The Government and UNMEER initiated the "Western Area surge" plan which intensified efforts to curb the disease in that region. The Mission mobilized operational partners to meet critical gaps, such as beds and convalescent centres, and help transport additional laboratories from within the region, airlift blood samples and deploy laboratory data specialists.

All three affected countries had the net capacity to reach the 90-day objective of isolating 100 per cent of all Ebola patients and ensuring safe and dignified burials in 100 per cent of Ebola-related deaths. Because capacity was not uniform across the districts and regions of each country, discrepancies were addressed by increasing laboratories, opening treatment units, increasing bed capacity and continuing safe burials. More than 100,000 teachers, religious leaders, traditional chiefs and community watch committee members received Ebola training in the three countries. In Liberia and Sierra Leone, the percentage of districts where safe burial was promoted by religious and community leaders had reached 100 per cent. Still needed were trained and experienced international medical responders with the requisite language skills to support national personnel. To respond to the increasing geographical dispersion of the outbreak, a large number of basic and more flexible deployable treatment and surveillance capabilities at the district level were needed as well.

As at 31 December, the Ebola Response Multi-Partner Trust Fund had pledges and deposits totalling $141 million, with $105.5 million disbursed to address critical unfunded gaps in the three most affected countries. Amounts committed still fell short of the required $1.5 billion. The Special Envoy's report on "resources-for-results" provided a thorough overview of the needs of affected countries. Country-tailored reports were made available to the Governments of the three most affected countries and provided specific figures of available resources allocated by the major UN entities, as well as funds disbursed.

To contain the Ebola virus disease outbreak, the response needed to be further tailored to the location and spread pattern of the disease. The initial emphasis on containing the spread by finding and isolating infected individuals was now shifting to eliminating transmission wherever it appeared. The response also needed to shift from a country-level approach to a district-level approach. Governments, partners and the UN system were focusing on tailored responses in the 33 districts of Guinea, 15 districts in Liberia and 14 districts in Sierra Leone. The district-by-district approach would be complemented by a rapid response capacity that could be deployed in cases of sudden flare-ups that were beyond the district-level capacity.

To address the impact on essential services, the Mission and resident coordinators of the affected countries were working to ensure a response guided by national priorities. A revision of the overview of needs and requirements for the Ebola response would be published in January 2015. To strengthen the operational link between the Mission and United Nations agencies, funds and programmes involved in the restoration of essential services, UNMEER established a liaison office in Dakar. An estimated 86 per cent of Ebola treatment units and community care centres in the affected countries had functional water, sanitation and hygiene facilities. To help reduce further spread of the disease, UNICEF provided more than 160,000 households with safe water, sanitation and hygiene kits and support.

According to a study by the United Nations Development Programme and the Economic Commission for Africa, prices increased on vegetable oil, rice and potatoes by 20 to 30 per cent in some rural areas of Liberia and the price of rice had increased by at least 30 per cent in Sierra Leone. Foreign investors suspended activities and cross-border trade collapsed due to border closures. Household incomes suffered across all three countries, along with an increase in job loss. In response, social safety net cash transfer programmes were being provided for people who had lost their livelihoods, including in Liberia to bush meat traders affected by the preventive ban on bush meat. In Sierra Leone, 5,000 vulnerable households and 1,250 youth were being targeted through cash-for-work and skill-building for alternative livelihood programmes. In addition, a high-level meeting convened by WHO (Geneva, 11–12 December) on strengthening health systems and resilience in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone aimed to lay the foundation for stronger health systems and identified main constraints and challenges in rebuilding and developing more resilient health systems, among other goals.

The Ebola outbreak was still a public health emergency of international concern and the UN system would continue scaling up its efforts. More than $1.16 billion had been received, committed or pledged by donors to fund the revised overview of needs and requirements for the outbreak. The Ebola Response Multi-Partner Trust Fund had received $141 million in commitments, pledges and deposits. Nonetheless, the amounts committed still fell short of the required $1.5 billion. Skilled international personnel were needed to establish and sustain district-level Ebola treatment units, as well as epidemiologists and infection prevention and control experts. Although tremendous progress had been achieved the risk of retransmission and the possibility of another outbreak was present as long as there were active cases.

Financing of UNMEER

Report of Secretary-General. A 17 November report [A/69/590 & Corr.1] of the Secretary-General on the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola and UNMEER contained proposals for revised estimates of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015. Three mechanisms were identified as funding sources: direct funding from the regular assessed budget for the Office of the Special Envoy and UNMEER for leadership, coordination and facilitation of the overall response to the outbreak; direct voluntary funding provided to agencies, funds and programmes implementing the global strategic response plan in the affected countries; and the Ebola Response Multi-Partner Trust Fund for the allocation of funds to meet priority needs, encourage early donor contributions and allow a rapid response to unforeseen requirements. Additional resources needed were estimated to be in the amount of $189,593,900 (net of staff assessment) for 376 positions in the Office of the Special Envoy and UNMEER, and 20 positions in 2014 and 9 positions in 2015 at Headquarters for backstopping and operational costs.

Emergency operational response activities were estimated at $1.5 billion, to be funded through voluntary contributions received by the agencies, funds and programmes, including the Trust Fund. The total estimated resource requirements for the immediate response by the UN system were some $1.7 billion. From the emergency response phase to the development and recovery phase, the wider UN system intervention in the affected countries was estimated at $4.2 billion.

ACABQ report. In its 16 December report [A/69/660], ACABQ noted that it had not received the requested update on the status of expenditures as at 30 November 2014 and asked that such information be provided to the General Assembly. The Committee was concerned that the Secretary-General's report lacked clarity and/or detail in many elements and recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit a more detailed budget proposal at the second part of the resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly establish a separate and distinct special account for income and expenditures related to the Office of the Special Envoy and UNMEER, and authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in the amount of $104,582,400, inclusive of the amount of $49,943,600 authorized in resolution 69/3 (see p. 1361) for the Office of the Special Envoy and UNMEER for the period from 19 September 2014 to 30 June 2015, pending the submission of the more detailed budget. The Committee emphasized that the recommendations were made without prejudice to any recommendation it might make to the Assembly when considering the detailed budget submission or any decision by the Assembly regarding the Mission's organizational structure, staffing and operational requirements.

Global public health

The sixty-seventh session of the World Health Assembly (Geneva, 19–24 May) [WHA67/2013/REC/1] discussed public health issues such as tuberculosis, viral hepatitis, psoriasis, exposure to mercury and mercury compounds, traditional medicine, access to essential medicines, antimicrobial resistance and the World Health Organization (WHO) global disability action plan 2014–2021. It adopted a series of resolutions and decisions on those and other topics. The WHO Secretariat also submitted a report on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases (NCDs). The report included the final progress report in implementing the 2008–2013 action plan for the global strategy for the prevention and control of NCDs; progress in developing the terms of reference for the global coordination mechanism on the prevention and control of NCDs as well as those for the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on the Prevention and Control of Non-Communicable Diseases (see p. 1344); progress in developing a limited set of action plan indicators for the 2013–2020 WHO global action plan for the prevention and control of NCDs; and the role of WHO in the preparation, implementation and follow-up to the UN General Assembly comprehensive review and assessment in 2014 of the progress achieved in the prevention and control of NCDs (ibid.).

Global health and foreign policy

On 26 September, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/98 [YUN 2013, p. 1182], the Secretary-General transmitted a report [A/69/405] by the WHO Director General focusing on global health partnerships that were helping to advance collectively agreed health priorities for obtaining better health outcomes and ensuring universal health coverage.

The Director General emphasized that forging new global partnerships was one of the major transformative shifts necessary to drive the post-2015 agenda. Global public health partnerships could support Member States' efforts in attaining better health outcomes; accelerating the transition towards universal health coverage; fostering North-South, South-South and triangular cooperation, including the transfer of technologies; preparing for and responding to emergencies and disasters, including minimizing their impact on public health. The Director General recommended that the future efforts of multi-stakeholder partnerships address critical needs that were connected to the six WHO leadership priorities agreed upon by all WHO member States: advancing universal health coverage; health-related Millennium Development Goals; addressing the challenge of NCDs; implementing the provisions of the International Health Regulations (2005) [YUN 2005, p. 1331]; increasing access to essential, high-quality and affordable medical products; and addressing the social, economic and environmental determinants of health. She also urged greater efforts to align the work of health partnerships with national health policies, strategies and plans, while ensuring country ownership and recognizing that a "one-size-fits-all" approach was not appropriate.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/132 [draft: A/69/L.35 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 124].

Global health and foreign policy

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 63/33 of 26 November 2008, 64/108 of 10 December 2009, 65/95 of 9 December 2010, 66/115 of 12 December 2011, 67/81 of 12 December 2012 and 68/98 of 11 December 2013, and reaffirming the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits which have contributed to the advancement of the global health agenda as noted in these resolutions,

Recalling also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, international humanitarian law, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Constitution of the World Health Organization,

Reaffirming the right of every human being, without distinction of any kind, to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health and to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of oneself and one's family, including adequate food, clothing and housing, and to the continuous improvement of living conditions,

Underscoring the responsibility of Member States to build resilient national health systems and strengthen national capacities through attention to, inter alia, service delivery, health systems financing, including appropriate budgetary allocations, the health workforce, health information systems, the procurement and distribution of medicines, vaccines and technologies, sexual and reproductive health-care services and political will in leadership and governance, and recognizing the value and importance of universal health coverage in providing access to quality health services, while ensuring that the use of these services does not expose the users to financial hardship, with a special emphasis on the members of the poor, vulnerable and marginalized segments of the population,

Recognizing that health is a precondition for and an outcome and indicator of all three dimensions of sustainable development and that, despite progress made, challenges in global health, including major inequities and vulnerabilities within and among countries, regions and populations, still remain and demand persistent attention,

Noting the role of the Foreign Policy and Global Health Initiative in promoting synergy between foreign policy and global health and that health inequities within and between countries cannot only be addressed within the health sector by technical measures, or only at the national level, but also require global engagement for health, which is rooted in global solidarity and shared responsibility,

Reaffirming the commitment to the achievement of all the Millennium Development Goals, welcoming progress made in the areas of the Goals that concern health, which are key to achieving all the Goals, and stressing the need to further support initiatives aimed at accelerating progress for their achievement,

Recalling its resolution 68/309 of 10 September 2014, in which it welcomed the report of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals and decided that the proposal of the Open Working Group contained in the report shall be the main basis for integrating sustainable development goals into the post-2015 development agenda, while recognizing that other inputs will also be considered, in the intergovernmental negotiation process at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly,

Underscoring the importance of enhanced international cooperation to support the efforts of Member States to achieve health goals, implement universal access to health services and address health challenges while taking into account different national realities and capacities and respecting national policies and priorities,

Noting the important role that well-coordinated, multi-stakeholder partnerships with a broad range of actors, including national Governments, local authorities, international institutions, business, civil society organizations, foundations, philanthropists and social impact investors, scientists and academics and individuals, can play in development, supporting public health priorities that contribute to better health outcomes,

Reaffirming the right to use, to the fullest extent, the provisions contained in the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement), the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health and, when formal acceptance procedures are completed, the amendment to article 31 of the TRIPS Agreement, as proposed by the General Council of the World Trade Organization in its decision of 6 December 2005, which provide flexibilities for the protection of public health, and in particular to promote access to medicines for all, and to encourage the provision of assistance to developing countries in this regard, and calling for broad and timely acceptance of the amendment to article 31 of the TRIPS Agreement,

Recognizing that the protection of intellectual property can be important in the development of new medicines,

Recognizing also that attacks upon medical and health personnel result in long-lasting impacts, including the loss of life and human suffering, weaken the ability of health systems to deliver essential life-saving services and produce setbacks for health development, and recalling in that regard General Assembly resolution 68/101 of 13 December 2013 on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, as well as World Health Assembly resolution 65.20 of 26 May 2012,

Noting that attacking, threatening or otherwise preventing medical and health personnel from fulfilling their medical duties undermines their physical safety and the integrity of their professional codes of ethics, and that this impedes the attainment of the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health, as well as being a barrier to universal access to health services,

Reaffirming that Member States are responsible for ensuring the protection of the health, safety and welfare of their people and the resilience and self-reliance of the health system and access to health services, which is critical for minimizing health hazards and vulnerabilities and delivering effective prevention, response and recovery in emergencies and disasters,

Expressing deep concern over the current outbreak of the Ebola virus disease, which demonstrates the urgency of having strong health systems capable of implementing the International Health Regulations, pandemic preparedness and universal health coverage that promotes universal access to health services, which would assist in the prevention and detection of possible outbreaks, as well as of having motivated, well-trained and appropriately equipped health workers, and emphasizing the need for Member States and other relevant institutions to extend urgently all possible means of support to the affected countries to end the Ebola outbreak, while noting the importance of evidence-based responses to prevent fear, stigma and discrimination,

Taking note of multisectoral efforts, including the Global Health Security Agenda, to strengthen global capacity to prevent, detect and respond to infectious diseases, in particular by promoting sustainable and resilient national health systems, surveillance systems and response protocols,

Stressing that the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, the development of resilient health systems and advancement of the attainment of universal health coverage are enhanced by the respect of Member States, non-State actors and private individuals for the integrity and safety of medical and health personnel in carrying out their duties and of their means of transport and installations,

Acknowledging the need to prevent and address the exposure of health workers to hazardous working environments and violent incidents and the consequent trauma suffered by them in various forms, through, for example, improved specific training in public health administration and services, patient management and other health-worker support mechanisms, so as to ensure the safety, productivity and efficiency of the workforce and improved access to health-care services,

Stressing that medical and health personnel have a duty to provide competent medical service in full professional and moral independence, with compassion and respect for human dignity, and always to bear in mind human life and to act in the patient's best interest under their respective professional codes of ethics,

Reaffirming the rules and principles of international humanitarian law, including the provisions of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto of 1977 and 2005, as applicable, as well as international customary law concerned with the protection of medical personnel and humanitarian personnel exclusively engaged in medical duties, their means of transport and equipment, hospitals and other medical facilities,

Reaffirming also the principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and independence in the provision of humanitarian assistance and the need for all actors engaged in the provision of humanitarian assistance in situations of humanitarian emergencies, armed conflicts and natural disasters to promote and fully respect these principles,

Deploring acts of violence or threats of violence against medical and health personnel worldwide in armed conflict and emergency situations, and stressing that such acts are detrimental to the development of sustainable health systems and the integrity of the professional codes of ethics of medical and health personnel,

Noting that locally recruited humanitarian personnel and health-care personnel are particularly vulnerable to attacks and account for the majority of casualties among humanitarian and health-care workers,

Recognizing that one of the most serious threats to medical and health personnel is posed by armed conflicts, acknowledging the risk to such personnel in situations that do not constitute armed conflict, and noting that it is the responsibility of national Governments to carry out appropriate preventive and remedial measures,

Reaffirming the role of the World Health Organization as the directing and coordinating authority on international health work in accordance with its Constitution, and acknowledging the key role of the Organization and other relevant international organizations in providing support to Member States, as appropriate and upon request, in the development and implementation of preventive measures to promote the safety of medical and health personnel, their means of transport and installations and respect for their respective professional codes of ethics,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Director General of the World Health Organization on global health and foreign policy;

2. Urges Member States to protect, promote and respect the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health and to consider health in a holistic manner, including by considering health issues in the formulation of foreign policy;

3. Calls upon Member States to promote adequate incentives and an enabling and safe working environment for the effective retention and equitable distribution of the health workforce and to implement the World Health Organization Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel as a guide to strengthen health systems through sustainable access to qualified personnel;

4. Invites the World Health Organization to provide technical support to Member States upon request in order to strengthen their capacity to deal with public health emergencies and the implementation of the International Health Regulations, with particular focus on developing countries, in order to build capacity, strengthen health systems and promote financial sustainability, training, recruitment and retention of human resources for health and technology transfer on mutually agreed terms;

5. Calls for the development and attainment by Member States of resilient and sustainable health systems that accelerate the transition towards universal health coverage in such a way as to ensure uninterrupted and accessible services for their populations, and stresses that medical and health personnel should be able to offer appropriate assistance without obstruction, threat or physical attack and in line with their respective professional codes of ethics and scope of practice;

6. Calls for all Member States and all stakeholders to respect the integrity of medical and health personnel in carrying out their duties in line with their respective professional codes of ethics and scope of practice;

7. Recalls World Health Assembly resolution 65.20, which calls for leadership to be provided at the global level in developing methods for systematic collection of data on attacks on health facilities, health workers, health vehicles and patients in complex humanitarian emergencies, in coordination with relevant United Nations bodies, other relevant actors and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, avoiding duplication of efforts;

8. Strongly condemns all attacks on medical and health personnel, their means of transport and equipment, as well as hospitals and other medical facilities, and deplores the long-term consequences of such attacks for the population and health-care systems of the countries concerned;

9. Urges full respect for the rules and principles of international humanitarian law, including the provisions of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto of 1977 and 2005, as applicable, stresses the obligation, in accordance with international humanitarian law and applicable national laws and regulations, to respect and protect medical personnel and humanitarian personnel exclusively engaged in medical duties, their means of transport and equipment, as well as hospitals and other medical facilities, in all circumstances, notes in this regard the role of domestic legal frameworks and other appropriate measures in promoting the safety and protection of such personnel, and urges States to develop effective measures to prevent and address violence against such personnel;

10. Urges Member States, in accordance with obligations under relevant provisions of international human rights law, including the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, to promote equal access to health services and to respect and protect medical and health personnel from obstruction, threats and physical attacks;

11. Invites the World Health Organization and other relevant international organizations to develop their capacity to assist Member States, including through the promotion of research, and, upon request and through technical cooperation and other means, to develop appropriate preventive measures to enhance and promote the safety and protection of medical and health personnel, their means of transport and installations, to improve the resilience of health systems and to promote the effective implementation of universal health coverage;

12. Notes that challenges in global health still remain and demand persistent attention, and that this urgently requires the fulfilment of commitments to strengthen the global partnership for development, emphasizing in particular in this regard North-South cooperation, as well as the importance of South-South and triangular cooperation and the exchange of best practices, as well as capacity-building and the transfer of technology on mutually agreed terms, to address health inequities in the context of poverty eradication and sustainable development, in line with national priorities;

13. Urges Member States, in cooperation, as appropriate, with relevant international organizations and relevant non-State actors, to develop effective preventive measures to enhance and promote the safety and protection of medical and health personnel, as well as respect for their respective professional codes of ethics, including but not restricted to:

(a) Clear and universally recognized definitions and norms for the identification and marking of medical and health personnel, their means of transport and installations;

(b) Specific and appropriate educational measures for medical and health personnel, State employees and the general population;

(c) Appropriate measures for the physical protection of medical and health personnel, their means of transport and installations;

(d) Other appropriate measures, such as national legal frameworks where warranted, to effectively address violence against medical and health personnel;

(e) Collection of data on obstruction, threats and physical attacks on health workers;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the Director General of the World Health Organization, to submit a report on the protection of health workers, which compiles and analyses the experiences of Member States and presents recommendations for action to be taken by relevant stakeholders, including appropriate preventive measures.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that agenda item “Global health and foreign policy” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

International Day of Yoga

On 11 December, the General Assembly considered a draft resolution, introduced by India and co-sponsored by 175 Member States, proposing an International Day of Yoga to raise global awareness of the many health benefits of practicing yoga.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/131 [draft: A/69/L.17 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 124].

International Day of Yoga

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 66/2 of 19 September 2011 on the Political Declaration of the High-level Meeting of the General Assembly on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases and 68/98 of 11 December 2013 on global health and foreign policy,

Reaffirming General Assembly resolutions 53/199 of 15 December 1998 and 61/185 of 20 December 2006 on the proclamation of international years, and Economic and Social Council resolution 1980/67 of 25 July 1980 on international years and anniversaries,

Noting the importance of individuals and populations making healthier choices and following lifestyle patterns that foster good health,

Underscoring the fact that global health is a long-term development objective that requires closer international cooperation through the exchange of best practices aimed at building better individual lifestyles devoid of excesses of all kinds,

Recognizing that yoga provides a holistic approach to health and well-being,

Recognizing also that wider dissemination of information about the benefits of practising yoga would be beneficial for the health of the world population,

1. Decides to proclaim 21 June the International Day of Yoga;

2. Invites all Member and observer States, the organizations of the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations, as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations and individuals, to observe the International Day of Yoga, in an appropriate manner and in accordance with national priorities, in order to raise awareness of the benefits of practising yoga;

3. Stresses that the cost of all activities that may arise from the implementation of the present resolution should be met from voluntary contributions;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Member and observer States and the organizations of the United Nations system.

Road safety

On 10 April, the General Assembly, in follow-up on resolution 66/260 [YUN 2012, p. 1166] and in consideration of an earlier report [YUN 2013, p. 1184] on improving global road safety, prepared by WHO, in consultation with the UN regional commissions and other partners of the UN Road Safety Collaboration [YUN 2005, p. 1334], called on Member States to implement road safety activities from the Global Plan for the Decade of Action for Road Safety 2011–2020 [YUN 2010, p. 1233].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 April [meeting 82], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/269 [draft: A/68/L.40 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 12].

Improving global road safety

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/309 of 22 May 2003, 58/9 of 5 November 2003, 58/289 of 14 April 2004, 60/5 of 26 October 2005, 62/244 of 31 March 2008, 64/255 of 2 March 2010 and 66/260 of 19 April 2012 on improving global road safety,

Recalling also the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, and its outcome document, entitled “The future we want”, in which Member States took into account road safety as part of their efforts to achieve sustainable development,

Recalling further the special event to follow up efforts made towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals, convened by the President of the General Assembly on 25 September 2013, and its outcome document,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report on improving global road safety and the recommendations contained therein,

Noting that road traffic injuries are a major public health and development problem that has a broad range of social and economic consequences which, if unaddressed, may affect the sustainable development of countries and hinder progress towards the Millennium Development Goals,

Expressing its concern that the number of road traffic deaths still remains unacceptably high, with an estimated 1.24 million lives lost in 2010, and that only 7 per cent of the world’s population is covered by adequate laws that address all behavioural risk factors, including the non-use of helmets, safety belts and child restraints, driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs, inappropriate and excessive speed and the inappropriate use of cellular telephones, including texting, while driving,

Expressing its concern also that half of all road traffic deaths worldwide involve pedestrians, motorcyclists and cyclists and that some developing countries have inadequate infrastructure and insufficient policies in place to protect these vulnerable road users,

Recognizing the role of the first Global Ministerial Conference on Road Safety, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 November 2009, which culminated in a declaration inviting the General Assembly to declare a decade of action for road safety,

Noting with satisfaction that targeted steps to reduce road traffic injuries undertaken by the United Nations, including in the framework of the Decade of Action for Road Safety, have yielded positive results, and recognizing in this regard that more than 100 Member States, United Nations organizations, non-governmental organizations and civil society representatives organized pedestrian safety activities during the second United Nations Global Road Safety Week, held from 6 to 12 May 2013,

Commending the Governments of Brazil, Mozambique, Romania and Thailand and the World Health Organization for the successful launch, in May 2013, in the context of the sixty-sixth World Health Assembly, of the Global Alliance for Care of the Injured,

Acknowledging the role of Oman in drawing the attention of the international community to global road safety and in preparing the first United Nations Global Road Safety Week, held from 23 to 29 April 2007, during the sixth meeting of the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration, held in Muscat on 27 and 28 February 2007,

Commending the World Health Organization for its role in implementing the mandate conferred upon it by the General Assembly to coordinate road safety issues within the United Nations system, in close cooperation with the United Nations regional commissions, in providing support for the implementation of the Decade of Action and in preparing the Global Status Report on Road Safety 2013 and publishing a pedestrian safety manual, which provides information for use in developing and implementing comprehensive measures to improve pedestrian safety, and commending also the progress of the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration,

Recognizing the work of the United Nations regional commissions in increasing road safety activities and advocating increased political commitment to road safety, in elaborating global road safety-related legal instruments, including international conventions and agreements, technical standards, resolutions and recommendations, and in working towards setting regional and national road traffic casualty reduction targets,

Commending the Economic Commission for Europe for its plan to implement the Decade of Action, which includes actions, initiatives and measures for the Working Parties of the Commission in the areas of road infrastructure, traffic rules, dangerous goods and vehicle regulations, noting with satisfaction the establishment by the Commission of the two new groups of experts, namely on road signs and signals and on improving safety at level crossings, recognizing the continuous work of the World Forum for Harmonization of Vehicle Regulations to modify vehicle regulations to increase safety performance, and further commending the Commission for organizing special events in May 2013 in the framework of the second United Nations Global Road Safety Week, as well as for servicing 57 legal instruments that provide a commonly accepted legal and technical framework for the development of international road, rail, inland water and combined transport,

Acknowledging the important interregional efforts of the Economic Commission for Europe and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in organizing the Europe-Asia Road Safety Forum to promote the implementation of United Nations road safety conventions and to facilitate the exchange of experiences in this field among European and Asian countries,

Commending the road safety initiatives of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, including the organization of the regional Expert Group Meeting on Progress in Road Safety Improvement in Asia and the Pacific, which was held in Seoul from 8 to 10 May 2013, during the second United Nations Global Road Safety Week, and which adopted a joint statement on improving road safety in Asia and the Pacific, and the technical assistance provided to member countries to develop and refine national road safety goals, targets and indicators in support of the Decade of Action,

Commending also the efforts of the Economic Commission for Africa in strengthening the road safety initiative in Africa, including the adoption of the African Action Plan for the Decade of Action for Road Safety as a guiding document that addressed the continent's specificities and targeted a reduction in road traffic crashes by 50 per cent by 2020,

Commending further the efforts of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean to advocate and improve road safety in the Latin American and Caribbean region through studies and the dissemination of best practices among national Governments, the private sector, academia and multilateral regional institutions and to include road safety in comprehensive and regionally coordinated transport policies, including the efforts to establish the Mesoamerican Road Safety Plan, and strengthening the capacity of the road safety agency of Chile by enhancing its road safety data collection system as a tool for designing and monitoring effective policies,

Commending the efforts of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on enhancing road safety in the Arab region, including the organization of regional training workshops to accelerate the implementation of the Decade of Action and related recommendations included in the conclusions of the yearly intergovernmental meetings on transport, such as the fourteenth session of the intergovernmental Committee on Transport,

Acknowledging a number of other important international efforts on road safety, including the development by the International Road Transport Union of harmonized and internationally recognized standards for the vocational training of road transport professionals,

Taking note of the report of the Commission for Global Road Safety on safe roads for all as part of a post-2015 agenda for health and development,

Acknowledging the continued efforts of the Road Safety Initiative of the multilateral development banks, coordinated by the Global Road Safety Facility of the World Bank, and their collective actions to scale up road safety management capacity and infrastructure safety, improve safety performance measures and scale up resources through the development of systematic country projects in low- and middle-income countries,

Commending Member States that have acceded to the United Nations international legal instruments on road safety and that have adopted comprehensive legislation on major risk factors, including disregard for road signs and signals, the non-use of helmets, safety belts and child restraints, driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs, inappropriate and excessive speed and the inappropriate use of cellular telephones, including texting, while driving,

Recognizing Member States and civil society for their continued commitment to road safety by observing the World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims on the third Sunday of November every year,

Recognizing also the efforts made by some countries to implement best practices, to set ambitious targets and to monitor road traffic fatalities and serious injuries,

Taking into account the importance of strengthening capacity and continuing international cooperation to further support efforts to improve road safety, particularly in developing countries, including least developed countries and middle-income countries, and providing, as appropriate, financial and technical support and knowledge to meet the goals of the Decade of Action,

Recognizing that a solution to the global road safety crisis can be achieved only through multisectoral collaboration, private and public funding mechanisms and partnerships involving the public and private sectors, as well as civil society, including national Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, academia, professional associations, non-governmental organizations, victims' organizations, youth organizations and the media,

1. Recognizes the importance of the efficient movement of people and goods and access to environmentally sound, safe and affordable transportation as a means to improve social equity, health, the resilience of cities, urban-rural linkages and the productivity of rural areas, and in this regard takes into account road safety as part of the effort to achieve sustainable development;

2. Commends Member States that have developed national plans that are in line with the Global Plan for the Decade of Action for Road Safety 2011–2020, and encourages Member States that have not yet developed such plans to do so, paying special attention to the needs of all road users, in particular pedestrians, cyclists and other vulnerable road users, as well as issues related to sustainable mobility;

3. Invites Member States that have not yet done so to nominate, as appropriate, national focal points for the Decade of Action for Road Safety to coordinate and facilitate national activities for the Decade;

4. Also invites Member States that have not yet done so to address road safety holistically, starting with the implementation or continuation of a road safety management system, including, as appropriate, interdepartmental cooperation, the development of national road safety plans in line with the Global Plan for the Decade of Action, improvement of the quality of road safety statistics and data disaggregated by sex and age, collected through the standardization of definitions and reporting practices, and investments in multisectoral road traffic crash surveillance and analysis;

5. Encourages Member States that have not yet done so to consider enacting comprehensive legislation on key risk factors for road traffic injuries, including disregard for road signs and signals, the non-use of helmets, safety belts and child restraints, driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs, inappropriate and excessive speed and the inappropriate use of cellular telephones, including texting, while driving, in order to increase the proportion of countries with comprehensive legislation to 50 per cent by the end of the Decade of Action, and encourages Member States to strengthen their enforcement of existing road safety legislation on the risk factors;

6. Encourages the implementation of new car assessment programmes in all regions of the world in order to improve the availability of consumer information about the safety performance of motor vehicles;

7. Invites Member States to continue to improve, where appropriate, their road management systems and to introduce both road safety audits for new construction projects and road safety assessment programmes for the existing networks;

8. Also invites Member States to develop and implement comprehensive policies on post-crash care and to consider enacting legislation to legally protect bystanders who in good faith provide care to those injured in a crash;

9. Further invites Member States to raise awareness of serious road traffic injuries, in particular brain and spinal cord injuries, and to encourage investment in scientific research aimed at effectively treating such injuries;

10. Encourages Member States to continue to improve and strengthen pre-hospital, trauma and rehabilitation care through the adoption of a national emergency medical system telephone number, capacity-building and the provision of adequate and appropriate equipment;

11. Reaffirms the importance of addressing global road safety issues through international cooperation and by strengthening collaboration between Member States and civil society to build capacity and raise awareness in the field of road safety and to continue to raise awareness through the World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims on the third Sunday of November every year;

12. Also reaffirms the role and importance of the United Nations legal instruments on road safety, such as the 1949 Convention on Road Traffic, the 1968 Convention on Road Traffic, the 1968 Convention on Road Signs and Signals and the 1958 and 1998 agreements of the World Forum for Harmonization of Vehicle Regulations, in facilitating road safety at the global, regional and national levels, and encourages Member States that have not yet done so to consider becoming contracting parties and, beyond accession, applying, implementing and promoting their provisions or safety regulations, as well as adhering to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities;

13. Requests the World Health Organization and the United Nations regional commissions, in cooperation with other partners in the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration and other stakeholders, to continue the activities aimed at supporting the implementation of the objectives of the Decade of Action;

14. Also requests the World Health Organization and the United Nations regional commissions to facilitate the organization of activities during 2015 for the third United Nations Global Road Safety Week, with a focus on improving the safety of children in traffic;

15. Invites the World Health Organization to continue to monitor, through its global status reports, progress towards the attainment of the goal of the Decade of Action to stabilize and reduce road traffic deaths by 2020, and in this regard notes the importance of targets and indicators against which progress can be systematically measured;

16. Invites the Secretary-General to continue to promote effective international cooperation on road safety issues, including in the broader context of sustainable transport, and in this regard encourages further efforts, as appropriate, to strengthen the coordination of the work of the United Nations system on sustainable transport, while taking into account the need to adequately address road safety issues;

17. Reiterates its invitation to Governments to take a leading role in implementing the activities of the Decade of Action, while fostering multisectoral collaboration that includes the efforts of academia, the private sector, professional associations, non-governmental organizations, civil society, including national Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, victims' organizations, youth organizations and the media;

18. Invites Member States, international organizations, development banks and funding agencies, foundations, professional associations and private sector companies to consider providing adequate and additional funding to activities relating to the Decade of Action, including through contributions to the Road Safety Fund established by the World Health Organization and the FIA Foundation for the Automobile and Society;

19. Invites all interested relevant stakeholders to explore new and innovative funding modalities to support and collaborate in national efforts to implement the Global Plan for the Decade of Action, particularly in developing countries, including least developed countries and middle-income countries;

20. Encourages Member States and the international community to take road safety into due consideration in the elaboration of the post-2015 development agenda, while recognizing the importance of a holistic and integrated approach to sustainable transport;

21. Welcomes the offer by the Government of Brazil to host the second high-level global conference on road safety, to be held in 2015, to bring together delegations of ministers and representatives dealing with transport, health, education, safety and related traffic law enforcement issues, to review progress in implementing the Global Plan for the Decade of Action and in meeting the goal of the Decade of Action and to provide an opportunity for Member States to exchange information and best practices;

22. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session an item entitled "Improving global road safety", and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at that session on the progress made in the attainment of the objectives of the Decade of Action.

Food, agriculture and nutrition

Food aid

World Food Programme

The Executive Board of the World Food Programme (WFP) held its 2014 sessions [E/2015/36] in Rome: first (10–11 February), annual (3–6 June) and second (10–13 November), during which it made decisions and recommendations on various organizational and programme matters. It also approved several projects and policies, including protracted relief and recovery operations in Burundi, Chad, Ethiopia, Haiti, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Senegal, Yemen and the State of Palestine. On 13 November, the Board approved its 2015–2016 biennial programme of work.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2014/228 of 14 July, took note of the report [E/2014/36] of the WFP Executive Board on its first and second regular sessions and annual session of 2013, as well as of the WFP annual report for 2013 [E/2014/14].

WFP activities

According to a later WFP annual performance report [E/2015/14], unprecedented humanitarian crises made 2014 a challenging year in which WFP provided vital aviation, logistics, telecommunications and other common services to the humanitarian and development community. WFP work was dominated by responses to concurrent Level 3 and Level 2 emergencies that stretched the organization's capacities beyond their expected limits. Four of the emergencies were triggered during 2014: Iraq (see p. 1073), Libya (see p. 383), Ukraine (see p. 1074) and the Ebola crisis in West Africa (see p. 1069). WFP and its partners also continued their responses to protracted emergencies in Afghanistan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Myanmar, the State of Palestine, Somalia and the Sudan that involved conflict, natural disasters, economic shocks and significant disruptions to food systems. The concurrent emergency responses required high levels of staff commitment: 2,900 WFP staff—roughly 20 per cent of the total—worked on one or more of the Level 3 emergencies; 600 employees were temporarily deployed, often at short notice.

In 2014, WFP received its highest-ever level of voluntary contributions in the amount of $5.38 billion, 79 per cent of which was directed to the emergency response effort. In total, direct food assistance was provided for 80 million people in 82 countries, most of whom were women and children, compared with the estimated 75.9 million people anticipated in its management plan. The use of cash and voucher transfers increased to 18 per cent of the year-end budget, compared with 14 per cent in the previous financial period, primarily because that was the main modality used to assist Syrian refugees in Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon and Turkey. Cash and voucher transfers assisted 8.9 million people during 2014, 13 per cent more than in 2013. The Ebola virus disease outbreak response required extraordinary efforts, innovative ways of working and new inter-sectoral partnerships. To prevent some health crises from becoming food crises, WFP and its partners rapidly reached affected communities in Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, and restored essential transport, logistics and telecommunications services necessary to operationalize the wider response throughout the region.

Looking ahead, the annual performance urged a redoubling of efforts to tackle the harmful effects of hunger and malnutrition on those people left behind by the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). The Programme's mission to end hunger would continue to be guided by the five pillars of the Secretary-General's Zero Hunger Challenge [YUN 2012, p. 1170], namely: eliminating stunting among children under two; guaranteeing universal access to adequate and nutritious food; ensuring that food systems were sustainable; increasing the productivity and incomes of smallholder farmers by 100 per cent; and eliminating loss or waste of food.

Food Assistance Convention

The Food Assistance Convention (FAC), which came into force on 1 January 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1185], saw its membership increase with the accession of six countries: Australia, Luxembourg, the Russian Federation, Slovenia, Spain and Sweden, bringing the total membership at the end of 2014 to 14. FAC expanded the traditional focus of previous Food Aid Conventions which centred exclusively on commitments of in-kind food aid for direct consumption. It also incorporated a broader toolbox of eligible activities and food assistance products, including cash, vouchers and products intended for protecting livelihoods, a greater focus on nutrition, and a commitment to improved transparency and accountability. Parties to the Convention were making their commitments in monetary value as opposed to the metric wheat tonne equivalent, sharing information and best practices in food assistance delivery, and meeting twice annually to discuss the most efficient and effective means of delivery of food assistance.

Annual FAC financial commitments to improving the food security and nutritional status of vulnerable populations amounted to over $2.7 billion dollars in 2014. FAC members responded to humanitarian crises throughout the world, with the Syrian regional conflict constituting the largest single response. Other notable responses included the Ebola virus disease outbreak in West Africa and the crises in South Sudan and Ukraine. In 2014, all members fulfilled their financial commitments, and some exceeded their commitments substantially. Food assistance operations were provided bilaterally, through intergovernmental or other international organizations including WFP.

Food security

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to address global food insecurity. The 2014 edition of the organization's report The State of Food Insecurity in the World, which focused on strengthening the enabling environment for food security and nutrition, stated that 805 million people—or one in nine people—were chronically undernourished in 2012–14: an amount 100 million lower than the previous decade, and 209 million lower than in 1990–92. The vast majority of those undernourished people lived in developing countries, where an estimated 791 million were chronically hungry. The developing world, however, accounted for most of the improvements over the previous two decades, with an overall reduction of 203 million undernourished people since 1990–92. The MDGs hunger target of reducing by half the proportion of undernourished people by 2015 was within reach if appropriate and immediate efforts were stepped up.

Despite the overall progress, the developing world was not on track to achieve the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129] target of halving the number of undernourished people by 2015. Marked differences also persisted across regions. Sub-Saharan Africa had the highest prevalence rate of undernourishment, having made only modest progress in preceding years; around one in four people in the region remained undernourished. Asia, the most populous region in the world, still had the highest number of undernourished. Latin America and the Caribbean, as a whole, met the MDG hunger target as well as the more stringent World Food Summit target.

Key messages outlined in the report included the need for sustained political commitment at the highest level as a prerequisite for hunger eradication; an integrated hunger reduction approach that would include public and private investments to raise agricultural productivity; better access to inputs, land, services, technologies and markets; social protection for the most vulnerable, including strengthening their resilience to conflicts and natural disasters; and specific nutrition programmes, especially to address micronutrient deficiencies in mothers and children under five.

Agriculture development, food security and nutrition

Malabo Declaration. At the twenty-third ordinary session of the African Union (Malabo, Equatorial Guinea, 26–27 June), which also marked the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme (CAADP) of the New Partnership for Africa's Development [YUN 2009, p. 1234], African leaders adopted the Malabo Declaration on Accelerated Agricultural Growth and Transformation for Shared Prosperity and Improved Livelihoods, reaffirming Africa's strong commitment to using growth in agricultural productivity to spur economic growth, boost the food and income security of rural households and reduce extreme poverty and hunger. The CAADP aimed at eliminating hunger and reducing poverty through agriculture by increasing public investment in agriculture and raising agricultural productivity. The Malabo Declaration represented a recommitment by Heads of State to the key principles and values of the Programme, particularly mutual accountability on actions and results.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 68/233 [YUN 2013, p. 1187], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/69/279] on agriculture development, food security and nutrition. The report examined progress and challenges in achieving food security and nutrition, sustainably increasing agricultural production, and reducing agricultural losses and waste in accordance with the Zero Hunger Challenge [YUN 2012, p. 1170] and international agreements. The Secretary-General also made recommendations on how to maintain momentum beyond the achievement of the 2015 targets through the incorporation of food security, nutrition and sustainable agriculture in the post-2015 development agenda (see p. 960).

The Secretary-General stated that developing regions as a whole had registered significant progress towards meeting the MDG hunger target, but that 33 countries—26 in Africa and 7 in Asia—remained in need of external assistance for food owing to conflict, crop failures and high domestic food prices, or a combination of those factors. From 2000 to 2012, the global prevalence of stunting among children under 5 years of age had declined from one in three to one in four—with the number of children affected falling from 197 million to 162 million, 90 per cent of whom were in Africa and Asia. Worldwide in 2012, 51 million children under 5 years of age were wasted (dangerously thin for one's height), and 17 million were severely wasted—prevalence rates of almost 8 per cent and just under 3 per cent, respectively. Approximately 71 per cent of all severely wasted children lived in Asia and 28 per cent in Africa, with similar figures for wasted children of 69 per cent and 28 per cent, respectively.

As the report also set forth, the International Year of Family Farming, 2014—whose implementation the General Assembly had invited FAO to facilitate in its resolution 66/222 [YUN 2011, p. 1168] declaring the Year—was officially launched on 22 November 2013 at UN Headquarters in New York. Events included five regional dialogues that engaged family farmers and representatives from governments, the scientific community, civil society organizations and the private sector. The dialogues aimed to identify the main challenges and opportunities for family farming in each region, and the main tenets of an enabling policy environment for family farming as a central component for achieving food and nutrition security, and effectively eradicating hunger and rural poverty. At the request of the International Steering Committee of the Year, the 2014 FAO regional conferences provided forums for constructive dialogue among those stakeholders, and further defined the scope of the work and priorities of FAO in support of family farming at the regional level.

The Secretary-General emphasized that eliminating hunger, ensuring food security and adequate nutrition, and making agriculture and food systems sustainable would require a more integrated approach across many sectors. He referenced an emerging consensus that food security in the post-2015 development agenda had to be aligned with the Istanbul Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries [YUN 2011, p. 828], which was designed to lift the poorest countries out of poverty. Targets on nutrition in the post-2015 development agenda had also to take into account the 2012 World Health Assembly targets [YUN 2012, p. 1175], which touched upon all dimensions of malnutrition.

The Secretary-General recommended that countries be enabled to determine their own nationally articulated food security strategies developed through consultation with all key stakeholders; Governments undertake research and make other investments to support the capacity of smallholder farmers to adapt to climate change; and continued efforts be made towards improving the food security and nutritional status of the poor, including through strengthened social protection and safety nets.

Committee on World Food Security. By a note [A/69/91-E/2014/84] of 3 September the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council a report on the main decisions and policy recommendations of the Committee on World Food Security. The report, submitted in response to Council decision 2011/217 [YUN 2011, p. 1162], provided a brief description of the outcomes and decisions taken by the Committee at its fortieth session in October 2013, and, where appropriate, updates on follow-up actions.

Among its principal actions, the Committee endorsed the second version of the Global Strategic Framework that included policy recommendations previously endorsed at its thirty-ninth session in 2012 [YUN 2013, p. 1186]. It also endorsed the next steps of the Communication Strategy for the Framework, and requested that an implementation plan including the budget be developed. The Committee further endorsed the terms of reference, qualifications and selection procedure for the new Committee Secretary, and the modalities and requirements for the inclusion in its Secretariat of other UN system entities that were directly involved in food security and nutrition.

At the session, the High-Level Panel of Experts on Food Security and Nutrition presented two reports: "Biofuels and Food Security" and "Investing in Smallholder Agriculture for Food Security" that were used as the basis for discussions at two policy round tables. Other topics addressed by the Committee included food security in protracted crises; the Multi-Year Programme of Work; and the work of the High-Level Panel of Experts on Food Security and Nutrition.

On 17 November (decision 2014/250), the Economic and Social Council took note of the note transmitting the report on the main decisions and policy recommendations of the Committee on World Food Security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/69/474], adopted resolution 69/240 without vote [agenda item 25].

Agriculture development, food security and nutrition

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 65/178 of 20 December 2010, 66/220 of 22 December 2011, 67/228 of 21 December 2012 and 68/233 of 20 December 2013,

Recalling also the Declaration of the World Summit on Food Security, particularly the Five Rome Principles for Sustainable Global Food Security, and noting the Rome Declaration on Nutrition, as well as the Framework for Action, which provides a set of voluntary policy options and strategies for use by Governments, as appropriate, adopted at the Second International Conference on Nutrition, held in Rome from 19 to 21 November 2014,

Recalling further the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development (Johannesburg Plan of Implementation), the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, the 2005 World Summit Outcome, the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development: outcome document of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, the outcome document of the 2010 high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011–2020 and the outcome document of the special event to follow up efforts made towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals, convened by the President of the General Assembly on 25 September 2013,

Recalling the outcome document of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, entitled “The future we want”,

Recalling also its resolution 68/309 of 12 September 2014, in which it welcomed the report of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals and decided that the proposal of the Open Working Group contained in the report shall be the main basis for integrating sustainable development goals into the post-2015 development agenda, while recognizing that other inputs will also be considered, in the intergovernmental negotiation process at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly,

Welcoming the implementation of the International Year of Family Farming, 2014, which raised the profile of the role of family farming and smallholder farming in contributing to the achievement of food security and improved nutrition, looking forward to the implementation of the International Year of Soils, 2015, and World Soil Day, 5 December, and also looking forward to the participation of the United Nations in Expo Milano 2015, “Feeding the Planet, Energy for Life”, which will focus on the theme “The Zero Hunger Challenge—United for a Sustainable World”,

Welcoming also the outcome of the forty-first session of the Committee on World Food Security, held in Rome from 13 to 18 October 2014,

Noting the adoption by the Heads of State and Government of the African Union, at its twenty-third ordinary session, held in Malabo on 26 and 27 June 2014, of the Malabo Declaration on Accelerated Agricultural Growth and Transformation for Shared Prosperity and Improved Livelihoods, which also marked the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme of the New Partnership for Africa’s Development,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms the commitments to making every effort to achieve the Millennium Development Goals by 2015 in support of developing countries, in particular those countries that are lagging most behind and those Goals where progress is most off track, thus improving the lives of the poorest people;
3. Stresses the importance of continued consideration of the issue of agriculture development, food security and nutrition, and further encourages Member States and all stakeholders to give due consideration to this issue in the elaboration of the post-2015 development agenda;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on new developments related to the issues highlighted in its resolution 68/233 and in the present resolution;
5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled “Agriculture development, food security and nutrition”.

Nutrition

Scaling up nutrition. In 2014, the Scaling Up Nutrition (SUN) movement saw the introduction of self-assessments, undertaken by 37 SUN countries and involving all stakeholders assessing their performance and confirming the ownership by governments and their partners. During the year, an additional 13 countries joined the SUN movement taking the total to 54 countries. Substantial progress was noted in relation to SUN Movement Strategic Objectives 1 and 2, on creating an enabling political environment and establishing best practices for scaling up proven interventions, respectively. In relation to Strategic Objective 3 on aligning in-country actors around a common results framework, it was not an easy task and required continuous efforts by all concerned. In relation to Strategic Objective 4 on increasing resources, there were early signs that as countries progressed in relation to the first two strategic objectives, they started to see an increase in the resources available for nutrition.

The technical group of the SUN UN System Network (UN Network), built around FAO, WHO, WFP, UNICEF and the International Fund for Agricultural Development, held a face-to-face meeting to help articulate a joint UN vision and discuss necessary institutional arrangements required to promote improved harmonized approaches within the United Nations. The UN Network provided direct support to governments in 14 countries. It also hosted side events aimed at raising the profile of nutrition, including during the fortieth session of the Committee on World Food Security in October 2013 (see p. 1375) and the preparatory technical meetings in November 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1194] for the Second International Conference on Nutrition (see below).

Second International Conference on Nutrition.

As set forth in a later report [A/70/333], the Second International Conference on Nutrition, co-organized by FAO and WHO, was held at FAO headquarters (Rome, 19–21 November 2014). The high-level intergovernmental conference focused global attention on malnutrition in all its forms—undernourishment, undernutrition, including micronutrient deficiencies, and overweight and obesity. The Conference brought together a total of 164 members of FAO and WHO. More than 2,200 individuals participated, including Heads of State and Government, experts and representatives of civil society and the private sector.

The Conference was convened to review progress made since the 1992 International Conference on Nutrition [YUN 1992, p. 830], respond to new challenges and opportunities, and identify policy options for improving nutrition; bring food, agriculture, health and other sectors together to enable them to align their sectoral policies for improving nutrition in a sustainable manner; propose adaptable policy options and institutional frameworks that could adequately address major nutrition challenges in the foreseeable future; encourage greater political and policy coherence, alignment, coordination and cooperation among food, agriculture, health and other sectors; mobilize the political will and resources needed to improve nutrition; and identify priorities for international cooperation on nutrition in the near and medium terms.

The political Rome Declaration on Nutrition and the Framework for Action, a voluntary technical guide of 60 recommendations on how to implement the Declaration, were the two outcome documents endorsed by participating Governments at the Conference, committing world leaders to establish national policies for eradicating malnutrition in all its forms and transforming food systems so as to make nutritious diets available to all. In the Rome Declaration, ministers and representatives of the members of FAO and WHO also recommended that the General Assembly “consider declaring a decade of action on nutrition from 2016 to 2025 within existing structures and available resources”.

International drug control and crime prevention

In 2014, the United Nations, through the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the Commission on Narcotic Drugs (CND), the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ), continued to strengthen international cooperation in countering transnational organized crime, corruption, drugs and international terrorism. UNODC provided technical assistance, legal advice and research to the main United Nations policymaking bodies in drug control and crime prevention, and assisted Member States in developing domestic legislation and in implementing the international drug control and crime prevention conventions. During the year, the Office improved the alignment between its strategic framework and the normative and technical cooperation services it provided, implemented 16 regional and country programmes; launched a new regional programme in support of the Caribbean Community Crime and Security Strategy; and strengthened cooperation at the regional level in the Sahel. The Office also expanded its global programmes supporting the ratification and implementation of the international conventions on drugs and crime and promoting UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. It supported preparations for the high-level review conducted by CND, strengthened its cooperation and coordination with other UN agencies, promoted the coherence of UN initiatives on the rule of law and amplified the impact of its work through cooperation with international organizations.

CND—the main UN policymaking body dealing with drug control—held its fifty-seventh session in March, during which it recommended to the Economic and Social Council one draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly, and two decisions for adoption by the Council. It adopted one decision and 11 resolutions on topics such as alternative development; drug abuse prevention through sport; prevention based on scientific evidence; supporting recovery from drug use disorders; the special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem to be held in 2016; education and training on drug use disorders; health services during economic downturns; illicit activities related to opium poppy seeds; identification of new psychoactive substances; preventing the diversion of ketamine; and measures to support the Greater Mekong subregion in countering drug trafficking and abuse. The Commission also conducted a high-level review of the implementation by Member States of the 2009 Political Declaration and

In its report for 2014, INCB discussed the implementation of a comprehensive, integrated and balanced approach to addressing the world drug problem and facilitating the availability of controlled substances for medical and scientific purposes, to be accomplished through compliance with the three international drug control conventions. It stressed the importance of drug demand and supply reduction strategies and noted that the illicit cultivation of drug crops was intertwined with socioeconomic factors and thus its reduction and elimination should be addressed in the broader context of sustainable development.

CCPCJ—the principal UN policymaking body in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice—held its twenty-third session in May, during which it recommended to the Economic and Social Council six draft resolutions for adoption by the General Assembly, and three draft resolutions and two decisions for adoption by the Council. It held a thematic discussion on international cooperation in criminal matters and adopted one decision and three resolutions on topics that included trafficking in forest products; trafficking in human organs; and strengthening the goAML (Anti-Money-Laundering) system.

In December, the General Assembly reaffirmed that countering the world drug problem was a common and shared responsibility to be addressed in a multilateral setting. The Assembly adopted the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences and urged Member States to apply them to the maximum extent possible, in view of strengthening international cooperation. The Assembly also adopted the United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and requested UNODC to ensure their broad dissemination.

United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) addressed the interrelated issues of transnational organized crime, corruption, drugs and international terrorism, and offered global solutions for those problems within the multilateral framework of the United Nations. Guided by its governing bodies—the Commission on Narcotic Drugs (CND) and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ)—the Office continued its work with Member States and civil society on pursuing a balanced and integrated approach to controlling drugs and combating crime as part of the UN system-wide effort to promote justice, human rights, development, health, peace and security. CND held its fifty-seventh session (13 December 2013; 13–21 March and 3–5 December 2014) [E/2014/28 & Add.1] and CCPCJ its twenty-third session (13 December 2013; 12–16 May and 4–5 December 2014) [E/2014/30 & Add.1], all in Vienna.

In a report to the two Commissions [E/CN.7/2015/2-E/CN.15/2015/2], the UNODC Executive Director described the Office's 2014 activities, which focused on countering corruption, terrorism and transnational organized crime and illicit trafficking; crime prevention and criminal justice; drug use prevention; treatment and reintegration; alternative development; and research, trend analysis and scientific and forensic support. At the intergovernmental level, the Office supported preparations for the high-level review of the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, conducted by CND at its fifty-seventh session (see p. 1381). It provided expertise and technical support to the preparatory process for the special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem, to be held in 2016. UNODC also supported the organization of four regional meetings in preparation for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Qatar in 2015. The Office expanded the number and volume of integrated regional and country programmes, providing the operational frameworks and cooperation platforms to support Member States in their drug and crime control priorities and to contribute to regional strategies and action plans. During the year, it was implementing 16 programmes, initiated evaluations for the regional programmes in East and West Africa and launched the new regional programme in support of the Caribbean Community and Security Strategy. In the Sahel, the comprehensive UNODC interregional response was rolled out. The Office supported the ratification and implementation of the international drug control conventions, the United Nations Convention against Corruption [YUN 2003, p. 1127] and the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2000, p. 1048] and the Protocols thereto, while strengthening its cooperation and coordination with other UN agencies.

With a view to countering transnational organized crime and illicit drug trafficking, UNODC, through the Paris Pact initiative, continued to support efforts to counter the threat of illicit Afghan opiates and foster joint action against drug-related financial flows and money-laundering, expanded maritime cooperation and enhanced regional cooperation in criminal matters. Initiatives in drug supply reduction and countering drug trafficking focused on building operational links between various regional and international law enforcement organizations. The UNODC Airport Communication Project (AIRCOP) supported interregional cooperation against drug trafficking through the development of intelligence- and information-sharing platforms, with a focus on priority international airports in West Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean. The Container Control Programme, implemented jointly by UNODC and the World Customs Organization to assist States in the development of sustainable law enforcement structures in sea and dry ports, expanded with operational units in 20 countries. The Office continued providing technical support to States within the 1993 Memorandum of Understanding on Drug Control of the Greater Mekong subregion and through the UNODC regional programme for South-East Asia. Through its global programmes on trafficking in persons and the smuggling of migrants, UNODC delivered over 30 technical assistance activities, reaching over 25 countries and 440 practitioners. Through its Global Programme against Money-Laundering, Proceeds of Crime and the Financing of Terrorism, UNODC cooperated with regional networks in building national systems to counter money-laundering in Asia and the Pacific, Central Asia, the Middle East and North Africa, and East and Southern Africa. In January, UNODC reconvened the intergovernmental expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property, which led to the finalization of the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences, adopted by Assembly resolution 69/196 (see p. 1408). In May, UNODC launched the Global Programme for Combating Wildlife and Forest Crime, which addressed the illicit supply of and demand for wild fauna and flora at the global level. As part of its Maritime Crime Programme, UNODC assisted Kenya, Mauritius and Seychelles in their prosecution of suspected pirates.

As to countering corruption, the Office continued to provide technical assistance to the country review process of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the UN Convention against Corruption, which entered the last year of its first cycle, with 171 States parties engaged in the process. The joint UNODC-World Bank Stolen Asset Recovery (STAR) Initiative provided technical assistance on asset recovery to approximately 30 countries. In terrorism prevention, UNODC promoted the ratification and/or implementation of the 19 international conventions and protocols related to counter-terrorism. It provided legal assistance to Member States for the harmonization of national counter-terrorism legislation, and it strengthened its cooperation with entities participating in the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force.

In crime prevention and criminal justice, UNODC assisted and advised an increasing number of countries on strengthening the rule of law through crime prevention and the promotion of fair, humane and accountable criminal justice systems. The Office convened intergovernmental expert group meetings on the elimination of violence against children and on the gender-related killing of women and girls, as well as the third meeting of the Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Vienna, 25–28 March). The United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice were subsequently adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 69/194 (see p. 1440).

With respect to prevention, treatment and reintegration, and alternative development, UNODC supported drug prevention and drug dependence treatment in more than 50 countries and continued its collaboration with the World Health Organization (WHO) in 45 countries on strengthening services for the treatment, care and recovery of people suffering from drug dependence as well as children exposed to drugs at a very young age. To support reaching the target of reducing HIV transmission among people who injected drugs by 50 per cent by 2015, as established by the General Assembly Political Declaration on HIV and AIDS [YUN 2011, p. 1135], UNODC supported a rapid scaling-up of the delivery of harm reduction services, including advocacy, technical assistance and capacity-building in 24 high-priority countries. It continued implementation of alternative development programmes in six key countries affected by illicit crop cultivation: Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Peru.

The Office continued to provide technical support to Member States for the development of crime statistics and to collect and analyse data and trends with respect to illicit trafficking of opiates, especially from Afghanistan. It also assisted countries by providing training to improve the collection, analysis and reporting of drug data.

The financial situation of UNODC remained vulnerable, and low levels of non-earmarked or soft marked funding represented a challenge to the implementation of its mandates and programmes. The consolidated budget of UNODC for the biennium 2014–2015, as revised, totalled $760.1 million, of which 11.7 per cent came from regular budget funds and 83.3 per cent from extrabudgetary resources.

The World Drug Report 2014 [Sales No. E.14.XI.7] highlighted trends and emerging issues regarding the global drug situation and presented an analysis of the status of precursor control. The Office published the latest Global Study on Homicide [Sales No. 14.IV.1] during the year, based on data for 219 countries and territories worldwide. The Global Report on Trafficking in Persons 2014 [Sales No. 14.V.10] provided global data and highlighted patterns and flows. The Illicit Drug Trade through South-Eastern Europe provided a picture of the drug trafficking routes and trends in the region and beyond.

The Executive Director concluded his report with recommendations to the Commissions.

Administrative and budgetary matters

Administration

UNODC strategy. In a January note [E/CN.7/2014/15-E/CN.15/2014/15] on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017, the Secretary-General invited CND and CCPCJ to review and provide comments on the proposed biennial programme plan for programme 13, International drug control, crime and terrorism prevention and criminal justice [A/69/6 (Prog. 13)].

Intergovernmental working group. Pursuant to Economic and Social Council decision 2013/246 [YUN 2013, p. 1197], CND resolutions 52/13 [YUN 2009, p. 1252], 54/10 [YUN 2011, p. 1173], 54/17 [ibid.] and 56/11 [YUN 2013, p. 1197], and CCPCJ resolutions 18/3 [YUN 2009, p. 1082], 20/1 [YUN 2011, p. 1173], 20/9 [ibid.] and 22/2 [YUN 2013, p. 1197], the Secretariat submitted a January note [E/CN.7/2014/8-E/CN.15/2014/8] on the work of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of UNODC, which covered the working group's activities between 31 October 2013 and 13 January 2014. During the reporting period, the working group discussed implementation of the UNODC consolidated budgets for 2012–2013 and 2014–2015; the UNODC mandate with respect to cybercrime; action taken to strengthen programme-level reporting; the introduction of a sustainable funding model based on full cost recovery; an update on the regional programme for West Africa for 2010–2014; and a new regional programme for South-East Asia for 2014–2017.

An October addendum to the note [E/CN.7/2014/8/Add.1-E/CN.15/2014/8/Add.1] covered the working group's activities between 12 February and 1 October. It considered progress by UNODC in the implementation of its thematic programme on crime prevention and criminal justice reform for 2012–2015, full cost recovery implementation and the use of general purpose and programme support cost funds in the consolidated budget for 2014–2015.

Budget

In November [E/CN.7/2014/18-E/CN.15/2014/21], the UNODC Executive Director identified adjustments to the consolidated budget for the biennium 2014–2015 for UNODC and provided information on the implementation of the funding model of the Office, as requested by CND resolution 56/17 [YUN 2013, p. 1197] and CCPCJ resolution 22/9 [ibid.].

The total general-purpose expenditure for the drug and crime programme funds was projected to decrease by $5.3 million (25.3 per cent), from $21.2 million in 2012–2013 to $15.9 million in 2014–2015; and requirements against the programme support cost resources were anticipated to increase by $8.7 million (23 per cent), from $38 million in 2012–2013 to $46.7 million in 2014–2015. The total special-purpose expenditure of the drug and crime programme funds was projected to increase by $111.2 million (23.4 per cent), from $474.5 million in 2012–2013 to $585.7 million in 2014–2015. The total regular budget resources reflected an increase of $3.3 million, from $85 million in 2012–2013 to $88.3 million in 2014–2015.

For the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, Member States were requested to endorse revised estimates for special-purpose funds totalling $323,384,700, reflecting an increase of $18,816,800 vis-à-vis the amounts endorsed by CND resolution 56/17. The amounts approved for general-purpose funds ($11,189,700) and endorsed for programme support cost funds ($23,880,600) were maintained. For the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund, Member States were requested to endorse revised estimates for special-purpose funds totalling $285,159,200, reflecting an increase of $4,016,600 vis-à-vis the amounts endorsed by CCPCJ resolution 22/9. The amounts approved for general-purpose funds ($4,684,800) and endorsed for programme support cost funds ($22,830,900) were maintained.

Commission action. On 5 December [E/2014/28/Add.1 (res. 57/12)], CND endorsed the revised estimates of $323,384,700 for special-purpose funds. On the same date [E/2014/30/Add.1 (res. 23/4)], CCPCJ endorsed the revised estimates of $285,159,200 for special-purpose funds. Both the Commissions noted the cost-saving measures taken by UNODC to maintain general-purpose expenditure at $11,189,700 and programme support cost expenditure at $23,880,600, encouraged the efforts made by UNODC to develop an annual report and an annual pledging process and invited Member States to provide extrabudgetary resources for those purposes. They also requested UNODC to encourage donors to provide general-purpose funding and invited Member States and other donors to support the general-purpose funds of the Office.

International drug control

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

At its fifty-seventh session (Vienna, 13 December 2013 and 13–21 March 2014) [E/2014/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs (CND) recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of one draft resolution on the special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem to be held in 2016, for adoption by the General Assembly. It also recommended two draft decisions for the Economic and Social Council's adoption, and adopted 11 resolutions, one decision and the Joint Ministerial Statement of its high-level segment, all of which it brought to the attention of the Council (see below).

At its reconvened fifty-seventh session (Vienna, 3–5 December) [E/2014/28/Add.1], the Commission adopted one resolution on implementation of the budget for the biennium 2014–2015 for the Fund of the UN International Drug Control programme and brought it to the attention of the Council. It brought two draft decisions to the Council's attention and recommended one draft decision for adoption by the Council.

On 16 July, by decision 2014/233, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its reconvened fifty-sixth (2013) session. On the same date, by decision 2014/234, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its fifty-seventh session [E/2014/28], Commission decision 55/1 of 2012 on the organization of work for future CND sessions, and Commission resolution 57/5 regarding organizational matters relevant to preparations for the 2016 special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem (see p. 1383). It also approved the provisional agenda for the Commission's fifty-eighth (2015) session.

Commission documentation. The Commission considered a December 2013 report [E/CN.7/2014/6] by the Secretariat with information on the costs and the number and frequency of documents prepared for the Commission, and efforts by the Secretariat to increase efficiencies in the manner in which it produced such documentation and the savings linked to those efficiencies. The report made recommendations, including exploring possibilities to improve and reduce the yearly reporting requirements through an examination of the Commission's mandates, with a view to identifying those which were outdated or duplicative.

High-level review. The high-level segment of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, held on 13 and 14 March [E/2014/28], consisted of a mid-term review of progress achieved and challenges in implementing the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, as adopted during the high-level segment of the fifty-second (2009) session of the Commission [YUN 2009, p. 1237] and by General Assembly resolution 64/182 [ibid.]. The themes for the three round-table discussions were demand reduction; supply reduction; and international cooperation. On 14 March, the participants adopted the Joint Ministerial Statement of the 2014 high-level review by the Commission of the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem.

In a May note [A/69/87-E/2014/80], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly, pursuant to Assembly resolution 68/197 [YUN 2013, p. 1198], the report of the Chair of the Commission on the outcome of the CND high-level review. Annexed to that report was the Joint Ministerial Statement.

By decision 69/538 of 18 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note.

Special session on the world drug problem. On 21 March [E/2014/28 (res. 57/5)], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs urged States to ratify or accede to the provisions of the three main drug control conventions, and underlined the importance of the special session of the General Assembly to address the world drug problem to be convened in early 2016, as a milestone on the way to 2019, which had been set as the target date for the achievement of the goals of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem [YUN 2009, p. 1237]. Recognizing its leading role in the preparations for the special session, the Commission decided to take measures to ensure an adequate preparatory process by making use of its meetings, reporting entitlements and regular budget resources in the most efficient manner. It requested UNODC to provide expertise and technical support, encouraged the participation of Member States and the provision of assistance to the least developed countries in the preparatory work, and invited Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for this purpose. It recommended that organs, entities and specialized agencies of the UN system, multilateral development banks, and other relevant international and regional organizations contribute to the Commission's preparations, and recognized the important role played by civil society, particularly non-governmental organizations. The Commission invited Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the preparatory process.

On 4 December [E/2014/28/Add.1 (dec. 57/2)], CND decided that, in order to ensure continuity with respect to its preparatory work for the special session of the General Assembly to address the world drug problem to be convened in early 2016, a Board tasked by the Commission would be elected based on the regional distribution of officers of the Bureau of its fifty-seventh session. The Board would participate in the meetings of the extended bureaux of the fifty-eighth (2015) and fifty-ninth (2016) sessions and assist the Commission and the Chairs of those respective sessions in fulfilling their mandate. It would be in charge of organizing all actions taken by the Commission in preparation for the special session and would address all organizational and substantive matters for that purpose.

On 5 December [dec. 57/3], the Commission approved the provisional agenda for the special segment to be held during the fifty-eighth session of the Commission, in March 2015, on preparations for the special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem to be held in 2016.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2014/28], adopted resolution 2014/24 without vote [agenda item 17 (d)].

Special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem to be held in 2016

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

The General Assembly

1. Welcomes Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 57/5 of 21 March 2014, and notes with satisfaction the support expressed at the high-level review by the Commission of the progress made by Member States in the implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem for the decision taken by the General Assembly in its resolution 67/193 of 20 December 2012 to convene a special session on the world drug problem early in 2016, in implementation of the recommendation contained in paragraph 40 of the Political Declaration;

2. Urges States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to, and States parties to implement, as a matter of priority, all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

3. Stresses the importance of the special session on the world drug problem in 2016, as noted in Commission resolution 57/5, as a milestone on the way to 2019, which has been set as the target date in the Political Declaration for the review of implementation;

4. Reaffirms that, at its special session on the world drug problem in 2016, it will address substantive issues on the basis of the principle of common and shared responsibility and in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, international law and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and in particular with respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States, all human rights, fundamental freedoms, the inherent dignity of all individuals and the principles of equal rights and mutual respect among States;

5. Decides that the special session shall be convened following the fifty-ninth session of the Commission, scheduled to be held in March 2016;

6. Also decides that the special session on the world drug problem in 2016 shall have an inclusive preparatory process that includes extensive substantive consultations, allowing organs, entities and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, relevant international and regional organizations, civil society and other relevant stakeholders to fully contribute to the process, in accordance with the relevant rules of procedure and established practice;

7. Further decides that the Commission, as the central policymaking body within the United Nations system dealing with drug-related matters, shall lead this process by addressing all organizational and substantive matters in an open-ended manner, and in this regard invites the President of the General Assembly to support, guide and stay involved in the process;

8. Notes with appreciation the efforts made by the Commission to take all measures necessary to use its existing meetings and reporting entitlements in the most efficient manner to ensure adequate preparation for the special session in 2016, and requests the Commission to continue to take all measures necessary to prepare for the special session, as early as possible;

9. Encourages the participation of all Member States and the provision of assistance to the least developed countries in the preparatory work undertaken by the Commission in order to work actively towards the attainment of the objectives and goals of the special session, and invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for this purpose;

10. Recognizes that the special session on the world drug problem to be held in 2016 constitutes an opportunity for a high-level and wide-ranging discussion among Member States leading up to the target date of 2019, within the framework of the three international drug control conventions and other relevant international instruments, in order to further implement the commitments and targets set out in the Political Declaration and Plan of Action;

11. Also recognizes the important role played by civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations, in the preparations for and during the fifty-second and the fifty-seventh sessions of the Commission, including their high-level segments, and recognizes further the need for their active involvement in the preparations for the special session, as well as the need for their effective, substantive and active involvement during the special session, in accordance with the rules of procedure and practice developed for other special sessions of the General Assembly, and requests the Chair of the Commission to consider undertaking consultations and other appropriate actions in this regard with relevant stakeholders;

12. Invites organs, entities and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, multilateral development banks, other relevant international organizations, including the International Narcotics Control Board, and regional organizations to contribute fully to the preparations for the special session in 2016, in particular by submitting to the Commission, through the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, specific recommendations on the issues to be addressed at the special session;

13. Requests the Commission to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the progress made in preparation for the special session in 2016;

14. Reaffirms its decision taken in resolution 67/193 to conduct the special session and its preparatory process from within existing regular budget resources;

15. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes set out in the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/69/490], adopted resolution 69/200 without vote [agenda item 106].

Special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem to be held in 2016

The General Assembly

1. Welcomes Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 57/5 of 21 March 2014, and notes with satisfaction the support expressed at the high-level review by the Commission of the progress made by Member States in the implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem for the decision taken by the General Assembly in its resolution 67/193 of 20 December 2012 to convene a special session on the world drug problem early in 2016, in implementation of the recommendation contained in paragraph 40 of the Political Declaration;

14. Reaffirms its decision taken in resolution 67/193 to conduct the special session and its preparatory process from within existing regular budget resources;

15. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes set out in the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/197 [YUN 2013, p. 1198], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/69/111] on international cooperation against the world drug problem, which reviewed the world drug situation and the implementation of the mandates relating to international drug control by Member States, UNODC, other entities of the UN system and relevant international organizations. It also provided information on the outcome of the high-level review of the progress made by Member States in the implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem [YUN 2009, p. 1237], conducted in March by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as well as recommendations for consideration by the Assembly in preparing for the special session on the world drug problem to be held in 2016. At the global level, UNODC implemented thematic programmes supporting the ratification and implementation of the international drug conventions. At the regional level, it promoted cross-border cooperation and regional programmes and initiatives among partner countries, and it initiated an approach connecting various interregional programmes. At the national level, the Office assisted Member States in improving their normative, institutional and operational capacity and provided assistance in drafting national legislation for the implementation of the three conventions. In the field of demand reduction, the Office supported drug prevention and drug dependence treatment in 57 countries. It also reached people in 38 countries through its continued collaboration with WHO on improving the coverage and quality of services for the treatment and care of people with drug use disorders. It strengthened its capacity to help countries scale up the delivery of harm reduction services in the context of HIV, and it identified 24 high-priority countries in the area of injecting drug use and HIV, in which the Office was concentrating efforts and resources for the period 2013–2015. On supply reduction, the Office addressed illicit drug crop cultivation through development-oriented drug control programmes in Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Peru. Through its thematic programme on transnational organized crime and illicit trafficking, including drug trafficking, UNODC delivered technical assistance to build the counter-narcotics capacity of national agencies in West Africa, South-East Asia, Central and South America, Central Asia, Afghanistan and Pakistan and supported efforts to increase the co-ordination and sharing of information on targeted transnational drug trafficking groups and on precursor control. It also continued to promote South-South cooperation and the exchange of experiences among Member States in alternative development and provided technical assistance for country-level alternative development programmes. As to data collection and research, the Office supported countries in improving the availability of data on drugs, particularly by assisting Governments in the monitoring of illicit crops and drug production. In 2013, technical support was provided to Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru for monitoring coca bush cultivation, to the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar for monitoring opium poppy cultivation, and to Afghanistan and Mexico for monitoring opium poppy and cannabis plant cultivation. Expert advice was provided on the setting-up of drug monitoring systems in East and West Africa and for the issuance of the first annual report on the drug situation in Afghanistan. Of particular importance in the World Drug Report 2014 [Sales No. E.14.XI.7] were the estimates jointly produced by UNODC, WHO, the Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and the World Bank on the number of people who injected drugs and of people who injected drugs living with HIV. The Report also contained a discussion on the global chemical industry and potential vulnerabilities allowing for the diversion of chemicals that could be used in the manufacture of illicit drugs. In the framework of its global Synthetics Monitoring, Analysis, Reporting and Trends (SMART) programme, the Office established the UNODC early warning advisory, a global Internet-based platform to monitor, analyse and report trends on new psychoactive substances. The Secretary-General concluded with recommendations for consideration by the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/490], adopted resolution 69/201 without vote [agenda item 106].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the United Nations Guiding Principles on Alternative Development,

Reaffirming also the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem and the joint ministerial statement of the 2014 high-level review by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the provisions of the 2005 World Summit Outcome addressing the world drug problem, the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 68/197 of 18 December 2013 and those on regional and international cooperation to prevent the diversion and smuggling of precursors,

Recalling also the adoption by the Economic and Social Council of its resolution 2012/12 of 26 July 2012 on the strategy for the period 2012–2015 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, welcoming the measures taken by the Office to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to its activities, and noting the progress in the implementation of such an approach,

Noting the efforts of the Secretary-General to develop, within the United Nations system, an effective and comprehensive approach to transnational organized crime and the world drug problem, and reaffirming the crucial role of Member States in this regard,

Welcoming the efforts made by Member States to achieve the aims and comply with the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Emphasizing the importance both of the universality of the three above-mentioned international drug control conventions and of their implementation, noting that they are concerned with the health and welfare of humankind, and reaffirming the guiding principles enshrined therein and the system of control that they embody,

Recalling all resolutions adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh session,

Gravely concerned that, despite continuing increased efforts by States, relevant organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, the world drug problem continues to constitute a serious threat to public health and safety and the well-being of humanity, in particular children and young people and their families, and to the national security and sovereignty of States, and that it undermines socioeconomic and political stability and sustainable development,

Reaffirming that the world drug problem remains a common and shared responsibility that requires effective and increased international cooperation and demands an integrated, multidisciplinary, mutually reinforcing and balanced approach to supply and demand reduction strategies,

Stressing the need to take all appropriate measures, including legislative, administrative, social and educational measures, to protect children and young people against the use or abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, as defined in the relevant treaties, and to prevent the use of children and young people in the illicit production of and trafficking in such substances, and urging Governments to implement the resolutions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs relating to this matter, including resolution 57/3 of 21 March 2014,

Recognizing the importance of preventing and addressing drug-related youth crime, considering its impact on the social and economic development of societies, and supporting the rehabilitation and treatment of young offenders and their reintegration into society,

Stressing the importance of the focus placed by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh session on the issues of the prevention of drug abuse, including through education and training on drug use disorders and sport, supporting the treatment, rehabilitation, reintegration and recovery of drug-dependent persons and other measures aimed at minimizing the public health and social consequences of drug abuse, in accordance with national legislation and the three international drug control conventions,

Stressing also the importance placed by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh session on enhancing international cooperation in the identification and reporting of new psychoactive substances and incidents involving such substances,

Noting with grave concern the global increased abuse of certain drugs and the proliferation of new substances, which are a possible threat to public health and are not controlled under the three international drug control conventions,

Noting with grave concern also the increasing sophistication of the transnational criminal groups engaged in the illicit manufacture and distribution of amphetamine-type stimulants worldwide, as well as the proliferation and diversion of chemical precursors used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Recognizing the critical importance of forensic and scientific laboratory and treatment centre data and qualitative information in understanding the problem of illicit synthetic drugs and the range of products available on the illicit market,

Noting the need to promote adequate availability of internationally controlled narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical and scientific purposes, in accordance with national legislation, while preventing their diversion, abuse and trafficking, in order to realize the aims of the three international drug control conventions,

Expressing its appreciation for the results already achieved by the initiatives at the bilateral, regional and international levels, and recognizing that further positive results can be achieved with sustained and collective efforts through international cooperation in reducing the demand and supply of illicit drugs,

Recognizing the principal role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and its subsidiary bodies, together with the International Narcotics Control Board, as the United Nations organs with prime responsibility for drug control matters, as well as the role of the World Health Organization, within their respective mandates, and recognizing also the need to promote and facilitate the effective implementation of and follow-up to the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem,

Reaffirming that countering the world drug problem in all its aspects requires a political commitment and collective efforts through international cooperation to significantly and measurably reduce illicit supply and demand, as an integral component of a balanced and comprehensive drug control strategy, in accordance with the principles enshrined in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem, including the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, also adopted at that session, and the United Nations Guiding Principles on Alternative Development,

Reaffirming equally that reducing drug abuse requires efforts to reduce demand, which must be demonstrated by sustained widespread demand reduction initiatives that are age- and gender-sensitive and integrate a comprehensive public health approach spanning the spectrum of prevention, education, early detection and intervention, treatment, care and related support services, recovery support, rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug users, in full compliance with the three international drug control conventions and in accordance with the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, and with the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at the high-level segment of its fifty-second session, and other relevant Assembly resolutions,

Conscious of the need to continue to raise public awareness of the risks and threats posed to all societies by the world drug problem in all its aspects,

Noting the importance of addressing the world drug problem in a coordinated manner while taking into consideration balanced, comprehensive and integrated drug policies that may, where appropriate, include measures based on scientific evidence and that contribute, as appropriate, in mutual complementarity with other measures, to strengthening national, regional and global strategies in an effort to seek effective solutions and further achievements in response to current challenges, in compliance with the three international drug control conventions and in the full and effective implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem,

Welcoming the efforts of countries that have worked for decades to counter the world drug problem and have acquired knowledge, experience and institutional capacities that enable them to afford cooperation to other countries in application of the principle of common and shared responsibility,

Inviting Member States to consider, when developing crime prevention programmes, such issues as social inclusion, the strengthening of the social fabric, access to justice, drug-related violence, the social reintegration of offenders and access to health and education services, as well as the needs of victims of crime, and to promote a culture of lawfulness and concern for the well-being of individuals, families and communities, with a particular emphasis on children and youth,

Encouraging Member States to endeavour to ensure that measures taken at the national and local levels in response to economic and financial constraints do not have a disproportionate impact on the implementation of balanced drug demand and supply reduction policies,

Recalling the adoption, by its resolution 64/182 of 18 December 2009, of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, the decision, contained in the Political Declaration, on the high-level review of the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action held by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh session, the recommendation that the Economic and Social Council devote a high-level segment to a theme related to the world drug problem and the recommendation that the General Assembly hold a special session to address the world drug problem,

Recalling also its resolution 67/193 of 20 December 2012, in which it decided to convene, early in 2016, a special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem, following the high-level review of the progress made in the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action, which was conducted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh session, in March 2014,

Recalling further its decision in the aforementioned resolution that the special session of the General Assembly would review the progress in the implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action, including an assessment of the achievements and challenges in countering the world drug problem, within the framework of the three international drug control conventions and other relevant United Nations instruments,

Noting its decision to conduct the special session and its preparatory process from within existing resources,

1. Reiterates its call upon States to take, in a timely manner, the measures necessary to implement the actions and attain the goals and targets set out in the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, adopted by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, and to address the general challenges and priorities for action identified in the joint ministerial statement of the 2014 high-level review by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of the implementation by Member States of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action;

2. Reaffirms that countering the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility that must be addressed in a multilateral setting, that it requires an integrated and balanced approach and that it must be carried out in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and other provisions of international law, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action on human rights and, in particular, with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, for the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the basis of the principles of equal rights and mutual respect;

3. Calls upon Member States to engage in effective cooperation and practical action aimed at addressing the world drug problem on the basis of the principle of common and shared responsibility;

4. Encourages Member States to give adequate consideration to the negative effects of the world drug problem and its consequences on development and on society in general;

5. Invites Member States to implement comprehensive drug abuse prevention measures from a perspective that considers the individual as well as the community and society as a whole, including through public health education on the dangers of drug abuse, violence prevention, rehabilitation and aftercare to reintegrate former drug users into society, as well as anticipate, detect and analyse various risks to communities associated with drug-related violence and crime;

6. Undertakes to promote bilateral, regional and international cooperation, including through intelligence-sharing and cross-border cooperation, aimed at countering the world drug problem more effectively, in particular by encouraging and supporting such cooperation by those States most directly affected by illicit crop cultivation and the illicit production, manufacture, transit, trafficking, distribution and abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

7. Reiterates the commitment of Member States to promoting, developing, reviewing or strengthening effective, comprehensive, integrated drug demand reduction programmes, based on scientific evidence and covering a range of measures, including primary prevention, education, early detection and intervention, treatment, care and related support services, recovery support, rehabilitation and social reintegration efforts, as well as measures aimed at minimizing the public health and social consequences of drug abuse and at promoting health and social well-being among individuals, families and communities and reducing the adverse consequences of drug abuse for individuals and society as a whole, taking into account the specific needs of women and the particular challenges posed by high-risk drug users, in full compliance with the three international drug control conventions and in accordance with national legislation, and commits Member States to investing increased resources in ensuring access to those interventions on a non-discriminatory basis, including in detention facilities, bearing in mind that those interventions should also consider vulnerabilities that undermine human development, such as poverty and social marginalization;

8. Encourages Member States to develop and implement, as appropriate, comprehensive policies and programmes that, by fostering social development, are aimed at the prevention of crime and violence and that address the multiple factors that contribute to crime and victimization, in close cooperation with relevant stakeholders, including civil society, and based on scientific evidence and taking into account good practices;

9. Reaffirms the need for Member States to review and, if necessary, strengthen coordinated measures, enhance capacity-building to combat money-laundering arising from drug trafficking and improve judicial cooperation, where appropriate, at the national, regional and international levels, to dismantle organized criminal groups involved in drug trafficking, in order to provide for the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution of the perpetrators of such crimes;

10. Notes the importance of an integrated approach in drug policies, including by strengthening the partnerships between public health, justice and law enforcement sectors and facilitating inter-agency cooperation and communication, where appropriate;

11. Encourages the promotion, where appropriate, in the framework of international cooperation, of the use of law enforcement techniques, consistent with national legislation and international law, including applicable human rights obligations, in order to ensure that drug traffickers are brought to justice and that major criminal organizations are disrupted and dismantled;

12. Notes with great concern the adverse consequences of drug abuse for individuals and society as a whole, reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to tackling those problems in the context of comprehensive, complementary and multisectoral drug demand reduction strategies, in particular such strategies targeting children, young people and their families, also notes with great concern the alarming rise in the incidence of HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases among injecting drug users, also reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to working towards the goal of universal access to comprehensive prevention programmes and treatment, care and related support services, in full compliance with the international drug control conventions and in accordance with national legislation, taking into account all relevant General Assembly resolutions and, when applicable, the revised technical guide for countries to set targets for universal access to HIV prevention, treatment and care for injecting drug users, issued by the World Health Organization, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, and requests the Office to carry out its mandate in this area in close cooperation with relevant organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, such as the World Health Organization, the United Nations Development Programme and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS;

13. Urges Member States, where appropriate, to develop national responses to address the issue of drug-affected driving by, inter alia, exchanging information and best practices on effective responses, including through engagement with the international scientific and legal communities;

14. Notes with concern that the availability of internationally controlled drugs for medical and scientific purposes, particularly for the relief of pain and for palliative care, remains low to non-existent in many countries of the world, and highlights the need for Member States, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the International Narcotics Control Board, in cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the World Health Organization, as appropriate, to address that situation by promoting measures to ensure their availability and accessibility for medical and scientific purposes, in accordance with national legislation, while simultaneously preventing their diversion, abuse and trafficking, in order to realize the aims of the three international drug control conventions and other relevant international instruments;

15. Urges all Member States to enact comprehensive measures aimed at stemming the abuse of prescription drugs, in particular through the establishment of awareness-raising initiatives targeting the general public and health-care providers;

16. Acknowledges the continuing efforts made and the progress achieved in countering the world drug problem, notes with great concern the continuing illicit production of and trafficking in opiates, the continuing illicit manufacture of and trafficking in cocaine, the increasing illicit production of and trafficking in cannabis, the ongoing global spread of the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants and the increasing diversion of precursors, as well as the related distribution and use of illicit drugs, and stresses the need to strengthen and intensify joint efforts at the national, regional and international levels to tackle those global challenges in a more comprehensive manner, in accordance with the principle of common and shared responsibility, including by means of enhanced and better-coordinated technical and financial assistance;

17. Expresses its concern that, despite all the efforts of Member States and the international community, and according to the World Drug Report 2014 of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, overall the global situation with regard to the prevalence of illicit drug use and problem drug use is generally stable, with the total global number of drug users increasingly commensurate with the growth of the world population;

18. Stresses that it is absolutely imperative for Member States to strengthen international efforts in order to achieve more effective results in countering the world drug problem;

19. Recognizes that it is necessary for Member States, under the three international drug control conventions and the fundamental principles of their domestic legal systems and national legislation, to consider, where appropriate:

(a) Regularly reviewing and assessing their drug control policies, ensuring that they are effective, comprehensive, balanced and aimed at promoting the health and well-being of individuals, families, communities and society as a whole;

(b) Providing, as appropriate, comprehensive, integrated drug demand reduction programmes, based on scientific evidence and covering a range of measures, including primary prevention, early intervention, treatment, care, rehabilitation, social reintegration and measures aimed at minimizing the negative public health and social impacts of drug abuse, aimed at promoting health and social well-being among individuals, families and communities and reducing the adverse consequences of drug abuse for individuals and society as a whole;

20. Invites Member States to take appropriate measures so as to strengthen international cooperation and the exchange of information regarding the identification of new routes and modi operandi of organized criminal groups dedicated to the diversion or smuggling of substances frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, in particular with respect to their trafficking via the Internet, and to continue to notify the International Narcotics Control Board of such information;

21. Continues to encourage Member States to promote, in accordance with Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 57/9 of 21 March 2014, the sharing of information on the potential abuse of and trafficking in new psychoactive substances, including synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists, as well as the sharing of information with regard to patterns of use, risks to public health, forensic data and best practices with respect to interventions and new and existing control measures;

22. Recognizes the progress made in the development of a consolidated international response to the increasing availability of new psychoactive substances that may pose risks to public health and safety, including the development of a global reference point, the early warning advisory and cooperation with Member States and relevant regional organizations in the identification and reporting of such substances, in order to increase data collection, improve our collective understanding and find effective policy responses, requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its efforts to enhance the capacity of Member States in this regard, and calls upon Member States to further improve the application of the international scheduling process and to provide to the Secretary-General, through the Office, and to the World Health Organization timely information, identifying a national government focal point to coordinate the provision of information on substances for effective review by the World Health Organization Expert Committee on Drug Dependence;

23. Encourages Member States to adopt measures to strengthen public awareness of the risks and threats to and negative impacts on society posed by the abuse and production of and trafficking in illicit drugs;

24. Recognizes:

(a) That sustainable crop control strategies targeting the illicit cultivation of crops used for the production of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances require international cooperation based on the principle of shared responsibility and an integrated and balanced approach, taking into account the rule of law and, where appropriate, security concerns, with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(b) That such crop control strategies include, inter alia, alternative development and, where appropriate, preventive alternative development programmes, eradication and law enforcement measures;

(c) That alternative development is an important, lawful, viable and sustainable alternative to the illicit cultivation of drug crops and an effective measure for countering the world drug problem and other drug-related crime challenges, as well as a choice in favour of societies free of drug abuse, that it is one of the key components of policies and programmes for reducing illicit drug production and that it is an integral part of efforts by Governments to achieve sustainable development within their societies;

(d) That such crop control strategies should be in full conformity with article 14 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 and appropriately coordinated and phased in accordance with national policies in order to achieve the sustainable eradication of illicit crops and the creation of alternative legal livelihood opportunities and facilitate long-term development, noting furthermore the need for Member States to undertake to increase long-term investment in such strategies, coordinated with other development measures, in order to contribute to the sustainability of social and economic development and poverty eradication in affected rural areas, taking due account of the traditional licit uses of crops where there is historical evidence of such use and giving due consideration to the protection of the environment;

(e) That developing countries with extensive expertise in alternative development, including preventive alternative development, as appropriate, play a significant role in promoting best practices and lessons learned from alternative development programmes, and invites them to continue to share those best practices with States affected by illicit crop cultivation, with a view to using them in accordance with the national specificities of each State;

25. Encourages Member States, international organizations, entities and other relevant stakeholders to take due account of the United Nations Guiding Principles on Alternative Development when designing and implementing alternative development programmes, and welcomes the adoption by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of its resolution 57/1 of 21 March 2014;

26. Requests the international community, in particular the countries of destination, to continue to provide, bilaterally, multilaterally or through the competent international and regional organizations, in accordance with article 10 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit

Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, and on the basis of the principle of shared responsibility, urgent and sufficient technical assistance and support to the most affected transit States, in full cooperation with national authorities, in order to promote the capacities of such States to counter the flow of illicit drugs;

27. Reiterates the urgent need for Member States to strengthen international and regional cooperation in order to respond to the serious challenges posed by the increasing links between drug trafficking, money-laundering, corruption and other forms of organized crime, including trafficking in persons, smuggling of migrants, trafficking in firearms, cybercrime and, in some cases, terrorism and the financing of terrorism, and to the significant challenges faced by law enforcement and judicial authorities in responding to the ever-changing means used by transnational criminal organizations, including the corruption of State officials, to avoid detection and prosecution;

28. Expresses deep concern at the growing violence resulting from activities of criminal organizations involved in drug trafficking, recognizes the increasing links between drug trafficking, including gang-related association, and the illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms in some regions of the world and the need to prevent the spread of that problem to other regions, and urges Member States to take adequate measures, consistent with their international treaty obligations and other relevant international standards, to fully cooperate in preventing the acquisition and use of firearms and ammunition by those criminal organizations involved in drug trafficking and in combating the illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in such firearms and ammunition;

29. Calls upon Member States to also consider, when developing comprehensive policies to tackle the world drug problem, measures, programmes and actions that address the needs of those affected by drug-related violence and crime;

30. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and its field offices in building capacity at the local level in the fight against transnational organized crime and drug trafficking, and encourages the Office to maintain an effective level of support for national and regional efforts in countering the world drug problem;

31. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to collaborate with relevant intergovernmental, international and regional organizations involved in addressing the world drug problem, as appropriate, in order to share best practices and scientific standards and to maximize the benefits from their unique comparative advantage, and to continue to provide technical assistance to Member States so as to enhance capacity in countering the world drug problem, including enhancing the analytical work of laboratories, by carrying out training programmes to develop indicators and instruments for the collection and analysis of accurate, reliable and comparable data on all relevant aspects of the world drug problem and, where appropriate, by supporting requesting States to enhance or develop new national indicators and instruments;

32. Welcomes the further collaboration, within their mandates, between the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the World Health Organization, which provides leadership and guidance, to further strengthen public health as part of a comprehensive and balanced approach to drug demand reduction based on scientific evidence;

33. Invites Member States to invest, where necessary and taking into account specific needs and available resources, in capacity-building and quality-enhancing activities for the collection and reporting of information, to participate in joint cooperation efforts organized by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and by other national, regional or international organizations and bodies, aimed at the exchange of technical knowledge of experts in the area of data collection, analysis and evaluation and of practical experience in the area of drug data, and to regularly report data and information relating to all aspects of the world drug problem to the Office through the annual report questionnaires, and invites the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the central policymaking body of the United Nations system on drug-related matters, to strengthen the capacity of the Office to collect, analyse, use and disseminate accurate, reliable, objective and comparable data and to reflect such information in the World Drug Report;

34. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its efforts in supporting States to establish, upon request, operational frameworks essential for communication within and across national borders and in facilitating the exchange of information on and analysis of drug trafficking trends, with a view to increasing knowledge about the world drug problem at the national, regional and international levels, recognizes the importance of integrating laboratories and providing scientific support to drug control frameworks and of treating quality analytical data as a primary source of information worldwide, and urges coordination with other international entities, including the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL);

35. Requests all Member States to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, in particular general-purpose contributions, so as to enable it to continue, expand, improve and strengthen, within its mandates, its operational and technical cooperation activities, including with a view to assisting Member States with the full implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, as well as with the full implementation of relevant resolutions adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

36. Expresses concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, emphasizes the need to provide the Office with adequate, predictable and stable resources and to ensure their cost-effective utilization, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report, within existing reporting obligations, on the financial situation of the Office and to continue to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandates fully and effectively;

37. Encourages Member States and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to address the above-mentioned issues within the mandate of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of the Office in order for the Office to fulfil its mandate effectively, efficiently and with the appropriate resources;

38. Encourages the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the principal policymaking organ of the United Nations on matters of international drug control and as the governing body of the drug programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and the International Narcotics Control Board to strengthen their useful work on the control of precursors and other chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

39. Urges States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to, and States parties to implement, as a matter of priority, all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

40. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide, in close collaboration with the International Narcotics Control Board, as may be appropriate, adequate support and technical assistance to Governments in all regions so as to enable them to implement and fully meet their obligations under conventions and give adequate follow-up to subsequent resolutions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, including for the strengthening of regulatory authorities and controls, provision of information and fulfilment of reporting requirements, and urges donors to contribute to the Office for those purposes;

41. Takes note of the resolutions adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-seventh Session, the World Drug Report 2014 and the most recent report of the International Narcotics Control Board, and calls upon Member States to strengthen international and regional cooperation and coordination to counter the threat to the international community caused by the illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, especially those in the opium group, as well as other aspects of the world drug problem, and to continue to take concerted measures within the framework of the Paris Pact and other relevant regional and international initiatives and mechanisms, such as the Istanbul Process on Regional Security and Cooperation for a Secure and Stable Afghanistan, also known as the "Heart of Asia" initiative, in order to strengthen cross-border cooperation and information exchange with a view to countering drug trafficking with the support of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other international and regional organizations;

42. Urges Member States to continue to actively cooperate with the International Narcotics Control Board in the exercise of its mandate, and emphasizes the need to ensure that an appropriate level of resources is made available to the Board to enable it to engage with Governments to effectively monitor compliance by States parties with the three international drug control conventions;

43. Emphasizes the important role played by civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations, in addressing the world drug problem, notes with appreciation their important contribution to the review process, and notes that representatives of affected populations and civil society entities, where appropriate, should be enabled to play a participatory role in the formulation and implementation of drug demand and supply reduction policy;

44. Encourages Member States to ensure that civil society plays a participatory role, where appropriate, through consultation in the development and implementation of drug control programmes and policies, in particular with regard to aspects of demand reduction;

45. Encourages the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies and of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, and in this regard welcomes the discussions conducted in Vienna from 2 to 5 July 2013, Addis Ababa from 15 to 19 September 2014, Asunción from 6 to 10 October 2014, and Bangkok from 21 to 24 October 2014;

46. Welcomes the ongoing efforts to strengthen cooperation in addressing the world drug problem and to seek effectiveness and comprehensiveness in the strategies and policies undertaken by regional and subregional organizations and transregional initiatives;

47. Invites Member States, in consultation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, donors and other relevant international organizations, to continue to assist African States in addressing health problems and raising awareness of the dangers associated with the abuse of all drugs, and in this regard encourages the Office and the African Union Commission to continue to work together to enhance the complementarities of their activities;

48. Reiterates its call upon the relevant United Nations agencies and entities and other international organizations, and invites international financial institutions, including regional development banks, to mainstream efforts to counter the world drug problem into their programmes, and calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to maintain its leading role by providing relevant information and technical assistance;

49. Reaffirms its decision, as recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, that the special session of the General Assembly on the world drug problem in 2016 shall have an inclusive preparatory process that includes extensive substantive consultations, allowing organs, entities and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, relevant international and regional organizations, civil society and other relevant stakeholders to fully contribute to the process in accordance with the relevant rules of procedure and established practice;

50. Recognizes the constructive role that parliamentarians can play in addressing the world drug problem, and encourages their participation, as appropriate, in the preparatory process for the special session;

51. Notes the ongoing discussions in some regions on how to address the world drug problem, in the light of the current situation and policies, and emphasizes the importance of a broad, transparent, inclusive and scientific evidence-based discussion among Member States, with input from other relevant stakeholders, as appropriate, in multilateral settings, on the most effective ways to counter the world drug problem consistent with the three international drug control conventions and other relevant international instruments, in order to further implement the commitments and targets set out in the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem;

52. Reaffirms its support for the preparations for the special session, which will review the progress in the implementation of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action, including an assessment of the achievements and challenges in countering the world drug problem, within the framework of the three international drug control conventions and other relevant United Nations instruments by, inter alia, addressing measures to reach an effective balance between supply and demand reduction measures and addressing all the consequences of the world drug problem, including in the health, social, human rights, economic, justice and security fields;

53. Invites Member States to share their drug policy experiences as a contribution to the special session;

54. Reaffirms its resolution 69/200 of 18 December 2014, in which it is stated that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the central policymaking body within the United Nations system dealing with drug-related matters, shall lead that process by addressing all organizational and substantive matters in an open-ended manner, and in this regard reiterates its invitation to the President of the General Assembly to support, guide and stay involved in the process;

55. Invites the President of the General Assembly, in cooperation with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the central policymaking body within the United Nations system dealing with drug-related matters and having the leading role in the preparation of the special session of the Assembly, to hold, within existing resources, a high-level thematic debate in 2015 in support of the process towards the 2016 special session of the Assembly on the world drug problem with Member States and other relevant stakeholders and to prepare a Chair's summary of the discussions for transmission to the Commission;

56. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests that he submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

World situation on drug abuse. The Commission considered a report [E/CN.7/2014/3] by the Secretariat on the world situation with regard to drug abuse, which reviewed the extent of and trends in illicit drug use worldwide and according to region, and the consequences of drug use, including HIV and hepatitis among people who injected drugs, treatment demand and drug-related deaths. In 2011, between 3.6 and 6.9 per cent of people aged 15 to 64 (between 167 million and 315 million people), were estimated to have illicitly used drugs at least once in the preceding year. Since 2009, there had been a slight overall increase in the prevalence and number of people illicitly using drugs. UNODC provided new estimates for 2011 of the numbers of people who injected drugs (14 million) and who injected drugs while living with HIV (1.6 million). Globally, there was a continued shift in developed countries away from the use of heroin and cocaine towards the use of synthetic drugs, including new psychoactive substances that were not under international control, and the misuse of prescription drugs. In Europe, the use of cannabis, cocaine and heroin decreased or stabilized, but the use of amphetamine-type stimulants and new psychoactive substances increased. In the United States and Mexico, cannabis use increased, and its use also was on the rise in Africa, Latin America and parts of Asia. While heroin use stabilized, the non-medical use of prescription opioids continued to increase in most regions. The use of amphetamine-type stimulants increased, most noticeably in Asia, Africa and parts of Latin America. Globally, cannabis remained the most common drug and its use was increasingly mentioned in relation to treatment demand and associated psychiatric disorders. Opioids remained the drugs causing the most harm in terms of treatment demand, injecting drug use and HIV infections, and drug-related deaths. About 210,000 deaths were estimated as attributable to illicit drug use, and most of them were fatal overdoses among opioid users. In 2011, nearly one in six problem drug users received treatment for drug use disorders and dependence. Disparities, however, remained in the delivery of evidence-based drug dependence treatment and care in many regions.

The Secretariat noted the low rate of response from Member States to the annual report questionnaire, which formed the basis of the information system by which global trends in drug use were reported each year. The lack of sustainable drug information systems and drug observatories from many parts of the world continued to hinder the monitoring of current and emerging drug trends in most regions, as well as the implementation and evaluation of evidence-based responses to counter the illicit demand for drugs. It was important for Member States to take stock of the situation on the availability and quality of data on drug use indicators; to consider strategies to improve that situation, taking into account the gaps in capacities for collection, analysis and reporting of quality data, especially in Africa and Asia; and to provide the necessary resources to address gaps in setting up drug monitoring systems.

Alternative development. On 21 March [E/2014/28 (res. 57/1)], CND adopted a resolution on promoting the implementation of the United Nations Guiding Principles on Alternative Development [YUN 2013, p. 1205] and a proposal to organize an international seminar/workshop on the implementation of the Guiding Principles. Acknowledging that alternative development was an important and sustainable alternative to the illicit cultivation of drug crops and an effective measure to counter the world drug problem and other drug-related crimes, and recognizing the role played by countries with extensive expertise in alternative development, the Commission called upon Member States to take the Guiding Principles into consideration while designing, implementing and evaluating alternative development programmes and projects. It called upon Member States and other donors to consider long-term support to alternative development programmes and projects, targeting the illicit cultivation of crops, in order to contribute to the sustainability of social and economic development as well as poverty eradication, including through enhanced development-oriented approaches that implemented measures for rural development, strengthened local governments and institutions, improved infrastructure and promoted the participation of local communities. It encouraged Member States with extensive expertise to continue sharing best practices and strengthening international cooperation on integral and sustainable alternative development, including cross-continental and interregional cooperation and subregional and regional technical cooperation. The Commission welcomed the proposal by Thailand to host an international seminar/workshop on the implementation of the Guiding Principles, and noted that implementation of the Principles would require a long-term commitment by Member States and collaboration among UNODC, other international and regional organizations, civil society, development agencies, and donors and financial institutions, which were invited to participate in the seminar/workshop. The UNODC Executive Director was requested to report to the Commission at its fifty-eighth (2015) session.

HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases. A secretariat note [E/CN.7/2014/11] prepared in response to Commission resolution 51/14 [YUN 2008, p. 1372] discussed the promotion of coordination and the alignment of decisions between CND and the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS).

Pursuant to Commission resolution 49/4 [YUN 2006, p. 1456], the UNODC Executive Director submitted a report [E/CN.7/2014/12] on progress in responding to the prevalence of HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases among drug users. The report reviewed the UNODC response and summarized activities implemented in 2012 and 2013 in HIV/AIDS policy and programme development; scaling up HIV prevention, treatment and care and the provision of support services; dissemination of tools, guidelines and best practices; and legal and policy reviews and building capacity among law enforcement officials. UNODC delivered technical assistance in compliance with the relevant declarations, resolutions and decisions of UN bodies, and assisted Member States, civil society organizations and other partners in developing, adopting and implementing strategies and programmes on HIV/AIDS related to drug use, particularly for people who injected drugs, and policies and programmes for HIV/AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support in prisons and other closed settings. At the end of 2012, an estimated 35.3 million people were living with HIV worldwide. That represented an increase from previous years, as more people were receiving the life-saving antiretroviral therapy. There were 2.3 million new HIV infections globally, a 33 per cent decline from the number of new infections recorded in 2001 (3.4 million), due primarily to a reduction in the sexual transmission of HIV. Injecting drug use continued to drive the expansion of the HIV epidemic in many countries. In 2013, an estimated 14 million people injected drugs worldwide, and of those, 1.6 million, or 11.5 per cent, were living with HIV. There was a high prevalence of injecting drug use in Eastern and South-Eastern Europe and in Central Asia: 1.3 per cent of the population aged 15 to 64 (four times the global average); and there were elevated rates of HIV infection among people who injected drugs in Eastern Europe and Central Asia, as well as in East and South-East Asia. HIV transmission through injecting drug use emerged as a major concern in East Africa and was reported in several other African countries. Hepatitis C represented another major health challenge. In 2011, 51 per cent of all people who injected drugs were living with hepatitis C, and, as with HIV, the transmission of hepatitis C was fuelled by incarceration. The prevalence of HIV, sexually transmitted infections, hepatitis B and C and tuberculosis was from 2 to 20 (and in some cases up to 50) times higher among prison populations than the general population.

The Executive Director noted that an approach to drug use and dependence that was centered on public health, based on human rights and informed by evidence had yet to be implemented. In many affected countries, the national AIDS and drugs policies, strategies and programmes needed to be reviewed, and in countries where the HIV epidemic was driven by unsafe injecting use, there was a need to prioritize the implementation of needle and syringe programmes and long-acting opioid maintenance therapy. He further added that people who used drugs in prisons should have access to health services, and interventions in prisons should be integrated into national plans and programmes on drugs, AIDS and tuberculosis, with resources allocated for their implementation.

Data collection, reporting and analysis. Pursuant to Commission resolution 53/16 [YUN 2010, p. 1250], the Executive Director submitted a report [E/CN.7/2014/7] that contained an analysis of the second round of responses provided by Member States to parts I and II of the annual report questionnaire concerning action taken to implement the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem. The report addressed measures taken by States in the areas of drug demand and supply reduction, countering money-laundering and promoting judicial cooperation, and included related recommendations.

In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2013/235 [YUN 2013, p. 1223], the Secretary-General transmitted [E/CN.3/2014/19 & Corr.1] to the Statistical Commission (see p. 1457) the UNODC report on improving the quality and availability of drug statistics, which outlined the status and challenges faced by countries and international and regional organizations in the collection and reporting of data on the supply and use of drugs. The report stated that the availability of high-quality data on drug use and supply remained key to understanding the drug situation at the national, regional and global levels, and data on drug indicators not only provided a tool for planning, monitoring and evaluating drug policies nationally, but also served as the basis for reviewing international and regional plans of action and strategies. It proposed actions on improving methodologies; promoting and reinforcing the role of national statistical offices; developing capacity to improve data collection and reporting; and improving international data collection and analysis. It also stressed the need to establish a joint working group of the Statistical Commission and CND to develop standards and guidelines for the priority indicators, and invited stakeholders to review the regional and international mechanisms for collection, analysis and reporting of drug statistics.

Paris Pact initiative. In accordance with CND resolution 56/3 [YUN 2013, p. 1210], a report [E/CN.7/2014/14] of the UNODC Executive Director described steps taken by the Office to strengthen international cooperation in combating illicit opiates originating in Afghanistan through continuous and reinforced support to the Paris Pact initiative. UNODC and Paris Pact partners continued to recognize the challenges for all stakeholders tackling the menace of opiates originating in Afghanistan, and the need to strengthen coordination between partners and to streamline the Paris Pact framework towards operationalizing the Vienna Declaration [YUN 2012, p. 1184]. The launch of the fourth phase of the Paris Pact initiative, on 1 June 2013, was a critical juncture for the partnership to implement an operationally oriented approach for interventions. The fourth phase commenced with the identification of two dimensions within the Paris Pact: the initiative itself, which encompassed 58 partner countries and 21 organizations, including UNODC; and the UNODC programme, with its main objective of supporting the initiative. The fourth phase emphasized the partnership as a multi-layered initiative that defined policy and translated it into action, with the objective of demonstrating the results of heightened collaboration on the four pillars for intervention outlined in the Vienna Declaration: strengthening regional initiatives; blocking financial flows linked to illicit traffic in opiates; preventing the diversion of precursor chemicals; and reducing drug abuse and dependence. UNODC was engaged in the development of a systematic means for measuring progress on the four priority areas, and the streamlining of the initiative was expected to culminate in an annual global report that would facilitate systematic updating. The objective of the first year of fourth-phase implementation was to organize an expert working-group meeting on each pillar of the Declaration prior to the Policy Consultative Group Meeting scheduled for June 2014. UNODC strengthened coordination among Paris Pact partners, and particularly with all relevant interdivisional UNODC specialist sections and programmes. In line with the UNODC interregional drug control approach that served to interconnect its programmes addressing the opiate trade originating in Afghanistan, the Paris Pact initiative coordinated with the regional programme for Afghanistan and neighbouring countries and the regional programme for South-Eastern Europe.

Supporting recovery from drug use disorders. On 21 March [E/2014/28 (res. 57/4)], the Commission recognized that drug use disorders could result in chronic conditions that required treatment based on scientific evidence and support from governmental and community initiatives, and invited Member States to identify and, where necessary, reform their policies, practices and laws in order to facilitate further access to recovery and reintegration services. Member States, in partnership with different levels of government and with civil society and communities, should also explore means to support those in recovery, providing measures to ensure non-stigmatizing attitudes, reduce marginalization and discrimination and promote social reintegration. CND requested that Member States facilitate exchanges on developing a chronic-care approach to the treatment of drug use disorders and to gather and share scientific evidence on recovery and recovery-oriented programmes. It also invited Member States, multilateral institutions and others to share information on national and international experiences and best practices related to recovery programmes, recovery activities, and communities and organizations that supported recovery. It further requested UNODC to facilitate opportunities for Member States to share their experiences on the implementation of the resolution with the Commission at its fifty-eighth (2015) session.

Prevention based on scientific evidence. On 21 March [res. 57/3], the Commission recognized that a core component of a successful drug control and demand reduction strategy was the prevention of drug abuse, and that prevention based on scientific evidence and on a process of adaptation to local cultural and socioeconomic circumstances was the most cost-effective approach and an investment in the well-being of children, adolescents, youth, families and communities. The Commission invited Member States to improve the coverage and quality of drug abuse prevention systems, interventions and policies based on scientific evidence, and, through bilateral, regional and international cooperation, to collaborate in the implementation of the International Standards on Drug Use Prevention. It encouraged States to periodically undertake scientific evaluations of the effectiveness of their drug abuse prevention programmes and policies and to share the results of those studies widely. The Commission also requested UNODC to continue to disseminate scientific evidence on drug abuse prevention; to support Member States in improving the knowledge and skills of their policymakers, practitioners and researchers working in the area of drug abuse prevention; and to enhance coordination efforts with other relevant UN organizations. It requested the UNODC Executive Director to report to the Commission at its fifty-eighth (2015) session on the implementation of the resolution.

Prevention through sport. On 21 March [res. 57/2], the Commission called upon Member States to cooperate with sport-related organizations, including the International Olympic Committee and the International Paralympic Committee, in their efforts to use sport as a tool to promote a healthy lifestyle free from drug abuse. It welcomed the cooperation among Member States, the United Nations and its specialized agencies, funds and programmes, and sport-related organizations in seeking to contribute, through sport, to raising awareness of and to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. It encouraged Member States and organizers of sporting events to use those events as a platform for promoting social inclusion and for increasing awareness of the dangers of drug abuse, and recognized the potential for athletes to play a leading role in and contribute to the promotion of a healthy lifestyle by emphasizing participation in sports as an alternative to drug abuse. CND also encouraged Member States to promote equal access to sports and other healthy pursuits for children and young people as a means of drug abuse prevention, and to exchange experiences on the theme of drug abuse prevention through sport at a future session of the Commission.

Education and training on drug use disorders. On 21 March [res. 57/6], the Commission recognized the need for better training and education on treating drug dependence and noted the absence of corresponding minimum standards, despite scientific evidence from WHO and UNODC that drug dependence was a preventable and treatable disorder. The Commission invited Member States to strengthen professional knowledge and skills for those working with people affected by drug use disorders; to collaborate in the provision of scientific and evidence-based education and training programmes; and to promote a comprehensive approach to the study of substance use disorders. It highlighted the importance of strengthening the capacity of competent and experienced trainers and of using an interdisciplinary approach to the development of educational and training programmes. It emphasized the need to promote the quality and availability of education and training and to strengthen intersectoral collaboration involving, inter alia, health and law enforcement professionals and civil society, in accordance with domestic legal frameworks. The Commission also recognized the importance of continual quality assurance regarding training, including its regular monitoring, evaluation and supervision, and encouraged Member States to share best practices in the field of education and training.

Health services during economic downturns. On 21 March [res. 57/7], the Commission noted the importance of public health services for drug use disorders at times of long-term and sustained economic downturns, the effects of which might exacerbate challenges related to health and well-being; lead to a rise in the marginalization of people affected by drug use disorders; and have an impact on resources as well as drug demand and supply reduction policies. The Commission recognized that addressing the world drug problem demanded an integrated, multidisciplinary approach and encouraged Member States, in cooperation with stakeholders, to ensure that measures taken at the national and local levels in response to long-term and sustained economic downturns did not disproportionately affect the implementation of comprehensive and balanced drug demand and supply reduction policies, including for the provision of health measures. It invited Member States to assist each other in meeting economic challenges, acknowledged the role of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations (NGOs), in addressing the world drug problem and invited Member States to continue providing, including in times of economic downturn, the best attainable coverage, accessibility and quality with regard to health and social services.

Illicit cultivation, manufacture and trafficking

World situation on trafficking. In its report [E/CN.7/2014/4] on the world situation with regard to drug trafficking, the CND Secretariat reviewed global trends in the illicit cultivation of drug crops, the production of plant-based drugs and drug trafficking. Afghanistan continued to account for most of the illicit cultivation of opium poppy in the world. Cultivation in that country reached a record level in 2013, amounting to 209,000 hectares (ha). The increase was generally confined to the main opium-poppygrowing areas in the southern and western regions of the country. Opium production in Afghanistan increased by 49 per cent, to 5,500 tons. In the three Andean States—Bolivia, Colombia and Peru—that continued to account for virtually all cultivation of coca bush in the world, the total area under cultivation decreased in 2012; global cocaine seizures remained stable, however, in the same year. Seizures of cocaine in South America increased, while seizures in North America decreased. Worldwide, cannabis continued to be the plant-based drug most widely produced, trafficked and used on an illicit basis. Data suggested that global seizures of cannabis herb decreased owing to a reduction in the quantity reported to have been seized in North America. Global seizures of cannabis resin were stable, but with a shift in seizure trends showing that a greater proportion were occurring in North Africa. Global seizures of methamphetamine continued to rise and in recent years its global market had expanded significantly. The annual amount of methamphetamine seized globally increased rapidly between 2008 and 2012, with worldwide seizures exceeding 90 tons in 2012. Global seizures of methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA), commonly known as “ecstasy”, increased in 2012, but they remained well below the levels recorded between 2002 and 2007. The Secretariat reaffirmed that illicit drug characterization and forensic profiling remained invaluable in supporting law enforcement intelligence-gathering and operational work and in the international efforts against illicit drugs, but it noted the lack of extrabudgetary resources required to develop standardized guidelines.

Measures to support the Greater Mekong subregion. On 21 March [E/2014/28 (res. 57/11)], the Commission welcomed the initiatives, efforts and partnerships demonstrated by the countries of the Greater Mekong subregion in the area of drug control, and recognized their need to enhance and expand cooperation between all relevant stakeholders in the areas of demand reduction and supply reduction to counteract the illicit production, manufacturing, trafficking and abuse of drugs and the diversion of precursor chemicals. The Commission appreciated the efforts made through the mechanism of the 1993 Memorandum of Understanding on Drug Control between the countries of the Greater Mekong subregion and UNODC, and, in the framework of that mechanism, encouraged Member States and other donors to provide technical assistance and support to the countries of the Greater Mekong subregion to strengthen their capacities to counter drug problems. It also encouraged international cooperation between Member States, with mutual respect for domestic legislation and their commitments under the drug control conventions, and called for efforts to enhance mutual understanding to avoid possible impediments to such cooperation. It requested UNODC to report to the Commission’s fifty-eighth (2015) session.

Recommendations of subsidiary bodies

A secretariat report [E/CN.7/2015/5] described actions taken by four subsidiary bodies of the Commission during the year. Each of the bodies reviewed trends in drug trafficking and regional and subregional cooperation; addressed drug law enforcement issues of priority; and reviewed the implementation of previous recommendations. The report included the recommendations generated by the subsidiary bodies at their 2014 meetings (see below).

The Twenty-fourth Meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 15–19 September) [UNODC/HONLAF/24/5] made recommendations on trends and developments regarding new psychoactive and other substances not under international control; addressing challenges posed by the cultivation and abuse of cannabis; and responding to the threat posed by heroin trafficking, including by sea. The Twenty-fourth Meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean (Asunción, Paraguay, 6–10 October) [UNODC/HONLAC/24/5] agreed to recommendations on measures adopted to reduce the diversion of precursor chemicals, with reference to international cooperation and technical assistance; non-therapeutic use, diversion and abuse of medical preparations; and demand reduction, prevention and treatment. The Thirty-eighth Meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 21–24 October) [UNODC/HONLAP/38/5] adopted recommendations on responding to trafficking in synthetic drugs and new psychoactive substances and preventing the diversion of chemical precursors; measures to amend legislation, agency practices and procedures that might improve the responses of national authorities to challenges posed by drug trafficking and related organized criminal offences; and collaboration and coordination among drug law enforcement agencies. The forty-ninth session of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Vienna, 10–13 November) [UNODC/SUBCOM/49/5] made recommendations on the misuse of sea containers for the trafficking of illicit drugs, and possible investigative techniques; emerging challenges for Afghanistan and the region in relation to drug trafficking; and demand reduction responses, including to reduce the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants and the non-therapeutic use of pharmaceutical preparations.

Conventions

International efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended by the 1972 Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] to strengthen the role of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB); the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs or that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol stood at 186. The number of parties to the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances remained at 183 as at 31 December. With the accession of Timor-Leste in June, the number of parties to the 1988 Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances increased to 189.

Implementation of drug control treaties

Review of substances for scheduling recommendations. The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [E/CN.7/2014/10] with information on the provisions of the international drug control conventions for the possible scheduling of substances, and identified challenges related to the review of substances and possible approaches to make the scheduling process more effective. Annexed to the note were descriptions of the scheduling procedures under the 1961 Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, and those of the 1971 Convention, and summaries of the relevant provisions of the 1988 Convention. The Secretariat note drew upon the work of international expert consultations on new psychoactive substances, held in Vienna from 3 to 5 September 2013, and the outcome document prepared by the UNODC Laboratory and Scientific Section. There was renewed interest in the scheduling process due to the emergence of new psychoactive substances and international cooperation was needed to maximize the use of the tools available under the Conventions. The experts recommended the development of simplified guidance for States parties on the scheduling process and identified ways to make the scheduling procedures more effective. The note concluded that the ability to schedule substances with potential for misuse or harm was a central element of a well-functioning international drug control system and proposed actions for consideration by the Commission.

Changes in the scope of control substances. In a January note [E/CN.7/2014/9], the Secretariat transmitted to the Commission a notification from the President of INCB concerning the inclusion of alpha-phenylacetonitrile (APAAN) in Table I of the 1988 Convention. The Board was of the opinion that the international control of APAAN was required in order to limit its availability for illicit drug manufacture and thus reduce the quantity of amphetamine and methamphetamine manufactured illicitly from that substance.

On 19 March [E/2014/28 (dec. 57/1)], the Commission decided by 40 votes to none, with no abstentions, to include APAAN and its optical isomers in Table I of the 1988 Convention.

Illicit activities related to opium poppy seeds. On 21 March [E/2014/28 (res. 57/8)], the Commission encouraged Member States to implement the control provisions recommended in Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/32 [YUN 1999, p. 1166] on the international regulation and control of trade in poppy seeds; to strengthen bilateral and multilateral cooperation and exchange of information with INCB towards implementation of that resolution; and to exchange information and best practices on ways to prevent attempts to disguise and conceal in other consignments opium poppy straw and other narcotic drugs for illicit purposes. The Commission encouraged Member States in which the import of opium poppy seeds was permitted to consider recommendation 28 of the 2009 INCB report [YUN 2009, p. 1241], which urged those countries to require a certificate from the country of origin of the seeds as the basis for importation; and it requested INCB to continue to invite Member States to ensure the implementation of article 22 of the 1961 Single Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol, concerning the prohibition of illicit opium poppy cultivation.

Preventing the diversion of ketamine. Also on 21 March [res. 57/10], the Commission urged Member States to address the problem of the diversion of ketamine from licit medical use by monitoring emerging trends in its abuse, diversion, illicit manufacture, and illicit domestic and international non-medical distribution; controlling its use by placing it on a list of substances controlled under their national legislation; and paying special attention to the need to adopt measures to ensure adequate availability of and access to ketamine for medical and scientific purposes. CND also called upon Member States to adopt measures aimed at detecting and countering its diversion and trafficking, including trafficking through the Internet; to consider adopting an import and export authorization system for its licit international trade; and to share information and cooperate at the bilateral, regional and international levels with a view to detecting and controlling its diversion from the licit market, in particular by strengthening cooperation in law enforcement activities and by fostering cooperation among the relevant national health authorities. The UNODC Executive Director was requested to report to the Commission's fifty-eighth (2015) session.

Identification of new psychoactive substances. On the same date [res. 57/9], CND urged Member States and relevant organizations to continue collecting data on new psychoactive substances and their threats to public health and safety; to share best practices on demand reduction measures and treatment practices based on scientific evidence; to collaborate on the development of multifaceted prevention strategies that provided information on the potential adverse health and social effects of new psychoactive substances; and to exchange ideas and experiences in adopting responses to the challenges posed by new psychoactive substances. The Commission invited UNODC to incorporate a focus on new psychoactive substances in its programmes and communications; invited the World Health Organization (WHO) to review new psychoactive substances; and urged Member States to strengthen international cooperation in the exchange of information regarding the identification of new psychoactive substances, the methods used for their distribution and the modi operandi of criminal and other organizations involved in their production, processing and distribution. It also urged Member States to respond swiftly to the emergence of new psychoactive substances; to use, follow and/or apply the scheduling processes and control measures established under the 1961 Single Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol, and the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances; and to support activities under the INCB task force on new psychoactive substances.

INCB action. In its report covering 2014 [E/INCB/2014/1, Sales No. E.15.XI.1] (see p. 1398), the Board reiterated its invitation to WHO to evaluate the potential medical utility of cannabis and the extent to which cannabis posed a risk to human health; and reminded Governments that had established programmes for the use of cannabis for medical purposes, or were considering such initiatives, of their reporting and licensing obligations under the international treaties. The Board also noted that the amount of opiate raw material available for the manufacturing of narcotic drugs for medical purposes, including for pain relief, was more than sufficient to satisfy the level of demand, as estimated by Governments, with both production and stocks continuing to increase. It therefore urged cultivating and producing countries of opiate raw material for medical and scientific purposes to take into consideration the 1961 Single Convention, in which parties were required to prevent the accumulation of poppy straw in excess of quantities required for the normal conduct of business, taking into account the prevailing market conditions. Pursuant to CND resolution 57/9 (see above), INCB called on Member States to support WHO in assessing new psychoactive substances and in providing scheduling recommendations to the Commission; INCB also reiterated its position with regard to the legalization of the non-medical use of scheduled substances and urged all States to ensure full compliance with the international treaties to which they were parties.

International Narcotics Control Board

INCB held its 109th (3–7 February), 110th (19–30 May) and 111th (28 October–14 November) sessions, all in Vienna.

In accordance with the tasks assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board monitored the implementation of the international drug control treaties and maintained a permanent dialogue with Governments. The information received from Governments was used to identify the enforcement of treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. The Board, which was required by the treaties to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noted gaps and weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance and made recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

The Board's 2014 report [E/INCB/2014/1, Sales No. E.15.XI.1] reviewed efforts by the international community to take a comprehensive, integrated and balanced approach to implementing the provisions of the international drug control treaties to respond to the world drug problem. The outcome of that approach should be not only to reduce or prevent the illicit production of, trafficking in and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, but also to facilitate the availability of controlled substances for medical and scientific purposes. Acting under its mandate to assess the licit use of internationally controlled drugs, the Board drew attention to major discrepancies among regions in terms of their availability. Despite progress in some regions, approximately three quarters of the world's population lived in countries with low-level or non-existent access to medicines containing narcotic drugs and had inadequate access to treatment for severe pain, while 92 per cent of the world's morphine was consumed by 17 per cent of the world's population, primarily in North America, Oceania and Western Europe. Comparable discrepancies also existed in relation to access to psychotropic substances for licit purposes. The amount of opiate raw material available for the production of opioid analgesics for pain relief was more than sufficient to satisfy the requirements and consumption reported by Governments; global stocks were increasing and the low demand for opioid analgesics in many countries was not the result of a shortage of licitly produced raw materials. The Board stressed that the situation could be improved through corrective action by States parties to address the regulatory, attitudinal, knowledge-related, economic and procurement-related problems identified as the main causes of the inadequate availability of opioids. The Board stressed the importance of both drug demand and supply reduction strategies and noted that depleting illicit supply and reducing demand had a mutually reinforcing effect. The report reviewed the socioeconomic and sociocultural aspects that impacted both the supply and demand aspects of the drug problem and stressed that illicit cultivation was intertwined with socioeconomic factors, thus its reduction and elimination should be addressed in the broader context of sustainable development. INCB made the following recommendations to Member States: to consider the principles of international law in respecting their obligations assumed by ratification of the conventions and in interpreting their provisions; to encourage the cooperation of stakeholders in the planning, implementation and monitoring of drug control policies; to consider their obligation to ensure the availability of controlled substances for medical and scientific purposes and enhance their cooperation with the Board, WHO and other relevant stakeholders; to ensure that demand reduction was one of the priorities of their drug control policies; and to place equal emphasis on supply and demand reduction, taking into consideration the socioeconomic, sociocultural, security and stability aspects that impacted the drug problem.

In its review of the functioning of the international drug control system, the report considered issues on promoting the consistent application of the treaties; ensuring the implementation of their provisions; Governments' cooperation with the Board; evaluation of overall treaty compliance; and action taken by the Board to ensure the treaties' implementation. It also covered special topics such as control measures applicable to programmes for the use of cannabis for medical purposes pursuant to the 1961 Single Convention; the availability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in emergency situations; the use of methylphenidate; new psychoactive substances; and the development of an international electronic import and export authorization system for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

The Board's report was supplemented by the following reports: Narcotic Drugs: Estimated World Requirements for 2015—Statistics for 2013 [E/INCB/2014/2]; Psychotropic Substances: Statistics for 2013—Assessments of Annual Medical and Scientific Requirements for Substances in Schedules II, III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 [E/INCB/2014/3]; and Precursors and Chemicals Frequently Used in the Illicit Manufacture of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances: Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2014 on the Implementation of Article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 [E/INCB/2014/4].

By decision 2014/235 of 16 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the INCB report for 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1214].

World drug situation

In its 2014 report [E/INCB/2014/1, Sales No. E.15.XI.1] INCB presented a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts to keep Governments aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties. For each region, the report provided information on major developments; regional cooperation; national legislation, policy and action; cultivation, production, manufacture and trafficking; and abuse and treatment.

Africa

The deteriorating political situation in some African subregions spurred increases in illicit drug trafficking and worsening public health problems related to drug use. West Africa, for example, saw more manufacturing and trafficking of methamphetamine, while a rise in drug trafficking into and out of Liberia led to increased national security concerns. Cannabis remained a major illicit drug of concern, and its production, trafficking and abuse continued. Despite eradication efforts, it was illicitly cultivated throughout the continent, while the illicit production of cannabis resin was limited to a few countries in North Africa. Morocco remained one of the largest cannabis resin producers in the world, notwithstanding that production in the country was reportedly declining. Use of khat, a plant-based substance not under international control, remained highly prevalent in some African countries. It was cultivated in East Africa, predominantly in Ethiopia and Kenya, where its abuse was widespread. The trafficking of opiates through Africa continued, owing to limited law enforcement capacity in the region. East Africa was increasingly used as a transit route for heroin originating in Asia and bound for markets in South and West Africa. Southern Africa remained a key link in the global transit of heroin and cocaine. New trends related to trafficking in amphetamine-type stimulants indicated a growing domestic market throughout Africa, as well as the smuggling of amphetamine-type stimulants to East and South-East Asia and Oceania. The clandestine manufacture of methaqualone in the region continued.

The African Union implemented its Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention for the 2013–2017 period, which provided a strategic framework to guide the development of drug policy. With the support of UNODC, the African Union held expert group meetings on the Plan of Action on Drug Control in Southern Africa. UNODC continued to implement tailored programmes in the region, including the Container Control Programme; the Airport Communication Project; and the regional programmes on drugs and crime for East Africa for the 2009–2015 period. The Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) continued to implement its Regional Action Plan to Address the Growing Problem of Illicit Drug Trafficking, Organized Crime and Drug Abuse in West Africa, which had been extended until 2015. South Africa adopted a national master plan on drugs for 2013–2017 and, in April, amended the Drugs and Drug Trafficking Act of 1992 to classify as illegal the street-drug mixtures of heroin and cannabis known locally as “nyaope” or “woonga”. Ghana approved an amendment to the schedule of the Narcotic Drug (Control Enforcement and Sanctions) Law of 1990 to control certain new psychoactive substances and other psychotropic substances, such as methamphetamine and its derivatives.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean. Owing to its geographical location and weak governing institutions, Central America and the Caribbean continued to be exploited by local gangs and international organized criminal groups as a transit and trans-shipment route for illicit drugs originating in South America and destined for consumer markets in North America and Europe. Local consumption of illegal drugs also appeared to be growing in many countries of the region. Costa Rica and Honduras remained primary trans-shipment points. The amount of cocaine trafficked through Central America increased, particularly along the border between Guatemala and Honduras, following an intensification of law enforcement efforts in Mexico. More than 80 per cent of all cocaine trafficked to the United States transited the region, and the illicit drugs produced in the region increased. Cannabis was produced mainly in small quantities for local consumption, but regionally, the production and trafficking of new psychoactive substances increased. Traffickers were turning to the importation of non-scheduled precursor chemicals to manufacture methamphetamine through alternative methods to avoid stricter regional control measures in place since 2011. There was intensified competition in cocaine trafficking, as the most lucrative source of income for organized criminal groups, and a corresponding increase in the level of violence, especially in the northern part of the region: Belize, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras. The drug problem had contributed to high levels of street violence and drug-related corruption, which had further overloaded the criminal justice system.

In April, the UNODC regional programme for 2014–2016 in support of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) crime and security strategy was launched. In September, at the forty-sixth special session of the Organization of American States, officials from the 35 member states discussed counter-narcotics policies in the Americas. Costa Rica reported in February that it had adopted Act No. 9161, a comprehensive amendment of Act No. 8204 on Narcotic Drugs, Psychotropic Substances, Illicit Drugs, Related Activities, Money-Laundering and the Financing of Terrorism. El Salvador continued to implement its national anti-drug strategy for 2011–2015. In Panama, national institutions continued the process of strengthening and/or restructuring their national intelligence systems.

North America. In North America, the social and human costs of drug abuse remained considerable. The region continued to have the highest drug-related mortality rate of any subregion in the world (142.1 per million inhabitants aged 15 to 64 years), and overdose deaths, primarily related to prescription opioids, outnumbered homicides and road accident fatalities. The tightening of regulatory controls for the dispensing of prescription opioids, coupled with efforts by pharmaceutical companies to develop tamper-proof formulations of commonly abused prescription drugs, contributed to a major resurgence in heroin abuse, following several years of decline. Although seizures of cocaine fell by 44 per cent between 2007 and 2012, they continued to be the largest outside the Andean region. There was a slight increase in cocaine abuse in the adult population of the United States in 2012, although it remained stable among young people and declined marginally in 2013. The availability of cannabis continued to increase, driven by increased production in all three countries and tolerant policies in many states in the United States. Cannabis remained the most widely available and abused illicit drug in the region, and the one that was most trafficked between North American countries. Sales of cannabis for non-medical purposes began in the States of Colorado and Washington, and voters in the States of Oregon, Alaska and the District of Columbia approved ballot initiatives on its non-medical use in their jurisdictions. Those developments occurred despite a conflict with the Controlled Substances Act, a federal statute which prohibited cannabis production, trafficking and possession. In the United States, 23 states and the District of Columbia had enacted legislation allowing for the creation of medical cannabis programmes.

The Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission (CICAD) remained the main vehicle for cooperation between the three countries in the region, which was extensive. In July, the United States released its National Drug Control Strategy for 2014, which emphasized public health approaches to addressing the drug problem; identified the abuse of prescription drugs and heroin as major challenges; addressed the growing threat posed by new psychoactive substances, such as synthetic cannabinoids and synthetic cathinones; and contained enhanced measures aimed at combating transnational organized crime. Canada addressed the growing problem of prescription drug abuse by reinforcing implementation of its National Anti-Drug Strategy. The United States and Canada had also created prescription drug monitoring programmes and adopted measures to promote the interoperability of those programmes among sub-national jurisdictions. In Mexico, the availability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical purposes remained low, resulting in limited access by patients with legitimate medical needs. Mexico was examining changes to its regulatory structure to remove impediments to the prescription and dispensing of such drugs for medical use. In 2013, Canada introduced a bill aimed at creating a legal framework that would allow for the establishment and operation of supervised drug injection sites. The Board reiterated its concern that such facilities could be inconsistent with the provisions of the international drug control conventions. In May, the State of Minnesota signed a bill into law that established a medical cannabis programme, and in July, the State of New York signed a bill into law that allowed doctors to prescribe cannabis for medical purposes. The Board reminded governments in jurisdictions that had established medical cannabis programmes, or that were considering doing so, that the 1961 Single Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol, set out specific requirements for their establishment, administration and monitoring, and encouraged governments to ensure that their medical cannabis programmes fully implemented the measures in the Convention.

South America. South America continued to be affected by the illicit cultivation of coca bush, cannabis plant and, in some countries, opium poppy, all of which were processed, usually in the country of cultivation, into the corresponding plant-based drugs. Aside from being the source for virtually the entire supply of the world's cocaine, the region also accounted for a significant proportion of its global consumption. The illicit use of cannabis and, to a lesser extent amphetamine-type stimulants, also affected segments of the population. As at 2012, South America accounted for almost one fifth of all past-year cocaine users globally, and slightly less than one tenth of cannabis users. One issue of special concern was the consumption of smokable forms of cocaine. Among the drugs and psychotropic substances most abused on a global scale, cocaine was the only one for which the illicit processes leading to the consumable end product (cultivation, production and manufacture) were largely confined to a specific region—South America. In particular, illicit coca bush cultivation was concentrated in the three countries of Bolivia, Colombia and Peru. In recent years, the global supply of cocaine originating in South America had been curtailed to an extent that had a perceptible effect on major consumer markets. During the 2007–2013 period, the total area under cultivation for coca bush in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru fell by approximately one third, and cocaine availability remained significantly lower than during the peak levels reached around 2006.

South America was characterized by a high level of awareness of the illicit supply of and demand for controlled substances, in addition to a well-developed infrastructure at the national and regional levels to monitor and counter that phenomenon. The Board welcomed the number of regional cooperation activities, including the provision of training and legal assistance, organized by the countries in the region in cooperation with CICAD and UNODC. Other aspects that received attention dealt with efforts to combat the trafficking in and diversion of precursors, maritime trafficking and the abuse of smokable forms of cocaine. In March 2013, Peru approved a new regulation concerning chemicals, equipment and material used for the illicit manufacture of drugs. Under the national strategy to combat drugs implemented by Peru for 2012–2016, the eradication of coca bush intensified in the major coca growing regions.

Asia

East and South-East Asia. East and South-East Asia had some of the largest and most established illicit markets for amphetamine-type stimulants in the world. Further increases in trafficking and manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants constituted the leading source of drug-related activity in the region. They were the most abused drugs in a number of countries with demand for them, particularly for methamphetamine, continued to grow and diversify. Most of the methamphetamine abused was manufactured in clandestine laboratories within the region. The trafficking of precursors used in the manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants remained one of the biggest challenges in precursor control. Seizures of large quantities of pharmaceutical preparations containing pseudoephedrine continued to be reported by several countries. Illicit opium poppy cultivation and production increased, mainly in Myanmar and the Lao People's Democratic Republic. Myanmar remained the second-largest grower of opium poppy in the world after Afghanistan. Despite the eradication in 2013 of a total of 13,000 ha reported by the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand, illicit opium poppy cultivation continued to rise. In Myanmar alone, cultivation had grown from 21,600 ha in 2006 to 57,800 in 2013. The risk of greater illicit cultivation in the Golden Triangle was expected to persist until sustainable solutions could be found to the situation of long-term poverty in Shan State, Myanmar.

The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) held several meetings to exchange information on the drug situation, reiterate the Association's political commitment and call for intensified collaborative efforts. Other regular regional meetings, such as the Asia-Pacific Operational Drug Enforcement Conference and the Anti-Drug Liaison Officials' Meeting for International Cooperation, as well as various subregional cooperation platforms, also facilitated the exchange of information and multilateral collaboration. To further the regional goal of a drug-free ASEAN community in 2015, a number of policies and strategies were launched or extended at the national level. Amendments to existing drug control legislation were adopted in some countries and, in the absence of a unified control framework at the international level, attempts were made to impose stricter controls over new psychoactive substances at the national level.

South Asia. The greatest drug-related challenges facing South Asia in 2013 remained trafficking in Afghan heroin; the rise in the manufacturing and trafficking of methamphetamine; the diversion of controlled substances from licit to illicit channels; and the abuse of pharmaceutical preparations containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and the smuggling of such preparations from India to neighbouring countries. Owing to its location between the Golden Crescent (Afghanistan and Pakistan) and the Golden Triangle (Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand), South Asia continued to be particularly vulnerable to the trafficking of opiates and heroin. In addition, the widespread trafficking of cannabis, synthetic drugs and new psychotropic substances persisted in 2013.

All the countries in South Asia were members of the Colombo Plan for Cooperative Economic and Social Development in Asia and the Pacific, through which they continued their close partnership with one another, and with the other 21 members of the Plan that were outside of the subregion, on matters of drug abuse prevention and control. In India, the level of availability of and access to opioids for pain relief continued to be low, even though India had long been a licit producer and exporter of opiate raw material, namely opium, a source of pain management medication. In March 2014, the Indian Parliament adopted amendments to drug control legislation to enable uniform, simplified rules to be issued by the central Government, leading to the removal of the regulatory barriers that had hindered the availability of such drugs for pain relief. The Government of India issued the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (Regulation of Controlled Substances) Order, 2013, by which it repealed the 1993 Order of the same name. With the 2013 Order, which designated 17 precursor chemicals as controlled substances, the Government hoped to track controlled substances from source to end user and strike a balance between the legitimate requirements of licit trade and an adequate enforcement regime to prevent the diversion of controlled substances. INCB noted that enforcement agencies in the region needed awareness-raising and training on trafficking in precursors and pharmaceutical preparations to gain a better understanding of the problem. Such capacity-building should be coupled with a strengthening of existing mechanisms for law enforcement coordination at the policy and operational levels.

West Asia. The political instability caused by armed conflict and political strife in West Asia, particularly in Iraq, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the State of Palestine, continued to weaken governance structures and hamper drug control efforts. Moreover, the humanitarian situation in the region caused by large numbers of refugees, internally displaced persons and injured civilians strained the resources of States directly affected by the conflicts, as well as those of neighbouring States taking in large numbers of refugees. In 2014, Afghanistan set a new record for opium poppy cultivation, reaching 224,000 ha, 7 per cent more than the previous year. More than half of the country's 34 provinces had opium poppy cultivation of over 100 ha, and hundreds of thousands of households were involved in illicit cultivation. Opium poppy cultivation in Afghanistan was inversely related to security: as security deteriorated, illicit cultivation increased. Afghanistan accounted for 80 per cent of the estimated global illicit production of opium, and production in the country increased to 6,400 tons in 2014, an increase of 17 per cent over the previous year. Nearly 20 per cent of the world's opiate abusers resided in West Asia, as increasing opium production in Afghanistan resulted in greater opium and heroin abuse, primarily in that country and in neighbouring countries located along the expanding trafficking routes.

Cannabis continued to be cultivated and consumed in the subregion, where a growing number of seizures of cannabis resin were reported. Afghanistan continued to be one of the largest producers of cannabis resin. The abuse of amphetamines and cocaine was increasingly problematic in parts of West Asia. Amphetamine dominated the market, and large seizures continue to be reported.

Regional cooperation was essential in West Asia, as the region lay at a crossroads in the global trafficking of opiates, cannabis and precursor chemicals. Stability remained a primary concern in many countries, as well as a concern of the Security Council, and much of the cooperation was increasingly focused on improving political stability in several countries, particularly in Afghanistan. The League of Arab States and the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf (GCC) played a fundamental role in enhancing cooperation among countries in the region. In December 2013, Afghanistan adopted the National Drug Demand Reduction Policy for the period 2012–2016. Turkey implemented its new national policy and strategy document on drugs for 2013–2018 and, in 2013 and 2014, placed numerous non-scheduled new psychoactive substances under national control, including synthetic cannabinoids, cathinones and piperazines. Several countries amended legislation in response to the growing threat posed by new psychoactive substances: In 2013, Israel added emergency scheduling powers to its existing drug control legislation, and Georgia's law on narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors and narcological assistance was amended to include several synthetic cannabinoids. In the State of Palestine, laws on drug control, money-laundering and cybercrime were adopted, and a national plan on drug control, crime prevention and criminal justice reform for 2014–2017 was developed with UNODC assistance.

Europe

Most countries in Western and Central Europe reported a decline in the prevalence of heroin abuse, in the number of people commencing treatment for heroin abuse for the first time, and in the quantity of heroin seized. There were concerns, however, that heroin was being partly replaced by synthetic opioids as deaths associated with heroin abuse declined, but deaths linked to synthetic opioids were on the rise. Changing patterns with regard to injecting drug abuse were noted in some countries, particularly a trend away from the injection of heroin to the injection of synthetic opioids, amphetamine-type stimulants or new psychoactive substances. Compared to the global average, Eastern and South-Eastern Europe had a higher prevalence of injecting drug abuse, and of HIV among people who injected drugs. Relatively high rates of injecting drug abuse were observed in Belarus, Moldova, the Russian Federation and Ukraine. In Eastern Europe, opiate abuse, supported by the supply of heroin from Afghanistan, was significantly higher than the global average. In 2013, there was greater use of the Balkan route for illicit trafficking, and seizures of heroin along that route increased. South-Eastern Europe continued to see an expansion of trafficking in Albanian cannabis, and many countries experienced an increase in the local production of cannabis, including a form that was highly potent. The increasing range, availability and abuse of new psychoactive substances remained a major challenge in Europe, with a record level of 81 substances newly identified in 2013 and a greater involvement of organized criminal groups in the market. The countries and areas of the western Balkans, including Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Montenegro, Serbia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Kosovo, continued to cooperate on drug control with member States of the European Union (EU). An agreement between the EU and the Russian Federation on precursor chemicals came into effect in April 2014. In May, representatives of EU member States and countries of the western Balkans met in Brussels to engage in a dialogue on drugs, and bilateral cooperation in addressing trafficking in the region intensified among the countries of Eastern and South-Eastern Europe. As to national legislation, policy and action, Ukraine adopted new rules for handling narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors in medical establishments, which reduced the number of administrative obstacles to their use for medical purposes; Romania adopted its national anti-drug strategy for 2013–2020 and its action plan for 2013–2016; and in Belarus, a presidential decree was adopted on State regulation of the circulation of poppy seeds, which restricted their supply as a raw material for illicit markets in the country. Many European countries took legislative measures to address the challenge posed by new psychoactive substances, and Governments continued to place individual substances and groups of substances under national control: in 2013, 58 substances were placed under control in Lithuania, 35 in the Czech Republic, 26 in Germany, 24 in Switzerland, 21 in Sweden, 9 in Denmark, 5 in Estonia, 4 each in Finland and Italy and 2 in France. Latvia introduced a temporary ban on eight substances, Slovakia added a new section to national drug control legislation to control new psychoactive substances, the Russian Federation expanded its national list of controlled substances to include 43 new psychoactive substances, and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia placed 15 new psychoactive substances under national control. In June 2014, an order reclassifying ketamine as a class B drug came into force in the United Kingdom, and a decision to control khat also came into effect.

Oceania

Compared with other regions, Oceania provided an expanding market for certain drugs, including cocaine, and levels of abuse were high for most substances. Seizures and arrests in Oceania were at record highs for many drugs. Increased drug seizures, particularly in Australia, were attributed not only to the vigilance of law enforcement, but also to the increased activities of transnational organized criminal groups. As the monetary value of drugs and precursors remained comparatively high throughout Oceania, the region became susceptible to illicit manufacturing and trafficking. Growing markets for amphetamine-type stimulants and proximity to trafficking routes for different illicit drugs led most countries to see higher prevalence rates for their abuse. In most of the region the availability and abuse of new psychoactive substances had become an issue of concern. The expanding market for such substances developed rapidly and presented challenges to law enforcement. The increase in demand was affected by the inability of existing legislation to ensure that such substances were not available.

In April, the sixteenth annual conference of the Oceania Customs Organization, held in Suva, Fiji, discussed communication and information-sharing for better cooperation, and the need for strengthened border security. The secretariat of the Organization also undertook an assessment visit to assist Palau on processes and products related to information and intelligence sharing. In New Zealand, the Psychoactive Substances Amendment Act was passed and came into effect in May, thereby prohibiting the sale of psychoactive substances unless they were approved by the national regulatory authority following clinical trials. The Amendment Act revoked the 2013 Act, which had granted interim approvals for 47 products containing new psychoactive substances and permitted their marketing by 150 licensed retailers. In July, Australia's Intergovernmental Committee on Drugs published the Framework for a National Response to New Psychoactive Substances, which would assist with information sharing and communication regarding new psychoactive substances, harm assessment and scheduling provisions. In 2012 and 2013, various states and territories of Australia passed legislative and regulatory amendments. New South Wales passed the New Psychoactive Substances Act, and Queensland amended the Drugs Misuse Act 1986 to create a new offence for trafficking in precursor chemicals used in the production of dangerous drugs.

Crime prevention and criminal justice

Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

At its twenty-third session (Vienna, 13 December 2013 and 12–16 May 2014) [E/2014/30], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ) recommended to the Economic and Social Council six draft resolutions for adoption by the General Assembly on the following matters: follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [YUN 2010, p. 1094] and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice; Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners; international cooperation in criminal matters; United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice; rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the UN development agenda beyond 2015; and International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences. CCPCJ recommended for the Council's adoption three draft resolutions and two decisions on matters that included strengthening social policies as a tool for crime prevention; the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the post-2015 development agenda (see p. 960); and strengthening international cooperation in addressing the smuggling of migrants. The Commission also adopted three resolutions and one decision, which it brought to the attention of the Council (see below). In addition to holding a thematic discussion on international cooperation in criminal matters, CCPCJ also considered strategic management, budgetary and administrative questions; integration and coordination of efforts by UNODC and Member States in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice; the use and application of UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice; world crime trends and emerging issues and responses in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice; follow-up to the Twelfth UN Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth UN Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice; and the provisional agenda for its twenty-fourth (2015) session.

At its reconvened twenty-third session (Vienna, 4–5 December) [E/2014/30/Add.1], the Commission adopted and brought to the Council's attention one resolution on implementation of the UNODC budget for the biennium 2014–2015. It also recommended one draft decision for adoption by the Council.

On 16 July, by decision 2014/229, the Economic and Social Council took note of the CCPCJ report on its reconvened twenty-second (2013) session [YUN 2013, p. 1218]. On the same date, by decision 2014/230, the Council took note of the CCPCJ report on its twenty-third session, reaffirmed Commission decision 21/1 [YUN 2012, p. 1198], took note of Commission decision 22/2 [YUN 2013, p. 1197], and approved the provisional agenda for the Commission's twenty-fourth (2015) session.

Follow-up to the Twelfth UN Crime Congress

In response to General Assembly resolution 68/185 [YUN 2013, p. 1219], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [E/CN.15/2014/6] on the follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (Salvador, Brazil, 12–19 April 2010) [YUN 2010, p. 1094] and the ongoing preparations for the Thirteenth (2015) United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha, Qatar. The report covered the regional preparatory meetings for the Thirteenth Congress and the finalization of a discussion guide for those meetings and for the Congress itself. The Secretary-General had organized four regional meetings in preparation for the Thirteenth Congress: Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 22–24 January) [A/CONF.222/RPM.1/1]; Western Asia (Doha, 3–5 February) [A/CONF.222/RPM.2/1]; Latin American and Caribbean (San José, Costa Rica, 19–21 February) [A/CONF.222/RPM.3/1]; and Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 9–11 April) [A/CONF.222/RPM.4/1]. A draft discussion guide [A/CONF.222/PM.1] was finalized by the Secretariat and made available to the meetings. The report also contained information on actions required of the Commission in reviewing the preparations.

A February note [E/CN.15/2014/9] by the Secretariat recalled that in accordance with rule 63 of the rules of procedure for United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice adopted at the Twelfth (2010) Congress, the rules of procedure as adopted [A/CONF.213/2] would be made available to the Commission at its twenty-third session.

Also in response to General Assembly resolution 68/185, the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/69/89] with information on the implementation of that resolution. It provided an overview of the relevant mandates, as well as of the deliberations and actions taken at the twenty-third session of the Commission on issues pertaining to preparations for the Thirteenth Congress and the outcome of those deliberations.

On 18 December (decision 69/537), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/15 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

Follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/191 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/191 without vote [agenda item 105].

Follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The General Assembly,

Emphasizing the responsibility assumed by the United Nations in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 155 C(VII) of 13 August 1948 and General Assembly resolution 415(V) of 1 December 1950,

Acknowledging that the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice, as major intergovernmental forums, have influenced national policies and practices and promoted international cooperation in that field by facilitating the exchange of views and experience, mobilizing public opinion and recommending policy options at the national, regional and international levels,

Recognizing the significant contributions of the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice in promoting the exchange of experience in research, law and policy development and the identification of emerging trends and issues in crime prevention and criminal justice among States, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and individual experts representing various professions and disciplines,

Recognizing also the efforts already made by the Government of Qatar to prepare for the hosting of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in Doha, including its generous contribution to support the capacity of the Secretariat to ensure effective preparations for the Thirteenth Congress,

Recalling its resolution 56/119 of 19 December 2001 on the role, function, periodicity and duration of the United Nations congresses on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, in which it stipulated the guidelines in accordance with which, beginning in 2005, the congresses, pursuant to paragraphs 29 and 30 of the statement of principles and programme of action of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, should be held,

Recalling also its resolution 65/230 of 21 December 2010 and its resolutions 66/179 of 19 December 2011, 67/184 of 20 December 2012 and 68/185 of 18 December 2013 on the follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Recalling further, in particular, that in its resolution 68/185 it decided to hold the Thirteenth Congress in Doha from 12 to 19 April 2015, with pre-Congress consultations to be held on 11 April 2015,

Mindful that in its resolution 68/185 it also decided that the high-level segment of the Thirteenth Congress would be held during the first two days of the Congress in order to allow Heads of State or Government and government ministers to focus on the main theme of the Congress and to enhance the possibility of generating useful feedback,

Mindful also that in its resolution 68/185 it further decided that, in accordance with its resolution 56/119, the Thirteenth Congress would adopt a single declaration, to be submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice for its consideration, and that the declaration would contain the major recommendations reflecting and emerging from the deliberations of the high-level segment, as well as the discussion of the agenda items and the workshops,

1. Reiterates its invitation to Governments to take into consideration the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World and the recommendations adopted by the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice when formulating legislation and policy directives and to make all efforts, where appropriate, to implement the principles contained therein, taking into account the economic, social, legal and cultural specificities of their respective States;

2. Reiterates its invitation to Governments and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to inform the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice about their activities aimed at the implementation of the Salvador Declaration and the recommendations adopted by the Twelfth Congress, with a view to providing guidance on the formulation of legislation, policies and programmes in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice at the national and international levels, and to that end requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the subject, to be submitted to the Congress for its consideration;

3. Notes with appreciation the progress made thus far in the preparations for the Thirteenth Congress;

4. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

5. Also takes note with appreciation of the discussion guide prepared by the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, for the regional preparatory meetings and for the Thirteenth Congress;

6. Acknowledges the relevance of the regional preparatory meetings, which have examined the substantive items of the agenda and the workshop topics of the Thirteenth Congress and made action-oriented recommendations, to serve as a basis for the draft declaration to be adopted by the Thirteenth Congress;

7. Requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to begin, in accordance with its resolution 68/185, the preparation of a short and concise draft declaration, reflecting the theme of the Thirteenth Congress, at intersessional meetings to be held well in advance of the Congress, taking into account the recommendations of the regional preparatory meetings and consultations with relevant organizations and entities;

8. Emphasizes the importance of the workshops to be held during the Thirteenth Congress, and invites Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and other relevant entities to provide financial, organizational and technical support to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and to the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network for the preparations for the workshops, including the preparation and circulation of relevant background material;

9. Reiterates its invitation to donor countries to cooperate with developing countries to ensure their full participation in the workshops, and encourages States, other entities concerned and the Secretary-General to work together in order to ensure that the workshops focus on their respective issues and achieve practical results, leading to technical cooperation ideas, projects and documents related to enhancing bilateral and multilateral efforts in technical assistance activities in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice;

10. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make available the resources necessary to ensure the participation of the least developed countries in the Thirteenth Congress, in accordance with past practice;

11. Encourages Governments to make preparations for the Thirteenth Congress at an early stage by all appropriate means, including, where appropriate, the establishment of national preparatory committees, with a view to contributing to a focused and productive discussion on the topics and to participating actively in the organization and conduct of the workshops, the submission of national position papers on the various substantive items of the agenda and the encouragement of contributions from the academic community and relevant scientific institutions;

12. Reiterates its invitation to Member States to be represented at the Thirteenth Congress at the highest appropriate level, for example by Heads of State or Government or government ministers and attorneys general, to make statements in the high-level segment on the theme and substantive items of the Congress and to participate actively in its proceedings by sending legal and policy experts with special training and practical experience in crime prevention and criminal justice;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to facilitate the organization of ancillary meetings of non-governmental and professional organizations participating in the Thirteenth Congress, in accordance with past practice, as well as meetings of professional and geographical interest groups, and to take appropriate measures to encourage the participation of the academic and research community in the Congress;

14. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to encourage the participation of representatives from relevant entities of the United Nations system in the Thirteenth Congress, bearing in mind the main theme, agenda items and workshop topics of the Congress;

15. Welcomes the plan for the documentation of the Thirteenth Congress, prepared by the Secretary-General in consultation with the extended Bureau of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

16. Also welcomes the appointment by the Secretary-General of a secretary-general and an executive secretary of the Thirteenth Congress, who will perform their functions under the rules of procedure for United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare an overview of the state of crime and criminal justice worldwide for presentation at the Thirteenth Congress, in accordance with past practice;

18. Requests the Commission to give high priority at its twenty-fourth session to considering the declaration of the Thirteenth Congress, with a view to recommending, through the Economic and Social Council, appropriate follow-up by the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure proper follow-up to the present resolution and to report thereon, through the Commission, to the General Assembly at its seventieth session.

Thirteenth UN Crime Congress

During the regular part of its twenty-third (2014) session, CCPCJ considered the state of progress of the preparations for the Thirteenth (2015) United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice. Representatives noted that because the Thirteenth Congress would take place on the threshold of UN work on the post-2015 development agenda, it offered a chance to place the role of the criminal justice system in the promotion of the rule of law, and in support of sustainable development at the centre of international debate. Speakers also highlighted the need for inclusive consultations for the elaboration of a draft declaration in advance of the Congress. On 16 May, the Commission recommended a draft resolution on the matter for adoption by the Economic and Social Council.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/22 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the post-2015 development agenda

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 61/16 of 20 November 2006, in which the Assembly reaffirmed the role that the Charter of the United Nations and the General Assembly had vested in the Economic and Social Council, and recognized the need for a more effective Council as a principal body for coordination, policy review, policy dialogue and recommendations on issues of economic and social development, as well as for implementation of the international development goals agreed at the major

United Nations conferences and summits, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling also that, through its resolution 68/1 of 20 September 2013, the General Assembly decided that the Economic and Social Council should base its annual programme of work on a main theme that would, inter alia, be decided by the Council based on inputs from its subsidiary bodies, as well as Member States, and that an integration segment should be held annually, the main functions of which would be to consolidate all the inputs of Member States, the subsidiary bodies of the Council, the United Nations system and other relevant stakeholders and to promote the balanced integration of the three dimensions of sustainable development, namely social, environmental and economic,

Recognizing the preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as set out in General Assembly resolution 67/184 of 20 December 2012, including the decision that the main theme of the Congress would be “Integrating crime prevention and criminal justice into the wider United Nations agenda to address social and economic challenges and to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, and public participation”,

1. Invites Member States, international organizations and all relevant stakeholders to provide to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime their views regarding the contribution that the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, considering its main theme, could make to the discussions on the post-2015 development agenda, while respecting the process established by the General Assembly, and requests the Office to report to the Congress on that matter;

2. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes set out in the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

Communications. In a letter [A/69/424] dated 2 October to the Secretary-General, Qatar transmitted to the General Assembly the Chair’s summary of a governmental expert meeting (Doha, Qatar, 27–29 September) on the preparations for the Thirteenth UN Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice. The meeting was convened pursuant to Assembly resolution 68/185 [YUN 2013, p. 1219] to facilitate discussion on the contribution that the Thirteenth Congress could make to deliberations on the post-2015 development agenda, pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2014/22 (see p. 1406), and to gather views on the preparation of the draft Congress declaration.

In a note verbale [E/CN.15/2014/22] dated 6 October, Qatar transmitted the Chair’s summary of the governmental expert meeting to the reconvened twenty-third (2014) session of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

World crime trends and emerging issues

At its twenty-third session [E/2014/30], CCPCJ considered the report of the Executive Director

[E/CN.7/2014/2-E/CN.15/2014/2] of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on the Office's 2013 activities [YUN 2013, p. 1196] in the framework of its regional and thematic programmes, which included countering transnational organized crime and illicit drug trafficking; countering corruption; terrorism prevention; crime prevention and criminal justice; prevention, treatment and reintegration, and alternative development; research, trend analysis and scientific and forensic support; and the strengthening of UNODC through strategic planning, evaluation, and finance and partnerships.

A further report of the Executive Director to the Commission [E/CN.7/2015/2-E/CN.15/2015/2] described the activities of the Office in those areas in 2014 (see p. 1379).

Crime data collection

In accordance with the practice established by Economic and Social Council resolution 1990/18 [YUN 1990, p. 727], the Secretariat submitted a February note [E/CN.15/2014/5] on world crime trends and emerging issues and responses in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. The report described global and regional trends regarding conventional crime, and short- and long-term patterns for homicide, as well as the response of the criminal justice system. It provided an overview of prison populations and systems worldwide, identified challenges faced by criminal justice systems, and presented statistics and data on international cooperation in criminal matters. Statistical data on crime and criminal justice were based on data produced by Member States as reported annually through the UN Survey of Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems. The report noted that, while data on common crimes, such as robbery and burglary, were often available at the international level, there was a scarcity of data on more complex types of crimes, such as kidnapping for ransom, corruption offences, specific types of fraud, environmental crimes or offences related to organized crime or gang activities.

At the global level, data on police-recorded offences indicated that conventional crimes followed distinctive trends: property-related crimes decreased considerably, violent crime declined only a little and drug-related offences increased. At the regional level, crime trends diverged: over the previous decade, violent crime had increased in the Americas while declining in Asia and Europe. Levels of intentional homicide in Southern Africa and Central and South America were higher than the global average, and while global trends showed decreasing homicide rates, short-term trends were unstable or increasing in several subregions, indicating that insecurity associated with high homicide levels was persistent in several areas of the world. Rates of suspected and convicted persons were higher in Europe than in Asia and the Americas, and, everywhere, most suspects and convicts were males, while the share of females slowly increased in all regions and the share of child suspects and convicts decreased. The global prison population increased in absolute numbers (10.4 million people at the end of 2012) but remained stable in proportion to the global population. Challenges emerged in relation to high levels of violent deaths among detainees; the large proportion of recidivist prisoners; the substantial proportion of prisoners who were foreign nationals; the large proportion of prisoners who had been sentenced for violent crimes and drug offences; and the rates of prisoners with a non-final sentence (particularly those without any sentence).

The Secretariat recommended that the Commission take note of the share of detainees without a final sentence and encourage Member States to monitor the use and duration of pretrial detention in order to ensure compliance with the UN Principles and Guidelines on Access to Legal Aid in Criminal Justice Systems; take note of the share of recidivist prisoners and encourage States to monitor efforts in the rehabilitation and social reintegration of offenders; and take note of the increasing diversity of prison populations and encourage States to establish systems of statistics that were sensitive to the special needs and vulnerabilities of certain categories of prisoners and to use the relevant UNODC technical tools and guidance material, including the Handbook on Prisoners with Special Needs, the Handbook on Women and Imprisonment, and the Handbook on the International Transfer of Sentenced Persons.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2012/18 [YUN 2012, p. 1201] and 2013/37 [YUN 2013, p. 1221], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [E/CN.15/2014/10] on improving the quality and availability of statistics on crime and criminal justice for policy development, which outlined activities undertaken by UNODC in accordance with the road map described in the report of the National Institute of Statistics and Geography of Mexico (INEGI) and UNODC [YUN 2013, p. 1261], approved by the Statistical Commission and CCPCJ and supported by Council resolution 2013/37. The Secretary-General considered the development of new standards and methodology to improve crime statistics; the improvement of capacity to produce and disseminate crime data; the improvement of international data collections and analyses; and the monitoring of security, justice and rule of law in the context of the post-2015 development agenda.

The Secretary-General recommended that CCPCJ encourage Member States to participate in the annual data collection conducted by UNODC through the UN Survey of Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems in order to increase the international availability of reliable data and improve analyses of crime threats and the criminal justice response, and to appoint national focal points for the coordination of national responses to the Survey, in order to increase the response rate and improve the quality of national data. The Commission should also encourage UNODC to finalize the draft international classification of crime for statistical purposes to be submitted to the Statistical Commission and CCPCJ in 2015; encourage UNODC and other international organizations to foster the development of methodological tools for the measurement of emerging and complex forms of crime; and encourage UNODC and other international organizations to coordinate and intensify efforts to deliver technical assistance in the field of crime and criminal justice statistics. The Secretary-General welcomed the publication of the Global Study on Homicide 2013 [Sales No. 14.IV.1] and invited States to consider the success of the UNODC-INEGI Center of Excellence with a view to replicating that experience in other regions.

Child abuse and exploitation through new information technologies

A March report [E/CN.15/2014/7] by the Secretary-General, prepared pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2011/33 [YUN 2011, p. 1209], summarized the main findings of a UNODC study to facilitate the identification, description and evaluation of the effects of new information technologies on the abuse and exploitation of children. It also contained an assessment of the needs of States for technical assistance, particularly in the training of law enforcement personnel in the investigation of offences against children committed by using new information and communication technologies. The study and the assessment considered data collected by the open-ended intergovernmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime, as well as studies carried out by regional and other UN system organizations. The Secretary-General concluded that combating technology-facilitated child abuse and exploitation required further commitments from Governments, the private sector, civil society, teachers, parents and the international community to build awareness, allocate sufficient resources to prevent and combat such crimes, establish supportive government structures, enable proactive investigations, and train practitioners on gathering, preserving and presenting electronic evidence. The Secretary-General recommended that the Commission invite States to review their criminal, procedural and other relevant legislation; enable law enforcement authorities to conduct undercover investigations to address technology-facilitated grooming or child solicitation before it became contact abuse; provide training to law enforcement authorities on gathering, preserving and presenting electronic evidence; strengthen cross-border investigations of child abuse and exploitation cases; establish specialized units within police and prosecution offices to deal with such cases; and develop awareness-raising campaigns for children, parents and caregivers.

Trafficking in cultural property

In a March note [E/CN.15/2014/16], the UNODC Secretariat submitted to CCPCJ the draft guidelines for crime prevention and criminal justice responses with respect to trafficking in cultural property and other related offences. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/186 [YUN 2013, p. 1226], the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property met from 15 to 17 January to review and revise the draft guidelines. The finalized guidelines were contained in the report [UNODC/CCPCJ/EG.1/2014/3] on that meeting, and the expert group recommended that they be adopted by the Commission at its twenty-third (2014) session.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/20 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/196 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/196 without vote [agenda item 105].

International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 66/180 of 19 December 2011 and 68/186 of 18 December 2013, entitled “Strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to protect cultural property, especially with regard to its trafficking”,

Recalling also the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000, as well as the United Nations Convention against Corruption, adopted by the Assembly in its resolution 58/4 of 31 October 2003,

Recalling further the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and

Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property, adopted by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 14 November 1970, the Convention on Stolen or Illegally Exported Cultural Objects, adopted by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law on 24 June 1995, and the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, adopted at The Hague on 14 May 1954, and the two Protocols thereto, adopted on 14 May 1954 and 26 March 1999, and other relevant conventions, and reaffirming the necessity for those States which have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to and, as States parties, implementing those international instruments,

Alarmed at the growing involvement of organized criminal groups in all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, and observing that illicitly trafficked cultural property is increasingly being sold through all kinds of markets, inter alia, in auctions, in particular over the Internet, and that such property is being unlawfully excavated and illicitly exported or imported with the facilitation of modern and sophisticated technologies,

Recognizing the indispensable role of crime prevention and criminal justice responses in combating all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences in a comprehensive and effective manner,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to protect cultural property, especially with regard to its trafficking,

Welcoming the initiatives promoted within the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network and the cooperative network established among the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL), the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law, the World Customs Organization and the International Council of Museums in the area of protection against trafficking in cultural property, and encouraging those entities to continue to play an active role in that area,

Recalling that the theme of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha from 12 to 19 April 2015, will be “Integrating crime prevention and criminal justice into the wider United Nations agenda to address social and economic challenges and to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, and public participation”, and considering that one of the workshops to be held within the framework of the Congress will focus on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to evolving forms of crime such as cybercrime and trafficking in cultural property, including lessons learned and international cooperation,

Reiterating the significance of cultural property as part of the common heritage of humankind and as unique and important testimony of the culture and identity of peoples and the necessity of protecting cultural property, and reaffirming in that regard the need to strengthen international cooperation in preventing, prosecuting and punishing all aspects of trafficking in cultural property,

Recognizing that, in its resolution 66/180, it requested the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within its mandate, in consultation with Member States and in close cooperation, as appropriate, with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, INTERPOL and other competent international organizations, to further explore the development of specific guidelines for crime prevention and criminal justice responses with respect to trafficking in cultural property,

Recognizing also that, in its resolution 68/186, it welcomed the progress made in exploring the development of non-binding guidelines on crime prevention and criminal justice responses with respect to trafficking in cultural property, stressed the need for their expeditious finalization, bearing in mind the importance of the matter for all Member States, and requested the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to reconvene the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property for Member States to review and revise the draft guidelines, with a view to finalizing and submitting the draft guidelines to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-third session,

Recognizing further that the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences, contained in the annex to the present resolution, can be considered by Member States in the development and strengthening of their policies, strategies, legislation and cooperation mechanisms to prevent and combat trafficking in cultural property and related offences in all situations,

1. Welcomes the work of the meeting of the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property held in Vienna from 15 to 17 January 2014 to finalize the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences;

2. Adopts the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences, contained in the annex to the present resolution, and underlines that the Guidelines represent a useful framework to guide Member States in the development and strengthening of their criminal justice policies, strategies, legislation and cooperation mechanisms in the area of protection against trafficking in cultural property and other related offences;

3. Strongly encourages Member States to apply the Guidelines to the maximum extent possible, where appropriate, in view of strengthening international cooperation in this field;

4. Encourages Member States to undertake efforts to overcome practical difficulties in the implementation of the Guidelines in their constant endeavour to combat trafficking in cultural property, in all situations and on the basis of common and shared responsibility;

5. Strongly encourages Member States to evaluate and review their legislation and legal principles, procedures, policies, programmes and practices related to crime prevention and criminal justice matters, in a manner consistent with their legal systems and drawing upon the Guidelines, in order to ensure their adequacy for preventing and combating trafficking in cultural property and related offences;

6. Invites Member States and other relevant stakeholders attending the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to discuss good practices and challenges in promoting international cooperation to combat trafficking in cultural property under workshop 3 (Strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to evolving forms of crime such as cybercrime and trafficking in cultural property, including lessons learned and international cooperation);

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide advisory services and technical assistance to Member States, upon request, in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice responses with respect to trafficking in cultural property and other related offences, in cooperation with relevant international organizations and making use of the work of the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, as appropriate;

8. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to make the Guidelines widely available, including through the development of relevant tools, such as handbooks and training manuals;

9. Further requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, where appropriate, in consultation with Member States, to develop a practical assistance tool to assist in the implementation of the Guidelines, taking into consideration the technical background document developed for the elaboration of the Guidelines and the comments made by Member States;

10. Invites Member States to use all relevant tools developed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, including the Sharing Electronic Resources and Laws against Organized Crime knowledge management portal and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Database of National Cultural Heritage Laws, and also invites Member States to provide to the Secretariat legislation and case law related to trafficking in cultural property, for inclusion in the portal;

11. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes described above, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

ANNEX

International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences

Introduction

1. The International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences have been developed in recognition of the criminal character of such offences and their devastating consequences for the cultural heritage of humankind. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 66/180 and 68/186 and Economic and Social Council resolution 2010/19, draft guidelines were developed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in consultation with Member States and in close cooperation, as appropriate, with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) and other competent international organizations.

2. The first draft of the guidelines was reviewed at an informal expert group meeting, held from 21 to 23 November 2011, composed of 20 experts from around the world with expertise in various fields related to the subject matter of the guidelines, including representatives of INTERPOL, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law. Based on the valuable comments and advice on improving the draft, a second draft was presented to and discussed by the open-ended intergovernmental expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property at its second meeting, held from 27 to 29 June 2012. Taking into account a compendium, prepared by the Secretariat, of comments made by Member States on the draft guidelines, the expert group reviewed and revised the guidelines at its third meeting, held from 15 to 17 January 2014, with a view to their finalization.

3. The Guidelines are based on crime prevention and criminal justice aspects of protection against trafficking in cultural property, taking into consideration a review of current practices and initiatives in several countries in addressing the problem of trafficking in cultural property, as well as principles and norms arising from the analysis of the following international legal instruments: the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime; the United Nations Convention against Corruption; the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and its First and Second Protocols; the Protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and relating to the protection of victims of international armed conflicts; the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property; the Convention on Stolen or Illegally Exported Cultural Objects adopted by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law; and the Convention on the Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage.

4. The present set of non-binding guidelines is available to Member States for their consideration in the development and strengthening of crime prevention and criminal justice policies, strategies, legislation and cooperation mechanisms to prevent and combat trafficking in cultural property and related offences in all situations. Their development follows the expression, by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in their resolutions, of alarm at the growing involvement of organized criminal groups in all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, and of the need to promote international cooperation to combat crime in a concerted manner.

5. The Guidelines have the purpose of serving as a reference for national policymakers and as a tool for capacity-building in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice responses to trafficking in cultural property and related offences, in coordination with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other competent international organizations, as appropriate. On the basis of the guidelines finalized by the intergovernmental expert group and submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, and taking into consideration the technical background document containing the version of the guidelines dated April 2012, and the comments made by Member States, the Commission may ask the Secretariat to develop a practical assistance tool, as appropriate, to aid in the implementation of the Guidelines.

6. The Guidelines contain four chapters:

(a) Chapter I contains guidelines on crime prevention strategies (including information and data collection, the role of cultural institutions and the private sector, the monitoring of the cultural property market, imports and exports, and archaeological sites, as well as education and public awareness);

(b) Chapter II contains guidelines on criminal justice policies (including adherence to and implementation of relevant international treaties, the criminalization of specific harmful conduct or the establishment of administrative offences, corporate liability, seizure and confiscation and investigative measures);

(c) Chapter III contains guidelines on international cooperation (including matters related to jurisdictional basis, extradition, seizure and confiscation, and cooperation among law enforcement and investigating authorities, as well as the return, restitution or repatriation of cultural property);

(d) Chapter IV contains a guideline on the scope of application of the Guidelines.

I

Prevention strategies

A. Information and data collection

Guideline 1. States should consider establishing and developing inventories or databases, as appropriate, of cultural property for the purpose of protection against its trafficking. The absence of registration of cultural property in such inventories shall by no means exclude it from protection against trafficking and related offences.

Guideline 2. States should consider, where possible under their national legislation, the relevant cultural property as registered in the official inventory of a State that has enacted laws on national or State ownership, provided that the owner State has issued a public formal statement to that effect.

Guideline 3. States should consider:

(a) Introducing or improving statistics on import and export of cultural property;

(b) Introducing or improving statistics, where practical, on administrative and criminal offences against cultural property;

(c) Establishing or improving national databases, as appropriate, on trafficking in cultural property and related offences and on trafficked, illicitly exported or imported, stolen, looted, illicitly excavated or illicitly traded or missing cultural property;

(d) Introducing mechanisms to enable the reporting of suspicious dealings or sales on the Internet;

(e) Contributing to international data collection on trafficking in cultural property and related offences through the United Nations Survey on Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems, conducted by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and the INTERPOL database on stolen works of art and through other relevant organizations;

(f) Contributing to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization database of national laws and regulations pertaining to cultural property.

Guideline 4. States should consider, as appropriate, establishing a central national authority or empowering an existing authority and/or enacting other mechanisms for coordinating the activities related to the protection of cultural property against trafficking and related offences.

B. The role of cultural institutions and the private sector

Guideline 5. States should consider encouraging cultural institutions and the private sector to adopt codes of conduct and to disseminate best practices on policies on the acquisition of cultural property.

Guideline 6. States should encourage cultural institutions and the private sector to report suspected trafficking in cultural property cases to law enforcement authorities.

Guideline 7. States should consider promoting and supporting training on cultural property regulations for cultural institutions and the private sector, in cooperation with relevant international organizations, including rules on the acquisition of cultural property.

Guideline 8. States should encourage, as appropriate, Internet providers and web-based auctioneers and vendors to cooperate in preventing trafficking in cultural property, including through the adoption of specific codes of conduct.

C. Monitoring

Guideline 9. States should consider, in accordance with the relevant international instruments, introducing and implementing appropriate import and export control procedures, such as certificates for the export and import of cultural property.

Guideline 10. States should consider creating and implementing monitoring measures for the market of cultural property, including for the Internet.

Guideline 11. States should, where possible, create and implement programmes for research, mapping and surveillance of archaeological sites for the purpose of protecting them against pillage, clandestine excavation and trafficking.

D. Education and public awareness

Guideline 12. States should consider supporting and promoting public awareness campaigns, including through the media, to foster among the general public a culture of concern about trafficking in cultural property, for the purpose of protecting that cultural property against pillage and trafficking.

II

Criminal justice policies

A. International legal texts

Guideline 13. States should consider adopting legislation criminalizing trafficking in cultural property and related offences in accordance with applicable existing international instruments, in particular the Organized Crime Convention, relating to trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 14. In bilateral cooperation, States may consider making use of the model treaty for the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property.

B. Criminal and administrative offences

Guideline 15. States should consider defining the concept of "cultural property", including movable and immovable cultural property, when necessary, for the purposes of criminal law.

Guideline 16. States should consider criminalizing, as serious offences, acts such as:

- (a) Trafficking in cultural property;
- (b) Illicit export and illicit import of cultural property;
- (c) Theft of cultural property (or consider elevating the offence of ordinary theft to a serious offence when it involves cultural property);
- (d) Looting of archaeological and cultural sites and/or illicit excavation;
- (e) Conspiracy or participation in an organized criminal group for trafficking in cultural property and related offences;
- (f) Laundering, as referred to in article 6 of the Organized Crime Convention, of trafficked cultural property.

Guideline 17. States should consider introducing in their criminal legislation other offences, such as damaging or vandalizing cultural property or acquiring, with conscious avoidance of the legal status, trafficked cultural property, when such offences are related to trafficking in cultural property.

Guideline 18. States should consider introducing obligations, as appropriate, to report suspected cases of trafficking of and related offences against cultural property and to report the discovery of archaeological sites, archaeological finds or other objects of relevant cultural interest, and, for those States that have done so, to criminalize the failure to meet those obligations.

Guideline 19. States should consider making it possible, in a way not contradictory to their fundamental legal principles, to infer a perpetrator's knowledge that an object has been reported as trafficked, illicitly exported or imported, stolen, looted, illicitly excavated or illicitly traded, on the basis of objective factual circumstances, including when the cultural property is registered as such in a publicly accessible database.

C. Criminal and administrative sanctions

Guideline 20. States should consider providing proportionate, effective and dissuasive sanctions for the above-mentioned criminal offences.

Guideline 21. States may consider adopting custodial sanctions for some selected criminal offences so as to meet the standard, required under article 2 (b) of the Organized Crime Convention, for "serious crime".

Guideline 22. States should consider the adoption of bans and disqualifications, and the revocation of licences, as complementary criminal or administrative sanctions whenever possible.

D. Corporate liability

Guideline 23. States should consider introducing or extending liability (criminal, administrative or civil in nature) of corporations or legal persons for the above-mentioned offences.

Guideline 24. States should consider introducing proportionate, effective and dissuasive sanctions for corporate offences of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, including fines, bans or disqualifications, revocation of licences and revocation of benefits, including tax exemptions or government subsidies, where possible.

E. Seizure and confiscation

Guideline 25. States should consider introducing criminal investigation and the search, seizure and confiscation of trafficked cultural property, as well as the proceeds of crimes related to such trafficking, and ensure its return, restitution or repatriation.

Guideline 26. States should consider, in a way not contradictory to their fundamental legal principles, the possibility of requiring that the alleged offender, the owner or the holder (if different) demonstrate the lawful origin of cultural property liable to seizure or confiscation for trafficking or related offences.

Guideline 27. States should consider introducing confiscation of the proceeds of the offence or of property of a value equivalent to such proceeds.

Guideline 28. States may consider using confiscated economic assets for financing expenses for recovery and other prevention measures.

F. Investigations

Guideline 29. States should consider creating specialized law enforcement bodies or units, as well as providing specialized training for customs officials, law enforcement personnel and public prosecutors, with regard to trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 30. States should consider enhancing co-ordination, at both the national and international levels, among law enforcement bodies in order to increase the probability of discovering and successfully investigating trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 31. States may consider, in the investigation of the above-mentioned offences, especially if related to organized crime, allowing for the appropriate use by their competent authorities of controlled delivery and other special investigative techniques, such as electronic or other forms of surveillance and undercover operations, within their territory, and allowing for the admissibility in court of evidence derived therefrom.

III

Cooperation

A. Jurisdiction

Guideline 32. States should consider establishing their jurisdiction over the above-mentioned criminal offences when such offences are committed within their territory or when committed outside their territory by one of their nationals, in a manner consistent with the principles of sovereign equality, the territorial integrity of States and non-intervention in the domestic affairs of other States, as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Organized Crime Convention.

B. Judicial cooperation in criminal matters

Guideline 33. States that have not yet done so should consider becoming parties to existing international law instruments, in particular the Organized Crime Convention, and use them as a basis for international cooperation in criminal matters in respect of trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 34. States should consider providing each other with the widest possible mutual legal assistance in investigations, prosecutions and judicial proceedings in relation to the above-mentioned offences, also in order to enhance the effectiveness and speed of the procedures.

Guideline 35. States should contribute to and regularly update the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Database of National Cultural Heritage Laws and any other relevant database.

C. Extradition

Guideline 36. States should consider making the crimes against cultural property enumerated in guideline 16 extraditable offences. In the context of extradition procedures, States should also consider adopting and applying, where possible, provisional measures to preserve the cultural property related to the alleged offence for the purpose of restitution.

Guideline 37. States should consider enhancing the effectiveness and speed of extradition for trafficking in cultural property and related offences, where such offences are considered extraditable.

Guideline 38. States should consider, in the case of refusal of extradition only on the basis of nationality, submitting the case, when requested by the State that had sought extradition, to the competent authority in order to consider prosecution.

D. International cooperation for purposes of seizure and confiscation

Guideline 39. States should consider cooperating in identifying, tracing, seizing and confiscating trafficked, illicitly exported or imported, stolen, looted, illicitly excavated, illicitly traded or missing cultural property.

Guideline 40. States may consider putting in place mechanisms to enable the contribution of confiscated financial assets to international or intergovernmental bodies concerned with the fight against transnational organized crime, including trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

E. International cooperation among law enforcement and investigating authorities

Guideline 41. States should consider enhancing the exchange of information on trafficking in cultural property and related offences by sharing or interconnecting inventories of cultural property and databases on trafficked, illicitly exported or imported, stolen, looted, illicitly excavated, illicitly traded or missing cultural property, and/or contributing to international ones.

Guideline 42. States should consider, where appropriate, in the framework of international judicial cooperation, enhancing the exchange of information on previous convictions and ongoing investigations relating to trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 43. States should consider concluding bilateral or multilateral agreements or arrangements in order to establish joint investigative teams for trafficking in cultural property and related offences.

Guideline 44. States should consider assisting each other in planning and implementing specialized training programmes for law enforcement personnel.

Guideline 45. States should consider enhancing or establishing privileged channels of communication between their law enforcement agencies.

F. Return, restitution or repatriation

Guideline 46. States should consider, in order to enhance international cooperation in criminal matters, undertaking appropriate measures to recover trafficked, illicitly exported or imported, stolen, looted, illicitly excavated or illicitly traded cultural property for the purpose of their return, restitution or repatriation.

Guideline 47. States should consider pondering, procedurally, as appropriate, the owner State's provisions on national or State ownership in order to facilitate the return, restitution or repatriation of public cultural property.

Scope of application

Guideline 48. States should consider applying the Guidelines in any situations, including exceptional circumstances, that foster trafficking in cultural property and related offences, in the framework of the above-mentioned conventions and other relevant international instruments.

Economic fraud and identity-related crime

A March report [E/CN.15/2014/17] of the Secretary-General reviewed the efforts of Member States to implement Economic and Social Council resolution 2013/39 [YUN 2013, p. 1229] and domestic policies and measures in the prevention, investigation, prosecution and punishment of economic fraud and identity-related crime. It also provided information on the work of UNODC to raise awareness about identity-related crime and the appropriate responses to it, and on activities planned by UNODC towards enhancing State capacity to prevent and combat identity-related crime. The Secretary-General recommended that CCPCJ take into account the information provided by Member States on national efforts to investigate, prosecute and punish economic fraud and identity-related crime; and encourage the core group of experts on identity-related crime to take that information into consideration when discussing elements of a multidisciplinary approach to preventing and combating such crime. The Commission should also consider the future work of the Secretariat on identity-related crime and, in doing so, focus on planned UNODC activities and provide more effective and efficient technical assistance to requesting Member States. Particular attention should be devoted to the field of identity-related crime in the preparatory phase for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

Trafficking in forest products

Commission action. On 16 May [E/2014/30 (res. 23/1)], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice encouraged Member States to make illicit trafficking in forest products, including timber, involving organized criminal groups, a serious crime; to undertake and promote bilateral, regional, subregional and international law enforcement cooperation to prevent and counter that trafficking, thereby promoting the sustainable management and conservation of forests; and to develop and implement domestic and regional policies aimed at countering the illicit trafficking of forest products. Member States were further encouraged to strengthen domestic legal frameworks and law enforcement and judicial capacity to tackle trafficking in forest products; to adopt effective measures to combat such trafficking, including criminal laws and deterrent penalties; and to take advantage of the international cooperation provisions of the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the UN Convention against Corruption and become parties to those Conventions. The Commission invited UNODC to work with Member States and other UN bodies to identify good practices in criminal law related to illicit trafficking in forest products, promote forest law enforcement and governance, provide technical assistance and promote the development of tools and technologies, and undertake research focused on the organized criminal networks involved. CCPCJ invited States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary contributions and requested the UNODC Executive Director to report to the Commission's twenty-fifth (2015) session.

International cooperation in criminal matters

Thematic discussion. Pursuant to Commission decision 18/1 [YUN 2009, p. 1082], the Secretariat submitted a February note [E/CN.15/2014/12] as a guide for the thematic discussion of the Commission's twenty-third (2014) session. In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2010/243 [YUN 2010, p. 1101], the prominent theme for the session was international cooperation in criminal matters. The note provided background information and a series of questions on the topics proposed for discussion by the Commission. Issues presented in the note included how to manage international cooperation in multiple legal proceedings where the same individual was involved; implementing international instruments containing provisions on international cooperation in criminal matters; learning from experiences at the regional level; international cooperation in combating new and emerging forms of crime; the provision of technical assistance; and specific modalities of international cooperation in criminal matters, such as extradition and mutual legal assistance and international cooperation for the purposes of confiscation. In considering action to address challenges in the promotion of international cooperation in criminal matters, the note suggested that the Commission focus on ways and means to avoid fragmented solutions and ensure the proper administration of justice. It could also assess the advantages and practical consequences of a flexible approach that rendered the different modalities of international cooperation complementary to each other.

The thematic discussion took place on 13–14 May [E/2014/30]. Participants noted that the globalization of criminal activity, including through offences that engaged multiple jurisdictions, had created a need for strengthened forms and models of international cooperation. Existing treaties and mechanisms should be used, and the implementation of the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the UN Convention against Corruption should be improved at the national level. In addition to extradition and mutual legal assistance, the utility of other forms of cooperation, including the execution of foreign sentences, the transfer of sentenced persons, temporary surrender and joint investigations, was highlighted. To strengthen the effectiveness of international cooperation, participants emphasized the importance of technical assistance and capacity-building for central authorities and prosecutors, including on new and emerging forms of crime. They highlighted the importance of coordination among relevant authorities at the national level, and of cooperation platforms and networks of prosecutors at the regional and subregional levels. They also emphasized the need for effective international cooperation on requests related to cybercrime and digital evidence, as well as in cases of money-laundering and for the confiscation of criminal assets.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/17 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

International cooperation in criminal matters

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/193 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/193 without vote [agenda item 105].

International cooperation in criminal matters

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption, as well as the international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols, Conscious of the need to respect human dignity and to give effect to the rights conferred upon every person involved in criminal proceedings, in accordance with applicable international human rights instruments,

Concerned that transnational organized crime has diversified globally and represents a threat to health and safety and to the sustainable development of Member States,

Convinced that transnational organized crime, including in its new and emerging forms, creates significant challenges for Member States and that effective responses depend on strengthened international cooperation in criminal matters,

Emphasizing the importance of strengthened and collaborative efforts by all Member States to ensure the creation and promotion of strategies and mechanisms in all areas of international cooperation, especially in extradition, mutual legal assistance, transfer of sentenced persons and the confiscation of proceeds of crime,

Convinced that the establishment of bilateral and multilateral arrangements for mutual assistance in criminal matters can contribute to the development of more effective international cooperation to combat transnational crime,

Bearing in mind that the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice provide important tools for the development of international cooperation,

Recalling its resolutions 45/117 of 14 December 1990 on the Model Treaty on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters and 53/112 of 9 December 1998 on mutual assistance and international cooperation in criminal matters,

Recalling also its resolutions 45/116 of 14 December 1990 on the Model Treaty on Extradition and 52/88 of 12 December 1997 on international cooperation in criminal matters,

Recalling further its resolution 45/118 of 14 December 1990 on the Model Treaty on the Transfer of Proceedings in Criminal Matters,

Recalling the Model Bilateral Agreement on the Sharing of Confiscated Proceeds of Crime or Property,

Recalling also the adoption by the Seventh United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders of the Model Agreement on the Transfer of Foreign Prisoners and the recommendations on the treatment of foreign prisoners,

Taking into consideration the establishment of regional networks, including those established with the assistance of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, such as the Central American Network of Prosecutors against Organized Crime and the Network of West African Central Authorities and Prosecutors against Organized Crime, whose prime objective is to strengthen regional and international cooperation in criminal matters, facilitating cooperation in ongoing cases and the delivery of related legal and technical assistance,

Noting with satisfaction the contributions of the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice in promoting international cooperation by facilitating, inter alia, the exchange of experience in research, law and policy development and the identification of emerging trends and issues in crime prevention and criminal justice among States, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and individual experts representing various professions and disciplines,

1. Encourages Member States to promote and strengthen international cooperation to further develop the capacities of criminal justice systems, including through efforts to modernize and strengthen relevant legislation related to international cooperation in criminal matters, and the use of modern technology to overcome problems that hinder cooperation in a number of areas, such as witness testimony by videoconference, where applicable, and the exchange of digital evidence;

2. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols, and calls upon Member States, where necessary, to incorporate the provisions of those instruments into their national legislation;

3. Calls upon Member States to apply the principle of "extradite or prosecute" contained in bilateral and regional agreements, as well as in the 1988 Convention, the Organized Crime Convention and the Protocols thereto, the Convention against Corruption and the international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols;

4. Encourages Member States, in accordance with their national laws, to afford one another, where feasible, mutual legal assistance in civil and administrative proceedings in relation to the offences for which cooperation is afforded, including in accordance with article 43, paragraph 1, of the Convention against Corruption;

5. Invites Member States to conclude bilateral and regional agreements or arrangements on international cooperation in criminal matters, and in doing so to take into account the relevant provisions under the Convention against Corruption, the Organized Crime Convention and the Protocols thereto and the 1988 Convention;

6. Encourages Member States, relevant international organizations and institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network to strengthen cooperation and partnership with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, which serves as the secretariat to the Convention against Corruption, the Organized Crime Convention and the Protocols thereto and the 1988 Convention;

7. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to designate central authorities responsible for mutual legal assistance requests in accordance with article 18, paragraph 13, of the Organized Crime Convention, article 46, paragraph 13, of the Convention against Corruption and article 7, paragraph 8, of the 1988 Convention;

8. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance to Member States, upon request, in order to enhance the capacity of experts and staff of central authorities to effectively and expeditiously deal with mutual legal assistance requests;

9. Commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for its development of technical assistance tools to facilitate international cooperation in criminal matters, and invites Member States in appropriate cases to avail themselves of those tools;

10. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to support central authorities in strengthening communication channels and, as appropriate, in exchanging information at both the regional and the international levels, for the purposes of enhancing the effectiveness of cooperation in criminal matters in all its aspects, especially in dealing with requests for mutual legal assistance;

11. Encourages Member States to ensure, where possible, that administrative procedures facilitate cooperation in criminal matters relating to the offences falling within the scope of the Organized Crime Convention, the Convention against Corruption, the 1988 Convention and the international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols, in accordance with national legislation;

12. Also encourages Member States to review their national policies, legislation and practices with regard to mutual legal assistance, extradition, confiscation of the proceeds of crime, the transfer of sentenced persons and other forms of international cooperation in criminal matters for the purpose of simplifying and enhancing cooperation among Member States;

13. Further encourages Member States to give due consideration to the humanitarian and social dimensions of the transfer of sentenced persons, where legislation provides for such transfer, for the purpose of achieving the greatest possible cooperation in the transfer of foreign prisoners so that they serve the rest of their sentence in their own countries;

14. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in coordination and cooperation with Member States, to collect and disseminate information about the national legal requirements of Member States concerning international cooperation in criminal matters for the purpose of enhancing the knowledge and strengthening the capacity of practitioners so that they can better understand different legal systems and their requirements with regard to international cooperation while avoiding duplication of the work done in the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

15. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to support the establishment and functioning of regional networks of central authorities responsible for dealing with mutual legal assistance requests, so as to contribute to the exchange of experiences and strengthen knowledge-based expertise in the area of international cooperation in criminal matters and to help to establish international networks and partnerships among Member States;

16. Invites Member States to provide input to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime concerning the model treaties on international cooperation in criminal matters, in particular addressing the question of the necessity of updating or revising them and the prioritization of such updating or revising;

17. Also invites Member States, during the consideration of the agenda item of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to provide their views regarding the updating or revising mentioned in paragraph 16 above;

18. Recommends that the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, at its twenty-fourth session, take into account the input received from Member States and consider initiating a review of particular model treaties on international cooperation in criminal matters;

19. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes of the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

Strengthening technical cooperation

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 64/293 [YUN 2010, p. 1111], 68/187 [YUN 2013, p. 1252], 68/188 [ibid., p. 1243], 68/192 [ibid., p. 1249], 68/193 [ibid., p. 1231] and 68/195 [ibid., p. 1240], the Secretary-General, in June, submitted a report [A/69/94] on implementation of the mandates of the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme, with particular reference to the technical cooperation activities of UNODC. The report reviewed efforts undertaken by UNODC to support Member States in combating transnational organized crime; countering trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants; and strengthening measures against trafficking in firearms. It included a section on preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of proceeds of corruption, facilitating asset recovery and returning assets to legitimate owners, in particular to countries of origin, in accordance with the UN Convention against Corruption [YUN 2003, p. 1147]. The report provided information on progress made in the coordination of efforts against trafficking in persons and in the implementation by the UN system of the UN Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons [YUN 2010, p. 1111]. It also contained information on the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the UN development agenda beyond 2015, and on technical assistance for implementing the international conventions and protocols related to counter-terrorism. Further sections discussed technical cooperation activities in the forensic field; on data collection, research and trend analysis; and on a number of emerging policy issues. The Secretary-General concluded with recommendations aimed at enhancing the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/197 without vote [agenda item 105].

Strengthening the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 46/152 of 18 December 1991, 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 67/1 of 19 September 2012, 67/186, 67/189, 67/190 and 67/192 of 20 December 2012, 68/119 of 16 December 2013 and 68/185, 68/188, 68/189, 68/192 and 68/193 of 18 December 2013,

Reaffirming also its resolutions relating to the urgent need to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting and facilitating the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and all the international conventions and protocols against terrorism, Reaffirming further the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem adopted by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session,

Recalling the commitments undertaken by Member States in the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy adopted on 8 September 2006 and its successive biennial reviews,

Recalling also the importance of the measures to eliminate international terrorism adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 68/119 and the adoption, on 18 December 2013, of resolution 68/178 on the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism,

Reaffirming its resolutions addressing various aspects of violence against women and girls of all ages,

Recalling the resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Human Rights Council addressing various aspects of violence against women and girls of all ages,

Recalling also the agreed conclusions of the fifty-seventh session of the Commission on the Status of Women, which addressed the elimination and prevention of all forms of violence against women and girls, and reiterating the importance of crime prevention and criminal justice measures for the protection of women and girls,

Noting the significance of the United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice as a way to assist countries in strengthening their national crime prevention and criminal justice capacities to respond to all forms of violence against women and girls,

Reiterating its condemnation of all forms of violence against women and girls, and expressing deep concern about gender-related killing of women and girls,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, including resolution 68/191 of 18 December 2013, on taking action against gender-related killing of women and girls, and recognizing the key role of the criminal justice system in preventing and responding to gender-related killing of women and girls, including by ending impunity for such crimes,

Emphasizing the relevance of international instruments and United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice related to the treatment of prisoners, in particular women and juveniles,

Recalling its resolution 65/229 of 21 December 2010 on the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules), and in this regard encouraging the efforts of Member States to implement the Bangkok Rules,

Recalling also its resolution 68/190 of 18 December 2013, concerning the updating of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, and noting the progress made during the third meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, held in Vienna from 25 to 28 March 2014,

Recalling further its resolution 68/156 of 18 December 2013, in which it reaffirmed that no one shall be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Recalling its resolution 67/184 of 20 December 2012 on the follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha from 12 to 19 April 2015, dedicated to “Integrating crime prevention and criminal justice into the wider United Nations agenda to address social and economic challenges and to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, and public participation”, and noting the progress made thus far in the preparation of that Congress,

Recalling also its resolution 66/177 of 19 December 2011 on strengthening international cooperation in combating the harmful effects of illicit financial flows resulting from criminal activities, in which it urged States parties to the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption to apply fully the provisions of those Conventions, in particular measures to prevent and combat money-laundering, including by criminalizing the laundering of proceeds of transnational organized crime and corruption, as well as measures to enhance national confiscation regimes and international cooperation, including in asset recovery,

Taking into consideration all relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions, in particular all those relating to the strengthening of international cooperation, including resolution 2014/23 of 16 July 2014 on strengthening international cooperation in addressing the smuggling of migrants, as well as the technical assistance and advisory services of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the fields of crime prevention and criminal justice, promotion and reinforcement of the rule of law and reform of criminal justice institutions, including with regard to the implementation of technical assistance,

Concerned at the growing involvement of organized criminal groups in all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences,

Recalling its resolutions 66/180 of 19 December 2011 on strengthening the response to trafficking in cultural property, and 67/80 of 12 December 2012 on the return or restitution of cultural property to the countries of origin, in which it urged Member States and relevant institutions to reinforce and fully implement mechanisms to strengthen international cooperation, including mutual legal assistance, in order to combat all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, such as the theft, looting, damage, removal, pillage and destruction of such property, and to facilitate the recovery and the return of stolen and looted cultural property, and its resolution 68/186 of 18 December 2013 on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to protect cultural property, especially with regard to its trafficking,

Underlining the importance of the further progress made in this field, and welcoming the adoption by the General Assembly of the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences through Economic and Social Council resolution 2014/20 of 16 July 2014 as recommended by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-third session, and the establishment of a technical background document to assist in the implementation of the Guidelines through the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, which will support the implementation of resolutions 67/80, 68/186 and 69/196 of 18 December 2014 and facilitate operational cooperation against all forms of trafficking in cultural property, as well as the request to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to provide practical assistance in the implementation of the Guidelines and to facilitate cooperation in this area,

Reaffirming the need for promoting increased ratification or accession to and full and effective implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, recalling in this regard all relevant resolutions, including resolution 64/293 of 30 July 2010 on the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons and resolution 68/192 of 18 December 2013 on improving the coordination of efforts against trafficking in persons, and welcoming the work of the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children,

Underlining that, although the crime of smuggling of migrants may share, in some cases, some common features with the crime of trafficking in persons, Member States need to recognize that they are distinct crimes and require separate and complementary legal, operational and policy responses, and recalling further its resolution 68/179 of 18 December 2013, in which it called upon all Member States to protect and assist migrants, and Economic and Social Council resolution 2014/23, recommended by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-third session,

Recalling Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolutions 22/7 on strengthening international cooperation to combat cybercrime and 22/8 on promoting technical assistance and capacity-building to strengthen national measures and international cooperation against cybercrime, both of 26 April 2013,

Concerned at the growing trend of cybercrime and the misuse of information and telecommunications technologies in multiple forms of crime,

Noting the establishment by the Secretary-General of the United Nations system task force on transnational organized crime and drug trafficking for the purpose of developing an effective and comprehensive approach to transnational organized crime and drug trafficking within the United Nations system, and reaffirming the crucial role of Member States in this regard, as reflected in the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing its grave concern about the negative effects of transnational organized crime, including smuggling of and trafficking in persons, narcotic drugs and small arms and light weapons, as well as illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, on development, peace, stability and security and human rights, and at the increasing vulnerability of States to such crime,

Convinced that the rule of law and development are strongly interrelated and mutually reinforcing, and that the advancement of the rule of law at the national and international levels, including through crime prevention and criminal justice mechanisms, is essential for sustained and inclusive economic growth and sustainable development and the full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development, all of which in turn reinforce the rule of law,

Stressing the importance of strengthened international cooperation, based on the principles of shared responsibility and in accordance with international law, to dismantle illicit networks and counter the world drug problem and transnational organized crime, including money-laundering, trafficking in persons, trafficking in arms and other forms of organized crime, all of which threaten national security and undermine sustainable development and the rule of law,

Concerned by the serious challenges and threats posed by trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, and concerned also about its links with terrorism and other forms of transnational organized crime, including drug trafficking,

Noting international efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in conventional arms, in particular in small arms and light weapons, as demonstrated by the adoption in 2001 of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and the entry into force in 2005 of the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the forthcoming entry into force of the Arms Trade Treaty on 24 December 2014,

Noting with appreciation the activities carried out, upon request, by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, through its Global Firearms Programme, in the areas of legislative and technical assistance, capacity-building, awareness-raising and research and analysis,

Expressing concern at the use of information and telecommunications technologies to abuse and exploit children,

Convinced of the importance of preventing youth crime, supporting the rehabilitation of young offenders and their reintegration into society, protecting child victims and witnesses, including efforts to prevent their revictimization, and addressing the needs of children of prisoners, and stressing that such responses should take into account the human rights and best interests of children and young people, as called for in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto, where applicable, and in other relevant United Nations standards and norms in juvenile justice, where appropriate,

Concerned about the growing degree of penetration of criminal organizations and their financial and economic resources into the economy,

Expressing concern at the involvement of organized criminal groups, as well as the substantial increase in the volume, rate of transnational occurrence and range of criminal offences related to trafficking in precious metals and stones in some parts of the world and the potential use of trafficking in precious metals and stones as a source of funding for organized crime, other relevant criminal activities and terrorism,

Deeply concerned about the connections, in some cases, between some forms of transnational organized crime and terrorism, and emphasizing the need to enhance cooperation at the national, subregional, regional and international levels in order to strengthen responses to this evolving challenge,

Recognizing that countering transnational organized crime and terrorism is a common and shared responsibility, and stressing the need to work collectively to prevent and combat transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Emphasizing that transnational organized crime must be addressed with full respect for the principle of the sovereignty of States and in accordance with the rule of law as part of a comprehensive response to promote durable solutions through the promotion of human rights and more equitable socioeconomic conditions,

Expressing deep concern about environmental crimes, including trafficking in endangered and, where applicable, protected species of wild fauna and flora, and emphasizing the need to combat such crimes by strengthening international cooperation, capacity-building, criminal justice responses and law enforcement efforts,

Emphasizing that coordinated action is critical to eliminate, prevent and combat corruption and disrupt the illicit networks that drive and enable trafficking in wildlife and forest products, including timber and timber products,

Encouraging Member States to develop and implement, as appropriate, comprehensive crime prevention policies, national and local strategies and action plans based on an understanding of the multiple factors that contribute to crime and to address such factors in a holistic manner, in close cooperation with all stakeholders, including civil society,

Stressing that social development should be an integral element of strategies to foster crime prevention and economic development in all States,

Recognizing the need to maintain a balance in the technical cooperation capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime between all relevant priorities identified by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary bodies,

Recognizing also that, thanks to their broad membership and wide scope of application, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption offer an important basis for international cooperation, inter alia, for extradition, mutual legal assistance and confiscation and asset recovery, and provide an effective mechanism that should be further utilized and implemented,

Mindful of the need to ensure universal adherence to and full implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, and urging States parties to make full and effective use of these instruments,

Noting the important contribution that public-private sector cooperation can make in efforts to prevent and combat criminal activities, such as transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism, in the tourism sector,

Recognizing the universal importance of good governance and the fight against corruption, and calling for zero tolerance for corruption in all its forms, including bribery, as well as the laundering of proceeds of corruption and other forms of economic crime,

Recalling the United Nations Convention against Corruption, which is the most comprehensive and universal instrument on corruption, and recognizing the need to continue to promote ratification of or accession to the Convention and its full implementation,

Welcoming the adoption by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime of a regional approach to programming, based on continuing consultations and partnerships at the national and regional levels, particularly on its implementation, and focused on ensuring that the Office responds in a sustainable and coherent manner to the priorities of Member States,

Recognizing the general progress made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the delivery of advisory services and assistance to requesting Member States in the areas of crime prevention and criminal justice reform, corruption, organized crime, money-laundering, terrorism, kidnapping, smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, including the support and protection, as appropriate, of victims, their families and witnesses, as well as drug trafficking and international cooperation, with special emphasis on extradition and mutual legal assistance and the international transfer of sentenced persons,

Reiterating its concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to resolutions 64/293, 68/187, 68/188, 68/192, 68/193 and 68/195;

2. Reaffirms that the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols Thereto represent the most important tools of the international community for fighting transnational organized crime;

3. Notes with appreciation that the number of States parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime has reached 183, which is a significant indication of the commitment shown by the international community to combating transnational organized crime;

4. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the international conventions and protocols related to terrorism, and urges States parties to those conventions and protocols to make efforts towards their full implementation;

5. Recalls article 32 of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and General Assembly resolution 68/193, in which, inter alia, the need for the establishment of a mechanism to review the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto by States parties was reiterated, and underlines that the review of the implementation of the Convention is an ongoing and gradual process and that it is necessary to explore all options regarding the establishment of a mechanism to assist the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime in the review of the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and invites Member States to continue the dialogue in this regard;

6. Notes the progress made during the third meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, held in Vienna from 25 to 28 March 2014, and requests Member States to support the process of revision of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners in line with General Assembly resolution 65/230 of 21 December 2010, and to strengthen all efforts to address the issue of prison overcrowding;

7. Notes with appreciation the work of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime and responses to it by Member States, the international community and the private sector, including the exchange of information on national legislation, best practices, technical assistance and international cooperation, with a view to examining options to strengthen existing and to propose new national and international, legal or other responses to cybercrime, and encourages the expert group to enhance its efforts to complete its work and to present the outcome of the study to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in due course;

8. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme in promoting effective action to strengthen international cooperation in crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the fulfilment of its mandate in crime prevention and criminal justice, including providing to Member States, upon request and as a matter of high priority, technical cooperation, advisory services and other forms of assistance, and coordinating with and complementing the work of all relevant and competent United Nations bodies and offices;

9. Urges Member States to be represented at the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at the highest possible level, and encourages States to continue their preparations for the Congress with a view to making focused and productive contributions to the discussions and to promoting the participation of United Nations organs and related agencies, other intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations, as well as individual experts and consultants, in accordance with relevant resolutions and rules of procedure;

10. Underscores that respect for and promotion of crime prevention and criminal justice as well as of the rule of law should be given due consideration in relation to the post-2015 development agenda;

11. Recommends that Member States, as appropriate to their national contexts, adopt a comprehensive and integrated approach to crime prevention and criminal justice reform, based on baseline assessments and data collection and focusing on all sectors of the justice system, and develop crime prevention policies, strategies and programmes, including ones that focus on early prevention by using multidisciplinary and participatory approaches, in close cooperation with all stakeholders, including civil society, and requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance, upon request, to Member States for this purpose;

12. Encourages all States to have national and local action plans for crime prevention in order to take into account, in a comprehensive, integrated and participatory manner, inter alia, factors that place certain populations and places at higher risk of victimization and/or of offending and to ensure that such plans are based on the best available evidence and good practices, stresses that crime prevention should be considered an integral element of strategies to foster social and economic development in all States, and in this regard welcomes Economic and Social Council resolution 2014/21 of 16 July 2014 on strengthening social policies as a tool for crime prevention;

13. Calls upon Member States to strengthen their efforts to cooperate, as appropriate, at the bilateral, subregional, regional and international levels to counter transnational organized crime effectively;

14. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance its efforts, within existing resources and within its mandate, in providing technical assistance and advisory services for the implementation of its regional and subregional programmes in a coordinated manner with relevant Member States and regional and subregional organizations;

15. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide, within its mandate, technical assistance to Member States, upon their request, in the areas of crime prevention and criminal justice, with a view to strengthening the capacity of national criminal justice systems to investigate, prosecute and punish all forms of crime, while protecting the human rights and fundamental freedoms of defendants, as well as the legitimate interests of victims and witnesses, and to ensure access to effective legal aid in criminal justice systems;

16. Encourages Member States to strengthen their efforts in combating cybercrime and all forms of criminal abuse of information and telecommunications technologies and to enhance international cooperation in this regard;

17. Emphasizes the importance of protecting persons in vulnerable groups or situations, and in that regard expresses its concern about the increase in the activities of transnational and national organized criminal groups and others who profit from crimes against migrants, especially women and children, without regard for dangerous and inhumane conditions and in flagrant violation of national laws and international law;

18. Calls upon Member States to reinforce international cooperation for preventing and combating the smuggling of migrants and for the prosecution of smugglers, in accordance, as appropriate, with article 6 of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and with national laws and legislation, while effectively protecting the rights and respecting the dignity of smuggled migrants and internationally recognized principles of non-discrimination and other applicable obligations under relevant international law, taking into account the special needs of women, children, especially when unaccompanied, and persons with disabilities and older persons, and in this regard calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its technical assistance to Member States in accordance with the above-mentioned Protocol;

19. Encourages Member States to ensure that, in investigating and prosecuting the smuggling of migrants, the concurrent undertaking of financial investigations is considered, with a view to tracing, freezing and confiscating proceeds acquired through that crime, and to consider the smuggling of migrants to be a predicate offence of money-laundering;

20. Emphasizes the importance of preventing and combating all forms of trafficking in persons, and in this regard expresses its concern about the activities of transnational and national organized criminal groups and others who profit from such crimes, including for the purpose of organ removal, and calls upon Member States to strengthen national efforts to combat all forms of trafficking in persons and to protect and assist the victims of trafficking in accordance with all relevant legal obligations and in collaboration with international organizations, civil society and the private sector;

21. Invites Member States to strengthen the crime prevention and criminal justice response to the gender-related killing of women and girls, in particular measures to support the capacity of Member States to prevent, investigate, prosecute and punish all forms of such crime;

22. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide within its mandate technical assistance to Member States, upon their request, to combat money-laundering and the financing of terrorism through the Global Programme against Money-Laundering, Proceeds of Crime and the Financing of Terrorism, in accordance with United Nations-related instruments and international standards, including, where applicable, standards and relevant initiatives of regional, interregional and multilateral organizations and intergovernmental bodies against money-laundering, inter alia and as appropriate, the Financial Action Task Force, in accordance with national legislation;

23. Urges Member States to strengthen bilateral, regional and international cooperation to enable the return of assets illicitly acquired from corruption to the countries of origin, upon their request, in accordance with the provisions of the United Nations Convention against Corruption for asset recovery, in particular chapter V, requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within its existing mandate, to continue to provide assistance to bilateral, regional and international efforts for that purpose, and also urges Member States to combat and penalize corruption, as well as the laundering of its proceeds;

24. Welcomes the progress achieved by the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption in the implementation of their respective mandates, and calls upon States parties to give full effect to the resolutions adopted by those bodies;

25. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to foster international and regional cooperation, including by facilitating the development of regional networks active in the field of legal and law enforcement cooperation in the fight against transnational organized crime, where appropriate, and by promoting cooperation among all such networks, including by providing technical assistance where it is required, recognizing the efforts made by the Office to establish and assist such networks;

26. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to increase collaboration with intergovernmental, international and regional organizations that have transnational organized crime mandates, as appropriate, in order to share best practices, foster cooperation and take advantage of their unique and comparative advantage;

27. Recognizes the efforts made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to assist Member States in developing their abilities and strengthening their capacity to prevent and combat kidnapping, and requests the Office to continue to provide technical assistance with a view to fostering international cooperation, in particular mutual legal assistance, aimed at countering effectively this growing serious crime;

28. Draws attention to the emerging policy issues identified in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the mandates of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, with particular reference to the technical cooperation activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, namely, piracy, cybercrime, the use of new information technologies to abuse and exploit children, trafficking in cultural property, illicit financial flows, environmental crime, including illicit trafficking in endangered species of wild fauna and flora, as well as identity-related crime, and invites the Office to explore, within its mandate, ways and means of addressing those issues, bearing in mind Economic and Social Council resolution 2012/12 of 26 July 2012 on the strategy for the period 2012–2015 for the Office;

29. Invites Member States and requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within its existing mandate, to continue to strengthen the regular collection, analysis and dissemination of accurate, reliable and comparable data and information, including, as appropriate, data disaggregated by sex, age and other relevant criteria, and strongly encourages Member States to share such data and information with the Office;

30. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to develop, in close cooperation with Member States, technical and methodological tools and trend analyses and studies to enhance knowledge on crime trends and support Member States in designing appropriate responses in specific areas of crime, in particular in their transnational dimension, taking into account the need to make the best possible use of existing resources;

31. Urges Member States and relevant international organizations to develop national and regional strategies, as appropriate, and other necessary measures, in cooperation with the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, to address effectively transnational organized crime, including drug trafficking, trafficking in persons, smuggling of migrants and illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, as well as corruption and terrorism;

32. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to assist Member States, upon request, in combating illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition and to support them in their efforts to address the links with other forms of transnational organized crime, through, inter alia, legislative assistance, technical support and enhanced data collection and analysis;

33. Encourages Member States to enhance the effectiveness of countering criminal threats to the tourism sector, including terrorist threats through, when appropriate, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other relevant international organizations, in cooperation with the World Tourism Organization and the private sector;

34. Urges States parties to make effective use of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime for broad cooperation in preventing and combating all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, especially in returning such proceeds of crime or property to their legitimate owners, in accordance with article 14, paragraph 2, of the Convention, and invites States parties to exchange information on all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property and related offences, in accordance with their national laws, and to coordinate administrative and other measures taken, as appropriate, for the prevention, early detection and punishment of such offences, also reaffirming in this regard the importance of the International Guidelines for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Responses with Respect to Trafficking in Cultural Property and Other Related Offences as adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 69/196, by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2014/20 and by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, and other related documents adopted on this item by the Commission at its twenty-third session;

35. Urges Member States to introduce effective national and international measures to prevent and combat illicit trafficking in cultural property, including publicizing legislation, international guidelines and related technical background documents, and offering special training for police, customs and border services, and to consider such trafficking a serious crime, as defined in the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

36. Encourages Member States to make trafficking in protected species of wild fauna and flora involving organized criminal groups a serious crime, as defined in article 2, paragraph (b), of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, in order to ensure that adequate and effective means of international cooperation can be afforded in the investigation and prosecution of those engaged in trafficking in protected species of wild fauna and flora;

37. Strongly encourages Member States to take appropriate measures, consistent with their domestic legislation and legal frameworks, to strengthen law enforcement and related efforts to combat individuals and groups, including organized criminal groups, operating within their borders, with a view to preventing, combating and eradicating international trafficking in wildlife, forest products, including timber, and other forest biological resources harvested in contravention of national laws and relevant international instruments;

38. Calls upon Member States to take appropriate and effective measures to prevent and combat trafficking in precious metals and stones by organized criminal groups, including, where appropriate, the adoption and effective implementation of the necessary legislation for the prevention, investigation and prosecution of illicit trafficking in precious metals and stones;

39. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and its regional offices in building capacity at the local level in the fight against transnational organized crime and drug trafficking, and urges the Office to consider regional vulnerabilities, projects and impact in the fight against transnational organized crime, in particular in developing countries, when deciding to close and allocate offices, with a view to maintaining an effective level of support to national and regional efforts in those areas;

40. Encourages Member States to continue to support the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in providing targeted technical assistance, within its existing mandate, to enhance the capacity of affected States, upon their request, to combat piracy and other forms of crime committed at sea, including by assisting Member States in creating an effective law enforcement response and strengthening their judicial capacity;

41. Encourages States parties to continue to provide full support to the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption and their subsidiary bodies, including providing information to the conferences of the parties to the conventions regarding compliance with the treaties;

42. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with adequate resources to promote, in an effective manner, the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 and the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and to discharge its functions as the secretariat of the conferences of the parties to the conventions, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as well as the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice, in accordance with its mandate;

43. Reiterates its request to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance its technical assistance to Member States, upon request, to strengthen international cooperation in preventing and combating terrorism through the facilitation of the ratification and implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism, in close consultation with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism (the Counter-Terrorism Committee) and its Executive Directorate, as well as to continue to contribute to the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, and invites Member States to provide the Office with appropriate resources for its mandate;

44. Requests, furthermore, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance to Member States, upon request, to strengthen the rule of law, taking also into account the work undertaken by the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group of the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies;

45. Encourages Member States to take relevant measures, as appropriate to their national contexts, to ensure the diffusion, use and application of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, including the consideration and, where they deem it necessary, dissemination of existing manuals and handbooks developed and published by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

46. Urges States parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption to continue to provide full support to the review mechanism adopted by the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention;

47. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in collaboration and close consultation with Member States and within existing resources, to continue to support the enhancement of capacity and skills in the field of forensic sciences, including the setting of standards, and the development of technical assistance material for training, such as manuals, compilations of useful practices and guidelines and scientific and forensic reference material, for law enforcement officials and prosecution authorities, and to promote and facilitate the establishment and sustainability of regional networks of forensic science providers in order to enhance their expertise and capacity to prevent and combat transnational organized crime;

48. Reiterates the importance of providing the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme with sufficient, stable and predictable funding for the full implementation of its mandates, in conformity with the high priority accorded to it and in accordance with the increasing demand for its services, in particular with regard to the provision of increased assistance to developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries emerging from conflict, in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice reform;

49. Urges all Member States to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, in particular general-purpose contributions, so as to enable it to continue, expand, improve and strengthen, within its mandates, its operational and technical cooperation activities;

50. Expresses concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, emphasizes the need to provide the Office with adequate, predictable and stable resources and to ensure their cost-effective utilization, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report, within existing reporting obligations, on the financial situation of the Office and to continue to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandates fully and effectively;

51. Invites States and other interested parties to make further voluntary contributions to the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, and the United Nations Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery;

52. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the implementation of the mandates of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, reflecting also emerging policy issues and possible responses;

53. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in the report referred to in paragraph 52 above information on the status of ratifications of or accessions to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto.

Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme Network

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 46/152 [YUN 1991, p. 661], and Economic and Social Council resolutions 1992/22 [YUN 1992, p. 842], 1994/21 [YUN 1994, p. 1174] and 1999/23 [YUN 1999, p. 1054], the Secretary-General in February [E/CN.15/2014/13] reported to CCPCJ on activities carried out in 2013 by the institutes comprising the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, which included the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI); 15 regional and affiliated institutes; and the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme.

UN Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute

In a March note [E/CN.15/2014/18 & Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted to CCPCJ the report of the UNICRI Board of Trustees, which contained information on the activities of the Institute. The Institute's activities focused on countering the threat of organized crime to security and development; increasing the efficiency of criminal justice systems for the protection of vulnerable groups; promoting international criminal law and practice; sharing best practices, building capacity to promote human rights and improving access to services; security governance and countering the appeal of terrorism; training and advanced education to build capacity in crime prevention and criminal justice. The report also considered risk assessment and the management of the Institute.

On 15 May [E/2014/30 (dec. 23/1)], CCPCJ decided to transmit the report of the UNICRI Board of Trustees to the Economic and Social Council. On 6 June [E/2014/85], the report of the Board of Trustees was transmitted to the Council. On 16 July, by decision 2014/232, the Council took note of the report.

Also on 16 July, by decision 2014/231, the Council endorsed the reappointment of Stuart Page (Australia) and the appointments of Carlos Castresana (Spain), Mohammed Hanzab (Qatar) and Joel Antonio Hernández García (Mexico) to the UNICRI Board of Trustees.

UN African crime prevention institute

In response to General Assembly resolution 68/194 [YUN 2013, p. 1237], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/69/92] on the activities carried out by the Uganda-based United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, which described the challenges posed by transnational organized crime situation in Africa and the efforts undertaken by African countries in responding to them. The report highlighted the value of evidence-based interventions in addressing the challenges encountered by Governments in fighting crime, as well as the need for regional and international cooperation. It underscored the severity of problems associated with the activities of international organized criminal syndicates and the increasing use of modern information technologies for the commission of crimes. It also stressed the importance of international technical assistance and support for building capacity to fight crime in Africa, and the need for the harmonization of national laws and policies and the exchange of best practices. The report described the measures relevant to the funding of the Institute's programmes—aimed at reducing the impact of crime on development—and outlined proposals for strengthening the Institute's capacity.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/198 without vote [agenda item 105].

United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 68/194 of 18 December 2013 and all other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind that weaknesses in crime prevention lead to subsequent difficulties at the level of crime control mechanisms, and bearing in mind also the urgent need to establish effective crime prevention strategies for Africa, as well as the importance of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary at the regional and subregional levels,

Aware of the devastating impact of new and more dynamic crime trends on the national economies of African States, such as the high levels of transnational organized crime being recorded in Africa, including the utilization of digital technology to commit all types of cybercrime, and aware also of illicit trafficking in cultural property, drugs, precious metals, rhinoceros horns and ivory, of piracy and money-laundering and of the fact that crime is a major obstacle to harmonious and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing that combating crime is a collective endeavour to meet the global challenge of organized crime and that investment of necessary resources in crime prevention is important to that aim and contributes to sustainable development,

Noting with concern that in most African countries the existing criminal justice system does not have sufficiently skilled personnel and adequate infrastructure and is therefore ill-equipped to manage the emergence of new crime trends, and acknowledging the challenges that Africa faces in litigation processes and the management of correctional institutions,

Recognizing that the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders is a focal point for all professional efforts aimed at promoting the active cooperation and collaboration of Governments, academics, institutions and scientific and professional organizations and experts in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Bearing in mind the revised African Union Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention (2013–2017), aimed at encouraging Member States to participate in and own the regional initiatives for effective crime prevention and good governance and strengthened justice administration,

Recognizing the importance of promoting sustainable development as a complement to crime prevention strategies,

Emphasizing the need to create necessary coalitions with all partners in the process of achieving effective crime prevention policies,

Welcoming the undertaking and conclusion of a preliminary diagnostic study by a consultant of the Economic Commission for Africa prior to the commencement of a full system-wide review process, including the significance of the Institute as a viable mechanism for promoting cooperation among the relevant entities to respond to the crime problem afflicting Africa,

Expressing concern over the continued absence of a director of the Institute, and noting the important role of such senior management positions in ensuring the normal functioning of the Institute,

Noting with concern that the financial situation of the Institute has greatly affected its capacity to deliver services to African Member States in an effective and comprehensive manner, and noting that one of the findings of the preliminary diagnostic study is that the Institute urgently needs to increase its income,

Acknowledging the Member States and organizations that have maintained their commitment to the fulfilment of their financial obligations,

1. Commends the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders for its efforts to promote, coordinate and carry out more activities within its core mandate, including regional technical cooperation related to crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa, despite the resource constraints under which it is operating;

2. Also commends the initiative of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in strengthening its working relationship with the Institute by supporting and involving the Institute in the implementation of a number of activities, including those contained in the revised African Union Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention (2013–2017), on strengthening the rule of law and criminal justice systems in Africa;

3. Reiterates the need to strengthen further the capacity of the Institute to support national mechanisms for crime prevention and criminal justice in African countries;

4. Also reiterates the benefits, in some cases, of the utilization of alternative remedial measures, where appropriate, applying standards of ethical conduct and using local traditions, counselling and other emerging correctional rehabilitation measures, consistent with the obligations of States under international law;

5. Notes the efforts of the Institute to establish contacts with organizations in those countries which are promoting crime prevention programmes and its maintenance of close links with regional and subregional political entities, such as the African Union Commission, the East African Community, the Commission of the Economic Community of West African States, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and the Southern African Development Community;

6. Encourages the Institute, in cooperation with relevant United Nations agencies, to take into account the various planning authorities in the region that focus attention on the coordination of activities that promote development based on sustainable agricultural production and preservation of the environment in developing its crime prevention strategies;

7. Urges the States members of the Institute to continue to make every possible effort to meet their obligations to the Institute;

8. Welcomes the undertaking and conclusion of a preliminary diagnostic study in accordance with the decision of the Governing Board of the Institute, at its eleventh ordinary session, held in Nairobi on 27 and 28 April 2011, to carry out a review of the Institute to ensure that it can fulfil its mandate and assume a more prominent role in dealing with existing crime;

9. Encourages the Institute, partner agencies and other stakeholders to expedite the review process;

10. Welcomes the introduction by the Institute of a cost-sharing initiative in its execution of various programmes with Member States, partners and United Nations entities;

11. Urges all Member States and non-governmental organizations and the international community to continue to adopt concrete practical measures to support the Institute in the development of the requisite capacity and in the implementation of its programmes and activities aimed at strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa;

12. Urges all States that have not already done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, as well as the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

13. Encourages African States that are not yet members of the Institute to consider becoming member States in order to strengthen the fight against crime and terrorism, which hamper individual and collective development efforts on the continent;

14. Commends the continued support provided by the Government of Uganda as host country, including resolving the issue of the ownership of the land on which the Institute is located and facilitating the Institute's collaboration with other stakeholders within Uganda and the region and with international partners;

15. Also commends the efforts of the Institute in implementing several programmes in the region, which have contributed, inter alia, to a growing set of coordinated remedial responses to crime on the basis of technical support in facilitating mutual assistance by law enforcement agencies and the emergence of regional jurisdictions;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts to mobilize all relevant entities of the United Nations system to provide the necessary financial and technical support to the Institute to enable it to fulfil its mandate, bearing in mind that the precarious financial situation of the Institute greatly undermines its capacity to deliver services effectively;

17. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize the financial resources necessary to maintain the Institute with the core Professional staff required to enable it to function effectively in the fulfilment of its mandated obligations;

18. Encourages the Institute to consider focusing on specific and general vulnerabilities of each programme country and to maximize the use of available initiatives to address crime problems with existing funds, as well as available capacity, by creating useful coalitions with regional and local institutions;

19. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to work closely with the Institute, and requests the Institute to provide the annual report on its activities to the Office as well as to the Economic Commission for Africa Conference of African Ministers of Finance, Planning and Economic Development;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to enhance the promotion of regional cooperation, coordination and collaboration in the fight against crime, especially in its transnational dimension, which cannot be dealt with adequately by national action alone;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue making concrete proposals, including for the provision of additional core Professional staff, to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Institute, and to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

International cooperation in combating transnational organized crime and corruption

In February [E/CN.15/2014/3], the Secretary-General reported to CCPCJ on international cooperation in combating transnational organized crime and corruption. The report complemented the report of the Conference of the Parties to the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime on its sixth session [YUN 2012, p. 1216] and the report of the Conference of the States Parties to the UN Convention against Corruption on its fifth session [YUN 2013, p. 1239], as well as the reports of the working groups established by those Conferences. It provided information on UNODC activities in the fight against transnational organized crime and corruption; international cooperation and technical assistance activities; the implementation of Commission resolution 22/3 [ibid.]; and the work of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the UN Convention against Corruption.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Commission remind Member States of the need to improve implementation of the Organized Crime Convention and its Protocols by expanding the knowledge base on transnational organized crime and prioritizing knowledge management on legislation and case law related to transnational organized crime; intensifying and systematizing the provision of legislative assistance on the Convention and its Protocols; and strengthening regional network cooperation. CCPCJ should consider urging Member States to ratify or accede to the Organized Crime Convention and its Protocols and to the Convention against Corruption, and provide financial and material contributions for the convening of working groups and workshops to assist in the implementation of both Conventions. It should call upon States to also make financial contributions in support of the Conferences and the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the Convention against Corruption.

Conventions

UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime

The United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by General Assembly resolution 55/25 [YUN 2000, p. 1048], and its three supplementary Protocols—the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children [ibid., p. 1063]; the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air [ibid., p. 1067]; and the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 55/255 [YUN 2001, p. 1036]—continued to attract adherence. As at 31 December, 183 States and the European Union (EU) were parties to the Convention, 165 States and the EU were parties to the Protocol on trafficking in persons, 140 States and the EU were parties to the Protocol on migrants, and 111 States and the EU were parties to the Protocol on firearms.

Conference of Parties. The Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, at its seventh session (Vienna, 6–10 October) [CTOC/COP/2014/13 & Add.1], adopted four resolutions on strengthening the implementation of the UN Convention and the Protocols thereto; the importance of the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition; implementation of the provisions on technical assistance of the Convention; and implementation of the Convention's international cooperation provisions. The Conference also adopted two decisions on the provisional agenda for its eighth (2015) session, and the organization of the work for that session.

Working Group meetings. Several Working Groups of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime held meetings in 2014. The Working Group of Government Experts on Technical Assistance, established by the second (2005) session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention [YUN 2005, p. 1224], held its eighth meeting (Vienna, 6–7 October) [CTOC/COP/WG.2/2014/4] and submitted recommendations to the Conference of the Parties for adoption. The Working Group on International Cooperation, established by the third (2006) session of the Conference [YUN 2007, p. 1134], held its fifth meeting (Vienna, 8–9 October) [CTOC/COP/WG.3/2014/4]. The Working Group on Firearms, established by the fifth (2010) session of the Conference [YUN 2010, p. 1110], held its second meeting (Vienna, 26–28 May) [CTOC/COP/WG.6/2014/4] and adopted recommendations.

UN Convention against Corruption

As at 31 December, 173 States and the EU were parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, adopted by the General Assembly in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1127].

Conference of Parties. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/195 [YUN 2013, p. 1240], the Secretary-General, in a June note [A/69/86], transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption on its fifth session (Panama City, Panama, 25–29 November 2013) [ibid., p. 1239].

On 18 December (decision 69/537), the General Assembly took note of that note.

The subsidiary bodies of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption held meetings in 2014. The Implementation Review Group, established by the third (2009) session of the Conference of States Parties [YUN 2009, p. 1096], held its fifth (Vienna, 2–6 June) [CAC/COSP/IRG/2014/11] and resumed fifth (13–15 October) [CAC/COSP/IRG/2014/11/Add.1] sessions. The Working Group on the Prevention of Corruption, established by the third (2009) session of the Conference of the States Parties [YUN 2009, p. 1096], held its fifth session (Vienna, 8–10 September) [CAC/COSP/WG.4/2014/5]. The Working Group on Asset Recovery, established by the first (2006) session of the Conference of the States Parties [YUN 2006, p. 1303], held its eighth session (Vienna, 11–12 September) [CAC/COSP/WG.2/2014/4]. The intergovernmental group of experts to enhance international cooperation under the United Nations Convention against Corruption, established on an open-ended basis by the fourth (2011) session of the Conference of the States Parties [YUN 2011, p. 1203], held its third session (Vienna, 9–10 October) [CAC/COSP/EG.1/2014/3].

Transfer of proceeds and asset recovery

The Secretary-General, in his June report [A/69/94] on implementation of the mandates of the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme (see p. 1416), discussed preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of proceeds of corruption, facilitating asset recovery and returning assets to legitimate owners, in particular to countries of origin, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption. The joint UNODC/World Bank Stolen Asset Recovery (STAR) Initiative presented a study on criminal settlements and their impact on asset recovery and provided support for existing networks of asset recovery practitioners and for the establishment of two regional networks—for the Asia-Pacific region and for East Africa. The Initiative also continued to provide targeted country-specific assistance. From 2011 to 2013, more than 1,500 practitioners were trained on asset recovery and 235 on case management, about 230 in specific case-related contexts. Sixty-two attended train-the-trainer workshops and 20 received hands-on training on case management. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly encourage Member States to afford each other the widest measure of cooperation and assistance for the return of assets.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/199 without vote [agenda item 105].

Preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of proceeds of corruption, facilitating asset recovery and returning such assets to legitimate owners, in particular to countries of origin, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/205 of 22 December 1999, 55/61 of 4 December 2000, 55/188 of 20 December 2000, 56/186 of 21 December 2001 and 57/244 of 20 December 2002, and recalling also its resolutions 58/205 of 23 December 2003, 59/242 of 22 December 2004, 60/207 of 22 December 2005, 61/209 of 20 December 2006, 62/202 of 19 December 2007, 63/226 of 19 December 2008, 64/237 of 24 December 2009, 65/169 of 20 December 2010, 67/189 and 67/192 of 20 December 2012 and 68/195 of 18 December 2013 and all relevant Human Rights Council resolutions, including resolution 23/9 of 13 June 2013,

Welcoming the entry into force on 14 December 2005 of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, which is the most comprehensive and universal instrument on corruption, and recognizing the need to continue to promote its ratification or accession thereto and its full implementation,

Stressing the need for States parties to the Convention to give full effect to the resolutions of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Bearing in mind the need to promote and strengthen measures to prevent and combat corruption more efficiently and effectively, that the return of assets is one of the main objectives, an integral part and a fundamental principle of the Convention, and recalling article 51 of the Convention, which obligates States parties to afford one another the widest measure of cooperation and assistance with regard to asset return,

Recognizing that fighting corruption at all levels and in all its forms is a priority and that corruption is a serious barrier to effective resource mobilization and allocation and diverts resources away from activities that are vital for poverty eradication and sustainable development,

Recognizing also that education plays a fundamental role in the fight against corruption, inasmuch as it makes corrupt behaviour socially unacceptable,

Reaffirming the importance of respect for human rights, the rule of law, the proper management of public affairs and democracy in the fight against corruption,

Realizing that the fight against corruption at all levels, including by facilitating international cooperation to achieve the purposes enshrined in the Convention, including on asset recovery and return, plays an important role in the promotion and protection of all human rights and in the process of creating an environment conducive to their full enjoyment and realization,

Recognizing that supportive national legal systems are essential in preventing and combating corrupt practices, facilitating asset recovery and returning the proceeds of corruption to legitimate owners,

Recalling that the purposes of the Convention, as set out in article 1, are to promote and strengthen measures to prevent and combat corruption more efficiently and effectively, to promote, facilitate and support international cooperation and technical assistance in the prevention of and fight against corruption, including in asset recovery, and to promote the integrity, accountability and proper management of public affairs and public property,

Welcoming the commitment of States parties to the Convention, and determined to give effect to the obligations set out in chapter V of the Convention in order to prevent, detect, deter and recover in a more effective manner the international transfer of proceeds of crime and to strengthen international cooperation in asset recovery,

Recognizing that those who engage in corrupt acts, whether natural or legal persons, consistent with domestic law and the requirements of the Convention, should be held accountable and prosecuted by their domestic authorities, and that all appropriate efforts should be made to conduct a financial investigation into assets illegally acquired by them and to recover such assets through domestic confiscation proceedings, international cooperation for purposes of confiscation or appropriate direct recovery measures,

Acknowledging that the fight against all forms of corruption requires comprehensive anti-corruption frameworks and strong institutions at all levels, including at the local and international levels, able to undertake efficient preventive and law enforcement measures in accordance with the Convention, in particular chapters II and III,

Recognizing that the success of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption depends on the full commitment and constructive engagement of all States parties to the Convention in a progressive and comprehensive process, and recalling in that regard resolution 3/1 of 13 November 2009 of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention, including the terms of reference of the Mechanism contained in the annex to that resolution, as well as decision 5/1 of 29 November 2013 of the Conference of the States Parties,

Noting with appreciation the significant number of States parties to the Convention that have been involved in the ongoing first review cycle process of the Mechanism, both as countries under review and as reviewing States, as well as the support provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in this regard,

Bearing in mind that the prevention and eradication of corruption is a responsibility of all States and that they must cooperate with one another, with the support and involvement of individuals and groups outside the public sector, such as civil society, non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations, if their efforts in this area are to be effective,

Reaffirming its concern about the laundering and transfer of stolen assets and proceeds of corruption, and stressing the need to address this concern in accordance with the Convention,

Noting the efforts made by all States parties to the Convention in tracing, freezing and recovering their stolen assets, and underlining the need to redouble efforts to assist in the recovery of those assets in order to preserve stability and sustainable development,

Noting also the work of other initiatives in asset recovery, such as the Arab Forum on Asset Recovery, and welcoming efforts to enhance cooperation between requesting and requested States,

Recognizing that States continue to face challenges in recovering assets owing to differences between legal systems, the complexity of multijurisdictional investigations and prosecutions, the limited implementation of effective domestic tools such as non-conviction-based forfeiture for asset recovery, as well as other administrative or civil procedures leading to confiscation, lack of familiarity with the mutual legal assistance procedures of other States and difficulties in identifying the flow of corruption proceeds, and noting the particular challenges posed in recovering the proceeds of corruption in cases involving individuals who are or have been entrusted with prominent public functions, as well as their family members and close associates,

Concerned about the difficulties, particularly the legal and practical difficulties, that both requested and requesting States face in asset recovery, taking into account the particular importance of the recovery of stolen assets for sustainable development and stability, and noting the difficulty of providing information establishing a link between proceeds of corruption in the requested State and the crime committed in the requesting State, which in many cases can be difficult to prove,

Recognizing the common difficulties experienced by States parties to the Convention in establishing a nexus between identified assets and the crime from which such assets are derived, and emphasizing the critical importance of effective domestic investigative efforts and international cooperation to overcome such difficulties,

Recognizing also the critical importance of effective international cooperation in efforts to combat corruption, particularly with respect to offences specified in the Convention with a transnational element, and encouraging continued cooperation by States parties, consistent with the requirements of the Convention, in all efforts to investigate and prosecute natural and legal persons, including the use of other legal mechanisms, where appropriate, for offences specified in the Convention and to recover assets related to such offences, consistent with chapter V of the Convention,

Calling upon all States parties to the Convention and, in particular, requested and requesting States, to cooperate to recover the proceeds of corruption and demonstrate strong commitment to ensure the return or disposal of such proceeds in accordance with article 57 of the Convention,

Noting the responsibility of requesting and requested States parties to cooperate to ensure that a greater proportion of the proceeds emanating from corruption are recovered, returned or otherwise disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the Convention,

Concerned that some persons accused of crimes of corruption have managed to escape justice and thus have eluded the legal consequences of their actions, and have been successful in hiding their assets,

Taking into account the need to hold corrupt officials accountable by depriving them of their stolen assets,

Acknowledging the vital importance of ensuring the independence and effectiveness of authorities charged with investigating and prosecuting crimes of corruption and of recovering the proceeds of such crimes by several means, such as establishing the necessary legal framework and allocating the necessary resources,

Acknowledging also the fundamental principles of due process of law in criminal proceedings and in civil or administrative proceedings to adjudicate property rights,

Reiterating its concern about the seriousness of problems and threats posed by corruption to the stability and security of societies, undermining the institutions and the values of democracy, ethical values and justice and jeopardizing sustainable development and the rule of law, in particular when an inadequate national and international response leads to impunity,

Concerned about the negative impact of widespread corruption on the enjoyment of human rights, recognizing that corruption constitutes one of the obstacles to the effective promotion and protection of human rights, as well as to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and other internationally agreed development goals, and recognizing also that corruption may disproportionately affect the most disadvantaged individuals of society,

Noting with appreciation the ongoing efforts by regional organizations and forums to strengthen cooperation in combating corruption, which aim, inter alia, to ensure openness and transparency, combat domestic and foreign bribery, tackle corruption in high-risk sectors, strengthen international cooperation and promote public integrity and transparency in the fight against corruption, which fuels illicit trade and insecurity and is a tremendous barrier to economic growth and the safety of citizens,

Noting the efforts of regional organizations and forums to combat corruption, including the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Course of Action on Fighting Corruption and Ensuring Transparency and the Santiago Commitment to Fight Corruption and Ensure Transparency, and the Group of 20 Anti-Corruption Action Plan, the Saint Petersburg Development Strategy, the non-binding Guiding Principles on Enforcement of the Foreign Bribery Offence, the Guiding Principles to Combat Solicitation, the Asset Recovery Principles, the asset recovery country profiles and the Asset Recovery Guides,

Noting also the Lausanne process initiative on practical guidelines for efficient asset recovery, which is being undertaken with a view to identifying good practices in effective and coordinated approaches to asset recovery for practitioners from requesting and requested States, with the support of interested States, implemented in close collaboration with the International Centre for Asset Recovery and with the support of the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative of the World Bank and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Condemns corruption at all levels and in all its forms, including bribery, as well as the laundering of proceeds of corruption and other forms of economic crime;
3. Expresses concern about the magnitude of corruption at all levels, including the scale of stolen assets and proceeds of corruption, and in this regard reiterates its commitment to preventing and combating corrupt practices at all levels, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption;
4. Welcomes the fact that 173 States parties have already ratified or acceded to the Convention, thus making it an instrument enjoying a status very close to universal adherence, and in this regard urges all Member States and competent regional economic integration organizations, within the limits of their competence, that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention as a matter of priority, and urges all States parties to take appropriate measures to ensure its full and effective implementation;

5. Notes with appreciation the panel discussion on the negative impact of corruption on the enjoyment of human rights held at the twenty-second session of the Human Rights Council;

6. Also notes with appreciation the work carried out under the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption and by the Implementation Review Group, and urges Member States to continue to support this work and make every possible effort to provide comprehensive information and adhere to the timelines for review as contained in the guidelines for governmental experts and the secretariat in the conduct of country reviews;

7. Welcomes the progress made in the first review cycle of the Mechanism and the efforts made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in support of the Mechanism, and encourages the use of the lessons learned during the first review cycle in order to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Mechanism, as well as the implementation of the Convention;

8. Encourages Member States to engage actively in the preparation of the review of chapter II, on prevention measures, and chapter V, on asset recovery, of the Convention in the second review cycle of the Mechanism;

9. Notes with appreciation the work of the Open-ended Intergovernmental Working Groups on Asset Recovery, on the Prevention of Corruption and on Review of the Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the open-ended intergovernmental expert meeting to enhance international cooperation under the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and encourages States parties to the Convention to support the work of all of these subsidiary bodies of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

10. Encourages all States parties to the Convention to renew their commitment to effective national action and international cooperation to give full effect to chapter V of the Convention and to contribute effectively to the recovery of the proceeds of corruption;

11. Urges Member States to combat and penalize corruption in all its forms, as well as the laundering of proceeds of corruption, to prevent the acquisition, transfer and laundering of proceeds of corruption and to work for the prompt recovery of such assets in accordance with the principles of the Convention, including chapter V;

12. Welcomes the decision of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention to call upon States parties to give particular and timely consideration to the execution of international mutual legal assistance requests that need urgent action, including those related to the States concerned in the Middle East and North Africa, as well as other requesting States, and to ensure that the competent authorities of requested States have adequate resources to execute requests, taking into account the particular importance of the recovery of these assets for sustainable development and stability;

13. Urges States parties that have yet to designate a central authority for international cooperation in accordance with the Convention to do so, and to appoint focal points for the purposes of international cooperation and mutual legal assistance in asset recovery, and, where appropriate, encourages States parties to make full use of the network of focal points of the Open-ended Intergovernmental Working Group on Asset Recovery to facilitate cooperation and the implementation of the Convention, as well as the Global Focal Point Network on Asset Recovery, supported by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime through the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative and by the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL);

14. Encourages States parties to the Convention to use and promote informal channels of communication, in particular prior to making formal requests for mutual legal assistance, by, inter alia, designating officials or institutions, as appropriate, with technical expertise in international cooperation in asset recovery to assist their counterparts in effectively meeting requirements for formal mutual legal assistance;

15. Urges States parties to the Convention to remove barriers to asset recovery, including by simplifying their legal procedures and preventing abuse of those procedures;

16. Encourages States parties to the Convention to give full effect to the resolutions, including those on asset recovery, of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention;

17. Urges States parties to the Convention to afford one another the widest possible cooperation and assistance in the identification and recovery of stolen assets and proceeds of corruption and to give particular and timely consideration to the execution of requests for international mutual legal assistance, in accordance with the Convention, and to afford one another the widest possible cooperation and assistance in the extradition of individuals accused of the predicate offences, in accordance with their obligations under the Convention, including article 44;

18. Also urges States parties to the Convention to ensure that procedures for international cooperation allow for the seizure and/or restraint of assets for a time period sufficient to preserve those assets in full, pending confiscation proceedings in another State, to ensure that there are adequate mechanisms in place to manage and preserve the value and condition of assets pending the conclusion of confiscation proceedings in another State, and to allow or expand cooperation in the enforcement of foreign judgements and restraint orders and confiscation judgements, including through awareness-raising for judicial authorities;

19. Further urges States parties to the Convention to take a proactive approach to international cooperation in asset recovery by making full use of the mechanisms provided for in chapter V of the Convention, including initiating requests for assistance, making spontaneous disclosures of information on proceeds of offences to other States parties and considering making requests for notifications, in accordance with article 52, paragraph 2 (b), of the Convention, and, where appropriate, implementing measures to permit the recognition of non-conviction-based forfeiture judgements;

20. Urges States parties to the Convention to ensure that reliable beneficial ownership information on companies is accessible onshore to law enforcement agencies and other relevant authorities, including, as appropriate, financial intelligence units and tax administrations, thus facilitating the investigation process and execution of requests;

21. Encourages States parties to the Convention to cooperate in order to implement the measures necessary to enable them to obtain reliable information on beneficial ownership of companies, legal structures or other complex legal mechanisms, including trusts and holdings, used to commit crimes of corruption or to hide and transfer proceeds;

22. Urges Member States, where appropriate and consistent with their national legal systems, to provide each other with the widest possible assistance in investigations of and proceedings in civil and administrative matters relating to corruption;

23. Encourages Member States to prevent and combat all forms of corruption by increasing transparency, integrity, accountability and efficiency in the public and private sectors, and recognizes in this regard the need to prevent impunity by prosecuting corrupt officials and those who corrupt them and to cooperate in their extradition, in accordance with the obligations under the Convention;

24. Stresses the need for transparency in financial institutions, invites Member States to work on the identification and tracing of financial flows linked to corruption, the freezing or seizing of assets derived from corruption and the return of such assets, in accordance with the Convention, and encourages the promotion of human and institutional capacity-building in that regard;

25. Urges States parties to the Convention to give timely consideration to mutual legal assistance requests relating to the identification, freezing, tracing and/or recovery of proceeds of corruption and to respond effectively to requests for exchange of information related to proceeds of crime, property, equipment or other instruments referred to in article 31 of the Convention situated in the territory of the requested State party, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention, including article 40;

26. Urges States, in accordance with the fundamental principles of their legal systems, to develop and implement or maintain effective, coordinated anti-corruption policies that promote the participation of society and reflect the principles of the rule of law, proper management of public affairs and public property, integrity, transparency and accountability;

27. Invites States parties to the Convention to recognize the importance of the involvement of young people and children as key actors in strengthening ethical behaviour, beginning with the identification and adoption of values, principles and actions that make it possible to build a fair and corruption-free society, in accordance with the Convention, and in this regard welcomes the adoption on 29 November 2013 of resolution 5/5 by the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention;

28. Welcomes the efforts of Member States that have enacted laws and taken other positive measures in the fight against corruption in all its forms, and in this regard encourages Member States that have not yet done so to enact such laws and to implement effective measures at the national level, in accordance with the Convention;

29. Reaffirms the need for Member States to take measures to prevent the transfer abroad and laundering of assets derived from corruption, including to prevent the financial institutions in both countries of origin and countries of destination from being used to transfer or receive illicit funds, as well as to assist in their recovery and to return such assets to the requesting State, in accordance with the Convention;

30. Calls upon Member States to continue to work with all stakeholders in international and domestic financial markets to deny safe haven to assets acquired illicitly by individuals engaged in corruption, to deny entry and safe haven to corrupt officials and those who corrupt them and to enhance international collaboration in the investigation and prosecution of corruption offences, as well as in the recovery of proceeds of corruption;

31. Urges all Member States to abide by the principles of proper management of public affairs and public property, fairness, responsibility and equality before the law and the need to safeguard integrity and to foster a culture of transparency, accountability and rejection of corruption, in accordance with the Convention;

32. Calls for further international cooperation, inter alia, through the United Nations system, in support of national, subregional and regional efforts to prevent and combat corrupt practices and the transfer and laundering of proceeds of corruption, in accordance with the principles of the Convention, and in this regard encourages close and enhanced coordination, cooperation and synergies between anti-corruption agencies, law enforcement agencies and financial intelligence units;

33. Stresses the need for further cooperation and coordination among the different international, regional and subregional organizations and initiatives mandated to prevent and combat corruption;

34. Urges States parties to the Convention to take appropriate measures, within their means and in accordance with fundamental principles of their national law, to promote the active participation of individuals and groups outside the public sector, such as civil society, non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations, in the prevention of and the fight against corruption and to raise public awareness regarding the existence, causes and gravity of and the threat posed by corruption;

35. Recalls article 63, paragraph 4 (c), of the Convention, in which it is stated, inter alia, that the Conference of the States Parties shall agree upon activities, procedures and methods of work to achieve the objectives set forth in paragraph 1 of that article, including by cooperating with relevant international and regional organizations and mechanisms and non-governmental organizations, and in this regard invites the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention to give due consideration to the implementation of the above-mentioned provision;

36. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with the resources necessary to enable it to promote, in an effective manner, the implementation of the Convention and to discharge its functions as the secretariat of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention, and also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the Convention is adequately funded, consistent with the resolution adopted by the Conference of the States Parties at its fourth session;

37. Reiterates its call upon the private sector, at both the international and the national levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, to remain fully engaged in the fight against corruption, notes in this context the role that the Global Compact can play in fighting corruption and promoting transparency, emphasizes the need for all relevant stakeholders, including within the United Nations system, as appropriate, to continue to promote corporate responsibility and accountability, and in this regard welcomes the adoption on 29 November 2013 of resolution 5/6 by the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention;

38. Recognizes the important role of business and public-private partnerships in promoting measures to fight corruption, especially measures that support the promotion of ethical business practices in interactions between government, business and other stakeholders;

39. Encourages Member States to implement and raise awareness regarding effective anti-corruption education programmes;

40. Urges the international community to provide, inter alia, technical assistance to support national efforts to strengthen human and institutional capacity aimed at preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of proceeds of corruption and to facilitate asset recovery and the return and disposal of such proceeds in accordance with the Convention, and to support national efforts in formulating strategies for mainstreaming and promoting anti-corruption efforts, transparency and integrity in both the public and the private sectors;

41. Urges States parties and signatories to the Convention to strengthen the capacity of legislators, law enforcement officials, judges and prosecutors to combat corruption and to deal with matters relating to asset recovery, including in the areas of mutual legal assistance, confiscation, criminal confiscation and, where appropriate, non-conviction-based forfeiture, in accordance with national law and the Convention, and civil proceedings, and to give the highest consideration to providing technical assistance in those fields, upon request;

42. Encourages Member States to exchange and share with each other, including through regional and international organizations, as appropriate, information on lessons learned and good practices, as well as information related to technical assistance activities and initiatives in order to strengthen international efforts to prevent and combat corruption;

43. Encourages States parties to the Convention to provide regular updates and to expand, where appropriate, the information contained in the relevant databases of knowledge on asset recovery, such as Tools and Resources for Anti-Corruption Knowledge and Asset Recovery Watch, taking into consideration constraints on information-sharing based on confidentiality requirements;

44. Encourages the collection and systematization of good practices and tools in the cooperation for asset recovery, including the use and expansion of secure information-sharing tools with a view to enhancing early and spontaneous information exchange insofar as possible and in accordance with the Convention;

45. Also encourages the collection of substantial information duly researched and regularly published by recognized organizations and representatives of civil society;

46. Encourages States parties to the Convention to make widely available information on their legal frameworks and procedures with regard to asset recovery under chapter V of the Convention, in a practical guide or other format designed to facilitate use by other States, and to consider, where advisable, the publication of that information in other languages;

47. Calls upon requesting and requested States with practical experience in asset recovery to develop, as appropriate, in cooperation with interested States and providers of technical assistance, non-binding practical guidelines, such as a step-by-step guide, for efficient asset recovery, with a view to enhancing effective approaches to asset recovery based on the lessons learned from past cases, being mindful to seek to add value by building upon existing work in this area;

48. Encourages States parties to the Convention to share approaches and practical experience for the return of assets, consistent with article 57 of the Convention, for further dissemination through the Secretariat;

49. Encourages requesting States to ensure that adequate national investigative procedures have been initiated and substantiated for the purpose of presenting mutual legal assistance requests, and in this context encourages requested States to provide, when appropriate, information on legal frameworks and procedures to the requesting State;

50. Encourages States parties to the Convention to compile and provide information in accordance with article 52 of the Convention and to take other actions that help to establish the linkage between assets and offences under the Convention;

51. Notes with appreciation the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the World Bank and its cooperation with relevant partners, including the International Centre for Asset Recovery and INTERPOL, and encourages coordination among existing initiatives;

52. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide, in collaboration with the World Bank through the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative and in coordination with other relevant stakeholders, upon request, technical assistance for the implementation of chapter V of the Convention, including by providing direct expertise on policy or capacity-building through the Office's thematic programme on action against corruption, economic fraud and identity-related crime and, where appropriate, regional programmes, using its range of technical assistance tools;

53. Notes the work of other initiatives in the field of asset recovery, such as the Arab Forum on Asset Recovery, and welcomes their efforts to enhance cooperation between requesting and requested States;

54. Welcomes the work of the International Anti-Corruption Academy, a centre of excellence for education, training and academic research in the anti-corruption field, including in the area of asset recovery, and looks forward to its continued efforts in this regard to promote the goals and implementation of the Convention;

55. Also welcomes the holding of the fifth session of the Conference of States Parties to the Convention, in Panama City from 25 to 29 November 2013, and its outcomes and contributions to promoting the implementation of the Convention, and reiterates its appreciation for the offer by the Government of the Russian Federation to host the sixth session of the Conference of the States Parties in 2015;

56. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing reporting obligations, to include in his report to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session under the item on crime prevention and criminal justice an analytical section entitled "Preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of proceeds of corruption, facilitating asset recovery and returning such assets to legitimate owners, in particular to countries of origin, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption”, and also requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Assembly the report of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on its sixth session.

Strengthening the rule of law

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/188 [YUN 2013, p. 1243], the Secretary-General, in his June report [A/69/94] on implementation of the mandates of the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme, discussed measures taken to strengthen the rule of law and promote its inclusion into the post-2015 development agenda. UNODC had contributed to the General Assembly's Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals in the areas of peaceful and inclusive societies, rule of law and capable institutions, and in that regard the Office co-hosted a side event on conflict prevention, post-conflict peacebuilding and the promotion of durable peace, rule of law and governance during the Open Working Group's eighth session, in February. The Secretary-General requested Member States to recognize the importance of peaceful and inclusive societies, accountable institutions and justice and the rule of law as enabling conditions for and as integral parts of sustainable and equitable growth, and to include relevant goals, targets and indicators in the post-2015 development framework (see p. 960).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/19 without vote [agenda item 17 (d)].

Rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the United Nations development agenda beyond 2015

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/195 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/195 without vote [agenda item 105].

Rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the United Nations development agenda beyond 2015

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law,

Reaffirming also its commitment to the declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels,

Strongly determined to reinvigorate political will and to raise the level of the international community's commitment to moving the sustainable development agenda forward, through the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Reaffirming the necessity of respecting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms in the prevention of crime and the administration of and access to justice, including criminal justice,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled “A life of dignity for all: accelerating progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and advancing the United Nations development agenda beyond 2015”, and noting the recommendations of the Secretary-General's High-level Panel of Eminent Persons on the Post-2015 Development Agenda,

Noting the activity of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals,

Noting also the thematic and national consultations on the post-2015 United Nations development agenda organized by the United Nations Development Group in many countries,

Reiterating that the rule of law and development are inter-related and mutually reinforcing and that the advancement of the rule of law at the national and international levels is essential for sustained and inclusive economic growth, sustainable development, the eradication of poverty and hunger and the full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development, all of which in turn reinforce the rule of law,

Reiterating also that transnational crime must be addressed with full respect for the principles of the sovereign equality and territorial integrity of States and of non-intervention in the domestic affairs of other States, and in accordance with the rule of law, as part of a comprehensive response to promote durable solutions through the promotion of human rights and more equitable socioeconomic conditions, and in that regard stressing again the importance of encouraging Member States to develop, as appropriate, comprehensive crime prevention policies based on an understanding of the multiple factors that contribute to crime and to address such factors in a holistic manner, while emphasizing that crime prevention should be an integral element of strategies to foster social and economic development in all States,

Stressing the importance of a well-functioning, efficient, fair, effective and humane criminal justice system as the basis for a successful strategy against transnational organized crime, corruption, terrorism, drug trafficking and other forms of trafficking,

Recalling its resolution 67/186 of 20 December 2012, entitled “Strengthening the rule of law and the reform of criminal justice institutions, particularly in the areas related to the United Nations system-wide approach to fighting transnational organized crime and drug trafficking”, and its resolution 68/188 of 18 December 2013, entitled “The rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the United Nations development agenda beyond 2015”,

Acknowledging the centrality of crime prevention and the criminal justice system to the rule of law, and also acknowledging that long-term sustainable economic and social development and the establishment of a functioning, efficient, effective and humane criminal justice system have a positive influence on each other, as stated in the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, of 2010,

Reaffirming the importance of promoting the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Reaffirming also the importance of relevant international anti-terrorism instruments, as appropriate, and drawing on the existing United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Recalling its resolution 63/23 of 17 November 2008, entitled "Promoting development through the reduction and prevention of armed violence",

Concerned about the serious threat that violence related to transnational organized crime poses to development and the rule of law, security and well-being of communities, hindering the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals by reducing national income and productivity, diverting investment and rolling back hard-won development gains, and recognizing that comprehensive crime prevention strategies can contribute to addressing those challenges effectively,

Recognizing the importance of ensuring that women and girls, on the basis of gender equality, fully enjoy the benefits of the rule of law, and committed to using law to uphold equal rights and ensure their full and equal participation,

Welcoming the conference entitled "Bangkok Dialogue on the Rule of Law", hosted by the Government of Thailand in Bangkok on 15 November 2013, which discussed the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice as a substantive contribution to the discussion on the post-2015 development agenda,

Noting the publication of the study paper entitled "Accounting for security and justice in the post-2015 development agenda" by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in 2013,

Noting also the publication of the "Global Study on Homicide 2013: Trends, Contexts, Data" by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime,

Taking into consideration that the main theme of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha in 2015, will be "Integrating crime prevention and criminal justice into the wider United Nations agenda to address social and economic challenges and to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, and public participation", Convinced that respect for and promotion of the rule of law, both nationally and internationally, are essential elements in addressing and preventing transnational organized crime and corruption, and noting that the rule of law requires strong and efficient justice sector coordination, as well as effective inter-agency cooperation and coordination with other relevant United Nations offices and activities,

1. Recognizes the cross-cutting nature of the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice and development, and recommends that such linkages and interrelationships be properly addressed and further elaborated;

2. Underscores that the discussions on the post-2015 development agenda should take into account respect for and promotion of the rule of law and that crime prevention and criminal justice have an important role in that regard, giving due consideration to the work of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in order to channel, as appropriate, its contribution to the discussions on the post-2015 development agenda, in close consultation with all relevant stakeholders;

3. Encourages Member States, in their deliberations on the post-2015 development agenda, to give due consideration to the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice, while promoting universal respect for human rights and strengthening relevant national institutions;

4. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, as a member of the United Nations System Task Team on the Post-2015 United Nations Development Agenda, to continue to contribute analytical inputs and expertise to the work of the Task Team and to report to the Commission at its twenty-fourth session on the results of this work;

5. Stresses the importance of a comprehensive approach to transitional justice, incorporating the wide range of judicial and non-judicial measures to ensure accountability and promote reconciliation while protecting the rights of victims of crime and of abuse of power, drawing on the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in accordance with its mandates, to support criminal justice reforms and strengthen the rule of law at the national and international levels;

6. Also stresses the need for government institutions, the judicial system and the legislative system to be gender-sensitive and for the continued promotion of the full participation of women in such institutions;

7. Further stresses the importance of promoting the design and implementation of national and regional strategies and policies, as appropriate, on the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice as an effective and coordinated response to transnational organized crime, particularly in connection with new and emerging forms of transnational organized crime;

8. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to assist Member States, upon request, in developing comprehensive crime prevention strategies, to address violence related to transnational organized crime, including urban crime, and to continue to support the exchange of expertise and good practices, with the support of civil society, as appropriate;

9. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to assist Member States in improving systems for collecting and analysing data on crime prevention and criminal justice at all levels, where necessary, including gender-specific data, in order to contribute, where appropriate, to the post-2015 development agenda;

10. Invites the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network to continue to include in their work programmes the issues of the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as to consider exploring the challenges posed by violence related to transnational organized crime, and encourages them to develop appropriate training material;

11. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes described above, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, through the Commission, to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Trafficking in persons

Trafficking in women and girls. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 67/145 [YUN 2012, p. 1110], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/69/224] on measures taken by Member States and activities within the UN system to address trafficking in women and girls (see p. 1292). In an August note [A/69/269], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children (see p. 873), submitted in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 17/1 [YUN 2011, p. 740].

On 18 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/149 (see p. 1293) on trafficking in women and girls, by which it urged Member States that had not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children; and urged Member States, the United Nations and other international, regional and subregional organizations, as well as civil society, to implement the relevant provisions of the UN Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons. It encouraged the UN system to mainstream the issue of trafficking in persons, especially women and girls, into its broader policies and programmes; invited the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, to cooperate with international, regional and national mechanisms; urged Governments to provide or strengthen training for, and to raise awareness among, law enforcement, judicial, immigration and other relevant officials on the prevention and combating of trafficking in persons, including the sexual exploitation of women and girls; and invited Governments to take steps to ensure that criminal justice procedures and witness protection programmes were sensitive to the situation of trafficked women and girls.

Smuggling of migrants

During the regular part of its twenty-third (2014) session, CCPCJ considered and approved for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution on the issue of international cooperation in combating the smuggling of migrants (see below). Participants noted that it was the first time the Commission had approved a resolution on the smuggling of migrants and that doing so provided an opportunity to promote debate and international cooperation on the issue—an area in which multilateralism could make a concrete difference.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/23 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

Strengthening international cooperation in addressing the smuggling of migrants

The Economic and Social Council,

Convinced of the need to provide migrants with humane treatment and full protection of their rights,

Expressing its deepest concern over the negative impact of the smuggling of migrants on society and the rule of law and over the fact that individual migrants have lost their lives in dangerous smuggling operations, and commending all those who have dedicated themselves to protecting and assisting smuggled migrants, whose lives or safety are endangered by reason of being the object of such conduct,

Expressing its deepest concern also about the increase in the activities of transnational and national organized criminal entities and others that profit from the smuggling of migrants, especially women and children, and related offences,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 66/128 of 19 December 2011, entitled “Violence against women migrant workers”, 66/172 of 19 December 2011, entitled “Protection of migrants”, 67/185 of 20 December 2012, entitled “Promoting efforts to eliminate violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families”, 67/219 of 21 December 2012, entitled “International migration and development”, 68/4 of 3 October 2013, entitled “Declaration of the High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development”, and 68/193 of 18 December 2013, entitled “Strengthening the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity”,

Recognizing that international migration is a multi-dimensional reality of major relevance for the development of countries of origin, transit and destination, and also recognizing that this cross-cutting phenomenon should be addressed in a coherent, comprehensive and balanced manner, while respecting human rights and integrating development aspects, with due regard for social, economic and environmental dimensions,

Underlining the challenges posed by the smuggling of migrants by land, sea and air, as illustrated by events at the global level,

Bearing in mind the obligations of States under applicable international law to exercise due diligence to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants and to investigate and punish perpetrators, notwithstanding the obligation of States to protect the rights and respect the dignity of smuggled migrants under applicable international law,

Recognizing the sovereign right of States to enact and implement migration and border security measures, without prejudice to applicable international commitments in relation to the free movement of people,

Recognizing also the need for more effective international information-sharing, law enforcement cooperation and mutual legal assistance to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants,

Recalling that migrants shall not be liable to criminal prosecution under the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, for the fact of having been the object of conduct set out in article 6 of the Protocol, and that nothing in the Protocol prevents a State party from taking measures against a person whose conduct constitutes an offence under its domestic law,

Bearing in mind the need for a focused and consistent criminal justice approach to the smuggling of migrants and related offences,

Underlining that, although the crime of smuggling of migrants may share, in some cases, some common features with the crime of trafficking in persons, Member States need to recognize that they are distinct crimes requiring separate and complementary legal, operational and policy responses,

Welcoming the work and tools of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the framework of the Global Programme against the Smuggling of Migrants, including the Model Law against the Smuggling of Migrants, the International Framework for Action to Implement the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol and the Assessment Guide to the Criminal Justice Response to the Smuggling of Migrants,

Noting the launch by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime of the voluntary reporting system on migrant smuggling and related conduct as a secure solution for collecting, sharing and analysing information on the smuggling of migrants, in support of the Bali Process on People Smuggling, Trafficking in Persons and Related Transnational Crime,

Recalling that the theme of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha from 12 to 19 April 2015, will be "Integrating crime prevention and criminal justice into the wider United Nations agenda to address social and economic challenges and to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, and public participation",

1. Underlines the need to address challenges related to the smuggling of migrants through a comprehensive and balanced approach, and through bilateral, regional and international cooperation and dialogue, as appropriate, between countries of origin, transit and destination;

2. Stresses the importance of enhancing preventive measures, combating criminal networks and improving border control management, without prejudice to applicable international commitments in relation to the free movement of people;

3. Highlights the need to promote or strengthen, as appropriate, development programmes and cooperation at the national, regional and international levels, taking into account the socioeconomic realities of migration and paying special attention to economically and socially depressed areas, in order to combat the root socioeconomic causes of the smuggling of migrants, especially those related to poverty;

4. Underlines that international cooperation to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants implies a common and shared responsibility among Member States;

5. Also underlines the crucial role of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, as the primary international legal instruments to combat the smuggling of migrants and related conduct;

6. Notes with appreciation the increasing level of adherence to the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol and, on the tenth anniversary of its entry into force, urges States parties to implement it fully, and encourages States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Protocol;

7. Urges Member States, where appropriate, to adopt measures to increase public awareness of the fact that the smuggling of migrants is a criminal activity frequently perpetrated by organized criminal groups for profit, posing serious risks to the migrants concerned;

8. Stresses the need to develop national and, as appropriate, regional policies and strategies against the smuggling of migrants and to reinforce international cooperation for the prevention of the crime and for the prosecution of smugglers, in accordance with national laws and legislation;

9. Encourages Member States to adopt relevant measures, including, if necessary, reviewing relevant legislation, including criminal legislation, and to criminalize the acts covered by the Organized Crime Convention and the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol, including by introducing appropriate sanctions commensurate with the nature and gravity of the offence;

10. Urges Member States, as appropriate, to avail themselves of the international cooperation framework provided by the Organized Crime Convention, the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol and other applicable international legal instruments, in order to ensure that they have an adequate legal framework to allow for extradition, mutual legal assistance and other cooperation tools in relation to such crimes;

11. Encourages Member States to cooperate with each other and with relevant international organizations to the fullest extent possible, in accordance with articles 18 and 19 of the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol and applicable obligations under relevant international law;

12. Also encourages Member States to ensure that, in investigating and prosecuting the smuggling of migrants, the concurrent undertaking of financial investigations is considered, with a view to tracing, freezing and confiscating proceeds acquired through that crime, and to consider the smuggling of migrants to be a predicate offence of money-laundering;

13. Further encourages Member States to take measures to protect witnesses in cases of smuggling of migrants, as called for in the Organized Crime Convention, to take appropriate measures to provide for the effective protection of witnesses who testify in criminal proceedings and, as appropriate, their relatives, including protection from potential retaliation, and to strengthen international cooperation in this area;

14. Encourages Member States to promote the reliable collection of data and research, at the national and, as appropriate, the regional and international levels, on the smuggling of migrants, including on smuggling networks and the involvement of organized crime in countries of origin, transit and destination, and on the possible links that may exist between the smuggling of migrants and other criminal activities;

15. Also encourages Member States to consider strengthening multi-agency cooperation and coordination at the national, bilateral and, where appropriate, regional levels, and to consider, if necessary, the establishment of multi-agency centres for the purpose of data collection, strategic analysis and information-sharing in order to detect, prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants, in accordance with national legislation;

16. Further encourages Member States to exchange information, as appropriate, on best practices to promote cooperation to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants and coordination to investigate and prosecute the smuggling of migrants, in accordance with applicable domestic and international law;

17. Encourages Member States to use existing channels for information exchange, such as those provided by the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL), to exchange information, in a manner consistent with domestic law, including information on persons convicted or suspected of conducting or facilitating the smuggling of migrants;

18. Notes the roles and responsibilities of countries of origin, transit and destination in protecting the rights of smuggled migrants and the need to avoid approaches that might aggravate their vulnerability, and reaffirms the need to effectively protect the rights and respect the dignity of smuggled migrants and internationally recognized principles of non-discrimination and other applicable obligations under relevant international law, taking into account the special needs of women and children, especially unaccompanied children;

19. Stresses the primary role of the State in overcoming the challenges posed by the smuggling of migrants, and recognizes the important contribution of non-governmental organizations, other relevant organizations and other elements of civil society in protecting and assisting smuggled migrants;

20. Invites Member States to fully utilize all relevant tools developed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime within the Global Programme against the Smuggling of Migrants and the relevant regional and national programmes, including the Sharing Electronic Resources and Laws against Organized Crime knowledge management portal, and also invites Member States to provide to the Secretariat legislation and case law related to the smuggling of migrants, for inclusion in that portal;

21. Also invites Member States, through bilateral, regional and international cooperation, where appropriate, to collaborate to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants through the provision of assistance, including technical assistance, upon request, with a view to building capacities and enhancing abilities to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants;

22. Encourages Member States to provide specialized training for law enforcement, immigration and border control officials and coastguard personnel, as well as forensic experts, prosecutors and judges, so that they are better able to recognize and deal with issues related to the smuggling of migrants;

23. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide, upon request, technical assistance aimed at strengthening the capacity of Member States to criminalize, investigate and prosecute the smuggling of migrants, and invites Member States to consider and to draw upon the International Framework for Action to Implement the Smuggling of Migrants Protocol, the Basic Training Manual on Investigating and Prosecuting the Smuggling of Migrants and the In-depth Training Manual on Investigating and Prosecuting the Smuggling of Migrants;

24. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to strengthen collaboration and cooperation with all relevant bodies, agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, other relevant intergovernmental, regional and subregional organizations, including Global Migration Group members, within their respective mandates, in order to adopt a coherent, comprehensive and co-ordinated approach and thus to fully address the challenges posed by the smuggling of migrants;

25. Encourages Member States to make the best use of the relevant work and initiatives of the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network in order to promote regional and international cooperation against the smuggling of migrants;

26. Encourages Member States and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to promote cooperation on the most effective ways to prevent and combat the smuggling of migrants, in view of, among other things, the workshop on the topic "Trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants: successes and challenges in criminalization, in mutual legal assistance and in effective protection of witnesses and trafficking victims", to be held within the framework of the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

27. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes described above, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Terrorism

In a February report [E/CN.15/2014/4], the Secretary-General reviewed the activities of UNODC during 2013, particularly those of its Terrorism Prevention Branch, in delivering counter-terrorism assistance. The report highlighted the efforts made and challenges faced by Member States regarding the criminal justice aspects of countering terrorism and emphasized the need for enhanced governmental support. The objective of the Office's counter-terrorism activities was to strengthen the legal regime against terrorism through promoting ratification of the 18 international legal instruments against terrorism and assisting States with incorporating the provisions of those instruments into national legislation; building the capacity of national officials to implement counter-terrorism legislation; and promoting regional and international cooperation in criminal matters. Such assistance to requesting Member States contributed to 24 new ratifications and led to the preparation of 16 new or revised pieces of national counter-terrorism legislation. It also enhanced the knowledge and practices of national criminal justice systems regarding the investigation, prosecution and adjudication of terrorism cases, as well as their capacity to cooperate regionally and internationally. In 2013, UNODC provided capacity-building assistance to 83 countries worldwide through 93 workshops at the national, subregional and regional levels and training for over 2,500 criminal justice officials. Capacity-building efforts related to countering the use of the Internet for terrorist purposes; improving the assistance provided to victims of acts of terrorism and the criminal justice response in support of such victims; countering chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear terrorism; suppressing the financing of terrorism; addressing transport-related (civil aviation and maritime) terrorism offences; criminal justice responses to terrorism in the framework of the rule of law and respect for human rights; developing specialized technical assistance tools; and providing technical assistance in close cooperation with national training institutions and other bodies. During the year, partnerships with UN entities and subregional, regional and international organizations contributed to enhanced coordination and cooperation in the delivery of assistance, including through several joint projects. The report concluded with a set of recommendations for consideration by CCPCJ.

In a July report [A/69/209] (see p. 1517), the Secretary-General reviewed measures to eliminate international terrorism. It considered measures taken at the national and international levels, contained a list of international legal instruments, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating crimes connected with international terrorism.

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/127 on measures to eliminate international terrorism (ibid.).

(For more information on terrorism, see PART ONE, Chapter I and PART FOUR, Chapter III.)

Trafficking in human organs

Commission action. On 16 May [E/2014/30 (res. 23/2)], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice urged Member States to combat trafficking in organs by preventing and punishing the unauthorized removal or implantation of organs and the illicit sale, brokering, purchase and other illicit transactions in respect of human organs, as well as trafficking in persons for the purpose of organ removal. It encouraged Member States to review, develop or amend legislative measures to combat illicit trafficking of human organs; strengthen regulatory oversight of relevant medical facilities and the medical personnel thereof; provide training for law enforcement, border control officials and medical personnel to identify potential cases of organ trafficking and trafficking in persons for the purpose of organ removal; conduct awareness campaigns targeted at potential donors to make them informed of their rights and the health and safety risks associated with organ removal in exchange for material benefits; and exchange experience and information relevant to the issue. The Commission requested UNODC to conduct a study on trafficking in human organs, based on the analysis of information provided by States, for consideration by the Commission at its twenty-fifth (2016) session. In that regard, it also invited UNODC to engage in a dialogue with relevant international intergovernmental organizations, in close consultation with States, to collect data and conduct an analysis of instances of organ trafficking and prosecutions of trafficking in organs, as well as to collect examples of applicable legislation. It encouraged Member States to provide relevant information to UNODC, and invited Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources.

UN standards and norms

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30 & Add.1] had before it a February report [E/CN.15/2014/11], in which the Secretary-General described progress made by UNODC in 2013 to support the use and application of UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. The report outlined the development of new standards and norms and the Office's efforts to collect and analyse data, develop implementation tools and provide technical assistance at the global, regional and country levels. It also described the Office's partnerships for promoting intervention in crime prevention and criminal justice reform.

UNODC made progress in the development and promotion of the use and application of the UN standards and norms, which covered the following areas: persons in custody, non-custodial sanctions, juvenile justice and restorative justice; crime prevention and victim issues; and good governance, the independence of the judiciary and the integrity of criminal justice personnel. The standards and norms were also central to UN work on the rule of law and human rights, as they provided detailed guidance on various principles of human rights in the administration of justice. Through its thematic programme on crime prevention and criminal justice reform, implemented in over 40 countries, UNODC assisted Member States in developing new instruments, strategies, policies and programmes. Support included advocacy, research, legislative and legal support, norm-setting and technical assistance. During the reporting period, UNODC supported Member States in setting global standards in the areas of treatment of prisoners, violence against children and gender-related killing of women and girls. Important normative developments included the revision of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners [YUN 1955, p. 209], and the development of model strategies and practical measures for the elimination of violence against children in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. The Office continued to collect data on selected crimes and on the operation of justice systems through the UN Survey of Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems. The network of focal points to coordinate national responses to the Survey was extended, which resulted in coverage of more than 110 countries and an improved rate of response. UNODC also continued developing tools and handbooks, training curricula and guidance notes to provide sustained technical assistance in an increasing number of countries.

Treatment of prisoners

Standard minimum rules. By an April note [E/CN.15/2014/19 & Corr.1], the Secretariat informed CCPCJ about the work of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, established in response to General Assembly resolution 65/230 [YUN 2010, p. 1095]. At its third meeting (Vienna, 25–28 March), the Expert Group considered for revision rules in the following thematic areas: respect for prisoners' inherent dignity and value as human beings; medical and health services; disciplinary action and punishment, including the role of medical staff, solitary confinement and reduction of diet; investigation of all deaths in custody, as well as any signs or allegations of torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of prisoners; protection and special needs of vulnerable groups deprived of their liberty, taking into consideration countries in difficult circumstances; the right of access to legal representation; complaints and independent inspection; and training of relevant staff to implement the Standard Minimum Rules. The Expert Group agreed on a series of recommendations for submission to the Commission's twenty-third (2014) session for consideration and further action.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/16 without vote [agenda item 17 (d)].

Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/192 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/192 without vote [agenda item 105].

Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principal purposes of the United Nations, as set out in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and inspired by the determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, without distinction of any kind, and in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Bearing in mind the long-standing concern of the United Nations for the humanization of criminal justice and the protection of human rights,

Aware that the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners remain the universally acknowledged minimum standards for the detention of prisoners and that they have been of value and influence in the development of correctional laws, policies and practices since their adoption by the First United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, in 1955,

Mindful that, in the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, Member States recognized that an effective, fair, accountable and humane criminal justice system was based on the commitment to uphold the protection of human rights in the administration of justice and the prevention and control of crime, and acknowledged the value and impact of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice in designing and implementing national crime prevention and criminal justice policies, laws, procedures and programmes,

Taking into account the progressive development of international standards pertaining to the treatment of prisoners since 1955, including in international instruments such as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Optional Protocol thereto, and other relevant United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice related to the treatment of prisoners, namely, the procedures for the effective implementation of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, the Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment, the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, the Basic Principles for the Treatment of Prisoners, the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials, the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Administration of Juvenile Justice (the Beijing Rules), the United Nations Rules for the Protection of Juveniles Deprived of their Liberty, the United Nations Guidelines for the Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency (the Riyadh Guidelines), the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for Non-custodial Measures (the Tokyo Rules), the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules) and the United Nations Principles and Guidelines on Access to Legal Aid in Criminal Justice Systems,

Mindful of its resolution 67/166 of 20 December 2012 on human rights in the administration of justice, in which it recognized the importance of the principle that persons deprived of their liberty shall retain their non-derogable human rights and all other human rights and fundamental freedoms, except for those lawful limitations that are demonstrably necessitated by the fact of incarceration, and took note of general comment No. 21 on the humane treatment of persons deprived of their liberty, adopted by the Human Rights Committee, as well as Human Rights Council resolution 24/12 of 26 September 2013, in which the Council noted the work of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, reiterating that any changes should not lower any existing standards but should reflect recent advances in correctional science and best practices,

Recalling its resolution 65/230 of 21 December 2010, in which it requested the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to establish an open-ended intergovernmental expert group to exchange information on best practices, as well as national legislation and existing international law, and on the revision of existing United Nations standard minimum rules for the treatment of prisoners so that they reflect recent advances in correctional science and best practices, with a view to making recommendations to the Commission on possible next steps, and requested the Expert Group to report to the Commission on progress in its work,

Recalling also its resolutions 67/188 of 20 December 2012 and 68/190 of 18 December 2013, entitled "Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners", as well as its resolution 68/156 of 18 December 2013, entitled "Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment", in particular paragraph 38 thereof,

Recalling further that, in its resolution 67/184 of 20 December 2012 on follow-up to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and preparations for the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, it decided that one of the workshops to be held within the framework of the Thirteenth Congress would be devoted to the topic "Role of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice in support of effective, fair, humane and accountable criminal justice systems: experiences and lessons learned in meeting the unique needs of women and children, in particular the treatment and social reintegration of offenders",

1. Notes with appreciation the further progress made during the third meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, held in Vienna from 25 to 28 March 2014;

2. Expresses its gratitude to the Government of Brazil for its financial support for the third meeting of the Expert Group;

3. Acknowledges the work done by the Expert Group at its previous meetings, held in Vienna from 31 January to 2 February 2012 and in Buenos Aires from 11 to 13 December 2012;

4. Also acknowledges the work accomplished by the Secretariat in preparing the relevant documentation, in particular the working paper for the third meeting, as well as the determined progress achieved at the meetings of the Expert Group in reviewing the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners;

5. Expresses appreciation for the important submissions and suggestions of Member States pursuant to the request to exchange information on best practices and on the revision of the existing Standard Minimum Rules, as reflected in the working paper submitted to the Expert Group at its third meeting;

6. Reiterates that any changes to the Standard Minimum Rules should not lower any of the existing standards, but should reflect the recent advances in correctional science and good practices so as to promote safety, security and humane conditions for prisoners;

7. Recognizes the need for the Expert Group to continue to take into account the social, legal and cultural specificities, as well as human rights obligations, of Member States;

8. Notes that the revision process should maintain the existing scope of application of the Standard Minimum Rules;

9. Acknowledges with appreciation the important contributions received from the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, as well as other submissions received for consideration from a number of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and invites them in this regard to continue to be actively involved in the Expert Group process, in accordance with the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council;

10. Acknowledges that the revision of the Standard Minimum Rules is a time-intensive exercise of crucial importance, emphasizes that efforts should be made to finalize the revision process, building on the recommendations made at the three meetings of the Expert Group and the submissions of Member States, for consideration at the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Doha in 2015, and also emphasizes that the concern for a speedy process should not compromise the quality of the outcome;

11. Decides to extend the mandate of the Expert Group, authorizing it to continue its work, with the aim of reaching a consensus, and to present a report to the Thirteenth Congress, for the information of the workshop on the role of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice in support of effective, fair, humane and accountable criminal justice systems, and to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-fourth session for consideration, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the required services and support are provided;

12. Invites the bureau of the third meeting of the Expert Group to continue to be involved in the revision of the rules by preparing, with the assistance of the Secretariat, a revised consolidated working paper, in all official languages of the United Nations, consisting of the draft revised rules, which should reflect the progress achieved so far, including the recommendations made by the Expert Group at its meetings held in Buenos Aires in 2012 and in Vienna in 2014, also taking into account proposals for revision put forward by Member States in relation to the areas and rules identified by the General Assembly in paragraph 6 of its resolution 67/188, for submission to and consideration by the Expert Group at its next meeting;

13. Expresses its gratitude to the Government of South Africa for its intention to host the next meeting of the Expert Group, and welcomes any support, in particular financial support, that other interested countries and organizations may wish to provide;

14. Invites Member States to actively participate in the next meeting of the Expert Group and to include in their delegations persons with a variety of expertise from relevant disciplines;

15. Encourages Member States to improve conditions in detention, consistent with the principles of the Standard Minimum Rules and all other relevant and applicable international standards and norms, to continue exchanging good practices, such as those regarding conflict resolution in detention facilities, including in the area of technical assistance, to identify challenges faced in implementing the Rules and share their experiences in dealing with those challenges and to provide relevant information in that regard to their experts participating in the Expert Group;

16. Also encourages Member States to promote the implementation of the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules), as well as the United Nations Rules for the Protection of Juveniles Deprived of their Liberty;

17. Recommends that Member States continue to endeavour to reduce prison overcrowding and, where appropriate, resort to non-custodial measures as alternatives to pretrial detention, to promote increased access to justice and legal defence mechanisms, to reinforce alternatives to imprisonment and to support rehabilitation and reintegration programmes, in accordance with the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for Non-custodial Measures (the Tokyo Rules);

18. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to continue to promote the use and application of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice by, inter alia, providing advisory services and technical assistance to Member States, on request, including assistance in crime prevention, criminal justice and law reform, and in the organization of training for law enforcement, crime prevention and criminal justice personnel and support in the administration and management of penal and penitentiary systems, thus contributing to the upgrading of their efficiency and capabilities;

19. Reaffirms the important role of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council in contributing to the dissemination, promotion and practical application of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, in accordance with the procedures for their effective implementation;

20. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes outlined in the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

Violence against children

Model strategies and practical measures. On 15 May [E/CN.15/2014/14], CCPCJ considered a March report of the Secretary-General on the outcome of the meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group on the development of a draft set of model strategies and practical measures on the elimination of violence against children in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice (Bangkok, Thailand, 18–21 February), convened pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/189 [YUN 2013, p. 1258]. Annexed to the report was the draft set of model strategies and practical measures, as submitted by the expert group. On 27 May [E/CN.15/2014/14/Rev.1], the Secretary-General's report was reissued with the final text of the model strategies and practical measures, as amended by the Commission. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures were grouped into three categories: prohibiting violence against children, implementing prevention measures and promoting research and data collection; enhancing the capacity of the criminal justice system to respond to violence against children and protect child victims; and preventing and responding to violence against children within the justice system.

In a June note [A/69/88], the Secretary-General transmitted his May report to the General Assembly. On 18 December (decision 69/537), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/18 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 69/194 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/69/489], adopted resolution 69/194 without vote [agenda item 105].

United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and all other relevant international and regional treaties,

Recalling also the numerous international standards and norms in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, in particular on juvenile justice, such as the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Administration of Juvenile Justice (the Beijing Rules), the United Nations Guidelines for the Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency (the Riyadh Guidelines), the United Nations Rules for the Protection of Juveniles Deprived of their Liberty, the Guidelines for Action on Children in the Criminal Justice System, the Guidelines on Justice in Matters Involving Child Victims and Witnesses of Crime, the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules), the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, the United Nations Principles and Guidelines on Access to Legal Aid in Criminal Justice Systems, the guidelines for cooperation and technical assistance in the field of urban crime prevention, the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, the Guidelines for the Effective Implementation of the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials and the Basic Principles on the Use of Force and Firearms by Law Enforcement Officials,

Recalling further its relevant resolutions, as well as those of the Economic and Social Council, the Human Rights Council and the Commission on Human Rights,

Convinced that violence against children is never justifiable and that it is the duty of States to protect children, including those in conflict with the law, from all forms of violence and human rights violations and to exercise due diligence to prohibit, prevent and investigate acts of violence against children, eliminate impunity and provide assistance to the victims, including prevention of revictimization,

Acknowledging the value of the joint report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children on prevention of and responses to violence against children within the juvenile justice system, the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on access to justice for children and the joint report of the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children on accessible and child-sensitive counselling, complaint and reporting mechanisms to address incidents of violence,

Noting with appreciation the important work on child rights in the context of crime prevention and criminal justice conducted by United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, including the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Office of the High Commissioner and the United Nations Children's Fund, and by the Special Representative and relevant mandate holders and treaty bodies, and welcoming the active participation of civil society in this field of work,

Emphasizing that children, by reason of their physical and mental development, face particular vulnerabilities and need special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection,

Emphasizing also that children in contact with the justice system as victims, witnesses or alleged or recognized offenders must be treated in a child-sensitive manner and with respect for their rights, dignity and needs,

Stressing that the right for all to have access to justice and the provision that child victims or witnesses of violence and children and juveniles in conflict with the law are entitled to the same legal guarantees and protection as are accorded to adults, including all fair trial guarantees, form an important basis for strengthening the rule of law through the administration of justice,

Recognizing the complementary roles of crime prevention, the criminal justice system, child protection agencies and the health, education and social sectors, as well as civil society, in creating a protective environment and preventing and responding to incidents of violence against children,

Being aware of the different economic, social and cultural contexts of crime prevention and criminal justice prevailing in each Member State,

Recalling its resolution 68/189 of 18 December 2013, in which it requested the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to convene a meeting of an open-ended intergovernmental expert group, in collaboration with all relevant United Nations entities, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, the Office of the High Commissioner and the Special Representative, to develop a draft set of model strategies and practical measures on the elimination of violence against children in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, to be considered by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its session following the meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group,

1. Strongly condemns all acts of violence against children, reaffirms the duty of the State to protect children from all forms of violence in both public and private settings, and calls for the elimination of impunity, including by investigating and prosecuting, with due process, and punishing all perpetrators;

2. Expresses its extreme concern about the secondary victimization of children that may occur within the justice system, and reaffirms the responsibility of States to protect children from this form of violence;

3. Welcomes the work done at the meeting of the expert group on the development of draft model strategies and practical measures on the elimination of violence against children in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, held in Bangkok from 18 to 21 February 2014, and takes note with appreciation of its report;

4. Adopts the United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice annexed to the present resolution;

5. Urges Member States to take all necessary and effective measures, as appropriate, to prevent and respond to all forms of violence against children who come in contact with the justice system as victims, witnesses or alleged or recognized offenders, and to provide for consistency in their laws and policies and in the application thereof in order to promote the implementation of the Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

6. Also urges Member States to remove any barrier, including any kind of discrimination, that children may face in accessing justice and in effectively participating in criminal proceedings, to pay particular attention to the issue of the rights of the child and the child's best interests in the administration of justice and to ensure that children in contact with the criminal justice system are treated in a child-sensitive manner, taking into account the specific needs of those children who are in particularly vulnerable situations;

7. Encourages Member States that have not yet integrated crime prevention and children's issues into their overall rule of law efforts to do so, and to develop and implement a comprehensive crime prevention and justice system policy, with a view to preventing the involvement of children in criminal activities, promoting the use of alternative measures to detention, such as diversion and restorative justice, adopting reintegration strategies for former child offenders and complying with the principle that deprivation of liberty of children should be used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time, as well as to avoid, wherever possible, the use of pretrial detention for children;

8. Encourages Member States, where appropriate, to strengthen multisectoral coordination among all relevant government agencies in order to better prevent, identify and respond to the multidimensional nature of violence against children and to ensure that criminal justice and other relevant professionals are adequately trained to deal with children;

9. Also encourages Member States to establish and strengthen child rights monitoring and accountability systems, as well as mechanisms for the systematic research, collection and analysis of data on violence against children and on the systems designed to address violence against children, with a view to assessing the scope and incidence of such violence and the impact of policies and measures adopted to reduce it;

10. Stresses the importance of preventing incidents of violence against children and of responding in a timely manner to support child victims of violence, including to prevent their revictimization, and invites Member States to adopt knowledge-based, comprehensive and multisectoral prevention strategies and policies to address the factors that give rise to violence against children and that expose them to the risk of violence;

11. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to take steps to ensure the broad dissemination of the Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

12. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, at the request of Member States, to identify the needs and capacities of countries and to provide technical assistance and advisory services to Member States in order to develop or strengthen, as appropriate, legislation, procedures, policies and practices to prevent and respond to violence against children and to ensure respect for the rights of the child in the administration of justice;

13. Further requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to closely coordinate with the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme and with other relevant national and regional institutes with a view to developing training materials and offering training and other capacity-building opportunities, in particular for practitioners working in the areas of crime prevention and criminal justice and for providers of support services for the victims of violence against children and for child witnesses within the criminal justice system, and to disseminate information on successful practices;

14. Invites the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the Human Rights Council, as well as the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, the Committee on the Rights of the Child and relevant regional and international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to strengthen cooperation in supporting the efforts of States to eliminate all forms of violence against children;

15. Encourages Member States to promote country-to-country, regional and interregional technical cooperation in sharing best practices in the implementation of the Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

16. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary contributions for the purposes outlined in the present resolution, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

ANNEX

United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Introduction

1. The United Nations Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Children in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice have been prepared to help Member States to address the need for integrated strategies for violence prevention and child protection, thereby offering children the protection to which they have an unqualified right.

2. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures take into consideration the complementary roles of the justice system on the one hand, and the child protection, social welfare, health and education sectors on the other, in creating a protective environment and in preventing and responding to violence against children. They draw attention to the need for Member States to ensure that criminal law is used appropriately and effectively to criminalize various forms of violence against children, including forms of violence prohibited by international law. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures will enable criminal justice institutions to strengthen and focus their efforts to prevent and respond to violence against children, and to increase their diligence in investigating, convicting and rehabilitating perpetrators of violent crimes against children.

3. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures take into account the fact that children who are alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law, especially those who are deprived of their liberty, face a high risk of violence. Because special attention must be paid to the especially vulnerable situation of these children, the Model Strategies and Practical Measures are aimed at not only improving the effectiveness of the criminal justice system in preventing and responding to violence against children, but also at protecting children against any violence that may result from their contact with the justice system.

4. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures reflect the fact that some of the perpetrators of violence against children are themselves children and often victims of violence. The need to protect child victims in such instances cannot negate the rights of all of the children involved to have their best interests considered as a matter of primary importance.

5. The Model Strategies and Practical Measures are grouped into three broad categories: general prevention strategies to address violence against children as part of broader child protection and crime prevention initiatives; strategies and measures to improve the ability of the criminal justice system to respond to crimes of violence against children and to protect child victims effectively; and strategies and measures to prevent and respond to violence against children in contact with the justice system. Good practices are set forth, to be considered and used by Member States within the framework of their national legal systems in a manner consistent with applicable international instruments, including relevant human rights instruments, and taking into consideration relevant United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. Member States should be guided by the Model Strategies and Practical Measures to the maximum extent of their available resources and, where needed, within the framework of international cooperation.

Definitions

6. For the purposes of the Model Strategies and Practical Measures:

(a) “Child” means, as in article 1 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, “every human being below the age of eighteen years unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier”;

(b) A “child protection system” refers to the national legal framework, formal and informal structures, functions and capacities to prevent and respond to violence against and abuse, exploitation and neglect of children;

(c) “Children in contact with the justice system” refers to children who come into contact with the justice system as victims or witnesses, children alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law, or children who are in any other situation requiring legal proceedings, for example regarding their care, custody or protection, including cases involving children of incarcerated parents;

(d) “Child-sensitive” denotes an approach that takes into consideration the child’s right to protection and individual needs and views in accordance with the age and maturity of the child;

(e) “Child victims” denotes children who are victims of crime regardless of their role in the offence or in the prosecution of the alleged offender or group of offenders;

(f) “Crime prevention” comprises strategies and measures that seek to reduce the risk of crimes occurring and their potential harmful effects on individuals and society, including fear of crime, by intervening to influence the multiple causes of crime;

(g) “Criminal justice system” refers to laws, procedures, professionals, authorities and institutions that apply to victims, witnesses and persons alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law;

(h) “Deprivation of liberty” means any form of detention or imprisonment or the placement of a person in a public or private custodial setting, from which that person is not permitted to leave at will, by order of any judicial, administrative or other public authority;

(i) “Diversion” refers to a process for dealing with children alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law as an alternative to judicial proceedings, with the consent of the child and the child’s parents or legal guardian;

(j) “Informal justice system” refers to the resolution of disputes and the regulation of conduct by adjudication or with the assistance of a neutral third party that is not part of the judiciary as established by law and/or whose substantive, procedural or structural foundation is not primarily based on statutory law;

(k) A “juvenile justice system” comprises laws, policies, guidelines, customary norms, systems, professionals, institutions and treatment specifically applicable to children alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law;

(l) “Legal aid” includes legal advice, assistance and representation for persons detained, arrested or imprisoned as a result of being suspected or accused of or charged with a criminal offence, and for victims and witnesses in the criminal justice process, which is provided at no cost for those without sufficient means or when the interests of justice so require. Furthermore, “legal aid” is intended to include the concepts of legal education, access to legal information and other services provided for persons through alternative dispute resolution mechanisms and restorative justice processes;

(m) A “protective environment” is an environment conducive to ensuring to the maximum extent possible the survival and development of the child, including physical, mental, spiritual, moral, psychological and social development, in a manner compatible with human dignity;

(n) “Restorative justice programme” means any programme that uses restorative processes and seeks to achieve restorative outcomes;

(o) “Restorative process” means any process in which the victim and the offender and, where appropriate, any other individuals or community members affected by a crime participate actively together in the resolution of matters arising from the crime, generally with the help of a facilitator. Restorative processes may include mediation, conciliation, conferencing and sentencing circles;

(p) “Violence” means all forms of physical or mental violence, injury or abuse, neglect or negligent treatment, maltreatment or exploitation, including sexual abuse.

Guiding principles

7. In implementing the Model Strategies and Practical Measures at the national level, Member States should be guided by the following principles:

(a) That the inherent rights of the child to life, survival and development are protected;

(b) That the right of the child to have his or her best interests as a primary consideration in all matters involving or affecting him or her is respected, whether the child is a victim or a perpetrator of violence, as well as in all measures of prevention and protection;

(c) That every child is protected from all forms of violence without discrimination of any kind, irrespective of the child's or his or her parent's or legal guardian's race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national, ethnic or social origin, property, disability, birth or other status;

(d) That the child is informed of his or her rights in an age-appropriate manner and that the right of the child to be consulted and to express his or her views freely in all matters affecting him or her is fully respected;

(e) That all strategies and measures to prevent and respond to violence against children are designed and implemented from a gender perspective that specifically addresses gender-based violence;

(f) That the specific vulnerabilities of children and the situations they find themselves in, including children in need of special protection and children committing criminal offences under the age of criminal responsibility, should be addressed as part of comprehensive violence prevention strategies and identified as a priority for action;

(g) That measures to protect child victims of violence are non-coercive and do not compromise the rights of these children.

Part one

Prohibiting violence against children, implementing broad prevention measures and promoting research and data collection

8. Child protection should begin with the proactive prevention of violence and the explicit prohibition of all forms of violence. Member States have the duty to take appropriate measures that effectively protect children from all forms of violence.

I. Ensuring the prohibition by law of all forms of violence against children

9. Recognizing the importance of the existence of a sound legal framework which prohibits violence against children and empowers authorities to respond appropriately to incidents of violence, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments, to ensure:

(a) That their laws are comprehensive and effective in prohibiting and eliminating all forms of violence against children and that provisions that justify, allow for or condone violence against children or may increase the risk of violence against children are removed;

(b) That cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of children is prohibited and eliminated in all settings, including schools.

10. Because a countless number of girls and boys fall victim to harmful practices undertaken under different pretexts or grounds, including female genital mutilation or cutting, forced marriage, breast ironing and witchcraft rituals, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To establish by law a clear and comprehensive prohibition of all harmful practices against children, supported by detailed provisions in relevant legislation to secure the effective protection of girls and boys from those practices, to provide means of redress and to fight impunity;

(b) To remove from all national legislation any legal provisions that provide justification or allow for consent to harmful practices against children;

(c) To ensure that resorting to informal justice systems does not jeopardize children's rights or preclude child victims from accessing the formal justice system, and to establish the supremacy of international human rights law.

11. Recognizing the serious nature of many forms of violence against children and the need to criminalize these conducts, Member States should review and update their criminal law to ensure that the following acts are fully covered thereunder:

(a) Engaging in sexual activities with a child who is under the legal age of consent, ensuring as well that an appropriate "age of protection" or "legal age of consent", below which a child cannot legally consent to sexual activity, is set;

(b) Engaging in sexual activities with a child using coercion, force or threats, abusing a position of trust, authority or influence over a child, including within the family, and abusing a particularly vulnerable situation of a child, because of a mental or physical disability or a situation of dependence;

(c) Committing sexual violence against a child, including sexual abuse, sexual exploitation and sexual harassment through or facilitated by the use of new information technologies, including the Internet;

(d) The sale of or trafficking in children for any purpose and in any form;

(e) Offering, delivering or accepting, by whatever means, a child for the purpose of sexual exploitation of the child, transfer of organs of the child for profit or engagement of the child in forced labour;

(f) Offering, obtaining, procuring or providing a child for child prostitution;

(g) Producing, distributing, disseminating, importing, exporting, offering, selling or possessing child pornography;

(h) Slavery or practices similar to slavery, debt bondage and serfdom and forced labour, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;

(i) Committing gender-related violence against a child and, in particular, gender-related killing of girls.

II. Implementing comprehensive prevention programmes

12. General and context-specific measures should be developed by Member States to prevent violence against children. Prevention measures, building on a growing understanding of factors that give rise to violence against children and addressing the risks of violence to which children are exposed, should be part of a comprehensive strategy to eliminate violence against children. Criminal justice agencies, working together with, as appropriate, child protection, social welfare, health and education agencies and civil society organizations, should develop effective violence prevention programmes as part of both broader crime prevention programmes and initiatives to build a protective environment for children.

13. Preventing the victimization of children through all available means should be recognized as a crime prevention priority. Member States are therefore urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To strengthen existing child protection systems and to help to create a protective environment for children;

(b) To adopt measures to prevent violence within the family and the community, address cultural acceptance or tolerance of violence against children, including gender-related violence, and challenge harmful practices;

(c) To encourage and support the development and implementation at every level of government of comprehensive plans for the prevention of violence against children in all of its forms, based on in-depth analysis of the problem and incorporating:

- (i) An inventory of existing policies and programmes;
- (ii) Well-defined responsibilities for the relevant institutions, agencies and personnel involved in preventive measures;
- (iii) Mechanisms for the appropriate coordination of preventive measures between governmental and non-governmental agencies;
- (iv) Evidence-based policies and programmes that are continually monitored and carefully evaluated in the course of implementation;
- (v) Parental capacity-building and family support as the primary preventive measures, while strengthening child protection in school and in the community;
- (vi) Methods for effectively identifying, mitigating and reducing the risk of violence against children;
- (vii) Public awareness-raising and community involvement in prevention policies and programmes;
- (viii) Close interdisciplinary cooperation, with the involvement of all relevant agencies, civil society groups, local and religious leaders and, where relevant, other stakeholders;
- (ix) Participation of children and families in policies and programmes for the prevention of criminal activities and victimization;

(d) To identify the specific vulnerabilities and risks faced by children in different situations and to adopt proactive measures to reduce those risks;

(e) To take appropriate actions to support and protect all children, in particular children in different situations of vulnerability and children in need of special protection;

(f) To be guided by the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime and play a leading role in developing effective crime prevention strategies and in creating and maintaining institutional frameworks for their implementation and review.

14. The risk of violence against children committed by children should be addressed by specific prevention measures, including measures:

(a) To prevent physical, psychological and sexual violence exerted, often through bullying, by children against other children;

(b) To prevent the violence sometimes exerted by groups of children, including violence by youth gangs;

(c) To prevent the recruitment, use and victimization of children by youth gangs;

(d) To identify and protect children, in particular girls, who are linked to gang members and who are vulnerable to sexual exploitation;

(e) To encourage law enforcement agencies to use multi-agency intelligence to proactively profile local risk and, accordingly, to direct enforcement and disruption activity.

15. The risk of violence associated with trafficking in children and various forms of exploitation by criminal groups should be addressed by specific prevention measures, including measures:

(a) To prevent the recruitment, use and victimization of children by criminal groups, terrorist entities or violent extremist groups;

(b) To prevent the sale of children, trafficking in children, child prostitution and child pornography;

(c) To prevent the production, possession and dissemination of images and all other materials that depict, glorify or incite violence against children, including when perpetrated by children, particularly through information technologies, such as the Internet, in particular social networking environments.

16. Broad public education and awareness campaigns are required. Member States, in cooperation with educational institutions, non-governmental organizations, relevant professional associations and the media, are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To implement and support effective public awareness and public education initiatives that prevent violence against children by promoting respect for their rights and by educating their families and communities about the harmful impact of violence;

(b) To raise awareness of how to prevent and respond to violence against children among persons who have regular contact with children in the justice, child protection, social welfare, health and education sectors and in areas relating to sport, culture and leisure activities;

(c) To encourage and support inter-agency cooperation in implementing violence prevention activities and programmes, planning and delivering public information campaigns, training professionals and volunteers, gathering data on the incidence of violence against children, monitoring and evaluating the effectiveness of programmes and strategies and exchanging information on good practices and lessons learned;

(d) To encourage the private sector, in particular the information and communications technology sector, the tourism and travel industry and the banking and finance sectors, and civil society to participate in the development and implementation of policies to prevent the exploitation and abuse of children;

(e) To encourage the media to contribute to community efforts to prevent and respond to violence against children and to promote changes in social norms that tolerate such violence, and to encourage the establishment of media-led ethical guidelines that will allow child-friendly coverage and reportage on cases involving child victims of abuse, exploitation, neglect and discrimination, taking into consideration the right of children to privacy;

(f) To involve children, their families, communities, local leaders, religious leaders and criminal justice and other relevant professionals in discussing the impact and detrimental effects of violence against children and ways to prevent violence and eliminate harmful practices;

(g) To challenge attitudes that condone or normalize violence against children, including the tolerance and acceptance of corporal punishment and harmful practices, and the acceptance of violence.

17. In order to address the vulnerability and the specific risks of violence faced by unaccompanied children, migrant children and children who are refugees or asylum seekers, Member States are urged, as appropriate and without prejudice to their obligations under international law:

(a) To ensure that these children have access to independent assistance, advocacy and advice, that they are always placed in appropriate accommodation and treated in a manner that is fully compatible with their best interests, that they are separated from adults when necessary to protect them and, when applicable, to sever relationships with smugglers and traffickers, and that a legally appointed representative is available from the moment an unaccompanied child is detected by the authorities;

(b) To conduct regular analyses of the nature of the threats faced by these children and to assess their needs for assistance and protection;

(c) To uphold the principle of burden-sharing and solidarity with the host country and to enhance international cooperation.

III. Promoting research and data collection, analysis and dissemination

18. Member States, the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, relevant entities of the United Nations system, other relevant international organizations, research institutes, non-governmental organizations and professional associations are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To set up and strengthen mechanisms for the systematic and coordinated collection of data on violence against children, including on violence against children in contact with the justice system;

(b) To monitor and publish periodic reports on cases of violence against children reported to the police and other criminal justice agencies, including the number of cases, apprehension or arrest and clearance rates, prosecution and case disposition with regard to the alleged offenders and the prevalence of violence against children and, in so doing, to make use of data derived from population-based surveys. The reports should disaggregate data by type of violence and include, for example, information on the age and sex of the alleged offender and his or her relationship to the victim;

(c) To develop a multilevel system of reporting, starting from the most basic unit of government to the national level and to allow, in accordance with national legislation, the exchange of relevant information, statistics and data among all relevant institutions to help to ensure comprehensive data gathering for policy and programme development that will promote child protection;

(d) To develop population-based surveys and child-sensitive methodologies aimed at collecting data regarding children, including crime and victimization surveys, to allow for assessment of the nature and extent of violence against children;

(e) To develop and implement indicators relating to the performance of the justice system in preventing and responding to violence against children;

(f) To develop and monitor indicators relating to the prevalence of violence against children in contact with the justice system;

(g) To evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of the justice system in meeting the needs of child victims of violence and preventing such violence, including with regard to the way in which the justice system treats child victims of violence, the use it makes of different intervention models and the degree to which it cooperates with other agencies responsible for the protection of children, and also to evaluate and assess the impact of current legislation, rules and procedures relating to violence against children;

(h) To collect, analyse and disseminate data on independent inspections of places of detention, access to complaint mechanisms by children in detention and outcomes of complaints and investigations in accordance with the obligations of States under international human rights law;

(i) To use research studies and data collection to inform policy and practice and to exchange and disseminate information concerning successful violence prevention practices;

(j) To encourage and provide sufficient financial support for research on violence against children;

(k) To ensure that data, periodic reports and research are aimed at supporting the efforts of Member States to address violence against children and are used in the framework of constructive cooperation and dialogue with and among Member States.

Part two

Enhancing the ability and capacity of the criminal justice system to respond to violence against children and protect child victims

IV. Establishing effective detection and reporting mechanisms

19. In order to respond to the need to detect and report acts of violence against children, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To ensure that measures are taken to identify risk factors for different types of violence and identify signs of actual violence in order to trigger appropriate intervention as early as possible;

(b) To ensure that criminal justice professionals who routinely come into contact with children in the course of their work are aware of risk factors and indicators of various forms of violence, in particular at the national level, and that they have received guidance and are trained on how to interpret such indicators and have the knowledge, willingness and ability necessary to take appropriate action, including the provision of immediate protection;

(c) To legally require professionals who routinely come into contact with children in the course of their work to notify appropriate authorities if they suspect that a child is, or is likely to become, a victim of violence;

(d) To ensure that safe child- and gender-sensitive approaches, procedures and complaint, reporting and counselling mechanisms are established by law, are in conformity with the obligations of Member States under the relevant international human rights instruments, take into account relevant international standards and norms on crime prevention and criminal justice and are easily accessible to all children and their representative or a third party without fear of reprisal or discrimination;

(e) To ensure that individuals, and in particular children, reporting in good faith alleged incidents of violence against children are protected against all forms of reprisal;

(f) To work with Internet service providers, mobile telephone companies, search engines, public Internet facilities and others to facilitate and, where feasible, enact appropriate legislative measures to ensure the reporting of any representation, by whatever means, of a child engaged in real or simulated explicit sexual activities or any representation of the sexual parts of a child for primarily sexual purposes, defined as child pornography under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child Pornography to the police or other authorized bodies and the blocking of access to websites where such material is available or the deletion of illegal content, and to keep records, in accordance with the law, and preserve evidence for a period of time and as determined by law for the purpose of investigation and prosecution.

V. Offering effective protection to child victims of violence

20. In order to more effectively protect child victims of violence through the criminal justice process and avoid their secondary victimization, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments, to take appropriate measures:

(a) To ensure that laws clearly define the roles and responsibilities of government departments and define standards for the actions of other institutions, services and facilities responsible for the detection of violence against children and the care and protection of children, in particular in cases of domestic violence;

(b) To ensure that police and other law enforcement agencies have, with judicial authorization where required by national law, adequate powers to enter premises and conduct arrests in cases of violence against children and to take immediate measures to ensure the safety of the children;

(c) To ensure that police, prosecutors, judges and all other relevant professionals who may be in contact with child victims respond promptly to incidents of violence against children and that relevant cases are managed expeditiously and efficiently;

(d) To ensure that criminal justice and other relevant professionals, in dealing with cases of child victims of violence, pay particular attention to child- and gender-sensitive approaches, including through the use of modern technologies in different stages of criminal investigations and criminal proceedings;

(e) To ensure that national standards, procedures and protocols are developed and implemented among relevant national actors in order to respond with sensitivity to child victims of violence whose physical or psychological integrity remains at serious risk and requires their urgent removal from the dangerous context, and that temporary protection and care are provided in an appropriate place of safety pending a full determination of the best interests of the child;

(f) To ensure that the police, courts and other competent authorities have the legal authority to issue and enforce protection measures such as restraining or barring orders in cases of violence against children, including removal of the perpetrator from the domicile and prohibiting further contact with the victim and other affected parties inside and outside the domicile, as well as to impose penalties for breaches of those orders in accordance with national legislation, and to ensure that, when the child victim of violence remains under the care and protection of the non-abusive parent, the parent can safeguard the child and that such protective measures are not dependent on the initiation of criminal proceedings;

(g) To ensure that a registration system is established for judicial protection and restraining or barring orders, where such orders are permitted by national law, so that police and other criminal justice officials can quickly determine whether such an order is in force;

(h) To ensure that an informal or mediated settlement of cases involving violence against children takes place only when it is in the best interests of the child, and does not involve harmful practices, such as forced marriage, taking into account any power imbalance and the vulnerability of the child or his or her family in consenting to a settlement, with due regard for any future risk to the safety of the child or other children;

(i) To ensure that child victims of violence and their families have access to appropriate mechanisms or procedures in order to obtain redress and reparation, including from the State, and that relevant information about those mechanisms is publicized and easily accessible.

21. Recognizing the fact that, for prosecutions to be effective, it is often necessary for child victims of violence to participate in the criminal justice process, that in some jurisdictions children can be required or compelled to testify and that these children are vulnerable and in need of special protection, assistance and support in order to prevent further hardship and trauma that may result from their participation in the criminal justice process, Member States are required in this regard to ensure that the child's privacy is fully respected at all stages of the proceedings and are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To ensure the availability for children of special services, physical and mental health care and protection that take into account gender and are appropriate to the age, level of maturity and needs of the child in order to prevent further hardship and trauma and promote the physical and psychological recovery and social reintegration of child victims of violence;

(b) To ensure that children who have been subjected to sexual abuse, and especially girls who have become pregnant or children living with HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases as a result of the abuse, receive age-appropriate medical advice and counselling and are provided with the requisite physical and mental health care and support;

(c) To ensure that child victims receive assistance from support persons commencing at the initial report and continuing until such services are no longer required;

(d) To ensure that professionals who are responsible for assisting child victims make every effort to coordinate support to avoid unnecessary procedures and limit the number of interviews.

VI. Ensuring effective investigation and prosecution of incidents of violence against children

22. In order to effectively investigate and prosecute incidents of violence against children and bring the perpetrators to justice, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that the primary responsibility for initiating investigations and prosecutions lies with the police, the prosecution and other competent authorities and does not require an official complaint to be filed by the child victim of violence or a parent or legal guardian of the child;

(b) To adopt and implement policies and programmes aimed at guiding all decisions concerning the prosecution of offences of violence against children and ensuring the fairness, integrity and effectiveness of such decisions;

(c) To ensure that the applicable laws, policies, procedures, programmes and practices related to violence against children are consistently and effectively implemented by the criminal justice system;

(d) To ensure that child-sensitive investigation procedures are adopted and implemented so as to ensure that violence against children is correctly identified and to help provide evidence for administrative, civil and criminal proceedings, while according due assistance to children with special needs;

(e) To develop and implement policies and appropriate responses regarding the investigation and collection of evidence, in particular bodily samples, that take into account the needs and views of child victims of violence in accordance with the age and maturity of child victims, respect their dignity and integrity and minimize intrusion into their lives, while abiding by national standards for the collection of evidence;

(f) To ensure that the persons investigating alleged incidents of violence against children have the duty, powers and necessary authorization to obtain all the information necessary to the investigation, in accordance with criminal procedure as laid out in national law, and have at their disposal all the budgetary and technical resources necessary for effective investigation;

(g) To ensure that great care is taken to avoid subjecting a child victim of violence to further harm through the process of the investigation, including by inviting and giving due weight to the child's views in accordance with the age and maturity of the child and adopting child-sensitive and gender-sensitive investigation and prosecution practices;

(h) To ensure that decisions on the apprehension or arrest, detention and terms of any form of release of an alleged perpetrator of violence against a child take into account the need for the safety of the child and others related to the child, and that such procedures also prevent further acts of violence.

VII. Enhancing cooperation among various sectors

23. Acknowledging the complementary roles of the criminal justice system, child protection agencies, health, education and social service sectors and, in some cases, informal justice systems in creating a protective environment and preventing and responding to incidents of violence against children, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To ensure effective coordination and cooperation among the criminal justice, child protection, social welfare, health and education sectors in detecting, reporting and responding to violence against children and protecting and assisting child victims;

(b) To establish stronger operational links, particularly in emergency situations, between health and social service agencies, both public and private, and criminal justice agencies for the purposes of reporting, recording and responding appropriately to acts of violence against children, while protecting the privacy of child victims of violence;

(c) To establish stronger links between informal justice systems and justice and child protection institutions;

(d) To develop information systems and inter-agency protocols to facilitate the exchange of information and enable cooperation in identifying incidents of violence against children, responding to them, protecting child victims of violence and holding perpetrators accountable, in accordance with national laws on data protection;

(e) To ensure that violent acts against children, when suspected by health and social services or child protection agencies, are promptly reported to the police and other law enforcement agencies;

(f) To promote the establishment of specialized units specifically trained to deal with the complexities and sensitivities relating to child victims of violence, from which victims can receive comprehensive assistance, protection and intervention services, including health and social services, legal aid and police assistance and protection;

(g) To ensure that adequate medical, psychological, social and legal services sensitive to the needs of child victims of violence are in place to enhance the criminal justice management of cases involving violence against children, to encourage the development of specialized health services, including comprehensive, free and confidential forensic examinations by trained health providers and appropriate treatment, including HIV-specific treatment, and to facilitate and support inter-agency referrals of child victims for services;

(h) To provide support to children whose parents or caregivers are deprived of liberty in order to prevent and address the risk of violence such children may be exposed to as a result of the parents' or caregiver's actions or situation.

VIII. Improving criminal proceedings in matters involving child victims of violence

24. With respect to criminal proceedings in matters involving child victims of violence, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that comprehensive services are provided and protection measures are taken to ensure the safety, privacy and dignity of victims and their families at all stages of the criminal justice process, without prejudice to the ability or willingness of the victim to participate in an investigation or prosecution, and to protect them from intimidation and retaliation;

(b) To ensure that the child's views are given due weight in accordance with the age and maturity of the child, that the child is provided the opportunity to participate fully in any judicial and administrative proceedings, that every child is treated as a capable witness and that his or her testimony is not presumed to be invalid or untrustworthy by reason of the child's age alone, as long as the court or other competent authority deems that his or her age and maturity allow the giving of intelligible and credible testimony, with or without communication aids and other assistance;

(c) To ensure, in appropriate cases, that child victims of violence are not required to testify as part of the criminal justice process without the knowledge of their parents or legal guardians, that a child's refusal to testify does not constitute a criminal or other offence and that child victims of violence are able to testify in criminal proceedings through adequate measures and child-friendly practices that facilitate such testimony by protecting their privacy, identity and dignity, ensuring their safety before, during and after legal proceedings, avoiding secondary victimization and respecting their need and legal right to be heard while recognizing the legal rights of the accused;

(d) To ensure that child victims of violence, their parents or legal guardians and legal representatives, from the first contact with the justice system and throughout the judicial proceedings, are promptly and adequately informed of, inter alia, the rights of the child, the relevant procedures, available legal aid and the progress and disposition of the specific case;

(e) To ensure that the child victim's parents or legal guardian and, where appropriate, a child protection professional accompany the child during interviews conducted as part of the investigation and during trial proceedings, inter alia, while testifying as a witness, except in the following circumstances, as dictated by the best interests of the child:

- (i) The parent(s) or the legal guardian are the alleged perpetrator(s) of the offence committed against the child;
- (ii) The court deems that it is not in the best interests of the child to be accompanied by his or her parent(s) or legal guardian, including on the basis of credible concern expressed by the child;

(f) To ensure that proceedings relevant to the testimony of the child are explained to the child and conducted in language that is simple and comprehensible to the child and that interpretation into language that the child understands is made available;

(g) To protect the privacy of child victims of violence as a matter of primary importance, to protect them from undue exposure to the public, for example by excluding the public and the media from the courtroom during the child's testimony, and to protect information relating to a child's involvement in the justice process by maintaining confidentiality and restricting disclosure of information that may lead to identification of the child;

(h) To ensure, within the framework of national legal systems, that criminal proceedings involving child victims take place as soon as possible, unless delays are in the child's best interest;

(i) To provide for the use of child-sensitive procedures, including interview rooms designed for children, interdisciplinary services for child victims integrated within the same location, modified court environments that take child witnesses into consideration, recesses during a child's testimony, hearings scheduled at times of day appropriate to the age and maturity of the child, an appropriate notification system to ensure that the child goes to court only when necessary and other appropriate measures to facilitate the child's testimony;

(j) To ensure that, when child victims of violence may be the subject of intimidation, threats or harm, appropriate conditions are put in place to ensure their safety and that protective measures are taken, such as:

- (i) Preventing direct contact between a child victim and the accused at any point during the criminal justice process;
- (ii) Requesting restraining orders from a competent court, supported by a registry system;
- (iii) Requesting a pretrial detention order for the accused from a competent court, with "no contact" bail conditions;
- (iv) Requesting an order from a competent court to place the accused under house arrest if necessary;
- (v) Requesting protection for a child victim by the police or other relevant agencies and safeguarding the whereabouts of the child from disclosure.

25. Recognizing the serious nature of violence against children and taking into account the severity of the physical and psychological harm caused to child victims, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments, to ensure, when informal justice systems are resorted to, that violence against children is appropriately denounced and deterred, that perpetrators of violence against children are held accountable for their actions and that redress, support and compensation for child victims is provided.

26. Recognizing that measures to protect and assist child victims of violence must continue after the person accused of that violence has been convicted and sentenced, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure the right of a child victim of violence, or his or her parents or legal guardian, to be notified of the offender's release from detention or imprisonment if they so wish;

(b) To develop, implement and evaluate treatment and reintegration and rehabilitation programmes for those convicted of violence against children that prioritize the safety of victims and the prevention of recidivism;

(c) To ensure that judicial and correctional authorities, as appropriate, monitor compliance by perpetrators with any treatment or other court order;

(d) To ensure that the risk to a child victim of violence and the best interests of that child are considered at the time of making decisions concerning the release of the offender from detention or imprisonment or the re-entry of the offender into society.

IX. Ensuring that sentencing reflects the serious nature of violence against children

27. Recognizing the serious nature of violence against children, while taking into account the fact that the perpetrators of that violence may also be children, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that offences involving violence against children are, by law, punishable by appropriate penalties that take into account their grave nature;

(b) To ensure that national law takes into account specific factors which may aggravate a crime, including the age of the victim, the fact that the victim is severely handicapped mentally or intellectually, repeated violent acts, abuse of a position of trust or authority and perpetra-tion of violence against a child in a close relationship with the offender;

(c) To ensure that people who commit acts of violence against children while under the influence of alcohol, drugs or other substances are not exempt from criminal responsibility;

(d) To ensure that individuals can be prohibited or restrained by a court order or other means, within the framework of the national legal system, from harassing, intimidating or threatening children;

(e) To ensure that safety risks, including the vulnerability of victims, are taken into account in decisions concerning non-custodial sentences, bail, conditional release, parole or probation, especially when dealing with repeat and dangerous offenders;

(f) To make available to the courts, through legislation, a full range of sentencing dispositions to protect the victim, other affected persons and society from further violence, and to rehabilitate the perpetrator, as appropriate;

(g) To review and update national law to ensure that the decisions made by the courts in cases involving violent offences against children:

- (i) Denounce and deter violence against children;
- (ii) Hold offenders accountable, with due regard to their age and maturity, for their acts involving violence against children;
- (iii) Promote victim and community safety, including by separating the offender from the victim and, if necessary, from society;
- (iv) Allow for the severity of the physical and psychological harm caused to the victim to be taken into consideration;
- (v) Take into account the impact on victims and, if affected, their family members, of sentences imposed on perpetrators;
- (vi) Provide reparations for harm caused as a result of the violence;
- (vii) Promote the rehabilitation of the perpetrator, including by promoting a sense of responsibility in offenders and, where appropriate, rehabilitating and reintegrating perpetrators into the community.

X. Strengthening capacity and training of criminal justice professionals

28. Recognizing the responsibility of criminal justice professionals to prevent and respond to violence against children and to protect child victims of violence, as well as the need to facilitate and support this role, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To take measures and allocate adequate resources to develop the capacity of professionals within the criminal justice system to actively prevent violence against children and to protect and assist child victims of violence;

(b) To enable close cooperation, coordination and collaboration between criminal justice officials and other relevant professionals, especially those from the child protection, social welfare, health and education sectors;

(c) To design and implement training programmes for criminal justice professionals on the rights of the child, in particular on the Convention on the Rights of the Child and international human rights law, and to provide information on appropriate ways to deal with all children, in particular those who might be subject to discrimination, and to educate criminal justice professionals about the stages of child development, the process of cognitive development, the dynamics and nature of violence against children, the difference between regular peer groups and gangs, and the appropriate management of children who are under the influence of alcohol or drugs;

(d) To design and deliver guidance, information and training to informal justice system actors in order to ensure that their practices, legal interpretations and decisions comply with international human rights law and effectively protect children against all forms of violence;

(e) To design and implement mandatory, cross-cultural gender- and child-sensitivity training modules for criminal justice professionals on the unacceptability of all forms of violence against children and on the harmful impact on and consequences for all those who experience such violence;

(f) To ensure that criminal justice professionals receive adequate training and continuing education on all relevant national laws, policies and programmes, as well as relevant international legal instruments;

(g) To promote the development and use of specialized expertise among criminal justice professionals, including through the establishment, where possible, of specialized units or personnel and specialized courts or dedicated court time, and to ensure that all police officers, prosecutors, judges and other criminal justice professionals receive regular and institutionalized training to sensitize them to gender- and child-related issues and to build their capacity with regard to responding to violence against children;

(h) To ensure that criminal justice officials and other relevant authorities are adequately trained in their respective areas of competence:

- (i) To identify and respond appropriately to the specific needs of child victims of violence;
- (ii) To receive and treat all child victims of violence respectfully, with a view to preventing secondary victimization;
- (iii) To handle complaints confidentially;
- (iv) To conduct effective investigations of alleged incidents of violence against children;
- (v) To interact with child victims in an age-appropriate and child- and gender-sensitive manner;
- (vi) To conduct safety assessments and implement risk management measures;
- (vii) To enforce protection orders;
- (i) To support the development of codes of conduct for criminal justice professionals that prohibit violence against children, including safe complaint and referral procedures, and to encourage relevant professional associations to develop enforceable standards of practice and behaviour.

Part three

Preventing and responding to violence against children within the justice system

XI. Reducing the number of children in contact with the justice system

29. Recognizing the importance of avoiding the unnecessary criminalization and penalization of children, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments, to ensure that any conduct not considered a criminal offence or not penalized if committed by an adult is also not considered a criminal offence and not penalized if committed by a child, in order to prevent the child's stigmatization, victimization and criminalization.

30. In this regard, Member States are encouraged not to set the minimum age of criminal responsibility at too low an age level, bearing in mind the emotional, mental and intellectual maturity of children, and in this respect reference is made to the recommendations of the Committee on the Rights of the Child to increase the lower minimum age of criminal responsibility without exception to the age of 12 years as the absolute minimum age, and to continue to increase it to a higher age level.

31. Recognizing that an important and highly effective way of reducing the number of children in the justice system is through diversion measures, restorative justice programmes and the use of non-coercive treatment and education programmes as alternative measures to judicial proceedings, as well as the provision of support for families, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To consider diversion to community-based programmes and to provide police and other law enforcement officers, prosecutors and judges with options for diverting children away from the justice system, including warning and community work, to be applied in combination with restorative justice processes;

(b) To foster close cooperation among the justice, child protection, social welfare, health and education sectors, so as to promote the use and enhanced application of alternative measures to judicial proceedings and to detention;

(c) To consider designing and implementing restorative justice programmes for children as alternative measures to judicial proceedings;

(d) To consider the use of non-coercive treatment, education and assistance programmes as alternative measures to judicial proceedings and the development of alternative non-custodial interventions and effective social reintegration programmes.

XII. Preventing violence associated with law enforcement and prosecution activities

32. Mindful of the fact that police and other security forces can sometimes be responsible for acts of violence against children, Member States are urged, while taking into consideration relevant international legal instruments, to prevent abuse of power, arbitrary detention, corruption and extortion by police officers who target children and their families.

33. Member States are urged to effectively prohibit the use of all forms of violence, torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment to obtain information, extract confessions, coerce a child into acting as an informant or agent for the police, or engage a child in activities against his or her will.

34. Mindful of the fact that arrests and investigations are situations in which violence against children can occur, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that all arrests are conducted in conformity with the law, to limit the apprehension, arrest and detention of children to situations in which these measures are necessary as a last resort, and to promote and implement, where possible, alternatives to arrest and detention, including summonses and notices to appear, in cases involving children as alleged perpetrators;

(b) To implement the principle that the apprehension or arrest of children should be conducted in a child-sensitive manner;

(c) To prohibit the use of firearms, electric shock weapons and violent methods to apprehend and arrest children, and to adopt measures and procedures that carefully limit and guide the use of force and instruments of restraint by the police while apprehending or arresting children;

(d) To require, ensure and monitor police compliance with the obligation to notify parents, legal guardians or caregivers immediately following the apprehension or arrest of a child;

(e) To ensure that, when considering whether a parent, legal guardian, legal representative or responsible adult or, when necessary, a child protection professional is to be present at, or to observe a child during, the interview or interrogation process, the best interests of the child as well as other relevant factors are taken into consideration;

(f) To ensure that children are informed of their rights and have prompt access to legal aid during police interrogation and while in police detention, and that they may consult their legal representative freely and fully confidentially;

(g) To review, evaluate and, where necessary, update national laws, policies, codes, procedures, programmes and practices to implement policies and strict procedures for searching children while respecting their privacy and dignity, for taking intimate and non-intimate samples from child suspects and for assessing the age and gender of a child;

(h) To implement measures to specifically prevent violence related to unlawful practices by the police, including arbitrary arrests and detention and extrajudicial punishment of children for unlawful or unwanted behaviours;

(i) To establish accessible, child-appropriate and safe procedures for children to complain about incidents of violence during their arrest or interrogation or while in police custody;

(j) To ensure that alleged incidents of violence against children during their contact with the police are independently, promptly and effectively investigated and that those alleged to have been implicated in violence against children are removed from any position of control or power, whether direct or indirect, over complainants, witnesses and their families, as well as those conducting the investigation;

(k) To take measures to address the risk of violence and protect children during their transport to a court, hospital or other facility, including the risk of violence while being held in court holding cells together with adults;

(l) To ensure that, when a parent, legal guardian or caregiver is arrested, the child's best interests, care and other needs are taken into account.

XIII. Ensuring that deprivation of liberty is used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time

35. Recognizing that limiting the use of detention as a sentence and encouraging the use of alternatives to detention can help to reduce the risk of violence against children within the justice system, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) Not to deprive children of their liberty unlawfully or arbitrarily and, in cases of deprivation of liberty, to ensure that it is in conformity with the law and used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time;

(b) To ensure that children have continued access to government-funded legal aid during all stages of the justice process;

(c) To ensure that children can exercise their right to appeal a sentence and obtain the legal aid necessary to do so;

(d) To provide for the possibility of early release and make available aftercare and social reintegration programmes and services;

(e) To facilitate professional specialization, or at least specialized training, for criminal justice professionals dealing with children alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law.

XIV. Prohibiting torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

36. Recognizing that no child should be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, Member States are urged:

(a) To review, evaluate and, where necessary, update their national laws to effectively prohibit sentences involving any form of corporal punishment for crimes committed by children;

(b) To review, evaluate and, where necessary, update their national laws to ensure that, under legislation and practice, neither capital punishment nor life imprisonment without the possibility of release is imposed for offences committed by persons when they were under 18 years of age.

XV. Preventing and responding to violence against children in places of detention

37. Recognizing that the majority of children deprived of their liberty are in police custody or pretrial or preventive detention and that those children might be at risk of violence, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that children in police custody or pretrial or preventive detention can promptly appear before a court or tribunal to challenge that detention and that they have an opportunity to be heard either directly or through a representative or an appropriate body in a manner consistent with the procedural rules of national law, in order to obtain a prompt decision on any such action;

(b) To reduce delays in the justice process, to expedite trials and other proceedings involving children alleged as, accused of or recognized as having infringed criminal law, and to avoid the resulting prolonged or arbitrary detention of children while they await trial or the conclusion of a police investigation;

(c) To ensure the effective oversight and independent monitoring of all cases of police custody or pretrial or preventive detention of children;

(d) To endeavour to reduce pretrial detention by, inter alia, adopting legislative and administrative measures and policies on its preconditions, limitations, duration and alternatives and by taking measures aimed at the implementation of existing legislation, as well as by ensuring access to justice and legal aid.

38. Recognizing that, when children must be detained, the conditions of detention themselves can be conducive to various forms of violence against children, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that all detention facilities have adopted and implemented child-sensitive policies, procedures and practices, and to monitor compliance with them;

(b) To establish a maximum capacity for all places of detention and take concrete and sustained measures to address and reduce overcrowding in such institutions;

(c) To ensure that, in all places of detention, children are separated from adults and girls are separated from boys;

(d) To promote good practices in order to strengthen the protection and safety of children living in custody with an incarcerated parent, including consultation with the parents to determine their views regarding their child's care during the period of custody and the provision of special mother-and-child units or, where parents are detained for violation of immigration laws, separate family units in order to identify their special needs and accordingly provide appropriate protection;

(e) To facilitate the assessment and classification of children held in detention facilities in order to identify their special needs and accordingly provide appropriate protection and individualize treatment and interventions, including with respect to the specific needs of girls, and to ensure that there is a sufficient array of facilities to accommodate and adequately protect children of different ages or with differing needs;

(f) To ensure that treatment and support is offered to detained children with special needs, including to girls who are pregnant, give birth and/or raise children in detention, and that treatment for mental illness, disabilities, HIV/AIDS and other communicable and non-communicable diseases and drug addiction is offered, and to address the needs of children at risk of committing suicide or other forms of self-harm;

(g) To ensure that appropriate care and protection is provided to children accompanying a parent or legal guardian deprived of liberty on any ground, including for a violation of immigration law;

(h) To review, update and improve safety and security policies and practices within places of detention to reflect the obligation of the authorities to ensure the safety of children and protect them against all forms of violence, including violence among children;

(i) To prevent all forms of discrimination against or ostracism or stigmatization of detained children;

(j) To take strict measures to ensure that all alleged incidents of violence, including sexual abuse of children in a place of detention, are immediately reported and independently, promptly and effectively investigated by appropriate authorities and, when well founded, effectively prosecuted.

39. Recognizing also that it is imperative to minimize the risk of violence against children in detention, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure that children in detention and their parents and/or legal guardians are aware of their rights and can access the mechanisms in place to protect those rights, including access to legal aid;

(b) To prohibit the use of placement in a dark cell or closed or solitary confinement or any other punishment that may compromise the physical or mental health of a child;

(c) To adopt and implement strict policies guiding the use of force and physical restraints on children during their detention;

(d) To adopt policies prohibiting the carrying and use of weapons by personnel in any facility where children are detained;

(e) To prohibit and effectively prevent the use of corporal punishment as a disciplinary measure, to adopt clear and transparent disciplinary policies and procedures that encourage the use of positive and educational forms of discipline and to establish in law the duty of managers and personnel of detention facilities to record, review and monitor every instance in which disciplinary measures or punishment are used;

(f) To prohibit any form of violence or threats of violence against children by staff of places of detention in order to force children to engage in activities against their will;

(g) To ensure the effective supervision and protection of children, as necessary, from violence by other children and adults, including through measures to prevent bullying by adults and by other children, and from self-harm;

(h) To prevent violence associated with youth gang activities and racist harassment and violence within places of detention;

(i) To encourage and facilitate, wherever possible and in the best interests of the child, frequent family visits and regular contact and communication between children and their family members, as well as with the outside world, and to ensure that disciplinary sanctions for detained children do not include a prohibition of contact with family members;

(j) To prevent violence against and abuse of children suffering from mental illness or drug addiction, including through treatment and other measures to protect them from self-harm.

40. Recognizing the importance of preventing violence against children through appropriate staff recruitment, selection, training and supervision, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To ensure that all personnel working with children in places of detention are qualified, selected on the basis of professional capacity, integrity, ability and personal suitability, sufficiently remunerated, adequately trained and effectively supervised;

(b) To ensure that any person who has been convicted of a criminal offence against a child is not eligible to work in an agency or organization providing services to children, and to require agencies and organizations providing services to children to prevent persons who have been convicted of a criminal offence against a child from coming into contact with children;

(c) To train all personnel and make them aware of their responsibility to identify early signs of risks of violence and mitigate that risk, to report incidents of violence against children and to actively protect children against violence in an ethical and child- and gender-sensitive manner.

41. Taking into account the distinctive needs of girls and their vulnerability to gender-based violence, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To eliminate the risk of all forms of harassment, violence and discrimination against girls;

(b) To ensure that the special needs and vulnerabilities of girls are taken into account in decision-making processes;

(c) To ensure that the dignity of girls is respected and protected during personal searches, which shall only be carried out by female staff who have been properly trained in appropriate searching methods and in accordance with established procedures;

(d) To implement alternative screening methods, such as scans, to replace strip searches and invasive body searches in order to avoid the harmful psychological and possible physical impact of such searches;

(e) To adopt and implement clear policies and regulations on the conduct of staff aimed at providing maximum protection for girls deprived of their liberty from any physical or verbal violence, abuse or sexual harassment.

42. Recognizing the crucial importance of independent monitoring and inspection mechanisms, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To ensure effective monitoring of, regular access to and inspection of places of detention and community-based institutions by national independent bodies and national human rights institutions, ombudspersons or members of the judiciary, who are empowered to conduct unannounced visits, conduct interviews with children and staff in private and investigate allegations of violence;

(b) To ensure that they cooperate with relevant international and regional monitoring mechanisms that are legally entitled to visit institutions in which children are deprived of their liberty;

(c) To promote international cooperation with regard to best practices and lessons learned related to national monitoring and inspection mechanisms;

(d) To ensure that all deaths of children in detention facilities are reported and promptly and independently investigated, and to promptly endeavour, as appropriate, to investigate injuries suffered by children and ensure that their parents, legal guardian or closest relatives are informed.

XVI. Detecting, assisting and protecting children who are victims of violence as a result of their involvement with the justice system as alleged or sentenced offenders

43. Given the crucial importance of providing children who report abuse and incidents of violence within the justice system with immediate protection, support and counselling, Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international human rights instruments:

(a) To establish complaint mechanisms for child victims of violence within the justice system that are safe, confidential, effective and easily accessible;

(b) To ensure that children receive clear information, in particular when they first arrive in a place of detention, both verbally and in writing, about their rights, relevant procedures, how they can exercise their right to be heard and listened to, effective remedies to address incidents of violence and available services for assistance and support, as well as information on seeking compensation for damages, that such information is age- and culturally appropriate and child- and gender-sensitive, and that parents and legal guardians are equally provided with relevant information on these measures;

(c) To protect children who report abuse, specifically taking into account the risks of retaliation, including by removing those allegedly implicated in violence against or ill-treatment of children from any position of control or power, whether direct or indirect, over complainants, witnesses and their families, and those conducting the investigation;

(d) To take effective measures to protect children who provide information or act as witnesses in proceedings related to a case involving violence within the justice system;

(e) To provide access to fair, prompt and equitable redress mechanisms and accessible procedures for seeking and obtaining compensation for child victims of violence in the justice system, and to endeavour to adequately fund victim compensation schemes.

44. Recognizing the importance of detecting and responding to all incidents of violence against children as a result of their involvement with the justice system as alleged or sentenced offenders, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To ensure that laws establishing obligations to report violence against children in the justice system respect children's rights and are incorporated into the relevant regulations of agencies and rules of conduct, and that all those working with children have clear guidance on reporting requirements and consequences;

(b) To implement protection measures for staff who report in good faith alleged incidents of violence against children, and to adopt rules and procedures that protect the identity of professionals and private individuals who bring cases of violence against children to the attention of the competent authorities;

(c) To ensure the prompt, independent and effective investigation of all alleged incidents of violence against children involved with the justice system, as alleged or sentenced offenders, by competent and independent authorities, including medical personnel, with full respect for the principle of confidentiality.

XVII. Strengthening accountability and oversight mechanisms

45. Member States are urged to take all appropriate measures to combat impunity and the tolerance of violence against children within the justice system, including through awareness-raising programmes, education and effective prosecution of violent offences committed against children within the justice system.

46. Member States are encouraged to ensure that there is a clear and sustained commitment and obligation at all levels of justice institutions to prevent and address violence against children, including in a child- and gender-sensitive manner.

47. Member States are urged, as appropriate and while taking into consideration relevant international legal instruments:

(a) To promote accountability for incidents of violence against children in the justice system, including by adopting and implementing effective measures to enhance integrity and prevent corruption;

(b) To establish internal and external accountability mechanisms in policing and in places of detention;

(c) To establish all key elements of an effective accountability system, including independent national oversight, monitoring and complaint mechanisms for agencies dealing with children;

(d) To ensure the independent, prompt and effective investigation and prosecution of offences involving violence against children within the justice system;

(e) To ensure that all public officials who are found to be responsible for violence against children are held accountable through workplace disciplinary measures, termination of employment and criminal justice investigations, where appropriate;

(f) To promote transparency and public accountability regarding all measures taken to hold accountable perpetrators of violence and those who are responsible for preventing such violence;

(g) To undertake criminal or other public investigations into all serious reports of violence against children at any stage of the justice process, and to ensure that such investigations are carried out by persons of integrity, are adequately funded and are completed without undue delay.

Strengthening social policies for crime prevention

During the regular part of its twenty-third (2014) session, CCPCJ considered and approved for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution on the issue of strengthening social policies as a tool for crime prevention (see below). In doing so, participants highlighted the importance of tailored approaches for youth and the potential of social policies with regard to effective crime prevention strategies and programmes.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2014/30], adopted resolution 2014/21 without vote [agenda item 17 (c)].

Strengthening social policies as a tool for crime prevention

The Economic and Social Council,

Considering the importance of adopting effective policies, programmes and actions to prevent and confront crime, violence and insecurity, including measures for the protection of individuals and groups in vulnerable situations,

Recognizing the importance of integrating crime prevention considerations into all relevant social and economic policies and programmes, placing particular emphasis on communities, families, children and youth,

Recognizing also that States should encourage partnerships between all appropriate levels of government and relevant stakeholders within civil society, aimed at ensuring the strengthening and sustainability of effective crime prevention strategies, programmes and initiatives, as appropriate, and at promoting a culture of peace and non-violence,

Emphasizing that public security policies should encourage measures for addressing the multiple causes of crime, violence and insecurity,

Recognizing that the development and adoption of crime prevention policies and programmes and their monitoring and evaluation are the responsibility of States, and reaffirming that such efforts should be based on a participatory, collaborative and integrated approach that involves all relevant stakeholders, including those from civil society,

Recognizing also the importance of strengthening public-private partnerships in preventing crime in all its forms and manifestations, through joint and coordinated programmes,

Mindful of the prevention provisions of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption, as well as relevant standards and norms on crime prevention and criminal justice, in particular the United Nations Guidelines for the Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency (the Riyadh Guidelines), the guidelines for cooperation and technical assistance in the field of urban crime prevention, the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime and the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Welcoming the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the area of crime prevention, including the development of technical tools and the provision of technical assistance to requesting Member States, in particular in the field of statistics and data collection and analysis in support of violence and crime prevention policies,

Underlining the need for all States to implement in a comprehensive, integrated and participatory manner crime prevention strategies, policies and programmes that address the multiple risk factors of both crime and victimization, based on the best available evidence and good practices, as an integral element of strategies to foster comprehensive social and economic development,

1. Encourages Member States to develop and implement, as appropriate, comprehensive policies and programmes that, by fostering social development, are aimed at the prevention of crime and violence and that address the multiple factors that contribute to crime and victimization, in close cooperation with relevant stakeholders, including civil society, and based on available evidence and good practices;

2. Invites Member States to consider, when developing crime prevention programmes, such issues as social inclusion, the strengthening of the social fabric, access to justice, social reintegration of offenders and access to health and education services, to consider the needs of victims of crime when developing those programmes, and to promote a culture of lawfulness and the well-being of individuals, with a particular emphasis on children and youth;

3. Encourages Member States to review and update, where appropriate, existing crime prevention strategies and to ensure that their effectiveness is measurable, in order to respond to the needs of the population and society as a whole;

4. Urges Member States to create and implement crime prevention policies and programmes designed to promote, inter alia, the participation of youth in achieving safer and more just, democratic and cohesive societies;

5. Invites Member States to exchange successful experiences and best practices in crime prevention with other Member States, thus promoting regional cooperation and coordination in crime prevention, with a view to addressing shared challenges through a comprehensive approach, in order to achieve significant long-term progress in this field;

6. Encourages Member States to coordinate crime prevention measures by assigning them to appropriate government bodies or, as necessary, creating a dedicated body that addresses and studies ways of strengthening social policies for crime prevention;

7. Commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for its development of tools and facilitation of technical assistance programmes, urges the Office to continue to strengthen such programmes, and calls upon the Organization, upon request by Member States, to support the sharing of successful experiences and best practices between Member States;

8. Recommends that, in order to deepen cooperation and coordination among Member States, the issue of social policies for the prevention of violence and crime should be included as a matter of particular importance within the work of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

9. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources for the purposes described above, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

Strengthening the goAML system

Commission action. On 16 May [E/2014/30 (res. 23/3)], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice acknowledged the results achieved by Member States through the use of the goAML (Anti-Money-Laundering) software system, a product of the UNODC Information and Technology Service available for financial intelligence units and developed within the framework of the Global Programme against Money-Laundering, Proceeds of Crime and the Financing of Terrorism. It encouraged Member States to combat money-laundering, the financing of terrorism, corruption and transnational organized crime through implementation of financial intelligence tools such as goAML, and to consider the identification and use of specialized financial intelligence software systems on the basis of their national needs. The Commission requested UNODC to support States by continuing the development, implementation and maintenance of the goAML software within its operational and funding modalities, and requested the UNODC Executive Director to report to the Commission at its twenty-fourth (2015) session on progress made in that regard.

Statistics

In 2014, the United Nations continued its work on various aspects of statistics, mainly through the Statistical Commission and the Statistics Division of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs. In January, the General Assembly stressed the critical role of high-quality official statistical information in informed policy decision-making and endorsed the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics. In March, the Statistical Commission welcomed the first draft of guidelines on how to strengthen implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics, as presented by the Friends of the Chair group. The Commission asked the Friends of the Chair group to continue working on the matter and invited countries to contribute to the implementation guidelines by submitting comments and good practices. The Commission also established a technical committee responsible for advancing the research agenda of the System of Environmental-Economic Accounting Central Framework; established the Friends of the Chair group to carry out the evaluation of the 2011 round of the International Comparison Programme; welcomed the progress made in Asia and the Pacific to strengthen statistics through regional cooperation; and stressed the importance of the effective coordination of UN statistical activities and endorsed the proposal that UN chief statisticians hold regular meetings. The Commission further decided to celebrate the next World Statistics Day (20 October 2015) under the general theme of “Statistics for better decision-making—statistics for better development/life”.

Statistical Commission

In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2013/235 [YUN 2013, p. 1260], the Statistical Commission held its forty-fifth session in New York from 4 to 7 March [E/2014/24]. The Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of a draft decision on the report of the Commission on its forty-fifth session and the provisional agenda and dates for its forty-sixth (2015) session.

The Commission brought to the Council’s attention decisions on implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics; programme review; environmental-economic accounting; international trade and economic globalization statistics; information and communications technology for development; the international comparison programme; disability statistics; big data and modernization of statistical systems; UN Statistics Division publications; coordination of statistical activities in the UN system; World Statistics Day; and regional statistical development. It took note of 18 reports considered during the session [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], as well as the oral report presented by the Acting Director of the UN Statistics Division concerning the Division’s activities, plans and priorities and the proposed strategic framework for the biennium 2016–2017 [dec. 45/115].

The Commission had before it a note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report [E/CN.3/2014/3] of the Bureau on the review of the Commission’s working methods. The report contained a series of recommendations for the Commission to consider in deciding on appropriate changes in its working methods.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/102)], the Statistical Commission supported the Bureau’s recommendation to strengthen the role of the Bureau in playing an active role in the intersession period, consulting with and informing countries and international organizations; and invited the Bureau to implement the main recommendations for the next session of the Commission.

On 13 June, by decision 2014/219, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Commission on its forty-fifth session; decided that the forty-sixth session would be held in New York from 3 to 6 March 2015; and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

Demographic and social statistics

Population and housing censuses

In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2013/235, the Secretary-General reported [E/CN.3/2014/16] on the progress of the 2010 World Population and Housing Census Programme during the period 2010–2013; the revision of the Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses; and the release of the Principles and Recommendations for a Vital Statistics System, Revision 3.

At the end of November 2013, 205 countries or areas in the world had conducted a population and housing census, which represented the enumeration of more than 91 per cent of the world population. It was estimated that coverage would increase to 97 per cent by the end of the census round, which spanned from 2005 to 2014. In preparation for the 2020 World Population and Housing Census Programme, the Statistics Division organized the first (New York, 29 October–1 November 2013) and second (New York, 29 April–2 May 2014) Expert Group Meetings on Revising the Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses. Participants agreed that the third revision of that international statistical standard would be submitted to the Statistical Commission for adoption in February 2015.

In February 2013, the Statistics Division finalized the Principles and Recommendations for a Vital Statistics System, Revision 3, the major international statistical standard for civil registration and vital statistics. The Division also maintained a civil registration and vital statistical knowledge centre to facilitate the international exchange and sharing of knowledge and information on civil registration and vital statistics.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Disability statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it the report [E/CN.3/2014/10 & Corr.1] of the Washington Group on Disability Statistics on activities to improve the quality, availability and comparability of disability statistics. Prepared with inputs from the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the World Health Organization (WHO), the report described the work of the Washington Group on developing and testing questions on disability for use in censuses and surveys; joint work by the Washington Group and UNICEF on developing and testing question sets on child functioning and disability and on barriers to full participation in education for use in the Multiple Indicator Cluster Surveys and other surveys focused on children; and the development of a model disability survey led by WHO. The Commission was invited to comment on those activities; consider and approve the workplan of the Washington Group for 2014; urge support through UN regional offices for training, cognitive and field testing, technical assistance and workshops; and express views on the status of collaborative efforts to improve the quality of disability statistics and on recommendations for strengthening those efforts.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/109)], the Commission commended the collaboration between the Washington Group and UNICEF, particularly in developing the new questionnaire modules on child functioning and disability for use in surveys, and on environment and school participation to capture the environmental aspects of child disability. It welcomed the collaboration between the Washington Group and WHO on disability measurement, and encouraged the two parties to work together to develop the model disability survey instrument and to meet the objectives of both parties by including in the model survey the questions developed by the Washington Group. The Commission supported the work programme of the Washington Group for 2014–2015 and took note of the change in the implementation timeline of the eleventh revision of the International Classification of Diseases.

Drug statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/19 & Corr.1] of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on the challenges faced by countries and international and regional organizations in the collection and reporting of data on the supply and use of drugs, and on improving the quality and availability of drug statistics at the national, regional and international levels. The report gave recommendations for improving methodologies; promoting and reinforcing the role of national statistical offices; developing capacity to improve data collection and reporting; and improving international data collection and analysis. UNODC suggested that stakeholders review the regional and international mechanisms for collecting and reporting drug statistics with a view to streamlining the processes; that national statistical offices take a lead role in ensuring the quality of drug statistics and promoting coordination for the collection and reporting of drug statistics; and that the Statistical Commission and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs establish a joint group to develop standards and guidelines for priority indicators.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Gender statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/18] of the Secretary-General on gender statistics, which summarized the recent activities of the UN Statistics Division and the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics under the umbrella of the Global Gender Statistics Programme. It also reported on the results of capacity-building efforts to strengthen gender statistics programmes in countries and on the organization of the seventh meeting of the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics.

Following the recommendations of the Statistical Commission [YUN 2013, p. 1261], the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics had identified a minimum set of gender indicators composed of 52 quantitative indicators grouped into 3 tiers and 11 qualitative indicators covering norms and laws on gender equality. The Statistics Division had developed a platform through which the indicators could be disseminated online. As at December 2013, the 35 tier I indicators, consisting mainly of gender indicators on education, employment and health, were disseminated through the platform. During its first year of implementation, the Evidence and

Data for Gender Equality Initiative, executed jointly by the Statistics Division and the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), sought to accelerate existing efforts to generate comparable gender indicators on education, employment, entrepreneurship and assets. The Initiative focused on the compilation and online dissemination of international data and metadata on education, employment and health; the development of international definitions and methods for measuring entrepreneurship and asset ownership; and the identification of countries that would pilot the newly developed methods to collect data on entrepreneurship and assets. The Statistics Division produced the online “Gender Statistics Manual: Integrating a Gender Perspective into Statistics”, and finalized and disseminated the “Guidelines for Producing Statistics on Violence against Women: Statistical Surveys”.

The meeting of the Advisory Group on Emerging Issues of the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics (New York, 11 September 2013) agreed on how to reconcile the minimum set of gender indicators with the “Guidelines for Producing Statistics on Violence against Women: Statistical Surveys”; took stock of progress in the implementation of the Evidence and Data for Gender Equality Initiative; and agreed on future priority areas of work. The seventh meeting of the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics (New York, 12–13 September 2013) discussed the minimum set of gender indicators and the related data compilation and protocols for data exchange between specialized agencies and the Statistics Division; new methodological guidelines and related plans for strengthening capacity on gender statistics; and the results of the global review of national gender statistics programmes at the country level. The Group agreed on its programme of work, which included preparations for the eighth meeting of the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics and the fifth Global Forum on Gender Statistics, both of which would be convened from 2 to 5 November 2014 in Aguascalientes, Mexico.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the Secretary-General’s report on gender statistics.

International migration statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/20] of the Secretary-General on migration statistics, which also summarized the activities of the Statistics Division and the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and partner organizations to improve the collection and availability of statistics on international migration. Though international migration was at the forefront of the global agenda, the availability of data on the scope of migration and its impacts on development remained deficient. The report discussed the three main sources of international migration statistics—population censuses, sample surveys and administrative records—and gave an overview of the availability of statistics on the stock of international migrants and on migration flows. It also discussed barriers that prevented migration data from being shared at the international level, noting there was an absence of coordination mechanisms among different national agencies involved in producing migration data, which resulted in a lack of consistency in the definitions used and the comparability of the statistics, as well as in their limited dissemination. To improve the quality of data on international migration and promote the application of common definitions and concepts by countries, the Statistics Division issued publications such as the Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses, Revision 2, and the Population Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs developed the Global Migration Database, which produced estimates of migrant stock disaggregated by age, sex, origin and destination for 232 countries and areas in the world.

The Secretary-General noted that initiatives for the collection, production or analysis of migration-related data and statistics were conducted by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO); Economic Commission for Europe; World Bank; International Labour Organization; UNICEF; and Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. The Global Migration Group, an inter-agency group comprising 15 UN entities and the International Organization for Migration, hosted a working group on data and research to promote cooperation and reduce the duplication of effort. Given the heightened attention of Member States to addressing migration challenges at the national, regional and global levels, the report suggested that the international statistical community establish a capacity-development programme to improve the collection, processing and analysis of migration data for policy planning. Such a programme could address all the pre-existing sources of migration data listed in the report.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the Secretary-General’s report.

Cultural statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission the report [E/CN.3/2014/21] of the Institute for Statistics of UNESCO on selected activities of its cultural statistics programme. The Institute was implementing the new global survey of cultural employment statistics, with the purpose of collecting internationally comparable data on cultural employment and producing the first global database of cultural employment statistics and indicators to support the work of countries, policymakers and other stakeholders. The survey would likely be administered on a biennial basis and respondents would primarily be national statistical offices. The Institute anticipated launching the first global collection of cultural employment statistics in the third quarter of 2015. The report also discussed the global implementation of the 2009 UNESCO Framework for Cultural Statistics, focusing on two principal capacity-building activities: production of the handbook series and the programme of training workshops. The Institute continued its work on producing two handbooks for publication by 2015: Measuring the Economic Contribution of Cultural Industries: A Case Study of Serbia and Festival Statistics: Key Concepts and Current Practices. The report noted that seven training workshops attended by 247 people were held from 2007 to 2013, with more being planned, particularly for the regions of Latin America and the Arab States. The objectives of the workshops were to provide training on cultural statistics topics, use and implementation of the UNESCO Framework for Cultural Statistics and to support the development of professional networks in cultural statistics.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Human settlements statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/17] of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) on human settlements statistics, which presented a methodology developed by UN-Habitat and partners to measure security of tenure, especially in urban areas, in a consistent manner across countries and regions. The report discussed progress achieved in the development of the method for monitoring security of tenure at three levels: people, land and policies. The measurement of security of tenure at the level of people could be done through stand-alone household surveys, such as the Urban Inequities Survey, or through existing surveys, such as the Demographic and Health Survey and the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey. Both of those types of survey were based on a representative sample that allowed a quantitative estimate of tenure security. Security of tenure at the land level could be achieved through community-based surveys, which could be mapped, assessed, evaluated and analysed. Assessments at the land/settlement level should cover specific information on the land's legal history; the land's current jurisdictional situation; the geographical dimension of land tenure; and the harmony between plans and actual land use patterns. To monitor security of tenure at the policy level, UN-Habitat developed the Legal and Institutional Framework Index and two indicators. The Index was meant to produce qualitative results, and the overall score attained at the end of the process was a subjective assessment that had to be supplemented by household and community surveys. The report concluded that the combination of all the instruments would provide integrated information related to secure tenure, and the use of the methodology by national statistical offices would contribute to better monitoring of the security of tenure in cities.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Economic statistics

National accounts

The Statistical Commission had before it the report [E/CN.3/2014/5] of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts, which discussed progress on the changeover to the System of National Accounts 2008 (2008 SNA) [YUN 2008, p. 1380]; guidance on 2008 SNA implementation issues, including from the Advisory Expert Group on National Accounts; activities of the Working Group and of the regional commissions; and the reporting of national accounts data. The Working Group discussed its initiation of manuals and handbooks to strengthen statistical capacity for compiling national accounts. Four such publications were completed in 2013 and annexed to the report was a list of publications that were planned or in progress. The translation of the 2008 SNA from English into the five remaining official UN languages (Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian, Spanish) had been completed and all language versions were available in electronic format on the Working Group's website. The Working Group also reported that despite progress in some countries, many developing countries were still a long way from adjusting their collections of economic statistics with a view to implementing the 2008 SNA with enough scope, detail and quality. Many of those countries needed technical assistance in adopting an integrated statistics programme in support of the implementation and the Working Group expressed the view that the Commission may establish a Friends of the Chair group to formulate a response to the need for scaling up capacity-building at the country level. The Friends of the Chair group could establish the modalities for a statistics programme focused on supporting accelerated SNA implementation by overcoming national issues in producing internationally comparable macroeconomic accounts.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/104)], the Commission endorsed the programme of work of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts and the Advisory Expert Group on National Accounts; appreciated the progress on the manuals, handbooks and guidelines that facilitated implementation of the 2008 SNA; recognized that scaling up the coordination, advocacy and resources for implementation of the 2008 SNA at the national level required an integrated statistics approach; expressed the need for technical assistance to many developing countries in adopting an integrated statistics programme in support of that implementation; recognized that countries should take ownership of actions strengthening the statistical production process, institutional arrangements and a communication strategy with users; and supported the formation of a Friends of the Chair group to work out the modalities for establishing a harmonized integrated statistics programme.

Energy statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission the report [E/CN.3/2014/23] of the Oslo Group on Energy Statistics, which described the Group's activities during the period 2011–2013. With the adoption in February 2011 of the Statistical Commission's international recommendations for energy statistics, the Oslo Group focused on the drafting of the Energy Statistics Compilers Manual, which was intended to provide practical guidance in the implementation of the forthcoming System of Environmental-Economic Accounting for Energy (SEEA-Energy). Through country examples, the Manual would illustrate country practices regarding topics such as institutional arrangements, data collection, data compilation, energy indicators and quality assurance. The target audience would be statisticians involved in the process of establishing, developing or improving their energy statistics, and statisticians who regularly collected and compiled energy statistics and were interested in learning about other techniques to compile the information needed. The Group held three meetings and one virtual meeting in the period under review. The Manual was expected to be finalized in the first half of 2014 and would thereafter be subjected to regular updates. Annexed to the report was the workplan for the Group's future activities.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Tourism statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/25] of the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) on tourism statistics. The report described the process of developing and completing the compilation guide for International Recommendations for Tourism Statistics 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1382] and outlined the main parts of the guide. It also provided an overview of the work undertaken to implement the recommendations by UNWTO in cooperation with countries and international organizations since its previous report to the Statistical Commission [YUN 2011, p. 1219].

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Statistical Commission took note of the report.

Short-term economic indicators

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/27] of the Secretary-General on short-term economic statistics. The report described the joint initiatives of the Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and the Statistical Office of the European Commission, in collaboration with Statistics Canada, Statistics Italy, Statistics Netherlands and the Russian Federal State Statistics Service for implementation of the international programme of work on short-term economic statistics endorsed by the Statistical Commission at its forty-second (2011) session [YUN 2011, p. 1220]. The international programme was comprised of four themes, namely, business cycle composite indicators, economic tendency surveys, rapid estimates, and data template and analytical indicators. With a view to providing guidance, best practices and harmonized principles to States in compiling and reporting internationally comparable short-term statistics, the preparation of handbooks on those themes was in progress and being carried out by working groups constituted for that purpose. The report discussed the progress of the work and noted that the handbooks were expected to be finalized by the end of 2014.

The Statistical Commission took note of the report on 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)].

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Committee a report [E/CN.3/2014/22] of the Global Steering Committee on the implementation of the Global Strategy to Improve Agricultural and Rural Statistics. The report covered four items: governance and resource mobilization; implementation of Global Office activities; implementation of activities at the regional level; and the way forward and priorities for 2014.

At the global governance level, two Global Steering Committee meetings were held in 2013 and decisions were taken on a regional action plan for Asia and the Pacific; the revision of the integrated budget; the no-cost extension of the global action plan up to December 2017; and a proposal for revising the monitoring and evaluation framework. There was also progress in the establishment of the Global Office. At the regional level, the Regional Steering Committee for Africa held its fourth meeting in 2013; the Regional Steering Committee for Asia and the Pacific was constituted and met twice; and the Regional Steering Committee for Latin America and the Caribbean was established and met once. Regarding the Commonwealth of Independent States and the Western Asia regions, a mandate was given to prepare a regional action plan and establish mechanisms of governance. On resource mobilization, the total sums pledged as at the first week of December 2014 amounted to $51 million, leaving a funding gap of $32 million. Additional resource mobilization efforts were needed for the underfunded regions, namely Latin American and the Caribbean, the Commonwealth of Independent States and Western Asia. The Global Trust Fund was operational, with efforts in 2013 to consolidate the partnership programme. Progress was made in the implementation of activities at the Global Office level, particularly on the research component of the Global Strategy; the production of guidelines and training material; and coordination with other initiatives. The implementation of activities at the regional level focused in Africa on the country assessment process, including by follow-up missions and the adaptation to the African context of the questionnaire to assess statistical capacity and needs. In Asia and the Pacific, the Asia-Pacific Regional Action Plan to Improve Agricultural and Rural Statistics was endorsed in 2013, and country assessments commenced in four of the eight priority countries identified, namely Bhutan, Indonesia, Samoa and Sri Lanka. In other regions, the draft regional action plan for Latin America and the Caribbean was under review for final submission; country assessment questionnaires were sent out in Western Asia and the results presented at a validation workshop in December 2013 in Jordan; and a draft regional action plan for the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States was prepared and discussed in Sochi, Russian Federation.

The Secretary-General submitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/7] of the Friends of the Chair group on the measurement of international trade and economic globalization. The group, established at the forty-fourth (2013) session of the Statistical Commission [YUN 2013, p. 1263], was tasked with preparing a concept paper on the measurement framework for international trade and economic globalization and on the coordination of work in that area. The report set out the main elements of the measurement framework in terms of scope and overview of measurement issues and made a proposal for moving forward.

A draft concept paper had been prepared and submitted to the Friends of the Chair group at its meeting in November 2013, but it still needed to be completed around a detailed schematic framework. With consideration of the required next steps, the group concluded that one more year would be needed to finalize a comprehensive concept paper. It agreed to organize a conference in the third quarter of 2014, at which the draft could be presented again and working groups could present their outcomes. The group proposed that a conceptual framework, prioritized programme of work and corresponding coordination mechanism be presented to the Commission at its forty-sixth (2015) session.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/106)], the Statistical Commission reiterated the importance of obtaining more clarity in the complex measurement issues of cross-border economic relations and requested the Friends of the Chair group to pay special attention to issues such as discrepancies in mirror statistics; institutional arrangements among data-compiling agencies; the legal aspects of sharing microdata; the complexities of obtaining information on the activities of multinational enterprises; the informal cross-border trade; the role of small and medium-sized enterprises; the data sources for global input-output tables; and the importance and peculiarities of measuring intraregional trade and the relation of the work to the Enhanced Integrated Framework for Trade-Related Assistance for Least Developed Countries. It further requested that the proposed conceptual framework be consistent with the existing framework of the System of National Accounts; and that the group do a cost-benefit analysis of any recommendation requiring additional data sources, especially additional surveys, and thus creating an additional burden to respondents. The Commission agreed with the group's proposal regarding the overall scope of the conceptual framework and the schematic framework as an instrument for classifying the measurement issues; and agreed with the group's proposal to continue its preparation of the concept paper on the measurement of international trade and economic globalization and to submit a report, including the conceptual framework, programme of work and coordination mechanism, to the Commission's forty-sixth (2015) session.

International Comparison Programme

The Secretary-General transmitted a report [E/CN.3/2014/9] of the World Bank on behalf of the Executive Board of the International Comparison Programme (ICP), which updated the Statistical Commission on the status of implementation of the 2011 round of ICP. The report covered governance activities; the computation process of the 2011 estimates; the schedule of publication of the 2011 results; knowledge material for the 2011 round; the communication strategy and outreach activities; and the policy for revision of purchasing power parity statistics. The Commission was requested to establish an ICP friends of the Chair group to carry out the evaluation of the 2011 round.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/108)], the Statistical Commission appreciated the Executive Board's agreement that the ICP 2011 results were ready for publication and supported the two-staged approach for releasing summary results along with key documentation by 30 April 2014, followed by a report that would include the full set of results and more comprehensive documentation in the summer of 2014. It also agreed to establish the Friends of the Chair group to carry out the evaluation of the 2011 round and prepare an initial report for review at the Commission's forty-sixth (2015) session; and recognized the need to develop a new methodology and shorten the interval between ICP rounds in the future.

Statistics of international trade in services

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/24] that highlighted the development of the Compilers Guide for the Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services 2010 and presented the Guide's main parts. The report also described the work of the United Nations Expert Group on the Compilation of Statistics of International Trade in Service and the accomplishments of the Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services. The Expert Group had agreed that the draft Compilers Guide was of sufficient quality to be made available as an electronic document for use by compilers and submitted to the Commission at its forty-fifth (2014) session, with the understanding that the draft version would then be finalized and prepared for issuance in print within a reasonable time frame.

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/26] of the Ottawa Group on Price Indices. Since its last report in 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1247], the Group held one meeting (Copenhagen, Denmark, 1–3 May 2013), where it continued to focus on fundamental problems of price measurement and various concepts, methods and compilation procedures for price indices. Discussion topics included residential and commercial property price indices, measuring services prices, new developments in calculation and weighting methodologies, developments in the use of transactions (scanner) data, developments of seasonal adjustment and other analytical price measures, and international comparability of price indices and other international comparisons.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Information and communications technology statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/8] that gave an overview of work on information and communications technology (ICT) statistics by the Partnership on Measuring Information and Communication Technology for Development. That included new work on measuring gender and ICT, electronic waste and trade in ICT services and ICT-enabled services; the final assessment of progress on the targets of the World Summit on the Information Society; the revised Manual for Measuring ICT Access and Use by Households and Individuals; and revisions to the core list of ICT indicators. On the latter, the report concluded that it was critical to review and update the core list of ICT indicators on a regular basis and to develop new indicators where necessary. The report also highlighted the challenges faced by statistical offices in enhancing the quality and availability of ICT statistics, including the increasing number of data producers and the variety of ICT data sources, and provided suggestions on strengthening national coordination in that matter. In particular, it recommended the establishment of coordination mechanisms between relevant institutions at the national level, such as statistical offices, telecommunication regulatory authorities and ministries responsible for ICT policies.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/107)], the Commission agreed with the recommendations in the report on approaches to improve the availability and quality of ICT statistics and encouraged countries to increase national coordination in that area; endorsed the revised core list of ICT indicators and asked for its wide circulation; and asked the Partnership to continue reviewing the indicators in light of rapid technological advances and widespread use of ICT.

Natural resources and environment statistics

Environment statistics

The Secretary-General reported [E/CN.3/2014/28] on progress in the implementation of the Framework for the Development of Environmental Statistics since its endorsement by the Statistical Commission at its forty-fourth (2013) session [YUN 2013, p. 1265], and the plans for 2014–2015. The report covered the main areas in the plan of action for implementing the Framework, including the establishment of the Expert Group on Environmental Statistics and its work programme; the development of methodological and training material; training and capacity-building; and advocacy and networking.

The Commission took note of the report on 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)].

Environmental-economic accounting

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/6] of the Committee of Experts on Environmental-Economic Accounting, which described the Committee's progress on the implementation of the System of Environmental-Economic Accounting (SEEA); progress on the implementation of the SEEA Central Framework; efforts to promote and advance the research agenda of the Central Framework; and the testing and advancement of the research agenda of the SEEA Experimental Ecosystem Accounting.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/105)], the Commission agreed to establish a technical committee on the SEEA Central Framework responsible for advancing its research agenda; stressed the importance of linking the implementation of the SEEA Central Framework with that of the System of National Accounts 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1380], agreed to establish a technical committee on the SEEA Experimental Ecosystem Accounting to advance its research and testing agenda; and requested that the SEEA Experimental Ecosystem Accounting and the SEEA Applications and Extensions be issued and translated it into the UN official languages.

Other activities

Indicators for monitoring the Millennium Development Goals

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/29] of the Secretary-General on the work of the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Millennium Development Goal Indicators and the Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs in 2013 in the following areas: lessons learned from monitoring the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); improving the methodology for monitoring progress towards achievement of the MDGs; and strengthening statistical capacity-building for national monitoring. The report also gave an assessment of the availability of data to monitor progress towards achievement of the MDGs and described the preparation of the yearly progress reports.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of Secretary-General's report.

Measurement of economic performance and social progress

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/4] of the Friends of the Chair group on broader measures of progress, which took stock of current national, regional and international practices in that area and considered how to achieve a technically solid and globally agreed set of measures of progress. The group also discussed the issue of measuring and monitoring the goals of the post-2015 development agenda (see p. 960) by reviewing existing proposals, elaborating on the need for an integrated and robust measurement approach and identifying critical elements for the implementation of a new monitoring framework. A separate section contained key messages for policymakers; proposals for the further involvement of official statisticians in the ongoing debate and processes towards a post-2015 development agenda; and proposals for continuing the work programme on broader measures of progress.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/103)], the Commission requested the Friends of the Chair to continue to provide statistical support for the post-2015 development agenda in order to ensure that statistical considerations were appropriately taken into account; to engage in the debate on the data revolution; to address the need for the development of new data sources and methodologies resulting from the requirements of the post-2015 development agenda; suggested that the Friends of the Chair group include in its future work the issue of household surveys and their critical role in providing data for the post-2015 development agenda; endorsed the work programme of the group, including the development of an implementation framework for monitoring and measurement, in partnership with countries, regional and international organizations, and other stakeholders and donors; and requested the group to report to the Commission at its forty-sixth (2015) session.

Big data and modernization of statistical systems

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/11] of the Secretary-General that assessed the current use of big data for official statistics, providing an overview of recent activities of the official statistical community and the results of the global assessment on the use of big data for official statistics conducted by the Statistics Division in 2013. The report explored the creation of a working group at the global level that would build on regional initiatives for sharing methodological developments, best practices for strategic issues and training opportunities. The working group would also facilitate international partnership for the use of big data in the transfer of technology to developing countries and in support of the post-2015 development agenda.

On March 7 [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/110)], the Commission supported the proposal to create a global working group on the use of big data for official statistics and requested that the terms of reference and mandate of the working group be based on strategic considerations, that the working group's programme of work avoid duplication of the work carried out by the regional commissions and to pay special attention to the circumstances of developing countries. The Commission requested that the working group make an inventory of ongoing activities and concrete examples of the use of big data for official statistics at the regional, sub-regional and national levels; address the concerns of methodology, standards and norms, human resources, research, training, quality, volatility and, with priority, confidentiality, access to data and legislation related to big data; develop guidelines to classify the various types of big data sources and approaches; develop methodological guidelines for big data; and report to the Commission at its forty-sixth (2015) session.

Publications of the Statistical Division

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/12] of the Secretary-General that provided an overview of the publications programme of the Statistics Division. The report discussed the challenges faced by the Division in continuing to deliver publications, in the most efficient and cost-effective manner, to national and international statistical agency stakeholders in the formats and languages they needed and preferred. Annexed to the report was a list of Statistics Division publications planned for 2014–2015.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/111)], the Commission supported the idea of a comprehensive review of the Division's publication and dissemination strategy with a view to reorienting it towards electronic modes of publication with a reduction of print publications to a minimum for countries with special needs and those who request them. It also insisted that high-quality translations of methodological publications into all official UN languages were critical for the implementation of global statistical norms and standards and for national capacity-building, and requested that such translations were made available and disseminated in print, when requested by countries.

Regional statistical development

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/15] of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific on statistics and the post-2015 development agenda. The report outlined the progress made in recent years to strengthen statistics through regional cooperation under the auspices of the Committee on Statistics of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific. It conveyed the view of the statistical community in Asia and the Pacific that the post-2015 development agenda process, while presenting challenges to national statistical systems, offered an opportunity to place statistics as a development imperative at the centre of good governance, transparency and accountability.

On 7 March [E/CN.3/2014/15 (dec. 45/114)], the Commission noted the differences in the statistical capacities of the countries in the region, and stressed the importance of developing the statistical systems in countries with very limited capacities to meet at least the minimum requirements of the post-2015 development agenda; stressed the importance of high-quality statistics as a tool for accountability and good governance; and called for the development of better measures of statistical development, in cooperation with subregional statistical forums such as the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation Group on Statistics.

Implementation of Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/2] of the Friends of the Chair group on the implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics, adopted in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1265]. The report described the group's work leading to the Economic and Social Council's adoption of a resolution that both endorsed the Fundamental Principles and recommended them to the General Assembly for endorsement [YUN 2013, p. 1266]. The report discussed consultations conducted by the group on the formulation of guidelines on how to strengthen implementation of the Principles; and provided eight recommendations on which the Commission was invited to comment. Draft guidelines developed by the group were presented to the Commission as a background document.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/101)], the Statistical Commission supported the recommendations contained in the report of the Friends of the Chair group; welcomed the first draft of the implementation guidelines and asked the group to continue its work on that document; requested the UN Statistics Division to make the completed implementation guidelines available on an improved website dedicated to the implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics; stressed the importance of national legislation to anchor the Fundamental Principles in countries; agreed with the need of continued monitoring of the implementation of the Principles at the national, regional and global levels; and underlined that the endorsement by the General Assembly (see below) provided a positive impetus to increase the visibility and enhance the understanding and awareness of the Fundamental Principles by bringing them to the attention of politicians, other data providers and the private sector.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 January [meeting 73], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/261 [draft: A/68/L.36 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 9].

Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics

The General Assembly,

Recalling recent resolutions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council highlighting the fundamental importance of official statistics for the national and global development agenda,

Bearing in mind the critical role of high-quality official statistical information in analysis and informed policy decision-making in support of sustainable development, peace and security, as well as for mutual knowledge and trade among the States and peoples of an increasingly connected world, demanding openness and transparency,

Bearing in mind also that the essential trust of the public in the integrity of official statistical systems and confidence in statistics depend to a large extent on respect for the fundamental values and principles that are the basis of any society seeking to understand itself and respect the rights of its members, and in this context that professional independence and accountability of statistical agencies are crucial,

Stressing that, in order to be effective, the fundamental values and principles that govern statistical work have to be guaranteed by legal and institutional frameworks and be respected at all political levels and by all stakeholders in national statistical systems,

Endorses the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics set out below, as adopted by the Statistical Commission in 1994 and reaffirmed in 2013, and endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 2013/21 of 24 July 2013:

Principle 1. Official statistics provide an indispensable element in the information system of a democratic society, serving the Government, the economy and the public with data about the economic, demographic, social and environmental situation. To this end, official statistics that meet the test of practical utility are to be compiled and made available on an impartial basis by official statistical agencies to honour citizens' entitlement to public information.

Principle 2. To retain trust in official statistics, the statistical agencies need to decide according to strictly professional considerations, including scientific principles and professional ethics, on the methods and procedures for the collection, processing, storage and presentation of statistical data.

Principle 3. To facilitate a correct interpretation of the data, the statistical agencies are to present information according to scientific standards on the sources, methods and procedures of the statistics.

Principle 4. The statistical agencies are entitled to comment on erroneous interpretation and misuse of statistics.

Principle 5. Data for statistical purposes may be drawn from all types of sources, be they statistical surveys or administrative records. Statistical agencies are to choose the source with regard to quality, timeliness, costs and the burden on respondents.

Principle 6. Individual data collected by statistical agencies for statistical compilation, whether they refer to natural or legal persons, are to be strictly confidential and used exclusively for statistical purposes.

Principle 7. The laws, regulations and measures under which the statistical systems operate are to be made public.

Principle 8. Coordination among statistical agencies within countries is essential to achieve consistency and efficiency in the statistical system.

Principle 9. The use by statistical agencies in each country of international concepts, classifications and methods promotes the consistency and efficiency of statistical systems at all official levels.

Principle 10. Bilateral and multilateral cooperation in statistics contributes to the improvement of systems of official statistics in all countries.

Coordination of statistical activities in the United Nations

The Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/13] of the Friends of the Chair on the coordination of statistical activities in the UN system, which described the activities and discussions of the group, elaborated various aspects of coordination and provided recommendations for improved coordination within the UN system. Two related background documents provided a description of the statistical units of the UN system and their respective work programmes, and a long-term vision for effective global data collection, data sharing and dissemination, respectively.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/112)], the Commission stressed the importance of effective coordination among the agencies of the UN system and the national statistical offices, especially in the area of data-sharing; supported the long-term vision for an effective global data-collection mechanism; and endorsed the proposal that the UN chief statisticians hold regular meetings, follow up on the recommendations of the Friends of the Chair and report back to the Commission.

Coordination and integration of statistical programmes

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/32] of the Secretary-General on the work of the Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities, which summarized the conclusions of the Committee's twenty-first (New York, 25 February 2013) and twenty-second (Ankara, Turkey, 4–6 September 2013) sessions. Subjects discussed included the post-2015 development agenda and statistical capacity-building; principles governing international statistical activities; national quality assurance frameworks; health statistics; recommended practices on the use of non-official sources in international statistics; and new approaches for data collection, analyses and dissemination.

World Statistics Day

The Statistical Commission had before it a report [E/CN.3/2014/14] of the Secretary-General with a proposal to organize World Statistics Day on 20 October 2015 under the theme "Statistics for better decision-making—statistics for better development". The report noted that as a result of the success of the celebration of the first World Statistics Day in 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1269], the Commission, at its forty-third (2012) session, had confirmed the recommendation of its Bureau that World Statistics Day be celebrated every five years, with the next observance occurring in 2015 [YUN 2012, p. 1250].

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/113)], the Commission proposed to celebrate the next World Statistics Day on 20 October 2015; agreed with the general theme for the next World Statistics Day: “Statistics for better decision-making—statistics for better development/life”, but requested the Bureau to finalize the wording of the exact slogan in consultation with communications experts; requested the Bureau to initiate and support the submission of a draft resolution to the General Assembly on World Statistics Day 2015; and requested the UN Statistics Division to provide support to countries, regional and supranational organizations and thematic-oriented institutions in observance of World Statistics Day 2015.

Follow-up to General Assembly and Economic and Social Council policy decisions

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/33] on policy decisions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council adopted in 2013 and earlier that were relevant to the work of the Commission. The policy decisions concerned follow-up to the MDGs; response to the Rio+20 mandate for broader measures of progress to complement gross domestic product; global geospatial information management; follow-up to Economic and Social Council resolutions on strengthening national capacity in statistics and on the 2010 World Population and Housing Census Programme; improving the collection, reporting and analysis of data on migration and people with disabilities; the multi-year programme of work for the annual ministerial reviews of the Economic and Social Council; and strengthening the Economic and Social Council. The report also indicated actions taken and proposed by the Commission and the Statistics Division in response to requests by the Council and the Assembly.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Global geospatial information management

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report [E/CN.3/2014/31 & Corr.1] of the Expert Group on the Integration of Statistical and Geospatial Information, which provided information on the establishment of the Expert Group and summarized the issues discussed at its first meeting (New York, 30 October–1 November 2013). It outlined the main outcomes and recommendations from that meeting, including the proposal to organize an international conference on the integration of statistical and geospatial information in New York in August 2014, in conjunction with the fourth (2014) session of the Committee of Experts on Global Geospatial Information Management.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Efforts in developing a plan of action on statistical development

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a progress report [E/CN.3/2014/30] of the World Bank and the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the 21st Century on the development of a plan of action on statistical development, as agreed at the Fourth High-level Forum on Aid Effectiveness (Busan, Republic of Korea, 29 November–1 December 2011). The plan aimed to fully integrate statistics in decision-making; promote open access to statistics; and increase resources for statistical systems. To achieve its objectives, the Busan Action Plan for Statistics outlined the following five steps to strengthen national statistical systems in developing countries and increase the effectiveness of support provided by development partners: strengthen and refocus national and regional statistical strategies; implement standards for data preservation, documentation and dissemination; develop programmes to increase knowledge and skills to use statistics for planning, analysis, monitoring and evaluation; build and maintain results-monitoring instruments to track the outcomes of global summits and high-level forums; and ensure robust financing for statistical information and that funding instruments and approaches reflect the new modalities and actors in development finance.

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/116)], the Commission took note of the report.

Programme questions

On 7 March [E/2014/24 (dec. 45/115)], the Statistical Commission took note of the oral report by the Acting Director of the United Nations Statistics Division concerning the Division's activities, plans and priorities, particularly the proposed strategic framework for the biennium 2016–2017, which had been circulated in a background paper. On the same date, the Commission approved its draft 2014–2018 multi-year programme of work [E/CN.3/2014/34], and the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-sixth session, to be held in New York from 3 to 6 March 2015.

PART FOUR

Legal questions

International Court of Justice

In 2014, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered two judgments, made 12 orders and had 16 contentious cases pending before it. The ICJ President, in an October address to the General Assembly, stressed that the Court continued to fulfil its role as the forum of choice for States to settle international disputes peacefully, and that the Court made every effort to meet in a timely manner the expectations of the parties appearing before it, particularly when presented with requests for the indication of provisional measures. He reiterated his call for increased recourse to the Court for the settlement of disputes and recognition of its compulsory jurisdiction by States.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2014, the Court delivered its judgment on the merits in the cases concerning Maritime Dispute (Peru v. Chile) and Whaling in the Antarctic (Australia v. Japan).

The Court held public hearings in the cases concerning Questions relating to the Seizure and Detention of Certain Documents and Data (Timor-Leste v. Australia) and Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia).

The Court or its President made orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Questions relating to the Seizure and Detention of Certain Documents and Data (Timor-Leste v. Australia), Alleged Violations of Sovereign Rights and Maritime Spaces in the Caribbean Sea (Nicaragua v. Colombia), Construction of a Road in Costa Rica along the San Juan River (Nicaragua v. Costa Rica) (which had been joined with the case concerning Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua)), Maritime Delimitation in the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua), Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament (Marshall Islands v. India), Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament (Marshall Islands v. Pakistan), Obligation to Negotiate Access to the Pacific Ocean (Bolivia v. Chile), Question of the Delimitation of the Continental Shelf between Nicaragua and Colombia beyond 200 nautical miles from the Nicaraguan Coast (Nicaragua v. Colom- bia) and Maritime Delimitation in the Indian Ocean (Somalia v. Kenya).

Pleadings were submitted within the fixed time limits in the cases concerning Construction of a Road in Costa Rica along the San Juan River (Nicaragua v. Costa Rica), Obligation to Negotiate Access to the Pacific Ocean (Bolivia v. Chile), Alleged Violations of Sovereign Rights and Maritime Spaces in the Caribbean Sea (Nicaragua v. Colombia), Questions relating to the Seizure and Detention of Certain Documents and Data (Timor-Leste v. Australia) and Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament (Marshall Islands v. India).

While there were no new developments in the case concerning Gabcikovo-Nagymaros Project (Hungary/Slovakia) [YUN 1998, p. 1186], the parties kept the Court informed of progress made in their negotiations. In the case Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) [YUN 1999, p. 1209], the parties transmitted to the Court information concerning their negotiations to settle the question of reparation, as referred to in the 2005 judgment [YUN 2005, p. 1381]. Both cases remained pending.

The Court was seized of five new contentious cases in 2014. In addition, the Court Registrar received applications from the Marshall Islands against China, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, France, Israel, the Russian Federation and the United States, filed simultaneously with its applications against India (see p. 1479), Pakistan (see p. 1480) and the United Kingdom (ibid.) concerning their obligations with respect to the cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament; as well as an application from Argentina against the United States concerning United States judicial decisions on the restructuring of the Argentine sovereign debt. No action was taken and the cases were not entered in the General List, pending the consent of those States to the Court's jurisdiction in the cases.

ICJ activities in 2014 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly for the periods 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014 [A/69/4] and 1 August 2014 to 31 July 2015 [A/70/4]. On 30 October (decision 69/510), the General Assembly took note of the 2013/2014 report. In its resolution 69/123 of 10 December, the Assembly called on States to consider accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in accordance with its Statute.

Contentious proceedings

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia)

On 2 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Croatia instituted proceedings before the Court against Serbia, then known as the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide [YUN 1948–1949, p. 959] committed between 1991 and 1995. In its application, Croatia contended that by directly controlling the activity of its armed forces, intelligence agents, and various paramilitary detachments, on the territory of Croatia, Serbia was liable for ethnic cleansing of Croatian citizens. It requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Serbia had breached its legal obligations to Croatia under the Genocide Convention and that it had an obligation to pay to Croatia, in its own right and as parens patriae for its citizens, reparations for damages to persons and property, as well as to the Croatian economy and environment caused by those violations of international law in a sum to be determined by the Court.

As basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Croatia invoked article IX of the Genocide Convention, to which, it claimed, both States were parties.

By an order of 14 September 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], the Court fixed 14 March and 14 September 2000 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Croatia and a counter-memorial by Serbia. Those limits were twice extended by orders made during 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219]. Croatia filed its memorial within the extended time limit. On 11 September 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1268], within the extended time limit for filing its counter-memorial, Serbia filed certain preliminary objections on jurisdiction and admissibility. The proceedings on the merits were suspended, in accordance with article 79 of the Rules of Court. On 25 April 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1304], within the time limit fixed by the Court, Croatia filed a statement of its observations and submissions on Serbia's preliminary objections.

At the conclusion of public hearings on the preliminary objections on jurisdiction and admissibility, held from 26 to 30 May 2008, the parties presented final submissions to the Court [YUN 2008, p. 1395].

In its judgment, rendered on 18 November 2008 [ibid.], the Court found that, subject to its statement concerning the second preliminary objection raised by Serbia, it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article IX of the Genocide Convention, to entertain Croatia's application, adding that Serbia's second preliminary objection did not possess an exclusively preliminary character. It then rejected the third preliminary objection submitted by Serbia.

By an order of 20 January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1270], the President of the Court fixed 22 March 2010 as the time limit for the filing of the counter-memorial by Serbia. That pleading, containing counterclaims, was filed within the time limit.

By an order of 4 February 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1276], the Court directed the submission of a reply by Croatia and a rejoinder by Serbia concerning the claims presented by the parties. It fixed 20 December 2010 and 4 November 2011, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of those pleadings, which were filed within the time limits.

By an order of 23 January 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1256], the Court authorized the submission by Croatia of an additional pleading relating solely to Serbia's counterclaims, and fixed 30 August 2012 as the time limit for the filing, which was filed within the time limit.

Public hearings on Serbia's objection and on the merits of the case were held from 3 March to 1 April 2014. At the close of the hearings, the parties presented their final submissions to the Court. Croatia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court had jurisdiction over all the claims raised by Croatia and that the claims were admissible; and that Serbia had breached its obligations under the Genocide Convention by failing to prevent acts of genocide committed on the territory of Croatia against the Croat ethnic group by persons for whose conduct Serbia was responsible, bring to trial those suspected of involvement in such acts, and conduct an effective investigation into the fate of Croatian citizens missing as a result of such acts. Croatia further requested the Court to adjudge and declare that as a consequence of those breaches, Serbia was under the obligation to take immediate and effective steps to submit to trial those persons within its jurisdiction suspected of having committed acts of genocide; provide Croatia with information about the Croatian citizens missing as a result of such acts, and conduct joint investigation to determine their whereabouts; return to Croatia all items of cultural property within Serbia's jurisdiction or control seized in the course of the acts of genocide; and make reparations to Croatia for damages to persons and property, as well as to the Croatian economy caused by those violations of international law in a sum to be determined by the Court.

In addition, Croatia asked the Court to reject as not founded in fact or law Serbia's counterclaims relating to the breaches of international law by Croatia (see below).

Serbia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court lacked jurisdiction to entertain Croatia's requests in relation to acts committed prior to 27 April 1992, the date when Serbia came into existence as a State and became bound by the Genocide Convention, or that those requests were inadmissible; and to reject Croatia's requests relating to acts and omissions that took place after 27 April 1992 as lacking any basis either in law or in fact. In the alternative, Serbia asked the Court to declare Croatia's requests as inadmissible with regard to acts and omissions that took place prior to 8 October 1991, the date when Croatia came into existence as a State and became bound by the Genocide Convention; or to adjudge and declare that the requests concerning acts committed prior to 27 April 1992 were only admissible insofar as they related to acts and omissions that took place before 8 October 1991, and to reject those requests as lacking any basis either in law or in fact.

The Court was further requested to adjudge and declare that Croatia had breached its obligations under the Genocide Convention by committing acts with intent to destroy the Serb national and ethnical group in Croatia, inciting and attempting to commit genocide and failing to punish acts of genocide against that group; and that Croatia must immediately take effective steps to punish such acts committed on its territory, remove from its list of public holidays the "Day of Victory and Homeland Gratitude" and the "Day of Croatian Defenders", pay compensation to the members of the Serb national and ethnical group from Croatia for damages caused by the acts of genocide in a sum to be determined by the Court, and ensure conditions for their safe and free return to a normal life in Croatia.

Maritime Dispute (Peru v. Chile)

On 16 January 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1399], Peru filed an application instituting proceedings against Chile concerning a dispute in relation to the delimitation of the boundary between the maritime zones of the two States in the Pacific Ocean, beginning at a point on the coast called Concordia, the terminal point of the land boundary established pursuant to the Treaty of 3 June 1929; and in relation to the recognition in favour of Peru of a maritime zone lying within 200 nautical miles of its coast, and thus appertaining to Peru, but which Chile considered to be part of the high seas.

Peru maintained that the maritime zones between Chile and Peru had never been delimited by agreement or otherwise. Peru stated that, since the 1980s, it had consistently endeavoured to negotiate the issues in dispute, but had constantly met with a refusal from Chile to enter into negotiations. It asserted that a note of 10 September 2004 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Chile to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Peru made further attempts at negotiation impossible.

Peru consequently requested the Court to determine the course of the boundary between the maritime zones of the two States, and to adjudge and declare that Peru possessed exclusive sovereign rights in the maritime area situated within the limit of 200 nautical miles from its coast, but outside Chile's exclusive economic zone or continental shelf.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Peru invoked article XXXI of the Pact of Bogotá of 1948, to which both States were parties.

By an order of 31 March 2008 [ibid.], the Court fixed 20 March 2009 and 9 March 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Peru and a counter-memorial by Chile. Those pleadings were filed within the time limits. Bolivia, Colombia and Ecuador requested copies of the pleadings and annexed documents produced in the case. The Court, after ascertaining the views of the parties, acceded to those requests.

By an order of 27 April 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1279], the Court authorized the submission of a reply by Peru and a rejoinder by Chile. It fixed 9 November 2010 and 11 July 2011 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings, which were filed within the time limits.

Public hearings were held from 3 to 14 December 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1258], at the end of which the parties presented their final submissions to the Court. Peru requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the delimitation between the respective maritime zones was a line starting at "Point Concordia" (defined as the intersection with the low-water mark of a 10-kilometre radius arc, having as its centre the first bridge over the River Lluta of the Arica-La Paz railway) and equidistant from the baselines of both parties, up to a point 200 nautical miles from those baselines; and that, beyond the point where the common maritime border ended, Peru was entitled to exercise exclusive sovereign rights over a maritime area lying out to 200 nautical miles from its baselines.

Chile requested the Court to dismiss Peru's claims in their entirety, and adjudge and declare that the respective maritime zone entitlements of Chile and Peru had been fully delimited by agreement; that they were delimited by a boundary following the parallel of latitude passing through the most seaward marker of the land boundary between Chile and Peru, known as Hito No. 1, having a latitude of 18° 21'00" S under WGS84 Datum; and that Peru had no entitlement to any maritime zone extending to the south of that parallel.

In its judgment of 27 January 2014, the Court, by 15 votes to 1, decided that the starting point of the single maritime boundary delimiting the respective maritime areas between Peru and Chile was the intersection of the parallel of latitude passing through Boundary Marker No. 1 with the low-water line, and that the boundary's initial segment followed the parallel of latitude passing through Boundary Marker No. 1 westward. The Court further decided, by 10 votes to 6, that the initial segment ran up to a point (Point A) situated at a distance of 80 nautical miles from the starting point of the single maritime boundary, from which the boundary continued south-westward along the line equidistant from both parties' coasts, as measured from that point, until its intersection (at Point B) with the 200-nautical-mile limit measured from the baselines from which the territorial sea of Chile was measured; from Point B, the single maritime boundary continued southward along that limit until it reached the point of intersection (Point C) of the 200-nautical-mile limits measured from the baselines from which both parties' territorial seas were measured. By 15 votes to 1, the Court decided that it did not need to rule on Peru's request for exclusive sovereign rights over a maritime area lying out to 200 nautical miles from its baselines.

Appended to the judgment were declarations by five judges and one ad hoc judge; a joint dissenting opinion by three judges and one ad hoc judge, and another dissenting opinion by one judge; and a separate opinion by one judge and another, partly concurring and partly dissenting, by one ad hoc judge.

Whaling in the Antarctic (Australia v. Japan)

On 31 May 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1284], Australia instituted proceedings against Japan, alleging that Japan's continued pursuit of a large-scale programme of whaling under the Second Phase of its Japanese Whale Research Program under Special Permit in the Antarctic (JARPA II) was in breach of obligations assumed by Japan under the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling, as well as its other international obligations for the preservation of marine mammals and the marine environment.

Australia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Japan was in breach of its international obligations in implementing JARPA II in the Southern Ocean, and to order that Japan cease implementation of JARPA II; revoke any authorisations, permits or licences allowing the activities which were the subject of the application to be undertaken; and provide assurances and guarantees that it would not take any further action under JARPA II or any similar programme until such programme had been brought into conformity with its obligations under international law.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Australia referred to the declarations recognizing the Court's jurisdiction as compulsory made by Australia on 22 March 2002 and by Japan on 9 July 2007.

By an order of 13 July 2010 [ibid.], the Court fixed 9 May 2011 as the time limit for the filing of a memorial by Australia and 9 March 2012 as the time limit for the filing of a counter-memorial by Japan, which were filed within the time limits. The Court subsequently decided that the filing of a reply by Australia and a rejoinder by Japan was not necessary.

On 20 November 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1262], New Zealand filed a declaration of intervention in the case under article 63 of the Court's Statute. New Zealand contended that, as a party to the International Convention for the Registration of Whaling, it had a direct interest "in the construction that might be placed upon the Convention by the Court in its decision in these proceedings", in particular in respect of article VIII of the Convention, which provided Contracting Governments with the authority to grant any of its nationals a special permit to kill, take and treat whales for purposes of scientific research subject to such restrictions as the Contracting Government thinks fit. At the end of its declaration, New Zealand provided a summary of its interpretation of article VIII and underlined that it did not seek to become a party to the proceedings.

In accordance with article 83 of the Rules of Court, Australia and Japan were invited to furnish observations on New Zealand's declaration by 21 December 2012, which were filed within the time limit.

By an order of 6 February 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1274], the Court, taking note of Japan's concerns about the equality of the parties, recalled that intervention under Article 63 of the Statute was limited to submitting observations on the construction of the convention in question and did not allow entities that were not parties to the proceedings to deal with any other aspect of the case before the Court. The Court considered that such an intervention could not affect the equality of the parties, and concluded that New Zealand's declaration of intervention was admissible.

By the same order, the Court fixed 4 April 2013 as the time limit for the filing by New Zealand of the observations referred to in article 86, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court; authorized the filing by Australia and Japan of their observations on New Zealand's observations; and fixed 31 May 2013 as the time limit for such filings, which were filed within the time limits.

Public hearings were held from 26 June to 16 July 2013 [ibid.], at the end of which the parties presented their final submissions to the Court.

Australia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Japan was in breach of its international obligations in authorizing and implementing JARPA II in the Southern Ocean and that, by its conduct, Japan had violated its obligations pursuant to the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling to observe the zero-catch limit in relation to the killing of whales for commercial purposes; refrain from undertaking commercial whaling of fin whales in the Southern Ocean Sanctuary; observe the moratorium on taking, killing or treating of whales, except minke whales, by factory ships or whale catchers attached to factory ships. The Court was also requested to adjudge and declare that JARPA II was not a programme for purposes of scientific research within the meaning of Article VIII of the Convention, and that Japan must refrain from authorizing or implementing any special permit whaling; cease with immediate effect the implementation of JARPA II; and revoke any authorization, permit or licence allowing such implementation.

Japan requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court lacked jurisdiction over the claims brought against Japan by Australia and that, consequently, the application of New Zealand for permission to intervene in the proceedings lapsed; in the alternative, the Court was requested to reject Australia's claims.

New Zealand presented its oral observations to the Court on 8 July 2013.

In its judgment delivered on 31 March 2014, the Court unanimously found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the application filed by Australia. By 12 votes to 4, the Court found that the special permits granted by Japan in connection with JARPA II did not fall within the provisions of article VIII of the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling; Japan, by granting special permits to kill, take and treat fin, humpback and Antarctic minke whales in pursuance of JARPA II, had not acted in conformity with its obligations under paragraph 10 (e) of the Schedule to the Convention; and in pursuance of JARPA II, Japan had not acted in conformity with its obligations under paragraph 10 (d) of the Schedule in relation to the killing, taking and treating of fin whales, and under paragraph 7 (b) of the Schedule in relation to the killing, taking and treating of fin whales in the Southern Ocean Sanctuary. The Court further found, by 13 votes to 3, that Japan had complied with its obligations under paragraph 30 of the Schedule with regard to JARPA II; and decided, by 12 votes to 4, that Japan must revoke any extant authorization, permit or licence granted in relation to JARPA II, and refrain from granting any further permits in pursuance of that programme.

Appended to the judgment were dissenting opinions by four judges, separate opinions by five judges and one ad hoc judge, and a declaration by one judge.

Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua)

On 18 November 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1285], Costa Rica instituted proceedings against Nicaragua in respect of an alleged incursion into, occupation of and use by Nicaragua's army of Costa Rican territory, as well as alleged breaches of Nicaragua's obligations towards Costa Rica under a number of international treaties and conventions. Costa Rica charged Nicaragua with having occupied, in two separate incidents, the territory of Costa Rica in connection with the construction of a canal across Costa Rican territory from the San Juan River to Laguna los Portillos (also known as Harbor Head Lagoon), and with having carried out related works of dredging on the San Juan River. Costa Rica stated that the ongoing and planned dredging and the construction of the canal would seriously affect the flow of water to the Colorado River of Costa Rica, and would cause further damage to Costa Rican territory, including the wetlands and national wildlife protected areas in the region.

Costa Rica, accordingly, requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Nicaragua was in breach of its international obligations regarding the incursion into and occupation of Costa Rican territory, the damage inflicted to its protected rainforests and wetlands, and the damage intended to the Colorado River, wetlands and protected ecosystems, as well as the dredging and canalization activities being carried out by Nicaragua on the San Juan River. In particular, Costa Rica requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Nicaragua, by its conduct, had breached the territory of Costa Rica, as agreed and delimited by the 1858 Treaty of Limits, the Cleveland Award and the first and second Alexander Awards; the fundamental principles of territorial integrity and the prohibition of use of force under the UN Charter and the Charter of the Organization of American States; the obligation imposed on Nicaragua by article IX of the 1858 Treaty of Limits not to use the San Juan River to carry out hostile acts; the obligation not to damage Costa Rican territory; the obligation not to artificially channel the San Juan River away from its natural watercourse without Costa Rica's consent; the obligation not to prohibit the navigation on the San Juan River by Costa Rican nationals; the obligation not to dredge the San Juan River if that caused damage to Costa Rican territory, including the Colorado River, in accordance with the 1888 Cleveland Award; the obligations under the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands; and the obligation not to aggravate and extend the dispute by adopting measures against Costa Rica, including the expansion of the invaded and occupied Costa Rican territory. The Court was also requested to determine the reparation to be made by Nicaragua.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Costa Rica invoked Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute of the Court by virtue of the operation of article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá), as well as the declarations of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court made by Costa Rica on 20 February 1973 and by Nicaragua on 24 September 1929 (amended on 23 October 2001).

Also on 18 November 2010, Costa Rica requested the Court to order provisional measures so as to rectify the ongoing breach of its territorial integrity and to prevent further irreparable harm to its territory, pending the determination of the case on the merits.

Public hearings on the request for the indication of provisional measures were held from 11 to 13 January 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1237].

On 8 March 2011 [ibid.], the Court delivered its decision on Costa Rica's request for the indication of provisional measures. In its order, it unanimously found that each party should refrain from sending to, or maintaining in the disputed territory, including the caño (the canal cut by Nicaragua), any personnel, whether civilian, police or security. By 13 votes to 4, it found that notwithstanding the point above, Costa Rica could dispatch civilian personnel charged with protecting the environment to the disputed territory, including the caño, but only insofar as it was necessary to avoid irreparable prejudice being caused to the part of the wetland where that territory was situated; Costa Rica should consult with the Secretariat of the Ramsar Convention in regard to those actions, give Nicaragua prior notice of them and find common solutions with Nicaragua in that respect. It unanimously found that each party should refrain from any action that might aggravate or extend the dispute or make it more difficult to resolve; and that each party should inform the Court as to its compliance with the provisional measures. Appended to the order were separate opinions by two judges and an ad hoc judge, and declarations by three judges and an ad hoc judge.

By an order of 5 April 2011 [ibid., p. 1238], the Court, taking account of the views of the parties, fixed 5 December 2011 and 6 August 2012, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a memorial by Costa Rica and a counter-memorial by Nicaragua, which were filed within the fixed time limits.

In its counter-memorial [YUN 2012, p. 1264], Nicaragua submitted four counterclaims. It requested the Court to declare that Costa Rica bore responsibility to Nicaragua for the impairment and possible destruction of navigation on the San Juan River caused by the construction of a road next to its right bank, and that Nicaragua had become the sole sovereign over the area formerly occupied by the Bay of San Juan del Norte. The Court was also requested to find that Nicaragua had a right to free navigation on the Colorado Branch of the San Juan de Nicaragua River, until the conditions of navigability existing at the time of the conclusion of the 1858 Treaty were re-established. In its fourth counterclaim, Nicaragua alleged that Costa Rica had failed to implement the provisional measures indicated in the Court's order of 8 March 2011.

By two separate orders of 17 April 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1275], the Court joined the proceedings in the cases concerning Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua) ("the Costa Rica v. Nicaragua case") and the Construction of a Road in Costa Rica along the San Juan River (Nicaragua v. Costa Rica) ("the Nicaragua v. Costa Rica case") (see p. 1475), in conformity with the principle of the sound administration of justice and the need for judicial economy.

By an order of 18 April 2013 [ibid., p. 1276], the Court found unanimously that Nicaragua's first counterclaim had become without object after the proceedings of the two cases had been joined, and that it would be examined as a principal claim in the context of the joined proceedings; that Nicaragua's second and third counterclaims were inadmissible under the current proceedings; and that there was no need to examine the fourth counterclaim as any question relating to the implementation of provisional measures could be taken up by the parties in the further course of the proceedings.

On 23 May 2013, Costa Rica requested the modification of the Court's order of 8 March 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1237], referring to Article 41 of the Statute of the Court and article 76 of the Rules of the Court. Costa Rica complained of Nicaragua's sending to and maintaining in the disputed area large numbers of persons undertaking activities that affected that territory and its ecology. In Costa Rica's view, those actions, which had occurred since the Court decided to indicate provisional measures, created a new situation necessitating further provisional measures in order to prevent the presence of any individual in the disputed territory other than civilian personnel sent by Costa Rica to protect the environment.

In its observations filed within the time limit fixed as 14 June 2013, Nicaragua asked the Court to reject Costa Rica's request and to modify its 8 March 2011 order on the basis of article 76 of the Rules of the Court, in order to allow both parties to dispatch civilian personnel charged with the protection of the environment to the disputed territory. According to Nicaragua, this modification was necessitated by the change in the factual and legal situations as a result of both the construction by Costa Rica of a 160-kilometre-long road along the right bank of the San Juan River and the joinder of the proceedings in the two cases. In its observations filed within the time limit fixed as 20 June, Costa Rica asked the Court to reject Nicaragua's request, asserting that no part of the road in question was in the disputed area and that the joinder of the proceedings did not give rise to one proceeding which should be the subject of joint orders.

In its order of 16 July 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1276], the Court, by 15 votes to 2, found that the circumstances did not require the modification of its March 2011 order; unanimously reaffirmed the provisional measures indicated in that order, in particular, the requirement to refrain from any action that might aggravate or extend the dispute or make it more difficult to resolve; reminded the parties that those measures had binding effect and therefore created international legal obligations; and underlined that the order of 16 July was without prejudice to the parties' compliance with the March 2011 order. Appended to the order were dissenting opinions of one judge and one ad hoc judge.

On 24 September 2013, Costa Rica filed a request for the indication of new provisional measures. After holding public hearings on that request from 14 to 17 October 2013, the Court, in its order of 22 November 2013 [ibid.], unanimously reaffirmed the provisional measures indicated in its 8 March 2011 order and decided that Nicaragua should refrain from any dredging and other activities in the disputed territory, in particular, from work on the two new caños (canals); that it should fill, within two weeks, the trench on the beach north of the eastern caño; and that it should immediately inform the Court of the completion of this work and submit a detailed report, including photographic evidence, within one week from the completion. The Court further found, unanimously, that Nicaragua should remove any civilian, police or security personnel or private persons under its jurisdiction or control from the disputed territory, and prevent any such personnel or persons from entering it. It held by 15 votes to 1 that, following consultation with the secretariat of the Ramsar Convention and after giving Nicaragua prior notice, Costa Rica might take appropriate measures related to the two new caños, to the extent necessary to prevent irreparable prejudice to the environment of the disputed territory and that, in taking those measures, Costa Rica should avoid any adverse effects on the San Juan River. The Court also unanimously decided that the parties should inform it at three-month intervals about their compliance with the provisional measures.

Construction of a Road in Costa Rica along the San Juan River (Nicaragua v. Costa Rica)

On 22 December 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1239], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Costa Rica with regard to violations of Nicaraguan sovereignty and major environmental damages to its territory. Nicaragua contended that Costa Rica was carrying out major construction works along most of the border area between the two countries with grave environmental consequences.

In its application, Nicaragua claimed that Costa Rica's unilateral actions threatened to destroy the San Juan de Nicaragua River and its fragile ecosystem, including the adjacent biosphere reserves and internationally protected wetlands that depended upon the clean and uninterrupted flow of the river for their survival. According to Nicaragua, the most immediate threat to the river and its environment was posed by Costa Rica's construction of a road running parallel and in close proximity to the southern bank of the river, and extending for at least 120 kilometres, from Los Chiles in the west to Delta in the east. It was also stated that those works had caused and would continue to cause significant economic damage to Nicaragua.

Nicaragua, accordingly, requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Costa Rica had breached its obligation not to violate Nicaragua's territorial integrity as delimited by the 1858 Treaty of Limits, the Cleveland Award of 1888 and the five awards of the umpire Edward Porter Alexander of 30 September 1897, 20 December 1897, 22 March 1898, 26 July 1899 and 10 March 1900; its obligation not to damage Nicaraguan territory; and its obligations under international law and environmental conventions, including the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands, the Agreement over the Border Protected Areas between Nicaragua and Costa Rica (International System of Protected Areas for Peace Agreement), the Convention on Biological Diversity and the Convention for the Conservation of the Biodiversity and Protection of the Main Wild Life Sites in Central America. Furthermore, Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Costa Rica must restore the situation to the status quo ante; pay for all damages caused, including the costs added to the dredging of the San Juan River; not undertake any future development in the area without an appropriate transboundary environmental impact assessment, to be presented to Nicaragua for its analysis and reaction; cease all the constructions under way that affected or might affect the rights of Nicaragua; and produce and present to Nicaragua an adequate environmental impact assessment with all the details of the works.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Nicaragua invoked Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute of the Court by virtue of the operation of article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá), as well as the declarations of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court made by Nicaragua on 24 September 1929 (as amended on 23 October 2001) and by Costa Rica on 20 February 1973. Nicaragua asserted that Costa Rica had repeatedly refused to give it appropriate information on the construction works and had denied that it had any obligation to provide to Nicaragua an environmental impact assessment allowing for an evaluation of the works. Nicaragua therefore requested the Court to order Costa Rica to produce such a document and to communicate it to Nicaragua. It added that in all circumstances, and particularly if that request did not produce results, it reserved its right to request provisional measures.

Nicaragua also stated that as the legal and factual grounds of the application were connected to the ongoing case concerning Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua) (see p. 1473), it reserved its rights to consider whether to request that the proceedings in both cases should be joined.

By an order of 23 January 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1265], the Court fixed 19 December 2012 and 19 December 2013 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Nicaragua and a counter-memorial by Costa Rica. The memorial of Nicaragua was filed within the time limit.

By two separate orders of 17 April 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1277], the Court joined the proceedings in the Costa Rica v. Nicaragua and Nicaragua v. Costa Rica cases (see p. 1474). In the context of those joined proceedings, the Court, by its orders dated 18 April and 16 July [ibid.], ruled, respectively, on the counterclaims submitted by Nicaragua in its counter-memorial filed in the Costa Rica v. Nicaragua case and on the requests made by Costa Rica and Nicaragua for the modification of the provisional measures indicated in the Court's order of 8 March 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1237] in the Costa Rica v. Nicaragua case.

On 11 October 2013, Nicaragua filed a request for the indication of provisional measures. After holding public hearings on that request from 5 to 8 November 2013, the Court, in its order of 13 December 2013 [ibid.], unanimously found that the circumstances did not require the indication of provisional measures.

By an order of 3 February 2014, the Court fixed 4 August 2014 and 2 February 2015 as the respective time limits for the submission of a reply by Nicaragua and a rejoinder by Costa Rica. The reply by Nicaragua was filed within the time limit.

Obligation to Negotiate Access to the Pacific Ocean (Bolivia v. Chile)

On 24 April 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1277], Bolivia instituted proceedings against Chile concerning a dispute in relation to Chile's obligation to negotiate in good faith and effectively with Bolivia in order to reach an agreement granting Bolivia a fully sovereign access to the Pacific Ocean.

In its application, Bolivia stated that the subject of the dispute was the existence of that obligation, Chile's non-compliance with it and Chile's duty to comply with it. Bolivia asserted that, beyond its general obligations under international law, Chile had committed itself through agreements, diplomatic practice and a series of declarations attributable to its highest-level representatives to negotiate a sovereign access to the sea for Bolivia, but had not complied with that obligation and denied its existence. Bolivia accordingly requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Chile had the obligation to negotiate with Bolivia in order to reach an agreement granting Bolivia a fully sovereign access to the Pacific Ocean; that Chile had breached that obligation; and that Chile must perform the said obligation in good faith, promptly, formally, within a reasonable time and effectively, to grant Bolivia a fully sovereign access to the Pacific Ocean. Bolivia also reserved the right to request that an arbitral tribunal be established in accordance with the obligation under article XII of the Treaty of Peace and Friendship concluded with Chile on 20 October 1904 and the Protocol of 16 April 1907, in the case of any claims arising out of that Treaty.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Bolivia invoked article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá), to which both States were parties.

By its order of 18 June 2013 [ibid., p. 1278], the Court fixed 17 April 2014 and 18 February 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Bolivia and a counter-memorial by Chile. The memorial by Bolivia was filed within the time limit.

On 15 July 2014, Chile, referring to article 79, paragraph 1, of the Rules of the Court, filed a preliminary objection to the jurisdiction of the Court in the case. In accordance with paragraph 5 of the same article, the proceedings on the merits were then suspended.

By an order of 15 July, the President of the Court fixed 14 November 2014 as the time limit for the filing by Bolivia of a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objection raised by Chile, which was filed within the time limit.

Question of the Delimitation of the Continental Shelf between Nicaragua and Colombia beyond 200 nautical miles from the Nicaraguan Coast (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

On 16 September 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1278], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia with regard to the delimitation of the boundaries between the continental shelf of Nicaragua beyond the 200-nautical-mile limit from the baselines from which the breadth of Nicaragua's territorial sea was measured, and the continental shelf of Colombia.

In its application, Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare the precise course of the maritime boundary between Nicaragua and Colombia in the areas of the continental shelf which appertained to each of them beyond the boundaries determined by the Court in its judgment of 19 November 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1257] in the case concerning the Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia). The Court was further requested to state the principles and rules of international law that determined the rights and duties of the two States in relation to the area of overlapping continental shelf claims and the use of its resources, pending the delimitation of the maritime boundary between them beyond 200 nautical miles from Nicaragua's coast.

Nicaragua recalled that the Court's 2012 judgment defined the single maritime boundary between the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zones of Nicaragua and of Colombia within the 200-nautical-mile limit from the baselines from which the breadth of Nicaragua's territorial sea was measured, but that the Court was not in a position at the time to delimit the continental shelf throughout the area of the overlap between Nicaragua's continental shelf entitlement and that of Colombia, as requested by Nicaragua, considering that Nicaragua had not then established that it had a continental margin extending beyond 200 nautical miles from the baselines from which its territorial sea was measured. Nicaragua contended that its submission to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf on 24 June 2013 demonstrated that its continental margin extended more than 200 nautical miles from the baselines from which the breadth of its territorial sea was measured, both traversing an area beyond 200 nautical miles from Colombia and partly overlapping with an area within 200 nautical miles of Colombia's coast. Nicaragua also observed that the two States had not agreed upon a maritime boundary between them in the area beyond 200 nautical miles from Nicaragua's coast and that Colombia objected to continental shelf claims in that area.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Nicaragua invoked article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá), noting that it was constrained into taking action rather sooner than later because Colombia had denounced the Pact of Bogotá on 27 November 2012, with effect from 27 November 2013 in accordance with article LVI of the Pact, which would accordingly remain in force for Colombia until that date. Nicaragua also contended that the subject-matter of its application remained within the Court's jurisdiction established in the case concerning the Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia), instituted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1195], as in its 2012 judgment the Court did not definitively determine the delimitation of the continental shelf between Nicaragua and Colombia in the area beyond 200 nautical miles from the Nicaraguan coast.

By its order of 9 December 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1278], the Court fixed 9 December 2014 and 9 December 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Nicaragua and a counter-memorial by Colombia.

On 14 August 2014, Colombia, referring to article 79 of the Rules of Court, raised certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court and to the admissibility of the application. In accordance with paragraph 5 of the same article, the proceedings on the merits were then suspended.

By an order of 19 September, the Court fixed 19 January 2015 as the time limit for the filing by Nicaragua of a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Colombia.

Alleged Violations of Sovereign Rights and Maritime Spaces in the Caribbean Sea (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

On 26 November 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1278], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia with regard to violations of Nicaragua's sovereign rights and maritime zones as declared by the Court's judgment of 19 November 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1257] in the case concerning the Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia), and the threat of the use of force by Colombia in order to implement those violations.

In its application, Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Colombia had breached its obligations not to use or threaten to use force under the UN Charter and international customary law, not to violate Nicaragua's maritime zones as delimited in the Court's 2012 judgment as well as Nicaragua's sovereign rights and jurisdiction in those zones, and not to violate Nicaragua's rights under customary international law as reflected in parts V and VI of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. Nicaragua also requested the Court to adjudge and declare that, consequently, Colombia was bound to comply with the 2012 judgment, to wipe out the legal and material consequences of its internationally wrongful acts, and to make full reparation for the harm caused by those acts. In support of its claim, Nicaragua cited declarations reportedly made between 19 November 2012 and 18 September 2013 by the President, the Vice-President and the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Colombia, as well as by the Commander of the Colombian Navy, claiming that those declarations represented a "rejection" by Colombia of the Court's judgment and a decision to consider it "not applicable".

Nicaragua also referred to Colombia's Presidential Decree 1946 establishing an "Integral Contiguous Zone" which, according to Nicaragua quoting the President of Colombia, covered maritime spaces extending from the south, where the Albuquerque and East-Southeast Keys were situated, and to the north, where Serranilla Key was located, and included the San Andrés, Providencia and Santa Catalina, Quitasueño, Serrana and Roncador islands, as well as the other formations in the area. Nicaragua stated that the Decree violated Nicaragua's sovereign rights over its maritime areas in the Caribbean, quoting the President of Colombia's declaration that Colombia would exercise jurisdiction and control in the Integral Contiguous Zone over all areas related to security and the struggle against delinquency, and over fiscal, customs, environmental, immigration and health matters and other areas as well. According to Nicaragua, the threatening declarations by Colombian authorities and the hostile treatment of Nicaraguan vessels by Colombian naval forces had seriously affected Nicaragua's possibilities for exploiting the living and non-living resources in its Caribbean exclusive economic zone and continental shelf, while attempts at dialogue to discuss the implementation of the Court's 2012 judgment were rejected by Colombia.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Nicaragua invoked article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá), pointing out that Colombia had denounced the Pact of Bogotá on 27 November 2012, with effect from 27 November

2013 in accordance with article LVI of the Pact, which would accordingly remain in force for Colombia until that date. Nicaragua further argued that the Court's jurisdiction rested in its inherent power to pronounce on the actions required by its judgments.

By an order of 3 February 2014, the Court fixed 3 October 2014 and 3 June 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Nicaragua and a counter-memorial by Colombia. The memorial by Nicaragua was filed within the time limit.

On 19 December, Colombia, referring to article 79 of the Rules of Court, raised certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court. In accordance with paragraph 5 of the same article, the proceedings on the merits were then suspended.

By an order of 19 December, the President of the Court fixed 20 April 2015 as the time limit for the filing by Nicaragua of a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Colombia.

Questions relating to the Seizure and Detention of Certain Documents and Data (Timor-Leste v. Australia)

On 17 December 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1279], Timor-Leste filed an application instituting proceedings with regard to the seizure and subsequent detention by Australia of documents, data and other property which belonged to Timor-Leste and which Timor-Leste had the right to protect under international law.

Timor-Leste contended that, on 3 December 2013, officers of the Australian Security Intelligence Organization, allegedly acting under a warrant issued by Australia's Attorney-General, seized from the business premises of a legal adviser to Timor-Leste in Canberra documents and data containing correspondence between the Government of Timor-Leste and its legal advisers, notably relating to a pending arbitration under the 2002 Timor Sea Treaty between Timor-Leste and Australia.

Timor-Leste, accordingly, requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the seizure and continuing detention by Australia of the documents and data violated Timor-Leste's sovereignty, as well as its property and other rights under international law and any relevant domestic law; and that Australia must immediately return to Timor-Leste those documents and data, destroy beyond recovery every copy of such documents and data that was in Australia's possession or control, and ensure the destruction of every copy that Australia had directly or indirectly passed to a third person or third State. The Court was also requested to adjudge and declare that Australia should afford satisfaction to Timor-Leste in respect of those violations of its rights under international law and any relevant domestic law, in the form of a formal apology as well as the costs incurred by Timor-Leste in preparing and presenting the current application. As basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Timor-Leste invoked the declarations of the two countries, recognizing the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court.

Also on 17 December 2013, Timor-Leste filed a request for the indication of provisional measures, stating that the purpose of the request was to protect its rights and to prevent the use of seized documents and data by Australia against Timor-Leste's interests and rights in the pending arbitration and with regard to other matters concerning the Timor Sea and its resources.

Timor-Leste, accordingly, requested the Court to indicate as provisional measures that the documents and data seized by Australia on 3 December 2013 be immediately sealed and delivered into the Court's custody, and that Australia immediately deliver to Timor-Leste and to the Court a list of all documents and data or the information that it had disclosed or transmitted to any person, as well as a list of the identities and current positions held by such persons; deliver within five days to Timor-Leste and to the Court a list of all copies that it had made of the seized documents and data; destroy all copies of the seized documents and data, secure the destruction of all copies that it had transmitted to any third party, and inform Timor-Leste and the Court of the steps taken in pursuance of that order for destruction; and give an assurance that it would not intercept or cause or request the interception of communications between Timor-Leste and its legal advisers, whether within or outside Australia or Timor-Leste.

Timor-Leste further requested that, pending the Court's decision on its request for the indication of provisional measures, the President of the Court exercise his power under article 74 of the Rules of Court to call upon Australia to act in such a way as would enable any order the Court might make on the said request to have its appropriate effects.

In his 18 December 2013 communication to the Prime Minister of Australia [ibid., p. 1280], the ICJ President drew the attention of the Australian Government to the need to act in such a way as to enable any order the Court would make on the request for provisional measures to have its appropriate effects, in particular, to refrain from any act which might cause prejudice to the rights claimed by Timor-Leste in the current proceedings. By the same communication, the President of the Court fixed 20–22 January 2014 as the dates for public hearings on the request for the indication of provisional measures.

At the end of public hearings thus held, Timor-Leste confirmed the provisional measures it had requested the Court to indicate; while Australia asked the Court to refuse Timor-Leste's request and to stay the proceedings until the Arbitral Tribunal rendered its judgment in the arbitration under the Timor Sea Treaty.

By an order of 28 January, the Court fixed 28 April 2014 and 28 July 2014 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Timor-Leste and a counter-memorial by Australia, which were filed within the time limits.

In its order of 3 March, the Court, by 12 votes to 4, decided that Australia had to ensure the content of the seized material was not in any way or at any time used to the disadvantage of Timor-Leste, pending the conclusion of the case, and that Australia had to keep under seal the seized documents and electronic data and any copies thereof until further decision of the Court was reached. The Court, by 15 votes to 1, decided that Australia should not interfere in any way in communications between Timor-Leste and its legal advisers in connection with the pending arbitration under the 2002 Timor Sea Treaty, with any future bilateral negotiations concerning maritime delimitation, or with any other related procedure between the two States, including this case. Appended to the order were dissenting opinions of two judges and one ad hoc judge, and separate opinions by two judges.

On 17 June, the Registrar transmitted to the parties the list of public hearings scheduled to take place from 17 to 24 September. By a joint letter dated 1 September, the parties requested the Court to adjourn the hearing in order to enable them to seek an amicable settlement. On 3 September, the Court decided to grant the parties' request to postpone the oral proceedings.

Maritime Delimitation in the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua)

On 25 February 2014, Costa Rica filed an application instituting proceedings against Nicaragua with regard to a dispute concerning maritime delimitation in the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean.

In its application, Costa Rica requested the Court to determine the complete course of a single maritime boundary between all the maritime areas appertaining, respectively, to Costa Rica and to Nicaragua in the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean, and the precise geographical coordinates of the single maritime boundaries in the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean. According to Costa Rica, the coasts of the two States generated overlapping entitlements to maritime areas in both the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean, and there had been no maritime delimitation between the two States in either body of water. It further maintained that the two States had exhausted diplomatic means to resolve their maritime boundary disputes, following various failed attempts to settle the issue between 2002 and 2005, and in 2013.

According to Costa Rica, the divergence between the proposals presented by the two States during negotiations with regard to a single maritime boundary in the Pacific Ocean to divide their respective territorial seas, exclusive economic zones and continental shelves demonstrated an overlap of claims. With respect to the Caribbean Sea, both States focused on the location of the initial land boundary marker on the Caribbean side, but were unable to reach agreement on the starting point of the maritime boundary. In Costa Rica's view, the existence of a dispute between the two States as to the maritime boundary in the Caribbean Sea had been affirmed by the positions expressed by both States during Costa Rica's request to intervene in the case Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia) [YUN 2010, p. 1277]; in exchanges of correspondence following Nicaragua's submissions to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf; by Nicaragua's publication of oil exploration and exploitation material; and by a 2013 decree declaring straight baselines, in which Nicaragua claimed as internal waters areas of Costa Rica's territorial sea and exclusive economic zone in the Caribbean Sea, and which was protested by Costa Rica in a letter to the United Nations Secretary-General dated 23 October 2013. Costa Rica claimed that although Nicaragua accepted in 2013 the invitation to resume negotiations, it took no further action to restart the process.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Costa Rica invoked its own declaration of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, made on 20 February 1973, and a declaration made by Nicaragua on 24 September 1929 (as amended on 23 October 2001), as well as article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement of 1948 (Pact of Bogotá).

By an order of 1 April 2014, the Court fixed 3 February 2015 and 8 December 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Costa Rica and a counter-memorial by Nicaragua.

Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament (Marshall Islands v. India)

On 24 April 2014, the Marshall Islands filed an application instituting proceedings against India, accusing it of not fulfilling its obligations with respect to the cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament.

In its application, the Marshall Islands, which acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) on 30 January 1995, asserted that the obligations enshrined in article VI of NPT were not merely treaty obligations, but also existed separately and applied to all States under customary international law. It stated that India, by engaging in conduct that directly conflicted with the obligations of nuclear disarmament and cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date, had breached and continued to breach its legal duty to perform in good faith its obligations under customary international law, even though it had not ratified NPT. The Marshall Islands requested the Court to order India to take all steps necessary to comply with the said obligations within one year of the judgment, including the pursuit—by initiation if necessary—of negotiations in good faith aimed at concluding a convention on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, the Marshall Islands referred to the declarations, accepting the Court's compulsory jurisdiction, made by the Marshall Islands on 24 April 2013 and by India on 18 September 1974.

By its order of 16 June 2014, the Court decided that the written pleadings would first be addressed to the question of the Court's jurisdiction, and fixed 16 December 2014 and 16 June 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by the Marshall Islands and a counter-memorial by India. The memorial by the Marshall Islands was filed within the time limit.

Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament
(Marshall Islands v. Pakistan)

On 24 April 2014, the Marshall Islands filed an application instituting proceedings against Pakistan, accusing it of not fulfilling its obligations with respect to the cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament.

In its application, the Marshall Islands, which acceded to NPT on 30 January 1995, asserted that the obligations enshrined in article VI of NPT were not merely treaty obligations, but also existed separately and applied to all States under customary international law. It stated that Pakistan, by engaging in conduct that directly conflicted with the obligations of nuclear disarmament and cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date, had breached and continued to breach its legal duty to perform in good faith its obligations under customary international law, although it had not ratified NPT. The Marshall Islands requested the Court to order Pakistan to take all steps necessary to comply with the said obligations within one year of the judgment, including the pursuit—by initiation if necessary—of negotiations in good faith aimed at concluding a convention on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, the Marshall Islands referred to the declarations, accepting the Court's compulsory jurisdiction, made by the Marshall Islands on 24 April 2013 and by Pakistan on 13 September 1960.

By an order of 10 July 2014, the President of the Court decided that the written pleadings would first be addressed to the question of the Court's jurisdiction and the admissibility of the application, and fixed 12 January 2015 and 17 July 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by the Marshall Islands and a counter-memorial by Pakistan.

Obligations concerning Negotiations relating to Cessation of the Nuclear Arms Race and to Nuclear Disarmament
(Marshall Islands v. United Kingdom)

On 24 April 2014, the Marshall Islands filed an application instituting proceedings against the United Kingdom, accusing it of not fulfilling its obligations with respect to the cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament.

In its application, the Marshall Islands invoked breaches by the United Kingdom of article VI of NPT, which provided that "[e]ach of the Parties to the Treaty undertakes to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament, and on a treaty on general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control". The Marshall Islands contended that by not pursuing such negotiations and engaging instead in conduct that directly conflicted with those legally binding commitments, the United Kingdom had breached and continued to breach its legal duty to perform in good faith its obligations under NPT and customary international law. It requested the Court to order the United Kingdom to take all steps necessary to comply with its obligations under article VI of NPT and under customary international law within one year of the judgment, including the pursuit—by initiation if necessary—of negotiations in good faith aimed at concluding a convention on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control.

As the basis for the Court's jurisdiction, the Marshall Islands referred to the declarations, accepting the Court's compulsory jurisdiction, made by the Marshall Islands on 24 April 2013 and by the United Kingdom on 5 July 2004.

By an order of 16 June 2014, the Court fixed 16 March 2015 and 16 December 2015 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by the Marshall Islands and a counter-memorial by the United Kingdom.

Maritime Delimitation in the Indian Ocean
(Somalia v. Kenya)

On 28 August 2014, Somalia filed an application instituting proceedings against Kenya with regard to a dispute concerning the delimitation of maritime spaces claimed by both States in the Indian Ocean.

In its application, Somalia contended that both States disagreed about the location of the maritime boundary in the area where their maritime entitlements overlapped, and that the diplomatic negotiations that took place between them had failed to resolve that disagreement. It requested the Court to determine the complete course of the single maritime boundary dividing all the maritime areas appertaining to Somalia and to Kenya in the Indian Ocean, including the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, and the precise geographical coordinates of the single maritime boundary in the Indian Ocean.

Somalia expressed the view that the maritime boundary between the parties in the territorial sea, exclusive economic zone and continental shelf should be established in accordance with, respectively, articles 15, 74 and 83 of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea; the boundary line in the territorial sea should be a median line as specified in article 15, since no special circumstances existed to justify departure from such a line; and the boundary in the exclusive economic zone and continental shelf should be established according to the three-step process the Court had consistently employed in its application of articles 74 and 83. According to Somalia, Kenya maintained the position that the maritime boundary should be a straight line emanating from the parties' land boundary terminus, and extending due east along the parallel of latitude on which the land boundary terminus sits, through the full extent of the territorial sea, exclusive economic zone and continental shelf, including the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles.

As basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Somalia referred to the declarations, recognizing the Court's compulsory jurisdiction, made by Somalia on 11 April 1963 and by Kenya on 19 April 1965, as well as article 282 of the Convention on the Law of the Sea ratified by both States in 1989.

By an order of 16 October 2014, the President of the Court fixed 13 July 2015 and 27 May 2016 as the respective time limits for the filing of a memorial by Somalia and a counter-memorial by Kenya.

Election of judges

On 4 August [A/69/230-S/2014/520], the Secretary-General notified the General Assembly and the Security Council that the terms of office of five members of the Court would expire on 5 February 2015, and therefore the Assembly and the Council should elect five judges for a nine-year term of office, beginning on 6 February 2015. On the same date [A/69/253-S/2014/521 & A/69/254-S/2014/522], the Secretary-General submitted the list of candidates, nominated by national groups, and their curricula vitae.

On 6 November, the Assembly and the Council elected four members of the Court to fill the vacancies occurring on 6 February 2015. On 12 November [A/69/575-S/2014/808], Argentina communicated to the Secretary-General, the Assembly and the Council its decision to withdraw one candidate for the position of judge. On 17 November, the Assembly and the Council elected one additional member to fill the remaining vacancy (decision 69/406).

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In August [A/69/337 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported on the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through the International Court of Justice since the submission of his 2013 report [YUN 2013, p. 1280]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to the Court by way of a special agreement or by the application of its Statute, or the execution of a judgment of the Court.

During the period under review (1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014), the Fund received applications from Burkina Faso and the Niger relating to a dispute between the two States concerning a section of their common boundary. Both States requested financial assistance to implement the Court's judgment of 16 April 2013 in the case Frontier Dispute (Burkina Faso/Niger) [YUN 2013, p. 1274] by carrying out the demarcation of the pertinent section of their common boundary on the basis of the Court's delimitation. A panel of experts, set up in accordance with paragraph 9 of the Terms of Reference of the Fund, was tasked with examining the applications and advising the Secretary-General on the parameters of the financial assistance.

Two States contributed to the Fund, which as at 30 June had a balance of $3.15 million. Noting that the number of contributions remained low, the Secretary-General urged States and other entities to consider making substantial contributions to the Fund on a regular basis.

International tribunals and court

In 2014, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) continued to expedite its proceedings, in keeping with its completion strategy. During the year, ICTY completed the substantive work before the Trial Chamber and rendered two appeal judgements. There were no outstanding indictments for violations of core statutory crimes.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwanda Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) continued to work towards its completion strategy. In 2014, it completed the substantive work before Trial Chamber and rendered five Appeals Chamber judgements.

Following the opening of its branch in The Hague on 1 July 2013, the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals was operating on two continents and performing functions inherited from both ICTY and ICTR. Those functions included attending to certain judicial matters, providing protection to witnesses, supervising the enforcement of sentences and managing archives.

The International Criminal Court continued its proceedings with respect to situations of concern in eight countries. The Office of the Prosecutor conducted preliminary examination activities in 10 situations. Twelve arrest warrants were outstanding at year's end.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2014, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY), established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440] and based in The Hague, continued efforts to implement its completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275], which was endorsed by Council resolution 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330].

The Tribunal continued to focus on the completion of all trials and appeals, rendering two appeal judgements. The Office of the Prosecutor made progress towards the completion of the mandate of the Tribunal at both the trial and appellate levels, and continued to develop working relationships with the authorities of the States of the former Yugoslavia to encourage cooperation with the Tribunal and to support domestic war crimes prosecutions. The Registry provided administrative and judicial support to the Tribunal, and coordinated the practical arrangements necessary for the transfer of responsibilities to the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (the Mechanism), established by Council resolution 1966(2010) [YUN 2010, p. 1306].

The President, Judge Theodor Meron (United States), and the Prosecutor, Serge Brammertz (Belgium), continued to fulfil their duties at the Tribunal. During the year, the Security Council adopted resolution 2193(2014), which addressed, among other issues, the extension of the terms of office of the judges and ad litem judges (see p. 1483).

President Meron informed the Council on 10 December [S/PV.7332] that the Tribunal continued to make progress in completing its last trials and appeals. The Tribunal delivered two appeal judgements in 2014. By the end of the year, only four trials and five appeal cases remained outstanding. All 161 individuals indicted were accounted for. Five appeals and four trials were ongoing by the end of the year.

The activities of ICTY were covered in two reports to the Security Council and the General Assembly, for the period from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014 [A/69/225-S/2014/556] and from 1 August 2014 to 31 July 2015 [A/70/226-S/2015/585]. The Assembly took note of the 2013/2014 report on 13 October (decision 69/508).

On 15 September (decision 68/664), the General Assembly decided to include the item on ICTY in the draft agenda of its sixty-ninth (2014) session. On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on ICTY would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Chambers

During the year, the Tribunal's three Trial Chambers rendered no judgements [A/69/225-S/2014/556], while the Appeals Chamber rendered two final judgements. Judicial activities included first instance and appeals proceedings against judgements, interlocutory decisions and State requests for review. As at 31 July, ICTY had 23 judges from 22 countries, including 14 permanent tribunal judges, six permanent judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda serving in the Appeals Chamber, and three ad litem judges.

New arrests and indictments

During the year, there were no outstanding indictments for violations of core statutory crimes. Following the arrests of the last of the Tribunal's fugitives, Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić [YUN 2011, p. 1243], the two trials were in the defence evidence presentation phase.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

Ratko Mladić was charged with 11 counts of genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, all in relation to acts allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina between 12 May 1992 and 30 November 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1314]. The trial commenced on 16 May 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1270]. The defence case started on 19 May 2014. In October, Trial Chamber I granted the Prosecution's request to reopen its case in order to present previously unavailable evidence relating to a mass grave discovered in the village of Tomašica, in the Prijedor municipality of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The judgement was expected in November 2017.

Goran Hadžić was charged with 14 counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, all in relation to acts allegedly committed in Croatia and Serbia between 25 June 1991 and December 1993. The trial commenced on 16 December 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1270]. The defence case started on 3 July 2014. The trial was adjourned on 20 October and Mr. Hadžić was on provisional release. The judgement was expected in October 2016.

Radovan Karadžić was charged with 11 counts of genocide, crime against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, for acts allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina between 1992 and 1995. The trial commenced on 26 October 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1282]. The defence case closed on 2 May 2014. Closing arguments were heard between 30 September and 7 October. The judgement was expected in December 2015.

Vojislav Šešelj was charged with nine counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, for acts allegedly committed in Croatia, Bosnia, Herzegovina and Vojvodina (Serbia) between August 1991 and September 1993 [YUN 2003, p. 1311 & YUN 2004, p. 1277]. Trial proceedings concluded on 20 May 2012. The Trial Chamber's decision that the trial could continue despite the disqualification of Judge Harhoff and replacement by Judge Niang, was upheld by the Appeals Chamber.

In the case of Prosecutor v. Nikola Šainović et al., the appeal judgement was rendered on 23 January. The Appeals Chamber affirmed majority of the defendants' convictions while granting certain grounds of appeal raised by the appellants. It reduced Mr. Šainović's sentence from 22 to 18 years of imprisonment; reduced Vladimir Lazarević's sentence from 15 to 14 years of imprisonment; and reduced Sreten Lukić's sentence from 22 to 20 years of imprisonment.

In the case of Prosecutor v. Vlastimir Đorđević, the appeal judgement was rendered on 27 January. The Appeals Chamber affirmed majority of Mr. Đorđević's convictions, while granting, either in full or in part, certain grounds of appeal raised by him and one ground of appeal raised by the prosecution. Granting the latter ground of appeal, the Appeals Chamber entered an additional conviction for persecution (sexual assault). The Appeals Chamber reduced Mr. Đorđević's sentence from 27 to 18 years of imprisonment.

In the case of Prosecutor v. Momčilo Perišić, the Appeals Chamber, on 20 March, denied a prosecution motion seeking reconsideration of the appeal judgement.

The three Appeals Chamber cases, Prosecutor v. Jovica Stanišić and Franko Simatović, Prosecutor v. Mićo Stanišić and Stojan Župljanin and Prosecutor v. Jadranko Prlić et al., were outstanding.

Extension of terms of office and ad litem judges

ICTY requests for extension. On 31 October [A/69/559-S/2014/780], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council and to the General Assembly a 1 October letter from the ICTY President, requesting the extension of the term of office of 14 permanent judges of the Trial and Appeals Chambers and three ad litem judges of the Trial Chamber until the dates set out therein or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned.

On 3 December [A/69/631-S/2014/865], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council and to the General Assembly a 25 November letter from the ICTY President, amending his request for extension of the term of office of Judge Patrick Robinson (Jamaica) to 31 July 2015, or until the completion of the cases to which he was assigned, in view of the election of Judge Robinson to the International Court of Justice.

General Assembly action. On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 69/416, decided to extend the term of office of 13 permanent judges and three ad litem judges, who were members of the Trial Chambers and the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned. It also decided to extend the term of office of one permanent judge, Judge Robinson, who was a member of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 July 2015, or until the completion of the cases to which he was assigned.

On 18 December [meeting 7348], the Security Council adopted resolution 2193(2014) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/2014/907] was submitted by Chile.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its determination to combat impunity for all those responsible for serious international crimes and the necessity of all persons indicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (the International Tribunal) being brought to justice,

Taking note of the letters dated 31 October and 3 December 2014 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching letters dated 1 October and 25 November 2014 from the President of the International Tribunal,

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004 and, in particular, 1966(2010) of 22 December 2010, in which it, inter alia, established the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (the Mechanism),

Taking into account the assessments by the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report, and the updated trial and appeals schedule,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about staffing, and reaffirming that staff retention is essential for the most expeditious completion of the work of the Tribunal,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the extension of the terms of office of the permanent and ad litem judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chambers and the Appeals Chamber,

Recalling also its resolution 2007(2011) adopted on 14 September 2011,

Having regard to article 16 of the statute of the International Tribunal,

Having considered the nomination by the Secretary-General of Mr. Serge Brammertz for reappointment as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Requests the International Tribunal to complete its work and facilitate the closure of the Tribunal as expeditiously as possible with the aim of completing the transition to the Mechanism, and expresses its continued concern over delays in the conclusion of the work of the Tribunal, in the light of resolution 1966(2010), in which the Security Council requested the Tribunal to complete its trial and appeals proceedings by 31 December 2014;

2. Underlines that States should cooperate fully with the International Tribunal, as well as with the Mechanism;

3. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judge at the International Tribunal, who is a member of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 July 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which he is assigned, if sooner:

– Mr. Patrick Lipton Robinson (Jamaica)

4. Also decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent and ad litem judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chambers and the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

– Mr. Koffi Kumelio A. Afande (Togo)

– Mr. Carmel A. Agius (Malta)

– Mr. Liu Daqun (China)

– Mr. Theodor Meron (United States of America)

– Mr. Fausto Pocar (Italy)

– Mr. Jean-Claude Antonetti (France)

– Mr. Guy Delvoie (Belgium)

– Mr. Christoph Flüge (Germany)

– Mr. Burton Hall (Bahamas)

– Mr. O-gon Kwon (Republic of Korea)

– Mr. Bakone Melema Moloto (South Africa)

– Mr. Howard Morrison (United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland)

– Mr. Alphonsus Martinus Maria Orie (Netherlands)

– Mr. Melville Baird (Trinidad and Tobago)

– Ms. Flavia Lattanzi (Italy)

– Mr. Antoine Kesia-Mbe Mindua (Democratic Republic of the Congo)

5. Further decides to reappoint Mr. Serge Brammertz as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal, notwithstanding the provisions of article 16, paragraph 4, of the statute of the International Tribunal related to the length of office of the Prosecutor, for a term with effect from 1 January 2015 until 31 December 2015, which is subject to an earlier termination by the Council upon the completion of the work of the Tribunal;

6. Urges the International Tribunal, in the light of resolution 1966(2010), to redouble its efforts to review its projected case completion dates with a view towards shortening them as appropriate;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2193(2014):

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Chad, Chile, China, France, Jordan, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Nigeria, Republic of Korea, Rwanda, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Russian Federation.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2014, the Office of the Prosecutor ensured the expeditious continuation of trial proceedings and handled the remaining appeals, while contending with the problem of escalating staff attrition and downsizing. As at 31 July, judgements were issued in two appeals (Sainović et al. and Đorđević); two cases were in the phase of presentation of defence evidence (Hadžić and Mladić); one case was in the final briefing process following the completion of the phase of presentation of defence evidence (Karadžić); and one case was still awaiting judgement at the trial chamber level (Šešelj). In addition, five cases were on appeal (Popović et al., Tolimir, Stanišić and Župljanin, Prlić et al., and Stanišić and Simatović).

The Office of the Prosecutor continued to rely on the full cooperation of States to fulfil its mandate. The Prosecutor continued to foster working relations with national prosecutors, meeting with officials in Sarajevo in April 2014 and in Brijuni, Croatia, in May 2014 to discuss cooperation and other issues of mutual relevance. The Office continued to request cooperation from Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina in support of its ongoing casework.

Serbia processed requests for assistance from the Office, and facilitated its access to witnesses, by facilitating the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal.

The Croatian authorities provided timely and adequate responses to day-to-day requests for assistance from the Office and facilitated access to witnesses and evidence as required.

The authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina responded promptly and adequately to most requests from the Office for documents and access to government archives. They also provided valuable assistance with witness protection matters and facilitated the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal.

With respect to cooperation in judicial matters among the States of the former Yugoslavia, the Office continued to promote regional cooperation and collaboration in war crimes matters. The regional cooperation protocols came under public scrutiny in January and February 2014, when Serbia and Croatia issued international arrest warrants against citizens of Bosnia and Herzegovina. A protocol on the exchange of information and evidence in war crimes cases was adopted between Bosnia and Herzegovina and Montenegro on 29 April, following the signing of similar protocols between Bosnia and Herzegovina and Serbia and Croatia [YUN 2013, p. 1284]. The Office encouraged the respective authorities to produce concrete results from the implementation of the protocol. In December, Serbian and Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities conducted coordinated arrest operations in relation to the Štrpci case, and initial proceedings were under way in both Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina to bring those arrested to trial.

Support from States outside the former Yugoslavia and international organizations remained important for the completion of the Tribunal's mandate. The Office continued to access information held in the archives and other institutions of United Nations Member States, and acknowledged the assistance from the United Nations and its agencies, the European Union (EU), the North Atlantic Treaty Organizations, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Council of Europe and non-governmental organizations, including those in the former Yugoslavia.

As the Tribunal moved closer to the completion of its mandate, the Office remained committed to promoting effective war crimes prosecutions in the former Yugoslavia. The Office continued to provide information related to the ongoing cases at the Tribunal to assist national jurisdictions in prosecuting crimes arising out of the conflict in the former Yugoslavia. The joint EU/Tribunal "liaison prosecutors" project, in its fifth year of operation, remained a central component of the Office's strategy to strengthen the capacity of national criminal justice systems in the former Yugoslavia to undertake war crimes cases. The Office continued to urge the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina to finalize investigations arising out of material it had transferred to them concerning crimes documented in cases brought by the Office, but which did not form part of indictments at the Tribunal. Serious issues remained in relation to the implementation of the national war strategy in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Although there had been some progress in the transfer of cases from State judicial organs to entity judicial organs, the number of indictments issued by the entities remained low. The Office urged the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina to pay attention to cases of sexual violence, given the reported magnitude of such crimes and the dearth of prosecutions devoted to them.

The Office sought to share the lessons learned and best practices developed from its work over the past 21 years with national counterparts working across a range of criminal justice sectors in Africa, South America, Europe and the Middle East.

The Registry

During the year, the Registry provided judicial, diplomatic, operational and administrative support for the Tribunal and managed its outreach programme. The Judicial Support Services Division underwent a major restructuring and consolidation to streamline its operations and respond to the downsizing efforts of the Tribunal. The restructuring included the merger of part of the former Court Management Support Services, the Victims and Witnesses Section and the Office for Legal Aid and Defence into one new section: the Court Support Services Section as of 1 March. The established Section had four units: the Witness Support and Operations Unit and Witness Protection Unit (collectively referred to as the Victims and Witnesses Section), the Courtroom Operations Unit, and the Office for Legal Aid and Defence. Another part of the former Court Management Support Services called the Judicial Records Unit reported to the Mechanism Archives and Records Section.

As at 31 July, the Victims and Witnesses Section assisted 207 witnesses to travel to The Hague to give evidence and completed 95 witness interviews for its research regarding the long-term impact of giving testimony at the Tribunal. It also supported the Mechanism in preparing policies and practices and developing shared access to its databases for the branches of the Mechanism in The Hague and Arusha. The Witness Protection Unit coordinated professional responses to threats to witnesses and continued working on relocating protected witnesses.

The Courtroom Operations Unit supported four trials and seven appeals, including five videoconference links, four rule 92 bis missions and one site visit. It also assisted three self-represented accused through its Pro Se Office. As at 31 July, in cooperation with the Judicial Records Unit, the Unit had processed 81 requests for assistance submitted by national jurisdictions.

The Office for Legal Aid and Defence administered the legal aid system of the Tribunal, overseeing more than 200 defence team members. The Office also assisted detained witnesses with their legal representation and administered the appointment and remuneration of amici curiae. It also provided assistance on legal, policy, and operational matters relating to the management of the legal aid system of the Mechanism.

The Judicial Records Unit, as at 31 July, had processed 3,562 Tribunal filings, 425 Mechanism filings and 714 transcripts. It also facilitated the sharing and transfer of judicial records between the Tribunal and the Mechanism.

The United Nations Detention Unit continued to support both the Tribunal and the Mechanism and was responsible for detaining up to 34 individuals in conditions meeting the applicable international standards. It facilitated the presence of detainees at court hearings, ensured the care and security of detained witnesses and implemented the provisional release of one detainee. The Unit continued to support self-represented accused in the preparation of their defence cases with a wide range of facilities. It also facilitated medical examinations by court-appointed medical experts and by physicians chosen by detainees.

The Administration Division engaged with both management and staff representatives in further implementing downsizing procedures. The Division also coordinated the finalization of the proposed budgets for the Tribunal and the Mechanism for the biennium 2014–2015. It also provided overall administrative support to the Mechanism, including the launch and start-up of the branch of the Mechanism in The Hague.

The Immediate Office of the Registrar supported the Registrar in its overall responsibility, including supervising all Registry sections and representing the Tribunal in its relations with the host State, embassies and ministries, the United Nations and other international organizations. It also supported the Registrar in managing Mechanism registry operations in both Arusha and The Hague. The Office continued to assist the Registrar and the Administration Division with the implementation of downsizing procedures.

The Mechanism Archives and Records Section supported the Tribunal offices with the preparation for transferring the records to the Mechanism. The Section contributed to the further development of policies and procedures, such as the electronic mail policy of the Tribunal. The Section continued to develop and implement the retention schedules of the Tribunal records, focusing on schedules for the records of Chambers and the Administration Division. The Section provided records storage and retrieval services for Tribunal offices, including the destruction of time-expired records in compliance with approved retention schedules.

The Communications Service provided information to a wide range of audiences. It also supported the development of an Internet platform for the Mechanism.

The outreach programme continued to deliver accurate factual information about the work of the Tribunal and to stimulate debate in the former Yugoslavia. It prepared an exhibition of the work and achievements of the Tribunal, displayed in The Hague and in Sarajevo, and also completed the second, and initiated the third, phase of its youth outreach project in high schools and universities in all countries of the region, reaching almost 2,000 young people. The field offices of the Tribunal in Belgrade and Sarajevo organized 20 outreach events reaching approximately 1,000 individuals. Two documentaries about the work of the Tribunal were produced. The first, entitled “Through Their Eyes: Witnesses to Justice” which highlighted the crucial role that witnesses played in the work of the Tribunal, was screened in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Serbia and The Hague. The second, “Crimes before the ICTY: Central Bosnia” was completed in July.

Board of Auditors report. On 30 June [A/69/5/Add.14], the Chair of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the President of the General Assembly the financial statements of ICTY for the 2012–2013 biennium. The Board’s recommendations covered, among other issues, planning for the closure of the Tribunal, the transition to the Mechanism and the management of non-expendable property.

Report of the Secretary-General. In November [A/69/599], the Secretary-General submitted the first performance report on the ICTY budget for the 2014–2015 biennium to identify revised estimates for ICTY owing to variation in the rates of inflation and exchange, and in the standards and vacancies assumed in the calculation of the initial appropriations. The General Assembly was requested to approve a revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 in the amount of $201,340,300 gross ($179,074,200 net), reflecting a decrease of $347,900 gross ($638,900 net).

ACABQ report. In December [A/69/655], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended that the General Assembly take note of the first performance report and approve a revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 to the ICTY Special Account in the amount of $201,340,300 gross ($179,074,200 net).

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/69/692], adopted resolution 69/255 without a vote [agenda item 146].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–

2015, of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the recommendations contained therein and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 68/256 of 27 December 2013,

1. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–2015, of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 of a total amount of 201,054,800 United States dollars gross (179,074,200 dollars net) for the biennium 2014–2015, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 50,176,725 dollars gross (44,608,825 dollars net), including 173,950 dollars gross (319,450 dollars net), being the decrease in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 50,176,725 dollars gross (44,608,825 dollars net), including 173,950 dollars gross (319,450 dollars net), being the decrease in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 11,135,800 dollars, including 291,000 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2014–2015.

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2014, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), established by Security Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299] and based in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, delivered five Appeals Chamber judgements.

The Office of the Prosecutor focused on handing over of responsibility for tracking of fugitives to the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (the Mechanism) and supporting national authorities in the prosecution of crimes relating to the 1994 Rwanda genocide. Support was also extended to Rwanda authorities to assist them in preparing for the transfer of cases from the Tribunal. The Registry continued to provide a high level of administrative and judicial support to the Tribunal and to the Mechanism. The Registry ensured the cooperation and assistance of Member States with the Tribunal and further strengthened its outreach and capacity-building activities in Rwanda.

The Security Council adopted resolution 2194(2014) (see p. 1489) addressing, among other issues, the extension of the terms of office of permanent judges.

The ICTR President, Judge Vagn Joensen (Denmark), informed the Council on 10 December [S/PTV.7332] that the ICTR Appeals Chamber had completed all of its work with the exception of the Butare case concerning six persons. The ICTR President also updated the Council on the progress made with respect to the issue of reparations for the victims of the 1994 genocide against the Tutsi in Rwanda. The issue of relocating the acquitted and convicted released persons remained a challenge. As ICTR made arrangements for closure, the continued assistance of governments remained crucial to ensure the Tribunal closed its door with its mandate completed and its legacy secured.

The 2014 activities of ICTR were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods of 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014 [A/69/206-S/2014/546] and 1 July 2014 to 30 June 2015 [A/70/218-S/2015/577]. The Assembly took note of the 2013/2014 report on 13 October (decision 69/507).

On 15 September (decision 68/663), the General Assembly decided to defer consideration of the item on ICTR and to include it in the draft agenda of its sixty-ninth (2014) session. On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on ICTR would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

The Chambers

The Chambers comprised one Trial Chamber and one Appeals Chamber and were composed of 12 permanent judges in the Appeals Chamber and one ad litem judge serving as President and as member of the Trial Chamber.

New arrests

In 2014, the Office of the Prosecutor of the Tribunal had no further fugitive-related workload. The tracking, arrest and trial of the three top-level fugitives, Augustin Bizimana, Félicien Kabuga and Protais Mpiranya, and the monitoring of all referred cases were managed by the Mechanism.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

On 7 February 2014, the Appeals Chamber severed the case of Augustin Bizimungu from the Ndindiliyimana et al. (Military II) case, ordering further submissions from the parties. On 11 February, the Appeals Chamber issued its judgement in respect of the Ndindiliyimana, Nzuwonemeye and Sagashutu cases. The Appeals Chamber reversed Ndindiliyimana's and Nzuwonemeye's convictions in their entirety. It also partly reversed Sagashutu's convictions, reducing his sentence to 15 years of imprisonment.

The Appeals Chamber issued its judgement in respect of Mr. Bizimungu on 30 June. The Appeals Chamber affirmed Mr. Bizimungu's convictions for genocide; extermination, murder and rape as crimes against humanity; and murder and rape as serious violations of article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, while it reversed findings of his responsibility for certain events. The Appeals Chamber affirmed the sentence of 30 years of imprisonment.

The Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeals in the Édouard Karemera and Matthieu Ndirumpatse case in February 2014 and pronounced its judgement on 29 September. The Appeals Chamber affirmed Karemera's and Ndirumpatse's 2011 convictions [YUN 2011, p. 1251], while it reversed certain findings of the Trial Chamber, and also affirmed their sentences of life imprisonment.

The Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeal in the Ildéphonse Nizeyimana case in April and pronounced its judgement on 29 September. The Appeals Chamber reversed Nizeyimana's 2012 convictions [YUN 2012, p. 1276] based on some events, including his conviction for extermination as a crime against humanity, but affirmed his convictions for genocide and murder as a crime against humanity and as a serious violation of article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocol II thereto. The Appeals Chamber set aside the life sentence and imposed a sentence of 35 years of imprisonment.

The Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeals in the Callixte Nzabonimana case in April and pronounced its judgement on 29 September. While reversing Nzabonimana's 2012 convictions [ibid.] based on certain events, the Appeals Chamber affirmed his convictions for instigating genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide, and extermination as a crime against humanity. The Appeals Chamber also affirmed his life sentence.

Deliberations were in progress in the final case, Nyiramasuhuko et al. ("Butare" case), which concerned six convicted persons. The Appeals Chamber was expected to hear oral arguments in April 2015.

Judges of the Court

Extension of terms of office and ad litem judges

ICTR request for extension. On 31 October [A/69/560-S/2014/779], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council and to the General Assembly a 1 October letter from the ICTR President, requesting the extension of the term of office of six permanent judges of the Appeals Chamber and one ad litem judge of the Trial Chamber until the dates set out therein or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned.

General Assembly action. On 23 December (decision 69/415), the Assembly decided to extend the term of office of two permanent judges, who were members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 July 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned. It also decided to extend the term of office of four permanent judges, who were members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned. The Assembly further decided to extend the term of office of one ad litem judge, Judge Vagn Joensen (Denmark), until 31 December 2015 so that he would continue to perform the functions required of him as trial judge and President of the International Tribunal, to complete the work of the Tribunal.

Nomination for reappointment of Prosecutor

By a letter of 31 October [S/2014/778] to the Security Council, the Secretary-General requested the Council to reappoint Hassan Bubacar Jallow (Gambia) as Prosecutor, effective 1 January 2015, for a one-year term, subject to an earlier termination by the Council upon the completion of the work of ICTR.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 7348], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2194(2014). The draft [S/2014/908] was submitted by Chile.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its determination to combat impunity for all those responsible for serious international crimes and the necessity of all persons indicted by the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (the International Tribunal) being brought to justice,

Taking note of the letter dated 31 October 2014 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching a letter dated 1 October 2014 from the President of the International Tribunal,

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003, 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004 and, in particular, 1966(2010) of 22 December 2010, in which it, inter alia, established the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (the Mechanism),

Taking into account the assessments by the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report, and the updated appeal schedule,

Noting that the year 2014 marked the twentieth anniversary of the International Tribunal, established on 8 November 1994,

Noting also the referral of cases of Laurent Bucyibaruta, Wenceslas Munyeshyaka, Jean Uwinkindi and Bernard Munyagishari to national jurisdictions, pursuant to rule 11 bis of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the International Tribunal, and emphasizing the importance of continuing to monitor progress in referred cases, as well as the goal of achieving the completion of all Tribunal and referred cases at the earliest possible time,

Noting with concern that many genocide suspects continue to elude justice, including the remaining nine fugitives indicated by the International Tribunal,

Noting with concern also that the International Tribunal continues to face problems in the relocation of acquitted persons and convicted persons who have completed serving their sentences, emphasizing the importance of the successful relocation of such persons, and also noting the assumption of responsibility of the Mechanism for such persons from 1 January 2015,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about staffing, and reaffirming that staff retention is essential for the most expeditious completion of the work of the International Tribunal,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the extension of the terms of office of the permanent and ad litem judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chamber and the Appeals Chamber,

Recalling also its resolution 2006(2011) adopted on 14 September 2011,

Having regard to article 15 of the statute of the International Tribunal,

Having considered the nomination by the Secretary-General of Mr. Hassan Bubacar Jallow for reappointment as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Requests the International Tribunal to complete its work and facilitate the closure of the Tribunal as expeditiously as possible with the aim of completing the transition to the Mechanism, taking into account resolution 1966(2010), in which the Security Council requested the Tribunal to complete its trial and appeals proceedings by 31 December 2014;

2. Underlines that States should cooperate fully with the International Tribunal as well as with the Mechanism;

3. Commends States that have accepted the relocation of acquitted persons or convicted persons who have completed serving their sentences to their territories, and reiterates its call upon all States to cooperate with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal and, from 1 January 2015, the Mechanism, for increased efforts towards the relocation of acquitted persons and convicted persons who have completed serving their sentences;

4. Urges all States, especially States where fugitives are suspected to be at large, to intensify their cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal and the Mechanism, in particular to achieve the arrest and surrender of all remaining fugitives indicted by the Tribunal as soon as possible;

5. Urges the Mechanism to continue to monitor cases of Laurent Bucyibaruta, Wenceslas Munyeshyaka, Jean Uwinkindi and Bernard Munyagishari, which were referred to national jurisdictions;

6. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 July 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they are or will be assigned, if sooner:

- Mr. Mehmet Güney (Turkey)
- Mr. William H. Sekule (United Republic of Tanzania)

7. Also decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2015 or until the completion of the cases to which they are or will be assigned, if sooner:

- Ms. Khalida Rachid Khan (Pakistan)
- Mr. Mandiaye Niang (Senegal)
- Ms. Arlette Ramaroson (Madagascar)
- Mr. Bakhtiyar Tuzmukhamedov (Russian Federation)

8. Further decides, bearing in mind the expiry of his term of office on 31 December 2014, to extend the term of office of Judge Vagn Joensen (Denmark) until 31 December

2015 so that he may continue to perform the functions required of him as trial judge and President of the International Tribunal, to complete the work of the Tribunal;

9. Decides to reappoint Mr. Hassan Bubacar Jallow as Prosecutor of the International Tribunal, notwithstanding the provisions of article 15, paragraph 4, of the statute of the International Tribunal related to the length of office of the Prosecutor, for a term with effect from 1 January 2015 until 31 December 2015, which is subject to an earlier termination by the Council upon the completion of the work of the Tribunal;

10. Also decides to remain seized of the matter.

Office of the Prosecutor

Following the completion of all first instance trial proceedings, the Office of the Prosecutor focused on the completion of ongoing appeals, the monitoring of cases referred to national jurisdictions, transitional activities to ensure a smooth and efficient transfer of functions to the Office of the Prosecutor of the Mechanism, preparation of materials for archiving and on multiple activities related to the Prosecutor's closing report to the Secretary-General, and other essential legacy works initiated over the years.

The Office of the Prosecutor had transferred a further 596 boxes of material concerning an additional five completed cases and investigation records to the Arusha branch of the Mechanism of the Office of the Prosecutor. The Office of the Prosecutor's Appeals and Legal Advisory Division litigated 26 appeals in seven cases during the reporting period.

In January 2014, the Office hosted an international conference in Kampala, Uganda, and released a manual on best practices in the investigation and prosecution of sexual and gender-based violence. On 4 and 5 November, the Office hosted the Seventh Colloquium of International Prosecutors, which was part of broader legacy events organized by the Tribunal to mark its twentieth anniversary.

The Registry

The Registry supported the judicial process by servicing the Tribunal's other organs and the defence, as well as by seeking support from States, international organizations and other stakeholders in the conduct of proceedings.

The main activities of the Office of the Registrar focused on supporting the conclusion of the remaining appeals, engaging Member States on a variety of issues, providing support to the Mechanism, and preparing the records of the Tribunal for archiving and handover to the Mechanism necessary to achieve an orderly closure of the Tribunal. The Office of the Registrar continued to act as the channel of communication between the Tribunal and the diplomatic community. It also assisted the Mechanism with its function of monitoring the cases of Uwinkindi and Munyagishari that were transferred to Rwanda for trial, as well as the two cases referred to France. In April, the Office of the Registrar participated in an event held to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the Rwanda Genocide in Dar es Salaam, jointly organized by the United Nations Office in the United Republic of Tanzania, the Rwanda High Commission and the Government of Tanzania. The President and Registrar continued to deploy all efforts to find host countries for the remaining nine acquitted persons and three released convicts.

The Umusanzu Information and Documentation Centre in Kigali and 10 additional provincial information centres located across Rwanda played a key role in promoting outreach activities of the Tribunal through information dissemination, improved communication and access to the jurisprudence and other legal materials of the Tribunal. From February to June 2014, the staff of the Centre conducted genocide awareness workshops in six districts in Rwanda, covering 18 secondary schools, one demobilization and reintegration camp and one institution of higher learning.

The Judicial and Legal Affairs Section focal point for court management provided support services to the judicial processes of the Tribunal and the Mechanism, including the provision of transcripts of appellate proceedings, and continued to prepare judicial records for transfer to the Mechanism. The Section focal point for defence counsel, detainees and acquitted and convicted persons released in Tanzania provided essential services, such as management of payments to defence counsel and attending to requests from detainees and released persons. The Section focal point for witness and victims support worked with the Mechanism to prepare witness files for handover in relation to 58 completed cases before the Tribunal. The United Nations Detention Facility, as at 30 June, housed a total inmate population of 13 detained persons, including 11 convicted persons awaiting judgements on appeal by the Tribunal, one convicted person awaiting judgement on appeal by the Mechanism and one convicted person awaiting an order for transfer for the enforcement of sentence by the Mechanism.

The Legal Library and Reference Unit delivered legal information to both internal and external users who needed to access the materials of the Tribunal and the Mechanism, including their jurisprudence. The Unit also maintained the web database to enable researchers to access the Tribunal's jurisprudence. On 1 January, the Office of the Registrar completed the transfer of the Unit together with its functions to the Mechanism, in line with the decision of the Coordination Council.

The Division of Administrative Support Services carried the responsibility of providing a wide range of services, such as budget and finance, medical services, security, travel, human resources, training and counselling services, buildings management and property control. It continued to respond to challenges from the process of downsizing in a proactive and flexible manner.

The Career Development and Counselling Unit was implementing a four-pronged strategy to support the completion of the Tribunal's mandate. The Security and Safety Section continued to support the Tribunal and the Mechanism in ensuring the safety and security of staff, premises, assets and operations. The Health Service Unit provided curative, preventive and trauma counselling support and performed medico-administrative duties for staff members and officials of the Tribunal and Mechanism and their dependants. It also provided medical services to detainees, witnesses and victims and acquitted persons. The Information Technology Services Section continued its consolidation and optimization process in liquidating Kigali facilities, supporting the Mechanism's information technology infrastructure in Arusha and Kigali and sustaining services required by the Tribunal completion strategy. The Budget and Finance Section provided expertise on proper planning, control and monitoring of the utilization of available resources as well as services to staff members and clients of the Tribunal. The main function of the Procurement Section had been disposing of the Tribunal's assets and transferring those that might be utilized by the Mechanism into its custody, with the impending closure of the Tribunal. The Administrative Legal Services Unit played an important legal advisory role for issues pertaining to the proper implementation and interpretation of UN administrative rules, cases relating to the privileges and immunities of staff regarding civil and criminal cases, and disputes related to domestic employees of Tribunal staff members. The Unit had been assisting the Registrar with appeals related to the downsizing and retention processes, performance evaluations and investigations of allegations and misconduct in collaboration with the Office of Internal Oversight Services. The Unit had also been responsible for coordination activities of all other oversight bodies.

Board of Auditors report. On 30 June, the Chair of the Board of Auditors transmitted the Board's report [A/69/5/Add.13] on the audit of the financial statements of ICTR for the 2012–2013 biennium to the General Assembly President. The Board recommended that the Tribunal complete the remaining International Public Sector Accounting Standards implementation opening balances activities as planned, with a view to the successful completion and handover to its successor of its mandate; consider preparing formal contingency arrangements for risks to the timetable for the completion of its mandate; develop an efficient acquisition plan that would suit the downsizing and winding-up strategy and reduce the procurement lead time process; and designate a senior officer who would regularly review the activities of system administrators with dual roles, as a control measure to minimize the risks of fraud.

Report of Secretary-General. In November, the Secretary-General submitted the first performance report [A/69/597] of ICTR for the 2014–2015 biennium to identify revised estimates, taking into account variations in the rates of inflation and exchange and in the standards and vacancies assumed in the calculation of the initial appropriations. The General Assembly was requested to approve the revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 in the amount of $94,883,600 gross ($88,316,800 net), reflecting an increase of $1,287,900 gross ($1,128,400 net).

ACABQ report. In December [A/69/655], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly take note of the first performance report and approve the revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 to the ICTR Special Account in the amount of $94,883,600 gross ($88,316,800 net).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/691], adopted resolution 69/254 without a vote [agenda item 145].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–2015, of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, the financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the recommendations contained therein and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 68/255 of 27 December 2013,

1. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–2015, of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 of a total amount of 94,883,600 United States dollars gross (88,316,800 dollars net) for the biennium 2014–2015, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 24,042,875 dollars gross (22,361,300 dollars net), including 643,950 dollars gross (564,200 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 24,042,875 dollars gross (22,361,300 dollars net), including 643,950 dollars gross (564,200 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 3,363,150 dollars, including 159,500 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2014–2015.

Functioning of the Tribunals

Implementation of completion strategies

ICTY

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 1292], the ICTY President reported in May [S/2014/351] and November [S/2014/827] on progress made in implementing the ICTY completion strategy.

The Tribunal continued to make progress in completing its work, rendering two appeal judgements. Four trials, involving four individuals, and five appeals, involving 16 individuals, were ongoing. Following the arrests of Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić in 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1243], there were no outstanding fugitives from ICTY. The Tribunal had concluded proceedings against 141 of the 161 individuals it had indicted. It also continued to make effort to meet the deadlines of the completion strategy, and the forecast judgement delivery dates were unchanged for almost all cases. The Tribunal undertook initiatives aimed at providing assistance and support to victims and pursued legacy and capacity-building project. It also worked to ensure a smooth transition to the Mechanism. The outreach programme continued its efforts to bring the work of the Tribunal closer to communities in the former Yugoslavia. The Tribunal implemented measures expediting its work, including the planning of additional training programmes for legal drafters in the Chambers; the assignment of staff members who had additional capacity to assist on a part-time basis with judicial cases potentially subject to delay; the active management of the translation process for judgements and the assignment of additional resources to key translations; and the maintenance of rosters of qualified applicants to ensure that departing staff could be replaced promptly.

The Victims and Witnesses Section provided assistance and support for approximately 112 witnesses appearances before the Tribunal. As the Tribunal worked towards the completion of its activities, it also continued to face challenges related to the relocation of witnesses. In order to increase efficiency and to ensure the accuracy and completeness of witness records, the Section allowed for shared access to the Tribunal's victims and witnesses database between the Sarajevo field office and The Hague. As at 1 January 2014, the Mechanism's victims and witnesses protection staff were providing for the protection of witnesses in ongoing trials before the Tribunal, in addition to witnesses from completed Tribunal cases.

The Tribunal continued to implement its planned downsizing process and expected to downsize 361 posts during the biennium 2014–2015, in line with the trial and appeal schedule. On 1 March, five pre-existing sections were merged into four. The new Court Support Services Section was composed of the Courtroom Operations Unit, the Victims and Witnesses Section, and the Office for Legal Aid and Defence.

All sections of the Registry supported the Mechanism with a variety of processes, including recruitment, communications, information technology support and Registry management. The Registry also provided The Hague branch of the Mechanism with judicial support services, which included assistance with court management, language services, detention services and witness support services. The Tribunal continued to prepare its digital and hard-copy records for transfer to the Mechanism. The Human Resources Section of ICTY continued to administer recruitments to fill posts for the Mechanism. As at 15 May, recruitment exercises across both branches had resulted in the filling of 120 posts.

ICTY convened a two-day conference in Sarajevo, on 26 and 27 November, to consider aspects of its legacy in the former Yugoslavia. A meeting of the working group on the establishment of information centres was also held on 26 November in Sarajevo, where local authorities confirmed support for the establishment of two such centres in Bosnia and Herzegovina, one in Sarajevo and one in Banja Luka.

As the Tribunal completed its last judicial processes, challenges remained, most notably difficulties in retaining its highly qualified and experienced staff, which affected the progress of pending cases. Though the Tribunal would not be able to complete all of its judicial work by the end of 2014, as requested by the Security Council in resolution 1966(2010) [YUN 2010, p. 1306], that should not overshadow the success of the Tribunal and its contributions to the development of substantive and procedural international criminal law and the assistance provided to rule of law efforts in the former Yugoslavia.

ICTR

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 1292], the ICTR President submitted reports in May [S/2014/343] and November [S/2014/829 & Corr.1] that assessed progress made in implementing the ICTR completion strategy.

As at 5 November, the Tribunal had completed its responsibilities with respect to the substantive cases at the trial level for all 93 accused indicted by the Tribunal, including 55 first-instance judgements involving 75 accused, 10 referrals to national jurisdictions, three top priority fugitives whose cases had been transferred to the Mechanism, two withdrawn indictments and three indictees who died prior to or in the course of trial. Appellate proceedings had been concluded in respect of 55 persons. The sole remaining appeal in the Nyiramasuhuko et al. ("Butare") case was expected to be completed not before August 2015. Nine of the accused indicted by the Tribunal for their participation in the genocide in Rwanda remained at large. Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1966(2010) [YUN 2010, p. 1306], the responsibility for the tracking and trials of all nine of those fugitives remained with Rwanda and the Mechanism. The transition to the Mechanism and plans for closure of the Tribunal were close to completion; most judicial and prosecutorial functions had been handed over to the Mechanism.

The Office of the Prosecutor focused its work on the completion of the remaining appeals, supporting the monitoring of cases referred to national jurisdiction for trial, multiple transitional dispositions aimed at ensuring a smooth and effective transfer of functions to the Office of the Prosecutor of the Arusha branch of the Mechanism, the preparation of materials for archiving, and diverse activities for the Prosecutor's closing report to the Secretary-General. The Office of the Registrar continued to provide administrative and logistical support to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor, including human resources management, court management, finance, general services and other administrative services. It also continued with the downsizing of the Tribunal to prepare for its closure and liquidation in 2015. During the first week of November 2014, the Tribunal organized events that involved conferences and exhibitions to commemorate its twentieth anniversary.

In accordance with its statute and transitional arrangements, the Mechanism was responsible for requests for review of Tribunal judgements, trials for contempt of court or false testimony where the indictment was confirmed on or after 1 July 2012, and for the trials of three of the remaining Tribunal fugitives once arrested. A number of designated professional staff of the Tribunal continued double hatting for activities related to the Mechanism in order to gradually make it fully operational. Activities included the monitoring of cases transferred to national jurisdictions, the management of the records of the Office of the Prosecutor, the preservation of damaged archives and the handling of appeals before the Mechanism. The Tribunal remained confident that the preparation and transfer of inactive records would be completed before closure, with minimal active records left for preparation and transfer to the Mechanism during the liquidation phase.

Judicial and legal activity continued to be focused on completing the remaining appeals and the transition to the Mechanism. The focus of administrative energies had remained on downsizing related activities, including the continued search for a solution to the problem of relocation for the acquitted and released persons, the preparation of the records of the Tribunal for management by the Mechanism, and providing the support necessary for the remaining judicial and legal work of the Tribunal. In November, the Tribunal launched a new website, which included information on its remaining work, and recalled milestones reached and lessons learned in its pursuit of justice. The Tribunal held a symposium on its legacy on 6 and 7 November, which preceded the official commemoration event of the establishment of the Tribunal on 8 November. The Tribunal spearheaded the initiative to hold practice workshops between international tribunals and ICC, the first of which took place in The Hague on 15 and 16 September.

International Residual Mechanism

The Security Council established the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals by resolution 1966(2010) [YUN 2010, p. 1306], with the mandate to execute the residual functions of ICTY and ICTR, following the closure of those entities. The Mechanism had two branches: the one for ICTR was launched on 1 July 2012 and the one for ICTY commenced functioning on 1 July 2013. In response to Council resolution 1966(2010), the President and the Prosecutor of the Mechanism submitted progress reports in May [S/2014/350] and November [S/2014/826] on the work of the Mechanism for the periods from 16 November 2013 to 15 May 2014 and from 16 May to 19 November 2014.

The President of the Mechanism supervised matters related to the management of the Mechanism, coordinated the work of the Chambers and issued orders and decisions. The Office of the Prosecutor focused on the activities within its remit, including the tracking of the remaining fugitives indicted by ICTR, the rendering of assistance to national authorities and the prosecution of the Mechanism's first appeal from a judgement. The Office also established systems and procedures to streamline its operation and ensure coordination between its offices at the two branches. The Registry provided and coordinated a wide range of administrative and judicial support services for the Mechanism.

The activities of the Mechanism were covered in two reports to the Security Council and the General Assembly, for the periods from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014 [A/69/226-S/2014/555] and from 1 July 2014 to 30 June 2015 [A/70/225-S/2015/586].

The Assembly took note of the second annual report (2013/2014) of the Mechanism on 13 October (decision 69/509).

The President and the Chamber

During the year, the President, in his capacity as the head of the Mechanism, engaged in issues relating to the establishment and management of the Mechanism. He developed and adopted practice directions, held regular meetings with the Registrar on operational matters and represented the Mechanism in a variety of forums. In his judicial capacity, the President issued numerous assignment orders, as well as six decisions granting early release, a decision provisionally recognizing a sentence remission, six orders designating an enforcement State and other confidential orders and decisions. He ruled on two requests for administrative review of a decision by the Registrar of the Mechanism, one of which was confidential. The President dismissed without prejudice three requests for revocation in relation to cases transferred to Rwanda for prosecution and issued two other decisions relating to referred cases. He also partially denied a motion in a contempt-related matter. In addition, the President presided over the Appeals Chamber and served as pre-appeal judge on the Mechanism's first appeal from judgement, in the case of Augustin Ngirabatware v. the Prosecutor.

At the Arusha branch, Judge Vagn Joensen, as the single judge, issued seven decisions on requests for access to confidential information or variation of protective measures for use in national proceedings under rule 86 of the Rules. He rendered four decisions denying post-appeal requests in the Eliézer Niyitegeka case and two decisions on allegations of contempt arising out of the Augustin Ngirabatware case. He also issued a decision and an order with respect to two confidential matters. In May, at the request of the Prosecutor, Judge Joensen vacated the warrants from ICTR for the arrest of Fulgence Kayishema, Phénéas Munyarugarama, Aloys Ndimbat, Ladislav Ntaganzwa, Charles Ryandikayo and Charles Sikubwabo, replacing them with Mechanism warrants for their arrest and transfer to Rwanda authorities.

At The Hague branch, Judge Bakone Justice Moloto issued 23 decisions on requests for access to confidential information or variation of protective measures for use in national proceedings under rule 86 of the Rules, and also issued a decision concerning protective measures under rule 76 of the Rules. He issued two decisions in contempt-related matters, an order following the receipt of material from a State and an order concerning a request for redaction and reclassification of material. Judge Burton Hall issued a decision on a confidential matter and an order concerning a request for redaction and reclassification of material.

The Appeals Chamber was seized of an appeal from judgement, concerning the Augustin Ngirabat- ware case. The Appeals Chamber heard oral arguments in Arusha on 30 June, after having rendered 10 pre-appeal orders and decisions. On 21 November, the Appeals Chamber issued a decision dismissing Mr. Ndirabaturu's three motions for the admission of additional evidence on appeal. On 18 December, the Appeals Chamber affirmed Mr. Ndirabaturu's convictions for genocide and direct and public incitement to commit genocide. The Appeals Chamber, however, reversed the conviction for rape as a crime against humanity and reduced Mr. Ndirabaturu's sentence to 30 years of imprisonment.

The Appeals Chamber was seized of a request for review filed by Milan Lukić. The briefing was completed on 10 April. The President rendered four orders and decisions dealing with various preliminary motions and other confidential requests. The Appeals Chamber also issued a decision on an appeal against a decision denying the revocation of the referral of the Radovan Stanković case to the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, as well as a decision on appeals filed by Deogratias Sebureze and Maximilien Turinabo in relation to contempt proceedings.

As at 30 June, the Appeals Chamber was seized of a request filed by Eliézer Niyitegeka for the assignment of counsel to assist him with an anticipated request for review. On 6 November, the Appeals Chamber denied Mr. Niyitegeka's request for the assignment of counsel to assist him with an anticipated request for review and the presiding judge issued a related order.

In 2014, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to discharge its mandate with respect to a variety of activities, including the tracking of fugitives, the rendering of assistance to national authorities, the monitoring of cases referred to national jurisdictions, the maintenance of fugitive files in anticipation of arrest and the prosecution of an appeal and other litigation before the Mechanism's Appeals Chamber. The Office also established systems and procedures to streamline operations and ensure coordination between the branches. The second joint branch meeting of the Office of the Prosecutor took place in The Hague in December.

The Arusha branch of the Office of the Prosecutor was fully staffed, with a total of 15 core staff in Arusha and the Kigali sub-office. A prosecution appeals team was also in place to handle the appeal from the judgement in the Augustin Ndirabaturu case. The Arusha branch continued to receive support from the Office of the Prosecutor of ICTR to ensure the smooth transition of functions. The responsibility for tracking the remaining fugitives indicted by ICTR had devolved to the Mechanism. The arrest and prosecution of the top three fugitives, Augustin Bizimana, Félicien Kabuga and Protais Mpiranya, was a key priority, and the Prosecutor had further intensified efforts to track those fugitives, with particular emphasis on the Great Lakes and southern African regions. The Prosecutor was grateful for the Security Council's renewed and essential call, in its resolution 2150(2014), for all Member States to cooperate with the Mechanism in the arrest and prosecution of the nine remaining fugitives (see p. 239) and launched the International Fugitives Initiative in Kigali on 24 July. The Prosecutor continued to render assistance to the tracking of the six fugitives whose cases had been referred to Rwanda (Fulgence Kayishema, Phénée Munyarugarama, Aloys Ndimbaty, Ladislav Ntaganzwa, Charles Ryandikayo and Charles Sikubwabo). The Arusha branch of the Office of the Prosecutor received 74 requests for assistance from 14 Member States and international organizations and hosted a delegation from a national prosecuting authority. The Office of the Prosecutor of ICTR transferred 330 boxes of materials concerning five completed cases and early investigation records to the Arusha branch of the Office of the Prosecutor. The Prosecutor continued to monitor progress in referred cases, namely the Wenceslas Munyeshyaka and Laurent Bucyibaruta cases, which were transferred to France in 2007, as well as the Jean Uwinkindi and Bernard Munyagishari cases, which were transferred to Rwanda in 2012 and 2013 [YUN 2012, p. 1280 & YUN 2013, p. 1292]. The Arusha branch of the Office of the Prosecutor continued to work with its counterpart in ICTR on a number of projects, including a best practices manual for the investigation and prosecution of sexual and gender-based violence launched in January 2014, a related training programme to be conducted in the Great Lakes region later in 2014, the development of a best practices manual on the referral of international cases to national jurisdictions, and a consolidated account of the Rwanda genocide based on facts adjudicated in the judgements of the Trial and Appeals Chambers of the Tribunal.

The Hague branch of the Office of the Prosecutor, which began operations on 1 July 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1292], was almost fully staffed, with 10 core staff members on board. An advance prosecution appeals team was established to handle appeals against ICTY judgements before the Mechanism's Appeals Chamber. The Office responded to three requests concerning allegations of contempt filed by Radovan Karadžić, and it received 244 requests for assistance from seven Member States and one international organization. It also cooperated with liaison prosecutors from Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia embedded in the Office of the Prosecutor of the Tribunal. The Office filed 16 submissions in relation to applications by requesting authorities for variation of protective measures. It participated in the annual regional conference of prosecutors from the former Yugoslavia held in Brijuni, Croatia. The Office was also in the process of negotiating memorandums of understanding with prosecutors in countries of the former Yugoslavia to entrench cooperation and mutual legal assistance and ensure continuity as the Office took over those responsibilities from the Office of the Prosecutor of ICTY. The Office responded to requests for information from the Registrar of the Mechanism concerning the administration of sentences for 10 convicted persons.

The Registry

The Registry was responsible for the provision of legal, judicial, policy, diplomatic and administrative support to the Mechanism's operations. The post of Registrar continued to be funded by the ICTY budget under the double-hatting arrangement throughout the biennium. The transfer of administrative functions to the Mechanism began on 1 January 2014. As at 30 June, a total of 133 staff (regular posts and general temporary assistance) had been recruited for the Mechanism, 67 for The Hague branch and 66 for the Arusha branch, including Kigali. The Hague branch was co-located with ICTY, while the Arusha branch continued to be co-located with ICTR, and was expected to move to its new premises in 2016.

The Registry supported judicial activities in both branches of the Mechanism by preparing and managing case hearings, processing judicial filings, assigning and remunerating defence teams and providing translation of correspondence and judicial documents. The Arusha branch of the Witness Support and Protection Unit provided support to the witnesses who had testified in cases completed by ICTR, including specialized care for witnesses who were victims of sexual or gender-based violence during the Rwanda genocide. The Hague branch of the Unit continued to work on relocating protected witnesses. At both branches, the Witness Support and Protection Unit continued to contact witnesses in response to requests from national jurisdictions seeking the rescission, variation or augmentation of protective measures pursuant to rule 86 of the Rules.

The archives of the two Tribunals, for which the Mechanism would take responsibility, comprised approximately 15,000 metres of physical records and three petabyte of digital data, including more than 100,000 hours of audiovisual recordings. The Mechanism Archives and Records Section worked closely with the Tribunals on the preparation of their records and archives for transfer to the Mechanism. The Section had assumed responsibility for temporary repositories for physical records in Arusha and The Hague, pending the development of permanent repositories in both locations. The Section continued to develop the Mechanism's records and archives policies, including a record-keeping policy, an e-mail policy, standards on storing metadata, records retention schedules, and guidelines on managing sensitive information. It also began developing a comprehensive electronic document and record management system for non-judicial records and was contributing to the development of a system for judicial records. On 1 January, the Mechanism Archives and Records Section assumed responsibility for managing the resource and research centre of ICTR. On 1 March, the Section also assumed responsibility for managing the Judicial Records Unit of ICTY.

The Arusha branch enforced up to 29 sentences in two countries and The Hague branch enforced up to 21 sentences in 14 countries. The Registry also oversaw the early release of three persons convicted by ICTR and seven persons convicted by ICTY. The Registry developed a model sentence enforcement agreement, reflecting the new legal framework of the Mechanism and practice in the enforcement of sentences. The Registry received, considered and responded to requests for assistance, including requests to question detained persons and protected witnesses, to vary protective measures of witnesses and to retrieve and transmit confidential material to national authorities. The Registry also approached other international and regional organizations or bodies to assist in identifying potential monitors. Public monitoring reports were available from the Mechanism's website. Two major projects had been developed, namely the case law database of the two Tribunals, which was an international criminal justice research tool, and a website entitled "The ICTR remembers", which commemorated the twentieth anniversary of the 1994 genocide in Rwanda. The Mechanism took additional steps to ensure that key information was accessible to individuals in Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia. The Mechanism registered 38 judgements translated into Kinyarwanda as official judicial records and was exploring how best to make those records accessible to more people in Rwanda, in conjunction with ICTR.

Construction of a new facility

Report of the Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 67/244 B [YUN 2013, p. 1294], the Secretary-General, in a January report [A/68/724], provided information, as well as an update since his previous report [YUN 2013, p. 1294] on the progress made on the construction of the new premises of the Arusha branch of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals. The agreement between the United Republic of Tanzania and the United Nations concerning the headquarters of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, Arusha branch, was signed on 26 November 2013. A supplementary agreement governing the grant of land and the construction of the new facilities was being finalized. The solicitation process for the architectural and engineering design consultant was nearly complete.

The Government of Tanzania offered to provide land for the Arusha branch premises and any required amenities and utilities at the identified site, at no cost to the United Nations. Upon the Mechanism's request, the host government assigned technical focal points for the project. The Project Manager submitted monthly progress reports, through the Head of the Registry (Arusha branch), to the Assistant Secretary-General, also the Registrar of the Mechanism, to ensure that all key achievements and any potential issues or challenges had been identified. The Mechanism had sought and received the assistance of other key stakeholders in the Secretariat. The Department of Safety and Security and the Office of Information and Communications Technology provided high-level expert advice on detailed functional requirements for the facility in the areas of security and information technology and communications. The Office of Legal Affairs provided legal advice to the project team and drafted key legal documents related to the project. ICTR and ICTY continued to offer technical assistance to the project, particularly in the areas of security, telecommunications, finance, human resources and procurement. A preliminary risk register, which provided a schedule of risks and anticipated outcomes, had been created in order to manage project risks. It identified potential risks related to technical and quality issues, schedule and budget. The project team took a number of actions to reduce the project schedule by a total of 15 months, from five years and three months to four years. The Mechanism considered that it was not feasible to further shorten the duration of the project without compromising the quality of the design and construction. The Mechanism continued to monitor the project and to undertake measures necessary to mitigate potential risks, so as to ensure that the project was completed within the overall timeline and budget approved by the General Assembly.

ACABQ Report. On 28 February [A/68/777], ACABQ welcomed the continued cooperation between the Mechanism and Tanzania and trusted that it would be maintained through all phases of the project. ACABQ emphasized the importance of drawing lessons from the experience of other construction projects, especially the need for requisite experience and skills of any consultants engaged as well as proactive measures to mitigate delays. It noted the efforts made by the Mechanism to initiate cooperation with other judicial institutions pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/244 B [YUN 2013, p. 1294], and encouraged the Secretary-General to continue exploring opportunities for further cooperation. ACABQ stressed that the Mechanism had to monitor the project more closely and undertake any measures necessary to mitigate potential risks so as to ensure that it would be completed within the overall timeline. It reiterated that project costs would be met from within approved resources in order to obviate the need for drawdown from contingency provisions. ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly take note of the report of the Secretary-General, taking into account above comments and observations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 April [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/68/683/Add.1], adopted resolution 68/267 without vote [agenda item 146].

Construction of a new facility for the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, Arusha branch

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 66/240 B of 21 June 2012, 67/244 A of 24 December 2012, 67/244 B of 12 April 2013 and 68/257 of 27 December 2013,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Notes with appreciation the continued efforts of the Government of the United Republic of Tanzania in facilitating the construction project;
4. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to include local knowledge and capacity in the implementation of the project;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to take all measures necessary to mitigate potential risks and to ensure that the construction project is monitored closely and is completed within the approved timeline and resources;
6. Notes the ongoing consultations with the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 with respect to the use of useable furniture and equipment of the Tribunals for the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to continue to explore the possibilities for the use of such furniture and equipment and to report thereon in the context of future progress reports;
7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to apply flexible use of office space in the Arusha branch project, upon approval by the General Assembly of flexible workspace arrangements in the Secretariat;
8. Notes that an environmental impact assessment will be carried out to assess the potential hazards and impact of the construction, and looks forward to receiving updates in this regard in the context of the next progress report;
9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that the procurement of goods and services for the construction project is carried out in strict compliance with the existing regulations, rules and relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions governing procurement in the United Nations;
10. Reaffirms paragraph 33 of its resolution 62/269 of 20 June 2008;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to update Member States regularly, through the Office of Central Support Services of the Department of Management of the Secretariat, on the progress of the construction project;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixty-ninth session a progress report on the implementation of the project, outlining, inter alia, the project expenditures and total costs.

2012–2013 biennium

Board of Auditors report. On 30 June, the Chair of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the President of the General Assembly the Board's report [A/69/5/Add.15] on the financial statements of the Mechanism for the 2012–2013 biennium, which comprised the statement of income and expenditure and changes in reserves and fund balances, the statement of assets, liabilities and reserves and fund balances, the statement of cash flows, the statement of appropriations and the notes to the financial statements.

Report of the Secretary-General. In November, the Secretary-General submitted the first performance report on the budget of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals for the 2014–2015 biennium [A/69/598] to identify revised estimates for the Mechanism owing to variation in the rates of inflation and exchange, and in the standards and vacancies assumed in the calculation of the initial appropriations. The General Assembly was requested to approve a revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 in the amount of $117,570,000 gross ($110,164,000 net), reflecting a decrease of $2,726,600 gross ($2,667,500 net).

ACABQ report. In December [A/69/655], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly take note of the first performance report and approve a revised appropriation for the biennium 2014–2015 in the amount of $115,521,800 gross ($108,345,000 net) for the Mechanism.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/693], adopted resolution 69/256 without vote [agenda item 147].

Financing of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals

The General Assembly,

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–2015, of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, the financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the Mechanism and the recommendations contained therein and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 66/240 A of 24 December 2011 on the financing of the Mechanism and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 68/257 of 27 December 2013,

1. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the budget, for the biennium 2014–2015, of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals of a total amount of 115,521,800 United States dollars gross (108,345,000 dollars net) for the biennium 2014–2015, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 27,686,750 dollars gross (25,964,625 dollars net), including 2,387,400 dollars gross (2,243,250 dollars net), being the decrease in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2015, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 27,686,750 dollars gross (25,964,625 dollars net), including 2,387,400 dollars gross (2,243,250 dollars net), being the decrease in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount 3,444,250 dollars, including 288,300 dollars, being the decrease in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mechanism for the biennium 2014–2015.

International Criminal Court

The International Criminal Court (icc), based at The Hague, was established by the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], as a permanent institution with jurisdiction over persons accused of the most serious crimes of international concern—genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression.

In 2014, icc faced a heavy workload. The Office of the Prosecutor conducted preliminary examination activities in 10 situations and opened a new investigation into the situation in the Central African Republic. The Court was seized of 21 cases and eight situations. Arrest warrants issued by the Court remained outstanding against 12 individuals. Seven new judges were elected and Judge Silvia Fernández de Gurmendi (Argentina) was elected President of the Court. The Court referred two findings of non-cooperation to the Security Council in relation to the situation in Darfur, the Sudan, and one finding in relation to the situation in Libya. Reports covering icc activities during the year [A/69/321 & Corr.1, A/70/350] were submitted to the General Assembly. As at 31 December, 122 countries had ratified the Rome Statute.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 September [meeting 107], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/305 [draft: A/68/L.59 & Add.1], without vote [agenda item 75].

Report of the International Criminal Court

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 67/295 of 22 August 2013 and all its previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court reaffirms the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the International Criminal Court as an independent permanent judicial institution and, in this regard, that the United Nations and the Court respect each other's status and mandate,

Reiterating the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute,

Emphasizing that justice, especially transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict societies, is a fundamental building block of sustainable peace,

Convinced that ending impunity is essential for coming to terms with any past crimes committed and preventing such crimes in the future,

Acknowledging the fact that the International Criminal Court has achieved considerable progress in its investigations and judicial proceedings in various situations and cases which were referred to it by States parties to the Rome Statute and by the Security Council, and which the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court has initiated proprio motu, in accordance with the Rome Statute,

Recalling that effective and comprehensive cooperation and assistance in all aspects of its mandate by States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations remain essential for the International Criminal Court to carry out its activities,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing effective and efficient assistance to the International Criminal Court in accordance with the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court,

Acknowledging the Relationship Agreement as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/318 of 13 September 2004, including paragraph 3 of the resolution, with respect to the payment in full of expenses accruing to the United Nations as a result of the implementation of the Relationship Agreement, which provides a framework for continued cooperation between the International Criminal Court and the United Nations, which enables, inter alia, facilitation by the United Nations of the Court's field activities, and encouraging the conclusion of supplementary arrangements and agreements, as necessary,

Noting the need for funding of expenses related to investigations or prosecutions of the International Criminal Court, including in connection with situations referred to the Court by the Security Council,

Welcoming the continuous support given by civil society to the International Criminal Court,

Expressing its appreciation to the International Criminal Court for providing assistance to the Special Court for Sierra Leone,

Stressing the importance that the Rome Statute accords to the rights and needs of victims, in particular their right to participate in judicial proceedings and to claim reparations, and emphasizing the importance of informing and involving victims and affected communities in order to give effect to the mandate of the International Criminal Court towards victims,

1. Welcomes the report of the International Criminal Court for 2012/13;

2. Also welcomes the States that have become parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and calls upon all States in all regions of the world that are not yet parties to the Rome Statute to consider ratifying or acceding to it without delay;

3. Further welcomes the States parties as well as States not parties to the Rome Statute that are parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to that Agreement;

4. Notes the recent ratifications of the amendments adopted at the Review Conference of the Rome Statute, held in Kampala from 31 May to 11 June 2010;

5. Underlines, bearing in mind that in accordance with the Rome Statute the International Criminal Court is complementary to national criminal jurisdictions, that States need to adopt appropriate measures within their national legal systems for those crimes for which they are required under international law to exercise their responsibility to investigate and prosecute;

6. Encourages further efforts by the United Nations, other international and regional organizations and States, as well as civil society, to appropriately assist States, upon their request, in strengthening their domestic capacity to investigate and prosecute crimes, and in this regard underlines the importance of national ownership;

7. Emphasizes the importance of international cooperation and judicial assistance in conducting effective investigations and prosecutions;

8. Acknowledges the role of the International Criminal Court in a multilateral system that aims to end impunity, promote the rule of law, promote and encourage respect for human rights, achieve sustainable peace and further the development of nations, in accordance with international law and the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

9. Calls upon States parties to the Rome Statute that have not yet done so to adopt national legislation to implement obligations emanating from the Rome Statute and to cooperate with the International Criminal Court in the exercise of its functions, and recalls the provision of technical assistance by States parties in this respect;

10. Welcomes the cooperation and assistance provided thus far to the International Criminal Court by States parties as well as States not parties, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, and calls upon those States that are under an obligation to cooperate to provide such cooperation and assistance in the future, in particular with regard to arrest and surrender, the provision of evidence, the protection and relocation of victims and witnesses and the enforcement of sentences;

11. Notes the efforts of the Secretary-General in promoting cooperation between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court in accordance with the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court, and also notes in this regard that the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat has a specific role within the United Nations;

12. Recalls article 3 of the Relationship Agreement according to which, with a view to facilitating the effective discharge of their respective responsibilities, the United Nations and the International Criminal Court shall cooperate closely, whenever appropriate, with each other and consult each other on matters of mutual interest pursuant to the provisions of the Relationship Agreement and in conformity with the respective provisions of the Charter and the Rome Statute, and shall respect each other's status and mandate, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to include information relevant to the implementation of article 3 of the Relationship Agreement in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session;

13. Takes note of the guidance issued by the Secretary-General on contacts with persons who are the subject of arrest warrants or summonses issued by the International Criminal Court, and also takes note in this regard of the information included in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of article 3 of the Relationship Agreement;

14. Recalls the Relationship Agreement, and notes that expenses related to investigations or prosecutions incurred by the International Criminal Court in connection with situations referred by the Security Council or otherwise have been borne exclusively by States parties to the Rome Statute;

15. Emphasizes the importance of cooperation with States that are not parties to the Rome Statute;

16. Invites regional organizations to consider concluding cooperation agreements with the International Criminal Court;

17. Recalls that, by virtue of article 12, paragraph 3, of the Rome Statute, if the acceptance of a State which is not a party to the Rome Statute is required under article 12, paragraph 2, of the Rome Statute, that State may, by declaration lodged with the Registrar of the International Criminal Court, accept the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court with respect to the crime in question;

18. Urges all States parties to take the interests, needs for assistance and mandate of the International Criminal Court into account when relevant matters are being discussed in the United Nations, and invites all other States to consider doing the same, as appropriate;

19. Emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of all aspects of the Relationship Agreement, which forms a framework for close cooperation between the two organizations and for consultation on matters of mutual interest pursuant to the provisions of that Agreement and in conformity with the respective provisions of the Charter and the Rome Statute, as well as the need for the Secretary-General to continue to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session of the expenses incurred and reimbursements received by the United Nations in connection with assistance provided to the International Criminal Court;

20. Encourages further dialogue between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court, and welcomes in this regard the increased interaction of the Security Council with the Court under various formats, including the holding of an open debate on peace and justice, with a special focus on the role of the Court;

21. Continues to welcome the statement by the President of the Security Council of 12 February 2013 in which the Council reiterated its previous call regarding the importance of State cooperation with the International Criminal Court in accordance with the respective obligations of States, and expressed its commitment to effective follow-up of Council decisions in this regard;

22. Expresses its appreciation for the work undertaken by the International Criminal Court liaison office to United Nations Headquarters, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue to work closely with that office;

23. Encourages States to contribute to the Trust Fund established for the benefit of victims of crimes within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court and the families of such victims, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to that Trust Fund thus far;

24. Recalls that, at the Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which was convened and opened by the Secretary-General, States parties reaffirmed their commitment to the Rome Statute and its full implementation, as well as its universality and integrity, and that the Review Conference undertook a stocktaking exercise of international criminal justice, considering the impact of the Rome Statute on victims and affected communities, peace and justice, complementarity and cooperation, called for the strengthening of the enforcement of sentences, adopted amendments to the Rome Statute to expand the jurisdiction of the Court to cover three additional war crimes when committed in armed conflicts not of an international character, and adopted amendments to the Rome Statute to define the crime of aggression and to establish conditions under which the Court could exercise jurisdiction with respect to that crime;

25. Acknowledges the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization;

26. Takes note of the decision of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court at its twelfth session, while recalling that, according to article 112, paragraph 6, of the Rome Statute, the Assembly of States Parties shall meet at the seat of the Court or at United Nations Headquarters, to hold its thirteenth session in New York and its fourteenth session in The Hague, looks forward to the thirteenth session, which is to be held from 8 to 17 December 2014, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and facilities in accordance with the Relationship Agreement and resolution 58/318;

27. Encourages the widest possible participation of States in the Assembly of States Parties, invites States to contribute to the Trust Fund for the participation of least developed countries, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to that Trust Fund thus far;

28. Invites the International Criminal Court to submit, if it deems it appropriate, in accordance with article 6 of the Relationship Agreement, a report on its activities for 2013/14, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session.

Assembly of States Parties

The Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court adopted five resolutions and a decision at its thirteenth session (New York, 8–17 December) [ICC-ASP/13/20].

The Assembly approved the Court's 2015 programme budget amounting to €124,528,900, and established the Working Capital Fund in the amount of €7,405,983. The Assembly decided to maintain the Contingency Fund at a level consistent with the €7 million threshold for 2015 [ICC-ASP/13/Res.1].

A resolution on the Court's permanent premises [ICC-ASP/13/Res.2] recalled that the total estimate cost to unify the construction and transition projects amounted to €203.7 million, composed of €195.72 million for the unified revised project budget, which included all construction and transition activities and an estimated figure of €8 million from the regular annual budgets of the Court. The Assembly requested the Oversight Committee and the Project Director to ensure that effort was made to mitigate risks, seek opportunities for additional savings, and deliver the project within the budget. In a resolution on cooperation [ICC-ASP/13/Res.3], the Assembly urged States

Parties to explore possibilities for facilitating further cooperation and communication between the Court and international and regional organizations. The Assembly acknowledged efforts by States and by the Court, including through the Legal Tools Project, to facilitate exchange of information and experiences, with a view to raising awareness and facilitating the drafting of national implementing legislation.

A resolution on victims and reparations [ICC-ASP/13/Res.4] welcomed the Strategic Plan of the Trust Fund for Victims for the period 2014–2017 and encouraged States Parties, the Court and the Fund to coordinate activities and roles to ensure the proper implementation of the Plan. The Assembly decided to continue to monitor the implementation of the rights of victims under the Rome Statute. A resolution on strengthening ICC and the Assembly of States Parties [ICC-ASP/13/Res.5] addressed, among other issues, cooperation, strategic planning, victims and reparations, complementarity and programme budget.

The Assembly adopted a decision [ICC-ASP/13/Dec.1] on applicability of the former Court's pension regimes to former Judges Bruno Cotte and Daniel Nsereko, by which it reaffirmed its decision from its sixth session that judges elected at that session would hold office subject to the Pension Scheme Regulations for Judges.

The Chambers

The judicial activities of the Court were conducted by the Chambers, which consisted of 18 judges, organized in three divisions: the Pre-Trial Division, the Trial Division and the Appeals Division.

New arrests, warrants and summonses

On 11 September, Trial Chamber IV issued an arrest warrant against Abdallah Banda Abakaer Nourain because of the lack of guarantee that the accused would be in a position to surrender voluntarily, and vacated the scheduled trial date.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

In The Prosecutor v. Thomas Lubanga Dyilo case (situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC)), on 14 January 2014, the Appeals Chamber granted Mr. Dyilo's request to add an additional ground of appeal. On 19 and 20 May, the Appeals Chamber held a hearing at which two defence witnesses testified in support of Mr. Dyilo's application to present additional evidence in his appeals against conviction and sentence. On 1 December, the Appeals Chamber confirmed the verdict declaring Mr. Dyilo guilty and the decision sentencing him to 14 years of imprisonment.

In The Prosecutor v. Germain Katanga case (situation in the DRC), on 7 March, Trial Chamber II found Mr. Katanga guilty of five counts, including war crimes and a crime against humanity. On 23 May, the Chamber sentenced Mr. Katanga to 12 years of imprisonment. On 25 June, the defence and the Prosecutor withdrew their appeals against the judgement and indicated that they did not intend to appeal the decision on sentencing. The judgement therefore became final.

In The Prosecutor v. Bosco Ntaganda case (situation in the DRC), the confirmation of charges hearings took place before the Pre-Trial Chamber from 10 to 14 February. On 9 June, the Pre-Trial Chamber confirmed 13 charges of war crimes and 5 charges of crimes against humanity against Mr. Ntaganda.

In The Prosecutor v. Jean-Pierre Bemba Gombo case (situation in the Central African Republic (CAR)), the closing oral statements for the case took place on 12 and 13 November.

In The Prosecutor v. Jean-Pierre Bemba Gombo, Aimé Kilolo Musamba, Jean-Jacques Mangenda Kabongo, Fidèle Babala Wandu and Narcisse Arido case (situation in the CAR), the five suspects made first appearances before the Pre-Trial Chamber between November 2013 and March 2014. On 3 March, Mr. Musamba requested that the Appeals Chamber disqualify the Prosecutor, the Deputy Prosecutor and the entire staff of the Office of the Prosecutor from the ongoing investigations against him for the alleged offences, which was rejected by the Pre-Trial Chamber on 28 May. Mr. Kabongo on 12 March requested that the Appeals Chamber apply its ruling equally to the proceedings in relation to him, which was rejected by Pre-Trial Chamber II on 17 March. Mr. Wandu filed observations, on 19 March, also requesting that the Appeals Chamber grant Mr. Musamba's request for disqualification. On 20 June, the Plenary of Judges declined a defence request to disqualify Judge Cuno Tarfusser from handling the pre-trial phase of the case. On 30 June, the Office of the Prosecutor submitted its document containing the charges and list of evidence. On 11 July, the Appeals Chamber, by majority, confirmed the Pre-Trial Chamber's decisions against interim release in relation to Mr. Kabongo, Mr. Wandu and Mr. Musamba and dismissed the respective appeals. On 24 July, Pre-Trial Chamber II rejected Mr. Arido's request for interim release. On 9 July, Mr. Wandu filed an appeal against the first review of his detention. On 11 November, Pre-Trial Chamber II partially confirmed the charges of offences against the administration of justice for the five suspects and committed them to trial.

In The Prosecutor v. Omar Hassan Ahmad al-Bashir case (situation in Darfur), on 3 March, the Pre-Trial Chamber issued a decision inviting the competent authorities of the DRC to submit observations with regard to their alleged failure to execute the request for the arrest and surrender of Mr. al-Bashir during his visit in the territory of that country on 26 and 27 February. After receiving the observations, the Pre-Trial

Chamber issued a decision on 9 April finding that the DRC had failed to cooperate with the Court by refusing to arrest and surrender Mr. al-Bashir.

In The Prosecutor v. Abdallah Banda Abakaer Nourain and Saleh Mohammed Jerbo Jamus case (situation in Darfur), on 16 April, the Chamber vacated the 5 May trial commencement date in the light of logistical difficulties encountered by the Registry. On 14 July, the Chamber decided that the trial would commence on 18 November and issued a cooperation request to the Government of the Sudan to take all necessary steps to facilitate Mr. Nourain's presence for his trial.

In The Prosecutor v. William Samoei Ruto and Joshua Arap Sang case (situation in Kenya), on 15 January, Trial Chamber V (a) decided in an oral ruling to conditionally excuse Mr. Ruto from presence at trial. On 17 April, Trial Chamber V (a) granted the Prosecution's application for summonses for eight witnesses required to appear before the Chamber, either via videolink or at a location in Kenya.

In The Prosecutor v. Uhuru Muigai Kenyatta case (situation in Kenya), on 31 March, the Trial Chamber adjourned the provisional trial commencement date to 7 October. On 29 July, the Trial Chamber ordered the Government of Kenya to provide the prosecution with financial and communication records relating to Mr. Kenyatta from 2007 to 2010. On 3 December, Trial Chamber V (b) issued a decision rejecting the application for referral of the matter to the Assembly of States Parties of the cooperation of Kenya. On 5 December, the prosecutor filed a notice to withdraw charges against Mr. Kenyatta.

In The Prosecutor v. Saif Al-Islam Gaddafi and Abdullah Al-Senussi case (situation in Libya), on 21 May, the Appeals Chamber confirmed the 31 May 2013 decision of Pre-Trial Chamber I [YUN 2013, p. 1301], finding that the Pre-Trial Chamber did not err in either fact or law when it concluded that Libya had fallen short of substantiating, by means of evidence of a sufficient degree of specificity and probative value, that the investigation by Libya covered the same case that was before the Court. On 11 July, the Pre-Trial Chamber issued a decision which reminded Libya of its duty to proceed immediately with the surrender of Mr. Gaddafi to the Court. On 24 July, the Appeals Chamber confirmed the 11 October 2013 decision of Pre-Trial Chamber I [YUN 2013, p. 1302]. On 10 December, Pre-Trial Chamber I issued a finding of non-compliance by the Government of Libya with respect to the non-execution of two requests for cooperation transmitted by the Court.

In The Prosecutor v. Laurent Gbagbo case (situation in Côte d'Ivoire), on 12 June, Pre-Trial Chamber I confirmed four charges of crimes against humanity against Mr. Gbagbo and committed him for trial before a Trial Chamber. On 12 March and 11 July, the Pre-Trial Chamber issued decisions on the review of

Mr. Gbagbo's detention, and decided that he should remain in detention. The Chamber also ordered the Registry and the defence to submit reports on the progress of efforts to address the issue of Mr. Gbagbo's health, with a view to exploring the different options for conditional release.

In The Prosecutor v. Simone Gbagbo case (situation in Côte d'Ivoire), on 28 February, the Pre-Trial Chamber authorized Ms. Gbagbo's co-counsel, at his request, to withdraw from the case. On 11 December, Pre-Trial Chamber I rejected the Government of Côte d'Ivoire's challenge to the admissibility of the case and reminded Côte d'Ivoire of its obligation to surrender Ms. Gbagbo to the Court without delay.

In The Prosecutor v. Charles Blé Goudé case (situation in Côte d'Ivoire), Mr. Blé Goudé was surrendered to the Court on 22 March and had his first appearance before the Pre-Trial Chamber on 27 March. On 11 July, at the request of the Prosecutor, the Pre-Trial Chamber decided to postpone the start of the confirmation of charges hearing to 22 September. Charges against Mr. Blé Goudé were confirmed on 11 December.

Office of the Prosecutor

Investigations

In 2014, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to investigate situations in the CAR, Côte d'Ivoire, Darfur (Sudan), the DRC, Kenya, Libya, Mali and Uganda.

During the period 1 August 2013–31 July 2014, on the situation in the DRC, one mission was conducted to collect information necessary in support of trials and to address the arguments raised by the defence in the case against Germain Katanga. The Office also conducted 83 missions to eight countries for the purpose of collecting evidence, screening and interviewing witnesses and securing the continued cooperation of its partners, in relation to its continued investigation in the case against Bosco Ntaganda. The Office further conducted eight missions to four countries for its investigation related to crimes committed by the Forces Démocratiques pour la Libération du Rwanda in the Kivu provinces, particularly in relation to its case against Sylvestre Mudacumura.

On the situation in the CAR, the Office conducted a total of 19 missions to eight countries for the purposes of interviewing witnesses and collecting other evidence, as well as securing the cooperation of partners.

On the situation in Uganda, the Office conducted five missions to Uganda in order to meet with government officials and other partners in relation to the Lord's Resistance Army.

The Office conducted 20 missions in relation to investigations into the situation in Darfur; 73 missions to 14 countries in relation to investigations into the situation in Kenya; seven missions to four countries in relation to investigations into the situation in Libya.

The Office continued its investigation into the situation in Côte d'Ivoire and conducted 43 missions to five countries for the purpose of collecting evidence, screening and interviewing witnesses, and securing the continued cooperation of its partners.

On the situation in Mali, the Office conducted 24 missions to four countries for the purpose of collecting evidence, screening and interviewing witnesses and securing the continued cooperation of its partners.

The Prosecutor, Fatou Bensouda, briefed the Security Council on 13 May [S/PV.7173] and on 11 November [S/PV.7306] on the situation in Libya, and on 17 June [S/PV.7199] and on 12 December [S/PV.7337] on the situation in the Sudan and South Sudan. The combined effect of instability and lack of resources had undermined the Office's investigation in Libya. The Office was attempting to do its part in strengthening justice and accountability for international crimes in Libya and was coordinating with the Libyan authorities. The Prosecutor updated the Council on developments and progress in the investigation and prosecution of those alleged to be responsible for crimes committed in Darfur. Following the Office's investigations and submissions of evidence to ICC judges, and their independent assessment, the judges concluded that evidence provided to them established that certain individuals in the Sudan should be brought before ICC to answer charges, including allegations of rape.

Preliminary examination

The Office of the Prosecutor opened preliminary examinations in the CAR, Iraq and Ukraine; continued preliminary examinations in Afghanistan, Colombia, Georgia, Guinea, Honduras, Nigeria and the "Gaza Freedom Flotilla" incident; and concluded its preliminary examination in the Republic of Korea.

From 1 August 2013 to 30 June 2014, the Office received 495 communications relating to article 15 of the Rome Statute, of which 408 were outside the Court's jurisdiction; 30 warranted further analysis; 37 were linked to a situation already under analysis; and 20 were linked to an investigation or prosecution.

The Registry

The Registry provided judicial and administrative support to all organs of the Court and carried out its responsibilities concerning victims, witnesses, defence and outreach. The Registry sought to develop understanding and awareness of ICC and its activities by strengthening the Court's public information capacity for outreach services in countries where the Court was active. It provided security, administrative and logistical support to the Court's investigations.

The Registry transmitted 691 requests for visas and 223 requests for cooperation. It concluded two new relocation agreements in Africa, bringing the total number of agreements to 14, and it finalized an exchange of letters with Belgium on the provisional release of persons on 9 August.

In March, the Registrar held meetings in Kampala, Uganda, and Bunia, DRC, in order to strengthen cooperation in situation countries. The Registrar held meetings in Brasilia, Brazil, on 15 and 16 May, and participated with a Court judge and a representative of the Office of the Prosecutor in a seminar on cooperation for South American States held in Buenos Aires, Argentina, on 20 and 21 May. In June, the Prosecutor and the Registrar briefed the EU Council Working Group on Public International Law.

International cooperation

The Court increased efforts to promote mutual understanding and cooperation between the Court and governments, including two seminars on cooperation. The first one was held in Buenos Aires on 20 and 21 May and targeted South American States; the second was organized in Accra, Ghana, on 3 and 4 July and brought together senior representatives of Anglophone African States. The New York Liaison Office continued to promote cooperation between the Court and the United Nations.

On 24 June, the Office of the Prosecutor signed a second memorandum of understanding with the Integrity Vice Presidency of the World Bank Group, in order to reaffirm commitment to collaborate with one another on matters of mutual interest. The third African Union (AU)-ICC joint seminar was held on 7 and 8 July at the AU premises in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. The Court and the AU organized for the first time a joint round table meeting on 11 July. The discussions focused on cooperation, complementarity, diplomatic support and mainstreaming, as well as public information and outreach.

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/305 (see p. 1499), the Secretary-General, on 10 September, submitted a report [A/69/372] on expenses incurred and reimbursements received by the United Nations in connection with assistance provided to ICC, and, also on the same day, a report [A/69/324] on information relevant to the implementation of article 3 of the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and ICC.

From 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014, the United Nations provided facilities and services to ICC in the amount of $818,581. The amount covered costs incurred for staff who worked on matters pertaining to the Court and the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization satellite communications charges and maintenance, and costs incurred in connection with recruitment, personnel training, conference and related services, field security and library services.

In the field of institutional relations, addressed in chapter II of the Relationship Agreement, the United Nations provided to the Court a range of services and facilities, including reimbursable loans; satellite communications services; payroll costs for staff assigned to work exclusively on matters pertaining to the Court; access to the United Nations System Electronic Information Acquisitions Consortium; field security services; air and ground transportation services for Court personnel and equipment; provision of laissez-passers and certificates; and training services, including access to language proficiency examinations for Court staff members. In the field of cooperation and judicial assistance, the Organization provided extensive assistance to the Court in the form of access to the Organization's records and archives, and the making available of a number of UN personnel for interview by the prosecution in connection with certain situations before the Court and with certain situations under preliminary examination by the Prosecutor. In addition, the Organization provided input to the Prosecutor on her draft policy paper on sexual and gender-based crimes. A Court-wide memorandum of understanding for cooperation between the United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali and the Court had been concluded. During the reporting period, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council a decision of Pre-Trial Chamber II of 9 April related to the non-cooperation of the DRC regarding the arrest and surrender of Omar Hassan Ahmad al-Bashir.

International legal questions

In 2014, the International Law Commission continued to examine topics relating to the progressive development and codification of international law. It adopted a set of 31 draft articles on the expulsion of aliens, thus concluding its work on the topic. It also adopted a set of 21 draft articles on protection of persons in the event of disasters; provisionally adopted five draft conclusions on the identification of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in relation to the interpretation of treaties, and two draft articles on immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction; and took note of eight draft conclusions on identification of customary international law, provisionally adopted by its drafting committee. The Commission further adopted the final report on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) and concluded its consideration of the topic; included in its programme of work the topic of crimes against humanity, and reconstituted its study group on the most-favoured-nation clause, which began consideration of its final report. In December, the General Assembly welcomed the adoption of the draft articles on the expulsion of aliens and the conclusion of the Commission's work on the topic.

The General Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee in October established a working group with a view to finalizing the process on a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism—on the basis of the work that had been pursued by the Ad Hoc Committee established by the Assembly in resolution 51/210 to elaborate the draft convention. In June, the Secretary-General reported on progress made in providing technical assistance to States for implementing the international conventions and protocols related to terrorism. In July, he reported on measures taken by States, UN system entities and international organizations to implement the 1994 General Assembly Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism. In December, the Assembly condemned all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable, and called on Member States to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy in all its aspects. Also in December, the Assembly urged States to become parties to the international conventions and protocols against terrorism, and reiterated its request for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance its technical assistance to Member States for the ratification and implementation of those instruments.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law completed its work on a draft convention on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration and recommended its adoption by the General Assembly. It continued its work on arbitration and conciliation, online dispute resolution, electronic commerce, insolvency law, security interests and international trade law aimed at reducing the legal obstacles faced by micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises, and considered possible future work, in particular in the area of public-private partnerships. In December, the Assembly adopted the United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration and authorized its opening for signature on 17 March 2015.

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization considered, among other subjects, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security, with a view to strengthening the Organization, and the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country addressed several issues raised by permanent missions to the United Nations, including delays in issuing visas, privileges and immunities, and transportation and parking.

During 2014, the United Nations continued to provide rule-of-law assistance to Member States and ensure system-wide coordination and coherence in strengthening the rule of law and its linkages to peace and security, human rights and development. In response to the Declaration of the 2012 high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels, the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly proposals for enhancing those linkages.

Legal aspects of international political relations

International Law Commission

The 34-member International Law Commission (ILC) held its sixty-sixth session in Geneva in two parts (5 May–6 June and 7 July–8 August) [A/69/10]. During the second part, the International Law Seminar held its fiftieth session, which was attended by 24 young academics and diplomats from all regions of the world. The participants attended ILC meetings, specially arranged lectures, and participated in working groups on specific topics. On 22 July, the Commission held a special meeting to commemorate the Seminar's fiftieth anniversary, attended by the President of the International Court of Justice, Judge Peter Tomka, and having as its theme "International Law as a Profession". Since its inception in 1965, 1,139 participants representing 171 nationalities had taken part in the Seminar, and 699 participants had received fellowships.

ILC carried out its work with the assistance of various working groups and a drafting committee. The Commission adopted on second reading the entire set of 31 draft articles on the expulsion of aliens (see p. 1507), together with commentaries thereto, and recommended that the General Assembly take note of the draft articles, encourage their widest possible dissemination and consider elaborating a convention on their basis. On the topic of protection of persons in the event of disasters (ibid.), the Commission adopted on first reading a set of 21 draft articles, together with commentaries thereto, and transmitted them to Governments for comments and observations. On the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) (see p. 1508), ILC reconstituted its Working Group to continue the evaluation of work on the topic, particularly considering the Judgment by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) of 20 July 2012 in the case Belgium v. Senegal [YUN 2012, p. 1260]; it also adopted the final report and concluded its consideration of the topic. Concerning the topic of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in relation to the interpretation of treaties (see p. 1508), the Commission provisionally adopted five draft conclusions, together with commentaries thereto, relating to the identification of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice, their possible effects in interpretation, their weight as a means of interpretation, agreement of the parties regarding the interpretation of a treaty, and decisions adopted within the framework of a Conference of States Parties. On the topic of immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction (see p. 1509), ILC provisionally adopted two draft articles, together with commentaries thereto, on the definition of State official and on the persons enjoying immunity ratione materiae. It also took note of eight draft conclusions provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee on the topic of identification of customary international law (ibid.).

The Commission considered the first report of its Special Rapporteur on protection of the atmosphere (see p. 1508), which addressed the topic's scope and basic concepts and proposed guidelines defining the term "atmosphere" and its legal status. It also examined a preliminary report of its Special Rapporteur on protection of the environment in relation to armed conflicts (see p. 1510), and held an exchange on the scope and methodology, use of terms, environmental principles, and human and indigenous rights. The Commission considered the second report by its Special Rapporteur on provisional application of treaties (ibid.), which provided an analysis of the legal effects of such application, and reached broad agreement on the basic premise underlying the topic. ILC also reconstituted the Study Group on the most-favoured-nation (MFN) clause (see p. 1511), which began consideration of its final report on various factors that seemed to influence investment tribunals in interpreting MFN clauses.

The Commission decided to include in its programme of work the topic of crimes against humanity (see p. 1512) and appoint a Special Rapporteur. Among its other decisions and conclusions, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/116 [YUN 2013, p. 1349], the Commission reiterated its commitment to the rule of law in all its activities and its contribution to the rule of law through consideration of such topics as expulsion of aliens, protection of persons in the event of disasters, the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) and immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction.

The Planning Group established by ILC held three meetings and reconstituted the Working Group on the Long-term Programme of Work to consider possible topics for inclusion in the work programme. The Commission endorsed the inclusion of the topic "Jus cogens" in its long-term programme of work. It also recommended that the Commission request the Secretariat to prepare, by the end of the present quinquennium, a list of potential topics for the Commission's consideration ("survey"), based on the review of the 1996 list and accompanied by brief explanatory notes. ILC decided that its sixty-seventh session would be held in Geneva from 4 May to 5 June and from 6 July to 7 August 2015.

Topical summary report. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 68/112 [YUN 2013, p. 1309], the Secretariat prepared a topical summary [A/CN.4/666] of the debate held on the report of the Commission at the Assembly's sixty-eighth (2013) session.

Assistance to special rapporteurs. At its sixty-sixth session, the Commission reiterated its views expressed in its previous reports that General Assembly resolution 56/272 of 27 March 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1402] affected the research work of ILC special rapporteurs. In December, the Assembly, in its resolution 69/118 (see p. 1512), requested the Secretary-General to continue efforts to identify support options for the work of special rapporteurs, additional to those provided under its 2002 resolution.

Election of member. On 19 February [A/68/778], Ukraine informed the General Assembly President that it was relinquishing its seat on the Commission in favour of Poland on the last day prior to the beginning of the forty-seventh session of the Commission, in July. On 26 March, by decision 68/417, the Assembly elected Poland as a member of ILC for the remaining term of office of Ukraine, beginning on the first day of the forty-seventh session of the Commission, in July.

Expulsion of aliens

ILC [A/69/10] had before it the ninth report of Special Rapporteur Maurice Kamto (Cameroon) on the expulsion of aliens [A/CN.4/670], containing his proposals for reformulating the draft articles adopted by ILC on first reading in 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1294], in the light of the comments and observations received from Governments [A/CN.4/669 & Add.1].

On 6 June, the Commission considered the report of the Drafting Committee and adopted on second reading the set of 31 draft articles on the expulsion of aliens, concerning general provisions, including scope (Article 1), use of terms (Article 2), right of expulsion (Article 3), requirement for conformity with law (Article 4) and grounds for expulsion (Article 5); cases of prohibited expulsion, including rules relating to the expulsion of refugees (Article 6), rules relating to the expulsion of stateless persons (Article 7), deprivation of nationality for the purpose of expulsion (Article 8), prohibition of collective expulsion (Article 9), prohibition of disguised expulsion (Article 10), prohibition of expulsion for the purpose of confiscation of assets (Article 11) and prohibition of resort to expulsion in order to circumvent an ongoing extradition procedure (Article 12); protection of the rights of aliens subject to expulsion, including obligation to respect the human dignity and human rights of aliens subject to expulsion (Article 13), prohibition of discrimination (Article 14), vulnerable persons (Article 15), obligation to protect the right to life of an alien subject to expulsion (Article 16), prohibition of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (Article 17), obligation to respect the right to family life (Article 18), detention of an alien for the purpose of expulsion (Article 19), protection of the property of an alien subject to expulsion (Article 20), departure to the State of destination (Article 21), State of destination of aliens subject to expulsion (Article 22), obligation not to expel an alien to a State where his or her life would be threatened (Article 23), obligation not to expel an alien to a State where he or she may be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (Article 24) and protection in a transit State of the human rights of an alien subject to expulsion (Article 25); specific procedural rules, including procedural rights of aliens subject to expulsion (Article 26), suspensive effect of an appeal against an expulsion decision (Article 27) and international procedures for individual recourse (Article 28); and legal consequences of expulsion, including readmission to the expelling State (Article 29), responsibility of States in cases of unlawful expulsion (Article 30) and diplomatic protection (Article 31).

On 5 August, ILC adopted the commentaries to the draft articles and recommended to the General Assembly that it take note of the draft articles in a resolution, annex them to the resolution and encourage their widest possible dissemination; and that it consider elaborating a convention based on the draft articles.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/69/498], adopted resolution 69/119 without vote [agenda item 78].

Expulsion of aliens

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter IV of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-sixth session, which contains the draft articles on the expulsion of aliens,

Noting that the International Law Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly (a) to take note of the draft articles on the expulsion of aliens in a resolution, to annex the articles to the resolution, and to encourage their widest possible dissemination; and (b) to consider, at a later stage, the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of the expulsion of aliens is of major importance in the relations of States,

Taking note of the comments of Governments and the discussion in the Sixth Committee at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly on the subject,

1. Welcomes the conclusion of the work of the International Law Commission on the expulsion of aliens and its adoption of the draft articles and a detailed commentary on the subject;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its continuing contribution to the codification and progressive development of international law;

3. Takes note of the recommendation of the International Law Commission contained in paragraph 42 of its report on the work of its sixty-sixth session, and decides that the consideration of this recommendation shall be continued at the seventy-second session of the General Assembly;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-second session an item entitled "Expulsion of aliens".

Protection of persons in the event of disasters

The Commission [A/69/10] considered the seventh report by Special Rapporteur Eduardo Valencia-Ospina (Colombia) on the protection of persons in the event of disasters [A/CN.4/668 & Corr.1 & Add.1], proposing five draft articles dealing with the protection of relief personnel and their equipment and goods, as well as relationship with special rules of international law, matters related to disaster situations not regulated by the present draft articles, relationship to the UN Charter, and use of terms, which ILC referred to its Drafting Committee.

On 30 May, ILC considered the report of the Drafting Committee and adopted on first reading a set of 21 draft articles on the protection of persons in the event of disasters, concerning the scope (Article 1), purpose (Article 2), definition of disaster (Article 3), use of terms (Article 4), human dignity (Article 5), human rights (Article 6), humanitarian principles (Article 7), duty to cooperate (Article 8), forms of cooperation (Article 9), cooperation for disaster risk reduction (Article 10), duty to reduce the risk of disasters (Article 11), role of the affected State (Article 12), duty of the affected State to seek external assistance (Article 13), consent of the affected State to external assistance (Article 14), conditions on the provision of external assistance (Article 15), offers of external assistance (Article 16), facilitation of external assistance (Article 17), protection of relief personnel, equipment and goods (Article 18), termination of external assistance (Article 19), relationship to special or other rules of international law (Article 20) and relationship to international humanitarian law (Article 21).

On 5 and 6 August, the Commission adopted the commentaries to the draft articles and decided to transmit them, through the Secretary-General, to Governments for comments and observations, for submission by 1 January 2016.

Obligation to extradite or prosecute

The Commission [A/69/10] reconstituted its Working Group on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare), which continued the evaluation of work on the topic, particularly considering the ICJ Judgment of 20 July 2012 in the case concerning Questions relating to the Obligation to Prosecute or Extradite (Belgium v. Senegal) [YUN 2012, p. 1260] and comments made in the Assembly's Sixth Committee at the sixty-eighth (2013) session.

The Working Group considered issues raised in the Sixth Committee that were partially or not covered by its 2013 report [YUN 2013, p. 1308], such as gaps in the existing conventional regime; the transfer of a suspect to an international or special court or tribunal as a potential third alternative to extradition or prosecution; the relationship between the obligation to extradite or prosecute and erga omnes obligations or jus cogens norms; the customary international law status of the obligation to extradite or prosecute; and other matters of continued relevance in the general framework for consideration of the topic which it established in 2009.

On 7 July, ILC took note of the report of the Working Group. On 7 August, the Commission adopted its final report on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) and decided to conclude its consideration of the topic. In the final report, the Commission summarized and highlighted particular aspects of its work, including obligation to fight impunity in accordance with the rule of law; typology of provisions in multilateral instruments; implementation of the obligation to extradite or prosecute; gaps in the existing conventional regime and the "third alternative"; the priority between the obligation to prosecute and the obligation to extradite, and the scope of the obligation to prosecute; the relationship of the obligation to extradite or prosecute with erga omnes obligations or jus cogens norms; and the customary international law status of the obligation to extradite or prosecute.

Subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in relation to the interpretation of treaties

ILC [A/69/10] had before it the second report [A/CN.4/671] of Special Rapporteur Georg Nolte (Germany) on subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in relation to the interpretation of treaties.

On 5 June, the Commission provisionally adopted five draft conclusions contained in the report, covering the identification of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice (Conclusion 6), possible effects of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in interpretation (Conclusion 7), weight of subsequent agreements and subsequent practice as a means of interpretation (Conclusion 8), agreement of the parties regarding the interpretation of a treaty (Conclusion 9) and decisions adopted within the framework of a Conference of States Parties (Conclusion 10). On 6 August, the Commission adopted the commentaries to the draft conclusions.

Protection of the atmosphere

The Commission [A/69/10] considered the first report [A/CN.4/667] by Special Rapporteur Shinya Murase (Japan) on the protection of the atmosphere. The report focused on the general scope and the relevant basic concepts and presented three draft guidelines concerning the definition of the term "atmosphere", the scope of the draft guidelines and the legal status of the atmosphere.

The Special Rapporteur stressed that the report was prepared in full compliance with the Commission's 2013 understanding [YUN 2013, p. 1308] that his work would not interfere with relevant political negotiations or deal with specific polluting substances. He further noted that there was abundant evidence of State practice, including treaties, judicial precedents and other normative documents, that would enable the Commission to address the topic essentially as a legal question rather than a political one. He highlighted that the contemporary challenges to the atmosphere concerned tropospheric transboundary air pollution, stratospheric ozone depletion and climate change, and that there was no treaty regime covering all areas of atmospheric problems or treating the atmosphere as a global single unit. The draft guidelines therefore proposed the definition of “atmosphere” in both its substantive aspect as a layer of gases and its functional aspect as a medium within which the transport and dispersion of airborne substances occurs; the legal status of the atmosphere as a natural resource whose protection was a common concern of humankind, distinguishing it from “airspace”; and the scope of the draft guidelines addressing anthropogenic degradation caused by anthropogenic activities that introduced deleterious substances or energy into the atmosphere and altered its composition.

Commission members acknowledged that the protection of the atmosphere was extremely important for humankind, echoing the concerns posed by air pollution, ozone depletion and climate change, but noted the intractable difficulties pertaining to the topic and appearing in discussions among States. Some members called for a more cautious approach and expressed concern that the 2013 understanding was not fully considered by the Special Rapporteur, and that focusing on air pollution, ozone depletion and climate change would interfere with political negotiations on those subjects. According to another view, the application of the 2013 understanding required a flexible approach as practically all of the treaty practice on which the report was based could be subsumed among the subjects excluded under the understanding; other members stated that there was enough flexibility within the 2013 understanding for the Special Rapporteur to pursue a modest goal of identifying existing general principles of international environmental law and their applicability to the protection of the atmosphere. Discussions also focused on methodological approaches, use of terms, the scope of the guidelines and the legal status of the atmosphere, with some members questioning the proposed definitions and the approach focusing on the atmosphere per se as a single unit instead of addressing the “rights and obligations” of State and non-State actors whose activities affected the atmosphere and could be regulated.

Acknowledging the wide-ranging opinions on the 2013 understanding, the Special Rapporteur indicated his intention to reformulate parts of his report and organize in 2015 a briefing session with the scientific community. At the Special Rapporteur’s request, the referral of the draft guidelines to the Drafting Committee was deferred until 2015.

Immunity of State officials

The Commission [A/69/10] had before it the third report [A/CN.4/673] on the immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction by Special Rapporteur Concepción Escobar Hernández (Spain), addressing the normative elements of immunity ratione materiae, the general concept of a “State official” and the substantive criteria that could be used to identify such persons, as well as the choice of the most suitable term for designating persons who enjoyed immunity. The Special Rapporteur proposed two draft articles relating to the definition of State official and the subjective scope of immunity ratione materiae.

Following a debate in plenary, the Commission, on 11 July, referred the two draft articles to the Drafting Committee. On 25 July, the Commission received the report of the Drafting Committee and provisionally adopted draft article 2 (e) on the definition of State official and draft article 5 on the persons enjoying immunity ratione materiae. On 6 and 7 August, the Commission adopted the commentaries to the draft articles.

Identification of customary international law

The Commission [A/69/10] considered the second report on identification of customary international law [A/CN.4/672] by Special Rapporteur Michael Wood (United Kingdom), which provided an analysis of the scope and outcome of the topic, the basic approach, the two constituent elements of rules of customary international law—namely “a general practice” and “accepted as law”—and proposed eleven draft conclusions concerning the scope, use of terms, basic approach, assessment of evidence, role of practice, attribution of conduct, forms of practice, weighing evidence of practice, the principle that practice must be general and consistent, role of acceptance as law and evidence of acceptance as law.

The Special Rapporteur recalled that the objective of the topic was not to determine the substance of the rules of customary international law but rather to address the methodological question of the identification of the existence and content of rules of customary international law. The proposed two-element approach to the identification of rules of customary international law was followed in the practice of States and in the decisions of international courts and tribunals, including ICJ; however, there could be differences in the application of the approach in different fields or with respect to different types of rules. The Special Rapporteur drew attention to six points relating to “manifestations of practice”: first, practice could consist of verbal acts as well as physical acts; second, the usefulness of an indicative list of the forms of practice; third, many types of general practice could also serve as evidence of acceptance as law; fourth, practice embodied in treaties and resolutions of international organizations constituted two important forms of practice; fifth, the practical importance of inaction, or silence; sixth, the importance of the practice of certain international organizations. As for the evidence of acceptance of law, according to the Special Rapporteur, such acceptance could be indicated by or inferred from practice. He also indicated that the issues of “special” or “regional” customary international law, including “bilateral custom”, as well the questions of the “persistent objector”, resolutions of international organizations and the relationship between customary international law and treaties would be covered in his third report in 2015.

Members welcomed the two-element approach and expressed broad support for the overall direction and approach of the Special Rapporteur. It was agreed that the outcome of the work should be a practical guide for practitioners who were not specialists in international law, in the form of comprehensive draft conclusions that should be read together with the commentaries thereto. There was also general agreement that the draft conclusions should not be unduly prescriptive and should reflect the flexibility of customary international law. The Special Rapporteur emphasized the importance of submissions by States on their practice in relation to customary international law, as well as information on national digests and related publications. He stressed that the draft conclusions referred primarily to State practice, although he was not dismissing the practice of some international organizations in certain fields such as in relation to treaties, privileges and immunities. In light of the discussion over the expression “accepted as law”, the Special Rapporteur suggested supplementing it by the common term “opinio juris”; he also recognized the need to further address the issue of “double-counting” the same act as both evidence of practice and opinio juris, and to study questions relating to the lawfulness of a practice, and the applicability in the present context of rules on attribution adopted for the purpose of States responsibility.

Following debate, the Commission, on 18 July, referred the eleven draft conclusions to the Drafting Committee. On 7 August, the Commission took note of the interim report of the Chairman of the Drafting Committee, including eight draft conclusions provisionally adopted by the Committee.

Protection of the environment in relation to armed conflict

ILC [A/69/10] had before it the preliminary report [A/CN.4/674 & Corr.1] of Special Rapporteur Marie G. Jacobsson (Sweden) on the protection of the environment in relation to armed conflicts, which provided an introductory overview of phase I of the topic, namely the environmental rules and principles applicable to a potential armed conflict (“peacetime obligations”), without addressing measures to be taken during an armed conflict or post-conflict (phases II and III, respectively). The report also summarized the results of informal consultations and opinions expressed in the Assembly’s Sixth Committee, practice of States and international organizations, scope and methodology, use of terms, environmental principles and issues relating to human and indigenous rights.

The debate in the plenary addressed, among other issues, scope and methodology, use of terms, environmental principles, and human and indigenous rights. There was broad recognition of the importance of the topic and its overall purpose, and general agreement that the work should focus on clarifying the rules and principles of international environmental law applicable in relation to armed conflicts. Some members agreed with the Special Rapporteur that the Commission should not modify the law of armed conflict; others were of the view that, considering the minimal treatment of the environment in the law of armed conflict, further elaboration of environmental obligations in armed conflict might be warranted. It was suggested that the legal entity to be protected under the topic was the environment itself, and that the work on the topic should attempt to systematize the norms applicable in all three phases.

Most members supported the temporal, three-phase approach proposed by the Special Rapporteur, as opposed to a thematic one. Regarding the proposed limitations of the scope, some members were against excluding general issues concerning weapons, which were also addressed under the law of armed conflict, and the possibility of a without prejudice clause was welcomed. There was broad agreement to consider non-international conflicts under the topic, with some members proposing to include in the definition of armed conflict conflicts between organized armed groups or between such groups within a State; according to others, limiting conflicts to groups that showed a minimum level of organization would be too restrictive. There was a divergence of views on addressing the issue of refugees and internally displaced persons under the topic’s human rights dimension, as well as on the treatment of cultural heritage, in particular the landscape, given the existing gap in the protection of cultural property and heritage in relation to armed conflict. There were also divergent views on the advisability of according separate treatment to indigenous rights. It was noted that further examination of the linkages between environmental principles, human rights law and armed conflict was necessary, based on additional information on the practice of States as well as international and regional organizations.

Provisional application of treaties

The Commission [A/69/10] considered the second report [A/CN.4/675] on the provisional application of treaties by Special Rapporteur Juan Manuel Gómez-

Robledo (Mexico), which provided an analysis of the legal effects of the provisional application of treaties, including rights and obligations, source of obligations, termination of obligations and legal consequences of the breach of a treaty applied provisionally.

The Special Rapporteur pointed out that the question of the legal effects of the provisional application of treaties was central to the Commission's approach to the topic and that analysis of those effects invariably took place in the light of domestic practice of States. He observed that the source of the legal obligations in question could be traced either to a clause in the treaty itself or arose from a separate agreement adopted in parallel to the main treaty, and identified four ways in which article 25, paragraph 1, of the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 730] could be manifested: (1) when a treaty established that it would apply provisionally from the moment of its adoption; (2) when the treaty established that it would be applied provisionally by the signatory States; (3) when the treaty left open the possibility for each State to decide whether or not it wished to provisionally apply the treaty from the moment of the treaty's adoption; and (4) when the treaty was silent on its provisional application and States applied article 25, paragraph 1. The obligations under the provisional application of treaties could therefore take a contractual form or the form of one or more unilateral acts, while the rights established by the provisional application also depended on how such application had been enshrined in the treaty or agreed to. The Special Rapporteur further maintained that the regime that applied to the termination of treaties applied mutatis mutandis to the provisional application of treaties, and reiterated the applicability of the existing regime of the responsibility of States, as provided for in the 2001 articles on the responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts [YUN 2001, p. 1218], to the breach of a treaty being applied provisionally.

The debate revealed broad agreement that the basic premise underlying the topic was that, subject to the specificities of the treaty in question, the rights and obligations of a State which had decided to provisionally apply the treaty, or parts thereof, were the same as if the treaty were in force for that State. Additional observations were made concerning the impact of the provisional application on the content of a treaty, provisional application by States or international organizations which had not participated in the negotiation of the treaty, and the legal regime from the provisional application not being separate from that of the treaty. It was observed that a State's resort to provisional application was not only a matter of international law but was also to be determined in the light of the applicable domestic law, and an analysis of domestic provisions relating to the provisional application of treaties was therefore necessary for a proper consideration of the topic. A difference of opinion was expressed as to the applicability of the rules on the termination of treaties or the rules on the unilateral acts of States to the termination of provisional application, as well as concerning the assertion that such termination could not be undertaken arbitrarily. A view was also expressed that the question of the applicability of the rules on responsibility for internationally wrongful acts required further reflection.

Suggestions for further consideration included examining whether provisional application always extended to the entire treaty and whether the rules of customary international law on the provisional application of treaties were the same as those in the Vienna Convention; analysing further the relationship between the provisional application of treaties and their entry into force, as well as the modalities for the termination of provisional application; studying the applicability of the regime on the reservations to treaties; and considering the difference in consequences arising from the provisional application of bilateral as opposed to multilateral treaties. Support was also expressed for the Special Rapporteur's intention to deal with the provisional application of treaties by international organizations and to propose draft guidelines or conclusions, although the possibility of developing draft articles, as the Commission had done in its work on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, was not to be ruled out.

On 8 August, ILC requested from the Secretariat a memorandum on the Commission's previous work on that subject in the travaux préparatoires of the relevant provisions of the 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006].

Most-favoured-nation clause

The Commission reconstituted the Study Group on the Most-Favoured-Nation (MFN) clause [A/69/10], which continued examining the various factors that seemed to influence investment tribunals in interpreting MFN clauses, and began consideration of its draft final report, to be presented for consideration at the sixty-seventh session of the Commission in 2015.

The Study Group undertook a substantive and technical review of the draft final report comprised of three parts focusing on the background; the contemporary relevance of and issues concerning MFN clauses including the different approaches in the case-law to the interpretation of MFN provisions in investment agreements; and policy considerations in investment relating to the interpretation of investment agreements, implications of investment dispute settlement arbitration as "mixed arbitration", the contemporary relevance of the 1978 draft articles on the MFN clauses [YUN 1978, pp. 945 & 948] to the interpretation of MFN provisions and the interpretation of MFN clauses.

The Group underlined the relevance of the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 730], as a point of departure, in the interpretation of investment treaties. The Group placed emphasis on analyzing the case-law and drawing attention to the issues that had arisen and trends in the practice.

On 25 July, the Commission took note of the oral report on the work of the Study Group.

Crimes against humanity

Further to its 2013 decision on its long-term programme of work [YUN 2013, p. 1305], the Commission [A/69/10], on 18 July 2014, included the topic of crimes against humanity in its work programme and appointed Sean D. Murphy (United States) as Special Rapporteur.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/498], adopted resolution 69/118 without vote [agenda item 78].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-sixth session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-sixth session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the progressive development and codification of international law as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to enhance further their contribution to the progressive development and codification of international law,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Recalling also the role of Member States in submitting proposals for new topics for the consideration of the International Law Commission, and noting in this regard the recommendation of the Commission that such proposals be accompanied by a statement of reasons,

Reaffirming the importance for the successful work of the International Law Commission of the information provided by Member States concerning their views and practice,

Recognizing the importance of the work of the special rapporteurs of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, which commemorated its fiftieth anniversary in 2014, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Acknowledging the importance of facilitating the timely publication of the Yearbook of the International Law Commission and of eliminating the backlog,

Stressing the usefulness of focusing and structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report and for discussions on specific topics,

Wishing to enhance further, in the context of the revitalization of the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two bodies,

Welcoming initiatives to hold interactive debates, panel discussions and question time in the Sixth Committee, as envisaged in General Assembly resolution 58/316 of 1 July 2004 on further measures for the revitalization of the work of the Assembly,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-sixth session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at its sixty-sixth session, and notes in particular:

(a) The completion of the second reading of the draft articles on the expulsion of aliens;

(b) The completion of the first reading of the draft articles on the protection of persons in the event of disasters;

(c) The completion of the work on the topic "The obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare)" by the adoption of the final report on the topic;

3. Takes note of the final report on the topic "The obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare)" contained in paragraph 65 of the report of the International Law Commission, and encourages its widest possible dissemination;

4. Recommends that the International Law Commission continue its work on the topics in its current programme, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments, whether submitted in writing or expressed orally in debates in the Sixth Committee;

5. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their views by 31 January 2015 on the various aspects of the topics on the agenda of the Commission, in particular on all the specific issues identified in chapter III of its report, regarding:

(a) Subsequent agreements and subsequent practice in relation to the interpretation of treaties;

(b) Protection of the atmosphere;

(c) Immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction;

(d) Identification of customary international law;

(e) Protection of the environment in relation to armed conflicts;

(f) Provisional application of treaties;

(g) Crimes against humanity;

6. Also draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their comments and observations by 1 January 2016

on the draft articles on the topic "Protection of persons in the event of disasters", adopted on first reading by the Commission at its sixty-sixth session;

7. Takes note of the decision of the International Law Commission to include the topic "Crimes against humanity" in its programme of work, and encourages the Commission to continue the examination of the topics that are in its long-term programme of work;

8. Also takes note of paragraphs 267 to 272 of the report of the International Law Commission, and notes in particular the inclusion of the topic "Jus cogens" in the long-term programme of work of the Commission and the request of the Commission that the Secretariat review the list of possible future topics established in 1996 and prepare for its consideration a list of potential topics accompanied by brief explanatory notes, by the end of the present quinquennium;

9. Further takes note of paragraph 281 of the report of the International Law Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to identify concrete options for support for the work of special rapporteurs, additional to those provided under General Assembly resolution 56/272 of 27 March 2002;

10. Welcomes the efforts of the International Law Commission to improve its methods of work, and encourages the Commission to continue this practice;

11. Recalls that the seat of the International Law Commission is at the United Nations Office at Geneva;

12. Notes that the International Law Commission is considering the possibility of holding part of its future sessions in New York, underlines, to that purpose, the importance of the Commission taking into account estimated costs and relevant administrative, organizational and other factors, and calls upon the Commission to deliberate thoroughly the feasibility of holding part of its sixty-eighth session in New York;

13. Decides, without prejudice to the output of those deliberations, to revert to the consideration of the recommendation contained in paragraph 388 of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-third session during the seventieth session of the General Assembly;

14. Invites the International Law Commission to continue to take measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity and to consider making proposals to Member States to that end;

15. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue to take cost-saving measures at its future sessions, without prejudice to the efficiency and effectiveness of its work;

16. Takes note of paragraph 291 of the report of the International Law Commission, and decides that the next session of the Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva from 4 May to 5 June and from 6 July to 7 August 2015;

17. Stresses the desirability of further enhancing the dialogue between the International Law Commission and the Sixth Committee at the seventieth session of the General Assembly, and in this context encourages, inter alia, the continued practice of informal consultations in the form of discussions between the members of the Sixth Committee and the members of the Commission attending the seventieth session of the Assembly;

18. Encourages delegations, during the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, to continue to adhere as far as possible to the structured work programme agreed to by the Sixth Committee and to consider presenting concise and focused statements;

19. Encourages Member States to consider being represented at the level of legal adviser during the first week in which the report of the International Law Commission is discussed in the Sixth Committee (International Law Week) to enable high-level discussions on issues of international law;

20. Requests the International Law Commission to continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, any specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest in providing effective guidance for the Commission in its further work;

21. Takes note of paragraphs 293 to 297 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to cooperation and interaction with other bodies, and encourages the Commission to continue the implementation of articles 16 (e), 25 and 26 of its statute in order to further strengthen cooperation between the Commission and other bodies concerned with international law, having in mind the usefulness of such cooperation;

22. Notes that consulting with national organizations and individual experts concerned with international law may assist Governments in considering whether to make comments and observations on drafts submitted by the International Law Commission and in formulating their comments and observations;

23. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the indispensable role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat in providing assistance to the International Law Commission, including in the preparation of memorandums and studies on topics on the agenda of the Commission;

24. Also reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the documentation and summary records of the International Law Commission;

25. Welcomes the institutionalization of the practice of the Secretariat to include the provisional summary records on the website relating to the work of the International Law Commission;

26. Takes note of paragraph 282 of the report of the International Law Commission, underlines the importance of the publications of the Codification Division to the work of the Commission, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General continue to publish the Work of the International Law Commission in all six official languages at the beginning of each quinquennium, the Reports of International Arbitral Awards in English or French and the Summaries of the Judgments, Advisory Opinions and Orders of the International Court of Justice in all six official languages every five years;

27. Stresses the need to expedite the preparation of the summary records of the International Law Commission, and welcomes the continuation of the experimental measures taken to streamline the processing of summary records during the sixty-fifth session of the Commission, which have led to a more rational use of resources, and expresses its satisfaction that the summary records of the Commission, constituting travaux préparatoires in the progressive development and codification of international law, will not be subject to arbitrary length restrictions;

28. Takes note of paragraph 286 of the report of the International Law Commission, stresses the unique value of the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure its timely publication in all official languages;

29. Also takes note of paragraph 286 of the report of the International Law Commission, expresses its appreciation to Governments that have made voluntary contributions to the trust fund on the backlog relating to the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, and encourages further contributions to the trust fund;

30. Further takes note of paragraph 288 of the report of the International Law Commission, expresses its satisfaction with the remarkable progress achieved in the past few years in reducing the backlog of the Yearbook of the International Law Commission in all six languages, and welcomes the efforts made by the Division of Conference Management of the United Nations Office at Geneva, especially its Editing Section, in effectively implementing relevant resolutions of the General Assembly calling for the reduction of the backlog;

31. Takes note of paragraph 288 of the report of the International Law Commission, encourages the Division of Conference Management to provide continuous necessary support to the Editing Section in advancing the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, and requests that updates on progress made in this respect be provided to the Commission on a regular basis;

32. Welcomes the continuous efforts of the Codification Division to maintain and improve the website relating to the work of the International Law Commission, expresses its satisfaction to the Division for the successful completion of the digitization and posting on the website of the entire collection of the documents of the Commission in Spanish, and encourages the Division to continue to pursue its efforts with respect to documents in the remaining official languages;

33. Expresses the hope that the International Law Seminar will continue to be held in connection with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants representing the principal legal systems of the world, including in particular those from developing countries, will be given the opportunity to attend the Seminar, as well as delegates to the Sixth Committee, and appeals to States to continue to make urgently needed voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar;

34. Takes note with appreciation of paragraph 312 of the report of the International Law Commission and of the organization by the Commission of a meeting in July 2014 to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the International Law Seminar;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the International Law Seminar with adequate services, including interpretation, as required, and encourages him to continue to consider ways to improve the structure and content of the Seminar;

36. Underlines the importance of the records and topical summary of the debate in the Sixth Committee for the deliberations of the International Law Commission, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to forward to the Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate, following established practice;

37. Requests the Secretariat to circulate to States, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the International Law Commission, chapter II of its report containing a summary of the work of that session, chapter III containing the specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission and the draft articles adopted on either first or second reading by the Commission;

38. Also requests the Secretariat to make the complete report of the International Law Commission available as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the Commission for the consideration of Member States with due anticipation and no later than the prescribed time limit for reports in the General Assembly;

39. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue to consider ways in which specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission could be framed so as to help Governments to have a better appreciation of the issues on which responses are required;

40. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the seventieth session of the General Assembly commence on 2 November 2015.

International State relations and international law

Principle of universal jurisdiction

In response to General Assembly resolution 68/117 [YUN 2013, p. 1311], the Secretary-General issued a July report [A/69/174] on the scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction, based on information and observations received from seven Member States and four observers.

Working Group. Pursuant to resolution 68/117, the Sixth Committee, on 7 October, established a working group to discuss the scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction [A/69/503]. The Working Group held three meetings (16, 17 and 23 October). The Chair of the Working Group delivered an oral report to the Sixth Committee on 7 November [A/C.6/69/SR.28].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/503], adopted resolution 69/124 without vote [agenda item 83].

The scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, to international law and to an international order based on the rule of law, which is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States,

Recalling its resolutions 64/117 of 16 December 2009, 65/33 of 6 December 2010, 66/103 of 9 December 2011, 67/98 of 14 December 2012 and 68/117 of 16 December 2013,

Taking into account the comments and observations of Governments and observers and the discussions held in the Sixth Committee at the sixty-fourth to sixty-ninth sessions of the General Assembly on the scope and application of universal jurisdiction,

Recognizing the diversity of views expressed by States and the need for further consideration towards a better understanding of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction,

Reiterating its commitment to fighting impunity, and noting the views expressed by States that the legitimacy and credibility of the use of universal jurisdiction are best ensured by its responsible and judicious application consistent with international law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General prepared on the basis of comments and observations of Governments and relevant observers;

2. Decides that the Sixth Committee shall continue its consideration of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction, without prejudice to the consideration of this topic and related issues in other forums of the United Nations, and for this purpose decides to establish, at its seventieth session, a working group of the Sixth Committee to continue to undertake a thorough discussion of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction;

3. Invites Member States and relevant observers, as appropriate, to submit, before 30 April 2015, information and observations on the scope and application of universal jurisdiction, including, where appropriate, information on the relevant applicable international treaties and their national legal rules and judicial practice, and requests the Secretary-General to prepare and submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session a report based on such information and observations;

4. Decides that the working group shall be open to all Member States and that relevant observers to the General Assembly will be invited to participate in the work of the working group;

5. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled “The scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction”.

Effects of armed conflicts on treaties

By its resolution 66/99 [YUN 2011, p. 1276], the General Assembly took note of the articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, adopted by the International Law Commission (ILC) in 2011 [ibid.], and included the item in the provisional agenda of its sixty-ninth (2014) session. The Assembly’s Sixth Committee discussed the item on 23 October [A/C.6/69/SR.18] and on 5 and 7 November 2014 [A/C.6/69/SR.27 & 28].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/504], adopted resolution 69/125 without vote [agenda item 84].

Effects of armed conflicts on treaties

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 66/99 of 9 December 2011, in which it took note of and commended to the attention of Governments the articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties contained in the annex to that resolution,

Recalling also that the International Law Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly that it take note of the draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties in a resolution and annex them to that resolution, and that it consider, at a later stage, the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of the effects of armed conflicts on treaties is of major importance in the relations of States,

Taking note of the comments of Governments and the discussion in the Sixth Committee at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly on this topic,

1. Commends once again the articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties to the attention of Governments without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to invite Governments to submit written comments on any future action regarding the articles;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-second session the item entitled “Effects of armed conflicts on treaties”, with a view to examining, inter alia, the question of the form that might be given to the articles.

Responsibility of international organizations

By its resolution 66/100 [YUN 2011, p. 1268], the General Assembly took note of the articles on responsibility of international organizations, adopted by the ILC in 2011 [ibid.], and included the item on responsibility of international organizations in the provisional agenda of its sixty-ninth (2014) session. The Assembly’s Sixth Committee discussed the item on 23 October 2014 [A/C.6/69/SR.18].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/505], adopted resolution 69/126 without vote [agenda item 85].

Responsibility of international organizations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 66/100 of 9 December 2011, in which it took note of the articles on the responsibility of international organizations, contained in the annex to that resolution, and commended them to the attention of Governments and international organizations,

Recalling also that the International Law Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly that it take note of the draft articles on the responsibility of international organizations in a resolution and annex them to that resolution, and that it consider, at a later stage, the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of responsibility of international organizations is of major importance in the relations of States and international organizations,

Taking note of the comments of Governments and the discussion in the Sixth Committee at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly on this topic,

1. Takes note once again of the articles on the responsibility of international organizations and commends them to the attention of Governments and international organizations without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare an initial compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies referring to the articles and to invite Governments and international organizations to submit information on their practice in this regard, as well as written comments on any future action regarding the articles, and further requests the Secretary-General to submit this material well in advance of its seventy-second session;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-second session the item entitled "Responsibility of international organizations", with a view to examining, inter alia, the question of the form that might be given to the articles.

Law of treaties

The 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 730], which entered into force in 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 1141], had 114 parties as at 31 December 2014, with the accession of the State of Palestine on 2 April.

Special missions

The General Assembly, by resolution 2530(XXIV) [YUN 1969, p. 750], adopted the Convention on Special Missions and its Optional Protocol on the compulsory settlement of disputes. The Convention, which entered into force in 1985, had 38 States parties as at 31 December 2014.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1975 Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character [YUN 1975, p. 879], which would enter into force when ratified by 35 parties, had 34 States parties as at 31 December 2014.

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006] had 43 parties, including 12 international organizations, with the accession of Albania on 8 May. It would enter into force when ratified by 35 States.

Succession of states

The 1978 Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of Treaties [YUN 1978, p. 951], which entered into force in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1214], had 22 States parties as at 31 December 2014.

The 1983 Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of State Property, Archives and Debts [YUN 1983, p. 1119], which would enter into force when ratified by 15 parties, had 7 States parties.

Jurisdictional immunities of states and their property

The General Assembly, by resolution 59/38 [YUN 2004, p. 1304], adopted the Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property. As at 31 December, the Convention had 16 States parties with the accession of Latvia on 14 February and Finland on 23 April. The Convention would enter into force when ratified by 30 parties.

International terrorism

Convention on international terrorism

Working Group. On 7 October [A/69/506], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/119 [YUN 2013, p. 1332], the Sixth Committee established a working group to finalize the process on a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism as well as discussions on convening a high-level conference to formulate a collective response to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. The Working Group held three meetings and informal consultations on 24 October and 4 and 5 November. The Chair of the Working Group provided an oral report to the Sixth Committee on 7 November [A/C.6/69/SR.28].

The Working Group had before it the report of the Ad Hoc Committee established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] at its sixteenth (2013) session [YUN 2013, p. 1331]. Delegations stressed the importance of concluding the draft convention. Concerning the outstanding issues surrounding the draft convention, some delegations emphasized the need to distinguish acts of terrorism from the legitimate struggle of peoples under foreign occupation and colonial or alien domination in the exercise of their right to self-determination, while others stressed that no cause could legitimize terrorist acts and it was improper to draw a dichotomy between self-determination and terrorism. Some delegations expressed the view that the convention should also address State terrorism and cover acts by the armed forces of a State or irregular paramilitary groups when those acts were not covered by international humanitarian law; others reiterated that the convention should be a law-enforcement instrument focusing on individual criminal responsibility. It was recalled that provisions relating to the obligations of States were included in the accompanying draft resolution.

On the proposed convening of a high-level conference, Egypt, as sponsor delegation, recalled that it had initially submitted the proposal in 1999. The proposed conference would provide an opportunity for adopting an action plan and a forum for addressing all issues related to the fight against terrorism. Egypt recalled that the proposal had been supported by the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the African Union and the League of Arab States. Egypt further stressed that the issue should be discussed on its own merits and should not be linked to the discussions on the draft comprehensive convention.

In his oral report, the Chair of the Working Group noted that, despite overwhelming support for the conclusion of the draft convention, a lack of the necessary political will had resulted in continued impasse. Noting that more time was required to achieve substantive progress on the outstanding issues, the Working Group recommended that the Sixth Committee, at the General Assembly's seventieth (2015) session, establish a working group to finalize the process on the draft convention and discussions on convening a high-level conference.

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330] and resolution 68/119 [YUN 2013, p. 1332], the Secretary-General in July issued his annual report [A/69/209] on measures taken by 16 States, 4 UN system entities and 3 international organizations to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, adopted by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1293]. The report listed 41 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, including 19 universal and 22 regional, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorism by one State.

In another report [A/69/94], issued in June in response to Assembly resolution 68/187 [YUN 2013, p. 1252], the Secretary-General provided information on the progress made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) in delivering technical assistance for implementing the international conventions and protocols related to terrorism. From mid-2013 to May 2014, UNODC provided legislative assistance to 21 States, resulting in 23 new ratifications of the international legal instruments and 16 new or revised counter-terrorism laws. UNODC also provided capacity-building training to 2,127 national criminal justice officials through 86 national, regional and international workshops. Terrorism prevention programmes were implemented in the Sahel region, the Horn of Africa, Nigeria, the Middle East and North Africa, Yemen, Afghanistan, Central Asia, South Asia, South-East Asia and the Pacific, and Latin America and the Caribbean. UNODC supported national training institutes in developing counter-terrorism training modules and conducting train-the-trainer programmes, and continued to develop specialized knowledge and tools in such areas as countering the financing of terrorism and the use of the Internet for terrorist purposes; tackling chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear terrorism; countering transport-related terrorist offences; assisting victims of acts of terrorism; and strengthening human rights while preventing and combating terrorism. In the framework of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy [YUN 2006, p. 65], UNODC contributed to the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and cooperated with the UN Security Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee and its Executive Directorate.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/506], adopted resolution 69/127 without vote [agenda item 107].

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming, in all its aspects, the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, adopted on 8 September 2006, which enhances the overall framework for the efforts of the international community to effectively counter the scourge of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and recalling the first, second, third and fourth biennial reviews of the Strategy, on 4 and 5 September 2008, 8 September 2010, 28 and 29 June 2012 and 12 and 13 June 2014, respectively, and the debates that were held on those occasions,

Recalling its resolutions 62/272 of 5 September 2008, 64/297 of 8 September 2010, 66/282 of 29 June 2012 and 68/276 of 13 June 2014,

Recalling also its resolution 66/10 of 18 November 2011,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling also the 2005 World Summit Outcome, and reaffirming, in particular, the section on terrorism,

Recalling further the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 49/60 of 9 December 1994, and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996,

Recalling all General Assembly resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism and Security Council resolutions on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts,

Convinced of the importance of the consideration of measures to eliminate international terrorism by the General Assembly as the universal organ having competence to do so,

Deeply disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts, which have been carried out worldwide,

Reaffirming its strong condemnation of the heinous acts of terrorism that have caused enormous loss of human life, destruction and damage, including those which prompted the adoption of General Assembly resolution 56/1 of 12 September 2001, as well as Security Council resolutions 1368(2001) of 12 September 2001, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 and 1377(2001) of 12 November 2001, and those that have occurred since,

Reaffirming also its strong condemnation of the atrocious and deliberate attacks that have occurred against United Nations offices in various parts of the world,

Affirming that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with all their obligations under international law and must adopt such measures in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to strengthen further international cooperation among States and among international organizations and agencies, regional and subregional organizations and arrangements and the United Nations in order to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter, international law and the relevant international conventions,

Noting the role of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism in monitoring the implementation of that resolution, including the taking of the necessary financial, legal and technical measures by States and the ratification or acceptance of the relevant international conventions and protocols,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism and of the proposals of the Secretary-General to enhance the role of the Organization in this respect,

Mindful also of the essential need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation aimed at enhancing the national capacity of States to prevent and effectively suppress international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Reiterating its call upon States to review urgently the scope of the existing international legal provisions on the prevention, repression and elimination of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, with the aim of ensuring that there is a comprehensive legal framework covering all aspects of the matter,

Emphasizing that tolerance and dialogue among civilizations and the enhancement of interfaith and intercultural understanding are among the most important elements in promoting cooperation and success in combating terrorism, and welcoming the various initiatives to this end,

Reaffirming that no terrorist act can be justified in any circumstances,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1624(2005) of 14 September 2005, and bearing in mind that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Noting recent developments and initiatives at the international, regional and subregional levels to prevent and suppress international terrorism,

Noting also regional and subregional efforts to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, including through the elaboration of and adherence to regional conventions,

Recalling its decision in resolutions 54/110 of 9 December 1999, 55/158 of 12 December 2000, 56/88 of 12 December 2001, 57/27 of 19 November 2002, 58/81 of 9 December 2003, 59/46 of 2 December 2004, 60/43 of 8 December 2005, 61/40 of 4 December 2006, 62/71 of 6 December 2007, 63/129 of 11 December 2008, 64/118 of 16 December 2009, 65/34 of 6 December 2010, 66/105 of 9 December 2011 and 67/99 of 14 December 2012 that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996 should address, and keep on its agenda, the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Recalling also that, in the Final Document of the Sixteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, adopted in Tehran on 31 August 2012, the Heads of State or Government reiterated the collective position of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on terrorism and reaffirmed its previous initiative calling for an international summit conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as other relevant initiatives,

Bearing in mind its resolutions 57/219 of 18 December 2002, 58/187 of 22 December 2003, 59/191 of 20 December 2004, 60/158 of 16 December 2005, 61/171 of 19 December 2006, 62/159 of 18 December 2007, 63/185 of 18 December 2008, 64/168 of 18 December 2009, 65/221 of 21 December 2010, 66/171 of 19 December 2011 and 68/178 of 18 December 2013,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the oral report of the Chair of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee on its work during the sixty-ninth session,

1. Strongly condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations as criminal and unjustifiable, wherever and by whomsoever committed;

2. Calls upon all Member States, the United Nations and other appropriate international, regional and subregional organizations to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, as well as the resolutions relating to the first, second, third and fourth biennial reviews of the Strategy, in all its aspects at the international, regional, subregional and national levels without delay, including by mobilizing resources and expertise;

3. Recalls the pivotal role of the General Assembly in following up the implementation and the updating of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, looks forward to the fifth biennial review, in 2016, and in this regard recalls its invitation to the Secretary-General to contribute to the future deliberations of the Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General when doing so to provide information on relevant activities within the Secretariat to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system;

4. Reiterates that criminal acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstances unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or other nature that may be invoked to justify them;

5. Reiterates its call upon all States to adopt further measures in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of international law, including international standards of human rights, to prevent terrorism and to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism and, to that end, to consider, in particular, the implementation of the measures set out in paragraphs 3 (a) to (f) of General Assembly resolution 51/210;

6. Also reiterates its call upon all States, with the aim of enhancing the efficient implementation of relevant legal instruments, to intensify, as and where appropriate, the exchange of information on facts related to terrorism and, in so doing, to avoid the dissemination of inaccurate or unverified information;

7. Reiterates its call upon States to refrain from financing, encouraging, providing training for or otherwise supporting terrorist activities;

8. Expresses concern at the increase in incidents of kidnapping and hostage-taking with demands for ransom and/or political concessions by terrorist groups, and expresses the need to address this issue;

9. Expresses grave concern over the acute and growing threat posed by foreign terrorist fighters, namely, individuals who travel to a State other than their States of residence or nationality for the purpose of the perpetration, planning or preparation of, or participation in, terrorist acts or providing or receiving terrorist training, including in connection with armed conflict, emphasizes the need for States to address this issue, including through the implementation of their international obligations, and underlines the importance of United Nations capacity-building and facilitation of capacity-building in accordance with existing mandates to assist States, including those in the most affected regions, upon their request;

10. Emphasizes the need for States to cooperate resolutely against international terrorism by taking speedy and effective measures to eliminate this scourge, and in this regard calls upon all States, in accordance with their obligations under applicable international law and the Charter, to deny safe haven and bring to justice or, where appropriate, extradite, on the basis of the principle of extradite or prosecute, the perpetrators of terrorist acts or any person who supports, facilitates or participates or attempts to participate in the financing, planning or preparation of terrorist acts;

11. Urges States to ensure that their nationals or other persons and entities within their territory that wilfully provide or collect funds for the benefit of persons or entities who commit, or attempt to commit, facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts are punished by penalties consistent with the grave nature of such acts;

12. Reminds States of their obligations under relevant international conventions and protocols, and Security Council resolutions, including Council resolution 1373(2001), to ensure that perpetrators of terrorist acts are brought to justice, and recalls the General Assembly resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism;

13. Reaffirms that international cooperation as well as actions by States to combat terrorism should be conducted in conformity with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions;

14. Recalls the adoption of the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, the Protocol of 2005 to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol of 2005 to the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, and urges all States to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming parties to these instruments;

15. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider, as a matter of priority and in accordance with Security Council resolution 1373(2001) and Council resolution 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004, becoming parties to the relevant conventions and protocols as referred to in paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 51/210, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism and the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, and calls upon all States to enact, as appropriate, the national legislation necessary to implement the provisions of those conventions and protocols, to ensure that the jurisdiction of their courts enables them to bring to trial the perpetrators of terrorist acts and to cooperate with and provide support and assistance to other States and relevant international, regional and subregional organizations to that end;

16. Urges States to cooperate with the Secretary-General and with one another, as well as with interested intergovernmental organizations, with a view to ensuring, where appropriate within existing mandates, that technical and other expert advice is provided to those States requiring and requesting assistance in becoming parties to and implementing the conventions and protocols referred to in paragraph 15 above;

17. Notes with appreciation and satisfaction that, consistent with the call contained in paragraphs 12 and 13 of General Assembly resolution 68/119 of 16 December 2013, a number of States became parties to the relevant conventions and protocols referred to therein, thereby realizing the objective of wider acceptance and implementation of those conventions;

18. Reaffirms the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 49/60, and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 51/210, and calls upon all States to implement them;

19. Calls upon all States to cooperate to prevent and suppress terrorist acts;

20. Urges all States and the Secretary-General, in their efforts to prevent international terrorism, to make the best use of the existing institutions of the United Nations;

21. Notes that the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre is performing its duties within the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force in New York and that the Centre is supporting the implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, and encourages all Member States to collaborate with the Centre and to contribute to the implementation of its activities within the Task Force;

22. Requests the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in Vienna to continue its efforts to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism, and recognizes, in the context of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and Security Council resolution 1373(2001), its role in assisting States in becoming parties to and implementing the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, including the most recent among them, and in strengthening international cooperation mechanisms in criminal matters related to terrorism, including through national capacity-building;

23. Invites regional intergovernmental organizations to submit to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted at the regional level to eliminate international terrorism, as well as on intergovernmental meetings held by those organizations;

24. Decides, taking into account the recommendation of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee that more time was required to achieve substantive progress on the outstanding issues, to recommend that the Sixth Committee, at the seventieth session of the General Assembly, establish a working group with a view to finalizing the process on the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism as well as discussions on the item included in its agenda by Assembly resolution 54/110 concerning the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations;

25. Recognizes the efforts of Member States towards resolving any outstanding issues, and encourages all Member States to redouble their efforts during the intersessional period;

26. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

In its resolution 69/197 of 18 December (see p. 1416), the Assembly called on States to become parties to the international conventions and protocols against terrorism, and to develop strategies and effective measures to address terrorism. It requested UNODC to enhance its technical assistance to Member States in preventing and combating terrorism by facilitating the ratification and implementation of the conventions and protocols related to terrorism, in close consultation with the Security Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee and its Executive Directorate, as well as to continue contributing to the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force. The Assembly also urged UNODC to provide technical assistance in combating money-laundering and the financing of terrorism.

Protocols Additional to the 1949 Geneva Conventions

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 67/93 [YUN 2012, p. 1305], the Secretary-General in July [A/69/184] reported on the status of the two 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts [YUN 1977, p. 706]. The report included information submitted by eight States and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) on measures taken to strengthen the dissemination and implementation of humanitarian law at the national level. Annexed to the report was a list of 174 States parties to one or both Protocols as at 2 June 2014. An addendum [A/69/184/Add.1] provided information submitted by six other States and ICRC, as well as a list of 68 States parties to Additional Protocol III of 8 December 2005 as at 23 September 2014.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/499], adopted resolution 69/120 without vote [agenda item 79].

Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its biennial resolutions on the status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, including its resolution 67/93 of 14 December 2012,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming the continuing value of established humanitarian rules relating to armed conflicts and the need to respect and ensure respect for those rules in all circumstances within the scope of the relevant international instruments, pending the earliest possible termination of such conflicts,

Stressing the need to consolidate the existing body of international humanitarian law through its universal acceptance and the need for wide dissemination and full implementation of such law at the national level, and expressing concern about all violations of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols,

Calling upon Member States to disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law as widely as possible, and calling upon all parties to armed conflict to apply international humanitarian law,

Noting with satisfaction the increasing number of national commissions and other bodies involved in advising authorities at the national level on the implementation, dissemination and development of international humanitarian law,

Noting with appreciation the meetings of representatives of those bodies organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross, together with relevant partners such as national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, to facilitate the sharing of concrete experience and the exchange of views on their roles and on the challenges they face,

Stressing the possibility of making use of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in relation to an armed conflict, pursuant to article 90 of Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions,

Stressing also the possibility for the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission to facilitate, through its good offices, the restoration of an attitude of respect for the Geneva Conventions and Protocol I,

Taking note of the fact that, in paragraphs 8 and 9 of its resolution 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, the Security Council noted the range of existing methods used, on a case-by-case basis, for gathering information on alleged violations of applicable international law relating to the protection of civilians, underlined the importance in that regard of receiving information that is timely, objective, accurate and reliable, and considered the possibility, to that end, of using the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission established by article 90 of Protocol I,

Mindful of the role of the International Committee of the Red Cross in offering protection to the victims of armed conflicts,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the International Committee of the Red Cross to promote and disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols,

Noting the special responsibilities of national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, as auxiliaries to the public authorities of their respective States in the humanitarian field, to cooperate with and assist their Governments in the promotion, dissemination and implementation of international humanitarian law,

Welcoming the universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, particularly in the year of the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the original Geneva Convention,

Recalling the undertakings of the Thirty-first International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 28 November to 1 December 2011, at which the Conference reaffirmed the need to reinforce the implementation of and respect for international humanitarian law,

Welcoming the launch of the initiative by Switzerland, in collaboration with the International Committee of the Red Cross, to facilitate a process aimed at exploring and identifying concrete ways and means to strengthen the application of international humanitarian law, including ensuring the effectiveness of mechanisms of compliance and reinforcing dialogue on issues of international humanitarian law,

Noting the initiative by the International Committee of the Red Cross to facilitate a process regarding the legal protection of all persons deprived of their liberty in relation to armed conflict,

Noting also the work undertaken by the International Committee of the Red Cross in its Health Care in Danger project regarding the protection of the provision of and access to health care,

Calling upon States to respect and protect the wounded and sick, as well as health-care personnel and facilities, and medical vehicles in armed conflict in accordance with their obligations under international humanitarian law,

Noting the serious concern expressed by States regarding the humanitarian impact caused by cluster munitions, and noting the entry into force of the Convention on Cluster Munitions on 1 August 2010,

Noting also the adoption of the Arms Trade Treaty in 2013,

Welcoming the significant debate generated by the publication in 2005 of the study by the International Committee of the Red Cross on customary international humanitarian law and recent initiatives by the Committee, and looking forward to further constructive discussion on the subject,

Acknowledging the fact that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court covers the most serious crimes of international concern under international humanitarian law and that the Rome Statute, while recalling that it is the duty of every State to exercise its criminal jurisdiction over those responsible for such crimes, shows the determination of the international community to put an end to impunity for the perpetrators of such crimes and thus to contribute to their prevention,

Noting the amendments to article 8 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, relating to war crimes under the Rome Statute, adopted at the Review Conference of the Rome Statute, held in Kampala on 10 June 2010,

Acknowledging the usefulness of discussing in the General Assembly the status of instruments of international humanitarian law relevant to the protection of victims of armed conflicts,

1. Welcomes the universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and notes the trend towards a similarly wide acceptance of the two Additional Protocols of 1977;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Geneva Conventions that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Additional Protocols at the earliest possible date;

3. Calls upon all States that are already parties to Protocol I, or those States not parties, on becoming parties to Protocol I, to make the declaration provided for under article 90 of that Protocol and to consider making use, where appropriate, of the services of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in accordance with the provisions of article 90 of Protocol I;

4. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and the two Protocols thereto and to other relevant treaties on international humanitarian law relating to the protection of victims of armed conflict;

5. Calls upon States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict;

6. Calls upon all States parties to the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions to ensure their wide dissemination and full implementation;

7. Affirms the necessity of making the implementation of international humanitarian law more effective, and supports its further strengthening and development;

8. Notes with appreciation the adoption at the Thirtieth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 26 to 30 November 2007, of resolution 3 entitled "Reaffirmation and implementation of international humanitarian law: preserving human life and dignity in armed conflict", in which the Conference, inter alia, reiterated the obligation of States to take national measures to implement international humanitarian law, including training the armed forces and making this law known among the general public, as well as adopting legislation to punish war crimes in accordance with their international obligations;

9. Also notes with appreciation the adoption at the Thirty-first International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent of resolution 1 entitled “Strengthening legal protection for victims of armed conflicts”, in which the Conference, inter alia, stressed that greater compliance with international humanitarian law is an indispensable prerequisite for improving the situation of victims of armed conflict and reaffirmed the obligation of all States and all parties to armed conflict to respect and ensure respect for international humanitarian law in all circumstances;

10. Recognizes, taking into account questions raised by States during the preparation for the Thirty-first International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent and during the debates at the Conference, the importance of exploring ways to enhance and ensure the effectiveness of mechanisms of compliance with international humanitarian law, with a view to strengthening legal protection for all victims of armed conflict, and in this regard welcomes the launch of the initiative by Switzerland, in collaboration with the International Committee of the Red Cross, on strengthening compliance with international humanitarian law;

11. Calls upon Member States to actively participate in the Thirty-second International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, to be held in Geneva in 2015;

12. Welcomes the activities of the Advisory Service on International Humanitarian Law of the International Committee of the Red Cross in supporting efforts made by Member States to take legislative and administrative action to implement international humanitarian law and in promoting the exchange of information on those efforts between Governments, and reminds Member States of the availability of the manual on domestic implementation of international humanitarian law;

13. Also welcomes the increasing number of national commissions or committees for the implementation of international humanitarian law and their work in promoting the incorporation of treaties on international humanitarian law into national law and disseminating the rules of international humanitarian law;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the status of the Additional Protocols relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law, inter alia, with respect to its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross;

15. Encourages Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross, in transmitting information to the Secretary-General, to focus on new developments and activities during the reporting period;

16. Encourages Member States to explore ways of facilitating the submission of information for future reports of the Secretary-General and, in this context, to consider the convenience of using a questionnaire as drafted by Member States, with the assistance of the International Committee of the Red Cross and, as appropriate, in consultation with the Secretariat, for submission to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session the item entitled “Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts”.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomatic and consular relations numbered: 190 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 51 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 70 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 177 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 41, and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 51. Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775] numbered 177.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report and later addendum [A/69/185 & Add.1], the Secretary-General summarized information received from 14 States, pursuant to Assembly resolution 67/94 [YUN 2012, p. 1307], on serious violations of the protection and security of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. Fourteen additional States became parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives since the 2012 report [ibid.].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/500], adopted resolution 69/121 without vote [agenda item 80].

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Conscious of the need to develop and strengthen friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed by the new and recurring acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which endanger or take innocent lives and seriously impede the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing sympathy for the victims of such illegal acts,

Noting that diplomatic and consular missions may maintain archives and documents in various forms, that official correspondence may take a variety of forms and that diplomatic and consular missions may use a variety of means of communication,

Recalling that the archives and documents of diplomatic and consular missions shall be inviolable at any time and wherever they may be and that the official correspondence of diplomatic and consular missions shall be inviolable,

Recalling also that States shall permit and protect free communication of diplomatic and consular missions for all official purposes and that diplomatic and consular missions may employ all appropriate means in communicating with their Governments and other diplomatic and consular missions of their State, wherever situated,

Concerned at the failure to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Recalling that, without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State,

Recalling also that diplomatic and consular premises must not be used in any manner incompatible with the functions of diplomatic and consular missions,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate measures, as required by international law, in a timely manner, for the protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, including measures of a preventive nature, and to bring offenders to justice,

Welcoming measures already taken by States to this end in conformity with their international obligations,

Convinced that the role of the United Nations, which includes the reporting procedures established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in subsequent Assembly resolutions, is important in promoting efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts can never be justified;

3. Urges States to strictly observe, implement and enforce all the applicable principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations, including during a period of armed conflict, and, in particular, to ensure, in conformity with their international obligations, the protection, security and safety of the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above officially present in territories under their jurisdiction, including practical measures to prevent and prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials;

4. Also urges States to take all appropriate measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, including during a period of armed conflict, and to ensure, with the participation of the United Nations where appropriate, that such acts are fully investigated with a view to bringing offenders to justice;

5. Recommends that States cooperate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, including measures of a preventive nature, and with regard to the timely exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

6. Urges States to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law, at the national and international levels, to prevent any abuse of diplomatic or consular privileges and immunities, in particular serious abuses, including those involving acts of violence;

7. Recommends that States cooperate closely with the State in whose territory abuses of diplomatic and consular privileges and immunities may have occurred, including by exchanging information and providing assistance to its juridical authorities in order to bring offenders to justice;

8. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

9. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of their international obligations concerning the protection of the missions or the security of the representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, to make use of the means available for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General, when he deems it appropriate, to offer his good offices to the States directly concerned;

10. Urges:

(a) All States to report to the Secretary-General, in a concise and expeditious manner and in accordance with the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General, serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

(b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent possible, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report to the Secretary-General, in a concise and expeditious manner and in accordance with the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General, on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and to report on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To send, without delay, a circular note to all States reminding them of the request contained in paragraph 10 above;

(b) To circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 10 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

(c) To draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 10 above, when a serious violation has been reported pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above;

(d) To address reminders to States where such violations have occurred if reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above or follow-up reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (b) above have not been made within a reasonable period of time;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite States, in the circular note referred to in paragraph 11 (a) above, to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed or already taken to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report containing:

(a) Information on the state of ratification of and accessions to the instruments referred to in paragraph 8 above;

(b) A summary of the reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 10 and 12 above;

14. Invites the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly any views he may wish to express on the matters referred to in paragraph 13 above;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session the item entitled “Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives”.

Treaties and agreements

UN registration and publication of treaties

During 2014, 779 original treaties and international agreements were registered and 3 filed and recorded with the United Nations Secretariat in accordance with Article 102 of the Charter and relevant General Assembly regulations.

The United Nations published the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements, which provided a summary of the treaties registered with the Secretariat under Article 102 of the Charter during each month. The United Nations Treaty Collection website provided access to the United Nations Treaty Series, which contained all treaties and international agreements registered or filed and recorded by the Secretariat since 1945, and to up-to-date information on the status of all multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General.

The 2014 Treaty Event entitled “Towards Universal Participation and Implementation” (New York, 23–25 and 30 September and 1 October) resulted in 81 treaty actions undertaken by 52 States with respect to 30 treaties deposited with the Secretary-General.

Multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General

The United Nations received treaty actions—such as signatures, ratifications, acceptances, approvals, accessions, declarations, reservations, objections and notifications—for deposit with the Secretary-General, resulting in the issuance of 821 depositary notifications.

The Secretary-General was performing depositary functions for more than 560 multilateral treaties.

The following multilateral treaties, conventions, protocols and amendments deposited with the Secretary-General were among those that came into force in 2014:

—Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on a Communications Procedure, adopted in New York on 19 December 2011 and which entered into force on 14 April 2014;

—Convention on the Law of the Non-Navigational Uses of International Watercourses, adopted in New York on 21 May 1997 and which entered into force on 17 August 2014;

—Amendment to the Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context, adopted in Sofia, Bulgaria, on 27 February 2001 and which entered into force on 26 August 2014;

—Nagoya Protocol on Access to Genetic Resources and the Fair and Equitable Sharing of Benefits Arising from their Utilization to the Convention on Biological Diversity, adopted in Nagoya, Japan, on 29 October 2010 and which entered into force on 12 October 2014; and —Arms Trade Treaty, adopted in New York on 2 April 2013 and which entered into force on 24 December 2014.

Advice and capacity-building in treaty law and practice

Advice and assistance on treaty law and practice were provided to Member States, the specialized agencies, the regional commissions, UN bodies, treaty bodies and other entities. Two seminars on treaty law and practice (8–9 April and 13–14 November) were conducted at UN Headquarters for legal advisors from Member States and other officials.

Capacity-building training was delivered to government officials as part of two regional seminars on the Law of Treaties (Lesotho, 10–14 February and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 10 April).

International economic law

In 2014, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

Commission on International Trade Law

At its forty-seventh session (New York, 7–18 July [A/69/17]), the Commission completed its work on a draft convention on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration and recommended its adoption by the General Assembly as the United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-Based Investor-State Arbitration, which the Assembly did in December (see p. 1526).

UNCITRAL continued its work on arbitration and conciliation, online dispute resolution, electronic commerce, insolvency law, security interests and international trade law aimed at reducing the legal obstacles faced by micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises throughout their life cycle, and considered possible future work, especially in the area of public-private partnerships. The Commission reviewed the implementation of the New York Convention and agreed on the publication of the UNCITRAL Secretariat Guide on the New York Convention; it also reviewed the work on the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), as well as training and technical assistance activities.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/116 [YUN 2013, p. 1349], the Commission continued to comment on its role in promoting the rule of law and held a panel discussion on “Sharing States’ national practices in strengthening the rule of law through access to justice”, further to consideration of that subtopic in the Assembly’s Sixth Committee. It confirmed its role in strengthening the rule of law, including by facilitating access to justice, noting that UNCITRAL work was relevant to all dimensions of such access (normative protection, capacity to seek remedy and capacity to provide effective remedies). The Commission also reiterated its belief that the implementation and effective use of modern private law standards in international trade were essential for advancing good governance, sustained economic development and the eradication of poverty and hunger, and that the promotion of the rule of law in commercial relations should be an integral part of the broader UN agenda to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels. The Secretary-General was encouraged to devise effective practical mechanisms to achieve such integration.

Arbitration and conciliation

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] had before it the reports of Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) on its fifty-ninth (Vienna, 16–20 September 2013) [A/CN.9/794 & Corr.1] and sixtieth (New York, 3–7 February 2014) [A/CN.9/799] sessions, together with a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/812] transmitting a draft convention on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration, completed by the Working Group in its second reading, and a compilation of comments on the draft convention [A/CN.9/813 & Add.1]. After consideration and further revision of the draft convention on transparency, the Commission, on 9 July, decided to submit it to the General Assembly and recommended that the Assembly, at its sixty-ninth session, consider adopting a United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-Based Investor-State Arbitration, authorizing its opening for signature on 17 March 2015 in Port Louis, Mauritius, and recommending that the Convention be known as the “Mauritius Convention on Transparency” in English and “La Convention de l’Île Maurice sur la Transparence” in French. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to publish the Convention, including electronically, and to disseminate it broadly to Governments and other interested bodies.

The Commission was informed of the steps taken by the Secretariat for the establishment of a repository of published information under the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration, adopted in 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1337], further to its 2013 opinion that the UNCITRAL Secretariat should fulfil the role of the transparency repository [ibid., p. 1338]. It expressed its appreciation for the establishment of a transparency registry website and reiterated its mandate to the Secretariat to establish and operate the Transparency Registry, initially as a pilot project, and to seek any necessary funding to that end.

UNCITRAL also considered a note [A/CN.9/822] by the Secretariat on possible future work in the enforcement of international settlement agreements, containing a proposal by the United States to develop a multilateral convention on the enforceability of international commercial settlement agreements reached through conciliation. The Commission agreed that Working Group II should consider the issue of enforcement of international settlement agreements resulting from conciliation proceedings and report in 2015 on the feasibility of work in that area. It further agreed that the Working Group should consider at its next sessions the revision of the UNCITRAL Notes on Organizing Arbitral Proceedings (1996) [YUN 1996, p. 1240], focusing on the matters of substance, and requested the Secretariat to explore further the issue of concurrent proceedings in investment treaty arbitrations and to report to the Commission at a future session.

The Commission also took note of an oral report on a joint project between the UNCITRAL Secretariat and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) to promote the culture of commercial and investment arbitration in the Middle East and North Africa region.

At its sixty-first session (Vienna, 15–19 September) [A/CN.9/826], Working Group II commenced its revision of the Notes on Organizing Arbitral Proceedings, based on the notes prepared by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/WG.II/WP.183 & A/CN.9/WG.II/WP.184]. Based on the deliberations and decisions of the Working Group, the Secretariat was requested to prepare a revised draft version of the Notes.

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

UNCITRAL, at its forty-seventh session [A/69/17], was informed of the progress made by the Secretariat in promoting the uniform application of the 1958

Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 391] through the preparation of a UNCITRAL guide.

Further to its 2013 consideration of an excerpt of the UNCITRAL guide on the Convention [YUN 2013, p. 1338], during which concerns were expressed that a guide would not reflect an international consensus on the Convention's interpretation and the question of the form of its publication was raised, the Commission had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/814 & Add.1–3 & Add.5] containing additional excerpts of the guide. The Commission agreed to include a disclaimer in the guide. It further agreed that the guide should be entitled "UNCITRAL Secretariat Guide on the New York Convention" and requested the Secretariat to publish it, including electronically, in the six official languages of the United Nations. The Commission also took note with appreciation of the performance of the website, which was launched in 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1311] to make available information collected in preparation of the UNCITRAL Secretariat Guide on the New York Convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/496], adopted resolution 69/116 without vote [agenda item 76].

United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade in the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Recalling also its resolution 68/109 of 16 December 2013, in which it recommended the use of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Rules on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration and Arbitration Rules (as revised in 2010, with new article 1, paragraph 4, as adopted in 2013),

Recognizing the need for provisions on transparency in the settlement of treaty-based investor-State disputes to take account of the public interest involved in such arbitrations,

Believing that the Rules on Transparency contribute significantly to the establishment of a harmonized legal framework for a fair and efficient settlement of international investment disputes, increase transparency and accountability and promote good governance,

Recalling that, at its forty-sixth session, in 2013, the Commission recommended that the Rules on Transparency be applied through appropriate mechanisms to investor-State arbitration initiated pursuant to investment treaties concluded before the coming into effect of the Rules on Transparency, to the extent that such application is consistent with those investment treaties, and that the Commission decided to prepare a convention that was intended to give those States that wished to make the Rules on Transparency applicable to their existing investment treaties concluded before 1 April 2014 an efficient mechanism to do so, without creating any expectation that other States would use the mechanism offered by the convention,

Acknowledging that the Rules on Transparency might be made applicable to investor-State arbitration initiated pursuant to investment treaties concluded before 1 April 2014, the date of coming into effect of the Rules on Transparency, by means other than a convention,

Recognizing that all States and interested international organizations were invited to participate in the preparation of the draft convention either as members or as observers during the forty-seventh session of the Commission, with full opportunity to speak and make proposals,

Noting that the preparation of the draft convention was the subject of due deliberation in the Commission and that the draft convention benefited from consultations with Governments and interested intergovernmental and international non-governmental organizations,

Noting with satisfaction that the text of the draft convention was circulated for comment to all States Members of the United Nations and intergovernmental organizations invited to attend the meetings of the Commission as observers, and that the comments received were before the Commission at its forty-seventh session,

Taking note with satisfaction of the decision of the Commission at its forty-seventh session to submit the draft convention to the General Assembly for its consideration,

Taking note of the draft convention approved by the Commission,

Expressing its appreciation to the Government of Mauritius for its offer to host a signing ceremony for the Convention in Port Louis,

1. Commends the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for preparing the draft convention on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration;

2. Adopts the United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration, contained in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Authorizes a ceremony for the opening for signature of the Convention to be held in Port Louis on 17 March 2015, and recommends that the Convention be known as the "Mauritius Convention on Transparency";

4. Calls upon those Governments and regional economic integration organizations that wish to make the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Rules on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration applicable to arbitrations under their existing investment treaties to consider becoming a party to the Convention.

ANNEX

United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration

Preamble

The Parties to this Convention,

Recognizing the value of arbitration as a method of settling disputes that may arise in the context of international relations, and the extensive and wide-ranging use of arbitration for the settlement of investor-State disputes,

Also recognizing the need for provisions on transparency in the settlement of treaty-based investor-State disputes to take account of the public interest involved in such arbitrations,

Believing that the Rules on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration adopted by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on 11 July 2013 (“UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency”), effective as of 1 April 2014, would contribute significantly to the establishment of a harmonized legal framework for a fair and efficient settlement of international investment disputes,

Noting the great number of treaties providing for the protection of investments or investors already in force, and the practical importance of promoting the application of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency to arbitration under those already concluded investment treaties,

Noting also article 1(2) and (9) of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency,

Have agreed as follows:

Scope of application

1. This Convention applies to arbitration between an investor and a State or a regional economic integration organization conducted on the basis of an investment treaty concluded before 1 April 2014 (“investor-State arbitration”).

2. The term “investment treaty” means any bilateral or multilateral treaty, including any treaty commonly referred to as a free trade agreement, economic integration agreement, trade and investment framework or cooperation agreement, or bilateral investment treaty, which contains provisions on the protection of investments or investors and a right for investors to resort to arbitration against contracting parties to that investment treaty.

Application of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency

Article 2

Bilateral or multilateral application

1. The UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency shall apply to any investor-State arbitration, whether or not initiated under the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, in which the respondent is a Party that has not made a relevant reservation under article 3(1)(a) or (b), and the claimant is of a State that is a Party that has not made a relevant reservation under article 3(1)(a).

Unilateral offer of application

2. Where the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency do not apply pursuant to paragraph 1, the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency shall apply to an investor-State arbitration, whether initiated under the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, in which the respondent is a Party that has not made a reservation relevant to that investor-State arbitration under article 3(1), and the claimant agrees to the application of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency.

Applicable version of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency

3. Where the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency apply pursuant to paragraph 1 or 2, the most recent version of those Rules as to which the respondent has not made a reservation pursuant to article 3(2) shall apply.

Article 1(7) of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency

4. The final sentence of article 1(7) of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency shall not apply to investor-State arbitrations under paragraph 1.

Most favoured nation provision in an investment treaty

5. The Parties to this Convention agree that a claimant may not invoke a most favoured nation provision to seek to apply, or avoid the application of, the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency under this Convention.

Reservations

Article 3

1. A Party may declare that:

(a) It shall not apply this Convention to investor-State arbitration under a specific investment treaty, identified by title and name of the contracting parties to that investment treaty;

(b) Article 2(1) and (2) shall not apply to investor-State arbitration conducted using a specific set of arbitration rules or procedures other than the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, and in which it is a respondent;

(c) Article 2(2) shall not apply in investor-State arbitration in which it is a respondent.

2. In the event of a revision of the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency, a Party may, within six months of the adoption of such revision, declare that it shall not apply that revised version of the Rules.

3. Parties may make multiple reservations in a single instrument. In such an instrument, each declaration made:

(a) In respect of a specific investment treaty under paragraph 1(a);

(b) In respect of a specific set of arbitration rules or procedures under paragraph 1(b);

(c) Under paragraph 1(c); or

shall constitute a separate reservation capable of separate withdrawal under article 4(6).

4. No reservations are permitted except those expressly authorized in this article.

Formulation of reservations

Article 4

1. Reservations may be made by a Party at any time, save for a reservation under article 3(2).

2. Reservations made at the time of signature shall be subject to confirmation upon ratification, acceptance or approval. Such reservations shall take effect simultaneously with the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the Party concerned.

3. Reservations made at the time of ratification, acceptance or approval of this Convention or accession thereto shall take effect simultaneously with the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the Party concerned.

4. Except for a reservation made by a Party under article 3(2), which shall take effect immediately upon deposit, a reservation deposited after the entry into force of the Convention for that Party shall take effect twelve months after the date of its deposit.

5. Reservations and their confirmations shall be deposited with the depositary.

6. Any Party that makes a reservation under this Convention may withdraw it at any time. Such withdrawals are to be deposited with the depositary, and shall take effect upon deposit.

Application to investor-State arbitrations

Article 5

This Convention and any reservation, or withdrawal of a reservation, shall apply only to investor-State arbitrations that are commenced after the date when the Convention, reservation, or withdrawal of a reservation, enters into force or takes effect in respect of each Party concerned.

Depositary

Article 6

The Secretary-General of the United Nations is hereby designated as the depositary of this Convention.

Signature, ratification, acceptance, approval, accession

Article 7

1. This Convention is open for signature in Port Louis, Mauritius, on 17 March 2015, and thereafter at United Nations Headquarters in New York by any (a) State; or (b) regional economic integration organization that is constituted by States and is a contracting party to an investment treaty.

2. This Convention is subject to ratification, acceptance or approval by the signatories to this Convention.

3. This Convention is open for accession by all States or regional economic integration organizations referred to in paragraph 1 which are not signatories as from the date it is open for signature.

4. Instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession are to be deposited with the depositary.

Participation by regional economic integration organizations

Article 8

1. When depositing an instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, a regional economic integration organization shall inform the depositary of a specific investment treaty to which it is a contracting party, identified by title and name of the contracting parties to that investment treaty.

2. When the number of Parties is relevant in this Convention, a regional economic integration organization does not count as a Party in addition to its member States which are Parties.

Entry into force

Article 9

1. This Convention shall enter into force six months after the date of deposit of the third instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

2. When a State or a regional economic integration organization ratifies, accepts, approves or accedes to this Convention after the deposit of the third instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, this Convention enters into force in respect of that State or regional economic integration organization six months after the date of the deposit of its instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

Amendment

Article 10

1. Any Party may propose an amendment to the present Convention by submitting it to the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The Secretary-General shall thereupon communicate the proposed amendment to the Parties to this Convention with a request that they indicate whether they favour a conference of Parties for the purpose of considering and voting upon the proposal. In the event that within four months from the date of such communication at least one third of the Parties favour such a conference, the Secretary-General shall convene the conference under the auspices of the United Nations.

2. The conference of Parties shall make every effort to achieve consensus on each amendment. If all efforts at consensus are exhausted and no consensus is reached, the amendment shall, as a last resort, require for its adoption a two-thirds majority vote of the Parties present and voting at the conference.

3. An adopted amendment shall be submitted by the Secretary-General of the United Nations to all the Parties for ratification, acceptance or approval.

4. An adopted amendment enters into force six months after the date of deposit of the third instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval. When an amendment enters into force, it shall be binding on those Parties which have expressed consent to be bound by it.

5. When a State or a regional economic integration organization ratifies, accepts or approves an amendment that has already entered into force, the amendment enters into force in respect of that State or that regional economic integration organization six months after the date of the deposit of its instrument of ratification, acceptance or approval.

6. Any State or regional economic integration organization which becomes a Party to the Convention after the entry into force of the amendment shall be considered as a Party to the Convention as amended.

Denunciation of this Convention

Article 11

1. A Party may denounce this Convention at any time by means of a formal notification addressed to the depositary. The denunciation shall take effect twelve months after the notification is received by the depositary.

2. This Convention shall continue to apply to investor-State arbitrations commenced before the denunciation takes effect.

DONE in a single original, of which the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed the present Convention.

Micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises

Recalling its 2013 decision to entrust Working Group I with work aimed at reducing the legal obstacles faced by micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs) throughout their life cycle, especially in developing economies [YUN 2013, p. 1344], the Commission [A/69/17] had before it the Working Group's report [A/CN.9/800] on its twenty-second session (New York, 10–14 February).

The Working Group had engaged in preliminary discussions regarding the development of a legal text on simplified incorporation and registration regimes for MSMEs. The discussions focused on issues raised in a working paper prepared by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/WG.I/WP.82], including limited liability, legal personality, the protection of third parties and creditors dealing with the enterprise, registration of the business, sole ownership, minimum capital requirements, transparency in respect of beneficial ownership, internal governance issues and freedom of contract, as well as the possible forms that the proposed legal text could take. Based on the deliberations and decisions of the Working Group, the Secretariat was requested to prepare a document setting out best practices on business registration, as well as a template on simplified incorporation and registration in order to provide the basis for drafting a possible model law. The Commission reaffirmed the Working Group's mandate.

At its twenty-third session (Vienna, 17–21 November) [A/CN.9/825 & Corr.1], Working Group I continued discussing the preparation of legal standards aimed at creating an enabling legal environment for MSMEs, in particular the simplification of incorporation and related matters. It considered best practices in business registration, based on the Secretariat's note [A/CN.9/WG.I/WP.85], as well as issues concerning transparency and beneficial ownership, alternative legislative models for micro and small businesses, legal questions surrounding the simplification of incorporation and future work in the area of business registration.

Online dispute resolution

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] welcomed the progress made by Working Group III (Online Dispute Resolution) on the draft procedural rules on dispute resolution for cross-border electronic transactions, at its twenty-eighth (Vienna, 18–22 November 2013) [A/CN.9/795] and twenty-ninth (New York, 24–28 March 2014) [A/CN.9/801] sessions, in particular regarding Track II that provided for online dispute resolution (ODR) proceedings which did not end in arbitration.

The Commission agreed that there were many common elements between Track I and Track II of the draft rules and that the Working Group should consider at its next session the text of Track I (providing for proceedings which ended in arbitration), as well as address the effects of online dispute resolution on consumer protection in developing and developed countries and countries in post-conflict situations, including when the consumer was the respondent party; explore means of effectively implementing ODR outcomes, including possible alternatives to arbitration; and consider how the draft rules would respond to the needs of developing countries and those facing post-conflict situations. It noted that some of those issues were addressed in the proposal by Colombia, Honduras, Kenya and the United States [A/CN.9/817] requesting that the Working Group consider the needs of developing countries and small- and medium-sized enterprises, in particular the need for an unconstrained online binding arbitration procedure to be available for the resolution of cross-border trade disputes. The Commission reaffirmed the Working Group's mandate in respect to low-value, high-volume cross-border electronic transactions, and encouraged it to continue to conduct its work in the most efficient manner possible. The Commission also considered the preparation of guidelines for ODR providers and platforms as a possible topic for the Working Group's future work.

At its thirtieth session (Vienna, 20–24 October) [A/CN.9/827], the Working Group considered Track I of the Rules for ODR, taking into consideration the importance of different outcomes and enforcement mechanisms—including arbitration—particularly for developing countries and those facing post-conflict situations, and issues of consumer protection. While progress was made on the draft text of Track I, differences remained between those States that allowed binding pre-dispute agreements to arbitrate and those that did not.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] noted the progress made by Working Group IV (Electronic Commerce) in preparing draft provisions on electronic transferable records at its forty-eighth (Vienna, 9–13 December 2013) [A/CN.9/797] and forty-ninth (New York, 28 April–2 May 2014) [A/CN.9/804] sessions. The Commission also noted the Working Group's discussion on technical assistance and coordination activities in the field of electronic commerce, including continued cooperation with the United Nations Centre for Trade Facilitation and Electronic Business (UN/CEFACT), the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, the European Commission and the World Customs Organization. It further noted the Commission Chairperson's participation in the conference on "Facilitating Trade in the Digital Economy—Enhancing Interaction Between Business and Government" (Geneva, 8–9 April), which highlighted the contribution of UNCITRAL texts to facilitating the use of electronic communications at the national and international levels. The Commission was informed that the Russian Federation and the Congo had become States parties to the United Nations Convention on the Use of Electronic Communications in International Contracts (Electronic Communications Convention) [YUN 2005, p. 1459].

Regarding possible future work, the Commission took note of a proposal by Canada concerning legal issues on cloud computing [A/CN.9/823], aimed at identifying potential risks from current practices in relation to conflict of laws, the lack of supporting legislative framework and the possible disparities of domestic laws. It recognized the implication of cloud computing, particularly for small- and medium-sized enterprises, as well as for related issues such as data protection, privacy and intellectual property, and agreed to consider it as a possible topic at a future session.

Noting that the current work of the Working Group would greatly assist in facilitating electronic commerce in international trade, the Commission reaffirmed the Working Group's mandate to develop a legislative text on electronic transferable records, and requested the Secretariat to continue reporting on relevant developments relating to electronic commerce. The Secretariat was also requested to compile information on cloud computing, identity management, use of mobile devices in electronic commerce and single window facilities, including by organizing or participating in colloquia, workshops and other meetings, and to report to the Commission at a future session.

At its fiftieth session (Vienna, 10–14 November) [A/CN.9/828], Working Group IV continued discussions on the draft provisions on electronic transferable records, and was informed of the recent developments in technical assistance and coordination activities, including the ratification by Montenegro of the Electronic Communications Convention which brought to six the number of States parties, the entry into force of the Regulation on Electronic Identification and Trust Services for Electronic Transactions in the Internal Market (eIDAS Regulation), and a research project on the use of electronic transferable records for supply chain financing at the University of Göteborg (Sweden).

Insolvency law

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] considered the reports by Working Group V (Insolvency Law) on its forty-fourth (Vienna, 16–20 December 2013) [A/CN.9/798] and forty-fifth (New York, 21–25 April 2014) [A/CN.9/803] sessions, as well as the report [A/CN.9/815] of the Fourth International Insolvency Law Colloquium (Vienna, 16–18 December 2013) held as part of the Working Group's forty-fourth session to discuss its work on enterprise group issues and consider future topics, including insolvency issues specific to MSMEs, further to the Commission's 2013 decision [YUN 2013, p. 1341].

The Commission noted that the Working Group had commenced discussions on the cross-border insolvency of multinational enterprise groups and that it had established an open-ended informal group to consider the feasibility of developing a convention on international insolvency issues and to study the issues facing States with respect to adoption of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency [YUN 1997, p. 1379]. With regard to the insolvency of MSMEs, the Commission made reference to the Working Group's conclusion that the mechanisms provided by the Legislative Guide were not sufficient to address all of the needs of such enterprises but solutions for them should be developed in light of the Legislative Guide's key principles, and that a study of insolvency regimes for MSMEs should commence without delay.

The Commission approved the Working Group's mandate with regard to facilitating the cross-border insolvency of multinational enterprise groups, addressing the obligations of directors of enterprise group companies in the period approaching insolvency, and developing model legislative provisions for the recognition and enforcement of insolvency-derived judgements. The Working Group was also urged to continue its study on the feasibility of developing a convention on selected international insolvency issues and on exploring the potential for further adoption of the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency.

At its forty-sixth session (Vienna, 15–19 December) [A/CN.9/829], Working Group V commenced its deliberations based on text concerning the obligations of directors of enterprise group members in the period approaching insolvency [A/CN.9/WG.V/WP.125], the cross-border insolvency of multinational enterprise groups [A/CN.9/WG.V/WP.124] and the recognition and enforcement of insolvency-derived judgements [A/CN.9/WG.V/WP.126]. It considered draft recommendations on directors' obligations; goals and key elements of a cross-border insolvency regime for groups; as well as judgements to be covered by a recognition and enforcement regime, jurisdiction of the originating court, procedures for obtaining recognition and enforcement, and grounds to refuse recognition.

Security interests

The Commission [A/69/17] noted that Working Group VI (Security Interests), at its twenty-fourth (Vienna, 2–6 December 2013) [A/CN.9/796] and twenty-fifth (New York, 31 March–4 April) [A/CN.9/802] sessions, had completed the first reading of a concise draft model law on secured transactions, based on the recommendations of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions adopted by UNCITRAL in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1378] and the General Assembly in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1474], and consistent with all texts prepared by UNCITRAL on secured transactions. The Commission also had before it a Secretariat note entitled "Draft Model Law on Secured Transactions: Security Interests in Non-Intermediated Securities" [A/CN.9/811], which contained the definitions and draft provisions proposed by the Working Group for inclusion in the draft model law. While noting that non-intermediated securities, an important source of business credit particularly for MSMEs, were not addressed in the Secured Transactions Guide or other international instruments, the Commission agreed with the Working Group's proposal.

Acknowledging the importance of modern secured transactions law for the availability and cost of credit, as well as the need for urgent guidance to States, in particular those with developing economies and economies in transition, the Commission expressed its satisfaction for the progress achieved by the Working Group, and requested it to complete the draft model law, including the definitions and provisions on non-intermediated securities, and to submit it, together with a guide to enactment, for adoption by the Commission.

The Commission noted the coordination efforts of the UNCITRAL Secretariat in the field of security interests, including the revision of the World Bank Insolvency and Creditor Rights Standard. The Commission also reiterated its call to the European Commission to ensure a coordinated approach to the issue of the law applicable to third-party effects of assignments of receivables. Taking note of the statement of the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (Unidroit) on the status of the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment (the Cape Town Convention) and its protocols, it renewed the Secretariat's mandate to continue cooperation with Unidroit in the area of security interests.

At its twenty-sixth session (Vienna, 8–12 December) [A/CN.9/830], Working Group VI continued the preparation of a model law on secured transactions consistent with relevant UNCITRAL texts. The Working Group considered a Secretariat note entitled "Draft Model Law on Secured Transactions" [A/CN.9/WG.VI/ WP.61 & Add.1–3]. The Secretariat was requested to revise the draft Model Law based on the Working Group's deliberations and decisions.

Public-private partnerships

The Commission [A/69/17] had before it a report of the UNCITRAL colloquium on possible future work in the area of public-private partnerships (PPPs) (Vienna, 3–4 March) [A/CN.9/821], organized in response to its 2013 request [YUN 2013, p. 1345]. The colloquium considered a discussion paper proposing recommendations [A/CN.9/819] and key topics for inclusion in a legislative text on PPPs [A/CN.9/820], prepared by the Secretariat following studies and consultations organized since 2013. The colloquium endorsed the conclusion that effective and efficient PPPs would be crucial for sustainable economic and social development, and agreed that a main issue for consideration was the potential contribution of an UNCITRAL legislative text to enabling effective PPPs. The Commission noted that the colloquium identified 15 topics for consideration in developing some legislative text on PPPs, and agreed to discuss further the possibility of future work in PPPs at its forty-eighth (2015) session.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

The Commission [A/69/17] considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/810] on the promotion of ways and means of ensuring a uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL legal texts, which provided information on the status of the case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT) system and an update on work undertaken by the Secretariat on digests of case law relating to the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (United Nations Sales Convention) [YUN 1980, p. 1131] and the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration (Model Law on Arbitration) [YUN 1985, p. 1192].

The Commission noted the increasing number of UNCITRAL legal texts represented in the CLOUT system. As at 5 May, 143 issues of compiled case-law abstracts from the CLOUT system had been prepared for publication, dealing with 1,351 cases related to, inter alia, the United Nations Sales Convention, the Model Law on Arbitration, the New York Convention [YUN 1958, p. 391], the 1974 Convention on the Limitation Period in the International Sale of Goods [YUN 1974, p. 853] and the Convention on the Limitation Period in the International Sale of Goods as amended by the Protocol of 11 April 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 1132]. The Commission was informed that the network of national correspondents, which began its five-year mandate in 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1314], was composed of 64 correspondents representing 31 countries.

UNCITRAL was also informed of the progress in preparing the digest of case law on the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and work to update the current version of the digest on the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration, and noted the translation of the third revision of the digest on the United Nations Sales Convention into all UN official languages. It welcomed progress made in upgrading the UNCITRAL website to facilitate the functioning of the CLOUT database, and reiterated its appeal to States to assist the Secretariat in the search for additional funding to ensure proper maintenance and development of CLOUT.

Technical cooperation and assistance

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/818] describing technical cooperation and assistance activities undertaken since 2013. The Commission noted that the number of activities remained limited due to lack of resources, and reiterated its appeal for either multi-year or specific-purpose contributions to the UNCITRAL Trust Fund for Symposia to enable the Secretariat to meet the increasing number of requests from developing countries and economies in transition. The Secretariat was requested to continue exploring alternative sources of extrabudgetary funding, and was encouraged to seek cooperation with international organizations and bilateral partners in the provision of technical assistance.

The Commission also considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/808] on the activities undertaken by the UNCITRAL Regional Centre for Asia and the Pacific, which were aimed at promoting international trade norms and standards in commercial transactions, in particular those elaborated by UNCITRAL; providing technical assistance to States with respect to the adoption and uniform interpretation of UNCITRAL texts; ensuring coordination with international and regional organizations active in trade law reform projects in the region; and functioning as a channel of communication between States in the region and UNCITRAL. With the growing number of initiatives and requests, the Regional Centre expanded its activities both geographically, to South Asia and the Persian Gulf region, and thematically, to cross-border insolvency and PPPs. The Commission stressed the importance of the mandate assigned to the Regional Centre and requested the Secretariat to pursue consultations regarding the possible establishment of other UNCITRAL regional centres.

Coordination and cooperation

UNCITRAL [A/69/17] considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/809] prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 34/142 [YUN 1979, p. 1132] and providing information on the activities of other international organizations active in the field of international trade law in which the UNCITRAL Secretariat had participated since 2013. The Commission noted that the Secretariat had engaged in activities with several organizations, including the UN/CEFACT, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Inter-Agency Cluster on Trade and Productive Capacity, the Hague Conference on Private International Law (the Hague Conference), OECD, Unidroit, the World Bank and the World Trade Organization. The Secretariat participated in expert groups, working groups and plenary meetings of those organizations to share information and expertise and avoid duplication of work.

The Commission took note of the statements made on behalf of Unidroit, the Organization of American States (OAS), the International Maritime Organization, the World Bank, the International Development Law Organization and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. The importance of joint projects with OAS and the World Bank in the area of security interests for countries in the Latin American and Caribbean region was particularly highlighted, as was the need for a closer and more substantive cooperation with the Hague Conference and Unidroit.

Future work

The Commission [A/69/17] considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/807 & A/CN.9/816] on current and possible future UNCITRAL activities in legislative development and activities designed to support the implementation, use and understanding of UNCITRAL texts, as well as proposed prioritization and allocation of UNCITRAL resources. It agreed that prevailing resource constraints necessitated prioritization of activities, confirmed that the Working Groups would continue to develop legislative texts and associated guidance in existing subject areas until its forty-eighth (2015) session, and agreed not to express itself on future work extending beyond its forty-eighth session.

The Commission reaffirmed its decisions to hold a colloquium to recognise the thirty-fifth anniversary of the United Nations Sales Convention in 2015 and a colloquium to explore possible future work in the field of electronic commerce, addressing identity management, trust services, electronic transfers and cloud computing (see p. 1529). It also reaffirmed its support for formal working methods as the primary method of legislative development. Emphasizing the importance of support activities, the Commission encouraged the Secretariat to build partnerships and alliances with relevant international organizations as well as bilateral and multilateral donors and non-governmental organizations, and reaffirmed the Secretariat's mandate to explore alternative sources of financing.

UNCITRAL approved the holding of its forty-eighth session in Vienna from 29 June to 16 July 2015. It also approved the schedule of meetings for its working groups between its forty-seventh and forty-eighth sessions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/496], adopted resolution 69/115 without vote [agenda item 76].

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its forty-seventh session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its belief that the progressive modernization and harmonization of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity, common interest and respect for the rule of law, to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to peace, stability and the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the Commission,

Reiterating its concern that activities undertaken by other bodies in the field of international trade law without adequate coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law,

Reaffirming the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field, in particular to avoid duplication of efforts, including among organizations formulating rules of international trade, and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law, and to continue, through its secretariat, to maintain close cooperation with other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law;

2. Commends the Commission for the finalization of the draft convention on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration;

3. Notes with appreciation that the secretariat of the Commission has taken steps to establish and operate the repository of published information under the Rules on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration ("transparency repository"), in accordance with article 8 of the Rules on Transparency, as a pilot project temporarily funded by voluntary contributions, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly informed of developments regarding the funding and budgetary situation of the transparency repository;

4. Takes note with interest of the decisions taken by the Commission as regards its future work and the progress made by the Commission in its work in the areas of arbitration and conciliation, online dispute resolution, electronic commerce, insolvency law, security interests and international trade law aimed at reducing the legal obstacles faced by micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises throughout their life cycle, endorses the Commission's decision to compile information on cloud computing, identity management, the use of mobile devices in electronic commerce and single window facilities, including by organizing, co-organizing or participating in colloquiums, workshops and other meetings within available resources, also endorses the Commission's decision to hold a colloquium and other events in 2015 to celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods within available resources, and commends the efforts undertaken by the Commission to improve the management of its resources while maintaining and increasing its current levels of activity, including through avoiding overlap of work and the use of informal working methods where appropriate, with due regard to the formal negotiation process;

5. Notes with appreciation the projects of the Commission aimed at promoting the uniform and effective application of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention), done at New York on 10 June 1958, including the preparation of a guide entitled "UNCITRAL Secretariat Guide on the New York Convention", in close cooperation with international experts;

6. Endorses the efforts and initiatives of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, aimed at increasing coordination of and cooperation on legal activities of international and regional organizations active in the field of international trade law and at promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels in this field, and in this regard appeals to relevant international and regional organizations to coordinate their legal activities with those of the Commission, to avoid duplication of efforts and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law;

7. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with technical cooperation and assistance in the field of international trade law reform and development, and in this connection:

(a) Welcomes the initiatives of the Commission towards expanding, through its secretariat, its technical cooperation and assistance programme, and in that respect encourages the Secretary-General to seek partnerships with State and non-State actors to increase awareness about the work of the Commission and facilitate the effective implementation of legal standards resulting from its work;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for carrying out technical cooperation and assistance activities and for providing assistance with legislative drafting in the field of international trade law, and draws the attention of the Secretary-General to the limited resources that are made available in this field;

(c) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the technical cooperation and assistance activities to take place, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, for the financing of special projects and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in carrying out technical cooperation and assistance activities, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Reiterates its appeal to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the World Bank and regional development banks, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the technical cooperation and assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate with the Commission and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission in the light of the relevance and importance of the work and programmes of the Commission for the promotion of the rule of law at the national and international levels and for the implementation of the international development agenda, including the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and the preparation of sustainable development goals;

8. Recalls the importance of adherence to the rules of procedure and methods of work of the Commission, including transparent and inclusive deliberations, taking into account the summary of conclusions as reproduced in annex III to the report on the work of its forty-third session, requests the Secretariat to issue, prior to meetings of the Commission and of its working groups, a reminder of those rules of procedure and methods of work with a view to ensuring the high quality of the work of the Commission and encouraging the assessment of its instruments, and in this regard recalls its previous resolutions related to this matter;

9. Welcomes the activities of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Regional Centre for Asia and the Pacific, in the Republic of Korea, towards reaching out and providing technical assistance with international trade law reforms to developing countries in the region, notes with satisfaction expressions of interest from other States in hosting regional centres of the Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly informed of developments regarding the establishment of regional centres, in particular their funding and budgetary situation;

10. Appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General, in order to enable renewal of the provision of that assistance and to increase expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and its working groups, necessary to build local expertise and capacities in those countries to put in place a regulatory and enabling environment for business, trade and investment;

11. Decides, in order to ensure full participation of all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, its consideration of granting travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

12. Endorses the conviction of the Commission that the implementation and effective use of modern private law standards in international trade are essential for advancing good governance, sustained economic development and the eradication of poverty and hunger and that the promotion of the rule of law in commercial relations should be an integral part of the broader agenda of the United Nations to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, including through the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General;

13. Notes the rule of law briefing and the rule of law panel discussion held at the forty-seventh session of the Commission and the comments transmitted by the Commission highlighting its role in promoting the rule of law, in particular through facilitating access to justice, pursuant to paragraph 14 of General Assembly resolution 68/116;

14. Notes with satisfaction that, in paragraph 8 of the declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels, adopted by consensus as resolution 67/1 of 24 September 2012, Member States recognized the importance of fair, stable and predictable legal frameworks for generating inclusive, sustainable and equitable development, economic growth and employment, generating investment and facilitating entrepreneurship and, in this regard, commended the work of the Commission in modernizing and harmonizing international trade law and that, in paragraph 7 of the declaration, Member States expressed their conviction that the rule of law and development were strongly inter-related and mutually reinforcing;

15. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in conformity with resolutions of the General Assembly on documentation-related matters, which, in particular, emphasize that any invitation to limit, where appropriate, the length of documents should not adversely affect either the quality of the presentation or the substance of the documents, to bear in mind the particular characteristics of the mandate and functions of the Commission in the progressive development and codification of international trade law when implementing page limits with respect to the documentation of the Commission;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue the publication of Commission standards and the provision of summary records of the meetings of the Commission, including committees of the whole established by the Commission for the duration of its annual session, relating to the formulation of normative texts, and takes note of the Commission's decision to continue the trial use of digital recordings, in parallel with summary records where applicable, with a view to assessing the experience of using digital recordings and, on the basis of that assessment, taking a decision at a future session regarding the possible replacement of summary records by digital recordings;

17. Recalls paragraph 48 of its resolution 66/246 of 24 December 2011 regarding the rotation scheme of meetings between Vienna and New York;

18. Notes with appreciation the work of the Secretariat on the system for the collection and dissemination of case law on Commission texts in the six official languages of the United Nations (the CLOUT system), notes the resource-intensive nature of the system, acknowledges the need for further resources to sustain and expand it, and in this regard welcomes efforts by the Secretariat towards building partnerships with interested institutions, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to assist the secretariat of the Commission in raising awareness as to the availability and usefulness of the CLOUT system in professional, academic and judiciary circles and in securing the funding required for the coordination and expansion of the system and the establishment, within the secretariat of the Commission, of a pillar focused on the promotion of ways and means of interpreting Commission texts in a uniform manner;

19. Stresses the importance of promoting the use of texts emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to conventions, enacting model laws and encouraging the use of other relevant texts;

20. Welcomes the continued work of the Secretariat on digests of case law related to Commission texts, including their wide dissemination, as well as the continuing increase in the number of abstracts available through the CLOUT system, in view of the role of the digests and the CLOUT system as important tools for the promotion of the uniform interpretation of international trade law, in particular by building local capacity of judges, arbitrators and other legal practitioners to interpret those standards in the light of their international character and the need to promote uniformity in their application and the observance of good faith in international trade;

21. Recalls its resolutions affirming the importance of high-quality, user-friendly and cost-effective United Nations websites and the need for their multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment, commends the fact that the website of the Commission is published in the six official languages of the United Nations, and welcomes the continuous efforts of the Commission to maintain and improve its website, including by developing new social media features, in accordance with the applicable guidelines.

Other questions

Rule of law at the national and international levels

In July, pursuant to the Declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 67/1 [YUN 2012, p. 1319], the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/68/213/Add.1] which addressed the linkages between the rule of law, human rights, peace and security and development, and identified key institutions for developing such linkages further. The Secretary-General recalled that at its high-level meeting, the Assembly had decided to pursue its work in developing further the linkages between the rule of law and the three pillars of the United Nations—peace and security, human rights and development—and requested him to propose ways and means in that respect.

Following consultations which involved all regional groups and yielded responses from more than 70 Member States and 20 UN entities, the report analysed how the rule of law related to and furthered each of the three pillars, which were framed around three fundamental freedoms that the United Nations must promote: freedom from fear to address peace and security challenges; freedom from want to further development; and freedom to live in dignity to promote human rights and the rule of law. The Secretary-General pointed out that the rule of law was the vehicle for the promotion and protection of the common normative framework underpinning the three pillars, which required that legal processes, institutions and substantive norms were consistent with human rights, including the core principles of equality under the law, accountability before the law and fairness in the protection and vindication of rights.

The report examined the relationship between the rule of law and each of the three pillars through the intergovernmental process and provided evidence of their interdependence in such areas as ensuring due process and equality before the law, advancing economic, social and cultural rights and the right to development, and dealing with a legacy of serious violations of humanitarian law and gross human rights violations; the rule of law in conflict prevention, in armed conflict and in post-conflict situations; transnational threats such as terrorism and organized crime; as well as protection of land and property, and exploitation of natural resources. It emphasized the importance of respect for the United Nations Charter, enhancing access to justice and strengthening sound legal frameworks, with a particular focus on the role of legal identity and on transparency and accountability to counter corruption. The report further outlined institutional means of strengthening those linkages through international adjudicative mechanisms (such as ICJ and the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea) and international financial institutions (including the World Bank Group, the International Monetary Fund, the World Trade Organization and regional development banks), as well as the United Nations and national institutions.

The Secretary-General recommended that the high-level meeting on the rule of law at the national and international levels and the present report be followed up with periodic consideration of the rule of law and its linkages with the three pillars of the United Nations, for example through a comprehensive discussion in plenary meeting, in a Main Committee or through the establishment of a subsidiary body. He further proposed that the Assembly consider a closer interaction with the existing subsidiary bodies such as the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law or the International Law Commission; developing a plan of action or a strategy on the subject; elaborating guidance, principles of standards on specific issues related to the rule of law; as well as pursuing further stakeholder consultations.

Also in July, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/116 [YUN 2013, p. 1349], the Secretary-General submitted his annual report [A/69/181] on strengthening and coordinating UN rule-of-law activities, which highlighted developments in strengthening the rule of law at the national and international levels over the preceding year and provided information on the measures taken to enhance coordination and coherence within the United Nations with regard to the rule of law. The report also outlined UN activities to enhance access to justice, in view of the General Assembly's focus during its sixty-ninth session on the subtopic "Sharing States' national practices in strengthening the rule of law through access to justice".

The report summarized activities to foster the rule of law at the international level relating to codification, development, promotion and implementation of an international framework of norms and standards; action by international and hybrid courts and tribunals; and non-judicial dispute resolution and accountability mechanisms such as commissions of inquiry and fact-finding missions. The Secretary-General noted that UN support in conflict and post-conflict situations at the national level involved progressive restoration of the rule of law, including security institutions capable of protecting the lives and rights of all persons, as well as the functioning of justice systems that addressed serious violations of human rights and provided redress to victims.

Efforts continued to enhance coordination and coherence within the UN system and to improve the effectiveness of system-wide responses to crisis situations through the establishment of the Rights up Front mechanism. The Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General, was expanded to include 20 entities and continued to ensure a strategic approach to the broader rule-of-law work of the United Nations, by supporting Member States' deliberations on incorporating the rule of law in the post-2015 development agenda (see p. 960), facilitating exchanges on a wide range of activities through inter-agency coordination mechanisms, and engaging the business community in mobilizing support for the rule of law under the Secretary-General's "Business for the Rule of Law" initiative launched in September 2013.

Its efforts were complemented by the global focal point for the police, justice and corrections areas in the rule of law in post-conflict and other crisis situations—a Headquarters-based field support mechanism coordinated by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the United Nations Development Programme and including 12 UN entities and 4 international organizations. Rule-of-law support was provided to host country authorities in 19 countries, including joint assessment visits, joint planning and partnerships, deployment of personnel and advice on programme structures and funding streams. The global focal point deployed 13 joint missions and 8 technical experts, and supported joint planning efforts in 11 countries, including Burundi, Chad, Côte d'Ivoire, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Sierra Leone. Rule-of-law initiatives supported by the global focal point led to a comprehensive national sector-wide reform programme in Somalia; a justice and rule-of-law workplan in Afghanistan; a multi-annual programme to support the justice sector in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and a rule-of-law strategy in Burundi.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/502], adopted resolution 69/123 without vote [agenda item 82].

The rule of law at the national and international levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 68/116 of 16 December 2013,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, which are indispensable foundations of a more peaceful, prosperous and just world, and reiterating its determination to foster strict respect for them and to establish a just and lasting peace all over the world,

Reaffirming that human rights, the rule of law and democracy are interlinked and mutually reinforcing and that they belong to the universal and indivisible core values and principles of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the need for universal adherence to and implementation of the rule of law at both the national and international levels and its solemn commitment to an international order based on the rule of law and international law, which, together with the principles of justice, is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States,

Bearing in mind that the activities of the United Nations carried out in support of efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate the rule of law are undertaken in accordance with the Charter, and stressing the need to strengthen support to Member States, upon their request, in the domestic implementation of their respective international obligations through enhanced technical assistance and capacity-building,

Convinced that the advancement of the rule of law at the national and international levels is essential for the realization of sustained economic growth, sustainable development, the eradication of poverty and hunger and the protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and acknowledging that collective security depends on effective cooperation, in accordance with the Charter and international law, against transnational threats,

Reaffirming the duty of all States to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations and to settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered, in accordance with Chapter VI of the Charter, and calling upon States that have not yet done so to consider accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in accordance with its Statute,

Convinced that the promotion of and respect for the rule of law at the national and international levels, as well as justice and good governance, should guide the activities of the United Nations and its Member States,

Recalling paragraph 134 (e) of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

1. Recalls the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels, held during the high-level segment of its sixty-seventh session, and the declaration adopted at that meeting, takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 41 of the declaration, and requests the Sixth Committee to continue its consideration of ways and means of further developing the linkages of the rule of law and the three pillars of the United Nations;

2. Acknowledges the efforts to strengthen the rule of law through voluntary pledges, encourages States that have not done so to consider making pledges, individually or jointly, based on their national priorities, and also encourages those States that have made pledges to exchange information, knowledge and best practices in this regard;

3. Takes note of the annual report of the Secretary-General on strengthening and coordinating United Nations rule of law activities;

4. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification, and reaffirms further that States shall abide by all their obligations under international law;

5. Also reaffirms the imperative of upholding and promoting the rule of law at the international level in accordance with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

6. Welcomes the dialogue initiated by the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General with Member States on the topic “Promoting the rule of law at the international level”, and calls for the continuation of this dialogue with a view to fostering the rule of law at the international level;

7. Stresses the importance of adherence to the rule of law at the national level and the need to strengthen support to Member States, upon their request, in the domestic implementation of their respective international obligations through enhanced technical assistance and capacity-building;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure greater coordination and coherence among the United Nations entities and with donors and recipients, and reiterates its call for greater evaluation of the effectiveness of such activities, including possible measures to improve the effectiveness of those capacity-building activities;

9. Calls, in this context, for dialogue to be enhanced among all stakeholders with a view to placing national perspectives at the centre of rule of law assistance in order to strengthen national ownership, while recognizing that rule of law activities must be anchored in a national context and that States have different national experiences in the development of their systems of the rule of law, taking into account their legal, political, socioeconomic, cultural, religious and other local specificities, while also recognizing that there are common features founded on international norms and standards;

10. Calls upon the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to systematically address, as appropriate, aspects of the rule of law in relevant activities, including the participation of women in rule of law related activities, recognizing the importance of the rule of law to virtually all areas of United Nations engagement;

11. Expresses full support for the overall coordination and coherence role of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group within the United Nations system within existing mandates, supported by the Rule of Law Unit, under the leadership of the Deputy Secretary-General;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, in a timely manner, his next annual report on United Nations rule of law activities, in accordance with paragraph 5 of its resolution 63/128 of 11 December 2008;

13. Recognizes the importance of restoring confidence in the rule of law as a key element of transitional justice;

14. Recalls the commitment of the Member States to take all necessary steps to provide fair, transparent, effective, non-discriminatory and accountable services that promote access to justice for all, including legal aid, encourages further dialogue and the sharing of national practices in strengthening the rule of law through access to justice, including with regard to legal aid, where appropriate, in both criminal and civil proceedings, and in this regard stresses the need to intensify the assistance extended to Governments upon their request;

15. Stresses the importance of promoting the sharing of national practices and of inclusive dialogue, and invites the Secretary-General to propose ways for Member States to voluntarily exchange best national practices on the rule of law and to include, in his annual report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, an analytical summary of the thematic debates held pursuant to resolutions 61/39 of 4 December 2006, 62/70 of 6 December 2007, 63/128 of 11 December 2008, 64/116 of 16 December 2009, 65/32 of 6 December 2010, 66/102 of 9 December 2011 and 67/97 of 14 December 2012;

16. Encourages the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to accord high priority to rule of law activities;

17. Invites the International Court of Justice, the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and the International Law Commission to continue to comment, in their respective reports to the General Assembly, on their current roles in promoting the rule of law;

18. Invites the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit to continue to interact with Member States in a regular, transparent and inclusive manner, in particular in informal briefings;

19. Stresses the need for the Rule of Law Unit to carry out its tasks in an effective and sustainable manner and the need to provide it with reasonable means required to that effect;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled “The rule of law at the national and international levels”, and invites Member States to focus their comments in the upcoming Sixth Committee debate on the subtopic “The role of multilateral treaty processes in promoting and advancing the rule of law”.

On 16 July, the Economic and Social Council, by resolution 2014/19 (see p. 1432), recommended to the General Assembly the adoption of a draft resolution on the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice in the United Nations development agenda beyond 2015.

On 18 December, in its resolution 69/195 (ibid.) on that topic, the Assembly recognized the cross-cutting nature of the rule of law, crime prevention and criminal justice and development; underscored that discussions on the post-2015 development agenda should take into account respect for and promotion of the rule of law and that crime prevention and criminal justice had an important role in that regard; and encouraged Member States to give due consideration to the rule of law in their deliberations on the post-2015 development agenda. The Assembly stressed the importance of a comprehensive approach drawing on the work of UNODC to support criminal justice reforms and strengthen the rule of law; requested UNODC to continue assisting Member States in developing rule-of-law strategies; and invited the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme network to include issues of the rule of law in their work programmes.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on United Nations Charter

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/115 [YUN 2013, p. 1352], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its sixty-ninth session (New York, 18–26 February) [A/69/33], considered proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security; the peaceful settlement of disputes; working methods of the Committee and identification of new subjects; and the status of the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

Regarding the maintenance of international peace and security, the Committee considered the question of the implementation of Charter provisions relating to assistance to third States affected by sanctions. Many delegations stated that the issue of sanctions remained of concern and questioned whether the suffering inflicted on vulnerable groups in countries targeted by sanctions was a legitimate means to effectuate changes in action; sanctions were not applicable as a response to all violations of international obligations. Concern was also expressed over the imposition of unilateral sanctions in violation of international law. For other delegations, sanctions applied in accordance with the UN Charter and in a targeted fashion, as practised by the Security Council, had reduced the possibility of adverse consequences for civilian populations and third parties. Some delegations reaffirmed that the establishment of a mechanism for evaluating unintended effects of targeted sanctions and assisting affected States should be considered; others expressed the view that the affected individuals had the right to be heard and represented. Several delegations emphasized that sanctions should be applied in conformity with the UN Charter and international law, and imposed as a last resort when there existed a threat to international peace and security, a breach of peace or an act of aggression; and that the Security Council's power to implement sanctions should not exceed its own authority under the UN Charter or under international law. Several delegations expressed the view that sanctions should have clearly defined objectives and a specified time frame, be held under continuous review and lifted as soon as their objectives had been achieved; and that their imposition must be based on a substantive assessment of the country concerned, with compelling evidence that it was not respecting international resolutions.

Delegations expressed support for examining the question of the provision of possible payment of compensation to targeted or third States for damage caused by unlawfully imposed sanctions and reiterated that the International Law Commission should consider the legal consequences of sanctions imposed arbitrarily by the Security Council. Some delegations noted that none of the sanctions committees had been approached by Member States on the issue of special economic problems arising from the implementation of sanctions since 2003. They also noted that in 2013, neither the Assembly nor the Economic and Social Council had found it necessary to take any action relating to that matter. Therefore, the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions was not a matter of priority for the Committee and did not merit further discussion.

The Special Committee had before it Libya's revised proposal on strengthening the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security [YUN 1998, p. 1233]. Libya indicated its willingness to discuss the proposal.

The Special Committee also discussed a revised working paper entitled "Open-ended working group to study the proper implementation of the Charter of the United Nations with respect to the functional relationship of its organs", submitted by Venezuela in 2011 [YUN 2011, p. 1301]. Several delegations reiterated their concern that the Security Council had encroached on the functions and powers of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council by addressing issues that fell within their competence. Some delegations expressed support for the Venezuela proposal and maintained that the Special Committee was a proper forum to consider it; others maintained that the responsibilities of the principal UN organs were adequately defined in the UN Charter and that the proposal duplicated other efforts aimed at revitalizing the Organization. Venezuela announced that it would continue to hold bilateral discussions on the proposal.

The Special Committee considered a revised working paper submitted by Belarus and the Russian Federation in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1445], in which it was recommended that an advisory opinion be requested from ICJ as to the legal consequences of the resort to the use of force by States without prior authorization by the Security Council, except in the exercise of the right to self-defence. The co-sponsors pointed out that the advisory opinion would contribute to the clarification of the provisions of the Charter regarding the use of force and to the strengthening of the principle of the non-use of force. Some delegations maintained that the issue of the use of force had been adequately addressed in the Charter and, consequently, that the proposal could not be supported. Following informal consultations, the co-sponsors introduced a further revised working paper for consideration at the Committee's next session. The Committee decided to keep the proposal on its agenda.

The Special Committee also considered a working paper entitled "Strengthening of the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness: adoption of recommendations", submitted by Cuba in 2012 [YUN 2012, p. 1324]. Some delegations stated that the working paper merited continued study because it would contribute to achieving a balance between the mandates of the General Assembly and the Security Council; others stressed the need to conduct a legal examination of the implementation of Charter provisions pertaining to the Assembly's functions and powers. Cuba indicated that it would submit a revised working paper at the Committee's next session.

During the general exchange of views on the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes", delegations reiterated that, in accordance with the mandate of the Special Committee, the item should remain on its agenda. The central role of ICJ in the peaceful settlement of disputes was highlighted, and the significance of the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, approved by the General Assembly in 1982 and annexed to its resolution 37/10 [YUN 1982, p. 1372], was recalled. Cuba announced its intention to present a proposal on the issue of the peaceful settlement of disputes at the Committee's next session. The Russian Federation proposed establishing a website on the peaceful settlement of disputes and updating the United Nations' 1992 Handbook on the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes between States. Some delegations expressed the view that such endeavours could contribute to revitalizing the Special Committee's work, while others questioned the added value and feasibility of those proposals.

Delegations commended ongoing Secretariat efforts to update the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council and eliminate the backlog in the preparation of those publications. Concerning the Repertory, progress had been made in preparing studies pertaining to volume III, Supplements 7 to 9, covering the period from 1985 to 1999. With regard to the Repertoire, the Secretariat had completed Supplement 17, covering the period from 2010 to 2011, and commenced work on Supplement 18, covering the years 2012 and 2013. The Special Committee recommended that the Assembly call on the Secretary-General to continue efforts to update the two publications and make them available in all language versions, and to address, on a priority basis, the question of the backlog in the preparation of volume III of the Repertory.

Regarding the identification of new subjects, some delegations suggested examining legal matters relating to the Organization's reform and revitalization; others called for the consideration of the proposals submitted at previous sessions. It was also suggested that no new subjects should be explored until the Special Committee had disposed of its current agenda items and that no new proposals should be considered that might envisage amendments to the Charter or duplicate efforts being made elsewhere in the Organization. Some delegations supported the proposal introduced by Ghana in 2010 [YUN 2010, p. 1349] on including a new subject entitled "Principles and practical measures/mechanism for strengthening and ensuring more effective cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations on the maintenance of international peace and security in areas of conflict prevention and resolution and post-conflict peacebuilding and peacekeeping, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations". Ghana subsequently revised the title of the proposal to "Strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and regional arrangements/organizations in the peaceful settlement of disputes" and indicated that it would submit a working paper on the proposal for further discussion at the Committee's next session.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 68/115 [YUN 2013, p. 1352], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/69/119] on implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions. The report highlighted operational changes that had occurred due to the shift in focus in the Security Council and its sanctions committees towards targeted sanctions; recent developments concerning the activities of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in the area of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; and Secretariat arrangements related to assistance to such States.

Also in response to General Assembly resolution 68/115, the Secretary-General reported in July [A/69/159] on progress made in updating the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

With respect to the Repertory, the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly note the progress made in the preparation of Repertory studies and their posting on the Internet in English, French and Spanish; consider the recommendations of the Special Committee—including the increased use of the UN internship programme, expanded cooperation with academic institutions for the preparation of the studies and the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in updating the publication; note the progress made towards the elimination of the backlog of the Repertory through use of the trust fund; and strongly encourage States to make additional contributions to it.

With regard to the Repertoire, the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly note the progress made towards updating the publication and posting it in electronic form in all language versions on the UN website; call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire and express appreciation for the contributions received; note the sponsoring by Switzerland, on a voluntary basis, of an associate expert to assist in the preparation of the Repertoire; and encourage other States to consider providing such assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/501], adopted resolution 69/122 without vote [agenda item 81].

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", by which it adopted the texts on coordination and the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations, which are annexed to that resolution,

Concerned about the special economic problems confronting certain States arising from the carrying-out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against other States, and taking into account the obligation of Members of the United Nations under Article 49 of the Charter to join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Council,

Recalling the right of third States confronted with special economic problems of that nature to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems, in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter,

Recalling also that the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, and reaffirming its authority and independence,

Mindful of the adoption of the revised working papers on the working methods of the Special Committee,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council",

Recalling paragraphs 106 to 110, 176 and 177 of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Mindful of the decision of the Special Committee in which it expressed its readiness to engage, as appropriate, in the implementation of any decisions that might be taken at the high-level plenary meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly in September 2005 that concerned the Charter and any amendments thereto,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998, 54/107 of 9 December 1999, 55/157 of 12 December 2000, 56/87 of 12 December 2001, 57/25 of 19 November 2002, 58/80 of 9 December 2003 and 59/45 of 2 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 64/115 of 16 December 2009 and the document entitled "Introduction and implementation of sanctions imposed by the United Nations" annexed thereto,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 2014,

Noting with appreciation the work done by the Special Committee to encourage States to focus on the need to prevent and to settle peacefully their disputes which are likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 17 to 25 February 2015;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 2015, in accordance with paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 50/52 of 11 December 1995:

(a) To continue its consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context, to consider other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted or which may be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 2015;

(b) To continue to consider, in an appropriate, substantive manner and framework, including the frequency of its consideration, the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter based on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General and the proposals submitted on the question;

(c) To keep on its agenda the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

(d) To consider, as appropriate, any proposal referred to it by the General Assembly in the implementation of the decisions of the high-level plenary meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly in September 2005 that concern the Charter and any amendments thereto;

(e) To continue to consider, on a priority basis, ways and means of improving its working methods and enhancing its efficiency and utilization of resources with a view to identifying widely acceptable measures for future implementation;

4. Invites the Special Committee, at its session in 2015, to continue to identify new subjects for consideration in its future work with a view to contributing to the revitalization of the work of the United Nations;

5. Also invites the Special Committee, at its session in 2015, to consider the question of an appropriate commemoration of the seventieth anniversary of the Charter;

6. Notes the readiness of the Special Committee to provide, within its mandate, such assistance as may be sought at the request of other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly in relation to any issues before them;

7. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

8. Recognizes the important role of the International Court of Justice, the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, in adjudicating disputes among States and the value of its work, as well as the importance of having recourse to the Court in the peaceful settlement of disputes, notes that, consistent with Article 96 of the Charter, the Court's advisory jurisdiction may be requested by the General Assembly, the Security Council or other authorized organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, and requests the Secretary-General to distribute, in due course, the advisory opinions requested by the principal organs of the United Nations as official documents of the United Nations;

9. Commends the Secretary-General for the progress made in the preparation of studies for the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, including the increased use of the internship programme of the United Nations and further expanded cooperation with academic institutions for this purpose, as well as the progress made towards updating the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council;

10. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by Member States to the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory, as well as the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire;

11. Reiterates its call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory so as to further support the Secretariat in carrying out the effective elimination of that backlog; voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire; and the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in the updating of the two publications;

12. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue his efforts towards updating the two publications and making them available electronically in all their respective language versions;

13. Notes with concern that the backlog in the preparation of volume III of the Repertory, although slightly reduced, has not been eliminated, and calls upon the Secretary-General to address that issue effectively and on a priority basis, while commending the Secretary-General for progress made in reducing the backlog;

14. Reiterates the responsibility of the Secretary-General for the quality of the Repertory and the Repertoire, and with regard to the Repertoire calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to follow the modalities outlined in paragraphs 102 to 106 of his report of 18 September 1952;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session a report on both the Repertory and the Repertoire;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to brief the Special Committee at its next session on the information referred to in paragraph 12 of his report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, under the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization", a report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Teaching and study of international law

In response to General Assembly resolution 68/110 [YUN 2013, p. 1354], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/69/516 & Add.1] on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, which covered implementation of the Programme in 2014. Activities included the holding of the fiftieth session of the International Law Seminar (Geneva, 7–25 July) and the convening of the International Law Fellowship Programme (The Hague, 30 June–8 August).

Lectures, seminars and study visits were organized by the UN Office of Legal Affairs (OLA). The Office organized regional courses in international law, including one for Africa (Addis Ababa, 7 April–2 May). Due to the increasing demand for international law training, OLA considered permanent venues for regional courses in international law for Africa, Asia-Pacific, and Latin America and the Caribbean. The United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law had been accessed by almost 1 million individuals and institutions in 193 Member States since its creation in 2008. It offered almost 350 lectures on a broad range of subjects relating to international law, including 23 lectures added in 2014, with an extensive online collection of treaties, jurisprudence, publications, scholarly writings, training materials and law journals which could also be viewed on mobile devices since 2013. OLA provided UN legal publications and training materials, upon request, to libraries as well as academic and other training institutes in developing countries and continued disseminating them, together with other legal information, through the Internet. In response to Assembly resolution 68/110, OLA provided guidance to the African Institute of International Law in Arusha in building its research library for African scholars and practitioners as well as for its training seminars on specific topics of international law and African Union law for government officials and prac-tioners. It also continued to research and collect legal materials, and maintained 23 websites.

The report also outlined activities planned for 2015 and provided administrative and financial implications of UN participation in the Programme during 2014 and 2015.

The Advisory Committee on the Programme held its forty-ninth session on 8, 13 and 14 October.

Communication. By a 29 August letter [A/69/524], Mauritania transmitted the African Union's decision encouraging the African Union Commission on International Law to bolster its activities in the development and codification of international law with specific focus on African Union law, and calling on its member States to provide the Commission with information on relevant issues of international law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/497], adopted resolution 69/117 without vote [agenda item 77].

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2099(XX) of 20 December 1965, in which the General Assembly established the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law to contribute towards a better knowledge of international law as a means of strengthening international peace and security and promoting friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Reaffirming that the Programme of Assistance is a core activity of the United Nations and that it has provided the foundation for the efforts of the United Nations to promote a better knowledge of international law for nearly half a century,

Recognizing the major contribution of the Programme of Assistance to the teaching and dissemination of international law for the benefit of lawyers in all countries, legal systems and regions of the world for almost half a century,

Emphasizing the important contribution of the Programme of Assistance, in particular the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law and the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law, to the furtherance of United Nations rule of law programmes and activities,

Reaffirming that the increasing demand for international law training and dissemination activities creates new challenges for the Programme of Assistance,

Recognizing the importance of the Programme of Assistance effectively reaching its beneficiaries, including with regard to languages, while bearing in mind limitations on available resources,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Programme of Assistance and the views of the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, which are contained in the report,

Noting with concern that the activities of the Programme of Assistance, in particular the organization of the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law on a regular basis and the further development of the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law, cannot be sustained with the resources available under the current programme budget, notwithstanding its resolutions 64/113 of 16 December 2009, 65/25 of 6 December 2010, 66/97 of 9 December 2011, 67/91 of 14 December 2012 and 68/110 of 16 December 2013,

Noting with regret that the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law for Asia-Pacific and for Latin America and the Caribbean for 2014 were cancelled owing to insufficient funds and that no United Nations Regional Course in International Law for Latin America and the Caribbean has been held in the past decade,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Convinced that States, international and regional organizations, universities and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme of Assistance and to increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming that in the conduct of the Programme of Assistance it would be desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international and regional organizations, universities, institutions and others,

Reaffirming also the hope that, in appointing highly qualified lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programmes in international law, account would be taken of the need to secure the representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

1. Reiterates its approval of the guidelines and recommendations contained in section III of the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixty-eighth session, in particular those designed to strengthen and revitalize the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law in response to the increasing demand for international law training and dissemination activities;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out the activities specified in his reports in 2015;

3. Also authorizes the Secretary-General to award a minimum of one scholarship in 2015 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea;

4. Further authorizes the Secretary-General to continue and further develop the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law as a major contribution to the teaching and dissemination of international law around the world and to continue to finance this activity from provisions in the regular budget as well as, when necessary, from voluntary financial contributions, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 22 and 23 below;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the activities conducted under the Programme of Assistance and, in particular, for the efforts to strengthen, expand and enhance the international law training and dissemination activities within the framework of the Programme of Assistance in 2014;

6. Notes with serious concern that the provisions of paragraph 7 of resolutions 66/97, 67/91 and 68/110 have not been implemented, and therefore decides to revisit the matter of funding for the Programme of Assistance under the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015, in particular the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law and the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law for the year 2015;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to include additional resources under the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 for the organization of the Regional Courses in International Law for Africa, for Asia-Pacific and for Latin America and the Caribbean each year, and for the continuation and further development of the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in the regular budget, for consideration by the General Assembly, the necessary funding for the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea with effect from the biennium 2016–2017, should voluntary contributions be insufficient for granting at least one fellowship a year;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to consider admitting, for participation in the various components of the Programme of Assistance, candidates from countries willing to bear the entire cost of their participation;

10. Recognizes the importance of the United Nations legal publications prepared by the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, and once again requests the Secretary-General to issue the publications referred to in his previous report in various formats, including hard copy publications, which are essential for developing countries;

11. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General issue the next volume of the United Nations Legislative Series containing materials on the responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts;

12. Appreciates the efforts that were undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs to bring up to date the United Nations legal publications, in particular by the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs for its desktop publishing initiative from 2003 to 2013, which greatly enhanced the timely issuance of its legal publications and made possible the preparation of legal training materials, regrets that none of the publications referred to in the previous report of the Secretary-General was issued in 2014, when desktop publishing was discontinued owing to lack of resources, and recommends that the necessary resources be made available to resume this successful initiative;

13. Requests the Office of Legal Affairs to continue to maintain and expand its websites listed in the annex to the report of the Secretary-General as an invaluable tool for the dissemination of international law materials as well as for advanced legal research;

14. Requests that interns and research assistants be enlisted for the preparation of materials for the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law;

15. Commends the Codification Division for the cost-saving measures undertaken with regard to the International Law Fellowship Programme to maintain the number of fellowships available for this comprehensive international law training programme;

16. Expresses its appreciation to the Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contribution it continues to make to the Programme of Assistance, which has enabled candidates under the International Law Fellowship Programme to attend and participate in the Fellowship Programme in conjunction with courses at the Academy;

17. Notes with appreciation the contributions of the Hague Academy to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of support and a possible increase in their financial contributions, to enable the Academy to carry out its activities, particularly those relating to the summer courses, regional courses and programmes of the Centre for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations;

18. Welcomes the efforts of the Codification Division to revitalize and conduct United Nations Regional Courses in International Law as an important training activity;

19. Expresses its appreciation to Ethiopia for hosting and to Thailand and Uruguay for agreeing to host the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law in 2014, and to Ethiopia, Thailand and Uruguay for agreeing to host the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law for Africa, for Asia-Pacific and, for the first time in over a decade, for Latin America and the Caribbean in 2015, and also expresses its appreciation to Costa Rica for its willingness to host this Regional Course in the future;

20. Expresses its appreciation to the African Union for the valuable contribution it continues to make to the United Nations Regional Course in International Law for Africa, which has enabled participants to attend and participate in the Regional Course and the lectures at the African Union;

21. Once again encourages the Codification Division to cooperate with the African Institute of International Law, dedicated to offering higher learning and research in international law needed for the development of Africa, in the implementation of the relevant activities under the Programme of Assistance;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme of Assistance and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

23. Reiterates its request to Member States and interested organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions, inter alia, for the International Law Fellowship Programme and the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law;

24. Urges, in particular, all Member States and interested organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions for the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law organized by the Codification Division as an important complement to the International Law Fellowship Programme, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible to conduct the Regional Courses on a regular basis;

25. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made voluntary contributions to support the Programme of Assistance;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the implementation of the Programme of Assistance in 2015 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, to submit recommendations regarding the Programme in subsequent years;

27. Concludes once again that voluntary contributions have not proven to be a sustainable method for funding the activities under the Programme of Assistance, in particular the United Nations Regional Courses in International Law and the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law, and that, consequently, there is a need to provide more reliable funding for all its activities, taking into account the conclusion of the Advisory Committee at its forty-ninth session;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law".

Host country relations

At five meetings held in New York (6 February, 22 April, 31 July, 1 October, 4 November), the 19-member Committee on Relations with the Host Country considered the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: entry visas issued by the host country; the question of privileges and immunities; host country activities to assist members of the UN community; transportation: the use of motor vehicles, parking and related matters; and other matters. The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its 4 November meeting, were incorporated into its report [A/69/26]. The Committee expressed appreciation for the host country's efforts to maintain appropriate conditions for delegations and missions accredited to the United Nations and anticipated that all issues raised at its meetings would be settled in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law.

Noting the importance of the observance of privileges and immunities, the Committee emphasized the need to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise in that regard for the normal functioning of accredited delegations and missions. It urged the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as the training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities. In case of violations, the Committee urged the host country to ensure that such cases were investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law.

Considering that the security of missions and the safety of their personnel were indispensable for their effective functioning, the Committee appreciated the host country's efforts to that end and anticipated that the host country would continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the missions' functioning.

The Committee noted that the missions continued to implement the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, which came into force in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338]. It would remain seized of the matter to ensure its proper implementation in a manner that was fair, nondiscriminatory, effective and consistent with international law. It also requested that the host country continue to bring to the attention of New York City officials reports about other problems experienced by permanent missions or their staff, in order to improve the conditions for their functioning and promote compliance with international norms concerning diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States to travel to New York on official UN business, and remained seized of the matter of the host country's failure to issue a visa to a designated permanent representative of a Member State, noting the position of the affected Member State, other Member States and the host country in that regard. It also noted that a number of delegations had requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas, since the existing time frame posed difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in UN meetings. The Committee urged the host country to remove remaining travel restrictions for personnel of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities. It also stressed the importance of permanent missions, their personnel and Secretariat personnel meeting their financial obligations.

The Committee expressed concern over the difficulties experienced by some permanent missions in obtaining suitable banking services, which affected those missions' ability to perform their functions, and welcomed the host country's efforts to facilitate the opening of bank accounts for permanent missions with other financial institutions.

Bank accounts of Permanent Missions

At the meeting of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country on 22 April, the Syrian Arab Republic reiterated its concern raised in previous Committee meetings over the preceding two years about opening a bank account, stressing that a swift solution to the banking issue was needed. At a meeting on 31 July, the Sudan requested consideration of an item on the closure of bank accounts, stating that its mission had no bank account for three years and was unable to function, despite the host country's efforts to find a solution. Subsequently, Cuba raised similar concerns with regard to the transfer of funds to and from its account, which were the subject of its letters addressed to the Chair of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country on 27 November 2013 [A/AC.154/405] and on 30 September 2014 [A/AC.154/406].

The host country responded that it had no authority to direct a financial institution to open an account but took up the issues concerned with the relevant banks, and noted that the United Nations Federal Credit Union had begun opening accounts for the permanent missions affected.

On 9 September, Bolivia, on behalf of the Group of 77 and China, introduced to the General Assembly a draft resolution [A/68/L.42/Rev.1] addressing the issue of decisions made over previous years by several banking institutions in the City of New York to close bank accounts of Member and Observer States' missions and refuse to continue to provide services to them, which negatively affected their normal functioning. According to Bolivia, the objective of the draft resolution was to achieve a long-term solution to the problem through additional measures by the host country to assist accredited missions and their staff.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 September [meeting 107], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/306 [draft: A/68/L.42/Rev.1] without vote [agenda items 124 & 125].

Enhancement of the administration and financial functioning of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and its relevant provisions,

Recalling the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations of 26 June 1947, approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 169(II) of 31 October 1947, and the obligations it establishes for the host country,

Taking into consideration the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 18 April 1961, and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations adopted by the General Assembly on 13 February 1946,

Recognizing the problems that have arisen as a result of the decisions made on a number of occasions by several banking institutions in regard to the closing of the accounts of some Permanent Missions to the United Nations and those of their staff members accredited to the United Nations and of their family members,

Noting with concern the difficulties experienced by such Permanent Missions and individuals as a result of such account closures,

Stressing that the Governments of Member and Observer States, the Permanent Missions and their staff, as well as the United Nations at its Headquarters and the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system should have appropriate banking services for the normal functioning of their facilities in order to discharge their duties,

Bearing in mind the need for the Permanent Missions and the United Nations as a whole to benefit from appropriate banking services based on mutual trust and respect, especially in the light of the latest actions taken by some banking institutions in this regard,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to review and report to the General Assembly, within 150 days following the adoption of the present resolution, any impediments or obstacles with respect to the accounts opened by the Permanent Missions of Member and Observer States to the United Nations or their staff in the City of New York, and the impact that any such impediments or obstacles have on the adequate functioning of their offices, and to this end invites Member and Observer States to provide the Secretary-General with relevant information that will facilitate the elaboration of such a report;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the financial relations of the Secretariat with the banking institutions in the City of New York, in the context of the report mentioned in paragraph 1 above;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General, within 120 days of the adoption of the present resolution, to provide Member and Observer States with information on alternative options regarding banking services in the City of New York so as to enable them and their Permanent Missions to adequately manage and maintain their accounts, assessed budgetary contributions, voluntary contributions, transfers and other financial responsibilities directly related to their membership in the United Nations;

4. Requests the host country to take, as soon as possible, additional measures to assist the Permanent Missions accredited to the United Nations and their staff to obtain appropriate banking services;

5. Stresses the importance of ensuring the confidentiality of the personal data and information of persons affected by the closure of accounts by the banking institutions, invites the host country to submit information on the norms and regulations applicable to the banking system regarding the confidentiality of personal data and information, and requests the Secretary-General to include such information in the report referred to in paragraph 1 above;

6. Decides to keep this matter under review during the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly.

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/510], adopted resolution 69/128 without vote [agenda item 168].

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recalling also that, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971, the Committee should consider, and advise the host country on, issues arising in connection with the implementation of the Headquarters Agreement,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 55 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations and the observance of their privileges and immunities, which is an issue of great importance, are in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States, requests the host country to continue to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise and to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions, and urges the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities and if violations occur to ensure that such cases are properly investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law;

3. Notes the problems experienced by some Permanent Missions to the United Nations in connection with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, and notes that the Committee shall remain seized of the matter, with a view to continuing to maintain the proper implementation of the Parking Programme in a manner that is fair, non-discriminatory, effective and therefore consistent with international law;

4. Requests the host country to consider removing the remaining travel restrictions imposed by it on staff of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, and in this regard notes the long-standing positions of affected States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

5. Recalls article IV of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations, and notes the concerns expressed by some delegations concerning the denial and delay of entry visas to representatives of Member States;

6. Notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will continue to enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States pursuant to article IV, section 11, of the Headquarters Agreement and in a timely manner, to enable travel to New York on United Nations business, that the Committee remains seized of the matter of the host country's not issuing a visa to a designated Permanent Representative of a Member State, and that the Committee anticipates that the host country will continue to enhance efforts, including visa issuance, to facilitate the participation of representatives of Member States in other United Nations meetings, as appropriate;

7. Also notes that a number of delegations have requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States since the time frame poses difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in United Nations meetings, and invites the host country to inform the Committee, as appropriate, of efforts to address such difficulties;

8. Notes with concern the difficulties that continue to be experienced by some Permanent Missions to the United Nations in obtaining suitable banking services, welcomes the continued efforts of the host country to facilitate the opening of bank accounts for those Permanent Missions, and also welcomes the adoption of General Assembly resolution 68/306 of 9 September 2014 in this respect;

9. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and expects that the issues raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law, including the Headquarters Agreement;

10. Affirms the importance of the Committee being in a position to fulfil its mandate and meet on short notice to deal with urgent and important matters concerning the relations between the United Nations and the host country, and in that connection requests the Secretariat and the Committee on Conferences to accord priority to requests from the Committee on Relations with the Host Country for conference-servicing facilities for meetings of that Committee that must be held while the General Assembly and its Main Committees are meeting, without prejudice to the requirements of those bodies and on an "as available" basis;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country, and recalls that the Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Committee issues of mutual concern relating to the implementation of the Headquarters Agreement and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations;

12. Requests the Committee to continue its work in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) and, in this framework, to consider additional appropriate measures to enhance the work of the Committee and its effectiveness;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

Law of the sea

In 2014, the United Nations commemorated the twentieth anniversary of the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. During the year, the Organization continued to promote universal acceptance of the Convention and its two implementing Agreements on the implementation of Part XI of the Convention and on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, respectively.

The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratification

In 2014, the number of parties to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea stood at 166. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties

The twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (9–13 June) [SPLOS/277] discussed the 2013 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2013, p. 1375]; took note of the report of the Tribunal for 2013 [SPLOS/267] and the report on budgetary matters for the financial periods 2011–2012 and 2013–2014 [SPLOS/268]; adopted two decisions, one on the budgetary matters of the Tribunal for 2015–2016 [SPLOS/275] and one on the conditions of service of the members of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf [SPLOS/276]; decided to remain seized of the matter proposed by the United Kingdom for a mechanism to scrutinize budgets of the Tribunal [SPLOS/271]; and approved the report of the Credentials Committee [SPLOS/274]. Also discussed were the activities of the International Seabed Authority (see p. 1564) and of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf [SPLOS/270] (see p. 1565) during the previous 12 months, as well as the Secretary-General's reports on oceans and the law of the sea for 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1377] and 2014 (see p. 1567). The Meeting elected seven members of the Tribunal for a nine-year term of office commencing on 1 October 2014 to fill the seats of members whose terms of office would expire on 30 September, and elected one member of the Commission from the date of election until 15 June 2017.

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2014, the number of parties to the 1994 Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), adopted by General Assembly resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], stood at 145 [A/69/71/Add.1]. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], sought to address certain difficulties with the seabed mining provisions contained in Part XI of the Convention, which had been raised primarily by the industrialized countries. The Agreement was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement also. Parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit a separate instrument of ratification of or accession to the Agreement.

Agreement relating to conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] reached 81, with the Philippines becoming party during the year [A/69/71/Add.1]. Referred to as the Fish Stocks Agreement, it entered into force on 11 December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1232].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/109 [draft: A/69/L.30 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 74 (b)].

Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its annual resolutions on sustainable fisheries, including resolution 68/71 of 9 December 2013, and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (the Convention), and bearing in mind the relationship between the Convention and the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (the Agreement),

Noting with satisfaction that 16 November 2014 marked the twentieth anniversary of the entry into force of the Convention,

Welcoming the ratifications of and accessions to the Agreement and the fact that a growing number of States, entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have taken measures, as appropriate, towards the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement, in order to improve their management regimes,

Noting with satisfaction the upcoming twentieth anniversary of the opening for signature of the Agreement on 4 December 1995 at New York, as well as the upcoming twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (the Code), and noting in this regard that a conference will be held in Vigo, Spain, for this purpose,

Welcoming the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and its Committee on Fisheries, and recognizing in particular the Code and other related instruments, including the international plans of action, which set out principles and global standards of behaviour for responsible practices for conservation of fisheries resources and the management and development of fisheries, as well as the 2005 Rome Declaration on Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing,

Welcoming also the outcomes, including the decisions and recommendations, of the thirty-first session of the Committee on Fisheries, held in Rome from 9 to 13 June 2014,

Recognizing the importance of data collection through accurate and reliable reporting and monitoring of catches, including by-catch and discards, as a fundamental element of effective fisheries management that provides a basis for scientific stock assessment, and ecosystem approaches to fisheries management,

Noting with concern that effective management of marine capture fisheries has been made difficult in some areas by unreliable information and data caused by, inter alia, unreported and misreported fish catch and fishing effort and that this lack of accurate data contributes to overfishing in some areas,

Recognizing the significant contribution of sustainable fisheries to food security, income, wealth and poverty alleviation for present and future generations,

Welcoming in this regard the outcome document of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, entitled "The future we want", as endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 66/288 of 27 July 2012,

Welcoming also in this regard the continuous attention given by the international community to the role of fish and fish products in nutrition and food security, especially noting the importance of the availability of highly nutritious food for low-income populations, and noting in this regard that the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea focused its discussions at its fifteenth meeting, held from 27 to 30 May 2014, on the role of seafood in global food security, and noting also that the Committee on World Food Security of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations at its forty-first session, held from 13 to 17 October 2014, recognized the contribution of fisheries and aquaculture to food security and nutrition,

Recalling that in "The future we want", States were encouraged to give due consideration to implementing the Committee on World Food Security Voluntary Guidelines on the Responsible Governance of Tenure of Land, Fisheries and Forests in the Context of National Food Security, Welcoming in this regard the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of Tenure and Fishing Rights 2015: a global conference on rights-based approaches for fisheries, to be held in Siem Reap, Cambodia, from 23 to 27 March 2015,

Noting the endorsement by the Committee on Fisheries at its thirty-first session of the Voluntary Guidelines for Securing Sustainable Small-scale Fisheries in the Context of Food Security and Poverty Eradication,

Recognizing the urgent need for action at all levels to ensure the long-term sustainable use and management of fisheries resources through the wide application of the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches,

Expressing concern over the current and projected adverse effects of climate change on food security and the sustainability of fisheries, and noting in that regard the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the United Nations Environment Programme,

Reaffirming its commitment to ensuring that conservation and management measures adopted by regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements are based on the best available scientific information,

Deploing the fact that fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to sparsely regulated and heavy fishing efforts, as a result of, inter alia, illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, inadequate flag State control and enforcement, including monitoring, control and surveillance measures, inadequate regulatory measures, harmful fisheries subsidies and overcapacity, as well as inadequate port State control, as highlighted in the report of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations entitled The State of World Fisheries and Aquaculture 2014,

Expressing its support for accelerating work to complete the ongoing negotiations in the World Trade Organization to strengthen disciplines on subsidies in the fisheries sector, including through the prohibition of certain forms of fisheries subsidies that contribute to overcapacity and overfishing,

Concerned that only a limited number of States have taken measures to implement, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,

Recalling the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Particularly concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing continues to constitute a serious threat to fish stocks and marine habitats and ecosystems, to the detriment of sustainable fisheries as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States,

Concerned that some operators increasingly take advantage of the globalization of fishery markets to trade fishery products stemming from illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and make economic profits from those operations, which constitutes an incentive for them to pursue their activities,

Recognizing that effective deterrence and combating of illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing has significant financial and other resource implications,

Recognizing also the role of the Global Record of Fishing Vessels, Refrigerated Transport Vessels and Supply Vessels in the concerted fight against illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing,

Recognizing further the duty provided in the Convention, the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas (the Compliance Agreement), the Agreement and the Code for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag, and vessels flying their flag which provide support to fishing vessels, to ensure that the activities of such fishing and support vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Recognizing the importance of adequately regulating, monitoring and controlling trans-shipment at sea to contribute to combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities,

Noting the obligation of all States, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of living marine resources, and recognizing the importance of coordination and cooperation at the global, regional, subregional and national levels in the areas, inter alia, of marine scientific research, data collection, information-sharing, capacity-building and training for the conservation, management and sustainable development of living marine resources,

Acknowledging the importance of ocean data buoy systems moored in areas beyond national jurisdiction to sustainable development, promoting safety at sea and limiting human vulnerability to natural disasters, due to their use in weather and marine forecasts, fisheries management, tsunami forecasts and climate prediction, and expressing concern that most damage to ocean data buoys, such as moored buoys and tsunameters, frequently results from actions taken by some fishing operations which render the buoys inoperable,

Welcoming in this regard the adoption of measures by States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to protect ocean data buoy systems from the impacts of fishing activities,

Recognizing the need for States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to continue to develop and implement, consistent with international law, effective port State measures to combat overfishing and illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, the critical need for cooperation with developing States to build their capacity, and the importance of cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization in this regard,

Noting with satisfaction the ratifications, acceptances and approval of and accessions to the Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,

Welcoming the convening of the fourth Global Fisheries Enforcement Training Workshop in San José from 17 to 21 February 2014,

Recognizing the efforts of States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to implement its resolution 46/215 of 20 December 1991, in which the General Assembly called for a global moratorium on all large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing, including collaborative fisheries enforcement activities,

Concerned that marine pollution from all sources constitutes a serious threat to human health and safety, endangers fish stocks, marine biodiversity and marine and coastal habitats and has significant costs to local and national economies,

Recognizing that marine debris is a global transboundary pollution problem and that, owing to the many different types and sources of marine debris, different approaches to their prevention and removal are necessary, including identification of such sources,

Noting that the contribution of sustainable aquaculture to global fish supplies continues to respond to opportunities in developing countries to enhance local food security and poverty alleviation and, together with the efforts of other aquaculture-producing countries, will make a significant contribution to meeting future demands in fish consumption, bearing in mind article 9 of the Code,

Reaffirming the importance of sustainable aquaculture to food security, and concerned about the potential effects of genetically engineered aquatic fish species on the health and sustainability of wild fish stocks,

Calling attention to the particular vulnerabilities of small island developing States, other developing coastal States and subsistence fishing communities whose livelihoods, economic development and food security are heavily dependent on sustainable fisheries and will suffer disproportionately if sustainable fisheries are negatively affected,

Welcoming in this regard the third International Conference on Small Island Developing States, held in

Apia from 1 to 4 September 2014, which focused on small island developing States as a special case for sustainable development, in view of their unique and particular vulnerabilities, and considered, inter alia, issues of sustainable fisheries, and calling for the full implementation in this regard of the outcome document, entitled “SIDS Accelerated Modalities of Action (SAMOA) Pathway”,

Calling attention to the circumstances affecting fisheries in many developing States, in particular African States and small island developing States, and recognizing the urgent need for capacity-building, including the transfer of marine technology and in particular fisheries-related technology, to enhance the ability of such States to exercise their rights in order to realize the benefits from fisheries resources and fulfil their obligations under international instruments,

Recognizing the need to adopt, implement and enforce appropriate measures to minimize waste, by-catch and discards, including high-grading, loss of fishing gear and other factors that adversely affect the sustainability of fish stocks and ecosystems and, consequently, can also have harmful effects on the economies and food security of small island developing States, other developing coastal States and subsistence fishing communities,

Recognizing also the need to further integrate ecosystem approaches into fisheries conservation and management and, more generally, the importance of applying ecosystem approaches to the management of human activities in the ocean, and noting in this regard the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem, the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations related to guidelines for the implementation of the ecosystem approach to fisheries management and the importance of this approach to relevant provisions of the Agreement and the Code, as well as decision VII/11 and other relevant decisions of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity,

Recognizing further the economic and cultural importance of sharks in many countries, the biological importance of sharks in the marine ecosystem as key predatory species, the vulnerability of certain shark species to overexploitation, the fact that some are threatened with extinction, the need for measures to promote the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark populations and fisheries, and the relevance of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 1999, in providing guidance on the development of such measures,

Welcoming in this regard the review by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, and its ongoing work in this regard,

Noting with concern that basic data on shark stocks and harvests continue to be lacking and that not all regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have adopted conservation and management measures for directed shark fisheries and for the regulation of by-catch of sharks from other fisheries,

Welcoming science-based measures taken by States to conserve and sustainably manage sharks, and noting in this respect management measures taken by coastal States, including limits on catch or fishing effort, technical measures, including by-catch reduction measures, sanctuaries, closed seasons and areas and monitoring, control and surveillance,

Noting the addition in 2013 of five shark species and two species of manta ray to appendix II to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora,

Noting with concern the continuing practice of the removal of fins from sharks, with the remainder of the carcass being discarded at sea,

Recognizing the importance of marine species occupying low trophic levels in the ecosystem and for food security, and the need to ensure their long-term sustainability,

Expressing concern over continued incidental mortality, in fishing operations, of seabirds, particularly albatrosses and petrels, as well as other marine species, including sharks, fin-fish species, marine mammals and marine turtles, while recognizing considerable efforts by States and through various regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to reduce incidental mortality as a result of by-catch,

Achieving sustainable fisheries

1. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the living marine resources of the world's oceans and seas and the obligations of States to cooperate to this end, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, in particular the provisions on cooperation set out in Part V and Part VII, section 2, of the Convention, and where applicable, the Agreement;

2. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

3. Notes with satisfaction that in “The future we want”, States addressed the sustainable development of fisheries, recognized the significant contribution of fisheries to the three dimensions of sustainable development and stressed the crucial role of healthy marine ecosystems, sustainable fisheries and sustainable aquaculture for food security and nutrition and in providing for the livelihoods of millions of people, and encourages States to implement the commitments made in “The future we want”;

4. Encourages States to give due priority to the implementation of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development (Johannesburg Plan of Implementation) in relation to achieving sustainable fisheries, especially restoring depleted stocks to levels that can produce maximum sustainable yield on an urgent basis and, where possible, not later than 2015, and recalls that in “The future we want”, States committed themselves to intensify their efforts to meet that target and to urgently take the measures necessary to maintain or restore all stocks at least to levels that can produce the maximum sustainable yield, with the aim of achieving those goals in the shortest time feasible, as determined by their biological characteristics, and in order to achieve this, to urgently develop and implement science-based management plans, including by reducing or suspending fishing catch and fishing effort commensurate with the status of the stock, consistent with international law, the applicable international instruments and relevant General Assembly resolutions and guidelines of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

5. Urges States, either directly or through appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations or arrangements, to intensify efforts to assess and address, as appropriate, the impacts of global climate change and ocean acidification on the sustainability of fish stocks and the habitats that support them, in particular the most affected ones;

6. Emphasizes the obligations of flag States to discharge their responsibilities, in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement, to ensure compliance by vessels flying their flag with the conservation and management measures adopted and in force with respect to fisheries resources on the high seas;

7. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply widely, in accordance with international law and the Code, the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches to the conservation, management and exploitation of fish stocks, and also calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

8. Urges States to increase their reliance on scientific advice in developing, adopting and implementing conservation and management measures, and to increase their efforts, including through international cooperation, to promote science for conservation and management measures that apply, in accordance with international law, the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches to fisheries management, enhancing understanding of ecosystem approaches, in order to ensure the long-term conservation and sustainable use of living marine resources, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations as a framework for the improvement and understanding of fishery status and trends;

9. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply stock-specific precautionary reference points, as described in annex II to the Agreement and in the Code, to ensure that populations of harvested stocks and, where necessary, associated or dependent species are maintained at or restored to sustainable levels, and to use these reference points for triggering conservation and management action;

10. Encourages States to apply the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches in adopting and implementing conservation and management measures addressing, inter alia, by-catch, pollution and overfishing, and protecting habitats of specific concern, taking into account existing guidelines developed by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

11. Also encourages States to enhance or develop observer programmes, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, in order to improve data collection on, inter alia, target and by-catch species, which could also assist monitoring, control and surveillance tools, and to take into account standards, forms of cooperation and other existing structures for such programmes as described in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

12. Further encourages States to implement, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, accurate and reliable catch reporting through effective data collection and reporting of catches, including by-catch and discards, reviewing and validating the data, and providing catch information in support of scientific stock assessment and ecosystem approaches to fisheries management;

13. Calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to collect and, where appropriate, report to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations required catch and effort data, and fishery-related information, in a complete, accurate and timely way, including for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks within and beyond areas under national jurisdiction, discrete high seas fish stocks, and by-catch and discards; and, where they do not exist, to establish processes to strengthen data collection and reporting by members of regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, including through regular reviews of member compliance with such obligations, and, when such obligations are not met, require the member concerned to rectify the problem, including through the preparation of plans of action with timelines;

14. Invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to cooperate with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in the implementation and further development of the Fisheries Resources Monitoring System initiative;

15. Reaffirms paragraph 10 of its resolution 61/105 of 8 December 2006, and calls upon States, including through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to urgently adopt and implement measures to fully implement the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks for directed and non-directed shark fisheries, based on the best available scientific information, through, inter alia, limits on catch or fishing effort, by requiring that vessels flying their flag collect and regularly report data on shark catches, including species-specific data, discards and landings, undertaking, including through international cooperation, comprehensive stock assessments of sharks, reducing shark by-catch and by-catch mortality and, where scientific information is uncertain or inadequate, not increasing fishing effort in directed shark fisheries and urgently establishing science-based management measures to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark stocks and to prevent further declines of vulnerable or threatened shark stocks, and encourages the full utilization of dead sharks caught in the context of sustainably managed fisheries;

16. Calls upon States to take immediate and concerted action to improve the implementation of and compliance with existing regional fisheries management organization or arrangement and national measures that regulate shark fisheries and incidental catch of sharks, in particular those measures which prohibit or restrict fisheries conducted solely for the purpose of harvesting shark fins and, where necessary, to consider taking other measures, as appropriate, such as requiring that all sharks be landed with each fin naturally attached;

17. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations with the competence to regulate highly migratory species to strengthen or establish precautionary, science-based conservation and management measures, as appropriate, for sharks taken in fisheries within their convention areas consistent with the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks;

18. Encourages range States and regional economic integration organizations that have not yet done so to become signatories to the Memorandum of Understanding on the Conservation of Migratory Sharks under the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals, and also invites non-range States, intergovernmental organizations and international and national non-governmental organizations or other relevant bodies and entities to consider becoming cooperating partners;

19. Encourages States, as appropriate, to cooperate in establishing non-detriment findings for shared stocks of marine species listed in appendices I and II to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, consistent with the concepts and non-binding guiding principles contained in resolution Conf. 16.7 on non-detriment findings adopted by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora at its sixteenth meeting, in 2013;

20. Urges States to eliminate barriers to trade in fish and fisheries products which are not consistent with their rights and obligations under the World Trade Organization agreements, taking into account the importance of the trade in fish and fisheries products, particularly for developing countries;

21. Recalls that in "The future we want", States committed themselves to observing the need to ensure access to fisheries and the importance of access to markets by subsistence, small-scale and artisanal fisherfolk and women fish workers, as well as indigenous peoples and their communities, particularly in developing countries, especially small island developing States;

22. Urges States and relevant international and national organizations to provide for the participation of small-scale fishery stakeholders in related policy development and fisheries management strategies in order to achieve long-term sustainability for such fisheries, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources, and encourages States to consider promoting, as appropriate, participatory management schemes for small-scale fisheries in accordance with national laws, regulations and practices, as well as the Voluntary Guidelines for Securing Sustainable Small-scale Fisheries in the Context of Food Security and Poverty Eradication of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

23. Encourages States, either directly or through competent and appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations and arrangements, to analyse, as appropriate, the impact of fishing for marine species corresponding to low trophic levels;

24. Welcomes, in this regard, the initiation of further studies by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the impact of industrial fishing activities on species corresponding to low trophic levels;

25. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to consider the potential effects of genetically engineered fish species on the health and sustainability of wild fish stocks and on the biodiversity of the aquatic environment and to provide guidance, consistent with the Code, on minimizing harmful impacts in this regard;

26. Also invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in consultation with other relevant international organizations, including the International Maritime Organization, to promote awareness and cooperation to develop and strengthen capacity to prevent, minimize and mitigate the adverse impacts of invasive alien species on biodiversity, including fish stocks;

II

Implementation of the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

27. Calls upon all States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, that have not done so to ratify or accede to the Agreement and in the interim to consider applying it provisionally;

28. Calls upon States parties to the Agreement to effectively implement, as a matter of priority, the provisions of the Agreement through their national legislation and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate;

29. Emphasizes the importance of those provisions of the Agreement relating to bilateral, subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

30. Urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof, to inform, either directly or through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, all States whose vessels fish on the high seas in the same subregion or region of the form of identification issued by those States parties to officials duly authorized to carry out boarding and inspection functions in accordance with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

31. Also urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof, to designate an appropriate authority to receive notifications pursuant to article 21 and to give due publicity to such designation through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement;

32. Invites regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements which have not yet done so to adopt procedures for high seas boarding and inspection that are consistent with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

33. Calls upon States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence over discrete high seas fish stocks, to adopt the measures necessary to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of such stocks in accordance with the Convention and consistent with the Code and the general principles set forth in the Agreement;

34. Invites States to assist developing States in enhancing their participation in regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, including by facilitating access to fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in accordance with article 25, paragraph 1 (b), of the Agreement, taking into account the need to ensure that such access benefits the developing States concerned and their nationals;

35. Invites States and international financial institutions and organizations of the United Nations system to provide assistance according to Part VII of the Agreement, including, if appropriate, the development of special financial mechanisms or instruments to assist developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, including developing their domestically flagged fishing fleet, value-added processing and the expansion of their economic base in the fishing industry, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources;

36. Encourages States, intergovernmental organizations, international financial institutions, national institutions and non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial contributions to the Assistance Fund established under Part VII of the Agreement;

37. Encourages the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat (the Division) to continue their efforts to publicize the availability of assistance through the Assistance Fund;

38. Encourages accelerated progress by States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, regarding the recommendations of the Review Conference on the Agreement, held in New York from 22 to 26 May 2006, and the identification of emerging priorities;

39. Encourages States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to consider implementing, as appropriate, the recommendations of the resumed Review Conference, held in New York from 24 to 28 May 2010;

40. Takes note of the report on the tenth round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, recalls that the resumed Review Conference agreed to keep the Agreement under review through the resumption of the Review Conference at a date no earlier than 2015, and requests the Secretary-General to resume the Review Conference, convened pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement, in New York for one week in the first part of 2016, with a view to assessing the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and to render the necessary assistance and provide such services as may be required for the resumption of the Review Conference;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the resumed Review Conference an updated report, prepared in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and with the assistance of an expert consultant to be hired by the Division to provide information and analysis on relevant technical and scientific issues to be covered in the report, to assist the Review Conference in discharging its mandate under article 36, paragraph 2, of the Agreement, and also in this regard requests the Secretary-General to develop and circulate to States and to regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements a voluntary questionnaire regarding the recommendations made by the Review Conference in 2006 and 2010, in a timely manner, taking into account the specific guidance proposed at the tenth round of informal consultations;

42. Encourages wide participation in the resumed Review Conference, in accordance with article 36 of the Agreement;

43. Recalls paragraph 6 of resolution 56/13 of 28 November 2001, and requests the Secretary-General to convene in March 2015 an eleventh round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement for a duration of two days, to serve primarily as a preparatory meeting for the resumed Review Conference;

44. Requests the Secretary-General to convene an event, during the eleventh round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, in 2015, to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the opening for signature of the Agreement;

45. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare a draft provisional agenda and draft organization of work for the resumed Review Conference and to circulate them at the same time as the provisional agenda for the eleventh round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, 60 days in advance of those consultations;

46. Further requests the Secretary-General to invite States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, not parties to the Agreement, as well as the United Nations Development Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, the World Bank, the Global Environment Facility and other relevant international financial institutions, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, other fisheries bodies, other relevant intergovernmental bodies and relevant non-governmental organizations, in accordance with past practice, to attend the eleventh round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement as observers;

47. Reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations initiate arrangements with States for the collection and dissemination of data on fishing in the high seas by vessels flying their flag at the subregional and regional levels where no such arrangements exist;

48. Also reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations revise its global fisheries statistics database to provide information on straddling fish stocks, highly migratory fish stocks and discrete high seas fish stocks on the basis of where the catch is taken;

III

Related fisheries instruments

49. Emphasizes the importance of the effective implementation of the provisions of the Compliance Agreement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

50. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have not yet become parties to that Agreement to do so as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to consider applying it provisionally;

51. Urges States and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement and promote the application of the Code within their areas of competence;

52. Urges States to develop and implement, as a matter of priority, national and, as appropriate, regional plans of action to put into effect the international plans of action of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

53. Welcomes in this regard the work undertaken by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to improve the response rate for monitoring implementation of the Code and the international plans of action and strategies by developing a web-based questionnaire, and highlights the importance of responding to the questionnaire;

54. Encourages the development of best-practice guidelines for safety at sea in connection with marine fisheries by the competent international organizations;

55. Encourages States to consider signing, ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the Cape Town Agreement of 2012 on the Implementation of the Provisions of the Torremolinos Protocol of 1993 relating to the Torremolinos International Convention for the Safety of Fishing Vessels, 1977;

IV

Illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing

56. Emphasizes once again its serious concern that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing remains one of the greatest threats to fish stocks and marine ecosystems and continues to have serious and major implications for the conservation and management of ocean resources, as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States, and renews its call upon States to comply fully with all existing obligations and to combat such fishing and urgently to take all steps necessary to implement the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing;

57. Recalls in this regard that in "The future we want", States acknowledged that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing deprive many countries of a crucial natural resource and remain a persistent threat to their sustainable development and recommitted to eliminate illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing as advanced in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, and to prevent and combat those practices, including by developing and implementing national and regional action plans in accordance with the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, implementing, in accordance with international law, effective and coordinated measures by coastal States, flag States, port States, chartering nations and the States of nationality of the beneficial owners and others who support or engage in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing by identifying vessels engaged in such fishing and by depriving offenders of the benefits accruing from it, as well as by cooperating with developing countries to systematically identify needs and build capacity, including support for monitoring, control, surveillance, compliance and enforcement systems;

58. Urges States to exercise effective control over their nationals, including beneficial owners, and vessels flying their flag, in order to prevent and deter them from engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities or supporting vessels engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, including those vessels listed by regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements as engaged in those activities, and to facilitate mutual assistance to ensure that such actions can be investigated and proper sanctions imposed;

59. Also urges States to take effective measures, at the national, subregional, regional and global levels, to deter the activities, including illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, of any vessel which undermines conservation and management measures that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in accordance with international law;

60. Calls upon States not to permit vessels flying their flag to engage in fishing on the high seas or in areas under the national jurisdiction of other States, unless duly authorized by the authorities of the States concerned and in accordance with the conditions set out in the authorization, and to take specific measures, including deterring the reflagging of vessels by their nationals, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Agreement and the Compliance Agreement, to control fishing operations by vessels flying their flag;

61. Urges States, individually and collectively through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop appropriate processes to assess the performance of States with respect to implementing the obligations regarding fishing vessels flying their flag set out in relevant international instruments;

62. Reaffirms the need to strengthen, where necessary, the international legal framework for intergovernmental cooperation, in particular at the subregional and regional levels, in the management of fish stocks and in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, in a manner consistent with international law, and for States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to collaborate in efforts to address these types of fishing activities;

63. Urges regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to further coordinate measures for combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, such as through the development of a common list of vessels identified as engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing or the mutual recognition of the illegal, unreported and unregulated vessel lists established by each organization or arrangement;

64. Reaffirms its call upon States to take all necessary measures consistent with international law, without prejudice to a State's sovereignty over ports in its territory and to reasons of force majeure or distress, including the prohibition of vessels from accessing their ports followed by a report to the flag State concerned, when there is clear evidence that they are or have been engaged in or have supported illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, or when they refuse to give information either on the origin of the catch or on the authorization under which the catch has been made;

65. Reaffirms paragraph 53 of its resolution 64/72 of 4 December 2009 with regard to eliminating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing by vessels flying "flags of convenience" and requiring that a "genuine link" be established between States and fishing vessels flying their flags, and urges States operating open registry to effectively control all fishing vessels flying their flag, as required by international law, or otherwise stop open registry for fishing vessels;

66. Encourages States, either directly or through competent and appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations and arrangements, to consider adopting rules, consistent with international law, to ensure that chartering arrangements and practices related to fishing vessels enable compliance with and enforcement of relevant conservation and management measures, so as not to undermine efforts to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

67. Recognizes the need for enhanced port State measures to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and urges States to cooperate, in particular at the regional level and through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt all necessary port measures, consistent with international law taking into account article 23 of the Agreement, and to further promote the development and application of standards at the regional level;

68. Encourages, in this regard, States and regional economic integration organizations that have not yet done so to consider ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing with a view to its early entry into force;

69. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States that have signed the Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing were called upon to expedite procedures for its ratification with a view to its early entry into force;

70. Notes the capacity development programme of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to assist developing countries in strengthening and harmonizing port State measures, including through bilateral, subregional and/or regional coordination;

71. Also notes, in this regard, the workshop held for the Caribbean region in Port of Spain from 24 to 28 March 2014, and the convening of a workshop for the South American region in Montevideo from 29 September to 3 October 2014, and a workshop for the Western African region in the first half of 2015;

72. Encourages strengthened collaboration between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization, taking into account the respective competencies, mandates and experience of the two organizations, to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, particularly in improving the implementation of flag State responsibilities and port State measures;

73. Encourages States, with respect to vessels flying their flag, and port States, to make every effort to share data on landings and catch quotas, and in this regard encourages regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to consider developing open databases containing such data for the purpose of enhancing the effectiveness of fisheries management;

74. Calls upon States to take all measures necessary to ensure that vessels flying their flag do not engage in transshipment of fish caught by fishing vessels engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, through adequate regulation, monitoring and control of trans-shipment of fish at sea, including through additional national measures applicable to vessels flying their flag to prevent such trans-shipment;

75. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt and implement internationally agreed market-related measures in accordance with international law, including principles, rights and obligations established in

World Trade Organization agreements, as called for in the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing;

76. Welcomes the ongoing work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations on the development of best-practice guidelines for catch documentation schemes and traceability, in accordance with its agreed terms of reference and framework principles;

77. Calls upon States to initiate, as soon as possible, work within the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations on the elaboration, in accordance with international law, including the agreements established under the World Trade Organization, of guidelines and other relevant criteria relating to catch documentation schemes, including possible formats;

78. Notes with satisfaction, in this regard, that the Committee on Fisheries, at its thirty-first session, recognized that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations would undertake to elaborate guidelines and other relevant criteria relating to catch documentation schemes, including possible formats, based on the following principles: conformity with the provisions of international law; not creating unnecessary barriers to trade; equivalence; risk-based; reliable; simple, clear and transparent; and electronic if possible, with the aim of adoption at the thirty-second session of the Committee, and that the assessment of schemes and formats would include cost-benefit considerations and take into account catch documentation schemes already implemented by certain of its members as well as regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

79. Encourages information-sharing regarding emerging market- and trade-related measures by States and other relevant actors with appropriate international forums, given the potential implications of these measures for all States, consistent with the established plan of work of the Committee on Fisheries, and taking into account the Technical Guidelines for Responsible Fish Trade of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

80. Acknowledges the development of participatory surveillance activities at sea involving fishing communities in West Africa as a cost-effective way of detecting illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

81. Notes the concern expressed by the Committee on Fisheries at the proliferation of private standards and ecolabelling schemes potentially leading to the creation of trade barriers and restrictions, and also notes the work by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop an evaluation framework to assess the conformity of public and private ecolabelling schemes through the Guidelines for the Ecolabelling of Fish and Fishery Products from Marine Capture Fisheries;

82. Also notes the concerns about possible connections between transnational organized crime and illegal fishing in certain regions of the world, and encourages States, including through the appropriate international forums and organizations, to study the causes and methods of and contributing factors to illegal fishing to increase knowledge and understanding of those possible connections, and to make the findings publicly available, and in this regard takes note of the study issued by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on transnational organized crime in the fishing industry, bearing in mind the distinct legal regimes and remedies under international law applicable to illegal fishing and transnational organized crime;

Monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement

83. Calls upon States, in accordance with international law, to strengthen implementation of or, where they do not exist, adopt comprehensive monitoring, control and surveillance measures and compliance and enforcement schemes individually and within those regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in which they participate, in order to provide an appropriate framework for promoting compliance with agreed conservation and management measures, and further urges enhanced co-ordination among all relevant States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in these efforts;

84. Welcomes the endorsement of the Voluntary Guidelines for Flag State Performance by the Committee on Fisheries at its thirty-first session, and also welcomes the fact that the Committee urged its members to start implementing the Guidelines as soon as possible;

85. Encourages further work by competent international organizations, including subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop guidelines on flag State control of fishing vessels;

86. Urges States, individually and through relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to establish mandatory vessel monitoring, control and surveillance systems, in particular to require that vessel monitoring systems be carried by all vessels fishing on the high seas as soon as practicable, recalling that in paragraph 62 of resolution 63/112 of 5 December 2008 it urged that large-scale fishing vessels be required to carry vessel monitoring systems no later than December 2008, and to share information on fisheries enforcement matters;

87. Calls upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to strengthen or establish, consistent with national and international law, positive or negative lists of vessels fishing within the areas covered by relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in order to promote compliance with conservation and management measures and to identify products from illegal, unreported and unregulated catches, and encourages improved coordination among all States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in sharing and using this information, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

88. Encourages the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in cooperation with States, regional economic integration organizations, the International Maritime Organization and, as appropriate, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to expedite efforts to develop and manage a comprehensive global record of fishing vessels, refrigerated transport vessels and supply vessels, including with a unique vessel identifier system, using, as a first step, the International Maritime Organization Ship Identification Number Scheme for fishing vessels of 100 gross tonnage and above, adopted by the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization in its resolution A.1078(28) of 4 December 2013;

89. Welcomes the continued development of the Global Record of Fishing Vessels, Refrigerated Transport Vessels and

Supply Vessels by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, including its efforts to keep it cost-effective, and encourages States, including through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to provide the necessary data to the Global Record;

90. Also welcomes the agreement that the International Maritime Organization ship identification number should be used as the unique vessel identifier for phase I of the Global Record of Fishing Vessels, Refrigerated Transport Vessels and Supply Vessels and the fact that several regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have made provisions for the International Maritime Organization number to be compulsory in their convention areas for all eligible vessels, and encourages those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements which have not yet done so to do the same;

91. Requests States and relevant international bodies to develop, in accordance with international law, more effective measures to trace fish and fishery products to enable importing States to identify fish or fishery products caught in a manner that undermines international conservation and management measures agreed in accordance with international law, taking into account the special requirements of developing States and the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement, and at the same time to recognize the importance of market access, in accordance with provisions 11.2.4, 11.2.5 and 11.2.6 of the Code, for fish and fishery products caught in a manner that is in conformity with such international measures;

92. Requests States to take the necessary measures, consistent with international law, to help to prevent fish and fishery products caught in a manner that undermines applicable conservation and management measures adopted in accordance with international law from entering international trade;

93. Encourages States to establish and undertake cooperative surveillance and enforcement activities in accordance with international law to strengthen and enhance efforts to ensure compliance with conservation and management measures, and prevent and deter illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

94. Urges States, directly and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to develop and adopt effective monitoring, control and surveillance measures for trans-shipment, as appropriate, in particular at-sea trans-shipment, in order to, inter alia, monitor compliance, to collect and verify fisheries data, and to prevent, deter and eliminate illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, in accordance with international law and, in parallel, to encourage and support the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in studying the current practices of trans-shipment and produce a set of guidelines for this purpose;

95. Expresses its appreciation for financial contributions from States to improve the capacity of the existing voluntary International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network for Fisheries-related Activities, and encourages States to join and actively participate in the Network and to consider supporting, when appropriate, its transformation in accordance with international law into an international unit with dedicated resources to further assist Network members, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

96. Encourages participation in the fifth Global Fisheries Enforcement Training Workshop, to be held in Auckland, New Zealand, in March 2016, hosted by the International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network for Fisheries-related Activities, in order to share information, experiences and technologies, foster coordination and improve skills among enforcement officials;

97. Encourages States, individually and through relevant international bodies, to improve the understanding of the causes and impacts of forced labour and human trafficking in the fishing and aquaculture industries, including processing and related industries, and to further consider actions to combat these practices, including raising awareness of the issue;

VI

Fishing overcapacity

98. Calls upon States to commit themselves to urgently reducing the capacity of the world's fishing fleets to levels commensurate with the sustainability of fish stocks, through the establishment of target levels and plans or other appropriate mechanisms for ongoing capacity assessment, while avoiding the transfer of fishing capacity to other fisheries or areas in a manner that undermines the sustainable management of fish stocks, including those areas where fish stocks are overexploited or in a depleted condition, and recognizing in this context the legitimate rights of developing States to develop their fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks consistent with article 25 of the Agreement, article 5 of the Code and paragraph 10 of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

99. Reiterates its call upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to ensure that the urgent actions required in the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity are undertaken expeditiously and that its implementation is facilitated without delay;

100. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to report on the state of progress in the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity, as provided for in paragraph 48 of the Plan of Action;

101. Calls upon States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence to regulate highly migratory species, urgently to address global fishing capacity for tunas, inter alia, in a way that recognizes the legitimate rights of developing States, in particular small island developing States, to participate in and benefit from such fisheries, taking into account the recommendations of the 2010 Joint Tuna Regional Fisheries Management Organizations International Workshop on RFMO Management of Tuna Fisheries, held in Brisbane, Australia, and the recommendations of the 2011 third joint meeting of tuna regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

102. Encourages those States which are cooperating to establish subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, taking into account the best scientific information available as well as ecosystem approaches and the precautionary approach, to exercise voluntary restraint of fishing effort levels in those areas that will come under the regulation of the future organizations and arrangements until adequate regional conservation and management measures are adopted and implemented, taking into account the need to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the relevant fish stocks and to prevent significant adverse impacts on vulnerable marine ecosystems;

103. Urges States to eliminate subsidies that contribute to overfishing and overcapacity and to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, including by accelerating work to complete World Trade Organization negotiations on fisheries subsidies in accordance with the 2001 Doha Ministerial Declaration to clarify and improve and the 2005 Hong Kong Ministerial Declaration to strengthen disciplines on fisheries subsidies, taking into account the importance of the fisheries sector to developing countries;

104. Recalls, in this regard, that in "The future we want", States reaffirmed their commitment in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation to eliminate subsidies that contribute to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and overcapacity, taking into account the importance of that sector to developing countries, reiterated their commitment to conclude multilateral disciplines on fisheries subsidies that would give effect to the mandates of the World Trade Organization Doha Development Agenda and the Hong Kong Ministerial Declaration to strengthen disciplines on subsidies in the fisheries sector, including through the prohibition of certain forms of fisheries subsidies that contribute to overcapacity and overfishing, recognizing that appropriate and effective special and differential treatment for developing and least developed countries should be an integral part of World Trade Organization fisheries subsidies negotiation, taking into account the importance of the sector to development priorities, poverty reduction and livelihood and food security concerns, and encouraged one another to further improve the transparency and reporting of existing fisheries subsidies programmes through the World Trade Organization and, given the state of fisheries resources, and without prejudicing the Doha and Hong Kong ministerial mandates on fisheries subsidies or the need to conclude those negotiations, to eliminate subsidies that contribute to overcapacity and overfishing and to refrain from introducing new such subsidies or from extending or enhancing existing ones;

Large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing

105. Expresses concern that, despite the adoption of General Assembly resolution 46/215, the practice of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing still exists and remains a threat to living marine resources;

106. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt effective measures, or strengthen existing measures, to implement and enforce the provisions of resolution 46/215 and subsequent resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing in order to eliminate the use of large-scale pelagic drift nets in all seas and oceans, which means that efforts to implement resolution 46/215 should not result in the transfer to other parts of the world of drift nets that contravene the resolution;

107. Also urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt effective measures, or strengthen existing measures, to implement and enforce the present global moratorium on the use of large-scale pelagic drift nets on the high seas, and calls upon States to ensure that vessels flying their flag that are duly authorized to use large-scale drift nets in waters under their national jurisdiction do not use such gear for fishing while on the high seas;

VIII

Fisheries by-catch and discards

108. Urges States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations that have not done so to take action, including with consideration of the interests of developing coastal States and, as appropriate, subsistence fishing communities, to reduce or eliminate by-catch, catch by lost or abandoned gear, fish discards and post-harvest losses, including juvenile fish, consistent with international law and relevant international instruments, including the Code, and in particular to consider measures including, as appropriate, technical measures related to fish size, mesh size or gear, discards, closed seasons and areas and zones reserved for selected fisheries, particularly artisanal fisheries, the establishment of mechanisms for communicating information on areas of high concentration of juvenile fish, taking into account the importance of ensuring the confidentiality of such information, and support for studies and research that will reduce or eliminate by-catch of juvenile fish, and to ensure that these measures are implemented so as to optimize their effectiveness;

109. Welcomes the commitment of States in “The future we want” to enhance action to manage by-catch, discards and other adverse ecosystem impacts from fisheries, including by eliminating destructive fishing practices, consistent with international law, the applicable international instruments and relevant General Assembly resolutions and guidelines of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

110. Calls upon States, either individually, collectively or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to further study, develop and adopt effective management measures, taking into account the best available scientific information on fishing methods, including fish aggregating devices, to minimize by-catch;

111. Also calls upon States, either individually, collectively or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to collect the necessary data in order to evaluate and closely monitor the use of large-scale fish aggregating devices and other devices, as appropriate, and their effects on tuna resources and tuna behaviour and associated and dependent species, to improve management procedures to monitor the number, type and use of such devices and to mitigate possible negative effects on the ecosystem, including on juveniles and the incidental by-catch of non-target species, particularly sharks and turtles, and notes in this regard the measures adopted by different regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

112. Urgently calls upon States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and, where appropriate, other relevant international organizations to develop and implement effective management measures to reduce the incidence of catch and discards of non-target species, including the utilization of selective fishing gear, where appropriate, and to take appropriate measures to minimize waste;

113. Calls upon States and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to adopt or improve measures to assess the impact of their fisheries on species caught as by-catch and to improve the comprehensiveness and accuracy of information and reporting on incidental catch of species caught as by-catch, including through adequate observer coverage and the use of modern technologies, and to provide assistance to developing States to meet data-collection and reporting obligations;

114. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as appropriate, to strengthen or establish data-collection programmes to obtain reliable species-specific estimates of shark, marine turtle, fin-fish, marine mammal and seabird by-catch, and to promote further research on selective fishing gear and practices and on the use of appropriate by-catch mitigation measures;

115. Encourages States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to coordinate in the development and implementation of clear and standardized by-catch data-collection and reporting protocols for non-target species, in particular endangered, threatened and protected species, taking into account best-practice advice from appropriate international organizations and arrangements, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels;

116. Encourages States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to give due consideration to participation, as appropriate, in subregional and regional instruments and organizations with mandates to conserve non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations;

117. Encourages States to strengthen, if necessary, the capacity of those subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate to ensure the adequate conservation of non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations, taking into consideration best practices for non-target species management, and to expedite their ongoing efforts in this regard;

118. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements urgently to implement, as appropriate, the measures recommended in the 2004 Guidelines to Reduce Sea Turtle Mortality in Fishing Operations and the International Plan of Action for Reducing Incidental Catch of Seabirds in Longline Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in order to prevent the decline of sea turtles and seabird populations by minimizing by-catch and increasing post-release survival in their fisheries, including through research and development of gear and bait alternatives, promoting the use of available by-catch mitigation technology, and establishing and strengthening data-collection programmes to obtain standardized information to develop reliable estimates of the by-catch of these species;

119. Urges States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to implement the International Guidelines on Bycatch Management and Reduction of Discards of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

120. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to continue to take urgent action to reduce the by-catch of seabirds, including albatrosses and petrels, in fisheries by adopting and implementing conservation measures consistent with the 2009 best practices technical guidelines of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to support implementation of the International Plan of Action for Reducing Incidental Catch of Seabirds in Longline Fisheries and taking into account the work of the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels and of organizations such as the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources;

IX

Subregional and regional cooperation

121. Urges coastal States and States fishing on the high seas, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and other relevant instruments, to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to ensure the effective conservation and management of such stocks;

122. Urges States fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks on the high seas, and relevant coastal States, where a subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement has the competence to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to give effect to their duty to cooperate by becoming members of such an organization or participants in such an arrangement, or by agreeing to apply the conservation and management measures established by such an organization or arrangement, or to otherwise ensure that no vessel flying their flag is authorized to access the fisheries resources to which regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements or conservation and management measures established by such organizations or arrangements apply;

123. Invites, in this regard, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that all States having a real interest in the fisheries concerned may become members of such organizations or participants in such arrangements, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and the Code;

124. Encourages relevant coastal States and States fishing on the high seas for a straddling fish stock or a highly migratory fish stock, where there is no subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to cooperate to establish such an organization or enter into another appropriate arrangement to ensure the conservation and management of such stocks, and to participate in the work of the organization or arrangement;

125. Welcomes in this regard the convening of the second regional consultation on regional cooperation for sustainable fisheries and aquaculture in the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden, in Cairo, from 22 to 24 June 2014;

126. Notes the adoption on 10 October 2014 of the Caribbean Community Common Fisheries Policy, aimed at promoting cooperation and collaboration for the sustainable development of fisheries and aquaculture in the Caribbean region;

127. Urges signatory States and other States whose vessels fish within the area of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Fishery Resources in the South-East Atlantic Ocean for fishery resources covered by that Convention to become parties to that Convention as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to ensure that vessels flying their flags fully comply with the measures adopted;

128. Encourages further ratifications of, accessions to, acceptances and approvals of the Southern Indian Ocean Fisheries Agreement;

129. Also encourages further ratifications of, accessions to, acceptances and approvals of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of High Seas Fishery Resources in the South Pacific Ocean;

130. Welcomes the recent signatures and ratification of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of High Seas Fisheries Resources in the North Pacific Ocean, and encourages further ratifications, accessions, acceptances and approvals of that Convention;

131. Encourages States that participated in the negotiation of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of High Seas Fisheries Resources in the North Pacific Ocean to fully implement interim voluntary measures adopted in accordance with paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 117, 119, 120, 122 and 123 of resolution 64/72;

132. Welcomes the endorsement of the Agreement for the establishment of the General Fisheries Commission for the Mediterranean, as amended, by the Commission at its thirty-eighth session, held in Rome from 19 to 24 May 2014, and urges those Contracting Parties to the Commission that need to accept the amended Agreement to do so with a view to its early entry into force;

133. Notes the ongoing efforts of the members of the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission to strengthen the functioning of the Commission so that it can more effectively discharge its mandate, and invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to provide members of the Commission with the necessary assistance to this end;

134. Encourages signatory States and States having a real interest to become parties to the Convention for the Strengthening of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission Established by the 1949 Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Costa Rica;

135. Urges the Contracting Parties to the Convention on Future Multilateral Cooperation in the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries that have not yet done so to approve the 2007 Amendment to that Convention with a view to its early entry into effect;

136. Urges further efforts by regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as a matter of priority, in accordance with international law, to strengthen and modernize their mandates and the measures adopted by such organizations or arrangements, and to implement modern approaches to fisheries management, as reflected in the Agreement and other relevant international instruments, relying on the best scientific information available and application of the precautionary approach and incorporating an ecosystem approach to fisheries management and biodiversity considerations, including the conservation and management of ecologically related and dependent species and protection of their habitats, where these aspects are lacking, to ensure that they effectively contribute to long-term conservation and management and sustainable use of living marine resources, and welcomes those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have taken steps in this direction;

137. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations with the competence to conserve and manage highly migratory fish stocks that have not yet adopted effective conservation and management measures in line with the best scientific information available to conserve and manage stocks falling under their mandate to do so urgently;

138. Urges States to strengthen and enhance cooperation among existing and developing regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate, including increased communication and further coordination of measures, such as through the holding of joint consultations, and to strengthen integration, coordination and cooperation by such regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with other relevant fisheries organizations, regional seas arrangements and other relevant international organizations;

139. Urges the five regional fisheries management organizations with competence to manage highly migratory species to continue to take measures to implement the Course of Actions adopted at the second joint meeting of tuna regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and to consider the recommendations of the third joint meeting of tuna regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

140. Invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence to manage straddling fish stocks to share experiences and good practices, for example by considering organizing joint meetings, where appropriate;

141. Urges regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to improve transparency and to ensure that their decision-making processes are fair and transparent, rely on the best scientific information available, incorporate the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, address participatory rights, including through, inter alia, the development of transparent criteria for allocating fishing opportunities which reflects, where appropriate, the relevant provisions of the Agreement, taking due account, inter alia, of the status of the relevant stocks and the respective interests in the fishery;

142. Welcomes the fact that a number of regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have completed performance reviews, and encourages the implementation, as appropriate, of the recommendations of their respective reviews as a matter of priority;

143. Urges States, through their participation in regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have not done so, to undertake, on an urgent basis, performance reviews of those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, initiated either by the organization or arrangement itself or with external partners, including in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, using transparent criteria based on the provisions of the Agreement and other relevant instruments, and taking into account the best practices of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements and, as appropriate, any set of criteria developed by States or other regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, and encourages that such performance reviews include some element of independent evaluation and propose means for improving the functioning of the regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, as appropriate;

144. Calls upon States, through their participation in regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to undertake performance reviews of those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements on a regular basis, and to make the results publicly available, to implement the recommendations of such reviews and to strengthen the comprehensiveness of those reviews over time, as necessary;

145. Recalls that in "The future we want", States recognized the need for transparency and accountability in fisheries management by regional fisheries management organizations and the efforts already made by those regional fisheries management organizations that had undertaken independent performance reviews, called upon all regional fisheries management organizations to regularly undertake such reviews and make the results publicly available, encouraged implementation of the recommendations of such reviews and recommended that the comprehensiveness of those reviews be strengthened over time, as necessary;

146. Urges States to cooperate, taking into account those performance reviews, to develop best-practice guidelines for regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and to apply, to the extent possible, those guidelines to organizations and arrangements in which they participate;

147. Encourages the development of regional guidelines for States to use in establishing sanctions for non-compliance by vessels flying their flag and by their nationals, to be applied in accordance with national law, that are adequate in severity for effectively securing compliance, deterring further violations and depriving offenders of the benefits deriving from their illegal activities, as well as in evaluating their systems of sanctions to ensure that they are effective in securing compliance and deterring violations;

148. Recognizes the importance of ensuring transparency of reporting of fishing activities within regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in order to facilitate efforts to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, as well as the importance of respecting the reporting obligations within those organizations and arrangements, notes in this regard the measures adopted by the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas and the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission, and encourages other regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to consider establishing similar measures;

Responsible fisheries in the marine ecosystem

149. Urges States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to enhance their efforts to apply an ecosystem approach to fisheries, taking into account paragraph 30 (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

150. Encourages States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations, to work to ensure that fisheries and other ecosystem data collection is performed in a coordinated and integrated manner, facilitating incorporation into global observation initiatives, where appropriate;

151. Calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, working in cooperation with other relevant organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the World Meteorological Organization, to adopt, as appropriate, measures to protect ocean data buoy systems moored in areas beyond national jurisdiction from actions that impair their operation;

152. Encourages States to increase scientific research on the marine ecosystem in accordance with international law;

153. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, where appropriate, and other appropriate intergovernmental bodies to cooperate in achieving sustainable aquaculture, including through information exchange, developing equivalent standards on such issues as aquatic animal health and human health and safety concerns, assessing the potential positive and negative impacts of aquaculture, including socioeconomics, on the marine and coastal environment, including biodiversity, and adopting relevant methods and techniques to minimize and mitigate adverse effects, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the 2007 Strategy and Outline Plan for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Aquaculture of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, as a framework for the improvement and understanding of aquaculture status and trends;

154. Calls upon States to take action immediately, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, and consistent with the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, to continue to implement the 2008 International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-Sea Fisheries in the High Seas of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (the Guidelines) in order to sustainably manage fish stocks and protect vulnerable marine ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals, from destructive fishing practices, recognizing the immense importance and value of deep-sea ecosystems and the biodiversity they contain;

155. Recalls that in "The future we want", States committed to enhance actions to protect vulnerable marine ecosystems from significant adverse impacts, including through the effective use of impact assessments, consistent with international law, the applicable international instruments and relevant General Assembly resolutions and guidelines of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

156. Reaffirms the importance of paragraphs 80 to 90 of resolution 61/105, paragraphs 113 to 127 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121 to 136 of resolution 66/68 of 6 December 2011 addressing the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems and the long-term sustainability of deep-sea fish stocks and the actions called for in those resolutions, and emphasizes the need for full implementation by all States and relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements of their commitments under those paragraphs on an urgent basis;

157. Recalls that nothing in the paragraphs of resolutions 61/105, 64/72 and 66/68 addressing the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems prejudices the sovereign rights of coastal States over their continental shelf or the exercise of the jurisdiction of coastal States with respect to their continental shelf under international law as reflected in the Convention, in particular article 77 thereof;

158. Notes in this regard the adoption by coastal States of conservation measures regarding their continental shelf to address the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems, as well as their efforts to ensure compliance with those measures;

159. Welcomes the important progress made by States, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and those States participating in negotiations in establishing a regional fisheries management organization or arrangement competent to regulate bottom fisheries to implement paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105, paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68 and address the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems;

160. Also welcomes the substantial ongoing work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations related to the management of deep-sea fisheries in the high seas and the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems, and urges States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that their actions in sustainably managing deep-sea fisheries and implementing paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105, paragraphs 113 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68 are consistent with the Guidelines;

161. Affirms the importance of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations continuing to undertake work pursuant to paragraphs 135 and 136 of resolution 66/68 as part of its ongoing programme for deep-sea fisheries, and notes in particular the support provided by that Organization to States in implementing the Guidelines and its development of a database on vulnerable marine ecosystems;

162. Recalls its decision in paragraph 137 of resolution 66/68 to conduct a further review of the actions taken by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in response to paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68, with a view to ensuring effective implementation of the measures therein and to make further recommendations, where necessary, recognizes the value of preceding such a review with a two-day workshop as in 2011, and decides to conduct such a review in 2016;

163. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, with full conference services, without prejudice to future arrangements, a two-day workshop in the second half of 2016 in order to discuss implementation of paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68, and to invite States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, other fisheries bodies, other relevant intergovernmental bodies and relevant non-governmental organizations and relevant stakeholders, in accordance with United Nations practice, to attend the workshop;

164. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report similar in scope, length and detail to his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and with the assistance of an expert consultant to be hired by the Division to provide information and analysis on relevant technical and scientific issues to be covered in the report, for consideration by the Assembly at its seventy-first session, on the actions taken by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in response to paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68, and invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to consider making such information publicly available;

165. Notes that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations held a regional workshop on vulnerable marine ecosystems in the North Pacific Ocean, in Tokyo, from 11 to 13 March 2014;

166. Encourages accelerated progress to establish criteria on the objectives and management of marine protected areas for fisheries purposes, and in this regard welcomes the development by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of technical guidelines on marine protected areas and fisheries, and urges coordination and cooperation among all relevant international organizations and bodies;

167. Urges all States to implement the 1995 Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to accelerate activity to safeguard the marine ecosystem, including fish stocks, against pollution and physical degradation, taking into account the increase in oceanic dead zones;

168. Acknowledges the serious environmental impacts on the marine environment caused by abandoned, lost or otherwise discarded fishing gear, and encourages States to take action to reduce such gear, noting the recommendations of the 2009 report by the United Nations Environment Programme and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

169. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to paragraphs 77 to 81 of resolution 60/31 of 29 November 2005 concerning the issue of lost, abandoned or discarded fishing gear and related marine debris and the adverse impacts such debris and derelict fishing gear have on, inter alia, fish stocks, habitats and other marine species, and urges accelerated progress by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in implementing those paragraphs of the resolution;

170. Encourages further studies, including by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, on the impacts of underwater noise on fish stocks and fishing catch rates, as well as associated socioeconomic effects;

171. Calls upon States, including through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to play an active role in global efforts to conserve and sustainably use living marine resources, so as to contribute to marine biological diversity;

172. Encourages States, either individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as appropriate, to identify any spawning and nursery areas for fish stocks under their jurisdiction or competence and, where required, to adopt science-based measures to conserve such stocks during these critical life stages;

173. Recognizes the wide range of impacts of ocean acidification on marine ecosystems, and calls upon States to tackle the causes of ocean acidification and to further study its impacts, and in this regard notes the convening of a workshop on ocean acidification, held in parallel with the third International Conference on Small Island Developing

States, which focused on the ecological, biodiversity and fisheries impacts of ocean acidification;

174. Emphasizes the importance of developing adaptive marine resource management strategies and enhancing capacity-building to implement such strategies in order to enhance the resilience of marine ecosystems to minimize the wide range of impacts on marine organisms and threats to food security caused by ocean acidification, in particular the impacts on the ability of calciferous plankton, coral reefs, shellfish and crustaceans to build shells and skeletal structures and the threats this could pose to protein supply;

XI

Capacity-building

175. Reiterates the crucial importance of cooperation by States directly or, as appropriate, through the relevant subregional and regional organizations, and by other international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations through its FishCode programme, including through financial and/or technical assistance, in accordance with the Agreement, the Compliance Agreement, the Code and its associated international plans of action, to increase the capacity of developing States to achieve the goals and implement the actions called for in the present resolution;

176. Welcomes the ongoing work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in developing guidance on the strategies and measures required for the creation of an enabling environment for sustainable small-scale fisheries, and encourages studies for creating possible alternative livelihoods for coastal communities;

177. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States recognized the importance of building the capacity of developing countries to be able to benefit from the conservation and sustainable use of the oceans and seas and their resources, and in this regard emphasized the need for cooperation in marine scientific research to implement the provisions of the Convention and the outcomes of the major summits on sustainable development, as well as for the transfer of technology, taking into account the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology;

178. Also recalls that in “The future we want”, States urged the identification and mainstreaming by 2014 of strategies that further assist developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, in developing their national capacity to conserve, sustainably manage and realize the benefits of sustainable fisheries, including through improved market access for fish products from developing countries;

179. Encourages increased capacity-building and technical assistance by States, international financial institutions and relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies for fishers, in particular small-scale fishers, in developing countries, and in particular small island developing States, consistent with environmental sustainability, in recognition of the fact that food security and livelihoods may depend on fisheries;

180. Encourages States to cooperate closely, directly or through the United Nations system, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, with a view to enhancing capacity-building of developing States, including coastal States, in particular small island developing States, in the field of fisheries and aquaculture through education and training;

181. Recognizes, in this regard, the work of the United Nations University Fisheries Training Programme in Iceland and its contribution to training for developing States, in particular small island developing States, and emphasizes the need for the continuation and strengthening of this training for developing States;

182. Encourages the international community to enhance the opportunities for sustainable development in developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, small island developing States and coastal African States, by encouraging greater participation of those States in authorized fisheries activities being undertaken within areas under their national jurisdiction, in accordance with the Convention, by distant-water fishing nations in order to achieve better economic returns for developing countries from their fisheries resources within areas under their national jurisdiction and an enhanced role in regional fisheries management, as well as by enhancing the ability of developing countries to develop their own fisheries, as well as to participate in high seas fisheries, including access to such fisheries, in conformity with international law, in particular the Convention and the Agreement, and taking into account article 5 of the Code;

183. Requests distant-water fishing nations, when negotiating access agreements and arrangements with developing coastal States, to do so on an equitable and sustainable basis and to take into account their legitimate expectation to fully benefit from the sustainable use of the natural resources of their exclusive economic zones, to ensure that vessels flying their flag comply with the laws and regulations of the developing coastal States adopted in accordance with international law and to give greater attention to fish processing and fish-processing facilities within the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State to assist the realization of the benefits from the development of fisheries resources and also to the transfer of technology and assistance for monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement within areas under the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State providing fisheries access, taking into account the forms of cooperation set out in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

184. Encourages States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to provide greater assistance and to promote coherence in such assistance for developing States in designing, establishing and implementing relevant agreements, instruments and tools for the conservation and sustainable management of fish stocks, including in designing and strengthening their domestic regulatory fisheries policies and those of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in their regions, and the enhancement of research and scientific capabilities through existing funds, such as the Assistance Fund under Part VII of the Agreement, bilateral assistance, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements assistance funds, the FishCode programme, the World Bank's global programme on fisheries and the Global Environment Facility;

185. Encourages States to provide technical and financial support to developing countries to address their special requirements and challenges in implementing the Guidelines;

186. Calls upon States to promote, through continuing dialogue and the assistance and cooperation provided in accordance with articles 24 to 26 of the Agreement, further ratifications of or accessions to the Agreement by seeking to address, inter alia, the issue of lack of capacity and resources that might stand in the way of developing States becoming parties;

187. Notes with appreciation the compilation, prepared by the Secretariat and available on the website of the Division, of the needs of developing States for capacity-building and assistance in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the sources of available assistance for developing States to address such needs;

188. Encourages States, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant bodies to assist developing States in the implementation of the actions called for in paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105, paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68;

189. Urges States and regional economic integration organizations, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to mainstream efforts to assist developing States, in particular the least developed and small island developing States, with other relevant international development strategies with a view to enhancing international coordination to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, consistent with the duty to ensure the conservation and management of those resources, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to fully mobilize and coordinate the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, including at the level of the regional economic commissions, within their respective mandates;

190. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations to develop strategies to further assist developing States, in particular the least developed and small island developing States, in fully realizing the benefits from the catch of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and in strengthening regional efforts to sustainably conserve and manage such stocks, and, in this regard, to make available such information;

XII

Cooperation within the United Nations system

191. Requests the relevant parts of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and donor agencies to support increased enforcement and compliance capabilities for regional fisheries management organizations and their member States;

192. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue its cooperative arrangements with United Nations agencies on the implementation of the international plans of action and to report to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in his annual report on sustainable fisheries, on priorities for cooperation and coordination in this work;

XIII

Activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

193. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the activities of the Division, which reflect the high standard of assistance provided to Member States by the Division;

194. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities and functions entrusted to him by the Convention, the Agreement and the related resolutions of the General Assembly and to ensure the allocation of appropriate resources to the Division for the performance of its activities under the approved budget for the Organization;

XIV

Seventieth session of the General Assembly

195. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all States, relevant intergovernmental organizations, the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations, and, in connection with the report requested in paragraph 164 of the present resolution, to invite States and regional economic integration organizations and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to submit detailed information to the Secretary-General in a timely manner on actions taken pursuant to paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 and paragraphs 121, 126, 129, 130 and 132 to 134 of resolution 66/68, to facilitate a further review of such actions;

196. Notes the desire to further improve the efficiency of and the effective participation of delegations in the informal consultations concerning the annual General Assembly resolution on sustainable fisheries, decides that the informal consultations on this resolution will be held in a single round of consultations in November for a period of six days, and invites States to submit proposals for inclusion in the text of the resolution to the Coordinator of the informal consultations no later than five weeks before the start of the consultations;

197. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session, under the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea", the sub-item entitled "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments", and to consider the possibility of including this sub-item in future provisional agendas on a biennial basis.

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2014, the Authority, which had 166 members as at 25 May, held its twentieth session (Kingston, Jamaica, 14–25 July). Its subsidiary bodies, namely, the Assembly, the Council, the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee, also met during the session.

The Assembly considered the annual report [ISBA/20/A/2] of the Authority's Secretary-General, which reviewed the Authority's work since the nineteenth session [YUN 2013, p. 1374] and outlined the progress that had been made in the implementation of its work programme for the period 2012–2014. The report also provided the development of the regulatory regime in the Area (the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction), the status of contracts and the relationship between the Authority and other relevant international organizations.

The Assembly held a one-day special event on 22 July to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the establishment of the International Seabed Authority. On the basis of the recommendations of the Council, the Assembly adopted a decision [ISBA/20/A/12] on the Authority's budget for the financial period 2015–2016 in the amount of $15,743,143. The Assembly also approved the revised regulation 21 of the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Sulphides in the Area [ISBA/20/A/10] and the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area [ISBA/20/A/9], as adopted by the Council.

On 21 July, the Council [ISBA/20/C/32] approved seven plans of work for exploration in the Area, including two plans of work for exploration for cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts [ISBA/20/C/24 & 30], three plans of work for exploration for polymetallic nodules [ISBA/20/C/25 & 27 & 29], and two plans of work for exploration for polymetallic sulphides [ISBA/20/C/26 & 28].

The Legal and Technical Commission [ISBA/20/C/20] considered seven applications for approval of plans of work for exploration, and reviewed and evaluated the annual reports submitted by contractors [ISBA/20/LTC/14]. The Commission decided to recommend to the Council that the Commission be requested to formulate draft procedures and criteria for applications for extensions of contracts for exploration. In accordance with the request of the Council [ISBA/17/C/21] [YUN 2011, p. 1324], the Commission continued its preparatory work on the formulation of regulations for the exploration in the Area. The Commission recommended to the Council the amendments to regulation 21 of the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Sulphides in the Area [ISBA/20/C/9], and also recommended to the Council that the Nodules Regulations be aligned with the equivalent provision in the Sulphides and Crusts Regulations.

The Finance Committee [ISBA/20/A/5] took note of the balance of the Endowment Fund in the amount of $3,493,257, and of the balance of the Voluntary Trust Fund in the amount of $237,300, as at 30 June 2014. It also took note of the status of the Working Capital

Fund with advances of $558,245 out of a ceiling of $560,000, as at 30 June 2014. The Committee recommended that the Council and the Assembly of the Authority request the Secretary-General to take necessary steps to adopt the International Public Sector Accounting Standards in the forthcoming biennium. The Committee examined the proposed budget of the Authority for the financial period 2015–2016 [ISBA/20/A/3], and decided to recommend for approval the revised budget in the amount of $15,743,143. It also recommended that the Secretary-General be authorized to transfer between appropriation sections up to 20 per cent of the amount in each section for the financial period 2015–2016.

As at 31 December, the 1998 Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority [YUN 1998, p. 1226], which entered into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1353], had 28 signatories and 36 parties.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its thirty-seventh (10–21 March) and thirty-eighth (29 September–10 October) sessions in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/278].

In the M/V “Virginia G” Case (Panama/Guinea-Bissau) [YUN 2011, p. 1325], the Tribunal delivered judgment on 14 April. The Tribunal found that it had jurisdiction over the dispute and rejected the objections raised by Guinea-Bissau to the admissibility of claims of Panama based on the alleged lack of genuine link between the Virginia G and Panama, the nationality of claims and the alleged failure to exhaust local remedies.

By an order dated 14 April, the President fixed 2 September as the date for the opening of the oral proceedings, with respect to the request for an advisory opinion submitted by the Sub-Regional Fisheries Commission [YUN 2013, p. 1375]. Prior to the opening of the oral proceedings, the Tribunal held initial deliberations on 29 August and 1 September. The hearing took place from 2 to 5 September, during which statements were made at four public sittings by the States Parties and international organizations.

As at 31 December, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, which was adopted by the seventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1361] and entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1235], had 21 signatories and 41 parties.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2014, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its thirty-fourth (27 January–14 March)

[CLCS/83], thirty-fifth (21 July–5 September) [CLCS/85] and thirty-sixth (20 October–28 November) [CLCS/86] sessions in New York.

At its thirty-fourth session, the Commission established subcommissions to consider the submissions made by South Africa in respect of the mainland of the territory of the Republic of South Africa; and by Mauritius in the region of Rodrigues Island. It also decided to establish subcommissions for the consideration of the joint submissions made by the Federated States of Micronesia, Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands concerning the Ontong Java Plateau; and by France and South Africa in the area of the Crozet Archipelago and the Prince Edward Islands. The Commission received presentations of submission from Nicaragua in respect of the southwestern part of the Caribbean Sea, and from the Federated States of Micronesia in respect of the Eauripik Rise. It adopted the recommendations of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf in regard to the partial revised submission made by the Russian Federation in respect of the Sea of Okhotsk on 28 February 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1376]; and the recommendations of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf in regard to the partial submission made by the Government of the Kingdom of Denmark together with the Government of the Faroe Islands in respect of the continental shelf north of the Faroe Islands on 29 April 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1345].

The Commission decided to further defer the establishment of the relevant subcommissions for the consideration of the submissions made by Myanmar; Yemen in respect of south-east of Socotra Island; the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in respect of Hatton-Rockall Area; Ireland in respect of Hatton-Rockall Area; Fiji; Kenya; and Malaysia and Viet Nam in the Southern part of the South China Sea. Regarding the submissions by Ghana, and by Iceland in respect of the Ægir Basin area and the western and southern parts of Reykjanes Ridge, it deferred consideration of the draft recommendations prepared by the subcommissions to its next session in order to provide more time to examine them. The Commission deferred further consideration of the submission by Nicaragua in respect of the southwestern part of the Caribbean Sea. It also decided that the submission made by Federated States of Micronesia in respect of the Eauripik Rise would be addressed by way of a subcommission to be established as queued in the order in which it was received. The Subcommissions reported on the progress of its work, with consideration of the submissions made by the Russian Federation in respect of the Sea of Okhotsk; Uruguay; the Cook Islands in respect of the Manihiki Plateau; Argentina; Ghana; Iceland in respect of the Ægir Basin area and the western and southern parts of Reykjanes Ridge; Denmark in respect of the area north of the Faroe Islands; Pakistan; and Norway in respect of Bouvetøya and Dronning Maud Land.

At its thirty-fifth session, the Commission adopted the recommendations of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf in regard to the submission made by Ghana on 28 April 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1346]. The Commission decided to continue the discussion of the draft recommendations during the forthcoming session, with consideration of the submission made by Iceland in respect of the Ægir Basin area and the western and southern parts of Reykjanes Ridge. The Commission received a presentation of the submission from Kenya, and decided to defer further consideration of the submission and communications from Kenya and Somalia.

The subcommissions decided to continue consideration of the submissions made by Uruguay; the Cook Islands in respect of the Manihiki Plateau; Argentina; Pakistan; Norway in respect of Bouvetøya and Dronning Maud Land; South Africa in respect of the mainland of the territory of the Republic of South Africa; Federated States of Micronesia, Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands in respect of the Ontong Java Plateau; France and South Africa in respect of the area of the Crozet Archipelago and the Prince Edward Islands; and Mauritius in respect of the region of Rodrigues Island at the Commission's thirty-sixth session.

At its thirty-sixth session, the subcommissions decided to continue its consideration of the submissions made by Uruguay; Argentina; Norway in respect of Bouvetøya and Dronning Maud Land; South Africa in respect of the mainland of the territory of the Republic of South Africa; the Federated States of Micronesia, Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands in respect of the Ontong Java Plateau; France and South Africa in respect of the area of the Crozet Archipelago and the Prince Edward Islands; and Mauritius in the region of Rodrigues Island during the thirty-seventh session. Regarding the consideration of the submissions made by the Cook Islands in respect of the Manihiki Plateau and by Pakistan, the subcommissions decided to continue the preparation of its presentation to the Commission on the draft recommendations.

Other developments related to the Convention

Pursuant to resolution 68/70 [YUN 2013, p. 1379] and article 319 of the Convention [YUN 1982, p. 237], the Secretary-General in September submitted his annual report [A/69/71/Add.1] covering developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including the implementation of the resolution. The report reviewed the Convention and its implementing agreements and bodies established thereunder; people at sea; supporting small island developing States and landlocked developing States; marine science and technology; and strengthening international cooperation and coordination. The report further reviewed issues related to ensuring safety and security at sea, including international shipping and maritime security. It examined issues related to developing a sustainable ocean-based economy, including sustainable exploitation of non-living resources, conservation and management of marine living resources, conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity, pressures on the marine environment, and management tools. The report covered issues related to addressing the impacts of climate change and ocean acidification on oceans and their resources, including mitigating the impacts of climate change and adapting to the impacts of climate change; as well as building the capacity of States to implement the legal regime for oceans and seas, including trends in capacity-building and capacity-building activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea (see p. 1568).

The Secretary-General continued to focus on strengthening system-wide coherence on ocean issues taking into account, in particular, the need for coordination and synergies in the delivery of the mandates entrusted to the Organization by Member States.

Assessment of global marine environment

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/70, the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole on the Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socio-economic Aspects ("the Regular Process") held its fifth meeting (New York, 31 March) [A/69/77]. Representatives of 68 Member States, two non-member States, and six intergovernmental organizations and other bodies attended the meeting. The Working Group adopted the agenda and agreed on the organization of work, as proposed by the Co-Chairs. The Working Group considered the status of preparation of the first global integrated marine assessment and took note of the updated outline of the assessment. It also decided that the draft of the assessment would be sent to Member States and peer reviewers in two instalments, with the initial draft chapters being circulated at the end of June and the entire draft being circulated at the end of August. The Working Group considered and agreed on the draft recommendations to the General Assembly and guidance for the Group of Experts and the secretariat of the Regular Process concerning the preparation of the first global integrated marine assessment. The Working Group recommended that the Assembly take note of the updated outline for the first global integrated marine assessment of the Regular Process, as well as the summaries of the workshops held in Grand Bassam, Côte d'Ivoire (28–30 October 2013) and in Chennai, India (27–29 January 2014). The Working Group requested the Bureau to continue its oversight of the progress of work, in order to guide the process towards the completion of the first global integrated marine assessment by 2014. It also recommended that the Assembly recognize the work of the Group of Experts of the Regular Process during the second phase of the first assessment cycle and urge regional groups that had not yet done so to appoint experts to the Group of Experts. The Working Group recommended that the Assembly continue its consideration of the need to ensure predictability and sustainability of financial resources to support the operations of the Regular Process.

Marine biological resources

The Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/24 [YUN 2004, p. 1333], held a meeting (New York, 1–4 April) [A/69/82] to provide the Co-Chairs' summary of discussion at the meeting, as requested in resolution 68/70 [YUN 2013, p. 1379]. The meeting was attended by representatives of 70 Member States, one non-member State, eight intergovernmental organizations and other bodies and eight non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Working Group considered issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction. The Working Group further considered scope and parameters of an international instrument under the Convention; marine genetic resources, including questions on the sharing of benefits; measures such as area-based management tools, including marine protected areas; environmental impact assessments; capacity-building and the transfer of technology; and feasibility of an international instrument under the Convention.

Pursuant to resolution 68/70, the Working Group held its second meeting (New York, 16–19 June) [A/69/177], which was attended by representatives of 79 Member States, two non-member States, 11 intergovernmental organizations and other bodies and nine NGOs. The participants reviewed the importance of addressing the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction. The Working Group further considered overall objective and starting point; legal framework for an international instrument; relationship to other instruments; guiding principles and approaches; scope ratione personae; scope ratione loci; scope ratione materiae; and feasibility of an international instrument under the Convention.

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/70 [YUN 2013, p. 1379], the fifteenth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 27–30 May) [A/69/90] discussed the role of seafood in global food security. The meeting was attended by representatives of 80 States, 15 intergovernmental organizations and other bodies and entities and nine NGOs.

Participants heard presentations from experts and plenary and panel discussions on the role of seafood in global food security, including understanding global food security and the role of seafood therein; the role of seafood in global food security in the context of the three pillars of sustainable development; and opportunities and challenges for the future role of seafood in global food security. Participants further considered inter-agency cooperation and coordination; a process for the selection of topics and panellists so as to facilitate the work of the General Assembly; and issues that could benefit from attention in the future work of the General Assembly on oceans and the law of the sea.

The meeting had before it a March report of the Secretary-General [A/69/71], in response to resolution 68/70, with a view to facilitating discussions on the role of seafood in global food security. It constituted the first part of the report of the Secretary-General on developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea (see p. 1566). The report provided information on the role of seafood in global food security, including seafood as food, seafood and seafood products in food production, and seafood as a source of revenue. It reviewed pressures on the role of seafood in global food security, including unsustainable practices in the exploitation of seafood resources, and other pressures on the marine environment, such as habitat loss, pollution, climate change, ocean acidification and invasive alien species. It also examined activities and initiatives to ensure the continued role of seafood in global food security, as well as the future role of seafood in global food security. The continued contribution of seafood to global food security rested on the ability of States to address, in an effective, efficient and timely manner, pressures and challenges to seafood sustainability, including overexploitation and unsustainable practices in seafood exploitation, marine pollution, habitat destruction, climate change and ocean acidification. It was critical to maintain healthy, productive and resilient ecosystems to support the continued contribution of seafood to food security. It was important for States to take advantage of opportunities to optimize the role of seafood in global food security, including through sustainable aquaculture and small-scale fisheries, as well as responsible technological innovation.

Piracy

The International Maritime Organization (IMO), on 17 July [CL3366/Add.1], issued a formal reminder to all member States and associated members to submit information in relation to MSC-FAL.1/Circ.2

on questionnaire on information on port and coastal State requirements related to privately contracted armed security personnel on board ships. It adopted a resolution on prevention and suppression of piracy, armed robbery against ships and illicit maritime activity in the Gulf of Guinea on 29 November 2013 [A28/Res.1069]. IMO also issued an annual report [MSC.4/Circ.208] on acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships in 2013, including a regional analysis. As reported to IMO, 298 acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships occurred or were attempted during 2013, compared to 341 such cases in 2012 [YUN 2013, p. 1378].

The Security Council addressed the issue of piracy in the sea off the coast of Somalia by resolution 2184(2014) of 12 November (see p. 358).

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2014, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the UN Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and related General Assembly resolutions.

The Division continued to provide information, advice and assistance to States and intergovernmental organizations with a view to promoting better understanding of the Convention and the related agreements, their wider acceptance, uniform and consistent application and effective implementation. It also continued to administer several voluntary trust funds. The Division, in partnership with the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, had been developing a training programme for developing coastal States and researching States responsible for and/or involved in the implementation of the provisions of the Convention on marine scientific research. The Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia approved a proposal from the Division aimed at increasing the understanding of the Convention by Somali parliamentarians and government officials and undertaking a gap analysis of the Somali legislative and policy framework for oceans.

The Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, pp. 130 & 139], had enabled 26 individuals from 26 Member States to be trained. In 2014, Mariam Rita Fawole of Sao Tome and Principe was awarded the twenty-sixth fellowship for the period from April to December 2014. The year 2014 marked the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the United Nations-Nippon Foundation Fellowship Programme. A meeting marking the tenth anniversary of the Fellowship Programme was hosted by the Nippon Foundation of Japan in November 2014 in Tokyo, bringing together more than 80 alumni, as well as academic partners and high-level government and UN officials. The Programme had trained 100 individuals from 60 Member States since 2004.

UN-Oceans

As requested by the General Assembly resolution 67/78 [YUN 2012, p. 1353], UN-Oceans, an inter-agency coordination mechanism on ocean and coastal issues within the United Nations system which was established in 2003 by General Assembly resolution 57/141 [YUN 2002, p. 1322], following the approval by the General Assembly of the revised terms of reference for UN-Oceans [YUN 2013, p. 1379], adopted a biennial work programme for 2014–2015, including a major activity to develop an inventory of mandates and activities of the members of UN-Oceans to facilitate the identification of possible areas for collaboration and synergy.

The twelfth meeting (5 February) and the thirteenth meeting (27 May) of UN-Oceans were held in New York.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/245 [draft: A/69/L.29 & Add.1] by recorded vote (153-1-3) [agenda item 74 (a)].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 68/70 of 9 December 2013, and other relevant resolutions concerning the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (the Convention),

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the reports on the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole on the Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socioeconomic Aspects (the Regular Process), of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction (the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group), of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (the Informal Consultative Process) at its fifteenth meeting and on the twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention,

Noting with satisfaction that 16 November 2014 marked the twentieth anniversary of the entry into force of the Convention, and recognizing the pre-eminent contribution provided by the Convention to the strengthening of peace, security, cooperation and friendly relations among all nations in conformity with the principles of justice and equal rights and to the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples of the world, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, as well as to the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Emphasizing the universal and unified character of the Convention, and reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action and cooperation in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Recognizing the important contribution of sustainable development and management of the resources and uses of the oceans and seas to the achievement of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Noting with satisfaction that, in the outcome document of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 20 to 22 June 2012, entitled “The future we want”, as endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 66/288 of 27 July 2012, States recognized that oceans, seas and coastal areas form an integrated and essential component of the Earth’s ecosystem and are critical to sustaining it, and that international law, as reflected in the Convention, provides the legal framework for the conservation and sustainable use of the oceans and their resources, and stressed the importance of the conservation and sustainable use of the oceans and seas and of their resources for sustainable development, including through their contributions to poverty eradication, sustained economic growth, food security and creation of sustainable livelihoods and decent work, while at the same time protecting biodiversity and the marine environment and addressing the impacts of climate change,

Reiterating the importance of oceans and seas for sustainable development, noting that the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals established by the General Assembly considered the issue of oceans and seas and proposed a goal to conserve and sustainably use the oceans, seas and marine resources for sustainable development, recalling its resolution 68/309 of 10 September 2014, in which it welcomed the report of the Open Working Group and decided that the proposal of the Open Working Group contained in the report shall be the main basis for integrating sustainable development goals into the post-2015 development agenda, while recognizing that other inputs will also be considered, in the intergovernmental negotiation process at the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly, and in this regard reaffirming that international law, as reflected in the Convention, provides the legal framework for the conservation and sustainable use of the oceans and their resources,

Recalling that in “The future we want”, States underscored that broad public participation and access to information and judicial and administrative proceedings were essential to the promotion of sustainable development and that sustainable development required the meaningful involvement and active participation of regional, national and subnational legislatures and judiciaries, and all major groups, and, in this regard, that they agreed to work more closely with major groups and other stakeholders and encouraged their active participation, as appropriate, in processes that contribute to decision-making, planning and implementation of policies and programmes for sustainable development at all levels,

Conscious that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole through an integrated, interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach, and reaffirming the need to improve cooperation and coordination at the national, regional and global levels, in accordance with the Convention, to support and supplement the efforts of each State in promoting the implementation and observance of the Convention and the integrated management and sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reiterating the essential need for cooperation, including through capacity-building and transfer of marine technology, to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the ability of competent international organizations to contribute, at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels, through cooperation programmes with Governments, to the development of national capacity in marine science and the sustainable management of the oceans and their resources,

Recalling that marine science is important for eradicating poverty, contributing to food security, conserving the world’s marine environment and resources, helping to understand, predict and respond to natural events and promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, by improving knowledge, through sustained research efforts and the evaluation of monitoring results, and applying such knowledge to management and decision-making,

Reiterating its deep concern at the serious adverse impacts on the marine environment and biodiversity, in particular on vulnerable marine ecosystems and their physical and biogenic structure, including coral reefs, cold water habitats, hydrothermal vents and seamounts, of certain human activities,

Emphasizing the need for the safe and environmentally sound recycling of ships,

Expressing deep concern at the adverse economic, social and environmental impacts of the physical alteration and destruction of marine habitats that may result from land-based and coastal development activities, in particular those land reclamation activities that are carried out in a manner that has a detrimental impact on the marine environment,

Reiterating its serious concern at the current and projected adverse effects of climate change and ocean acidification on the marine environment and marine biodiversity, and emphasizing the urgency of addressing these issues,

Expressing concern that climate change continues to increase the severity and incidence of coral bleaching throughout tropical seas and weakens the ability of reefs to withstand ocean acidification, which could have serious and irreversible negative effects on marine organisms, particularly corals, as well as to withstand other pressures, including overfishing and pollution,

Reiterating its deep concern at the vulnerability of the environment and the fragile ecosystems of the polar regions, including the Arctic Ocean and the Arctic ice cap, particularly affected by the projected adverse effects of climate change and ocean acidification,

Recognizing the need for a more integrated and ecosystem-based approach to, further study of and the promotion of measures for enhanced cooperation, coordination and collaboration relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction,

Recognizing also that the realization of the benefits of the Convention could be enhanced by international cooperation, technical assistance and advanced scientific knowledge, as well as by funding and capacity-building,

Recognizing further that hydrographic surveys and nautical charting are critical to the safety of navigation and life at sea, environmental protection, including the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems, and the economics of the global shipping industry, and encouraging further efforts towards electronic charting, which not only provides significantly increased benefits for safe navigation and management of ship movement, but also provides data and information that can be used for sustainable fisheries activities and other sectoral uses of the marine environment, the delimitation of maritime boundaries and environmental protection, and noting that under the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974, ships on international voyages are required to carry an electronic chart display and information system, in accordance with the implementation schedule as set out in that Convention,

Recognizing that ocean data buoys deployed and operated in accordance with international law are critical for improving understanding of weather, climate and ecosystems, and that certain types of ocean data buoys contribute to saving lives by detecting tsunamis, and reiterating its serious concern at intentional and unintentional damage to such buoys,

Emphasizing that underwater archaeological, cultural and historical heritage, including shipwrecks and watercraft, holds essential information on the history of humankind and that such heritage is a resource that needs to be protected and preserved,

Noting with concern the continuing problem of transnational organized crime committed at sea, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, the smuggling of migrants, trafficking in persons and illicit trafficking in firearms, and threats to maritime safety and security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, smuggling and terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, and noting the deplorable loss of life and adverse impact on international trade, energy security and the global economy resulting from such activities,

Reiterating the importance of the fair treatment of crew members and its influence on maritime safety,

Recognizing that fibre-optic submarine cables transmit most of the world's data and communications and hence are vitally important to the global economy and the national security of all States, conscious that these cables are susceptible to intentional and accidental damage from shipping and other activities and that the maintenance, including the repair, of these cables is important, noting that these matters have been brought to the attention of States at various workshops and seminars, and conscious of the need for States to adopt national laws and regulations to protect submarine cables and render their wilful damage or damage by culpable negligence punishable offences,

Noting the importance of the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and that it is in the broader interest of the international community that coastal States with a continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles submit information on the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (the Commission), and welcoming the submissions to the Commission by a considerable number of States Parties to the Convention on the outer limits of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, that the Commission has continued to fulfil its role, including of making recommendations to coastal States, and that the summaries of recommendations are being made publicly available,

Noting also that many coastal States Parties have submitted preliminary information indicative of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, as provided for in the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the workload of the Commission and the ability of States, particularly developing States, to fulfil the requirements of article 4 of annex II to the Convention, as well as the decision contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a),

Noting further that some coastal States may continue to face particular challenges in relation to preparing and presenting submissions to the Commission,

Noting that financial and technical assistance may be sought by developing countries for activities in relation to preparing and presenting submissions to the Commission, including through the voluntary trust fund established by the General Assembly in its resolution 55/7 of 30 October 2000 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, and compliance with article 76 of the Convention, as well as other accessible international assistance,

Recognizing the importance of the trust funds established pursuant to resolution 55/7 in facilitating the participation of members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission and in fulfilling the requirements of article 4 of annex II to the Convention, while noting with appreciation the recent contributions made to them,

Reaffirming the importance of the work of the Commission for coastal States and for the international community,

Recognizing that practical difficulties can arise when there is a considerable delay between the preparation of submissions and their consideration by the Commission, including in retaining expertise up to and during the consideration of the submissions by the Commission,

Recognizing also the significant workload of the Commission in view of the large number of submissions already received and a number of submissions yet to be received, which places additional demands and challenges on its members and the secretariat as provided by the Secretary-General of the United Nations through the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat (the Division), and welcoming the decision of the twenty-first Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the workload of the Commission,

Noting with concern the projected timetable of the work of the Commission on the submissions already received by it and those yet to be received, and in this regard noting with appreciation the continued implementation of the decision of the Commission at its thirtieth session concerning the arrangements for its sessions and the meetings of its subcommittees, taking into account the decision of the twenty-first Meeting of States Parties to the Convention,

Recognizing the need to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions under the Convention expeditiously, efficiently and effectively and maintain its high level of quality and expertise,

Noting, in this regard, the decision of the twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the conditions of service of the members of the Commission,

Concerned about the implications of the workload of the Commission for the conditions of service of its members,

Recalling its decision, in resolutions 57/141 of 12 December 2002 and 58/240 of 23 December 2003, to establish a regular process under the United Nations for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socioeconomic aspects, both current and foreseeable, building on existing regional assessments, as recommended by the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and noting the need for cooperation among all States to this end,

Recalling also its decisions, in paragraphs 202, 203 and 209 of resolution 65/37 A of 7 December 2010, regarding the Regular Process, as established under the United Nations and accountable to the General Assembly,

Recalling further that the Division has been designated to provide secretariat support to the Regular Process, including its established institutions,

Recognizing the importance and the contribution of the work of the Informal Consultative Process established by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/33 of 24 November 1999 to facilitate the annual review of developments in ocean affairs by the Assembly,

Noting the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997, 54/33, 65/37 A, 65/37 B of 4 April 2011, 66/231 of 24 December 2011, 67/78 of 11 December 2013 and 68/70, and in this context the substantial increase in activities of the Division, in particular in view of the growing number of requests to the Division for additional outputs and servicing of meetings, its increasing capacity-building activities, the need for enhanced support and assistance to the Commission and the role of the Division as the secretariat of the Regular Process and in relation to its functions as focal point for UN-Oceans,

Reaffirming the importance of the work of the International Seabed Authority (the Authority) in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 (the Part XI Agreement),

Reaffirming also the importance of the work of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (the Tribunal) in accordance with the Convention,

I

Implementation of the Convention and related agreements and instruments

1. Reaffirms its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 68/70, and other relevant resolutions concerning the Convention;

2. Also reaffirms the unified character of the Convention and the vital importance of preserving its integrity;

3. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to fully achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

4. Calls upon States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (the Fish Stocks Agreement);

5. Calls upon States to harmonize their national legislation with the provisions of the Convention and, where applicable, relevant agreements and instruments, to ensure the consistent application of those provisions and to ensure also that any declarations or statements that they have made or make when signing, ratifying or acceding to the Convention do not purport to exclude or to modify the legal effect of the provisions of the Convention in their application to the State concerned and to withdraw any such declarations or statements;

6. Calls upon States Parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to deposit with the Secretary-General charts or lists of geographical coordinates, as provided for in the Convention, preferably using the generally accepted and most recent geodetic datums;

7. Urges all States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in taking measures to protect and preserve objects of an archaeological and historical nature found at sea, in conformity with the Convention, and calls upon States to work together on such diverse challenges and opportunities as the appropriate relationship between salvage law and scientific management and conservation of underwater cultural heritage, increasing technological abilities to discover and reach underwater sites, looting and growing underwater tourism;

8. Acknowledges the recent deposit of instruments of ratification of the 2001 Convention on the Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage, calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to that Convention, and notes in particular the rules annexed to that Convention, which address the relationship between salvage law and scientific principles of management, conservation and protection of underwater cultural heritage among Parties, their nationals and vessels flying their flag;

II

Capacity-building

9. Emphasizes that capacity-building is essential to ensure that States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able to fully implement the Convention, benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas and participate fully in global and regional forums on ocean affairs and the law of the sea;

10. Recalls, in this regard, that in "The future we want", States recognized the importance of building the capacity of developing countries to be able to benefit from the conservation and sustainable use of the oceans and seas and their resources, and in this regard emphasized the need for cooperation in marine scientific research to implement the provisions of the Convention and the outcomes of the major summits on sustainable development, as well as for the transfer of technology, taking into account the Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology adopted by the Assembly of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at its twenty-second session, in 2003;

11. Emphasizes the need for international cooperation for capacity-building, including cross-sectoral cooperation, at national, regional and global levels, to address, in particular, gaps in capacity-building in ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including marine science;

12. Calls for capacity-building initiatives to take into account the needs of developing countries, and calls upon States, international organizations and donor agencies to make efforts to ensure the sustainability of such initiatives;

13. Calls upon donor agencies and international financial institutions to keep their programmes systematically under review to ensure the availability in all States, particularly in developing States, of the economic, legal, navigational, scientific and technical skills necessary for the full implementation of the Convention and the objectives of the present resolution, as well as the sustainable development of the oceans and seas nationally, regionally and globally, and in so doing to bear in mind the interests and needs of landlocked developing States;

14. Encourages intensified efforts to build capacity for developing countries, in particular for the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to improve aids to navigation, hydrographic services and the production of nautical charts, including electronic charts, as well as the mobilization of resources and building of capacity with support from international financial institutions and the donor community;

15. Calls upon States and international institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes, technical partnerships and fellowships, to continue to support and strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research by, inter alia, training personnel to develop and enhance relevant expertise, providing the necessary equipment, facilities and vessels and transferring environmentally sound technologies;

16. Also calls upon States and international institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes, technical partnerships and fellowships, to support and strengthen capacity-building activities in developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, to develop their maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to promote effective compliance with and implementation and enforcement of their responsibilities under international law;

17. Further calls upon States and international institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes, technical partnerships and fellowships, to develop and strengthen capacity-building activities in and to transfer to developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, on mutually agreed terms, and taking into account the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology, environmentally sound technologies to study and minimize the impacts of ocean acidification;

18. Emphasizes the need to focus on strengthening South-South cooperation as an additional way to build capacity and as a cooperative mechanism to further enable countries to set their own priorities and needs and to foster actions to implement such cooperation;

19. Recognizes the importance of the work of the International Maritime Law Institute of the International Maritime Organization, which celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in 2014, as a centre of education and training of government legal advisers, mainly from developing States, confirms its effective capacity-building role in the field of international law, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and financial institutions to make voluntary financial contributions to the budget of the Institute;

20. Also recognizes the importance of the World Maritime University of the International Maritime Organization as a centre of excellence for maritime education and research, confirms its effective capacity-building role in the field of maritime transportation, policy, administration, management, safety, security and environmental protection, as well as its role in the international exchange and transfer of knowledge, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and other bodies to make voluntary financial contributions to the University;

21. Welcomes ongoing activities for capacity-building so as to address maritime security and safety needs and the protection of the marine environment of developing States, and encourages States and international financial institutions to provide additional funding for capacity-building programmes, including for transfer of technology, including through the International Maritime Organization and other competent international organizations;

22. Recognizes the considerable need to provide sustained capacity-building assistance, including on financial and technical aspects, by relevant international organizations and donors to developing States, with a view to further strengthening their capacity to take effective measures against the multiple facets of international criminal activities at sea, in line with the relevant international instruments, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto;

23. Also recognizes the need to build the capacity of developing States to raise awareness of and support the implementation of improved waste management practices, noting the particular vulnerability of small island developing States to the impact of marine pollution from land-based sources and marine debris;

24. Further recognizes the importance of assisting developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, in implementing the Convention, urges States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the trust funds, as referred to in resolutions 55/7, 57/141 and 64/71 of 4 December 2009, established for this purpose, and expresses its appreciation to those that have contributed;

25. Acknowledges the importance of capacity-building for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, for the protection of the marine environment and the conservation and sustainable use of marine resources;

26. Recognizes that promoting the voluntary transfer of technology is an essential aspect of building capacity in marine science;

27. Encourages States to use the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology, and recalls the important role of the secretariat of that Commission in the implementation and promotion of the Criteria and Guidelines;

28. Also encourages States to consider additional opportunities for capacity-building at the regional level;

29. Expresses its appreciation for the contribution of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission to capacity-building through its Ocean Teacher Academy training system, which has provided training in ocean data and information management to more than 1,300 students and professionals from more than 120 countries, and takes note of the setting up of the Ocean Teacher Global Academy, operating through a network of regional training centres, which builds capacity and promotes expertise available in developing countries;

30. Welcomes, in this regard, the efforts of the Tribunal in holding regional workshops, including the latest workshop on the role of the Tribunal in the settlement of disputes relating to the law of the sea in Eastern and Southern Africa, held in Nairobi on 8 August 2014 in cooperation with the Korea Maritime Institute and with the assistance of the Government of Kenya;

31. Notes with satisfaction the efforts of the Division to compile information on capacity-building initiatives, requests the Secretary-General to continue to regularly update such information provided by States, international organizations and donor agencies and include it in his annual report to the General Assembly, invites States, international organizations and donor agencies to submit such information to the Secretary-General for this purpose, and requests the Division to post the information on capacity-building initiatives from the annual report of the Secretary-General on the website of the Division in an easily accessible manner so as to facilitate the matching of capacity-building needs with opportunities;

32. Calls upon States to continue to assist developing States, and especially the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, at the bilateral and, where appropriate, multilateral levels, in the preparation of submissions to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, including the assessment of the nature and extent of the continental shelf of a coastal State, and recalls that coastal States can make requests to the Commission for scientific and technical advice in the preparation of data for their submissions, in accordance with article 3 of annex II to the Convention;

33. Calls upon the Division to continue to disseminate information on relevant procedures related to the trust fund established for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to continue its dialogue with potential beneficiaries with a view to providing financial support to developing countries for activities to facilitate their submissions in accordance with the requirements of article 76 of the Convention and with the Rules of Procedure and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission;

34. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with States and relevant international organizations and institutions, to continue to support training and other activities to assist developing States in the preparation and presentation of their submissions to the Commission;

35. Notes with appreciation the contribution of the Division to capacity-building activities at the national and regional levels;

36. Invites Member States and others in a position to do so to support the capacity-building activities of the Division, including, in particular, the training and other activities to assist developing States in the preparation of their submissions to the Commission, also invites Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the trust fund established by the Secretary-General for the Office of Legal Affairs to support the promotion of international law, and expresses its appreciation to those who have contributed;

37. Recognizes with appreciation the important contribution to the capacity-building of developing countries and the promotion of the law of the sea made by the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, which was established by the General Assembly in 1981 in honour of the first President of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea and which, relying on its network of 17 host institutions, has awarded to date 29 fellowships to individuals from 25 Member States, welcomes the fact that the twenty-seventh award, in 2015, will be made possible thanks to the generous contributions of Member States, urges Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute generously to the further development of the Fellowship, and acknowledges the provisions of its resolution on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, in particular the request to the Secretary-General to include in the regular budget, for consideration by the Assembly, the necessary funding for the Fellowship with effect from the biennium 2016–2017, should voluntary contributions be insufficient for granting at least one fellowship a year;

38. Also recognizes with appreciation the important contribution of the United Nations-Nippon Foundation of Japan Fellowship Programme, which celebrates its tenth anniversary in 2014 and has awarded 110 fellowships to individuals from 67 Member States since 2004, to human resources development for developing Member States in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea and related disciplines, as well as the fostering of global interlinkages through the alumni programme, which held its sixth meeting, hosted by the Nippon Foundation in Tokyo, from 28 November to 3 December 2014;

39. Encourages the competent international organizations, the United Nations Development Programme and international financial institutions and funds to consider expanding their programmes within their respective fields of competence for assistance to developing countries and to coordinate their efforts, and recognizes the funding available from the Global Environment Facility as well as other funds allocated for projects relating to oceans;

III

Meeting of States Parties

40. Notes with satisfaction that the twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, on 9 June 2014, commemorated the twentieth anniversary of the entry into force of the Convention, welcomes the report on that Meeting, also welcomes the election of seven members of the Tribunal and one member of the Commission on 11 and 12 June 2014, respectively, and further welcomes the decisions taken by the twenty-fourth Meeting on budgetary matters and regarding conditions of service of members of the Commission;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the twenty-fifth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, in New York from 8 to 12 June 2015, and to provide full conference services, including documentation, as required;

IV

Peaceful settlement of disputes

42. Notes with satisfaction the continued and significant contribution of the Tribunal to the settlement of disputes by peaceful means in accordance with Part XV of the Convention, and underlines the important role and authority of the Tribunal concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

43. Pays tribute to the important and long-standing role of the International Court of Justice with regard to the peaceful settlement of disputes concerning the law of the sea;

44. Notes that States parties to an international agreement related to the purposes of the Convention may submit to, inter alia, the Tribunal or the International Court of Justice any dispute concerning the interpretation or application of that agreement submitted in accordance with that agreement, and also notes the possibility, provided for in the Statutes of the Tribunal and the Court, to submit disputes to a chamber;

45. Encourages States Parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to consider making a written declaration, choosing from the means set out in article 287 of the Convention for the settlement of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement, bearing in mind the comprehensive character of the dispute settlement mechanism provided for in Part XV of the Convention;

V

The Area

46. Reiterates the importance of the ongoing elaboration and standardization by the Authority, pursuant to article 145 of the Convention, of rules, regulations and procedures to ensure the effective protection of the marine environment, for, inter alia, the protection and conservation of the natural resources of the Area and for the prevention of damage to the flora and fauna of the marine environment from harmful effects that may arise from activities in the Area;

47. Notes the decision taken at the twentieth session of the Authority to approve amendments to the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area and to the Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Sulphides in the Area;

48. Also notes the increase in the number of contracts with the Authority for exploration for polymetallic nodules, polymetallic sulphides and cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts, and further notes the attention being given by the Council of the Authority to the drafting of a mining code;

49. Recalls the relevance of the advisory opinion on the responsibilities and obligations of States sponsoring persons and entities with respect to activities in the Area, issued by the Seabed Disputes Chamber of the Tribunal on 1 February 2011;

50. Notes the importance of the responsibilities entrusted to the Authority by articles 143 and 145 of the Convention, which refer to marine scientific research and protection of the marine environment, respectively;

51. Recalls that the environmental management plan for the Clarion-Clipperton Zone, including the designation, on a provisional basis, of a network of areas of particular environmental interest, was approved in 2012, to be implemented over an initial three-year period so that it may be improved as more scientific, technical and environmental baseline and resource assessment data become available and that, for that purpose, the conduct of marine scientific research in those areas and the supply of available results to the Authority was encouraged, and invites the Authority to consider developing and approving environmental management plans in other international seabed area zones, in particular where there are currently exploration contracts;

52. Expresses its appreciation to States that have made contributions to the voluntary trust fund established pursuant to the decision of the Authority at its eighth session for the purpose of defraying the cost of participation of the members of the Legal and Technical Commission from developing countries and the members of the Finance Committee from developing countries in the meetings of the Commission and of the Committee, and to States that have made contributions to the endowment fund for marine scientific research in the Area established by the Authority at its twelfth session, for the purpose of promoting and encouraging the conduct of collaborative marine scientific research in the Area, and encourages States to make additional contributions to these funds;

VI

Effective functioning of the Authority and the Tribunal

53. Commends the progress in the work of the Authority;

54. Also commends the work of the Tribunal since its establishment;

55. Appeals to all States Parties to the Convention to pay their assessed contributions to the Authority and to the Tribunal in full and on time, and also appeals to States Parties in arrears with their contributions to fulfil their obligations without delay;

56. Encourages the Authority to continue to explore ways to manage the workload resulting from the increasing number of contracts and applications, and notes the decisions of the Council of the Authority to request the Secretary-General of the Authority to ensure that resources are allocated in line with the priorities set by the Council and the Assembly of the Authority;

57. Notes the decision of the Assembly of the Authority to call upon contractors with active exploration contracts with the Authority that are still considering their position to accept the annual overhead charge established by the Assembly at its nineteenth session, related to the administration and supervision of their contracts to ensure equitable burden-sharing among all contractors, and in this regard recognizes that a number of contractors have already accepted the annual overhead charge;

58. Expresses concern about the low attendance at the annual sessions of the Assembly of the Authority, noting also the concerns expressed with regard to the scheduling of annual sessions of the Authority and taking into consideration the great strides made by the Authority in adopting regulations for the prospecting and exploration of minerals in the Area, and invites the Authority to consider measures to improve the attendance at its annual sessions, including the holding of the sessions at an earlier time;

59. Notes with satisfaction that, at its twentieth annual session, the Authority commemorated the twentieth anniversary of its establishment;

60. Recognizes the ongoing efforts of the Authority to hold sensitization seminars to promote awareness of its work, notes in this regard the sensitization seminar on the environmental, legal and technical challenges of deep-sea mining for developing countries, which was held in Mexico City on 11 and 12 November 2013, welcomes the call to include landlocked and other geographically disadvantaged countries in the seminars, and calls upon other States and regions to consider inviting the Authority to organize such workshops in order to promote wider participation by the international community in the exploration and exploitation of mineral resources in the Area;

61. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and to the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Authority;

62. Emphasizes the importance of the rules and staff regulations of the Tribunal in promoting the recruitment of a geographically representative staff in the Professional and higher categories, and welcomes the actions taken by the Tribunal in observance of those rules and regulations;

VII

The continental shelf and the work of the Commission

63. Recalls that, in accordance with article 76, paragraph 8, of the Convention, information on the limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles from the baselines from which the breadth of the territorial sea is measured shall be submitted by the coastal State to the Commission set up under annex II to the Convention on the basis of equitable geographical representation, that the Commission shall make recommendations to coastal States on matters related to the establishment of the outer limits of their continental shelf, and that the limits of the shelf established by a coastal State on the basis of these recommendations shall be final and binding;

64. Also recalls that, in accordance with article 77, paragraph 3, of the Convention, the rights of the coastal State over the continental shelf do not depend on occupation, effective or notional, or on any express proclamation;

65. Notes with satisfaction that a considerable number of States Parties to the Convention have submitted information to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, in conformity with article 76 of the Convention and article 4 of annex II to the Convention, taking into account the decision of the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a);

66. Also notes with satisfaction that a considerable number of States Parties to the Convention have submitted to the Secretary-General, pursuant to the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, preliminary information indicative of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and a description of the status of preparation and intended date of submission in accordance with the requirements of article 76 of the Convention and with the Rules of Procedure and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission, and notes with satisfaction that additional submissions referred to in preliminary information have been filed with the Commission;

67. Further notes with satisfaction the progress in the work of the Commission and that it is giving current consideration to a number of submissions that have been made regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles;

68. Notes with satisfaction that the Commission, taking into account the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, has compiled lists of websites of organizations, data/information portals and data holders where general information and publicly available scientific and technical data can be accessed that may be relevant to the preparation of submissions, and has made this information available on its website;

69. Takes note of the 21 recommendations made by the Commission on the submissions of a number of coastal States, and welcomes the fact that summaries of recommendations are being made publicly available in accordance with paragraph 11.3 of annex III to the Rules of Procedure of the Commission;

70. Notes that the consideration by the Commission of submissions by coastal States in accordance with article 76 of and annex II to the Convention is without prejudice to the application of other parts of the Convention by States Parties;

71. Also notes the considerable number of submissions yet to be considered by the Commission and the demands that this places on its members and the secretariat as provided by the Division, and emphasizes the need to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions expeditiously, efficiently and effectively and maintain its high level of quality and expertise;

72. Takes note with appreciation of the decision of the Commission at its thirty-second session regarding the workload of the Commission, including to continue to extend the duration of its sessions for 2014 to three sessions of seven weeks each, including plenary meetings, and further notes the decision of the Commission at its thirty-second and thirty-fourth sessions to establish new subcommissions so that nine subcommissions would actively consider submissions;

73. Notes the decision of the twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the conditions of service of the members of the Commission, in which it reaffirmed the obligation of States under the Convention whose experts were serving on the Commission to defray the expenses of the experts they had nominated while in performance of Commission duties, including the provision of medical coverage, and urged those States to do their utmost to ensure the full participation of those experts in the work of the Commission, including the meetings of subcommissions, in accordance with the Convention;

74. Also notes the decision of the twenty-fourth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention to continue the consideration of other conditions of service of the members of the Commission within the open-ended working group established by the twenty-third Meeting of States Parties;

75. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take appropriate measures, within overall existing resource levels, to further strengthen the capacity of the Division, serving as the secretariat of the Commission, in order to ensure enhanced support and assistance to the Commission and its subcommissions in their consideration of submissions, as required by paragraph 9 of annex III to the Rules of Procedure of the Commission, in particular its human resources, taking into account the need for simultaneous work on several submissions;

76. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to provide all necessary secretariat services to the Commission in accordance with article 2, paragraph 5, of annex II to the Convention;

77. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate and timely measures to ensure secretariat services for the Commission and its subcommissions for the extended duration of time requested in the decision of the twenty-first Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

78. Also requests the Secretary-General, consequently, to continue to allocate appropriate and sufficient resources to the Division to provide adequate services and assistance to the Commission in view of the increase in the number of its working weeks;

79. Expresses its appreciation to States that have made contributions to the voluntary trust fund established pursuant to resolution 55/7 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to the voluntary trust fund also established pursuant to that resolution for the purpose of defraying the cost of participation of the members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission, encourages States to make additional contributions to these funds, and authorizes the use, as appropriate, of the latter trust fund, and in accordance with the purpose of its terms of reference, to defray the cost of the participation of the Chair of the Commission who is a member of the Commission nominated by a developing country in the Meetings of States Parties to the Convention;

80. Authorizes the Secretary-General, as an interim measure and subject to the availability of funds in the trust fund established pursuant to resolution 55/7 for facilitating the participation of members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission, following the allocation of the required funds to cover the costs of travel and daily subsistence allowance of the members of the Commission from developing States for the sessions of the Commission in 2015, to reimburse those members for the costs of medical travel insurance from that trust fund on a session-by-session basis and subject to a reasonable limit that the Secretary-General shall determine, based on the information regarding medical travel insurance available to him;

81. Requests the Secretary-General to provide written information on options for mechanisms to provide medical insurance coverage to members of the Commission, including costs;

82. Encourages the Secretary-General, in this regard, when providing information on options for the provision of medical insurance coverage, to give due consideration to the exceptional character of the Commission, its working arrangements and the importance of its work for the international community;

83. Expresses its intention to further review the terms of reference for the trust fund established pursuant to resolution 55/7 for the purpose of facilitating the participation of members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission, after consideration of the information provided by the Secretary-General on options for mechanisms to provide medical insurance coverage to members of the Commission;

84. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, in consultation with the Commission, written information on options for providing additional working space to the Division in order to ensure that the members of the Commission have sufficient working space during their work at the sessions of the Commission and its subcommissions, before the end of April 2015;

85. Approves the convening by the Secretary-General of the thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth sessions of the Commission, in New York, from 2 February to 20 March 2015, from 20 July to 4 September 2015 and from 12 October to 27 November 2015, respectively, with full conference services, including documentation, for the plenary parts of these sessions, as well as any resumed sessions as may be required by the Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to meet these requirements within overall existing resources;

86. Expresses its firm conviction about the importance of the work of the Commission, carried out in accordance with the Convention, including with respect to the participation of coastal States in relevant proceedings concerning their submissions, and recognizes the continued need for active interaction between coastal States and the Commission;

87. Expresses its appreciation to States that have exchanged views in order to increase understanding of issues, including expenditures involved, arising from the application of article 76 of the Convention, thus facilitating the preparation of submissions by States, in particular developing States, to the Commission, and encourages States to continue to exchange views;

88. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with Member States, to continue to support workshops or symposiums on scientific and technical aspects of the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, taking into account the need to strengthen capacity-building for developing countries in preparing their submissions;

VIII

Maritime safety and security and flag State implementation

89. Encourages States to ratify or accede to international agreements addressing the safety and security of navigation, as well as maritime labour, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with the Convention and other relevant international instruments aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements, and emphasizes the need for capacity-building for and assistance to developing States;

90. Recognizes that the legal regimes governing maritime safety and maritime security may have common and mutually reinforcing objectives that may be interrelated and could benefit from synergies, and encourages States to take this into account in their implementation;

91. Emphasizes the need for further efforts to promote a culture of safety and security in the shipping industry and to address the shortage of adequately trained personnel, and urges the establishment of more centres to provide the required education and training;

92. Also emphasizes that safety and security measures should be implemented with minimal negative effects on seafarers and fishers, especially in relation to their working conditions, and welcomes the ongoing cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Labour Organization on child labour in fisheries and aquaculture, particularly the publication in June 2013 of the Guidance on addressing child labour in fisheries and aquaculture, as well as the work that has been conducted on the issue of trafficking in persons and forced labour on fishing vessels by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the International Labour Organization;

93. Welcomes the consideration by the International Maritime Organization of the fair treatment of seafarers, and notes the adoption by the Organization on 4 December 2013 of resolution A.1090(28) on the fair treatment of crew members in respect of shore leave and access to shore-side facilities;

94. Notes the theme for the 2014 World Maritime Day, "International Maritime Organization conventions: effective implementation", and also notes the recommendations of the Legal Committee of the International Maritime Organization regarding ratification and implementation of all relevant conventions of the Organization;

95. Invites States that have not yet done so to become parties to the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978, as amended, and the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Fishing Vessel Personnel, 1995;

96. Notes the adoption by the International Labour Conference on 11 June 2014 of the amendments to the Code of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, to protect abandoned seafarers and provide financial security for death or long-term disability of seafarers, invites States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Maritime Labour Convention, as amended, and also invites States that have not yet done so to ratify or accede to the Work in Fishing Convention, 2007 (No. 188) and the Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention (Revised), 2003 (No. 185), of the International Labour Organization and to effectively implement all of those Conventions, and emphasizes the need to provide to States, at their request, technical cooperation and assistance in that regard;

97. Invites States to ratify or accede to the Cape Town Agreement of 2012 on the Implementation of the Provisions of the Torremolinos Protocol of 1993 relating to the Torremolinos International Convention for the Safety of Fishing Vessels, 1977;

98. Welcomes ongoing cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Maritime Organization and the International Labour Organization relating to the safety of fishers and fishing vessels, and underlines the urgent need for continued work in that area;

99. Recalls that all actions taken to combat threats to maritime security must be in accordance with international law, including the principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention;

100. Recognizes the crucial role of international cooperation at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels in combating, in accordance with international law, threats to maritime security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, and terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, through bilateral and multilateral instruments and mechanisms aimed at monitoring, preventing and responding to such threats, the enhanced sharing of information among States relevant to the detection, prevention and suppression of such threats, and the prosecution of offenders with due regard to national legislation, and the need for sustained capacity-building to support such objectives;

101. Acknowledges the work of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in promoting international cooperation and strengthening capacity to combat the problem of transnational organized crime committed at sea;

102. Notes that piracy and armed robbery at sea affect a wide range of vessels engaged in maritime activities;

103. Emphasizes the importance of promptly reporting incidents to enable accurate information on the scope of the problem of piracy and armed robbery against ships and, in the case of armed robbery against ships, by affected vessels to the coastal State, underlines the importance of effective information-sharing with States potentially affected by incidents of piracy and armed robbery against ships, and notes with appreciation the important role of the International Maritime Organization and the important contribution of the Information Sharing Centre of the Regional Cooperation Agreement on Combating Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in Asia;

104. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to actively combat piracy and armed robbery at sea by adopting measures, including those relating to assistance with capacity-building through training of seafarers, port staff and enforcement personnel in the prevention, reporting and investigation of incidents, by bringing the alleged perpetrators to justice, in accordance with international law, and by adopting national legislation, as well as by providing enforcement vessels and equipment and guarding against fraudulent ship registration;

105. Encourages States to ensure effective implementation of international law applicable to combating piracy, as reflected in the Convention, calls upon States to take appropriate steps under their national law to facilitate, in accordance with international law, the apprehension and prosecution of those who are alleged to have committed acts of piracy, including the financing or facilitation of such acts, also taking into account other relevant instruments that are consistent with the Convention, and encourages States to cooperate, as appropriate, with a view to developing their national legislation in this regard;

106. Expresses grave concern at the threats posed by piracy and armed robbery at sea to the safety and welfare of seafarers and other persons;

107. Invites all States, the International Maritime Organization, the International Labour Organization and other relevant international organizations and agencies to adopt or recommend, as appropriate, measures to protect the interest and welfare of seafarers and fishers who are victims of pirates, after their release from captivity, including their post-incident care and reintegration into society;

108. Notes the ongoing cooperation between the International Maritime Organization, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the Division with respect to the compilation of national legislation on piracy, also notes that copies of national legislation received by the Secretariat have been placed on the website of the Division, and encourages the aforementioned bodies to further cooperate with the view to assisting Member States, upon request, in developing their national laws on piracy;

109. Recognizes continued national, bilateral and trilateral initiatives as well as regional cooperative mechanisms, in accordance with international law, to address piracy, including the financing or facilitation of acts of piracy, and armed robbery at sea in the Asian region, and calls upon other States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level on combating piracy and armed robbery against ships;

110. Expresses serious concern at the inhuman conditions hostages taken at sea face in captivity and also the adverse impact on their families, calls for the immediate release of all hostages taken at sea, and stresses the importance of cooperation among Member States on the issue of hostage-taking at sea;

111. Welcomes, in this regard, the establishment of the Hostage Support Programme by the Board of the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia;

112. Reiterates its serious concern regarding continued incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, expresses alarm in particular at the hijacking of vessels, supports the recent efforts to address this problem at the global and regional levels, notes the adoption by the Security Council of resolutions 1816(2008) of 2 June 2008, 1838(2008) of 7 October 2008, 1846(2008) of 2 December 2008, 1851(2008) of 16 December 2008, 1897(2009) of 30 November 2009, 1918(2010) of 27 April 2010, 1950(2010) of 23 November 2010, 1976(2011) of 11 April 2011, 2015(2011) of 24 October 2011, 2020(2011) of 22 November 2011, 2036(2012) of 22 February 2012, 2077(2012) of 21 November 2012, 2125(2013) of 18 November 2013 and 2184(2014) of 12 November 2014, as well as the statements by the President of the Security Council of 25 August 2010 and of 19 November 2012, also notes that the authorization in resolution 1816(2008) and the provisions in resolutions 1838(2008), 1846(2008), 1851(2008), 1897(2009), 1950(2010), 2020(2011), 2077(2012), 2125(2013) and 2184(2014) apply only to the situation in Somalia and do not affect the rights, obligations or responsibilities of Member States under international law, including any rights or obligations under the Convention, with respect to any other situation, and underscores, in particular, the fact that they are not to be considered as establishing customary international law;

113. Welcomes the significant decrease in reported incidents of piracy off the coast of Somalia, which are at the lowest level since 2006, continues to be gravely concerned by the ongoing threat that piracy and armed robbery at sea continue to pose to the region, and acknowledges Security Council resolution 2125(2013);

114. Recognizes the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) for operationalizing a global piracy database designed to consolidate information about piracy off the coast of Somalia and facilitate the development of actionable analysis for law enforcement, and urges all States to share such information with INTERPOL for use in the database, through appropriate channels;

115. Notes the continued efforts within the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, following the adoption of Security Council resolution 1851(2008), and commends the contributions of all States in the efforts to fight piracy off the coast of Somalia;

116. Recognizes the primary role of the Federal Government of Somalia in combating piracy and armed robbery against ships off the coast of Somalia, acknowledges the importance of a comprehensive and sustainable settlement of the situation in Somalia, and emphasizes the need to address the underlying causes of piracy and to assist Somalia and States in the region in strengthening institutional capacity to fight piracy, including the financing or facilitation of acts of piracy, and armed robbery against ships off the coast of Somalia and to bring to justice those involved in such acts;

117. Notes the approval by the International Maritime Organization of the guidelines to assist in the investigation of the crimes of piracy and armed robbery against ships, revised interim guidance to shipowners, ship operators and shipmasters on the use of privately contracted armed security personnel on board ships in the high risk area, revised interim recommendations for flag States regarding the use of privately contracted armed security personnel on board ships in the high risk area, revised interim recommendations for port and coastal States regarding the use of privately contracted armed security personnel on board ships in the high risk area, interim guidance to private maritime security companies providing privately contracted armed security personnel on board ships in the high risk area, and interim guidance for flag States on measures to prevent and mitigate Somalia-based piracy;

118. Encourages States to ensure that ships flying their flag apply ship security measures approved in accordance with national and international law;

119. Notes the efforts made by the shipping industry to cooperate with the efforts by States regarding piracy off the coast of Somalia, in particular in assisting ships that navigate in that area, and recalls the adoption on 30 November 2011 by the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization of resolution A.1044(27) on piracy and armed robbery against ships in waters off the coast of Somalia;

120. Also notes the continued implementation of the Code of Conduct concerning the Repression of Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in the Western Indian Ocean and the Gulf of Aden (Djibouti Code of Conduct), adopted on 29 January 2009 under the auspices of the International Maritime Organization, in the four thematic areas of information sharing, training, national legislation and capacity-building;

121. Expresses its deep concern at the high number of incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea in the Gulf of Guinea, in particular violence against innocent crew members of vessels, notes the adoption by the Security Council of resolutions 2018(2011) of 31 October 2011 and 2039(2012) of 29 February 2012, supports the recent efforts to address this problem at the global and regional levels, recalls the primary role of States in the region to counter the threat and address the underlying causes of piracy and armed robbery at sea in the Gulf of Guinea, welcomes the adoption in Yaoundé on 25 June 2013 of the Code of Conduct concerning the Repression of Piracy, Armed Robbery against Ships, and Illegal Maritime Activity in West and Central Africa, and calls upon States in the region to implement the Code of Conduct as soon as possible and consistent with international law, in particular the Convention;

122. Urges States to ensure the full implementation of resolution A.1069(28) of the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization on prevention and suppression of piracy, armed robbery against ships and illicit maritime activity in the Gulf of Guinea;

123. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, notes the entry into force on 28 July 2010 of the 2005 Protocol to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and of the 2005 Protocol to the 1988 Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, invites States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to those Protocols, and urges States parties to take appropriate measures to ensure the effective implementation of those instruments through the adoption of legislation, where appropriate;

124. Calls upon States to effectively implement the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code and the amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, and to work with the International Maritime Organization to promote safe and secure shipping while ensuring freedom of navigation;

125. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to improve the protection of offshore installations by adopting measures related to the prevention, reporting and investigation of acts of violence against installations, in accordance with international law, and by implementing such measures through national legislation to ensure proper and adequate enforcement;

126. Emphasizes the progress in regional cooperation, including the efforts of littoral States, on the enhancement of safety, security and environmental protection in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore, and the effective functioning of the Cooperative Mechanism on Safety of Navigation and Environment Protection in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore (the Cooperative Mechanism) to promote dialogue and facilitate close cooperation between the littoral States, user States, shipping industries and other stakeholders in line with article 43 of the Convention, notes with appreciation the convening of the seventh Cooperation Forum, in Langkawi, Malaysia, on 22 and 23 September 2014, the seventh Project Coordination Committee Meeting, in Langkawi on 24 September 2014, the thirty-ninth Tripartite Technical Experts Group Meeting, in Langkawi from 24 to 26 September 2014, and the twelfth and thirteenth Aids to Navigation Fund Committee Meetings, in Singapore on 16 and 17 April 2014 and 18 and 19 September 2014, respectively, the events being key pillars of the Cooperative Mechanism, also notes with appreciation the important role of the Information Sharing Centre of the Regional Cooperation Agreement on Combating Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in Asia, based in Singapore, and calls upon States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level;

127. Recognizes that some transnational organized criminal activities threaten legitimate uses of the oceans and endanger the lives of people at sea, as well as the livelihoods and security of coastal communities;

128. Notes that transnational organized criminal activities are diverse and may be interrelated in some cases and that criminal organizations are adaptive and take advantage of the vulnerabilities of States, in particular coastal and small island developing States in transit areas, and calls upon States and relevant intergovernmental organizations to increase cooperation and coordination at all levels to detect and suppress the smuggling of migrants, trafficking in persons and illicit trafficking in firearms, in accordance with international law;

129. Recognizes the importance of enhancing international cooperation at all levels to fight transnational organized criminal activities, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, within the scope of the United Nations instruments against illicit drug trafficking, as well as the smuggling of migrants, trafficking in persons and illicit trafficking in firearms and criminal activities at sea falling within the scope of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

130. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and to take appropriate measures to ensure their effective implementation;

131. Calls upon States to ensure freedom of navigation, the safety of navigation and the rights of transit passage, archipelagic sea lanes passage and innocent passage in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention;

132. Welcomes the work of the International Maritime Organization relating to the protection of shipping lanes of strategic importance and significance, and in particular in enhancing safety, security and environmental protection in straits used for international navigation, and calls upon the International Maritime Organization, States bordering straits and user States to continue their cooperation to keep such straits safe, secure and environmentally protected and open to international navigation at all times, consistent with international law, in particular the Convention;

133. Calls upon user States and States bordering straits used for international navigation to continue to cooperate by agreement on matters relating to navigational safety, including safety aids for navigation, and the prevention, reduction and control of pollution from ships, and welcomes developments in this regard;

134. Calls upon States that have accepted the amendments to regulation XI-1/6 of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974, to implement the Code of International Standards and Recommended Practices for a Safety Investigation into a Marine Casualty or Marine Incident, which took effect on 1 January 2010, and, in particular, to comply with the mandatory submission of a marine safety investigation report to the International Maritime Organization for every marine safety investigation conducted into a very serious marine casualty to identify trends and develop knowledge and risk-based recommendations;

135. Notes the adoption by the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization at its twenty-eighth session of the resolution on guidelines on the preservation and collection of evidence following an allegation of a serious crime having taken place on board a ship or following a report of a missing person from a ship, and pastoral and medical care of persons affected;

136. Recognizes the important work of the International Hydrographic Organization, calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming members of that Organization, encourages all its members to actively consider, in accordance with applicable rules and procedures, applications of States that wish to become members of that Organization, and urges all States to work with that Organization to increase the coverage of hydrographic information on a global basis to enhance capacity-building and technical assistance and to promote safe navigation, particularly through the production and use of accurate electronic navigational charts, especially in areas used for international navigation, in ports and where there are vulnerable or protected marine areas;

137. Also recognizes the importance of navigational warning services based on marine meteorological data for the safety of ships and lives at sea and the optimization of navigation routes, and notes the collaboration between the World Meteorological Organization and the International Maritime Organization for the enhancement of these services and their extension to the Arctic region;

138. Encourages States to continue their efforts in the implementation of all areas of the Action Plan for the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material, approved by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency in March 2004;

139. Notes that cessation of the transport of radioactive materials through the regions of small island developing States is an ultimate desired goal of small island developing States and some other countries, and recognizes the right of freedom of navigation in accordance with international law; that States should maintain dialogue and consultation, in particular under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the International Maritime Organization, with the aim of improved mutual understanding, confidence-building and enhanced communication in relation to the safe maritime transport of radioactive materials; that States involved in the transport of such materials are urged to continue to engage in dialogue with small island developing States and other States to address their concerns; and that these concerns include the further development and strengthening, within the appropriate forums, of international regulatory regimes to enhance safety, disclosure, liability, security and compensation in relation to such transport;

140. Acknowledges, in the context of paragraph 139 above, the potential environmental and economic impacts of maritime incidents and accidents on coastal States, in particular those related to the transport of radioactive materials, and emphasizes the importance of effective liability regimes in that regard;

141. Encourages States to draw up plans and to establish procedures to implement the Guidelines on Places of Refuge for Ships in Need of Assistance adopted by the International Maritime Organization on 5 December 2003;

142. Notes that the conditions for the entry into force of the Nairobi International Convention on the Removal of Wrecks, 2007, have now been met and that the Convention will enter into force on 14 April 2015, and invites States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to this Convention;

143. Requests States to take appropriate measures with regard to ships flying their flag or of their registry to address hazards that may be caused by wrecks and drifting or sunken cargo to navigation or the marine environment;

144. Calls upon States to ensure that masters on ships flying their flag take the steps required by relevant instruments to provide assistance to persons in distress at sea, and urges States to cooperate and to take all measures necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the amendments to the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue and to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea relating to the delivery of persons rescued at sea to a place of safety, as well as of the associated Guidelines on the Treatment of Persons Rescued at Sea;

145. Notes the entry into force on 1 July 2014 of International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea regulation III/17-1, as well as the adoption on 14 December 2012 of the related Guidelines for the development of plans and procedures for recovery of persons from the water;

146. Recognizes that all States must fulfil their search and rescue responsibilities in accordance with international law, including the Convention, and the ongoing need for the International Maritime Organization and other relevant organizations to assist, in particular, developing States both to increase their search and rescue capabilities, including through the establishment of additional rescue coordination centres and regional sub-centres, and to take effective action to address, to the extent feasible, the issue of unseaworthy ships and small craft within their national jurisdiction, and emphasizes in this regard the importance of cooperation for these purposes, including within the framework of the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue, 1979;

147. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other relevant actors in relation to disembarkation of persons rescued at sea, and notes in this regard the need to implement all relevant and applicable international instruments and the importance of cooperation among States as provided for in those instruments;

148. Also notes that "Protection at sea" was the theme of the seventh Dialogue on Protection Challenges of the High Commissioner for Refugees, held in Geneva on 10 and 11 December 2014;

149. Invites States to implement the Revised Guidelines on the Prevention of Access by Stowaways and the Allocation of Responsibilities to Seek the Successful Resolution of Stowaway Cases adopted by the International Maritime Organization on 2 December 2010;

150. Calls upon States to continue to cooperate in developing comprehensive approaches to international migration and development, including through dialogue on all their aspects;

151. Also calls upon States to take measures to protect fibre-optic submarine cables and to fully address issues relating to these cables, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the Convention;

152. Encourages greater dialogue and cooperation among States and the relevant regional and global organizations through workshops and seminars on the protection and maintenance of fibre-optic submarine cables to promote the security of such critical communications infrastructure;

153. Also encourages the adoption by States of laws and regulations addressing the breaking or injury of submarine cables or pipelines beneath the high seas done wilfully or through culpable negligence by a ship flying its flag or by a person subject to its jurisdiction, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the Convention;

154. Affirms the importance of maintenance, including the repair, of submarine cables, undertaken in conformity with international law, as reflected in the Convention;

155. Reaffirms that flag, port and coastal States all bear responsibility for ensuring the effective implementation and enforcement of international instruments relating to maritime security and safety, in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention, and that flag States have primary responsibility that requires further strengthening, including through increased transparency of ownership of vessels;

156. Urges flag States without an effective maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to ensure effective compliance with and implementation and enforcement of their responsibilities under international law, in particular the Convention, and, until such action is taken, to consider declining the granting of the right to fly their flag to new vessels, suspending their registry or not opening a registry, and calls upon flag and port States to take all measures consistent with international law necessary to prevent the operation of substandard vessels;

157. Recognizes that international shipping rules and standards adopted by the International Maritime Organization in respect of maritime safety, efficiency of navigation and the prevention and control of marine pollution, complemented by best practices of the shipping industry, have led to a significant reduction in maritime accidents and pollution incidents, encourages all States to participate in the Voluntary International Maritime Organization Member State Audit Scheme, and notes the decision of the International Maritime Organization to institutionalize the Audit Scheme, with the expected mandatory use of the International Maritime Organization Instruments Implementation Code (III Code) from 1 January 2016;

158. Welcomes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization to develop a mandatory code for ships operating in polar waters (the Polar Code), and encourages States and competent international organizations and bodies to support continued efforts to finalize the Polar

Code within the agreed framework, with an entry into force as soon as possible;

159. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization on matters related to passenger ship safety in light of recent accidents, and encourages States and competent international organizations and bodies to support continued efforts, including technical cooperation activities, to improve passenger ship safety;

160. Recognizes that maritime safety can also be improved through effective port State control, the strengthening of regional arrangements and increased coordination and cooperation among them and increased transparency and information-sharing, including among safety and security sectors;

161. Encourages flag States to take appropriate measures sufficient to achieve or maintain recognition by intergovernmental arrangements that recognize satisfactory flag State performance, including, as appropriate, satisfactory port State control examination results on a sustained basis, with a view to improving quality shipping and furthering flag State implementation of relevant instruments under the International Maritime Organization as well as relevant goals and objectives of the present resolution;

IX

Marine environment and marine resources

162. Emphasizes once again the importance of the implementation of Part XII of the Convention in order to protect and preserve the marine environment and its living marine resources against pollution and physical degradation, and calls upon all States to cooperate and take measures consistent with the Convention, directly or through competent international organizations, for the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

163. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States noted with concern that the health of oceans and marine biodiversity are negatively affected by marine pollution, including marine debris, especially plastic, persistent organic pollutants, heavy metals and nitrogen-based compounds, from a number of marine and land-based sources, including shipping and land run-off, and that States committed to take action to reduce the incidence and impacts of such pollution on marine ecosystems, including through the effective implementation of relevant conventions adopted in the framework of the International Maritime Organization, and the follow-up of relevant initiatives such as the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities, as well as the adoption of coordinated strategies to this end, and that they further committed to take action, by 2025, based on collected scientific data, to achieve significant reductions in marine debris to prevent harm to the coastal and marine environment;

164. Encourages States, in accordance with the commitment expressed in “The future we want” and based on collected scientific data, to take action by 2025 to achieve significant reductions in marine debris to prevent harm to the coastal and marine environment;

165. Notes the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, notes with concern its recent findings on the acidification of oceans and the impact thereon, as well as the findings of the World Meteorological Organization contained in its annual Greenhouse Gas Bulletin, and in this regard encourages States and competent international organizations and other relevant institutions, individually and in cooperation, to urgently pursue further research on ocean acidification, especially programmes of observation and measurement, noting in particular the continued work under the Convention on Biological Diversity and paragraphs 6 to 10 of decision XII/23 on marine and coastal biodiversity, adopted at the twelfth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Pyeongchang, Republic of Korea, from 6 to 17 October 2014, and to increase national, regional and global efforts to address levels of ocean acidity and the negative impact of such acidity on vulnerable marine ecosystems, particularly coral reefs;

166. Expresses concern, in this regard, at the recent findings of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change on the acidification of the oceans and the substantial risks to marine ecosystems, especially polar ecosystems and coral reefs, and the potentially detrimental consequences for fisheries and livelihoods;

167. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States called for support for initiatives that address ocean acidification and the impacts of climate change on marine and coastal ecosystems and resources and, in this regard, reiterated the need to work collectively to prevent further ocean acidification, as well as to enhance the resilience of marine ecosystems and of the communities whose livelihoods depend on them, and to support marine scientific research, monitoring and observation of ocean acidification and particularly vulnerable ecosystems, including through enhanced international cooperation in this regard;

168. Welcomes, in this regard, the holding of the International Workshop on Ocean Acidification: State-of-the-science considerations for small island developing States, whose communities are particularly vulnerable to the impacts of ocean acidification, on 28 and 29 August 2014 in Apia, notes the report of the co-chairs of the Workshop, and encourages the holding of similar workshops in the future;

169. Notes with concern the approximately 30 per cent increase in the acidity of ocean surface waters since the beginning of the industrial era and the wide range of impacts associated with the continuing and alarming acidification of the world’s oceans, and urges States to make significant efforts to tackle the causes of ocean acidification, recognizing countries’ national circumstances and respective capabilities, and to further study and minimize its impacts, to enhance local, national, regional and global cooperation in this regard, including the sharing of relevant information and the development of worldwide capacity, including in developing countries, to measure ocean acidification, and to take steps to make marine ecosystems healthier and, as a result, more resilient, to the extent possible, to the impacts of ocean acidification;

170. Recognizes the attention paid to ocean acidification at the fourteenth meeting of the Informal Consultative Process, and commits itself to continue to pay attention to this important issue, including by taking into account the first global integrated marine assessment and the ongoing work of the Ocean Acidification International Coordination Centre of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

171. Encourages States, individually or in collaboration with relevant international organizations and bodies, to enhance their scientific activity to better understand the effects of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity and develop ways and means of adaptation, taking into account, as appropriate, the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches;

172. Notes with appreciation, in this regard, the convening of the twentieth session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, in Lima from 1 to 12 December 2014, and recognizes the importance of raising awareness of the adverse impact of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity;

173. Encourages States that have not yet done so to become parties to international agreements addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment and its living marine resources against the introduction of harmful aquatic organisms and pathogens and marine pollution from all sources, including the dumping of wastes and other matter, and other forms of physical degradation, as well as agreements that provide for preparedness for, response to and cooperation on pollution incidents and that include provisions on liability and compensation for damage resulting from marine pollution, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with international law, including the Convention, aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements;

174. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States noted the significant threat that alien invasive species pose to marine ecosystems and resources and committed to implement measures to prevent the introduction and manage the adverse environmental impacts of alien invasive species, including, as appropriate, those adopted in the framework of the International Maritime Organization;

175. Encourages States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the International Convention for the Control and Management of Ships’ Ballast Water and Sediments, 2004, thereby facilitating its early entry into force;

176. Encourages States, directly or through competent international organizations, to consider the further development and application, as appropriate and consistent with international law, including the Convention, of environmental impact assessment processes covering planned activities under their jurisdiction or control that may cause substantial pollution of or significant and harmful changes to the marine environment, and also encourages the communication of the reports of the results of such assessments to the competent international organizations in accordance with the Convention;

177. Notes with satisfaction that 2014 marks the fortieth anniversary of the Regional Seas Programme of the United Nations Environment Programme, and encourages States that have not done so to become parties to regional seas conventions addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

178. Encourages States, in accordance with international law, including the Convention and other relevant instruments, either bilaterally or regionally, to jointly develop and promote contingency plans for responding to pollution incidents, as well as other incidents that are likely to have significant adverse effects on the marine environment and biodiversity;

179. Recognizes the importance of improving understanding of the impact of climate change on oceans and seas, and recalls that in “The future we want”, States noted that sea-level rise and coastal erosion are serious threats for many coastal regions and islands, particularly in developing countries and, in this regard, called upon the international community to enhance its efforts to address these challenges;

180. Notes with concern the severe impacts on coastal communities of extreme weather events such as tropical cyclones and associated storm surges, and encourages cooperative actions by relevant United Nations bodies and organizations, including the World Meteorological Organization, to assist States in improving forecasting of such events and its application in multi-hazard early warning systems and risk management;

181. Also notes with concern that the health of the oceans and marine biodiversity are negatively affected by marine debris, especially plastic, from land-based and marine sources, and thus recognizes the need for better understanding of the sources, amounts, pathways, distribution trends, nature and impacts of marine debris, and in this regard invites States to implement resolution 1/6 on marine plastics debris and microplastics, adopted by the United Nations Environment Assembly of the United Nations Environment Programme at its first session in June 2014;

182. Welcomes the activities of relevant United Nations bodies and organizations, in particular the United Nations Environment Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization and other intergovernmental organizations, to address the sources and impacts of marine debris, including through the Global Partnership on Marine Litter, as well as actions relating to marine debris taken under the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals, in particular the adoption by the Conference of the Parties to that Convention at its tenth meeting of resolution 10.4 on marine debris, and notes the recent work of the International Whaling Commission on assessing the impacts of marine debris on cetaceans;

183. Encourages States to further develop partnerships with industry and civil society to raise awareness of the extent of the impact of marine debris on the health and productivity of the marine environment and consequent economic loss;

184. Urges States to integrate the issue of marine debris into national and, as appropriate, regional strategies dealing with waste management, especially in the coastal zone, ports and maritime industries, including recycling, reuse, reduction and disposal, to consider developing an integrated waste management infrastructure and to encourage the development of appropriate economic incentives with the aim of reducing marine debris to address this issue, including the development of cost-recovery systems that provide an incentive to use port reception facilities and discourage ships from discharging marine debris at sea, and support for measures to prevent, reduce and control pollution from any source, including land-based sources, such as community-based coastal and waterway clean-up and monitoring activities, and encourages States to cooperate regionally and subregionally to identify potential sources and coastal and oceanic locations where marine debris aggregates and to develop and implement joint prevention and recovery programmes for marine debris as well as to raise awareness of the issue of marine debris and the need to consider environmentally sound options for its removal;

185. Notes the work of the International Maritime Organization to prevent pollution from ships;

186. Encourages States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Protocol of 1997 (annex VI—Regulations for the Prevention of Air Pollution from Ships) to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, as amended;

187. Also encourages States that have not yet done so to become parties to the 1996 Protocol to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972 (the London Protocol);

188. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization and the resolution on International Maritime Organization policies and practices related to the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions from ships;

189. Urges States to cooperate in correcting the shortfall in port waste reception facilities in accordance with the action plan to address the inadequacy of port waste reception facilities developed by the International Maritime Organization;

190. Recognizes that most of the pollution load of the oceans emanates from land-based activities and affects the most productive areas of the marine environment, and calls upon States, as a matter of priority, to implement the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to take all appropriate measures to fulfil the commitments of the international community embodied in the Manila Declaration on Furthering the Implementation of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities;

191. Expresses its concern regarding the spreading of hypoxic dead zones and harmful algal blooms in oceans as a result of eutrophication fuelled by riverine run-off of fertilizers, sewage outfall and reactive nitrogen resulting from the burning of fossil fuels and resulting in serious consequences for ecosystem functioning, and calls upon States to enhance their efforts to reduce eutrophication, particularly by reducing total nutrient pollution from land-based sources and, to this effect, to continue to cooperate within the framework of relevant international organizations, in particular the Global Programme of Action;

192. Calls upon all States to ensure that urban and coastal development projects and related land-reclamation activities are carried out in a responsible manner that protects the marine habitat and environment and mitigates the negative consequences of such activities;

193. Encourages States that have not yet done so to take, as soon as possible, the domestic measures necessary to enable them to meet their obligations upon ratification and thereafter to ratify, accept, approve or accede to the Minamata Convention on Mercury, with a view to its entry into force as soon as possible;

194. Welcomes the continued work of States, the United Nations Environment Programme and regional organizations in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action, and encourages increased emphasis on the link between fresh water, the coastal zone and marine resources in the implementation of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and of the time-bound targets in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development (Johannesburg Plan of Implementation), in particular the target on sanitation, and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development;

195. Recalls the resolution of the thirtieth Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972 (the London Convention) and the third Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 27 to 31 October 2008, on the regulation of ocean fertilization, in which the Contracting Parties agreed, inter alia, that the scope of the London Convention and Protocol includes ocean fertilization activities and that, given the present state of knowledge, ocean fertilization activities other than for legitimate scientific research should not be allowed, and that scientific research proposals should be assessed on a case-by-case basis using an assessment framework to be developed by the scientific groups under the London Convention and Protocol, and also agreed that, to this end, such other activities should be considered as contrary to the aims of the London Convention and Protocol and should not currently qualify for any exemption from the definition of dumping in article III, paragraph 1 (b), of the London Convention and article 1, paragraph 4.2, of the London Protocol;

196. Also recalls the resolution of the thirty-second Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Convention and the fifth Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 11 to 15 October 2010, on the Assessment Framework for Scientific Research Involving Ocean Fertilization;

197. Notes the continued work of the Contracting Parties to the London Convention and Protocol towards a global, transparent and effective control and regulatory mechanism for ocean fertilization activities and other activities that fall within the scope of the London Convention and Protocol and have the potential to cause harm to the marine environment, and notes the recent amendments to the Protocol on this matter;

198. Recalls decision IX/16 C, adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Bonn, Germany, from 19 to 30 May 2008, in which the Conference of the Parties, inter alia, bearing in mind the ongoing scientific and legal analysis occurring under the auspices of the London Convention and Protocol, requested parties and urged other Governments, in accordance with the precautionary approach, to ensure that ocean fertilization activities were not carried out until there was an adequate scientific basis on which to justify such activities, including an assessment of associated risks, and that a global, transparent and effective control and regulatory mechanism was in place for those activities, with the exception of small-scale scientific research studies within coastal waters, and stated that such studies should be authorized only if justified by the need to gather specific scientific data, should be subject to a thorough prior assessment of the potential impacts of the research studies on the marine environment, should be strictly controlled and should not be used for generating and selling carbon offsets or for any other commercial purposes, and takes note of decision X/29, adopted at the tenth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Nagoya, Japan, from 18 to 29 October 2010, in which the Conference of the Parties requested parties to implement decision IX/16 C;

199. Also recalls that in "The future we want", States stressed their concern about the potential environmental impacts of ocean fertilization, recalled in this regard the decisions related to ocean fertilization adopted by the relevant intergovernmental bodies, and resolved to continue addressing ocean fertilization with utmost caution, consistent with the precautionary approach;

200. Reaffirms paragraph 119 of resolution 61/222 of 20 December 2006 regarding ecosystem approaches and oceans, including the proposed elements of an ecosystem approach, means to achieve implementation of an ecosystem approach and requirements for improved application of an ecosystem approach, and in this regard:

(a) Notes that continued environmental degradation in many parts of the world and increasing competing demands require an urgent response and the setting of priorities for management actions aimed at conserving ecosystem integrity;

(b) Also notes that ecosystem approaches to ocean management should be focused on managing human activities in order to maintain and, where needed, restore ecosystem health to sustain goods and environmental services, provide social and economic benefits for food security, sustain livelihoods in support of international development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and conserve marine biodiversity;

(c) Recalls that States should be guided in the application of ecosystem approaches by a number of existing instruments, in particular the Convention, which sets out the legal framework for all activities in the oceans and seas, and its implementing Agreements, as well as other commitments, such as those contained in the Convention on Biological Diversity and the World Summit on Sustainable Development call for the application of an ecosystem approach by 2010, and in this context encourages States to enhance their efforts towards applying such an approach;

(d) Encourages States to cooperate and coordinate their efforts and take, individually or jointly, as appropriate, all measures, in conformity with international law, including the Convention and other applicable instruments, to address impacts on marine ecosystems within and beyond areas of national jurisdiction, taking into account the integrity of the ecosystems concerned;

201. Recalls that in "The future we want", States committed themselves to protect and restore the health, productivity and resilience of oceans and marine ecosystems, to maintain their biodiversity, enabling their conservation and sustainable use for present and future generations, and to effectively apply an ecosystem approach and the precautionary approach in the management, in accordance with international law, of activities having an impact on the marine environment, to deliver on all three dimensions of sustainable development;

202. Encourages competent organizations and bodies that have not yet done so to incorporate an ecosystem approach into their mandates, as appropriate, in order to address impacts on marine ecosystems;

203. Invites States, in particular those States with advanced technology and marine capabilities, to explore prospects for improving cooperation with and assistance to developing States, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, with a view to better integrating into national policies and programmes sustainable and effective development in the marine sector;

204. Notes the information compiled by the Secretariat in relation to the assistance available to and measures that may be taken by developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to realize the benefits of sustainable and effective development of marine resources and uses of the oceans, as provided by States and competent international organizations and global and regional funding agencies, and urges them to provide information for the annual report of the Secretary-General and for incorporation on the website of the Division;

205. Encourages States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Hong Kong International Convention for the Safe and Environmentally Sound Recycling of Ships, 2009, to facilitate its early entry into force;

206. Encourages continued cooperation between the parties to the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal and the International Maritime Organization on regulations on the prevention of pollution from ships;

207. Notes the role of the Basel Convention in protecting the marine environment against the adverse effects which may result from such wastes;

208. Notes with concern the potential for serious environmental consequences resulting from oil spill incidents, urges States, consistent with international law, to cooperate, directly or through competent international organizations, and share best practices, in the fields of protection of the marine environment, human health and safety, prevention, emergency response and mitigation, and in this regard encourages the undertaking of and collaboration on scientific research, including marine scientific research, to better understand the consequences of marine oil spills;

209. Encourages States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the International Convention on Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Cooperation, 1990, and the Protocol on Preparedness, Response and Cooperation to Pollution Incidents by Hazardous and Noxious Substances, 2000, of the International Maritime Organization, and in this regard to consider developing and joining regional arrangements to enhance international cooperation for combating major oil and hazardous substances pollution incidents;

210. Encourages States to consider becoming parties to the 2010 Protocol to the 1996 International Convention on Liability and Compensation for Damage in Connection with the Carriage of Hazardous and Noxious Substances by Sea;

X

Marine biodiversity

211. Reaffirms its central role relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, notes the work of States and relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies on those issues, and invites them to contribute, within the areas of their respective competence, to the consideration of these issues within the process initiated by the General Assembly in resolution 66/231;

212. Welcomes the holding of the first and second meetings of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, on the scope, parameters and feasibility of an international instrument under the Convention, convened in New York from 1 to 4 April 2014 and from 16 to 19 June 2014, in accordance with paragraphs 198 to 200 of resolution 68/70, within the process initiated by the General Assembly in resolution 66/231, with a view to ensuring that the legal framework for the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction effectively addresses those issues by identifying gaps and ways forward, including through the implementation of existing instruments and the possible development of a multilateral agreement under the Convention, and takes note of the exchange of views and progress made at those meetings;

213. Reaffirms the commitment made by States in "The future we want" to address, on an urgent basis, building on the work of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group and before the end of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, the issue of the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity of areas beyond national jurisdiction, including by taking a decision on the development of an international instrument under the Convention, and recalls its decision, in resolution 68/70, to establish a process within the Working Group to prepare for such action;

214. Reaffirms its request, in resolution 68/70, for the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, within its mandate established by resolution 66/231 and in the light of resolution 67/78, and in order to prepare for the decision on the development of an international instrument under the Convention to be taken at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, to make recommendations to the Assembly at the Working Group meeting to be held from 20 to 23 January 2015 on the scope, parameters and feasibility of an international instrument under the Convention;

215. Recalls its decision in resolution 68/70, to that end, that the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group should meet for three meetings of four days each, with the possibility of the General Assembly deciding that additional meetings would be held, if needed, within existing resources;

216. Recalls its request to the Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, in order to inform the deliberations of the Working Group, to invite Member States to submit their views on the scope, parameters and feasibility of an international instrument under the Convention, for circulation by the Division to Member States as an informal working document compiling the views of States no later than three weeks before the first meeting of the Working Group, and decides that this informal working document will be updated and circulated prior to subsequent meetings;

217. Recognizes the abundance and diversity of marine genetic resources and their value in terms of the benefits, goods and services they can provide;

218. Also recognizes the importance of research on marine genetic resources for the purpose of enhancing the scientific understanding, potential use and application, and enhanced management of marine ecosystems;

219. Encourages States and international organizations, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and partnerships, to continue in a sustainable and comprehensive way to support, promote and strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research, taking into account, in particular, the need to create greater taxonomic capabilities;

220. Notes the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity and the Convention on Biological Diversity elaborated programme of work on marine and coastal biological diversity, and, while reiterating the central role of the General Assembly relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, notes with appreciation the complementary technical and scientific work done by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity;

221. Reaffirms the need for States, individually or through competent international organizations, to urgently consider ways to integrate and improve, based on the best available scientific information and the precautionary approach and in accordance with the Convention and related agreements and instruments, the management of risks to the marine biodiversity of seamounts, cold water corals, hydrothermal vents and certain other underwater features;

222. Calls upon States and international organizations to urgently take further action to address, in accordance with international law, destructive practices that have adverse impacts on marine biodiversity and ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals;

223. Calls upon States to strengthen, in a manner consistent with international law, in particular the Convention, the conservation and management of marine biodiversity and ecosystems and national policies in relation to marine protected areas;

224. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States reaffirmed the importance of area-based conservation measures, including marine protected areas, consistent with international law and based on best available scientific information, as a tool for conservation of biological diversity and sustainable use of its components, and noted decision X/2 of the tenth Meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, that by 2020, 10 per cent of coastal and marine areas, especially areas of particular importance for biodiversity and ecosystem services, are to be conserved through effectively and equitably managed, ecologically representative and well-connected systems of protected areas and other effective area-based conservation measures;

225. Encourages States, in this regard, to further progress towards the establishment of marine protected areas, including representative networks, and calls upon States to further consider options to identify and protect ecologically or biologically significant areas, consistent with international law and on the basis of the best available scientific information;

226. Reaffirms the need for States to continue and intensify their efforts, directly and through competent international organizations, to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools for conserving and managing vulnerable marine ecosystems, including the possible establishment of marine protected areas, consistent with international law, as reflected in the Convention, and based on the best scientific information available;

227. Notes the work of States, relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies, including the Convention on Biological Diversity, in the assessment of scientific information on and compilation of ecological criteria for the identification of marine areas that may require protection, in the light of the objective of the World Summit on Sustainable Development to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools, such as ecosystem approaches and the establishment of marine protected areas consistent with international law, as reflected in the Convention, and based on scientific information, including representative networks;

228. Recalls that the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, at its ninth meeting, adopted scientific criteria for identifying ecologically or biologically significant marine areas in need of protection in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats and scientific guidance for selecting areas to establish a representative network of marine protected areas, including in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats, notes the ongoing work under the Convention on Biological Diversity on the application of the scientific criteria for ecologically or biologically significant marine areas through the organization of a series of regional workshops, and also recalls that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations has developed guidance for the identification of vulnerable marine ecosystems through the International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-sea Fisheries in the High Seas;

229. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization to identify and designate as Particularly Sensitive Sea Areas marine areas which are recognized for their significance in terms of ecological, socioeconomic or scientific criteria and are vulnerable to damage by international shipping activities;

230. Acknowledges the Micronesia Challenge, the Eastern Tropical Pacific Seascape project, the Caribbean challenge and the Coral Triangle Initiative, which in particular seek to create and link domestic marine protected areas to better facilitate ecosystem approaches, and reaffirms the need for further international cooperation, coordination and collaboration in support of such initiatives;

231. Notes the efforts of the Sargasso Sea Alliance, led by the Government of Bermuda, to raise awareness of the ecological significance of the Sargasso Sea;

232. Reiterates its support for the International Coral Reef Initiative, notes the International Coral Reef Initiative General Meeting held in Okinawa, Japan, from 20 to 23 October 2014, and supports the elaborated programme of work of the Convention on Biological Diversity on marine and coastal biological diversity related to coral reefs under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity;

233. Recalls that in “The future we want”, States recognized the significant economic, social and environmental contributions of coral reefs, in particular to islands and other coastal States, as well as the significant vulnerability of coral reefs and mangroves to impacts, including from climate change, ocean acidification, overfishing, destructive fishing practices and pollution, and supported international cooperation with a view to conserving coral reef and mangrove ecosystems and realizing their social, economic and environmental benefits, as well as facilitating technical collaboration and voluntary information-sharing;

234. Encourages States and relevant international institutions to improve efforts to address coral bleaching by, inter alia, improving monitoring to predict and identify bleaching events, supporting and strengthening action taken during such events and improving strategies to manage reefs to support their natural resilience and enhance their ability to withstand other pressures, including ocean acidification, and in this regard also encourages States to implement the priority actions to achieve Aichi Biodiversity Target 10 for coral reefs and closely associated ecosystems, adopted by the twelfth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity;

235. Encourages States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in exchanging information in the event of accidents involving vessels on coral reefs and in promoting the development of economic assessment techniques for both restoration and non-use values of coral reef systems;

236. Emphasizes the need to mainstream sustainable coral reef management and integrated watershed management into national development strategies, as well as into the activities of relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, international financial institutions and the donor community;

237. Notes that ocean noise has potential significant adverse impacts on living marine resources, affirms the importance of sound scientific studies in addressing this matter, encourages further research, studies and consideration of the impacts of ocean noise on living marine resources, notes the work of States and competent international organizations in that regard, and requests the Division to continue to compile the peer-reviewed scientific studies it receives from Member States and intergovernmental organizations pursuant to paragraph 107 of resolution 61/222 and, as appropriate, to make them, or references and links to them, available on its website;

238. Notes the approval of the International Maritime Organization Guidelines for the reduction of underwater noise from commercial shipping to address adverse impacts on marine life;

XI

Marine science

239. Calls upon States, individually or in collaboration with each other or with competent international organizations and bodies, to continue to strive to improve understanding and knowledge of the oceans and the deep sea, including, in particular, the extent and vulnerability of deep sea biodiversity and ecosystems, by increasing their marine scientific research activities in accordance with the Convention;

240. Encourages, in that regard, relevant international organizations and other donors to consider supporting the Endowment Fund of the International Seabed Authority in order to promote the conduct of collaborative marine scientific research in the international seabed area by supporting the participation of qualified scientists and technical personnel from developing countries in relevant programmes, initiatives and activities;

241. Notes the partnership between the Division and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission on a training programme on marine scientific research under the Convention, and encourages States, relevant international organizations and other donors to consider supporting the initiative;

242. Invites all relevant organizations, funds, programmes and bodies within the United Nations system, in consultation with interested States, to coordinate relevant activities with regional and national marine scientific and technological centres in small island developing States, as appropriate, to ensure the more effective achievement of their objectives in accordance with relevant United Nations small island developing States development programmes and strategies;

243. Notes the resolution adopted by the Executive Council of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission at its forty-seventh session, held in Paris from 1 to 4 July 2014, regarding the adoption of the Second International Indian Ocean Expedition, and invites States to participate in this initiative;

244. Notes with appreciation the work of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, with the advice of the Advisory Body of Experts on the Law of the Sea, on the development of procedures for the implementation of Parts XIII and XIV of the Convention;

245. Also notes with appreciation the work of the Advisory Body of Experts, including its work in cooperation with the Division, on the practice of member States related to marine scientific research and transfer of marine technology within the framework of the Convention, and welcomes the decision by the Executive Council of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, at its forty-fifth session, held in Paris from 26 to 28 June 2012, that the Advisory Body will continue its work focused on priorities as tasked by Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission governing bodies in line with the terms of reference, mobilizing extrabudgetary resources when necessary;

246. Recalls the issuance of the revised publication entitled Marine Scientific Research: A guide to the implementation of the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea in December 2010, and requests the Secretariat to continue to make efforts to publish the guide in all official languages of the United Nations;

247. Notes the contribution of the Census of Marine Life to marine biodiversity research, including through its report entitled "First Census of Marine Life 2010: Highlights of a Decade of Discovery" and its related open-access data holding and sharing facility, the Ocean Biogeographic Information System, hosted by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission;

248. Welcomes the increasing attention being focused on oceans as a potential source of renewable energy, and notes in this regard the summary of discussions of the Informal Consultative Process at its thirteenth meeting;

249. Stresses the importance of increasing the scientific understanding of the oceans-atmosphere interface, including through participation in ocean observing programmes and geographic information systems, such as the Global Ocean Observing System, sponsored by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the United Nations Environment Programme, the World Meteorological Organization and the International Council for Science, particularly considering their role in monitoring and forecasting climate change and variability and in the establishment and operation of tsunami warning systems;

250. Welcomes the progress made by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and Member States towards the establishment and operation of regional and national tsunami warning and mitigation systems, also welcomes the continued collaboration of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations in this effort, further welcomes the development and recent dissemination of the new Enhanced Tsunami Products, which will assist countries in the Pacific Tsunami Warning and Mitigation System to assess tsunami threats and issue warnings, and encourages Member States to establish and sustain their national warning and mitigation systems, within a global, ocean-related multi-hazard approach, as necessary, to reduce loss of life and damage to national economies and strengthen the resilience of coastal communities to natural disasters;

251. Stresses the need for continued efforts in developing mitigation and preparedness measures for natural disasters, particularly following tsunami events caused by earthquakes, such as the 11 March 2011 event in Japan;

252. Urges States to take necessary action and to cooperate in relevant organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the World Meteorological Organization, to address damage to ocean data buoys deployed and operated in accordance with international law, including through education and outreach about the importance and purpose of these buoys, and by strengthening these buoys against such damage, and increasing reporting of such damage;

XII

Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socioeconomic Aspects

253. Reiterates the need to strengthen the regular scientific assessment of the state of the marine environment in order to enhance the scientific basis for policymaking;

254. Welcomes the holding of the fifth meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole on the Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socioeconomic Aspects, convened in New York on 31 March 2014 in accordance with paragraph 243 of resolution 68/70;

255. Endorses the recommendations adopted by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole at its fifth meeting;

256. Reaffirms the principles guiding the Regular Process and the objective and scope of its first cycle (2010–2014) as agreed upon at the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole in 2009;

257. Notes that the members of the Group of Experts of the Regular Process have continued serving on the Group of Experts during the second phase of the first assessment cycle pursuant to paragraph 209 of resolution 65/37 A, and requests them to continue serving on the Group of Experts until the completion of the first cycle of the Regular Process;

258. Recognizes the work of the Group of Experts during the second phase of the first assessment cycle and the work of the individual members of the pool of experts involved in the preparation of the first global integrated marine assessment;

259. Welcomes the development and operation of the website of the Regular Process, under the auspices of the United Nations, recognizes the contributions made to the establishment of the website, and invites consultations between the Bureau of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole, with the participation of the Joint Coordinators of the Group of Experts, as appropriate, and the secretariat of the Regular Process regarding the content of the website;

260. Takes note of the guidance for the Group of Experts and the secretariat of the Regular Process adopted by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole and the updated outline for the first global integrated marine assessment;

261. Expresses its appreciation for the eight workshops held in support of the Regular Process, and welcomes the holding of the workshop in Chennai, India, from 27 to 29 January 2014 and takes note of the summary thereof;

262. Welcomes the technical workshops on capacity-building for integrated assessments, held in Bangkok and Maputo in 2012, as well as in Abidjan and Freetown in 2013;

263. Recognizes the important role of the Bureau of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole in putting into practice the decisions and guidance of the Working Group during the intersessional period, and requests the Bureau to continue oversight of the progress of work in order to guide the process towards the completion of the first global integrated marine assessment;

264. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the sixth meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole from 8 to 11 September 2015, with a view to making recommendations to the General Assembly, in particular in light of paragraph 267 of the present resolution;

265. Recalls that the Regular Process, as established under the United Nations, is accountable to the General Assembly and is an intergovernmental process guided by international law, including the Convention and other applicable international instruments, and takes into account relevant Assembly resolutions;

266. Also recalls that in “The future we want”, States expressed their support for the Regular Process, looked forward to the completion of its first global integrated assessment of the state of the marine environment by 2014 and its subsequent consideration by the General Assembly, and encouraged consideration by States of the assessment findings at appropriate levels;

267. Further recalls its decision that, with the approval of the Bureau, the draft assessment should be transmitted for consideration by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole, that the assessment should be available on the website of the Regular Process in the working language of the Group of Experts, that the Secretary-General should endeavour to translate the assessment into all other official languages, subject to the availability of resources in the voluntary trust fund for the purposes of supporting the operations of the first five-year cycle of the Regular Process, and also recalls its decision that the summary of the first global integrated marine assessment should be submitted by the Co-Chairs of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole, to be issued as a document of the General Assembly for its final approval by the Assembly at its seventieth session;

268. Notes with appreciation the nominations received to date to the pool of experts of the Regular Process, urges States to continue to appoint individuals to the pool of experts through the regional groups, in accordance with the criteria for the appointment of experts, and to provide support for the work of the Group of Experts in the preparation of the first global integrated marine assessment, and requests the members of the Bureau to engage States in their regional groups and urge them to nominate individuals to the pool of experts as soon as possible;

269. Invites the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the United Nations Environment Programme, the International Maritime Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other competent United Nations specialized agencies, as appropriate, to continue to provide technical and scientific support to the Regular Process;

270. Notes the work of the Intergovernmental Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services, and recognizes the importance of ensuring that the assessments prepared under that Platform and the Regular Process support each other and avoid unnecessary duplication;

271. Requests the secretariat of the Regular Process to convene meetings of the Group of Experts in accordance with the revised draft timetable for the first global integrated marine assessment, subject to the availability of resources;

272. Notes with appreciation the support provided by the Division as the secretariat of the Regular Process, while also recognizing its already significant resource constraints;

273. Also notes with appreciation the technical and logistical support of the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission to the Regular Process and of their support, and the support of other organizations, for the workshops of the Regular Process and to the technical workshops on capacity-building for the conduct of integrated assessments;

274. Recognizes that United Nations specialized agencies can play an important role in promoting the Regular Process, and invites those agencies to continue to promote the Regular Process in consultation and coordination with the secretariat of the Regular Process;

275. Encourages additional opportunities for the Group of Experts to have access to information relevant to the first global integrated marine assessment and capacity-building;

276. Notes the recommendation made by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole, and decides to continue its consideration of any need to strengthen the capacity of the Division, as the secretariat of the Regular Process;

277. Notes with appreciation the contributions made to the voluntary trust fund for the purpose of supporting the operations of the first five-year cycle of the Regular Process, established pursuant to paragraph 183 of resolution 64/71, expresses its serious concern regarding the limited resources available in the trust fund, urges Member States, international financial institutions, donor agencies, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and natural and juridical persons to make financial contributions to the voluntary trust fund and to make other contributions to the Regular Process, and, in the light of the limited resources available in the trust fund, recalls its decision pursuant to paragraph 255 of resolution 68/70 to review the need for sustainability in the activities of the Regular Process and to continue its consideration of the need to ensure predictability and sustainability of financial resources to support the operations of the Regular Process;

278. Requests the Secretary-General to administer the voluntary trust fund established pursuant to paragraph 183 of resolution 64/71 beyond the first five-year cycle and for the duration of the operations of the Regular Process;

XIII

Regional cooperation

279. Notes that there have been a number of initiatives at the regional level, in various regions, to further the implementation of the Convention, also notes in that context the Caribbean-focused Assistance Fund, which is intended to facilitate, mainly through technical assistance, the voluntary undertaking of maritime delimitation negotiations between Caribbean States, notes once again the Fund for Peace: Peaceful Settlement of Territorial Disputes, established by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in 2000 as a primary mechanism, given its broader regional scope, for the prevention and resolution of pending territorial, land border and maritime boundary disputes, and calls upon States and others in a position to do so to contribute to these funds;

280. Notes with appreciation efforts at the regional level to further the implementation of the Convention and respond, including through capacity-building, to issues related to maritime safety and security, the conservation and sustainable use of living marine resources, the protection and preservation of the marine environment and the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity;

281. Welcomes the adoption of the outcome document of the third International Conference on Small Island Developing States, entitled “SIDS Accelerated Modalities of Action (SAMOA) Pathway” (Samoa Pathway) and the new modalities set forth for strengthened action on a range of small island developing States challenges and priorities, including challenges related to the conservation and sustainable use of marine resources, and the preservation of the marine environment, and reaffirms its commitment to work with small island developing States towards full implementation of the Samoa Pathway to ensure its success;

282. Invites States and international organizations to enhance their cooperation to better protect the marine environment, and in this respect welcomes the memorandum of understanding for enhanced cooperation, concluded between the Commission for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North-East Atlantic, the North East Atlantic Fisheries Commission, the International Seabed Authority and the International Maritime Organization;

283. Recognizes the results of the International Polar Year, 2007–2008, with particular emphasis on new knowledge about the linkages between environmental change in the polar regions and global climate systems, and encourages States and scientific communities to strengthen their cooperation in this respect;

284. Welcomes regional cooperation, and in this regard notes the Pacific Oceanscape Framework as an initiative to enhance cooperation among coastal States in the Pacific island region to foster marine conservation and sustainable development;

285. Notes with appreciation the various cooperative efforts displayed by States at the regional and subregional levels, and in this regard welcomes initiatives such as the Integrated Assessment and Management of the Gulf of Mexico Large Marine Ecosystem;

286. Acknowledges relevant cooperation among the members of the Zone of Peace and Cooperation of the South Atlantic;

287. Notes the decision of the Assembly of the African Union at its twenty-second ordinary session, held in Addis Ababa on 30 and 31 January 2014, to adopt the 2050 Africa’s Integrated Maritime Strategy and to retain 2015 to 2025 as the “Decade of African Seas and Oceans”;

288. Also notes the adoption of the Vienna Programme of Action for Landlocked Developing Countries for the Decade 2014–2024 by the second United Nations Conference on Landlocked Developing Countries, held in Vienna from 3 to 5 November 2014, following the comprehensive 10-year review of the implementation of the Almaty Programme of Action: Addressing the Special Needs of Landlocked Developing Countries within a New Global Framework for Transit Transport Cooperation for Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries, and also notes the need for cooperation to address the development needs and challenges faced by landlocked developing countries associated with, inter alia, their lack of direct territorial access to the sea, remoteness and isolation from world markets, in line with the objectives of the Vienna Programme of Action;

XIV

Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea

289. Welcomes the report of the Co-Chairs on the work of the Informal Consultative Process at its fifteenth meeting, which focused on the role of seafood in global food security;

290. Recognizes the role of the Informal Consultative Process as a unique forum for comprehensive discussions on issues related to oceans and the law of the sea, consistent with the framework provided by the Convention and chapter 17 of Agenda 21, and that the perspective of the three pillars of sustainable development should be further enhanced in the examination of the selected topics;

291. Welcomes the work of the Informal Consultative Process and its contribution to improving coordination and cooperation between States and strengthening the annual debate of the General Assembly on oceans and the law of the sea by effectively drawing attention to key issues and current trends;

292. Also welcomes efforts to improve and focus the work of the Informal Consultative Process, and in that respect recognizes the primary role of the Informal Consultative Process in integrating knowledge, the exchange of opinions among multiple stakeholders and coordination among competent agencies, and enhancing awareness of topics, including emerging issues, while promoting the three pillars of sustainable development, and recommends that the Informal Consultative Process devise a transparent, objective and inclusive process for the selection of topics and panellists so as to facilitate the work of the General Assembly during informal consultations concerning the annual resolution on oceans and the law of the sea;

293. Recalls the need to strengthen and improve the efficiency of the Informal Consultative Process, and encourages States, intergovernmental organizations and programmes to provide guidance to the Co-Chairs to this effect, particularly before and during the preparatory meeting for the Informal Consultative Process;

294. Decides to continue the Informal Consultative Process for the next two years, in accordance with resolution 54/33, with a further review of its effectiveness and utility by the General Assembly at its seventy-first session;

295. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 3 of resolution 54/33, the sixteenth meeting of the Informal Consultative Process, in New York from 6 to 10 April 2015, to provide it with the facilities necessary for the performance of its work and to arrange for support to be provided by the Division, in cooperation with other relevant parts of the Secretariat, as appropriate;

296. Expresses its continued serious concern regarding the lack of resources available in the voluntary trust fund established pursuant to resolution 55/7 for the purpose of assisting developing countries, in particular least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing States, in attending the meetings of the Informal Consultative Process, and urges States to make additional contributions to the trust fund;

297. Decides that those representatives from developing countries who are invited by the Co-Chairs, in consultation with Governments, to make presentations during the meetings of the Informal Consultative Process shall receive priority consideration in the disbursement of funds from the voluntary trust fund established pursuant to resolution 55/7 in order to cover the costs of their travel, and shall also be eligible to receive daily subsistence allowance subject to the availability of funds after the travel costs of all other eligible representatives from those countries mentioned in paragraph 296 above have been covered;

298. Also decides that, in its deliberations on the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea, the Informal Consultative Process shall focus its discussions at its sixteenth meeting, in 2015, on the theme "Oceans and sustainable development: integration of the three dimensions of sustainable development, namely, environmental, social and economic" and at its seventeenth meeting, in 2016, on the theme "Marine debris, plastics and microplastics";

XV

Coordination and cooperation

299. Encourages States to work closely with and through international organizations, funds and programmes, as well as the specialized agencies of the United Nations system and relevant international conventions, to identify emerging areas of focus for improved coordination and cooperation and how best to address these issues;

300. Encourages bodies established by the Convention to strengthen coordination and cooperation, as appropriate, in fulfilling their respective mandates;

301. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of heads of intergovernmental organizations, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations engaged in activities relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, as well as funding institutions, and underlines the importance of their constructive and timely input for the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and of their participation in relevant meetings and processes;

302. Welcomes the work done by the secretariats of relevant United Nations specialized agencies, programmes, funds and bodies and the secretariats of related organizations and conventions to enhance inter-agency coordination and cooperation on ocean issues, including, where appropriate, through UN-Oceans, the inter-agency coordination mechanism on ocean and coastal issues within the United Nations system;

303. Recognizes the work undertaken by UN-Oceans, under the revised terms of reference for the work of UN-Oceans, and with the United Nations Legal Counsel/Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea as the focal point of UN-Oceans, as an interim measure, in this regard, invites Member States and others in a position to do so to make financial earmarked contributions to the trust fund established by the Secretary-General for the Office of Legal Affairs to support the promotion of international law, and authorizes the Secretary-General to disburse funds from such contributions to that trust fund for the purposes of the development and maintenance of an online searchable database for an inventory of the mandates of UN-Oceans members and priorities approved by the respective governing bodies of the participating organizations of UN-Oceans, with a view to identifying possible areas of collaboration and synergy, as well as for travel associated with the performance of the functions of the focal point;

304. Reaffirms its decision to review the terms of reference for the work of UN-Oceans at its seventy-second session in the light of the work of UN-Oceans;

XVI

Activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

305. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the annual report on oceans and the law of the sea, prepared by the Division, as well as for the other activities of the Division, which reflect the high standard of assistance provided to Member States by the Division;

306. Notes with satisfaction the sixth observance by the United Nations of World Oceans Day in 2014, recognizes with appreciation the efforts deployed by the Division in organizing its celebration, and invites the Division to continue to promote and facilitate international cooperation on the law of the sea and ocean affairs in the context of the future observance of World Oceans Day, as well as through its participation in other events;

307. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities and functions entrusted to him in the Convention and in the related resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and to ensure the allocation of appropriate resources to the Division for the performance of its activities under the approved budget for the Organization;

308. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue the publication activities of the Division, in particular through the publication of The Law of the Sea: A Select Bibliography and the Law of the Sea Bulletin;

XVII

Seventieth session of the General Assembly

309. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report for consideration by the General Assembly at its seventieth session on developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including the implementation of the present resolution, in accordance with resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33, and to prepare a separate section of the report on the topic that is the focus of the sixteenth meeting of the Informal Consultative Process;

310. Emphasizes the critical role of the annual report of the Secretary-General, which integrates information on developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and the work of the Organization, its specialized agencies and other institutions in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea at the global and regional levels, and as a result constitutes the basis for the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review;

311. Notes that the report referred to in paragraph 309 above will also be submitted to States Parties pursuant to article 319 of the Convention regarding issues of a general nature that have arisen with respect to the Convention;

312. Also notes the desire to further improve the efficiency of and effective participation of delegations in the informal consultations concerning the annual General Assembly resolution on oceans and the law of the sea, decides that the period of the informal consultations on that resolution should not exceed a maximum of two weeks in total and that the consultations should be scheduled in such a way that the Division has sufficient time to produce the report referred to in paragraph 309 above, and invites States to submit text proposals for inclusion in the resolution to the Coordinator of the informal consultations at the earliest possible date;

313. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea".

PART FIVE

Institutional, administrative and budgetary questions

United Nations restructuring and institutional matters

In 2014, the General Assembly continued efforts to strengthen the accountability architecture throughout the UN system. The Secretary-General submitted his third progress report on the accountability system in the UN Secretariat. The Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly focused on the Assembly's working methods and authority, and the selection and appointment of the UN system's leadership.

The General Assembly resumed its sixty-eighth session in January and opened its sixty-ninth session on 16 September. It held high-level meetings on the World Conference on Indigenous Peoples and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention of the Rights of the Child. It also held a special session on the follow-up to the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development beyond 2014. The Assembly granted observer status to two regional organizations to participate in its work.

The Security Council held 263 formal meetings and considered 49 questions dealing with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security. In October, the Council held an open debate on its working methods.

In addition to its organizational and substantive sessions, the Economic and Social Council held a high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

The United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination—the main instrument for strengthening the coordination role of the UN intergovernmental bodies on social, economic and related matters—met in two regular sessions, promoting exchanges with Member States and seeking to enhance the effectiveness of the UN system by fostering coherence and coordination.

The Committee for Programme and Coordination considered the programme performance of the United Nations for 2012–2013 and the proposed strategic framework for 2016–2017, as well as questions related to evaluation and coordination.

Cooperation between the United Nations and 25 regional and other organizations was highlighted in a consolidated report of the Secretary-General.

On the recommendation of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), the Economic and Social Council granted consultative status to 383 NGOs, providing them with access to various UN bodies.

Restructuring matters

Programme of reform

Accountability architecture

Report of Secretary-General. In January, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/253 [YUN 2013, p. 1404], the Secretary-General submitted the third progress report [A/68/697] on the accountability system in the UN Secretariat. The report reviewed the implementation of enterprise risk management, described progress made in a number of areas and included an action plan for implementing results-based management. Issues reviewed included results-based management; enterprise risk management and internal control framework; personal accountability, including senior managers' compacts; ethics and accountability, including strengthening accountability in field missions and in procurement, as well as for mismanagement and improper decisions. Two annexes described actions taken to address the root causes of the recurring issues identified by the Board of Auditors in its reports on UN peacekeeping operations and on UN non-peacekeeping areas. The Secretary-General requested the General Assembly to take note of the progress of the Secretariat in strengthening its accountability system, as described in the report.

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) noted in March [A/68/783] that, in implementing the organizational resilience management system, an operational risk management model for emergency management had been developed, which could provide an example for enterprise risk management. It stressed that the senior managers' compacts were an instrument for accountability; emphasized the importance of full implementation of the zero-tolerance policy of the Organization against sexual exploitation or abuse in field missions; underlined the importance of taking timely action to impose appropriate measures in all cases of non-compliance with the financial disclosure programme; and recommended strengthening for all UN staff the link between performance in appraisals and rewards or sanctions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 April [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, adopted resolution 68/264 [draft: A/68/691/Add.1] without vote [agenda item 132].

Progress towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 59/272 of 23 December 2004 and 60/254 of 8 May 2006, section I of its resolution 60/260 of 8 May 2006 and its resolutions 60/283 of 7 July 2006, 61/245 of 22 December 2006, 63/276 of 7 April 2009, 64/259 of 29 March 2010, 66/257 of 9 April 2012 and 67/253 of 12 April 2013,

Having considered the third progress report of the Secretary-General on the accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming its commitment to strengthening accountability in the United Nations Secretariat and the accountability of the Secretary-General for the performance of the Secretariat to all Member States,

Emphasizing that accountability is a central pillar of effective and efficient management that requires attention and strong commitment at all levels of the Secretariat, especially at the highest level,

Recognizing and reaffirming the important role of the oversight bodies in the development of an accountability system that is relevant to the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the third progress report of the Secretary-General on the accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Emphasizes the importance of promoting a culture of accountability, results-based management, enterprise risk management and internal control at all levels in the Secretariat through the continued leadership and commitment of senior managers, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General take appropriate measures to that end, including the training of relevant staff;

4. Reiterates the provisions of paragraphs 4, 5, 9, 10, 12, 13, 15, 17 and 19 of section I of its resolution 66/257;

5. Stresses the role and responsibility of the Management Committee in promoting and advancing the accountability system as a whole;

6. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue strengthening and improving the accountability framework by taking advantage of the benefits related to the deployment of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards and Umoja, and requests him to report thereon in the context of the next progress report on accountability;

7. Reaffirms that results-based management and performance reporting are essential pillars of a comprehensive accountability framework;

8. Reiterates that results-based management will require the Organization to create a sustained focus on results, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to take concrete measures to achieve a cultural change throughout the Organization;

9. Also reiterates the provisions of paragraph 29 of section I of its resolution 66/257 and paragraph 6 (b) of its resolution 67/253;

10. Welcomes the efforts made by the Secretary-General to implement the results-based management framework at the United Nations in a phased manner, and requests him to implement the recommendations of the results-based-management working group, taking into account the lessons learned and challenges related to the implementation, as referred to in the report of the Secretary-General;

11. Recalls the recommendations contained in paragraph 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee, as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/259, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General in this regard;

12. Also recalls paragraph 11 of its resolution 64/259, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General identify appropriate methods and tools to portray the efficiency with which the Secretariat undertakes its work;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to promote a culture of self-evaluation throughout the Organization, to continue to mainstream the use of relevant monitoring and evaluation tools in programme planning and implementation, to continue to provide staff with adequate training, as appropriate, and to include in his report on the implementation of the present resolution information on measures taken in this regard;

14. Recalls paragraph 7 of its resolution 67/253, notes the progress made by the Secretary-General towards the implementation of enterprise risk management, and urges him to complete the current Secretariat-wide risk assessment as a matter of priority;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to include the outcome of the Secretariat-wide risk assessment in the next progress report on accountability, including information on the development of risk registers, response plans and a comprehensive risk treatment plan;

16. Reiterates that compacts and end-of-year assessments are unique accountability tools for senior managers and contribute to transparency in the Organization;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the inclusion in the senior managers' compacts of a new standard managerial indicator related to the issuance of official documentation to intergovernmental bodies and General Assembly committees and to report thereon in the context of the next progress report on accountability;

18. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to take further concrete measures to ensure that the compacts system becomes a meaningful and powerful instrument of accountability, to take actions to address systemic issues that prevent managers from meeting their targets and to report to the General Assembly on the progress achieved in this regard in the context of the next progress report on accountability;

19. Recalls paragraph 20 of its resolution 66/257 and paragraph 21 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and notes with concern that the current appraisal system lacks credibility;

20. Also recalls paragraphs 5 and 7 of section I of its resolution 68/252 of 27 December 2013, and looks forward to considering the comprehensive performance management proposal of the Secretary-General under the agenda item on human resources management at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly;

21. Further recalls paragraph 15 of the report of the Advisory Committee, encourages the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the zero-tolerance policy of the Organization regarding any kind of sexual exploitation or abuse, and looks forward to its consideration of this matter in the context of the next report on cross-cutting issues related to peacekeeping operations;

22. Emphasizes the importance of establishing and fully implementing real, effective and efficient mechanisms that foster institutional and personal accountability at all levels;

23. Welcomes the ongoing efforts and recent initiatives undertaken by the Secretariat to strengthen ethics in the Organization, and urges the timely implementation of the proposed action plan;

24. Emphasizes the importance of enhancing the processes and responses of the Organization to ensure that it encourages the reporting of serious misconduct, protects whistle-blowers from retaliation and intervenes to prevent retaliation from occurring;

25. Looks forward to the results and outcomes of the comprehensive review of the regulatory framework for the updating of the Secretary-General's bulletin on protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with duly authorized audits or investigations;

26. Recognizes the importance of criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission, and reaffirms the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, which provide the basis for the guidance of the Secretary-General in this regard;

27. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to hold all staff, in particular senior managers, accountable for mismanagement and wrongful or improper decisions and to report cases handled by the Secretary-General and the types of disciplinary measures that have been imposed;

28. Stresses the need also to address poor decision-making in an effective manner, in particular to reduce such instances by sharing lessons learned and best practices;

29. Emphasizes that the timely submission of documents is an important aspect of the Secretariat's accountability to Member States;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixty-ninth session on the implementation of the present resolution, and decides to keep under review the frequency of future progress reports.

Strengthening of UN system

On 29 December, the Assembly decided that the item on strengthening the UN system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

Institutional matters

General Assembly

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

Reports of Secretary-General. In February [A/68/774], the Secretary-General recalled that the General Assembly, by resolution 67/297 [YUN 2013,

p. 1407], had established an Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly, also requesting the Secretary-General to submit to the Working Group an update on the provisions of the Assembly resolutions on revitalization addressed to the Secretariat that had not been implemented. The Secretary-General informed the Assembly that all such provisions had been fully implemented.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], the Secretary-General in June submitted a report [A/68/852] on the revitalization of the work of the Assembly, which contained the draft programme of work of the plenary for the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly. An addendum issued in September [A/68/852/Add.1] presented the status of documentation for that session as at 3 September.

Ad Hoc Working Group report. As requested in Assembly resolution 67/297, the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly in July reported [A/68/951] on its activities and made recommendations for further progress. The Working Group held six meetings, addressing the role and authority of the Assembly, the Assembly's working methods, the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and other executive heads of the UN system and the strengthening of the institutional memory of the Office of the Assembly President. The Working Group presented recommendations, which were adopted by the Assembly in resolution 68/307 (see below).

Communication. In a letter dated 29 October [A/69/562], Finland transmitted to the Secretary-General the summary and programme of action of the high-level retreat it had organized, entitled "Towards a stronger General Assembly" (Manhasset, New York, 26–27 June), with the aim of contributing to the revitalization of the work of the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 September [meeting 108], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/307 [draft: A/68/951] without vote [agenda item 122].

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 67/297 of 29 August 2013 and all other previous resolutions relating to the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Underlining the need to further enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the General Assembly,

Reiterating that the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly is a critical component of the overall reform of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the central position of the General Assembly as the chief deliberative, policymaking and representative organ of the United Nations, as well as the role of the Assembly in the process of standard-setting and the codification of international law,

Reaffirming also the role and authority of the General Assembly in global matters of concern to the international community, including in global governance, as set out in the Charter of the United Nations,

Welcoming the efforts of the President of the General Assembly to reinvigorate the revitalization of the work of the Assembly during its sixty-eighth session,

1. Welcomes the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the Work of the General Assembly and the updated inventory of General Assembly resolutions on revitalization annexed thereto;

2. Also welcomes the establishment of a multilingual web page devoted to the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly, accessible directly from the United Nations website, and invites the Secretariat to continue updating that web page and its substantive content;

3. Decides to establish, at its sixty-ninth session, an ad hoc working group on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly, open to all Member States:

(a) To identify further ways to enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, inter alia, by building on the progress achieved in past sessions as well as on previous resolutions, including evaluating the status of their implementation;

(b) To submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-ninth session;

4. Also decides that the Ad Hoc Working Group shall continue its review of the inventory of General Assembly resolutions on revitalization annexed to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group submitted at the sixty-eighth session, and, as a result, continue to update the inventory to be attached to the report to be submitted at the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly;

5. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to submit an update on the provisions of the General Assembly resolutions on revitalization addressed to the Secretariat for implementation that have not been implemented, with an indication of the constraints and reasons behind any lack of implementation, for further consideration by the Ad Hoc Working Group at the sixty-ninth session;

Role and authority of the General Assembly

6. Reaffirms the role and authority of the General Assembly, including on questions relating to international peace and security, in accordance with Articles 10 to 14 and 35 of the Charter of the United Nations, where appropriate, using the procedures set forth in rules 7 to 10 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly, which enable swift and urgent action by the Assembly, bearing in mind that the Security Council has the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, in accordance with Article 24 of the Charter;

7. Recognizes that implementation of General Assembly resolutions, including those related to the revitalization of its work, enhances the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, and underlines the important role and responsibility of Member States in their full implementation;

8. Reaffirms that the relationship between the principal organs of the United Nations is mutually reinforcing and complementary, in accordance with and with full respect for their respective functions, authority, powers and competencies as enshrined in the Charter, and in this regard stresses the importance of further ensuring increased cooperation, coordination and the exchange of information among the Presidents of the principal organs and also with the Secretariat of the United Nations, in particular the Secretary-General;

9. Also reaffirms the importance and benefit of continuing interaction between the General Assembly and international or regional forums and organizations dealing with global matters of concern to the international community, as well as with civil society, where appropriate, and encourages the exploration of appropriate actions or measures, while fully respecting the intergovernmental nature of the Assembly, in conformity with its relevant rules of procedure;

10. Recognizes the value of holding interactive inclusive thematic debates on current issues of critical importance to the international community, and encourages the President of the General Assembly to continue this practice in close consultation with the General Committee and the Member States, including with regard to the preliminary programme of such debates, in order to enable an adequate level of participation and an appropriate allocation of time for substantive interactive discussion to facilitate, where appropriate, results-oriented and productive outcomes of such debates, and in this context welcomes the initiative of the President of the Assembly at the sixty-eighth session to select "The post-2015 development agenda: setting the stage" as the theme of the general debate;

11. Welcomes the improvement in the quality of the annual reports of the Security Council to the General Assembly, and encourages the Council to make further improvement as necessary;

12. Invites the Secretariat, including the Department of Public Information, while carrying out its activities, as mandated by the General Assembly, to continue its efforts to raise the visibility of the Assembly and to enhance, in the light of the seventieth anniversary of the United Nations, world public and media awareness of the contribution made by the Assembly to the fulfilment of the goals of the Organization, as set out in the Charter;

Working methods

13. Appreciates the briefings by the Chairs of the Main Committees of the General Assembly to the Ad Hoc Working Group about the working methods of their respective Committees during the sixty-eighth session of the Assembly, and in this regard encourages the Main Committees:

(a) To ensure adequate coordination in their work while avoiding overlap and duplication;

(b) To elect the bureau of each Committee at least three months in advance of the session for better coordination and for smoother handover of their work;

(c) To benefit from their respective intranet and other online services to facilitate the smooth organization and timely conclusion of their work;

(d) To share experiences, best practices and lessons learned concerning their respective working methods;

(e) To further enhance sharing of information on the work and activities of the Main Committees within each Main Committee;

14. Requests each Main Committee to further discuss its working methods at the beginning of every session, and in this regard invites the Chairs of the Main Committees to brief the Ad Hoc Working Group during the sixty-ninth session on any best practices and lessons learned with a view to improving working methods, as appropriate;

15. Stresses the importance of enhancing the role of the General Committee to support the work of the General Assembly;

16. Emphasizes that the General Assembly and its Main Committees, at the sixty-ninth session, in consultation with Member States, should continue their consideration of and make proposals for the further biennialization, triennialization, clustering and elimination of items on the agenda of the Assembly, including through the introduction of a sunset clause, with the clear consent of the sponsoring State or States, taking into account the relevant recommendations of the Ad Hoc Working Group;

17. Decides to conduct the elections of the non-permanent members of the Security Council and the members of the Economic and Social Council about six months before the elected members assume their responsibilities, beginning at the seventieth session;

18. Reiterates its invitation to the Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the Chairs of the Main Committees, in consultation with the General Committee and Member States, to enhance the coordination of the scheduling of high-level meetings and high-level thematic debates with a view to optimizing the number, especially during the general debate, and distribution of such events throughout the session;

19. Reaffirms resolution 57/301 of 13 March 2003, by which the General Assembly, inter alia, decided that the general debate shall be held without interruption, and encourages the scheduling of future high-level meetings during the first half of the year, from within existing resources, taking into account the calendar of conferences and without prejudice to the current practice of convening one high-level meeting in September at the beginning of each session of the Assembly;

20. Encourages Member States to make, to the extent possible, full use of the e-services provided by the Secretariat, in order to save costs, reduce the environmental impact and improve the distribution of documents;

21. Decides to reiterate the interim arrangement adopted in General Assembly decision 68/505 of 1 October 2013 recommending the pattern for the rotation of the Chairs of the Main Committees for the forthcoming five sessions, namely from the sixty-ninth to seventy-third sessions, as well as the guidelines on the election of the Chairs and Rapporteurs of the Main Committees contained in the annex to the present resolution;

22. Requests, in this regard, that the Ad Hoc Working Group prepare long-term arrangements concerning the election of the Chairs and Rapporteurs of the Main Committees of the General Assembly with the aim of establishing a predictable, transparent and fair mechanism, in consultation with regional groups, and that it submit them to the Assembly no later than at the seventy-second session, and in this regard invites Member States to present proposals and begin early on to give attention to the matter of concluding a future arrangement, which would come into effect at the seventy-fourth session of the Assembly, with the annex to the present resolution containing an option to be considered in this context;

23. Encourages Member States to seek gender balance in the distribution of Chairs of the Main Committees and in the position of the President of the General Assembly;

24. Underlines the need to fully implement and observe rule 55 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, which provides that, during the sessions of the Assembly, the Journal of the United Nations shall be published in the languages of the Assembly, from within existing resources;

Selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and other executive heads

25. Reaffirms its commitment to continue, in the Ad Hoc Working Group, in accordance with the provisions of Article 97 of the Charter, its consideration of the revitalization of the role of the General Assembly in the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General, and calls for the full implementation of all relevant resolutions, including resolutions 11 (I) of 24 January 1946, 51/241 of 31 July 1997, 60/286 of 8 September 2006, in particular paragraphs 17 to 22 of the annex thereto, and 64/301 of 13 September 2010, keeping in mind the applicable procedures in the rules of procedure, including rule 141, while acknowledging existing relevant Assembly practices;

26. Reiterates that the process of selecting and appointing the Secretary-General differs from the process used with regard to other executive heads in the organizations of the United Nations system, given the roles of the Security Council and the General Assembly in accordance with Article 97 of the Charter, and re-emphasizes the need for the process of selection of the Secretary-General to be transparent and inclusive of all Member States;

27. Notes that the selection and appointment of the next Secretary-General is expected to take place in 2016, and as a result encourages, without prejudice to the role of the principal organs as enshrined in Article 97 of the Charter, the President of the General Assembly to actively support this process in accordance with the role accorded to him or her by relevant resolutions;

28. Stresses the need to ensure equal and fair distribution based on gender and geographical balance, while meeting the highest possible requirements on the appointment of executive heads of the Organization;

29. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the selection and conditions of service of executive heads in the organizations of the United Nations system, proposing that the General Assembly conduct hearings or meetings with candidates running for the post of Secretary-General of the United Nations;

Strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly

30. Notes with appreciation the views expressed by the Office of the President of the General Assembly to the Ad Hoc Working Group on the strengthening of the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the Assembly and its relationship with the Secretariat and measures already undertaken in this regard, while continuing to explore additional measures where feasible, and notes the support provided by the General Assembly and Economic and Social Council Affairs Division of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat to the Office of the President of the Assembly;

31. Encourages the Presidents of the General Assembly to continue with the practice of periodically briefing Member States on their activities, including official travel;

32. Commends the initiative of convening a retreat on the strengthening of the General Assembly, which brings together the incoming and outgoing presidencies of each session of the Assembly, and in this regard takes note of the summary of the proceedings of the retreat held on 11 and 12 July 2013;

33. Encourages exchanges between the President-elect of the General Assembly and the Council of Presidents so that Presidents-elect may benefit from the experiences of former Presidents in terms of best practices and lessons learned, as part of strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the Assembly;

34. Encourages Presidents-elect to continue to ensure respect for balanced gender and geographical representation in the Office of the President of the General Assembly;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Ad Hoc Working Group at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly on sources of the funding and staffing of the Office of the President of the Assembly, including on any technical, logistical, protocol-related or financial questions, and for more clarification on the budgetary basis for the provision of such support by the Secretariat;

36. Emphasizes the need to ensure, from within agreed resources, that the Office of the President of the General Assembly is allocated dedicated Secretariat staff, with responsibility for coordinating the transition between Presidents, managing interactions between the President and the Secretary-General and the preservation of institutional memory;

37. Notes that the activities of the President of the General Assembly have increased markedly in recent years, recalls provisions regarding support for the Office of the President of the Assembly in previous resolutions, and expresses continued interest in seeking ways to further support the Office, in accordance with existing procedures, in particular rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly;

38. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017, proposals to review the budget allocation to the Office of the President of the General Assembly in accordance with existing procedures;

39. Stresses the importance of the contributions of Member States to the Trust Fund in support of the Office of the President of the General Assembly, and in this regard notes with appreciation contributions that have been made to the Fund and encourages Member States to continue to contribute to the Fund;

40. Requests the President of the General Assembly, in cooperation with the Secretariat, to report to the Ad Hoc Working Group at the sixty-ninth session of the Assembly on the role, mandate and activities of the President.

ANNEX

Guidelines on the election of the Chairs and Rapporteurs of the Main Committees of the General Assembly

1. The allocation of chairmanships of the Main Committees for the next session of the General Assembly, in case there is an intention to switch or waive chairmanship, shall be determined by the regional groups involved with facilitation and coordination by the President of the Assembly as soon as possible before the opening of that session of the Assembly.

2. Member States and regional groups might wish to consider the following pattern of regional rotation of chairmanships for the Main Committees starting at the seventy-fourth session of the General Assembly:

Session	First Committee	Fourth Committee	Second Committee	Third Committee	Fifth Committee	Sixth Committee
Seventy-fourth	Latin American and Caribbean States	Asia-Pacific States ^{a, b}	African States	Western European and other States	Asia-Pacific States ^a	Eastern European States
Seventy-fifth	Western European and other States	African States ^{a, b}	Asia-Pacific States ^b	Eastern European States	African States ^{a, b}	Latin American and Caribbean States ^b
Seventy-sixth	African States ^b	Latin American and Caribbean States	Western European and other States	Asia-Pacific States ^a	Eastern European States	Asia-Pacific States ^a
Seventy-seventh	Asia-Pacific States	African States ^{a, b}	Eastern European States	Latin American and Caribbean States	Western European and other States	African States ^a
Seventy-eighth	Eastern European States	Asia-Pacific States ^b	Latin American and Caribbean States ^a	Western European and other States ^b	African States ^b	Latin American and Caribbean States ^{a, b}
Seventy-ninth	African States ^{a, b}	Eastern European States	Asia-Pacific States ^b	African States ^a	Latin American and Caribbean States	Western European and other States

^a Regional group holding two chairmanships during the session.

^b Regional group holding two chairmanships in this Committee during the period from the seventy-fourth to the seventy-ninth sessions.

3. The decision on switching or waiving the chairmanship of a Main Committee shall be taken by the regional groups involved in coordination with the President of the General Assembly. Such a decision shall not affect the general pattern of allocation of chairmanships of the Main Committees among the regional groups in consecutive sessions.

4. The Rapporteur of a Main Committee should be elected from the regional group that held the chairmanship of the Committee at the previous session.

By decision 69/554 of 29 December, the General Assembly retained the agenda item on revitalization of the Assembly's work for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session. Also on the same date, by decision 69/554, the General Assembly decided that the item on the question of the Comorian island of Mayotte would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Assembly sessions and meetings

The General Assembly met throughout 2014. It resumed and concluded its sixty-eighth session and held the major part of its sixty-ninth session. The sixty-eighth session resumed in plenary meetings on 29 January and continued until its suspension on 15 September. The sixty-ninth session opened on 16 September and continued until its suspension on 29 December.

The Assembly held high-level meetings on the World Conference on Indigenous Peoples (22–23 September) (see p. 888) and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention of the Rights of the Child (20 November) (see p. 763). It held a special session (its twenty-ninth) on the follow-up to the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development beyond 2014 (22 September) (see p. 1207).

Agenda

Resumed sixty-eighth (2014) session

During the resumed sixty-eighth (2014) session, the General Assembly, by decision 68/504 B, decided to include additional items in the agenda of that session to be considered directly in plenary and to reopen consideration of a number of items and sub-items.

On 15 September, the Assembly deferred consideration of the item entitled “The situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan” to its sixty-ninth session (decision 68/660). On the proposal of the Comoros, it deferred consideration of the item entitled “Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte” to that session (decision 68/661).

Sixty-ninth (2014) session

By decision 69/501 of 16 September, the General Assembly authorized a number of subsidiary bodies to meet during the main part of the Assembly's sixty-ninth session.

On 19 September, by decision 69/502, the Assembly adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of the sixty-ninth session, as recommended by the General Committee [A/69/250]. By decision 69/503 of the same date, the Assembly decided that the general debate would begin on 24 September and would continue on 27 September, 29 September, 30 September and 1 October.

The Assembly took a number of actions in respect of its sixty-eighth session agenda, as listed in decision 69/504 A. On 19 September, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/69/250], it adopted the agenda [A/69/251] and the allocation of agenda items [A/69/252]; included in the agenda of its sixty-ninth session the item entitled “Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte”; and deferred consideration to its seventieth (2015) session the item entitled “Question of the Malagasy islands of Glorieuses, Juan de Nova, Europa and Bassas da India”. On 10 December, it reopened consideration of the agenda item “Appointment of members of the Committee on Contributions”; and on 12 December, decided to consider directly in plenary meeting the agenda item entitled “Follow-up to the second United Nations Conference on Landlocked Developing Countries” and to proceed immediately with the consideration of a draft resolution [A/69/L.28] (see p. 1014).

On 2 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/69/434], included in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session the item entitled “Maintenance of international security—good-neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe” (decision 69/514).

On 5 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/69/463], decided that the rotation of the post of rapporteur of the Fourth Committee for the next four sessions of the Assembly would be as set out as follows: Seventieth session (2015) Western European and other States; seventy-first session (2016) African States; seventy-second session (2017) Asia-Pacific States; seventy-third session (2018) Eastern European States (decision 69/524).

On 29 December, the Assembly decided that the following items would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session: the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization; United Nations reform: measures and proposals; and the armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security (decision 69/554).

Programme of work for 2015 Assembly Committees

In December, the General Assembly adopted decisions on the programme of work of its Main Committees for the seventieth (2015) session. On 2 December, the Assembly approved the provisional programme of work and timetable of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/69/449/Rev.1] (decision 69/520 A) and took note of the Committee report [A/69/450] (decision 69/521). On 5 December, it approved the proposed programme of work and timetable of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/69/463] (decision 69/525 A) and took note of the Committee report [A/69/464] (decision 69/526). On 10 December, the Assembly noted the provisional programme of work adopted by the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/69/507] (decision 69/529) and took note of the Committee's report [A/69/508] (decision 69/530). On 18 and 19 December, respectively, it approved the programme of work of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/69/491] (decision 69/539) and of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/69/476] (decision 69/548).

Credentials

The Credentials Committee [A/69/617], at its meeting on 25 November, had before it a memorandum from the Secretary-General stating that 116 Member States had submitted formal credentials of representatives to the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly and 77 had submitted credentials by facsimile, letter or note verbale. The Committee adopted a draft resolution proposed by the Chair accepting the credentials of the Member States concerned without a vote and recommended to the Assembly a draft resolution (see below) on the credentials of representatives to the sixty-ninth session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/138 [draft: A/69/617] without vote [agenda item 3 (b)].

Credentials of representatives to the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Credentials Committee and the recommendation contained therein,

Approves the report of the Credentials Committee.

Security Council

Security Council session

During 2014, the Security Council held 263 formal meetings, of which 241 were public meetings (among them eight high-level meetings, two of which dealt with terrorism) while 22 were private meetings (15 of which were meetings with police- and troop-contributing countries) and 167 were consultations. It considered 49 agenda items (see APPENDIX III); adopted 63 resolutions; and issued 28 presidential statements and 15 notes of the President who also made 138 press statements on behalf of the Council members. The Council also sent two missions, to Mali (see p. 283) and to Africa and Europe, visiting Belgium and the Netherlands as well as Kenya, Somalia (see p. 355) and South Sudan (see p. 341).

Monthly assessments of the Council's work in 2014 were issued by successive Council Presidents [S/2014/592, S/2014/392, S/2014/575, S/2014/446, S/2014/593, S/2014/594, S/2014/595, S/2015/121, S/2014/935, S/2014/929, S/2014/477]. The Council held an open debate on its working methods on 23 October [S/PV.7285].

On 14 August [A/69/300], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2, of the UN Charter and with the consent of the Council, notified the General Assembly of 75 matters relative to the maintenance of peace and security that were being dealt with by the Council since his previous annual notification [YUN 2013, p. 1411]. Items which the Council had ceased to deal with since the previous notification had been deleted and recorded in a summary statement of 3 March by the Secretary-General [S/2014/10/Add.9], as were items subject to deletion in 2014, which would remain on the list of items of which the Council was seized for one additional year. The Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's notification on 21 November (decision 69/511).

The General Assembly on 15 September took note of the Council's report [A/68/2] on the period from 1 August 2012 to 31 July 2013 (decision 68/559) and on 21 November took note of the report [A/69/2] on the period from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014 (decision 69/512). On 29 December the Assembly decided that the item on the Council's report would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

On 8 September, by decision 68/557, the General Assembly decided to continue intergovernmental negotiations on Security Council reform in informal plenary at its sixty-ninth (2014) session, building on the informal meetings held during its sixty-eighth session, as well as the positions of and proposals made by Member States; decided to convene the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council during its sixty-ninth (2014) session if Member States so decided; and included in the agenda of that session an item entitled "Question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and other matters related to the Security Council".

The Assembly on 29 December decided that the agenda item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

Economic and Social Council

Council sessions and meetings

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/1 [YUN 2013, p. 1413] the programme of work of the Economic and Social Council was adjusted to a July-to-July cycle. The Council [A/69/3/Rev.1] held its organizational session for 2014 in New York on 14 and 30 January, 18 March, 23 and 25 April, and 13 and 27 June. The substantive session, held in New York, included the operational activities for development segment (24–26 February and 14 July); the integration segment (27–29 May); the humanitarian affairs segment (23–25 June); the high-level segment (7–11 and 25 July); and the coordination and management meetings (23 and 25 April; 12–13 June; 14–16 and 25 July; and 17–18 November).

On 14 and 30 January, the Council elected its Bureau (a President and four Vice-Presidents) for 2014 (see APPENDIX II). On 30 January, the Council decided on a number of organizational matters, including its working arrangements, programme of work and provisional agenda [E/2014/1/Rev.1] for its 2014 session (decision 2014/202), special responsibilities of its Bureau (decision 2014/203) and documentation for its provisional programme of work for 2014 [E/2014/2] (decision 2014/206). On 23 April (decision 2014/201 A) and 17 November (decision 2014/201 B), the Council took action with regard to vacancies in its subsidiary and related bodies.

The Council held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (14–15 April) and its annual special meeting on international cooperation in tax matters (5 June) (decision 2014/202).

During the year, the Council adopted 38 resolutions and 57 decisions [E/2014/99].

The General Assembly on 29 December decided that the agenda item on the report of the Economic and Social Council would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

Themes of Council segments and meetings

On 30 January, the Economic and Social Council decided that the focus of the operational activities segment of its 2014 session would be “The changing landscape of development cooperation: What does it mean for the United Nations system?” (decision 2014/204). On the same day, it also decided that the focus of the integration segment of that session would be sustainable urbanization (decision 2014/205).

The Council on 18 March decided that the theme for the high-level political forum on sustainable development for 2014 would be “Achieving the Millennium Development Goals and charting the way for an ambitious post-2015 development agenda (see p. 960), including the sustainable development goals” (decision 2014/208) and the theme for the thematic discussion item of its 2014 session would be “Effective governance, policymaking and planning for sustainable urbanization” (decision 2014/209). The Council on 23 April decided that the theme for the humanitarian affairs segment of that session would be “The future of humanitarian affairs: towards greater inclusiveness, coordination, interoperability and effectiveness” (decision 2014/211) and on 25 April that the title of the event to discuss the transition from relief to development would be “Supporting the process of transition from relief to development: funding and risk management” (decision 2014/215).

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

CEB activities

The United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), the main instrument for strengthening the coordination role of the UN intergovernmental bodies on social, economic and related matters, held two regular sessions in 2014: the first in Rome (8 May) [CEB/2014/1] and the second in Washington, D.C. (20–21 November) [CEB/2014/2]. Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows: the High-level Committee on Management held its twenty-seventh (Venice, Italy, 3–4 April) [CEB/2014/3] and twenty-eighth (New York, 8 October) [CEB/2014/5] sessions; and the High-level Committee on Programmes held its twenty-seventh (Santiago, Chile, 17–18 March) [CEB/2014/4] and twenty-eighth (New York, 10 October) [CEB/2014/6] sessions.

In its annual overview report for 2014 [E/2015/71], CEB highlighted its activities in fostering a coherent approach on policy, operations and management to enhance UN system-wide coordination in support of intergovernmental mandates. It also reviewed efforts to enhance coherence and coordination on system-wide preparation and follow-up to UN conferences and summits. CEB continued its efforts to accelerate the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, and coordinated system-wide support in the preparation of the post-2015 development agenda. Through its High-level Committee on Programmes, the Board contributed to the third International Conference on Small Island Developing States (see p. 995); preparations for the 2016 United Nations Conference on Housing and Sustainable Urban Development; the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011–2020 [YUN 2011, p. 826]; and the twentieth session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (see p. 1181). The report also highlighted co-ordination activities between CEB and other jointly financed bodies.

CEB also pursued initiatives for advancing policy coherence and coordination, in particular in the areas of youth employment, cybercrime and cybersecurity, and climate change.

Seeking to increase the effectiveness and impact of operational activities of the UN system, CEB, through the United Nations Development Group, accorded priority to the implementation of the quadrennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations throughout the system. With regard to administrative and management issues, CEB, through its High-level Committee on Management, focused on improving common procurement practices, modernizing human resources management and improving business practices.

CEB report

CPC Consideration. The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/69/16] considered the CEB annual overview report for 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1417] during its fifty-fourth session (New York, 2–27 June).

The Committee recommended that the General Assembly request CEB to provide information on the implementation of a coordinated approach on multilingualism within the UN system, in line with Assembly resolution 67/292 [YUN 2013, p. 1513]. It recommended that the Assembly bring to the attention of the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of CEB, the need to continue addressing the issue of the harmonization and simplification of business practices; request the Secretary-General to share examples of good experiences and lessons learned in implementing good practices in performance management with the human resources directors of member organizations; and request the Secretary-General to promote within the UN system the integration of support for South-South cooperation into the country-level programming of operational activities for development.

The Economic and Social Council took note of the annual overview report of CEB for 2013 on 16 July (decision 2014/238).

Programme coordination

CPC held its organizational meeting (24 April) and its fifty-fourth session (2–27 June) in New York [A/69/16].

CPC considered the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2012–2013 (see p. 1653); the proposed strategic framework for 2016–2017 (see p. 1652); and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the triennial review of the implementation of recommendations made by the Committee at its fifty-first session [YUN 2011, p. 1361] on the programme evaluation of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs. Under coordination questions, it dealt with the annual overview report of CEB for 2013 and with the Secretary-General's report on the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 1085).

The Economic and Social Council took note of the report of CPC on its fifty-fourth session on 16 July (decision 2014/238).

Other matters

Follow-up to international conferences

On 29 December, by decision 69/554, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

UN and other organizations

Cooperation with organizations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374] and Security Council resolution 1809(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 109], the Secretary-General in August submitted a consolidated report [A/69/228-S/2014/560] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, covering the period since his previous report [YUN 2012, p. 1394]. The report dealt with the following organizations: the African Union (see below), the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (see below), the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization (see below), the Caribbean Community (see below), the Central European Initiative (see below), the Collective Security Treaty Organization (see below), the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries (see below), the Council of Europe (see below), the Economic Community of Central African States (see below), the Economic Cooperation Organization (see below), the Eurasian Economic Community (see below), the International Organization of la Francophonie (see below), the Latin American and Caribbean Economic System (see below), the League of Arab States (see below), the Organization for Democracy and Economic Development—GUAM (see below), the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (see below), the Organization of American States (see below), the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (see below), the Pacific Islands Forum (see below), the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (see below), the Southern African Development Community (see below), the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 662) and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (see p. 627).

The activities and achievements described in the report, the Secretary-General said, demonstrated the depth of cooperation between the United Nations and its regional partners across the full range of mandate areas, from the maintenance of international peace and security and humanitarian assistance to development and the protection of human rights. A common principle across all of those partnerships was the recognition that more interaction and coordination were beneficial for the international community at large—that had translated into strategic coordination across a breadth of mandates.

African Union

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), the Security Council and the African Union Peace and Security Council held their seventh and eighth annual consultative meetings in 2013 and 2014. The United Nations-African Union Joint Task Force on Peace and Security continued to meet twice a year, contributing to the efforts of both organizations to develop a common understanding of the causes and drivers of conflict in Africa and to promote joint approaches to resolving them. During the reporting period, the African Union (AU), supported by the United Nations, deployed two new peace support operations: the African-led International Support Mission in Mali and the African-led International Support Mission in the Central African Republic. The United Nations Office to the African Union provided critical support for those missions.

UN-system wide cooperation with the AU continued in areas including electoral assistance, economic development, peacebuilding, control of small arms and light weapons, human rights, drug control and crime prevention, children and armed conflict, international trade statistics, energy planning, agriculture and food security, trade, anti-corruption in public service, and the environment.

Association of Southeast Asian Nations

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations continued in areas including conflict prevention, genocide prevention, disarmament, statistics, trade facilitation, disaster management, the environment, health, and food security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/110 [draft: A/69/L.31 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 123 (e)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling the aims and purposes of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, as enshrined in the Bangkok Declaration of 8 August 1967, in particular the maintenance of close and beneficial cooperation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims and purposes,

Noting the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which came into force on 15 December 2008, particularly on upholding the Charter of the United Nations and international law,

Noting with satisfaction that the activities of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations are consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling all previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the participation of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in the high-level meetings between the United Nations and regional organizations, as well as the collaboration between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific to promote dialogue and cooperation among regional organizations in Asia and the Pacific,

Welcoming also the Association of Southeast Asian Nations as an observer in the General Assembly,

Recalling the First to Fifth Summits of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations, held in Bangkok on 12 February 2000, at United Nations Headquarters on 13 September 2005, in Hanoi on 29 October 2010, in Bali, Indonesia, on 19 November 2011, and in Bandar Seri Begawan, on 10 October 2013, respectively, and the commitment of the leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to further deepen and broaden cooperation between the two organizations,

Welcoming the Nay Pyi Taw Declaration on the Realization of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community by 2015, issued at the twenty-fourth Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit, held in Nay Pyi Taw on 11 May 2014, in which the Association reiterated its strong commitment to the realization of an Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community that is politically cohesive, economically integrated and socially responsible,

Recognizing the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to strengthen its institutions as well as to set its post-2015 vision for an Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community that will ensure the credibility and centrality of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in changing circumstances as well as support the United Nations post-2015 development agenda, and in this regard welcoming the adoption of the Nay Pyi Taw Declaration on the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community's Post-2015 Vision, issued at the twenty-fifth Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit in Nay Pyi Taw on 12 November 2014,

1. Welcomes the progress in the implementation of the Road Map for an Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community (2009–2015), which will ensure lasting peace and stability, sustained economic growth, shared prosperity and social progress in the region;

2. Also welcomes the progress of the implementation of the Bali Declaration on the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community in a Global Community of Nations (Bali Concord III) Plan of Action (2013–2017), which will enhance the role of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in addressing global challenges and seizing the opportunities of the twenty-first century;

3. Recognizes the commitment of the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to develop the partnership between the two organizations, as described in the Memorandum of Understanding signed on 27 September 2007;

4. Welcomes the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations to further intensify and strengthen the level of and framework for cooperation between the two organizations through the implementation of the Joint Declaration on Comprehensive Partnership between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations issued at the Fourth Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations Summit on 19 November 2011 in Bali;

5. Encourages the United Nations to continue to work closely with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to achieve the common goals as set out in the Joint Declaration, including the Millennium Development Goals, and to support the Association of Southeast Asian Nations community-building, including the successful implementation of the Road Map for an Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community (2009–2015) and the Master Plan on Association of Southeast Asian Nations Connectivity;

6. Commends the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the Secretary-General of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations for their efforts to hold annual meetings during the regular sessions of the General Assembly, with a view to further enhancing the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations partnership, including overseeing, directing and reviewing the implementation of the present resolution;

7. Continues to encourage the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to convene regular summits, welcomes the holding of the Sixth Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations Summit on 12 November 2014 in Nay Pyi Taw, and in this regard also welcomes the adoption of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations Work Plan for 2015;

8. Encourages the United Nations to provide strengthened support, including through exchanges of best practices and capacity-building, for the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Institute for Peace and Reconciliation and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Regional Mine Action Centre;

9. Reaffirms the importance of enhancing regional security and cooperation and the peaceful settlement of disputes to promote peace, stability and prosperity, both regionally and globally, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law;

10. Also reaffirms the positive initiative of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations on the Global Movement of Moderates in shaping global development and advancing global peace, particularly in efforts to fight against violence, extremism and radicalism, and also welcomes the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations regional dialogue on the political-security cooperation pillar on “Conflict prevention and maintenance of peace and stability in multicultural and pluralistic societies”, held in Kuala Lumpur on 24 and 25 June 2014;

11. Encourages cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in the field of human rights, particularly through the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Commission on the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of Women and Children, to enhance the promotion and protection of human rights, including the rights of women, children, the elderly and persons with disabilities, as well as the rights of migrant workers in accordance with national laws, regulations and policies of the States members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, as well as the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Human Rights Declaration and Phnom Penh leaders’ statement on the adoption of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Human Rights Declaration, and welcomes in this regard the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to finalize an Association of Southeast Asian Nations instrument on the protection and promotion of the rights of migrant workers and to support the implementation of the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women and Elimination of Violence against Children in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations adopted at the twenty-third Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit, held in Bandar Seri Begawan in October 2013;

12. Acknowledges the contribution of maritime cooperation, including maritime security cooperation, to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations community-building, such as in the form of exchange of information and experiences to further promote the rule of law and implementation of relevant international law, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, and other international instruments, and underscores the need to further strengthen such cooperation in order to address related issues and challenges;

13. Also acknowledges the continued participation of the States members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in the intergovernmental process to establish the United Nations post-2015 development agenda, and recognizes the importance of ensuring synergies between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Community’s post-2015 vision, which is now under deliberation, and the post-2015 development agenda, for their effective implementation in supporting the efforts to eradicate poverty and implement an inclusive and sustainable development agenda beyond 2015;

14. Reiterates the importance of regional integration in the Southeast Asia region and its potential contribution to regional and global prosperity, stability and development, and encourages cooperation between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations to narrow development gaps through poverty alleviation and rural development measures, to promote the development of small and medium-sized enterprises and to enhance Association of Southeast Asian Nations connectivity;

15. Notes with satisfaction the progress in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in the implementation of the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and welcomes the development of the Bandar Seri Begawan Declaration on Non-communicable Diseases in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, adopted at the twenty-third Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit on 9 October 2013;

16. Reaffirms the adoption by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations leaders of the Declaration for a Drug-Free Association of Southeast Asian Nations 2015, and encourages the continued support of the United Nations for the efforts to achieve this goal;

17. Welcomes the efforts of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to finalize the draft Association of Southeast Asian Nations Convention on Trafficking in Persons and the Regional Plan of Action by the end of 2014 and its intention to submit them for adoption at the twenty-sixth Association of Southeast Asian Nations Summit in 2015;

18. Encourages cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in order to ensure an effective response and management of natural disasters, through the implementation of the second phase of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United Nations Strategic Plan of Cooperation on Disaster Management, and to enhance the capacity and technical support to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Coordinating Centre for Humanitarian Assistance on Disaster Management;

19. Encourages the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations to explore measures to further the effective and timely implementation of joint activities between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the United Nations;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations".

Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization continued in areas ranging from transportation and environmental governance to agricultural development, food security and consumer protection.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/13 [draft: A/69/L.14 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 123 (d)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/5 of 8 October 1999, by which it granted observer status to the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization, as well as its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization, including resolution 67/13 of 19 November 2012,

Recalling also that one of the purposes of the United Nations is to achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social or humanitarian nature,

Recalling further the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling its Declaration on the Enhancement of Cooperation between the United Nations and Regional Arrangements or Agencies in the Maintenance of International Peace and Security of 9 December 1994,

Recognizing that any dispute or conflict in the region impedes cooperation, and stressing the need to solve such a dispute or conflict on the basis of the norms and principles of international law,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to resolution 67/13,

1. Recalls the Declaration adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the States members of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization on the occasion of the Twentieth Anniversary Summit of the Organization, held in Istanbul, Turkey, on 26 June 2012;

2. Reiterates the conviction that multilateral economic cooperation contributes to enhancing peace, stability and security to the benefit of the wider Black Sea area;

3. Welcomes the commitment of the States members of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization to the implementation of its economic agenda, "Towards an enhanced Black Sea Economic Cooperation Partnership", endorsed by the Heads of State and Government of the States members of the Organization at its Twentieth Anniversary Summit, in which the member States reiterated their commitment to enhancing the economic mission and the project-oriented character of the Organization;

4. Values the activities of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization aimed at strengthening regional cooperation in such fields as energy, including renewable energy and energy efficiency, transport, institutional renewal and good governance, trade and economic development, banking and finance, environmental protection, sustainable development and entrepreneurship, communications, agriculture and agro-industry, health care and pharmaceuticals, culture, education, youth and sports, tourism, science and technology, exchange of statistical data and economic information, collaboration among customs authorities and combating organized crime and trafficking in drugs, weapons and radioactive material, acts of terrorism and illegal migration and in other related spheres;

5. Welcomes the efforts of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization to elaborate and realize concrete joint regional projects, particularly in the field of transport, which will contribute to the development of Euro-Asian transport links, and recalls, within this framework, the Memorandum of Understanding for the Coordinated Development of the Black Sea Ring Highway and the Memorandum of Understanding on the Development of Motorways of the Sea in the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization region, which entered into force in late 2008;

6. Appeals for greater cooperation between international financial institutions and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization in co-financing feasibility and pre-feasibility studies for projects in the wider Black Sea area, where economically prudent and within their respective mandates;

7. Notes the contributions of the bodies related to the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization, namely, the Parliamentary Assembly, the Business Council, the Black Sea Trade and Development Bank and the International Centre for Black Sea Studies, to the strengthening of multifaceted regional cooperation in the region;

8. Welcomes the commitment of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization to promoting fruitful cooperation with the United Nations and the specialized agencies, in particular to developing practical and results-oriented projects, in areas of common interest, as reiterated in the Declaration and the new economic agenda endorsed at the Twentieth Anniversary Summit of the Organization;

9. Also welcomes the increased cooperation between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and the United Nations Development Programme, the Economic Commission for Europe, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the International Organization for Migration, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the World Health Organization, the World Tourism Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, as well as the working contacts of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization with the World Bank aimed at promoting sustainable development in the Black Sea region;

10. Acknowledges the interest of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization in contributing to the post-2015 development agenda;

11. Welcomes efforts to increase capacity-building in the Permanent International Secretariat of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization by establishing a project management unit to support projects for the sustainable development of the Black Sea region, in turn contributing to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals in the wider Black Sea area;

12. Notes the willingness of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization to continue to implement sustainable development strategies based on a balanced and harmonious relationship between social needs, economic activities and environmental protection;

13. Also notes the efforts of the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization to take measures to rehabilitate, protect and preserve the environment in the Black Sea region, and in this regard welcomes its cooperation with the World Wide Fund for Nature;

14. Further notes the increased cooperation between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and within this framework welcomes the positive results of the ongoing joint project to strengthen the criminal justice response to trafficking in persons in the Black Sea region, launched on 1 September 2007;

15. Welcomes the multifaceted and fruitful cooperation between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and the Economic Commission for Europe, especially in the area of transport, within the framework of the Cooperation Agreement signed by the two organizations on 2 July 2001;

16. Encourages the full implementation of the Cooperation Agreement between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and the United Nations Environment Programme of 20 February 2002 and the Relationship Agreement between the Organization and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization of 8 September 1997;

17. Notes that the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization became a member of the Group of Friends of the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations in 2009 in order to contribute to the fulfilment of the objectives of the Alliance by promoting projects aimed at building bridges between diverse cultures and communities and fostering cross-cultural exchange and cooperation, and welcomes the intention of the secretariats of the two organizations to sign a memorandum of understanding on cooperation in the near future;

18. Also notes the potential for cooperation between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and the European Union in the interest of realizing the Organization's goals beneficial to both sides;

19. Further notes the cooperation established between the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization and other regional organizations and initiatives;

20. Invites the Secretary-General to strengthen dialogue with the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization with a view to promoting cooperation and co-ordination between the secretariats of the two organizations;

21. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to cooperate with the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization in order to continue programmes with the Organization and its associated institutions for the achievement of their objectives;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization".

Caribbean Community

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), the seventh general meeting between the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) and the UN system (New York, July 2013) attended by both Secretaries-General, discussed climate change, small island developing States, the post-2015 development agenda, citizen security and transnational organized crime, agricultural development and non-communicable diseases. UN-system wide cooperation with CARICOM continued in areas including crime and security, statistics, the environment and sustainable development, human security, food safety and commemoration of the victims of slavery and the Transatlantic slave trade.

Central European Initiative

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/8 [draft: A/69/L.8 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 123 (f)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Central European Initiative

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 66/111 of 9 December 2011, by which it granted observer status to the Central European Initiative,

Recalling also its resolution 67/7 of 19 November 2012, in which it invited the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to cooperate with the Initiative in order to continue joint activities for the achievement of common objectives,

Recalling further the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation to promote the goals and objectives of the United Nations,

Appreciating the efforts made by the Initiative to strengthen its relations with the United Nations system and relevant international and regional organizations with the ultimate goal of achieving a concrete positive impact on the political and socioeconomic development of the region through the implementation of projects and programmes in all priority areas,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to resolution 67/7,

1. Notes the celebration, in November 2014, of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Central European Initiative, initially known as the Quadragonale, the establishment of which coincided with the end of the cold war, which led to complex transition processes in Central and Eastern Europe;

2. Values the continuing contribution of the Initiative to the political dialogue and its project management support, providing its member States with a flexible and pragmatic platform for regional cooperation;

3. Welcomes the Central European Initiative Plan of Action 2014–2016 aimed at strengthening regional cooperation in fields such as transport, energy, with a focus on energy efficiency and renewable energy sources, environment, small and medium-sized enterprises, business development, research, education, the information society, culture and media;

4. Notes the efforts of the Initiative to support, elaborate and realize concrete joint regional projects in strategic areas;

5. Acknowledges, in this context, the fruitful cooperation between the Initiative and the European Union, as one of the main co-funders of such projects, and supports the efforts of the Initiative to take concrete steps for the establishment of other mutual beneficial partnerships with the European Union;

6. Welcomes the financing of projects by the Central European Initiative Trust Fund at the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, financed entirely by Italy, which provides mainly grant-type assistance for specific components of technical cooperation projects, linked to large operations of the Bank in Initiative member States not part of the European Union, in a number of areas, including agriculture, transport, energy, assistance to small and medium-sized enterprises, municipal infrastructure and services, banking, insurance, institution-building and capacity-building;

7. Also welcomes the financing of small-scale multilateral projects in the priority areas by the Central European Initiative Cooperation Fund, to which all member States contribute, and of projects related to capacity-building and the sharing of good practices with Initiative member States not part of the European Union through the Know-how Exchange Programme, financed by Austria and Italy;

8. Notes the contributions made by the Parliamentary and Business Dimensions of the Initiative to strengthening multifaceted regional cooperation;

9. Appeals for greater cooperation between the Initiative and international organizations and international financial institutions in co-financing important projects in the region;

10. Welcomes the cooperation established between the Initiative and other regional organizations and initiatives;

11. Also welcomes the commitment of the Initiative to promoting fruitful cooperation with the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, in particular mutual participation in events and meetings of common interest, and to developing practical and results-oriented joint projects;

12. Further welcomes the cooperation between the Initiative and the Economic Commission for Europe in the area of enterprise development, with the United Nations Environment Programme in the area of the environment, with the World Tourism Organization in the area of tourism, with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in the area of agriculture, with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the area of culture and with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization in the areas of science and technology;

13. Notes the enhanced cooperation between the Initiative and the Economic Commission for Europe, within the framework of the memorandum of understanding signed in 1998, through the more recent participation of the Initiative in activities of the Commission in Geneva;

14. Also notes the commitment of the Initiative to contributing to the attainment of the Millennium Development Goals at the regional and global levels;

15. Acknowledges the interest of the Initiative in the adoption by the General Assembly of a comprehensive post-2015 development agenda at its seventieth session;

16. Invites the Secretary-General to strengthen dialogue with the Initiative with a view to promoting cooperation and coordination between the secretariats;

17. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to continue to cooperate with the Initiative in order to continue joint activities for the achievement of common objectives;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Central European Initiative".

Collective Security Treaty Organization

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Collective Security Treaty Organization continued in areas ranging from peacekeeping, mediation and counter-terrorism to conflict prevention, early warning and capacity-building.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/12 [draft: A/69/L.13] without vote [agenda item 123 (g)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Referring to the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage measures for regional cooperation to advance the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Referring also to its resolution 59/50 of 2 December 2004, in which it granted the Collective Security Treaty Organization observer status in the General Assembly,

Referring further to its resolutions 64/256 of 2 March 2010, 65/122 of 13 December 2010 and 67/6 of 19 November 2012 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization and to its Declaration on the Enhancement of Cooperation between the United Nations and Regional Arrangements or Agencies in the Maintenance of International Peace and Security,

Referring to all previous relevant resolutions of the Security Council, including resolution 1631(2005) of 17 October 2005, and the relevant statements by its President, including those of 13 January 2010 and 6 August 2013, which underline the importance of developing effective partnerships between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations, in accordance with the Charter and the relevant statutes of regional and subregional organizations,

Noting with satisfaction that, during its existence, the Collective Security Treaty Organization has transformed into a multifunctional structure with the potential to provide an adequate response to a wide range of threats and challenges within the area of its responsibility,

Welcoming the efforts of the States members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization to attain objectives consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Welcoming also the practical steps taken by the Collective Security Treaty Organization to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, in particular through the joint plan of action for the implementation of the Strategy in Central Asia, adopted in Ashgabat on 30 November 2011,

Acknowledging the importance of the efforts of the regional anti-drug operation of the Collective Security Treaty Organization, "Kanal", to combat the smuggling of Afghan opiates and the cannabis group of drugs, cocaine and synthetic substances into the territory of the Eurasian region and to counter the activities of organized drug groups and their leaders,

Welcoming the practical contribution of the Collective Security Treaty Organization to implementing, during the period from 2009 to 2019, the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, adopted by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session,

Welcoming also the progress in enhancing practical cooperation between the two secretariats with the recent launch of the dialogue between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization and the finalization of the memorandum of understanding between the secretariat of the Collective Security Treaty Organization and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat aimed at promoting more extensive and intensive cooperation in the maintenance of peace, including by encouraging the States members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization to make contributions to the peacekeeping operations of the United Nations,

Noting the progress in developing the potential of the collective rapid reaction forces and the formation of peacekeeping forces of the Collective Security Treaty Organization,

Noting also the firm intention of both organizations to further strengthen existing cooperation by developing specific proposals in the priority areas of cooperation,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, and acknowledges the development of mutually beneficial cooperation between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization;

2. Notes with appreciation the significant practical contribution and efforts of the Collective Security Treaty Organization to strengthen the system of regional security and stability, to counter terrorism and transnational organized crime, illegal trafficking in drugs and weapons, and illegal migration and human trafficking, to combat natural and man-made disasters and to strengthen its peacekeeping capacities, which contribute to the attainment of the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

3. Welcomes the efforts of the secretariats of the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization to enhance coordination and cooperation in the areas of mutual interest and to develop concrete modalities for such cooperation, and encourages them to continue their collaboration, including the exchange of information;

4. Invites the Secretary-General of the United Nations to continue regular consultations with the Secretary-General of the Collective Security Treaty Organization, utilizing the appropriate inter-institutional forums and formats, including the consultations between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the heads of regional organizations;

5. Invites the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization to continue their cooperation in the interest of the consistent and comprehensive implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy;

6. Invites increased cooperation and coordination among the specialized agencies and programmes of the United Nations system and the Collective Security Treaty Organization and the development of their direct contacts in areas of mutual interest;

7. Encourages both organizations to continue to examine possible ways to further enhance their cooperation in the area of peacekeeping;

8. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization".

Commonwealth of Independent States

The Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), established in 1991, brought together 11 States parties. In accordance with resolution 48/237 [YUN 1994, p. 255], CIS was granted observer status in the General Assembly. CIS had established cooperation with a number of United Nations specialized agencies and had accumulated experience in multilevel cooperation with the United Nations to deal with common challenges of a social, economic and humanitarian nature.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/10 [draft: A/69/L.10] without vote [agenda item 123 (y)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Commonwealth of Independent States

The General Assembly,

Referring to the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage measures for regional cooperation to advance the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Referring also to its resolution 48/237 of 24 March 1994, by which it granted the Commonwealth of Independent States observer status in the General Assembly,

Welcoming the efforts of the States members of the Commonwealth of Independent States to attain objectives consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that achieving international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character is one of the purposes of the United Nations,

Referring to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, including resolution 1631(2005) of 17 October 2005, as well as statements by the President of the Council, including the statement of 13 January 2010, in which the Council emphasized the importance of developing effective partnerships between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations, in accordance with the Charter,

Welcoming the commitment of the Commonwealth of Independent States to intensify and deepen its cooperation with the agencies, programmes and funds of the United Nations system,

Convinced that strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and the Commonwealth of Independent States will advance the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

1. Notes the activities of the Commonwealth of Independent States to strengthen regional cooperation in such areas as trade and economic development; exchange of statistical data and economic information; culture; education; health care; sports; tourism; science and innovation; environmental protection and response to natural and man-made disasters; combating organized crime, illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and their precursors, terrorist acts, manifestations of extremism and illegal migration; and other related areas;

2. Also notes the importance of strengthening cooperation and coordination between the United Nations system and the Commonwealth of Independent States, and invites the Secretary-General to hold for that purpose regular consultations with the Chair of the Executive Committee and Executive Secretary of the Commonwealth, making use of appropriate inter-agency forums and formats, including consultations between the Secretary-General and the heads of regional organizations;

3. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations, programmes and funds of the United Nations system, as well as international financial institutions, to develop their cooperation with the Commonwealth of Independent States;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Commonwealth of Independent States".

Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau, in partnership with the AU, maintained close cooperation with the Community of Portuguese-speaking countries to support international efforts to assist Guinea-Bissau in addressing political challenges and carrying out a peaceful political transition. Other areas of cooperation included corruption, trafficking in persons, drug control, and public information.

Council of Europe

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Council of Europe continued in areas ranging from further strengthening cooperation on democracy, discussing developments in the Middle East and North Africa and the situation of the Roma, minorities and migrants in Europe to statistics, human rights, and ageing.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 63], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/83 [draft: A/69/L.27 & Add.1.] without vote [agenda item 123 (j)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Agreement between the Council of Europe and the Secretariat of the United Nations signed on 15 December 1951 and the Arrangement on Cooperation and Liaison between the Secretariats of the United Nations and the Council of Europe of 19 November 1971,

Recalling also its resolution 44/6 of 17 October 1989, in which it granted the Council of Europe a standing invitation to participate as an observer in its sessions and work, as well as its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe,

Acknowledging the contribution of the Council of Europe to the protection and strengthening of human rights and fundamental freedoms, democracy and the rule of law through its standards, principles and monitoring mechanisms, as well as to the effective implementation of relevant international legal instruments of the United Nations,

Acknowledging also the contribution of the Council of Europe to the development of international law, and noting the openness of the Council of Europe to the participation of States of other regions in its legal instruments,

Welcoming the role of the Council of Europe in building a united Europe without dividing lines, and the contribution of the Council of Europe to cohesion, stability and security in Europe,

Commending the increasing contribution of the Council of Europe, including at the parliamentary level, to democratic transition in its neighbouring regions aimed at promoting democratic institutions and procedures, and welcoming the readiness of the Council of Europe to further share its experience in democracy-building with interested countries on the basis of a demand-driven approach,

Welcoming the increasingly close relations between the United Nations and the Council of Europe, and commending the contribution of the Permanent Delegations of the Council of Europe to the United Nations Offices at Geneva and at Vienna to the enhancement of cooperation and the achievement of greater synergy between the United Nations and the Council of Europe,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe,

1. Reiterates its call for the reinforcement of cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe regarding the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the promotion of democracy and the rule of law and good governance at all levels, inter alia, the prevention of torture, the fight against terrorism and trafficking in human beings, the fight against all forms of racism, discrimination, xenophobia and intolerance, the promotion of freedom of expression and freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief, the protection of the rights and dignity of all members of society without discrimination on any grounds and the promotion of human rights education;

2. Confirms its recognition of the key role of the European Court of Human Rights in ensuring effective human rights protection under the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms for the 800 million citizens in the 47 States members of the Council of Europe, and notes with interest the efforts to guarantee the long-term effectiveness of the Court system and to ensure the rapid and effective execution of Court judgments, as well as the ongoing work aiming at accession of the European Union to the Convention;

3. Recognizes the important role of the Council of Europe in upholding the rule of law and fighting impunity, including by strengthening the capacity of the national judiciaries of its member States to carry out their work consistent with the relevant international obligations of the member States in particular, and where applicable, those defined in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

4. Also recognizes the role of the revised European Social Charter and of the European Committee of Social Rights in protecting economic and social rights, notes the complementarities of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Council of Europe Disability Action Plan 2006–2015, and confirms its support for cooperation between the two organizations with respect to the eradication of poverty, the protection and promotion of the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities, the fight against maternal and child mortality, encouraging the integration of migrants and refugees, strengthening social cohesion and intergenerational solidarity and ensuring the protection of economic, social and cultural rights for all;

5. Notes the signature of a joint declaration on the reinforcement of cooperation between the secretariat of the Council of Europe and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, and in this respect encourages further cooperation between the United Nations, including the Human Rights Council, its special procedures, including the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, the Office of the High Commissioner and the human rights treaty bodies, and the Council of Europe, including its Commissioner for Human Rights, with regard to promoting respect for human rights;

6. Notes with appreciation the contribution of the Council of Europe to the enhancement of cooperation between international and regional mechanisms for the promotion and protection of human rights, and in this context welcomes, in particular, the contribution of the Council of Europe to the universal periodic review regarding the situation of human rights in States members of the Council of Europe and the adoption of a declaration supporting the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Implementing the United Nations “Protect, Respect and Remedy” Framework;

7. Encourages further cooperation, where appropriate, between the United Nations and the Council of Europe through their mechanisms on the prevention of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and supports the development of cooperation in the penitentiary field, namely with regard to consideration by Member States of updating the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and in combating prison overcrowding;

8. Encourages the Council of Europe to continue cooperation with the United Nations in the fight against trafficking in persons, recalls that the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings is open for accession by all States, and notes with interest the results of the monitoring activities carried out by the Group of Experts on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings and by the Committee of the Parties to the Convention;

9. Notes with appreciation the elaboration by the Council of Europe of its Convention against Trafficking in Human Organs, as a follow-up to the joint Council of Europe/United Nations study on trafficking in organs, tissues and cells and trafficking in human beings for the purpose of the removal of organs, and encourages further cooperation in this field;

10. Welcomes and encourages the close collaboration between the United Nations Children’s Fund, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Committee on the Rights of the Child and the Council of Europe to protect and promote the rights of the child, takes note of the Council of Europe Strategy for the Rights of the Child (2012–2015) promoting the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child in its member States, recalls in this context that the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse is open for accession by all States, and supports the Council of Europe ONE in FIVE campaign to stop sexual violence against children and the establishment of a European Day on the Fight against Sexual Abuse and Sexual Exploitation of Children, as stated in the Strategy;

11. Welcomes the reinforced action of the Council of Europe to promote the social inclusion and respect for human rights of the Roma, and encourages further cooperation between the two organizations in this field;

12. Also welcomes the regular and active contribution of the Council of Europe to the sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women and the agreed and specified cooperation between the Council of Europe and the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), which includes support to member States, upon their request, in implementing commitments on gender equality and women’s rights, in particular access to justice and women’s political participation, and the promotion of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence, which is open for accession by all States and was referred to in resolution 68/191 of 18 December 2013 on taking action against gender-related killing of women and girls, and in this context encourages those bodies to continue to develop a fruitful collaboration in eliminating violence against women and the achievement of de facto gender equality and recognizes the important contribution that the entry into force of the Convention will make in eradicating this scourge;

13. Encourages continuing cooperation between the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Council of Europe, including the Council of Europe Development Bank, in particular in the protection and promotion of the rights of refugees, asylum seekers and internally displaced persons, and in the prevention and reduction of statelessness, and recognizes the importance of the interface offered by the presence at the Council of Europe of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Representation to the European Institutions in Strasbourg, as well as by the Permanent Delegation of the Council of Europe to the United Nations Office at Geneva;

14. Recognizes and encourages the continuing close liaison and fruitful cooperation between United Nations missions and the Council of Europe offices in the field;

15. Encourages further cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe in the area of democracy and good governance, including through active participation in the Strasbourg World Forum for Democracy and engagement with youth representatives and civil society, as appropriate, and the strengthening of the links between the World Programme for Human Rights Education and the Council of Europe Programme on Education for Democratic Citizenship and Human Rights, and in this context welcomes the contribution to the activities of the International Contact Group on citizenship and human rights education;

16. Notes the important role of the United Nations Development Programme and the Council of Europe in supporting good local democratic governance, as well as the fruitful cooperation between them, encourages further deepening of the cooperation following the signature in February 2010 of the memorandum of understanding between the United Nations Development Programme Regional Bureau for Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States and the Council of Europe in this field, and calls for enhanced cooperation between the Council of Europe and the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) in the field of sustainable urban governance;

17. Also notes the contribution of the Council of Europe in protecting and promoting all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to freedom of expression and opinion and the freedom of the media, and encourages further cooperation between the Council of Europe and the United Nations in this regard, in particular with regard to the implementation of the United Nations Plan of Action on the Safety of Journalists and the Issue of Impunity;

18. Reaffirms that, as the information society and the Internet develop, freedom of expression, as well as the right to privacy, as set out in article 17 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, must be protected and respected, including as they relate to data protection, while recognizing lawful restrictions as set out in national legislation in accordance with international human rights law, acknowledges the importance of the work of the Council of Europe in protecting those rights, takes note of its Convention for the Protection of Individuals with regard to

Automatic Processing of Personal Data, which is open for accession by all States, encourages further cooperation in these areas between relevant United Nations agencies and the Council of Europe, and recalls General Assembly resolution 68/167 of 18 December 2013;

19. Welcomes and encourages the close cooperation between the two organizations in the fight against transnational organized crime, cybercrime, terrorism and money-laundering, as well as in the protection of the rights of victims of such crimes, and recalls that the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime and the Additional Protocol thereto, and the Council of Europe Convention on the Counterfeiting of Medical Products and Similar Crimes Involving Threats to Public Health, as well as several other relevant Council of Europe conventions, are open for accession by all States;

20. Welcomes and supports the cooperation between the respective mechanisms concerning the prevention of and the fight against corruption, notably by reviewing and mutually reinforcing the implementation of international anti-corruption standards;

21. Welcomes the commitment of the Council of Europe to the promotion of the implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and the collaboration between their respective mechanisms regarding the fight against terrorism, including the financing of terrorism, in full respect of human rights and the rule of law, and recalls that the Council of Europe Convention on the Prevention of Terrorism and Convention on Laundering, Search, Seizure and Confiscation of the Proceeds from Crime and on the Financing of Terrorism are open for accession by all States;

22. Also welcomes the continued cooperation of the Council of Europe, where appropriate and in accordance with international drug control conventions, with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the International Narcotics Control Board in the fight against drug abuse and drug trafficking, and notes the role played by the Pompidou Group in this regard;

23. Further welcomes the contribution of the Council of Europe to the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly and the International Law Commission;

24. Notes the cooperation established between the Alliance of Civilizations and the Council of Europe following their signature of a memorandum of understanding on 29 September 2008 and the accession of the Alliance of Civilizations to the Faro Platform, and encourages the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Alliance of Civilizations on the one hand, and the Council of Europe and its North-South Centre on the other, to pursue their developing and fruitful collaboration in the field of intercultural dialogue;

25. Also notes the cooperation between the Council of Europe and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the field of education, encourages the extension of this cooperation, which should continue to focus on the role of education in developing just and humane societies characterized by the participation of individuals and the ability of individuals and societies to conduct intercultural dialogue, as well as on the encouragement of the diversity of cultural expressions, and welcomes the contribution of the Council of Europe in the implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth;

26. Invites the Secretaries-General of the United Nations and the Council of Europe to combine their efforts in seeking answers to global challenges, within their respective mandates, including in relation to the post-2015 development agenda, and calls upon all relevant United Nations bodies to support the enhancement of cooperation with the Council of Europe, as set out in relevant resolutions;

27. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe", and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe in the implementation of the present resolution.

Economic Community of Central African States

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Economic Community of Central African States continued in areas ranging from political governance, mediation support, the fight against the proliferation of illicit small arms and light weapons, and a regional anti-piracy strategy to agricultural development.

Economic Cooperation Organization

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Economic Cooperation Organization continued in areas ranging from national accounts and integrated economic statistics to transport and sustainable forest management.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/111 [draft: A/69/L.11/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 123 (k)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Cooperation Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 48/2 of 13 October 1993, by which it granted observer status to the Economic Cooperation Organization,

Recalling also its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Cooperation Organization in which it invited various specialized agencies, as well as other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system and relevant financial institutions, to join in the efforts towards realizing its goals and the objectives of the Economic Cooperation Organization,

Appreciating the efforts of the Economic Cooperation Organization to strengthen its relations with the United Nations system and with relevant international and regional organizations for the development and implementation of projects and programmes in areas of common interest,

Noting the efforts made by the United Nations system and the relevant international and regional organizations in extending technical and financial assistance to the Economic Cooperation Organization for the development and implementation of programmes and projects pertaining to socioeconomic progress, and encouraging them to continue their support,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 67/14 of 19 November 2012, and acknowledges the growing cooperation between the two organizations;

2. Takes note of the Baku Declaration, issued at the twelfth Economic Cooperation Organization summit meeting of Heads of State and/or Government of the States members of the Economic Cooperation Organization, held on 16 October 2012 in Baku;

3. Appreciates the continuing efforts to strengthen the existing cooperation between the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the Economic Cooperation Organization, especially in the field of trade capacity-building of member States, notes with satisfaction the signing of the project document between the two organizations on 18 March 2014 for the implementation of the third phase of their joint programme, aimed at enhancing the capacity of member States to strengthen their standards, metrology, testing and quality infrastructure, and invites the relevant United Nations institutions and agencies to consider supporting the implementation of the project;

4. Invites the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the World Trade Organization and the International Trade Centre to develop strategies for the States members of the Economic Cooperation Organization for trade liberalization and the promotion of foreign direct investment to facilitate the global and regional integration of their economies;

5. Notes the progress made on the trade facilitation programme of the Economic Cooperation Organization, and invites the relevant United Nations institutions and agencies, especially the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the United Nations Network of Experts for Paperless Trade in Asia and the Pacific, to support the Organization in developing its trade facilitation agreement, single windows in the member States, the TradeNet web portal and a unified visa system for facilitating the work of the region's businesspeople and enhancing regional trade;

6. Appreciates the efforts of the Economic Cooperation Organization to implement its Trade Agreement for the enhancement of intraregional trade, and invites the World Trade Organization and the International Trade Centre to consider extending technical assistance to the Economic Cooperation Organization for the implementation of the Trade Agreement and the development and implementation of comprehensive strategies to assist the States members of the Organization in the trade facilitation process, leading to the regional and global integration of their economies;

7. Notes the basic development needs of landlocked countries, including their need to overcome the limitations arising from their geographical positions, the lack of access to open seas and seaport facilities and other challenges hindering their promotion of transit transport cooperation, and invites the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank, the Islamic Development Bank, the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States and other relevant international and regional bodies to assist and cooperate with the Economic Cooperation Organization on the proposed study project of the Office and the Organization on the possibility of providing concessional services for landlocked countries in selected ports of transit countries of the region, within existing resources;

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/9 [draft: A/69/L.9] without vote [agenda item 123 (o)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Recalling also article 3 of the Pact of the League of Arab States, which entrusts the Council of the League with the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with international organizations to guarantee peace and security, organize social, economic, cultural, administrative, technical and media relations, and enhance and strengthen the League's capacity in those areas,

Taking into consideration the report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", and in particular section VII concerning cooperation with regional organizations, and the "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

Welcoming the convening of the Security Council meeting on 6 August 2013, and welcoming also the previous presidential statement in which the Council expressed its intention to consider further cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in the fields of early warning, prevention of conflicts, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding,

Recognizing the need for the further strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in the pursuit of the common goals and objectives of the two organizations,

Taking note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Welcoming the measures taken by the United Nations and the League of Arab States to review the existing cooperation mechanisms, recommendations and proposals, and requesting the United Nations to continue to lend its support in this regard,

Welcoming also the general decisions and recommendations of the twelfth general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, held in 2014, at which relevant challenges to international peace and stability, sustainable development and the protection of human rights were addressed,

Recalling the eleventh sectoral meeting between the United Nations and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, held in 2013, which addressed cooperation in civilian capacity-building in the aftermath of conflict,

1. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States to further intensify bilateral consultations, improve the exchange of information at all levels and advance cooperation in the political, social, economic, cultural, disarmament, conflict prevention, peacebuilding and peacemaking, and mediation areas;

2. Calls for the continuation of periodic consultations between representatives of both the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States in order to review and strengthen coordination mechanisms with a view to accelerating the implementation of mutually agreed projects and recommendations;

3. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States to accelerate the review of the 1989 agreement of cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States, in line with their priorities and emerging challenges;

4. Calls upon the specialized agencies, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system:

(a) To maintain and increase contacts and improve the mechanism of consultation with the counterpart programmes, organizations and agencies of the League of Arab States in order to facilitate the implementation of mutually agreed projects and programmes;

(b) To make the greatest possible use of Arab institutions and technical expertise in projects undertaken in the Arab region;

(c) To participate, whenever possible, with the organizations and institutions of the League of Arab States in the execution and implementation of development projects in the Arab region;

(d) To inform the Secretary-General, no later than January 2016, of the progress made in their cooperation with the League of Arab States and, in particular, in the implementation of multilateral and bilateral proposals adopted at the twelfth general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, held in June 2014, and at the forthcoming sectoral meeting on human rights in 2015;

5. Reaffirms that, in order to enhance cooperation and for the purpose of the review and appraisal of progress, a general meeting between representatives of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States should be held once every two years and that joint inter-agency sectoral meetings should also be convened on a biennial basis to address priority areas of major importance to the development of the Arab States;

6. Also reaffirms the importance of holding the twelfth sectoral meeting between the United Nations and the League of Arab States and its specialized agencies in Cairo during the first six months of 2015 on the theme “The repercussions of understanding human rights: towards a comprehensive regional cooperation approach”;

7. Further reaffirms the importance of holding the thirteenth general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2016, for which the dates and venue will be agreed upon in due course;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations”, the sub-item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States”.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 48], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/11 [draft: A/69/L.12] without vote [agenda item 123 (w)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling that one of the objectives of the United Nations is to achieve cooperation in maintaining international peace and security and solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character,

Recalling also the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities on the basis of regional cooperation to promote the goals and objectives of the United Nations,

Recalling further its resolution 59/48 of 2 December 2004, by which it granted observer status to the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

Recalling its resolutions 64/183 of 18 December 2009, 65/124 of 13 December 2010 and 67/15 of 19 November 2012 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

Recalling also the Joint Declaration on Cooperation between the secretariats of the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, dated 5 April 2010,

Noting that the Shanghai Cooperation Organization has become an essential regional organization for addressing security in the region in all its dimensions,

Recognizing the efforts of the States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to build the region of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization into a region of lasting peace, friendship, prosperity and harmony,

Noting the aspiration of the States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to promote stability and security based on mutual trust, mutual benefit, equality, consultation, respect for cultural diversity and pursuit of common development and to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, and taking note in this regard of the declaration of the Heads of State of the members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization signed in Dushanbe on 12 September 2014,

Welcoming the efforts of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to support the building of a world free of nuclear weapons, including in Central Asia, in strict compliance with the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recognizing the efforts of the States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to promote counter-terrorism cooperation, including through the Regional Anti-Terrorist Structure, and welcoming in this regard the protocols on cooperation between the Regional Anti-Terrorist Structure of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, signed on 22 July 2012, and between the Regional Anti-Terrorist Structure and the Central Asian Regional Information and Coordination Centre for combating illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and their precursors, signed on 27 September 2012,

Taking note of the revised version of the Regulations on Political and Diplomatic Measures and Mechanism of Response to Events Jeopardizing Regional Peace, Security and Stability of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and the programme of cooperation in combating terrorism, separatism and extremism for 2013–2015, which broadened the basis for security cooperation among the States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

Recognizing the importance of the implementation of the 2011–2016 Anti-Drug Strategy and Action Plan of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization as an effective mechanism for regional cooperation in combating drugs,

Welcoming the signing of the memorandum of understanding between the secretariat of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in June 2011 with a view to effectively addressing, in cooperation with relevant international and regional actors, the production of and trade and trafficking in drugs,

Noting the efforts of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to address international information security, taking note of the initiatives of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in this regard, and recognizing the need for further discussions in relevant forums,

Recognizing the efforts of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to promote cooperation with other regional organizations, including the Collective Security Treaty Organization, the Commonwealth of Independent States, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the Eurasian Economic Community, the Conference on Interaction and Confidence-building Measures in Asia and the Economic Cooperation Organization,

Taking into consideration the fact that countries with economies in transition are among the members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and in this regard recalling its resolution 61/210 of 20 December 2006, in which it proposed that the United Nations system enhance dialogue with regional and subregional cooperation organizations whose membership includes countries with economies in transition and increase support provided to them,

Convinced that strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization helps to promote the goals and objectives of the United Nations,

1. Acknowledges the important role of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in securing peace and sustainable development, advancing regional cooperation and strengthening good-neighbourliness and mutual trust, and notes the activities of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization aimed at strengthening peace, security and stability in the region, countering terrorism, separatism and extremism, drug trafficking and other types of criminal activity of a transnational character and promoting regional cooperation in various areas such as trade and economic development, energy, transportation, agriculture and agro-industry, the regulation of migration, banking and finances, information and telecommunications, science and new technology, customs, education, public health, environmental protection and reducing the danger of natural disasters, as well as in other related areas;

2. Emphasizes the importance of strengthening dialogue, cooperation and coordination between the United Nations system and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and proposes that the Secretary-General, for this purpose, continue to hold regular consultations with the Secretary-General of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization through the existing inter-agency forums and formats, including the annual consultations between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the heads of regional organizations;

3. Proposes that the specialized agencies, organizations, programmes and funds of the United Nations system cooperate with the Shanghai Cooperation Organization with a view to jointly implementing programmes to achieve their goals, and in this regard recommends that the heads of such entities continue consultations with the Secretary-General of the United Nations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventy-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its seventy-first session, under the item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations”, the sub-item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization”.

As noted by the Secretary-General in his consolidated report (see above), UN-system wide cooperation with the Southern African Development Community was carried out in areas including electoral support, conflict prevention and mediation, eradicating illegal armed groups in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, development of a regional counter-terrorism strategy, crime and drugs, statistics, and food security.

National parliaments and Inter-Parliamentary Union

Note by General Assembly President. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 65/123 [YUN 2010, p. 1417], the General Assembly President in March submitted a note [A/68/790-E/2014/52] summarizing the 2013 parliamentary hearing (New York 14–15 November 2013). The hearing, organized jointly by the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU), the Assembly President and the President of the Economic and Social Council, brought together nearly 200 parliamentarians from a range of countries to discuss the theme “Rethinking sustainable development: the quest for a ‘transformational’ global agenda in 2015”.

Report of Secretary-General. In a report issued in April [A/68/827], the Secretary General recalled the General Assembly’s adoption of resolution 66/261 [YUN 2012, p. 1419] on interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the IPU. The report documented the past two years of interaction between the two organizations and the world of parliaments as a whole, providing examples of the political and operational results achieved. It identified ways for the two organizations to better work together within the context of institutional reforms and a changing policy landscape. An annex listed joint activities carried out since April 2012 to illustrate the day-to-day interaction between the two organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 68/272 [draft: A/68/L.44 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 126].

Interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General, which attests to the broad and substantive cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union over the past two years,

Taking note of the resolutions adopted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union and circulated in the General Assembly and the many activities undertaken by the organization in support of the United Nations,

Noting the outcomes of the World Conferences of Speakers of Parliament held in 2000, 2005 and 2010, which affirm the commitment of national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to support the work of the United Nations and continue efforts to bridge the democracy gap in international relations,

Taking into consideration the Cooperation Agreement between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union of 1996, which laid the foundation for cooperation between the two organizations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the 2005 World Summit Outcome, in which Heads of State and Government resolved to strengthen further cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments through their world organization, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, in all fields of the work of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 57/32 of 19 November 2002, in which the Inter-Parliamentary Union was invited to participate in the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer, as well as resolutions 57/47 of 21 November 2002, 59/19 of 8 November 2004, 61/6 of 20 October 2006 and 63/24 of 18 November 2008,

Recalling and further endorsing its resolutions 65/123 of 13 December 2010 and 66/261 of 29 May 2012, in which the General Assembly, inter alia, decided to pursue a more systematic engagement with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in organizing and integrating a parliamentary component of and contribution to major United Nations deliberative processes and the review of international commitments,

Welcoming the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations, as well as other specialized parliamentary meetings organized by the Inter-Parliamentary Union in cooperation with the United Nations in the context of major United Nations conferences and events,

Welcoming in particular the work of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in mobilizing parliamentary action towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals by the target date of 2015, as well as in bringing a parliamentary contribution to the design of the next generation of global development goals,

Recognizing the growing role of the Inter-Parliamentary Union Standing Committee on United Nations Affairs in providing a platform for regular interaction between parliamentarians and United Nations officials, reviewing implementation of international commitments, facilitating closer ties between United Nations country teams and national parliaments and helping shape a parliamentary input to major United Nations processes,

Recognizing also the work of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in the areas of gender equality, the empowerment of women and combating violence against women, and the close cooperation between the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the relevant United Nations bodies, including the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women,

Acknowledging the role and responsibility of national parliaments in regard to national plans and strategies, as well as in ensuring greater transparency and accountability at both national and global levels,

1. Welcomes the actions taken by the Inter-Parliamentary Union to pursue a more systematic engagement with the United Nations;

2. Encourages the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to work closely in various fields, in particular peace and security, economic and social development, climate change, international law, human rights and gender issues, democracy and good governance, bearing in mind the significant benefits of cooperation between the two organizations, to which the report of the Secretary-General attests;

3. Encourages the continued active involvement of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in mobilizing parliamentary action to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and to provide input to the design of the post-2015 development agenda, and emphasizes the importance of the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union continuing to work closely together with a view to promoting the enhanced contribution of parliaments at the national level and the Inter-Parliamentary Union at the global level in the implementation of the post-2015 development agenda;

4. Encourages the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to strengthen cooperation on issues related to the dialogue between civilizations, culture, education and information and communication technologies;

5. Welcomes the preparations currently under way for the organization of the Fourth World Conference of Speakers of Parliament, in 2015, and encourages the conduct of these preparations in close cooperation with the United Nations, with a view to holding the Conference at United Nations Headquarters in New York as part of the series of high-level meetings in 2015, and maximizing political support for the outcome of the summit on the post-2015 development agenda;

6. Also welcomes the practice of including legislators as members of national delegations to major United Nations meetings and events, as appropriate, including new forums, such as the United Nations high-level political forum on sustainable development and the youth forum of the Economic and Social Council, and invites Member States to continue this practice in a more regular and systematic manner;

7. Invites Member States to further consider ways to work regularly with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in facilitating a parliamentary component to major United Nations conferences and in more closely linking the annual parliamentary hearing at the United Nations to the main United Nations processes, so as to help to inform such deliberations from a parliamentary perspective;

8. Encourages Member States to consider applying the practice of the joint United Nations-Inter-Parliamentary Union parliamentary hearing to other parliamentary meetings convened in conjunction with major United Nations conferences and processes, such as the parliamentary meeting organized on the occasion of the annual session of the Commission on the Status of Women, with a view to including the outcome of these parliamentary meetings as a formal contribution to the respective United Nations processes;

9. Welcomes the contribution of the Inter-Parliamentary Union to the work of the Human Rights Council, notably by providing a more robust parliamentary contribution to the universal periodic review and to the United Nations human rights treaty bodies along the lines of the cooperation developed in recent years between the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and national parliaments whose countries are under review;

10. Invites UN-Women to work closely with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in such areas as the empowerment of women, institutional gender mainstreaming, support to parliaments in promoting gender-sensitive legislation, increasing the representation of women in parliaments, combating violence against women and the implementation of relevant United Nations resolutions;

11. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to further assist in developing closer cooperation between the United Nations and parliaments at the national level, including in terms of strengthening parliamentary capacities, reinforcing the rule of law and helping to align national legislation with international commitments;

12. Calls upon United Nations country teams to develop a more structured and integrated manner of working with national parliaments, inter alia, by involving parliaments in consultations on national development strategies and on development aid effectiveness;

13. Encourages the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to avail themselves more systematically of the unique expertise of the Inter-Parliamentary Union and its member parliaments in strengthening parliamentary institutions, particularly in countries emerging from conflict and/or in transition to democracy;

14. Calls for a regular annual exchange between the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and the senior leadership of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, with a view to building greater coherence in the work of the two organizations, maximizing parliamentary support for the United Nations and helping to forge a strategic partnership between the two organizations;

15. Recommends that a new cooperation agreement between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union be drawn up, so as to reflect progress and developments over past years and to place the institutional relationship between the two organizations on a strong footing;

16. Decides, in recognition of the unique role of national parliaments in support of the work of the United Nations, to include in the provisional agenda of its seventieth session the item entitled "Interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union", and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report under this item.

Participation in UN work

Observer status

Developing Eight Countries Organizations for Economic Cooperation

By a letter of 13 March [A/69/142], Pakistan requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly of an item entitled "Observer status for the Developing Eight Countries Organization for Economic Cooperation in the General Assembly". An annexed memorandum stated that the Organization, established in 1997 and made up of Bangladesh, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Malaysia, Nigeria, Pakistan and Turkey, aimed at improving the positions of developing countries in the world economy, creating new opportunities in trade relations, enhancing participation in international decision-making and providing a better standard of living. By obtaining observer status in the Assembly, the Organization would strengthen its public visibility, benefit from worldwide experience, including the opportunity to enhance its capacity-building process, and share a platform with the international community. Also annexed to the report was a draft resolution (see below).

The Sixth Committee on 6 November [A/69/513] recommended adopting the draft resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/513], adopted resolution 69/129 without vote [agenda item 171].

Observer status for the Developing Eight Countries Organization for Economic Cooperation in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Developing Eight Countries Organization for Economic Cooperation,

1. Decides to invite the Developing Eight Countries Organization for Economic Cooperation to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the action necessary to implement the present resolution.

Pacific Community

By a letter of 25 March [A/69/143] to the Secretary-General, Fiji requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly of an item entitled “Observer status for the Pacific Community in the General Assembly”. An annexed explanatory memorandum noted that the Community, established in 1947, comprised 26 sovereign States and non-sovereign territories as equal members (American Samoa, Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji, France, French Polynesia, Guam, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, New Caledonia, New Zealand, Niue, Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Pitcairn Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, United States, Vanuatu, Wallis and Futuna). Created as a vehicle for fostering cooperation, integration and development in the Pacific region in the aftermath of the Second World War, the Community had evolved into a scientific and technical knowledge-based development organization. Observer status in the Assembly would both consolidate links between the United Nations and the Community and facilitate opportunities for greater mutually beneficial cooperation. Also annexed to the report was a draft resolution (see below).

The Sixth Committee on 5 November [A/69/514] recommended adoption of the draft resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/514], adopted resolution 69/130 without vote [agenda item 172].

Observer status for the Pacific Community in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Community,

1. Decides to invite the Pacific Community to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the action necessary to implement the present resolution.

Cooperation Council of Turkic-speaking States

Pursuant to General Assembly decision 68/528 [YUN 2013, p. 1431], the item on observer status for the Cooperation Council of Turkic-speaking States was included in the Assembly’s sixty-ninth session.

On 10 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/69/511], deferred a decision on the request for observer status until its seventieth session (decision 69/527).

International Chamber of Commerce

Pursuant to General Assembly decision 68/530 [YUN 2013, p. 1431], the item on observer status for the International Chamber of Commerce was included in the Assembly’s sixty-ninth session. In a November report [A/69/512], the Sixth Committee considered the item without taking action. The Assembly took note of the Committee’s report on 10 December (decision 69/528).

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) held its 2014 regular session (21–30 January and 7 February) [E/2014/32 (Part I)] and its resumed session (19–28 May and 6 June) [E/2014/32 (Part II)] in New York.

Regular session

At its regular session, the Committee on NGOs considered 439 applications for consultative status, including 219 applications deferred from previous sessions. It recommended 225 applications for consultative status, deferred consideration of 192 to its resumed session and closed consideration without prejudice of 22 applications (Part I) of organizations which had not responded to the Committee’s questions despite three reminders. The Committee also had before it three requests for reclassification of consultative status, of which it recommended granting two. It took note of three requests for change of name and deferred consideration of two. The Committee also took note of 279 quadrennial reports and deferred 11. It heard 15 representatives from the 41 NGOs attending the session and recommended three draft decisions for action by the Council.

Economic and Social Council action. On 23 April, the Council granted consultative status to 225 NGOs and reclassified two from special to general consultative status. It took note of the request of three NGOs for change of name, and of the quadrennial reports submitted by 279 NGOs for the reporting period 2009–2012 and earlier. It noted that the Committee had closed consideration of 22 applications after failure to respond to queries by Committee members (decision 2014/212).

On the same day, the Council withdrew the consultative status of one NGO (decision 2014/213) and took note of the Committee's report on its 2014 regular session (decision 2014/214).

Resumed session

At its resumed session, the Committee considered 343 applications for consultative status. It recommended 158 applications, deferred 153 for further consideration, closed consideration without prejudice of 29 applications and took note of two NGOs that had withdrawn their applications. The Committee recommended granting one request for reclassification and deferring consideration of two. It took note of five requests and deferred two for change of name, also taking note of 129 quadrennial reports. The Committee recommended reinstating the consultative status of 21 NGOs that had submitted their outstanding quadrennial reports, and recommended suspending for a year the consultative status of 106

NGOs that had failed to submit such reports. The Committee heard 13 representatives of the 40 NGOs attending the session and recommended six draft decisions for action by the Council.

Economic and Social Council action. On 14 July, the Council granted consultative status to 158 NGOs; reclassified one from special to general consultative status; took note of the change of name for three NGOs; noted the quadrennial reports of 129 organizations for the period 2009–2012 and earlier; closed without prejudice consideration of the requests for consultative status made by 29 NGOs after those had failed—after three reminders—to respond to queries posed by Committee members; noted the withdrawal of the applications of two NGOs and decided not to grant consultative status to one NGO (decision 2014/222).

On the same day, the Council suspended for one year the consultative status of 106 NGOs with outstanding quadrennial reports (decision 2014/223), reinstated the consultative status of 21 NGOs that had submitted their outstanding quadrennial reports (decision 2014/224) and withdrew the consultative status of 129 NGOs that had failed to submit outstanding quadrennial reports after suspension (decision 2014/225).

The Council decided that the Committee's 2015 regular session would be held from 26 January to 3 February and on 13 February 2015, and its resumed session from 26 May to 3 June and on 12 June. It further approved the provisional agenda for that session (decision 2014/226) and took note of the Committee's report on its 2014 resumed session (decision 2014/227).

United Nations financing and programming

During 2014, the financial situation of the United Nations was generally sound. Assessments for the regular budget reflected a slight increase, $6 million more than in 2013, while levels for peacekeeping operations and the international tribunals decreased. There were no new assessments issued for the capital master plan in 2014. By year's end, unpaid assessments were lower than at the end of 2013 in all categories, except the regular budget, despite the reduction of those assessments from $1 billion to $535 million during the last quarter. For peacekeeping operations, unpaid assessments amounted to $1.3 billion, a decrease of $916 million compared to the previous year. Cash balances were positive for peacekeeping operations and the tribunals, while a cash shortfall of $81 million for the regular budget was covered by the Working Capital Fund. Debt owed to Member States for troops, formed police units and contingent-owned equipment totalled $779 millions. At the end of 2014, a total of 144 Member States had paid their regular budget assessments in full—two less than the number in 2013.

In December, the General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2014–2015 biennium of $5,653,823,300, representing an increase of $115,271,900 over the revised appropriation of $5,538,551,400 approved in April and June. It also endorsed the proposed strategic framework for the 2016–2017 biennium, invited the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed programme budget for that biennium on the basis of a preliminary estimate of $5,558,395,600, and affirmed its commitment to consider and decide on the report of the High-level Panel of Experts on the independent study on recosting and options for the Organization in dealing with fluctuations in exchange rates and inflation.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the elements of the methodology for the preparation of the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the budget and to encourage the payment of arrears through multi-year payment plans. The Assembly granted five Member States exemptions under Article 19 of the UN Charter so that they could be permitted to vote in the Assembly until the end of the sixty-ninth session.

Implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards throughout the UN system continued.

Financial situation

In an October report [A/69/520], on improving the financial situation of the United Nations, the Secretary-General provided an update on the financial strength of the Organization on the basis of four main financial indicators: assessments issued, unpaid assessments, available cash resources and the Organization's outstanding payments to Member States. Overall, the financial indicators for 2014 were positive, but the level of cash available for the regular budget, $35 million, was low and the situation, which was expected to tighten further towards the end of the year, would depend on contributions in those final months.

As at 2 October 2014, assessments for the regular budget were higher than those for 2013, by $6 million; assessments decreased for peacekeeping operations and the tribunals; and no new assessments were made for the capital master plan (CMP). A total of $5.8 billion was assessed in 2014 for peacekeeping operations. Unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the tribunals totalled $3.7 billion, which included $2.6 billion for peacekeeping (compared to $3.4 billion at 1 October 2013); $1,037 million for the regular budget ($92 million higher than in 2013); and $60 million for the tribunals (the same as in 2013). Member States that had paid their regular budget assessments in full as at 2 October 2014, numbered 125, nine less than at 1 October 2013. Cash available for peacekeeping operations was approximately $4.3 billion and cash available for the regular budget, taking into account the reserves, totalled $419 million.

The level of outstanding payments to Member States was projected to decrease considerably. In addition, the approved commitment authority for the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response (UNMEER) approved by General Assembly resolution 69/3 (see p. 1361) would draw on regular budget cash, adding pressure to the overall cash position of the General Fund.

At 3 October, a total of some $1.3 billion was owed to Member States: $585 million for troops and formed police units, $602 million for contingent-owned equipment claims for active missions and $86 million for closed missions.

In his end-of-year review of the Organization's financial situation [A/69/520/Add.1 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported that it was generally sound. Unpaid assessments were lower than at the end of 2013 in all categories, except the regular budget. As at 31 December 2014, unpaid assessments for peacekeeping operations were lower at $1.3 billion, down from $2.2 billion at 31 December 2013; and $40 million for the tribunals, down from $54 million in December 2013. Despite a significant reduction in the level of unpaid regular budget assessments in the last quarter of 2014 (from $1 billion to $535 million), it was necessary to draw on the regular budget cash reserves, both the Working Capital Fund and the Special Account, for the regular budget and CMP during those months.

The cash balances at 31 December were positive for peacekeeping operations and the tribunals. Total cash available for peacekeeping was approximately $4.3 billion, comprising $3.8 billion in the accounts of active missions, $294 million in the accounts of closed missions and $138 million in the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund. The final cash position for the regular budget reflected a shortfall of $81 million, which was covered by the Working Capital Fund. Debt owed to Member States for troops, formed police units and contingent-owned equipment totalled $779 million at 31 December.

On 29 December, (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on improving the financial situation of the United Nations remained for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

UN Budget

Budget for 2014–2015

Revised appropriations

In the first performance report on the 2014–2015 programme budget [A/69/612], the Secretary-General identified adjustments to the level of appropriations as a result of variations in the rates of inflation and exchange, adjustments to standard costs, unforeseen and extraordinary items, as well as additional mandates approved by the General Assembly and the Security Council. The adjustments yielded revised estimates of $5,573.3 million under the expenditure sections of the budget, an increase of $34.7 million over the appropriation level approved by the General Assembly in resolutions 68/247 B (see p. 1639), 68/248 A–C [YUN 2013, p. 1446], 68/268 (see p. 756) and 68/279 (see p. 1116). The revised estimates under the income sections increased by $9.1 million resulting in a revised income estimate of $533 million.

In December [A/69/661], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Matters (ACABQ) noted that the income estimates in connection with income section 3 (Political affairs) required downward revision over the past three bienniums, calling into question the validity of the initial budget assumptions for the related income-generating activities. The Committee intended to keep that matter under review in the context of its consideration of the proposed programme budget for the 2016–2017 biennium. It further noted, with concern, that the $8 million limit specified under Assembly resolution 68/249 on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the 2014–2015 biennium [YUN 2013, p. 1461] was exceeded by $905,000 during 2014 and recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to observe those limits and provisions. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the revised estimates contained in the Secretary-General's report, subject to such adjustments as might be necessary as a result of the Assembly's consideration of matters before it, including the consolidated statement of revised estimates and programme budget implications.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/422/Add.1], adopted resolution 69/263 A, B and C without vote [agenda item 132].

Programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015

^a Including additional programme budget implications (see reports of the Fifth Committee A/68/820 and A/68/917).

2. Also resolves that, for the biennium 2014–2015, the estimates of income for the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response in an amount totalling 2,176,000 dollars shall be credited to the Tax Equalization Fund in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955.

C

FINANCING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS AND COMMITMENT AUTHORITY FOR THE YEAR 2015

The General Assembly

Resolves that, for the year 2015:

1. Budget appropriations and commitments totaling 2,993,230,800 United States dollars and consisting of 2,765,174,900 dollars, being half of the appropriation initially approved for the biennium 2014–2015 by the General Assembly in its resolution 68/248 A of 27 December 2013, the additional amount of 8,201,600 dollars for the biennium appropriated in its resolution 68/247 B of 9 April 2014 and approved in its resolutions 68/268 of 9 April 2014 and 68/279 of 30 June 2014, 115,271,900 dollars, being the increase approved in paragraph 1 of resolution A above, and the commitment authority of 104,582,400 dollars for the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 3.1 and 3.2 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, as follows:

- (a) 16,962,900 dollars consisting of:
 - (i) 15,979,700 dollars, being half of the estimated income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in its resolutions 68/248 B of 27 December 2013, 68/247 B, 68/268 and 68/279;
 - (ii) 983,200 dollars, being the increase in income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in paragraph 1 of resolution B above;
- (b) 2,976,267,900 dollars, being the assessment on Member States in accordance with its resolution 67/238 of 24 December 2012;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of 262,703,300 dollars, consisting of:

(a) 245,592,800 dollars, being half of the estimated staff assessment income approved by the Assembly in its resolution 68/248 B;

(b) 780,200 dollars, being the estimated increase in income for staff assessment approved by the Assembly in its resolutions 68/247 B, 68/268 and 68/279;

(c) 12,513,500 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in paragraph 1 of resolution B above, inclusive of the income estimates for the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response;

(d) 3,816,800 dollars, being the increase in income from staff assessment for the biennium 2012–2013, compared with the revised estimates approved by the Assembly in its resolution 68/245 B of 27 December 2013.

On the same date (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the programme budget for the 2014–2015 biennium would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Questions relating to the 2014–2015 programme budget

The Fifth Committee considered a number of questions related to the 2014–2015 programme budget, including estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions by the Economic and Social Council and by the Human Rights Council, the first performance report on the 2014–2015 programme budget, and the contingency fund.

Other subjects covered concerned the International Public Sector Accounting Standards adopted by the United Nations (see p. 1650); information and communication technology in the United Nations (see p. 1672); the strategic heritage plan of the UN Office at Geneva (see p. 1680); progress in construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and proposals for the renovation of conference facilities, including Africa Hall (see p. 1681); the study on the long-term accommodation needs at UN Headquarters from 2014 to 2034 (see p. 1679); revised estimates resulting from the requests in the “Outcome document of the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly known as the World Conference on Indigenous Peoples” (see p. 888); revised estimates for the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response (see p. 1366); and financial implications relating to the administration of justice at the United Nations (see p. 1701).

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives

Reports of Secretary-General. In March [A/68/327/Add.10], the Secretary-General submitted additional resource requirements for 2014 for the United Nations Assistance Mission in Somalia (UNSM) (see p. 374) in the amount of $22,156,200 net ($22,205,100 gross). In April [A/68/327/Add.11], he submitted additional resource requirements for 2014 for the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Yemen, and for the newly established Panel of Experts on Yemen (see p. 480) in an amount totaling $3,940,500 net ($4,148,000 gross), as well as for the United Nations Support Mission in Libya (UNSMIL) in an amount totaling $22,793,200 net ($23,204,400 gross) [A/68/327/Add.12].

ACABQ, in a May report [A/68/7/Add.26] on UNSOM, recommended that the General Assembly approve additional resources in the amount of $21,972,400 net ($22,016,500 gross).

Also in May, ACABQ recommended approval of additional resources of $3,265,100 net ($3,377,900 gross) for the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Yemen and the Panel of Experts on Yemen [A/68/7/Add.27], and total resources of $22,732,700 for UNSMIL [A/68/7/Add.28].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 June [meeting 99], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/68/689/Add.2], adopted resolution 68/280 without vote [agenda item 134].

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council

The General Assembly,

Recalling section VI of its resolution 68/247 A of 27 December 2013, its resolution 68/248 A of 27 December 2013 and section II of its resolution 68/247 B of 9 April 2014,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council concerning the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Yemen, the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Sahel, the Panel of Experts on Yemen, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Somalia and the United Nations Support Mission in Libya and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to strictly abide by all relevant General Assembly resolutions and related internal guidance on the standard of accommodation for air travel in the preparation of future budgets;
4. Takes note of paragraphs 12 and 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee;
5. Recalls paragraph 5 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and notes that the guard unit of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Somalia will provide “inner-ring” static protection within Mogadishu International Airport and that the associated costs are included in the resources for the Mission;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly for consideration at its sixty-ninth session detailed information on support requirements for the Mission provided by the United Nations Support Office for the African Union Mission in Somalia;

7. Decides to adjust the resource requirements for military and police personnel relating to the guard unit to reflect the delayed deployment of personnel;

8. Takes note of paragraph 9 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to apply a vacancy rate of 25 per cent for the period from May to December 2014 in respect of the additional posts in the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Yemen;

9. Encourages close collaboration between the security and close protection operations of the Office of the Special Adviser and the Panel of Experts on Yemen, in order to avoid, to the extent possible, any duplication;

10. Recalls paragraph 14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard decides to defer consideration of this matter to the main part of its sixty-ninth session;

11. Also recalls paragraph 9 of the report of the Advisory Committee, decides to consider the question of temporary duty assignments at its sixty-ninth session, while maintaining existing arrangements in the interim, and emphasizes that such assignments are intended to meet temporary requirements for up to 90 days;

12. Takes note of paragraph 15 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to establish one Local level position in the Transport and Movement Control Section of the United Nations Support Mission in Libya;

13. Decides to approve the total amount of 47,693,200 United States dollars net for the budgets of the five special political missions authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council included in the reports of the Secretary-General;

14. Also decides to approve a charge totalling 47,693,200 dollars net against the provision appropriated for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015.

In October [A/69/363 & Corr.1–3 & Add.1–5], the Secretary General submitted proposed resource requirements for 2015 for 35 special political missions, which amounted to $485,160,800 net ($513,182,600 gross). Of that requirement, $435,094,000 (net of staff assessment) would be charged against the balance of $435,094,000 remaining in the provision of $1,081,089,900 for special political missions appropriated under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2014–2015 programme budget, after taking into account the underexpenditure of $11,966,000 (net of staff assessment) in 2014. The General Assembly was requested to approve the remaining amount of $38,100,800, net of staff assessment ($40,314,500 gross), in additional appropriations for the 2014–2015 biennium.

ACABQ, in a December report [A/69/628], recommended that the Assembly approve the resources requested by the Secretary-General for the 35 special political missions for the period until 31 December 2015, subject to its observations and recommendations, and requested that the adjusted amount be provided to the Assembly at the time of its consideration of the Secretary-General's proposals. In that regard, the Assembly was recommended to approve a charge totaling $435,094,000 net, corresponding to the undistributed balance in the provision for special political missions for the 2014–2015 biennium.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

In an October report [A/69/535], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council during its 2014 session in the amount of $56,300, of which $5,400 could be absorbed within resources approved for the biennium. The remaining requirements of $50,900 would be subject to the procedures established by the General Assembly in its resolutions 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024] and 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

ACABQ, in a November report [A/69/609], recommended that additional requirements of up to $35,100 relating to the Committee of Experts on International Cooperation in Tax matters (see p. 1120) be absorbed by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management. The Committee stressed that the General Assembly had not yet considered the cost-sharing arrangement for the resident coordinator system and the related UN contribution. The Committee expected that any additional resource requirements relating to the UN share of the resident coordinator system would be submitted alongside the proposed cost-sharing arrangement for consideration and approval by the Assembly.

Revised estimates resulting from Human Rights Council action

In November [A/69/615], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements totalling $52,073,200, resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its 2014 sessions. Of those requirements, the amount of $25,048,800 relating to activities of a perennial nature was already included in the 2014–2015 programme budget, while the amount of $10,097,400 relating to commitment authorities approved by ACABQ in 2014, and the related appropriations, was being sought in the context of the first performance report on the 2014–2015 programme budget. Of the balance of the requirements in the amount of $12,460,200, it was proposed that $158,300 be accommodated within the existing appropriations for the 2014–2015 biennium, and that the remaining $12,301,900 be appropriated, representing a charge against the contingency fund for 2014–2015.

ACABQ, in December [A/69/670], recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposals, subject to its observations and recommendations.

Recosting and fluctuations in exchange rates and inflation

Report of the High-level Panel of Experts. In September [A/69/381], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the High-level Panel of Experts, established by resolution 68/246 [YUN 2013, p. 1448], to conduct the independent study on recosting and options for the Organization in dealing with fluctuations in exchange rates and inflation, drawing on the experience of other international organizations. According to the report, given the biennial nature of the UN budget, the Secretariat frequently revised, or "recosted" budget estimates within a biennium to adjust for variation in currency exchange rates; actual inflation experience; changes in standard staff costs, including payroll and common staff costs; and vacancy rates previously approved by the Assembly. Since the 2004–2005 budget year, the total realized final appropriations submitted to Member States were higher than initial appropriation estimates, owing in part to recosting, and on average, had resulted in upward revisions of $71.5 million per biennium. The study focused on the regular UN programme budget, excluding the peacekeeping budget; presented options for addressing additional expenditures arising from inflation and currency exchange rate fluctuations; and included recommendations to help the Assembly and the Secretariat update the regular budget process and manage uncertainty over the two-year budget period while meeting the Organization's objectives.

The experts recommended an integrated and complementary set of proposals, addressing both external pressures, such as currency exchange rate fluctuations, and internal challenges. Recommendations included actions to increase the accuracy of budget forecasts, improve visibility and flow of information of risk exposures, reduce frequency of recosting moments, manage recosting risk through hedging, and other potential actions such as authorizing the Secretariat to formulate additional cost-management solution. Some proposals could be implemented immediately, while others, such as implementing an effective hedging programme, would take time and had prerequisite actions that required the Secretariat to be able to measure its relevant exposures. The Panel of Experts recommended that the Assembly could decide on a package of actions in 2014 and the Secretariat could update processes in 2015 in time to shape the 2016–2017 regular budget. A road map for the implementation of the package of actions was proposed and set out in table 4 of the Panel's report.

ACABQ, in its December report [A/69/640], was of the view that the analysis conducted by the Panel of Experts contained several limitations, which had a detrimental effect on the overall quality of the report and the utility of its findings and recommendations, such as the exclusion of special political missions from the Panel's review; the need for analysis of the different budget sections within the regular budget and the variable effects of inflation and currency movements between different budget sections, analysis of the experiences and practices of other organizations in budgeting different cost factors and their applicability to the United Nations and more detail on the unique nature of the United Nations, including the particularity of its budget processes and sources of funding; as well as limitations with Umoja, the Organization's enterprise resource planning project [YUN 2008, p. 1591], to satisfy the Secretariat's need for timely, detailed information concerning currency exposures. Other concerns included, whether the reduction in the frequency of recosting would necessarily impact the predictability of the budget; the need for the Assembly to determine whether any changes to the recosting methodology were required and, if so, to set its own parameters for implementation; the technical merit and programmatic implications of a decision to impose a recosting cap; and the need to fully analyze the impact of reserve funds, including whether their establishment would lead to higher initial assessments for Member States in respect of the UN programme budget. The Committee also believed that every effort should have been made to form a Panel with as wide a geographic representation as possible, which could have benefited from the relevant expertise available in all regional groups.

The Assembly, in section XII of its resolution 69/262 of 29 December (see p. 1638), affirmed its commitment to consider and decide on the independent study of the High-level Panel of Experts and the recommendations contained therein at the first part of its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session, without precluding other options.

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

In a December report [A/C.5/69/16] on the contingency fund, the Secretary-General submitted the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates for the fund, which included potential new charges amounting to $25,422,100 that exceeded the remaining balance of the fund by $11,586,100.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the report of the Fifth Committee [A/69/422/Add.1], adopted resolution 69/262 without vote [agenda item 132].

Questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015

The General Assembly,

I

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

Recalling section IV of its resolution 60/283 of 7 July 2006, section V of its resolution 63/262 of 24 December 2008, its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009, its resolution 65/243 A and section II.B of its resolution 65/259 of 24 December 2010, section I of its resolution 66/232 B of 21 June 2012, its resolution 66/246 and sections II and V of its resolution 66/247 of 24 December 2011, section IV of its resolution 67/246 of 24 December 2012 and section II of its resolution 68/247 A of 27 December 2013,

Having considered the seventh progress report of the Secretary-General on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards by the United Nations, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the fourth progress report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of the Standards and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the seventh progress report of the Secretary-General on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards by the United Nations and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the fourth progress report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of the Standards;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Accepts the fourth progress report of the Board of Auditors;

4. Approves the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its report;

5. Welcomes the progress made in the development of the benefits realization plan, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General, in the context of future progress reports, to include information related to capturing the quantitative and qualitative benefits across 15 key categories relating to the 5 key strategic benefits originally envisaged as resulting from the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;

II

Information and communications technology in the United Nations

Recalling section II of its resolution 60/283, its resolutions 63/262, 63/269 of 7 April 2009 and 64/243, section XVII of its resolution 65/259, its resolution 66/246 and section I of its resolution 67/254 A of 12 April 2013,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

Stressing the need to harness the potential of information and communications technology to support the work of the United Nations in the areas of peace and security, development, human rights and international law,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the conclusions and recommendations contained in the present resolution;

3. Underlines the importance of information and communications technology in meeting the growing demands of the Organization as it becomes increasingly reliant on its information and communications technology infrastructure;

4. Also underlines the importance of information and communications technology in strengthening oversight and accountability and in increasing the availability of accurate and timely information to support decision-making;

5. Recognizes the important role played by information and communications technology in facilitating efficient and effective deliberations within intergovernmental bodies, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to entrust to the Office of Information and Communications Technology its continuing collaboration with the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat in order that they may continue their efforts to address relevant issues, as appropriate;

6. Welcomes the new information and communications technology strategy for the United Nations, as contained in the report of the Secretary-General;

7. Recalls paragraphs 22 and 64 of the report of the Advisory Committee, endorses all the elements of the proposed information and communications technology strategy, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure its implementation, taking into account the comments, observations and recommendations of the Board of Auditors and of the Advisory Committee, subject to future decisions of the General Assembly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, at its seventieth session, detailed information on the implementation of all the elements of the proposed new strategy, including an implementation plan, with a clear timeline, a list of strategic information and communications technology goals linked to the overall goals of the Organization and a list of ongoing and future strategic information and communications technology initiatives supporting those goals and their costs, benchmarks and deliverables to measure their performance, expected benefits and risks, as well as an indicative five-year overall information and communications technology budget projection for the Secretariat;

9. Recalls paragraph 34 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to reduce the level of fragmentation of the current information and communications technology environment across the Secretariat and at all duty stations and field missions;

10. Notes the ongoing reform and initiatives by the Office of Information and Communications Technology that aim to support the work of the Organization, and in this regard emphasizes the need for the Office to continue its efforts, with the aim of facilitating the work of the Organization and its support to Member States, including through the provision of relevant services to delegates at all main duty stations, as appropriate;

11. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to invite the heads of United Nations entities to consider the possible harmonization and sharing of services as well as the related costs of information and communications technology, as appropriate, in particular at field locations, and to report thereon in the context of future progress reports;

12. Underlines the importance of strong and accountable management of information security, and recognizes the need to ensure central control of information security and the Chief Information Technology Officer as the central authority for information security;

13. Recalls paragraph 23 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session a progress report on the status of the 10-point action plan to strengthen information security, as well as the actions taken to fully address the mandates specified in its resolution 68/247 A;

14. Acknowledges that the lack of effective governance and leadership in the area of information and communications technology has resulted in a high level of duplication and fragmentation of the information and communications technology functions within the Secretariat;

15. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to foster deeper coordination and collaboration within the Organization, and emphasizes that the full support and commitment of senior management, as well as close and continuous engagement with all stakeholders, keeping in mind the need to address all operational requirements, are integral to the successful implementation of the information and communications technology strategy;

16. Recalls its resolution 63/262, acknowledges the responsibilities and the importance of the strong central leadership of the Chief Information Technology Officer for the overall direction and performance of information and communications technology activities within the Organization, and in this regard emphasizes the need for appropriate delegation of authority and procedures for ensuring compliance with the revised information and communications technology strategy guidelines on, inter alia, operations, security, investment and oversight at United Nations offices, in particular those related to the field;

17. Requests the Advisory Committee to request the Board of Auditors to expand coverage of its audit of the information and communications technology expenditures of all entities of the Secretariat, main duty stations, peacekeeping operations and other field-based offices and to report thereon in the context of future reports of the Board;

18. Recalls paragraph 43 of the report of the Advisory Committee, requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all entities of the Secretariat report to the Chief Information Technology Officer on all issues relating to information and communications technology activities, resource management, standards, security, architecture, policies and guidance, and also requests the Secretary-General to provide, at the seventieth session of the General Assembly, a progress report on lessons learned in this regard, for its consideration;

III

Strategic heritage plan of the United Nations Office at Geneva

Recalling part XI of its resolution 64/243, section VII of its resolution 66/247 and section V of its resolution 68/247 A,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Welcomes the continued support of the Government of Switzerland for the construction project in Geneva;

4. Recalls paragraph 12 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly at its seventieth session detailed information on measures to expedite the commencement of construction work related to the strategic heritage plan;

5. Reiterates paragraph 8, section V, of its resolution 68/247 A;

6. Recalls paragraph 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and reaffirms paragraphs 5 and 6 of section V of its resolution 68/247 A;

7. Welcomes the loan package offered by the Government of Switzerland, and notes that both the loan package and other alternative funding mechanisms will be discussed in the context of the financing scheme at the main part of its seventieth session;

8. Recalls paragraph 29 of section V of its resolution 68/247 A and paragraph 63 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to negotiate with the host country on the most preferential terms and modalities for the loan arrangements for both the renovation and the construction portions of the strategic heritage plan and to report thereon at the main part of its seventieth session;

9. Also recalls paragraph 69 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore all possible alternative funding mechanisms in order to reduce the overall assessment on Member States and to report on concrete steps taken in this regard at the main part of its seventieth session;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of attracting additional United Nations entities to be accommodated at the renovated Palais des Nations and to report thereon in his next progress report;

11. Recalls paragraph 78 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to explore the feasibility and ways of factoring future rental income into a comprehensive plan for the financing of the strategic heritage plan;

12. Stresses the importance of ensuring effective governance and oversight with respect to the implementation of the strategic heritage plan at the earliest stages of the project;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to present revised proposals with regard to the governance and oversight framework, with a view to ensuring effective oversight at the earliest stages of the project, and to include more detailed information on the scope, composition, technical expertise and decision-making mechanisms as well as the functional arrangements of the Steering Committee and the Advisory Board in the context of his next progress report;

14. Emphasizes that the Advisory Board shall be independent and impartial, with its membership reflecting a wide geographical representation while ensuring that the required expertise is ensured;

15. Also emphasizes the importance of ensuring integrated and independent project assurance for the strategic heritage plan;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to present a proposal for the donation policy for the consideration of the General Assembly no later than at the main part of its seventieth session;

17. Stresses that the proposal for the donation policy should not be restrictive and that it should be in full conformity with the international and intergovernmental character of the Organization, as well as with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and without prejudice to the scope, specifications and design of the project;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that works of art, masterpieces and other gifts are handled appropriately during the design and renovation stages of the strategic heritage plan at the Palais des Nations, and also requests him to cooperate with those Member States that wish to take care of their gifts of works of art, masterpieces and other items;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that implementation of the strategic heritage plan takes into account measures to eliminate physical, communications and technical barriers to persons with disabilities, in particular regarding improvement of the conference facilities, with full respect for the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and to report on this subject in future annual progress reports;

20. Further requests the Secretary-General to follow up with the relevant authorities in the host country on the application of construction standards, including the revision of earthquake safety codes, and to report thereon in the context of his next progress report;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any revision to earthquake safety codes does not lead to cost escalation of the project;

22. Emphasizes the importance of achieving all the key objectives of the strategic heritage plan, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to preserve the heritage and architectural integrity of the Palais des Nations throughout all phases of the project;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to assess the potential for flexible workplace strategies in the context of the strategic heritage plan, subject to a decision by the General Assembly on this matter;

24. Also encourages the Secretary-General to continue to explore the possibilities for the re-use of the existing furniture and to report thereon in the context of future progress reports;

25. Decides to establish seven positions comprising three project team positions and four operational experts, effective 1 January 2015;

26. Reaffirms that the project team is a time-limited and mission-specific endeavour and that the team should therefore not be a permanent addition to the existing structure of the Organization;

27. Decides to appropriate an additional amount of 26,112,600 Swiss francs, or 28,199,400 United States dollars, at initial 2014–2015 appropriation rates, under section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

28. Also decides to revert to the establishment of the multi-year special account for the strategic heritage plan at the main part of the seventieth session of the General Assembly;

IV

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council

17. Recalls paragraph 197 of the report of the Advisory Committee, encourages the Secretary-General to undertake more robust efforts to strengthen the national staffing component, whenever appropriate, by nationalizing positions, considering the availability of qualified individuals in the local labour market, and requests the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq to nationalize eight international positions;

18. Approves budgets totalling 480,262,600 dollars for the 35 special political missions authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council listed in table 6 of the report of the Secretary-General;

19. Also approves a charge totalling 435,094,000 dollars net, corresponding to the undistributed balance in the provision for special political missions for the biennium 2014–2015;

20. Decides to appropriate, under the procedures provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, an amount of 31,501,300 dollars under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015, after taking into account the unspent balance of 11,966,000 dollars against the amounts approved for 2014;

21. Also decides to appropriate an amount of 1,797,800 dollars under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

V

Progress in the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and proposals for the renovation of conference facilities, including Africa Hall

Recalling its resolution 56/270 of 27 March 2002, section IV of its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003, sections IX and X of its resolution 62/238 of 22 December 2007, section I of its resolution 63/263 of 24 December 2008, its resolution 64/243, section III of its resolution 65/259, section VII of its resolution 66/247, section II of its resolution 67/246 and section III of its resolution 68/247 A,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on progress in the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, proposals for the renovation of conference facilities, including Africa Hall, and revised estimates relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015 under section 18, Economic and social development in Africa, section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, and section 34, Safety and security, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Notes with appreciation the continued efforts of the Government of Ethiopia, as the host country, in facilitating the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa;

4. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to include local knowledge and capacity throughout the implementation of the construction projects, as appropriate;

5. Recalls paragraph 5 of section VII of resolution 66/247 and paragraph 14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts to bring this matter to a swift conclusion and to provide an update in his next progress report;

6. Acknowledges the successful substantial completion of the construction of additional office facilities, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the completion of the remaining ancillary work by June 2015;

7. Notes with concern the continued deterioration of Africa Hall at the Economic Commission for Africa, as presented in the report of the Secretary-General;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure robust internal project control mechanisms in the context of the scope, cost, schedule and quality of the Africa Hall renovation project;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to mitigate potential risks and to monitor closely the Africa Hall renovation project in order to avoid any further delay;

10. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure full accountability for the delays in the Africa Hall renovation project at the Economic Commission for Africa and to include that information in his next annual progress report;

11. Re-emphasizes the importance of guidance, interaction and coordination between the United Nations Secretariat in New York, on the one hand, and the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, on the other, with clear reporting lines;

12. Recalls paragraphs 20, 34 and 35 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly detailed information on expenditure and total cost estimates of the Africa Hall renovation project;

13. Encourages the Secretary-General to seek voluntary contributions for the Africa Hall renovation project and to report to the General Assembly on the progress at the main part of its seventieth session;

14. Recalls paragraph 37 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard looks forward to receiving updates on the study in the next progress report;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore additional means to increase the utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa, including with its partners, such as the African Union, and to report thereon, including on the impact of the initiatives of the Commission, to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

16. Takes note of paragraph 12 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

17. Decides to make a final decision on the establishment of a separate and multi-year account for the renovation of Africa Hall at the Economic Commission for Africa at its seventieth session in the context of its consideration of the budget proposal;

18. Also decides to appropriate an additional amount of 2,610,000 dollars net, before recosting, comprising 125,200 dollars under section 18, Economic and social development in Africa, 2,184,000 dollars under section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, 300,800 dollars under section 34, Safety and security, and 46,200 dollars under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

19. Emphasizes the need for the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat to continue to provide oversight of the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa, in particular the renovation of Africa Hall, and to continue to include information on key findings in the context of the annual reports of the Office on its activities;

20. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the annual progress report on the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa, to include information on progress related to the implementation of the Africa Hall renovation project;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to update Member States, through the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat, on the progress of the construction projects;

VI

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its 2014 session

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Recalls paragraph 9 of the report of the Advisory Committee, notes the consideration of the cost-sharing arrangement by the General Assembly, and looks forward to receiving all relevant information on the resource requirements for the United Nations share in the arrangement in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017;

VII

Study on the long-term accommodation needs at United Nations Headquarters for the period from 2014 to 2034

Recalling its resolution 60/282 of 30 June 2006, section III of its resolution 67/254 A and its decision 68/549 B of 9 April 2014,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Recognizes the need to resolve the long-term accommodation needs of the Organization, and identifies four viable options, namely options 1, 2, 3 and 4 presented in the report of the Secretary-General, or a combination of any of those options;

4. Recalls paragraph 10 of section III of its resolution 67/254 A, and requests the Secretary-General to present, at the main part of its seventieth session, comprehensive information on all aspects pertinent to option 3, which, subject to additional information to be provided, appears to be a very feasible and serious option;

5. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure equal treatment of all viable options identified in the present resolution and to work towards securing the most favourable terms for the Organization in addressing its long-term accommodation needs;

6. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to conduct high-level dialogue with all relevant entities regarding the long-term accommodation needs for United Nations Headquarters, and decides that these consultations on all options shall not represent a commitment by the Organization and shall be without prejudice to any future decision by the General Assembly;

7. Recalls paragraph 7 of section III of its resolution 67/254 A, and requests the Secretary-General to provide updated comprehensive information on the four viable options identified in the present resolution at its seventieth session, in particular:

(a) Financial costs and accurate cost projections related to a building on the North Lawn, funded through a special assessment, including the projected United Nations space accommodation and design requirements;

(b) Financial costs, availability of third-party financing and accurate cost projections related to a building on the North Lawn, including the projected United Nations space accommodation and design requirements;

(c) Financial costs on the basis of a preliminary credit rating issuance, proposed lease terms and accurate cost projections related to the United Nations Consolidation Building, including projected United Nations space accommodation and design requirements;

(d) Financial costs and accurate cost projections related to continuing commercial lease arrangements;

(e) Any other relevant issues, including the cost of exploring each option;

8. Affirms that nothing in the present resolution shall incur financial or legal obligations for the United Nations in relation to the United Nations Consolidation Building or any other option for the long-term accommodation needs of the Organization;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure effective oversight and audit coverage in all phases of the project;

10. Recalls paragraph 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and, without prejudice to a decision the General Assembly may take on the implementation of a flexible workplace strategy, requests the Secretary-General to pursue further analysis in order to obtain statistically substantiated estimations of the impact that the implementation of a flexible workplace strategy would have on the projection of the office space requirements;

11. Requests the Secretary-General, without prejudice to any decision it may take on the new global service delivery model, to inform the General Assembly of the possible impact that the implementation of Umoja and the new global service delivery model could have in terms of the number, skills and location of staff, as this can be of capital importance for the planning of future office space requirements;

12. Recalls paragraph 4 of section III of its resolution 67/254 A, and underlines the need to respect the architectural integrity of the United Nations complex and of the original design of the Board of Design Consultants in considering the long-term accommodation needs at United Nations Headquarters;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to include, as appropriate and within the scope of his reports on the strategic capital review and the global service delivery model, information concerning the long-term accommodation needs for United Nations offices away from Headquarters, including in Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna and for the regional commissions;

VIII

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its twenty-fifth, twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh sessions and its twenty-first and twenty-second special sessions

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee;

3. Approves an additional appropriation in the amount of 11,705,800 dollars net, including 3,308,700 dollars under section 2, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management, 8,383,900 dollars under section 24, Human rights, 2,000 dollars under section 28, Public information, and 11,200 dollars under section 29F, Administration, Geneva, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015; in addition, an amount of 174,100 dollars will be required under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by an equivalent amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

4. Also approves the establishment, as from 1 January 2015, of nine posts (1 P-5, 1 P-4 and 7 P-3) under section 24, Human rights, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

IX

Revised estimates resulting from the requests contained in General Assembly resolution 69/2, entitled “Outcome document of the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly known as the World Conference on Indigenous Peoples”

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee;

3. Decides to appropriate resources in the amount of 101,800 dollars under section 2, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015, representing a charge against the contingency fund;

X

Revised estimates relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015 for the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates relating to section 5, Peacekeeping operations, section 8, Legal affairs, section 27, Humanitarian assistance, section 29B, Office of Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts, section 29C, Office of Human Resources Management, section 29D, Office of Central Support Services, section 34, Safety and security, and section 36, Staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015 for the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Expresses gratitude for the efforts of the Secretary-General and other actors in tackling the crisis caused by the outbreak of the Ebola virus disease and for the dedicated service and commitment of the personnel of the United Nations system who are engaged in the effort to combat the spread of Ebola;

4. Encourages greater emphasis on reallocating resources and activities from the headquarters of the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response to the front line in order to achieve maximum impact on the ground;

5. Also encourages the Mission to make maximum use of existing United Nations assets and capabilities in the region;

6. Regrets that the proposed staffing structure appears to be large, with a number of positions at high levels, and requests the Secretary-General to review, in the context of the next budget proposal, the staffing requirements of both the Mission and the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Ebola, with a view to ensuring that the staffing structure is commensurate with their mandates and that the financial resources are concentrated on operational activities;

7. Takes note of paragraphs 60 to 62 and 68 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

8. Recalls paragraph 36 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to provide detailed information on the coordination role of the Mission with regard to the United Nations system-wide response effort to the Ebola virus disease in the context of his next budget report;

9. Also recalls paragraph 64 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to provide the requested information in the context of his next budget report;

10. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in the amount of 104,582,400 dollars, inclusive of the amount of 49,943,600 dollars authorized by its resolution 69/3 of 9 October 2014 for the biennium 2014–2015, to provide for the requirements of the Office of the Special Envoy on Ebola and the United Nations Mission for Ebola Emergency Response for the period from 19 September 2014 to 30 June 2015, pending the submission of a detailed budget at the second part of the resumed sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, and decides to assess the amount of 104,582,400 dollars;

XI

Financial implications relating to the administration of justice at the United Nations

Recalling its resolution 69/203 of 18 December 2014 on the administration of justice at the United Nations,

Decides to approve an additional amount of 2,591,400 dollars gross (2,461,100 dollars net), before recosting, reflecting an increase of 2,413,400 dollars under section 1, Overall policymaking, direction and coordination, 47,700 dollars under section 29D, Office of Central Support Services, and 130,300 dollars under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

XII

First performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

Recalling its resolutions 68/248 A and B, 68/247 B and 68/280,

1. Reaffirms the budgetary process as approved in its resolutions 41/213 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987 and reaffirmed in subsequent resolutions;

2. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee;

4. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters, and urges the Secretary-General to ensure that information is provided in a timely manner and as required, with regard to potential programme budget implications arising from resolutions of the Main Committees or the plenary of the Assembly, as well as from initiatives discussed in subsidiary organs, in order to enable a fully informed decision-making process;

5. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that oral statements detailing resource requirements are presented to the General Assembly in a timely manner before the adoption of substantive resolutions, in accordance with rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly, and to provide information on the full scope of additional resources needed;

6. Recalls paragraph 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests that the Secretary-General provide a comprehensive assessment of the experience of forward purchasing of foreign currencies in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to review the recent experience of the utilization of the contingency fund in all its relevant aspects and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

8. Affirms its commitment to consider and decide on the independent study on recosting and options for the Organization in dealing with fluctuations in exchange rates and inflation and the recommendations contained therein at the first part of its resumed sixty-ninth session, without precluding other options;

9. Approves a net increase of 34,715,300 dollars in the appropriation approved for the biennium 2014–2015 and a net increase of 9,103,200 dollars in the estimates of income for the biennium, to be apportioned among expenditure and income sections as indicated in the first performance report of the Secretary-General;

XIII

Contingency fund

Notes that a balance of 248,900 dollars remains in the contingency fund.

Special subjects relating to the 2014–2015 programme budget

7. Authorizes the Secretary-General, as an exceptional measure, to enter into commitments in an amount not to exceed 15,540,000 United States dollars to supplement the voluntary financial resources of the international component of the Extraordinary Chambers for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2014;
8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-ninth session a report on the use of the commitment authority as well as information on a comprehensive examination of the future financing of the Extraordinary Chambers for 2015 and beyond;
9. Encourages all Member States to provide voluntary support for both the international and national components of the Extraordinary Chambers, and requests the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to obtain additional voluntary contributions, including by broadening the donor base, for funding the future activities of the Extraordinary Chambers;
10. Recalls paragraph 36 (e) of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Extraordinary Chambers, in consultation with the key actors, prepare a completion strategy with a clear road map and to report to the General Assembly thereon by no later than at the main part of its sixty-ninth session;

II

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council: thematic cluster II—Panel of Experts on the Central African Republic

Recalling section VI of its resolution 68/247 A and its resolution 68/248 A both of 27 December 2013,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Takes note of paragraph 8 of the report of the Advisory Committee;
4. Welcomes the efforts made by the Secretary-General to improve efficiency under thematic cluster II (sanctions monitoring teams, groups and panels) of the special political missions, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to make efforts to improve the efficiency of the Panel of Experts on the Central African Republic;
5. Approves the budget for the Panel of Experts on the Central African Republic in the amount of 1,476,100 dollars net, as proposed by the Secretary-General in his report;
6. Also approves a charge totalling 1,476,100 dollars net against the provision appropriated for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

III

Progress in the implementation of the organizational resilience management system and of the recommendations from the after-action review of storm Sandy

Recalling section II of its resolution 64/260 of 29 March 2010, section I of its resolution 66/247 of 24 December 2011 and sections II and IV of its resolution 67/254 A of 12 April 2013,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on progress in the implementation of the organizational resilience management system and on progress in the implementation of the recommendations from the after-action review of storm Sandy, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

A. Progress in the implementation of the organizational resilience management system

3. Welcomes the progress achieved so far in the implementation of the organizational resilience management system, and looks forward to receiving information on the next phases of implementation;

4. Underlines the importance of the full implementation of the organizational resilience management system in the offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, field missions of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat and the participating specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system in the next step of its implementation;

5. Emphasizes the importance of the organizational resilience management system in managing operational risks to the United Nations under an all-hazards approach;

6. Recalls paragraphs 19 and 46 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide a detailed accounting of the cost of the organizational resilience management system initiative in the context of future progress reports;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, not later than at its seventieth session, a progress report on the implementation of the organizational resilience management system, including information on the steps taken to expand the system to include offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, field missions of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Political Affairs and the participating specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system;

B. Progress in the implementation of the recommendations from the after-action review of storm Sandy

8. Requests the Secretary-General to complete the implementation of the recommendations emanating from the after-action review of storm Sandy, to finalize the global information technology disaster recovery plan and assessment and to comprehensively address the weaknesses identified in the area of business continuity during the storm and to report thereon in the context of the next progress report;

9. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General with respect to the tracking, monitoring and settlement of insurance claims for work related to the storm that was covered by insurance policies;

10. Encourages the Secretary-General to ensure that the post-storm remediation and mitigation work is completed in a timely manner;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, during the main part of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, a comprehensive briefing to Member States on the status of the remediation and mitigation work undertaken as a result of the damage caused by the storm, including a full accounting of the related expenditures and infrastructure recovered;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to consider all means of risk mitigation, including through the insurance market and/or self-insurance mechanisms, with a view to securing adequate coverage at a reasonable cost for all United Nations installations and premises exposed to natural hazards and emergencies and to report thereon in the next progress report;

IV

Implementation of a flexible workplace at United Nations Headquarters

Recalling section V of its resolution 67/246 of 24 December 2012 and section III of its resolution 67/254 A,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of a flexible workplace at United Nations Headquarters, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Notes that flexible workplace strategies in the United Nations should be aimed at improving the overall productivity and efficiency of the Organization, as well as the staff workplace environment;

4. Encourages the Secretary-General to keep under review the functioning of the interdisciplinary working group on flexible workplace strategies to ensure that all relevant stakeholders, including staff representatives, are appropriately engaged;

5. Takes note of paragraph 5 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly no later than at its sixty-ninth session a report containing a comprehensive business case for the application of flexible workplace strategies at the United Nations;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the comprehensive business case includes linkages to ongoing reform initiatives, such as the Umoja enterprise resource planning project;

V

Strategic capital review

Recalling section III of its resolution 65/259 of 24 December 2010,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the strategic capital review and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Emphasizes the technical nature of the subject matter and the need for a shared understanding and consistent application of terms, moving towards the development of a long-term capital programme and a prioritization strategy for the global premises of the United Nations Secretariat, and requests the Secretary-General to set out precise definitions and to provide additional information on the scope, content and nature of the strategic capital review;

4. Also emphasizes the importance of ensuring the compliance of all United Nations premises with the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and considers that this should be given due weight in the prioritization strategy;

5. Takes note of paragraphs 15 to 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee, decides that the review should include all premises owned and managed by the United Nations that are managed by the Office of Central Support Services of the Department of Management of the Secretariat, and further decides to assess the feasibility of disseminating the best practices learned from this process to all locations owned and/or managed by the Organization that have permanent long-term capital requirements;

6. Recalls paragraph 22 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and further recalls that any potential proposals stemming from the strategic capital review with budgetary implications should follow the procedure set out in the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

VI

Revised estimates, under section 22, Economic and social development in Western Asia, and section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates, under section 22, Economic and social development in Western Asia, and section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015 and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee;
3. Decides to appropriate an additional non-recurrent amount of 5,722,400 dollars, representing a charge against the contingency fund, comprising, under section 22, Economic and social development in Western Asia, 281,800 dollars, section 33, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, 5,440,600 dollars and the amount of 29,000 dollars under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015;

Capital master plan

Recalling its resolutions 54/249 of 23 December 1999, 55/238 of 23 December 2000, 56/234 and 56/236 of 24 December 2001, 56/286 of 27 June 2002, section II of its resolution 57/292 of 20 December 2002, its resolution 59/295 of 22 June 2005, section II of its resolution 60/248 of 23 December 2005, its resolutions 60/256 of 8 May 2006, 60/282 of 30 June 2006, 61/251 of 22 December 2006, 62/87 of 10 December 2007, 63/270 of 7 April 2009, 64/228 of 22 December 2009, 65/269 of 4 April 2011, section III of its resolution 66/258 of 9 April 2012, section V of its resolution 67/246 and section IV of its resolution 68/247 A and its decisions 58/566 of 8 April 2004, 65/543 of 24 December 2010 and 66/555 of 24 December 2011,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the update of the eleventh annual progress report on the implementation of the capital master plan and on updated information on final expenditure for associated costs for the period from 2008 to 2013 and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

A. Update of the eleventh annual progress report

3. Welcomes with appreciation the donations from Member States that are contributing to the capital master plan project;

4. Notes that as at 28 March 2014 an amount of 678,214 dollars in assessments remained unpaid to the capital master plan for 2013 and prior periods, and urges the Member States concerned to arrange for the disbursement of those contributions expeditiously;

5. Stresses the special role of the host country Government with regard to support for United Nations Headquarters in New York;

6. Notes the benefits, including economic ones, accruing to host countries from the presence of the United Nations, and the costs incurred;

7. Recalls paragraphs 7 and 8 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and urges the Secretary-General to make every effort to reduce the delay in the schedule for the completion of the project, to confirm the timing of the closure for the Office of the Capital Master Plan and to report, in the context of the twelfth annual progress report on the implementation of the capital master plan, on the plans for the management and supervision of the work remaining after the closure of the Office, including the accountability mechanisms that will be put in place;

8. Also recalls paragraphs 7 and 12 of section IV of its resolution 68/247 A, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon in the context of the twelfth annual progress report;

9. Reaffirms the scope of the capital master plan project in accordance with paragraph 10 of its resolution 61/251 and as affirmed in subsequent resolutions;

10. Notes that the Secretary-General refers in his report to the funding shortfall as an unfunded portion of the project scope, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to take fully into account the provisions of paragraph 6 of section IV of its resolution 68/247 A in the context of the twelfth annual progress report;

11. Invites the Secretary-General to provide, from within existing resources, adequate office space for the Group of 77 and China in the Secretariat Building, with at least the same square footage as it had before the initiation of the capital master plan project and with due regard paid to its functional needs;

B. Funding of the project

12. Recognizes the need to fund the budget shortfalls, including those related to associated costs, on the basis of project costs provided by the Secretary-General in the twelfth annual progress report and that a decision on the final appropriation will be required at the main part of the sixty-ninth session;

13. Authorizes the Secretary-General, on an exceptional basis, to make use of the Working Capital Fund and the Special Account established by the General Assembly in its resolution 3049 A(XXVII) of 19 December 1972 as a bridging mechanism to address possible cash flow challenges of the project during the time remaining until its completion, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report thereon to the Assembly at the main part of its sixty-ninth session;

14. Decides, in this context, that the bridging mechanism will be replenished at the main part of the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly through the established budget assessment in order to maintain the robust liquidity of the Organization;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to keep Member States informed with regard to the liquidity of the Organization, as appropriate;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to make every effort to find savings to offset the budget shortfall, including through value engineering and other exercises;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to solicit additional voluntary contributions to help finance the budget shortfall;

VIII

Terms of reference for the representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling paragraphs 7 and 8 of section VII of its resolution 68/247 A,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on proposed terms of reference for the representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and the related report of the Advisory Committee,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Decides to establish the post of a full-time representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund at the Assistant Secretary-General level;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure broad dissemination of the vacancy announcement for the post of his representative for the investment of the assets of the Fund, including by circulating notes verbales to Member States and targeting industry publications and relevant institutions to allow for a competitive pool of candidates, and to report thereon in the context of the report on the investments of the Fund;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the process of the recruitment of his representative for the investment of the assets of the Fund is undertaken in strict adherence to the relevant provisions governing recruitment in the United Nations, subject to the terms of reference annexed to the present resolution;

6. Decides that the terms of reference for the representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the Fund shall be as annexed to the present resolution;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of future reports on the investments of the Fund, to provide information on the performance of his representative in discharging his or her responsibilities.

Annex

Terms of reference of the representative of the Secretary-General (Assistant Secretary-General) for the investment of the assets of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

1. Article 19 (a) of the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund provides that the investment of the assets of the Fund shall be decided upon by the Secretary-General after consultation with an Investments Committee and in the light of observations and suggestions made from time to time by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the investments policy. The General Assembly, in its resolution 35/216 B of 17 December 1980, reaffirmed the fiduciary responsibility of the Secretary-General for the interests of the participants and beneficiaries of the Fund under the Regulations and Rules of the Fund. In addition, on numerous occasions, the Assembly has emphasized that the Secretary-General's decisions concerning the investment of the assets of the Fund should be guided by the key criteria of safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility.

2. In order to assist the Secretary-General in carrying out the fiduciary responsibilities for the investment of the assets of the Fund, the Secretary-General shall appoint a representative for the investment of the assets of the Fund. The representative shall oversee the Investment Management Division of the Fund.

Responsibilities

3. The representative of the Secretary-General, reporting to the Secretary-General and in consultation with the Investments Committee of the Fund and in the light of observations and suggestions made from time to time by the Board on investments policy, will exercise discretionary authority over the investment of the assets of the Fund and will be responsible for the overall investment policy and for oversight and management of the investments of the Fund.

4. The representative of the Secretary-General will lead the investment operations in terms of strategy and policy analysis, asset allocation, portfolio management and investment decision-making; risk management and compliance and monitoring; and back-office accounting, trade settlement, cash management and systems and information technology requirements. The representative, supervising the Director of the Investment Management Division, will ensure that all the operations and functions of the Division are properly coordinated and coherent, are aligned to safeguard fiduciary responsibilities, support the goals of the office and enhance the long-term sustainability of the Fund. He or she will work closely with the Chief Executive Officer of the Fund. The representative is responsible for investment policy, strategic and tactical asset allocation and the appropriate investment strategy in consultation with the Investments Committee and in the light of observations and suggestions made from time to time by the Board on investment policy. He or she will oversee the implementation of investment decisions and ensure that the approved investment policy and asset allocation are followed. He or she will be responsible for carrying out the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under article 19 (b) of the regulations of the Fund, including to ensure that detailed accounts of all investments and other transactions relating to the Fund are maintained and to report to the Board, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the General Assembly on the Fund's investments.

5. Within delegated authority, the representative of the Secretary-General will provide overall oversight and management of the investment of the Fund, involving the following:

(a) Investments. In consultation with the Investments Committee established in accordance with article 20 of the regulations of the Fund, and in the light of observations and suggestions made from time to time by the Board on investment policy, the representative will be responsible for an investment strategy and a coherent framework of investment operations aimed at meeting and exceeding the long-term real rate of return goal. In consultation with the Investments Committee, he or she will define the Investment Management Division's globally diversified portfolio and the strategic and tactical asset allocation of the Fund; define the main investment strategies for diversified portfolios to generate investment returns corresponding to the long-term real rate of return issued in the Fund's actuarial assumptions to meet its long-term obligations of maintaining the solvency of the Fund; ensure adherence to the investment criteria established by the General Assembly (i.e., safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility) and to the objectives of preserving the principal of the Fund and of obtaining optimal investment return without undue risk; ensure consistency between investments and overall established risk tolerance; ensure the implementation of the established investment strategy and asset allocation; and conduct general monitoring and management of the investments and portfolio management;

(b) Risk and compliance. The representative will ensure the establishment and maintenance of appropriate internal controls and risk management systems;

(c) Operations. The representative will ensure the alignment of the operations and information systems technology with the Fund's investment strategy and policy;

(d) Accounting. The representative will be responsible for carrying out the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under article 19 (b) of the regulations of the Fund to maintain detailed accounts of all investments and other transactions relating to the Fund and ensure the integrity and reliability of investment data reflected in the financial statements of the Fund, as well as to implement risk management and adequate financial controls on investments;

(e) Intergovernmental bodies. The representative will liaise with the Board, the Advisory Committee and the General Assembly on the performance of the Fund's investments, providing answers and explanations to questions on performance, structure of the portfolio, investment policies and strategies, custodial arrangements, global economic and market conditions, investment forecast/outlook and requirements for the financing of operations; present proposals on the financing and servicing of the Investment Management Division; and liaise and work closely with the Board and its committees;

(f) Oversight bodies. The representative will liaise and consult with the Fund's oversight bodies (the United Nations Board of Auditors, the Audit Committee of the Fund and the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat) and ensure the implementation of the accepted recommendations of such oversight bodies as appropriate.

6. The representative of the Secretary-General must also work closely and effectively with the Chief Executive Officer of the Fund with regard to the performance of their respective functions. The representative must collaborate closely with the Chief Executive Officer to ensure optimum results with respect to the Fund's asset/liability management.

Competencies

7. The competencies are as follows:

(a) Professionalism. Demonstrated competence in and adherence to the standards of conduct of the profession and in the application of best practices; strong conceptual and analytical skills; proven conscientiousness and efficiency in meeting commitments, observing deadlines and achieving results; ability to direct, review and guide the work of others, particularly in terms of substantive soundness;

(b) Vision. Demonstrated ability to identify strategic issues, opportunities and risks and to generate and communicate broad and compelling organizational direction and objectives to all stakeholders;

(c) Leadership. Proven track record of excellent management and technical leadership skills; proven ability to develop clear goals that are consistent with agreed strategies and to establish good relationships and build team spirit with a broad range of people; demonstrated competence for incorporating gender perspectives and ensuring the equal participation of women and men in all areas of work; demonstrated knowledge of strategies and commitment to the goal of gender balance in staffing;

(d) Planning and organizing. Demonstrated excellence in successful planning with strong managerial skills; proven ability to plan and establish priorities and to ensure effective work structure to maximize productivity and achieve goals;

(e) Judgement/decision-making. Mature judgement and initiative, imagination and resourcefulness, energy and tact; demonstrated ability to provide strategic direction; proven ability to identify key issues in complex situations and to take adequate decisions while being aware of their impact on others and on the Organization;

(f) Communication. Excellent oral and written communication and negotiation skills with proven ability to defend and explain difficult issues with respect to key decisions and positions to intergovernmental bodies, senior officials and staff; proven ability to communicate complex concepts orally; ability to prepare written reports that are clear, concise and meaningful;

(g) Teamwork. Good interpersonal skills; demonstrated ability to work in a multicultural, multi-ethnic environment and to maintain effective working relations; ability to lead and gain the assistance of others in a team endeavour.

Qualifications

8. The qualifications are as follows:

(a) Education. Advanced university degree (master's degree or equivalent) in business management, economics, finance, banking and portfolio investment management or related fields;

(b) Work experience. Over 20 years of proven progressively responsible experience in the management of economic, social security and/or financial policies and activities for governmental or intergovernmental organizations or for substantial private concerns, including a proven track record of extensive relevant experience in the management of the investment of complex portfolios of assets of various classes, such as pension funds, including their risk management, and in financial markets. Demonstrated direct knowledge of and experience in managing financial, economic and investment policies, including:

(i) Defining and overseeing investment policy for substantial and diversified investment portfolios having long-term return objectives, including policies for investment objectives, risk appetite and tolerance, the risk framework, the investment milieu, restrictions on investments and social responsibility considerations;

(ii) Developing strategic asset allocation for portfolios aiming for long-term rates of return, particularly for defined-benefit pension or other similar long-term social security and similar benefit schemes where long-term asset/liability management considerations are paramount;

- (iii) Developing, implementing and monitoring investment strategies and overseeing research on economic and other trends affecting financial markets;
- (iv) Managing interdisciplinary and internationally diverse teams of financial professionals;
- (v) Reporting to and coordinating with governing organs (e.g., legislative bodies, boards and committees) on investment, financial and/or technical matters;
- (c) Appointments and terms of service:
 - (i) The representative of the Secretary-General shall be appointed for a term of up to 5 years, with the possibility of reappointment(s) up to a total maximum service of 10 years;
 - (ii) The representative may be removed by the Secretary-General, in accordance with existing procedures, for unsatisfactory performance in discharging his or her responsibilities;

(d) Languages. English and French are the working languages of the United Nations Secretariat. For the post, fluency in oral and written English is required. Knowledge of other official languages is desirable.

Programme budget outline for 2016–2017

Report of Secretary-General. In October [A/69/416], the Secretary-General presented the proposed programme budget outline for the 2016–2017 biennium, including a preliminary estimate of $5,698.5 million. The amount was subject to revision based on supplementary information to be provided to the General Assembly during its sixty-ninth (2014) session. The Secretary-General recommended that the level of the contingency fund for the 2016–2017 biennium be maintained at 0.75 per cent of the overall budget.

In establishing the preliminary estimate of resources for the 2016–2017 biennium, the approved level of resources appropriated by the Assembly in resolutions 68/247 B (see p. 1639), 68/248 A–C [YUN 2013, p. 1446], 68/268 (see p. 756) and 68/279 (see p. 1116) amounting to $5,538.6 million was taken as the starting point.

ACABQ report. With regard to the preliminary estimate of $5,698.5 million for the 2016–2017 budget outline, ACABQ, in November [A/69/556], noted that the amount included initiatives that were under consideration by the General Assembly and could further affect the level of the 2016–2017 proposed programme budget. The Committee was of the view that the latest approved level of resources for the current mandates should be used as the basis for determining preliminary estimates in the budget outline, including for special political missions. In that regard, the Committee recalled that the preliminary estimate of $5,645.2 million for the 2016–2017 programme budget did not include provisions for the implementation of those requirements under consideration by the Assembly. Subject to approval by the Assembly, those requirements would be reflected in the proposed programme budget for the 2016–2017 biennium. The Committee recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal that the level of the contingency fund be maintained at 0.75 per cent of the overall budget level for the 2016–2017 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/702], adopted resolution 69/264 without vote [agenda item 131].

Proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2016–2017

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit, in off-budget years, an outline of the proposed programme budget for the following biennium,

Reaffirming also section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

Reaffirming further rule 153 of its rules of procedure,

Recalling its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003,

Recalling also section XII of its resolution 69/262 of 29 December 2014,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2016–2017 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the recommendations contained therein,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Reaffirms that the budget outline should provide a greater level of predictability of resources required for the following biennium and promote greater involvement of Member States in the budgetary process, thereby facilitating the broadest possible agreement on the programme budget;
4. Also reaffirms that the proposed programme budget outline shall contain an indication of the following:
 - (a) A preliminary estimate of resources needed to accommodate the proposed programme of activities during the biennium;
 - (b) Priorities, reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature;
 - (c) Real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budget;
 - (d) Size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources;
5. Stresses that the budget outline is a preliminary estimate of resources;
6. Decides that the preliminary estimate of resources for the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 should therefore include a provision for special political missions, in the amount of 1,130,400,000 United States dollars, which should be reflected in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017, and that additional requirements shall continue to be treated in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 41/213;

7. Invites the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 on the basis of a preliminary estimate of 5,558,395,600 dollars at revised 2014–2015 rates;

8. Decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 shall contain provisions for re-costing on the basis of the existing methodology;

9. Also decides that the priorities for the biennium 2016–2017 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to reflect the priorities outlined in paragraph 9 above when presenting the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017;

11. Reaffirms that the budget proposals of the Secretary-General should reflect resource levels commensurate with mandates for their full, efficient and effective implementation;

12. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to propose, in future budget submissions, measures to offset budget increases, wherever possible, in particular through more efficient back-office activities, services, functions and structures, without undermining the implementation of mandated programme activities;

13. Decides that the contingency fund shall be set at the level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate, namely, at 41,687,967 dollars, that this amount shall be in addition to the overall level of the preliminary estimate and that it shall be used in accordance with the procedures for the use and operation of the contingency fund.

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's report [A/69/520/Add.1 & Corr.1] on improving the financial situation of the United Nations, unpaid assessments at the end of 2014 were lower than in 2013 in all categories, except the UN regular budget, which totalled $535 million (compared to $461 in 2013); outstanding peacekeeping arrears were $1.3 billion (compared to 2.2 billion in 2013); and total unpaid assessments for the international tribunals decreased to $40 million (compared to $54 million in 2013).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full decreased slightly to 144 (compared to 146 in 2013).

Assessments

The Committee on Contributions, at its seventy-fourth session (New York, 2–20 June) [A/69/11 & Add.1], considered the review of the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments, multi-year payment plans, the application of Article 19 of the UN Charter and other matters. Annexes to the session report included, the outline of the methodology used for preparing the scale of assessments for the 2013–2015 period; a summary of the main changes between the 1968 System of National Accounts (SNA), the 1993 SNA and the 2008 SNA having an impact on the level of gross domestic product; and the systematic criteria to identify Member States for which market exchange rates may be reviewed for possible replacement.

The General Assembly took action on the Committee's recommendations in October (see p. 1646).

Application of Article 19

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/69/11] reviewed requests for exemptions under Article 19 of the UN Charter, whereby a Member State would lose its vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years.

The Committee considered requests for exemption from five Member States: Central African Republic, Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Sao Tome and Principe, and Somalia. Recognizing the continued difficult situation of those States and efforts in some cases to make some payments, the Committee recommended that they be allowed to vote until the end of the Assembly's sixty-ninth session. At the conclusion of the Committee's session on 20 June, only one Member, Yemen, was in arrears in the payment of its assessed contributions under Article 19 and had no vote. The Committee encouraged the Member States concerned to address the growth in arrears by making annual payments exceeding current assessments in order to avoid further accumulation of debt, as well as the submission of a multi-year payment plan and to consult with the Secretariat as required.

In September [A/69/11/Add.1], the Committee reported that the number of Member States seeking Article 19 exemptions was reduced to four, as the Secretary-General had advised that the Central African Republic had made payment in sufficient amount to reduce its arrears below the limit prescribed by Article 19 of the Charter. Yemen had also done so.

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on payments made by certain Member States to reduce the level of their arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 24 January [A/68/716], 18 Member States were below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (2012–2013). By a series of letters from January to August [A/68/716/Add.1–11], that number was reduced to five.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 October [meeting 22], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/428], adopted resolution 69/4 without vote [agenda item 136].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations: requests under Article 19 of the Charter

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter V of the report of the Committee on Contributions on its seventy-fourth session,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly,

1. Reaffirms its role in accordance with the provisions of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the advisory role of the Committee on Contributions in accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Also reaffirms its resolution 54/237 C of 23 December 1999;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to bring to the attention of Member States the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C, including through an early announcement in the Journal of the United Nations and through direct communication;

4. Urges all Member States requesting exemption under Article 19 of the Charter to submit as much information as possible in support of their requests and to consider submitting such information in advance of the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C so as to enable the collation of any additional detailed information that may be necessary;

5. Agrees that the failure of the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Sao Tome and Principe and Somalia to pay the full minimum amount necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 of the Charter was due to conditions beyond their control;

6. Decides that the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Sao Tome and Principe and Somalia shall be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until the end of its sixty-ninth session.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Multi-year payment plans

In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 57/4 B [YUN 2002, p. 1385] and 67/238 [YUN 2012, p. 1450], the Secretary-General, in March [A/69/70], reported on multi-year payment plans, under which, each year a Member State would pay for the current year's assessment and a part of its arrears, so as to eliminate the arrears within six years. The report provided information on the status of implementation of the plan submitted by Sao Tome and Principe as at 31 December 2013. The plan, which had a duration of eight years (2002–2009) would involve payments of $694,411, if fully implemented. Payments by Sao Tome and Principe, however, had fallen below the level foreseen for that period in its schedule of payments, with only $34,254 in payments and credits being applied for those years. During the period from 2010 to 2013, credits amounting to $3,536 were applied. The outstanding assessed contributions at 31 December 2013 amounted to $900,062.

The Committee on Contributions, at its June session [A/69/11], welcomed the payment made by Sao Tome and Principe in May 2014 and encouraged the country to review the plan and revise its terms, when possible. The Committee noted that no new multi-year payment plans had been submitted. It recalled the past experience of the successful implementation of plans by several Member States and recommended that the Assembly encourage those Member States in arrears under Article 19 of the Charter to consider submitting multi-year payment plans.

Other matters related to payment of assessed contributions

Collection of contributions

The Committee on Contribution [A/69/11] noted that, at the conclusion of its session on 20 June, only one Member State, Yemen, was in arrears in the payment of its assessed contributions to the United Nations under the terms of Article 19 of the Charter and had no vote in the General Assembly. In addition, five Member States (Central African Republic, Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia) were in arrears in the payment of their assessed contributions under the terms of Article 19, but had been permitted to vote in the Assembly until the end of the sixty-eighth session, pursuant to Assembly resolution 68/5 [YUN 2013, p. 1463]. The Committee decided to authorize its Chair to issue an addendum to the report, if necessary. That addendum [A/69/11/Add.1] was issued in September.

The Committee noted that, as at 31 May, $2.6 billion was owed to the Organization for the regular budget, peacekeeping operations, the international tribunals and the capital master plan, reflecting a slight increase compared with the amounts of $2.4 billion and $2.5 billion outstanding as at 31 May 2013 and 2012, respectively.

Payment in currencies other than the United States dollar

Under the provisions of paragraph 16 (a) of its resolution 67/238 [YUN 2012, 1450], the General Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to accept, at his discretion and after consultation with the Chair of the Committee on Contributions, a portion of the contributions of Member States for the calendar years 2013, 2014 and 2015 in currencies other than the United States dollar. The Committee on Contributions noted that, in 2013, the Secretary-General had accepted the equivalent of $3,556,449.61 from Cyprus, Ethiopia, Morocco and the Sudan in non-United States dollar currencies acceptable to the Organization.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed sixty-eighth (2014) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2012 to 30 June 2013 [A/68/5 (Vol. II)] and the related ACABQ report [A/68/843], together with the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors for the financial period ended 30 June 2013 [A/68/751]. The Assembly, in June, accepted the financial reports and audited financial statements of UN peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2012 to 30 June 2013, and requested the Secretary-General to provide, in his next report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations on UN peacekeeping operations, a full explanation for the delays in implementing all outstanding recommendations, the root causes of the recurring issues and the measures to be taken.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 June [meeting 99], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/68/610/Add.1], adopted resolution 68/19 B without vote [agenda item 131].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

B

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 67/235 B of 28 June 2013 and 68/19 A of 4 December 2013,

Having considered the financial report and audited financial statements for the 12-month period from 1 July 2012 to 30 June 2013 and the report of the Board of Auditors on United Nations peacekeeping operations, the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2013 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial report and audited financial statements of the United Nations peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2012 to 30 June 2013;

2. Takes note of the observations and endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Board of Auditors;

3. Also takes note of the observations and endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

4. Recalls paragraph 11 of the report of the Board of Auditors and paragraph 36 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to consider the question of the authority to move staff within the area of an individual mission during the second part of its resumed sixty-ninth session, while maintaining existing arrangements in the interim;

5. Commends the Board of Auditors for the quality of its report and the streamlined format thereof;

6. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2013;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee in a prompt and timely manner;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to improve asset management across peacekeeping missions, including by holding mission management accountable for checking stock levels before undertaking any acquisition activity in order to ensure compliance with established asset management policies, taking into account the importance of the full implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;

9. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to indicate an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the priorities for their implementation, including the office holders to be held accountable and measures taken in that regard;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, in his next report on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations, a full explanation for the delays in the implementation of all outstanding recommendations of the Board, the root causes of the recurring issues and the measures to be taken.

Board of Auditors reports. The Chairman of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the Secretary-General the financial reports and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 2013 on the United Nations [A/69/5 (Vol. I) & Corr.1], and on the following entities: the International Trade Centre [A/69/5 (Vol. III)]; the United Nations University [A/69/5 (Vol. IV)]; the Capital master plan [A/69/5 (Vol. V)]; the United Nations Development Programme [A/69/5/Add.1 & Corr.1]; the United Nations Capital Development Fund [A/69/5/Add.2]; the United Nations Children's Fund [A/69/5/Add.3]; the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East [A/69/5/Add.4]; the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [A/69/5/Add.5]; the Voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [A/69/5/Add.6]; the Fund for the United Nations Environment Programme [A/69/5/Add.7]; the United Nations Population Fund [A/69/5/Add.8]; the United Nations Human Settlement Programme [A/69/5/Add.9 & Corr.1]; the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime [A/69/5/Add.10]; the United Nations Office for Project Services [A/69/5/Add.11 & Corr.1]; the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women [A/69/5/Add.12]; the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 [A/69/5/Add.13]; the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 [A/69/5/Add.14]; and the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals [A/69/5/Add.15].

In a July 2014 note [A/69/178 & Corr.1-7], the Secretary-General presented a concise summary of the principal findings and conclusions contained in those reports, and in August [A/69/353 & Add.1] he reported on the implementation of the Board's recommendations contained in its reports for the biennium ended 31 December 2013, as well as on the capital master plan for 2013.

Commenting on the financial reports and audited financial statements and reports of the Board, ACABQ, in October 2014 [A/69/386], noted that all entities had received unmodified audit opinions from the Board. The Advisory Committee noted that there were no explicit guidelines concerning appropriate standards for the level of reserves across UN entities, and recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to invite the heads of UN entities to develop appropriate guidance with regard to reserves, clearly specifying the minimum and maximum levels, taking into consideration the distinct funding models and operational requirements for different UN entities.

JIU report. In a September note [A/69/378], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) entitled "Review of the management of implementing partners in United Nations system organizations". According to the report, partnerships with public and non-public entities had become essential for most UN system organizations in pursuing their mandates, many of which assigned implementation of programme activities to those implementing partners (IPs), and allocated resources to enable programme delivery. Overall, the volume of UN resources entrusted to IPs was significant, with some organizations expending over half their annual budgets via IPs. In transferring funds to third parties, UN system organizations were expected to establish governance structures and other measures of accountability to ensure that funds were used efficiently, for intended purposes, and with minimum risk of fraud, corruption and mismanagement. Against that standard, the UN internal and external auditors had repeatedly raised concerns over IPs performance and oversight. Member States, reflecting those concerns, were demanding greater accountability on resources allocated to IPs. JIU reviewed the methods used by those organizations to select and manage IPs and attempts to find common elements and challenges, and identified good practices. The report also included observations and suggestions addressed to executive management.

JIU found that a number of UN system organizations lacked a strategic approach to partnering and had ad hoc and incoherent efforts in engaging IPs. There were, however, on-going efforts in some organizations to improve or develop institutional frameworks (policies, procedures and guidelines) for managing IPs. JIU made 12 formal recommendations (two to the legislative organs, and ten to executive heads of organizations). Among them, JIU recommended that executive heads of UN system organizations should ensure that their respective partnership arrangements involving the transfer of UN resources to third parties, notably IPs, were clearly defined as being distinct from other types of partnerships not receiving UN funding, as well as from commercial contracts, in order to make sure that appropriate rules and regulations applied in the different cases; ensure also that key information on IPs, such as expenditures by purpose, modality, and evaluation of their performance were readily available in their organizations and reported regularly to legislative bodies; establish rigorous IP assessment and selection processes to establish their capacity and potential weaknesses and risks and ensure their capability to fulfil programme delivery requirements; establish risk-based monitoring frameworks; and institute training in fraud awareness and prevention, with emphasis on fraud related to third parties, for staff engaged with IPs.

The Secretary-General, in a September note [A/69/378/Add.1], transmitted to the Assembly his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination on the JIU report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/688], adopted resolution 69/249 A without vote [agenda item 130].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/212 B of 31 March 1998 and its decision 57/573 of 20 December 2002,

Recalling also its resolutions 68/19 A of 4 December 2013 and 68/19 B of 30 June 2014,

Having considered, for the period ended 31 December 2013, the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors on the United Nations, the International Trade Centre, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Capital Development Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the concise summary of the principal findings and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors for the biennium 2012–2013 and annual financial periods 2012 and 2013, the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its reports on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 and on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2013 and on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board contained in its reports on the United Nations funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2013 and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having also considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Review of the management of implementing partners in United Nations system organizations" and his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors for the above-mentioned organizations;

2. Approves the recommendations and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors;

3. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Reaffirms that the Board of Auditors shall be completely independent and solely responsible for the conduct of audits;

5. Affirms that nothing in the present resolution presents a change to the intergovernmental budgetary process of the Organization;

6. Requests the Secretary-General not to implement the recommendations contained in paragraphs 85 and 89, in chapter II.F, of volume I of the report of the Board of Auditors;

7. Decides to consider further the reports of the Board of Auditors on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals under the respective agenda items relating to the Tribunals and the Mechanism;

8. Commends the Board of Auditors for the continued high quality of its reports and the streamlined format thereof;

9. Reaffirms its resolution 62/224 of 22 December 2007;

10. Also reaffirms the role of the Committee for Programme and Coordination as the main subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for planning, programming and coordination;

11. Further reaffirms the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

12. Reaffirms the established budgetary procedures and methodologies, based on resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987;

13. Requests the Advisory Committee to request the Board of Auditors to continue to report on the cross-entity issues in its future reports;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to invite the executive heads of the participating organizations to report on the ratios of programme delivery and overhead costs to help to drive cost-effective delivery of mandates;

15. Notes with concern general deficiencies identified by the Board of Auditors in control and fraud prevention, which are particularly necessary given the high-risk environments in which the United Nations operates, and requests the Secretary-General to take measures to address those deficiencies, such as through the issuance of standard operating procedures for addressing fraud prevention;

16. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its reports on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 and on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2013 and on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board contained in its reports on the United Nations funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2013;

17. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to ensure full implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee in a prompt and timely manner, to continue to hold programme managers accountable for the non-implementation of recommendations and to effectively address the root causes of the problems highlighted by the Board;

18. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to provide in his reports on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors a full explanation for the delays in the implementation of the recommendations of the Board, in particular those recommendations not yet fully implemented that are two or more years old;

19. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to indicate in future reports an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, as well as the priorities for their implementation and the office holders to be held accountable;

20. Welcomes the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Review of the management of implementing partners in United Nations system organizations", and requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to invite the executive heads of the participating organizations to consider implementing the recommendations contained in the report.

Also on 29 December (decision 69/553 A), the Assembly decided to defer consideration of the Secretary-General's report on implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its reports on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2013, and on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2013 and the related ACABQ report until its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

On the same date (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the item on the financial reports and audited financial statements of and reports of the Board of Auditors on the United Nations; United Nations peacekeeping operations; the International Trade Centre; the capital master plan; the United Nations Development Programme; the United Nations Capital Development Fund; the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East; the United Nations Institute for Training and Research; the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; the fund of the United Nations Environment Programme; the United Nations Population Fund; the United Nations Human Settlements Programme; the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime; the United Nations Office for Project Services; the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women; the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994; the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991; and the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Financial management practices

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

In August [A/69/367], the Secretary-General transmitted the seventh progress report on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS), which were approved by General Assembly resolution 60/238 [YUN 2006, p. 1580]. The report reviewed the progress of IPSAS implementation at the United Nations and throughout the UN system from 1 September 2013 to 31 August 2014. The Secretary-General noted that during the period 2008–2012, of 24 UN organizations, 21 had successfully migrated to IPSAS and produced IPSAS-compliant financial statements for 2013, attesting to the capability of UN system organizations to sustain compliance with the standards. Implementation was on schedule for the remaining three organizations which, with an adoption date of 2014, were on schedule to produce their first IPSAS-compliant financial statements.

The achievement of key IPSAS project milestones during the reporting period, in particular for peacekeeping operations, included the finalization of IPSAS opening balances, and their review by the Board of Auditors, as well as the preparation of IPSAS dry run financial statements as at 31 December 2013. For the other operations of the United Nations, opening balances, as at 1 January 2014, were submitted by offices and were vetted and consolidated; and the process of preparing dry run financial statements as at 30 June 2014 was launched. Another significant achievement was the agreement with the Board of Auditors on the definition and treatment of inventories in peacekeeping operations, including the methodology for estimating the value of non-financial inventory that would be presented in the IPSAS-compliant financial statements. The Assembly was requested to take note of the report, including the status of the IPSAS benefits realization plan and the proposed framework for IPSAS sustainability.

Board of Auditors report. By a July note [A/69/155], the Secretary-General transmitted the fourth and final progress report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of IPSAS as at 30 June 2014. The report presented findings on the extent to which entities were realizing benefits from the adoption of IPSAS, the state of progress in its implementation in the United Nations and its peacekeeping operations and progress in the remaining entities going live in 2014. The Board also followed up on progress in implementing its previous recommendations. According to the report, there was tangible progress on benefits realization within UN entities that had already implemented IPSAS, with evidence of the new information under IPSAS being used as an enabler for improved financial reporting to management and for improved financial management capability and processes. That was laying the foundations for greater transparency in relation to the costs of operations and supporting improved decision-making at all levels of management. Nonetheless, the real test would be whether the entities could translate the new information into measurable improvements in operations and the cost-effective delivery of mandates—that was where more progress was needed and where the Board would focus in its future audits at the entity level. By the end of 2014 all UN system entities, including the United Nations and its funds and programmes, would have implemented IPSAS. The level of progress reflected the commitment and energy of the entities concerned and represented a major step towards the modernization of the UN system. All entities that went live in 2012 received a second unqualified audit opinion, and the remaining entities that would go live in 2014 had made significant progress. Given the complexities of a highly federated organization and the challenges of a parallel roll-out of a new global enterprise resource planning system, the implementation of IPSAS in the United Nations and its peacekeeping operations was inherently risky. Nevertheless, the Board was confident that it saw strong managerial resolve to secure first-time IPSAS-compliant financial statements.

The Board recommended that entities take stock of their investments in improved financial management capacity and capability and consider whether there was need for a more structured and formalized approach; and consider how the new information from the accounting framework could be used to drive improved longer-term and more strategic planning in important business functions. The Board also recommended that the Secretary-General should encourage the development of plans to transform the role of finance functions as leaders in driving forward the quality of financial management across the UN system. The Board further recommended that for peacekeeping operations, the Administration should prepare dry run financial statements for the first six months to 31 December 2013, as far in advance as possible of the full audit of the first set of IPSAS statements in the third quarter of 2014, and for the United Nations, Volume I opening balances by 1 September 2014. It should also complete the consolidation of all information for plant and equipment in relation to offices away from Headquarters, and verify that items were consistently capitalized and records were complete and accurate, and confirm that the reporting capability in Umoja, the UN resource enterprise system, could support the accurate allocation of cash and investments among cash pool participants.

In terms of mitigating the risk of using multiple legacy systems, the Administration should assure the completeness and reliability of accounting data for the United Nations and its peacekeeping operations financial statements, by 1 September 2014: document the consolidation process, showing the data flows between the different systems and the IPSAS Integrated Management Information System (IMIS) ledgers, and document and test the internal controls to check the accuracy and completeness of the data transferred between systems and posted to the IPSAS IMIS ledger. For the remaining entities going live in 2014, the Board's recommendations were set out in the report for each entity.

ACABQ report. In its October report [A/69/414], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to continue to report on the status of IPSAS implementation projects in the UN Secretariat and throughout the UN system.

In resolution 69/262 (see p. 1631), the General Assembly took note of the reports, endorsed the ACABQ conclusions and recommendations, and approved the recommendations of the Board of Auditors. It welcomed the progress made in the development of the benefits realization plan, and in that regard requested the Secretary-General, in the context of future progress reports, to include information related to capturing the quantitative and qualitative benefits across 15 key categories relating to the five key strategic benefits originally envisaged as resulting from the adoption of IPSAS.

Review of UN administrative and financial functioning

In 2014, the General Assembly continued its consideration of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations. To that end, the Secretary-General issued a report on the Independent Audit Advisory Committee (see below).

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the item “Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations” remained for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Administrative and budgetary coordination

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the item “Administrative and budgetary coordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency” remained for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth session.

CEB report. In an August note [A/69/305], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the UN system Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) statistical report on the budgetary and financial situation of UN system organizations, prepared in accordance with Assembly resolution 63/311 [YUN 2009, p. 1368] and decision 67/553 B [YUN 2013, p. 1418] requesting the Secretary-General to create a central repository of information on operational activities for development, and to coordinate the annual compilation and analysis relating to the financial situation of those organizations. The CEB secretariat had worked to enhance the structure and content of the report. In particular, each new release of the survey included more comprehensive data on revenue and expenses relating to extrabudgetary resources from Governments and from non-State donors. The report followed the structure as the previous report, with a transparent presentation of revenue, expenses and approved budgets, in line with the International Public Sector Accounting Standards, as well as a table on total expenses for 2012–2013 by major programme category. Those categories allowed CEB to collect the financial data used by the Department of Economic and Social Affairs in its report on operational activities for development, thereby reducing the reporting burden on organizations.

On 29 December (decision 69/551), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the CEB statistical report on the budgetary and financial situation of UN system organizations, and decided to revert to the issue of the composition of the report.

Independent Audit Advisory Committee

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 67/258 [YUN 2013, p. 1471], the Independent Audit Advisory Committee submitted its seventh annual report [A/69/304] covering the period from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014. The report contained an overview of the Committee's activities, the status of its recommendations, and its plans for 2015. It set out also the Committee's detailed comments, including in response to the Assembly's specific request for comments regarding a planned mandate review of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) and on the pilot project for the public disclosure of internal audit reports.

During the reporting period, the Advisory Committee held four sessions and submitted two reports to the Assembly: its annual report to the Assembly for the period from 1 August 2012–31 July 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1467]; and a report, through ACABQ, on the budget of OIOS under the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2014 to 30 June 2015.

In resolution 69/253 (see p. 1660) of 29 December, the Assembly requested the Advisory Committee to continue to keep under review the practice of the publication of audit and evaluation reports, including those on the relationship of OIOS with management, the reputation of the Organization and the effectiveness of the new report format, and to provide relevant comments and observations in the context of its future reports.

In resolution 69/252 of the same date, the Assembly reaffirmed the terms of reference of the Committee as contained in resolution 61/275 [YUN 2007, p. 1471], and endorsed the observations and recommendations contained in its report.

Programme planning

Strategic framework for 2016–2017

The Secretary-General submitted the proposed strategic framework for 2016–2017 [A/69/6 (Part one & Corr.1)]. The framework comprised two parts: the plan outline reflecting the Organization's long-term objectives and priorities (Part one) and the biennial programme plan (Part two), covering 28 programmes, to be carried out by the respective departments. The framework constituted the principal policy directive of the United Nations and served as the basis for programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation.

The nine programme areas for the 2016–2017 biennium were: promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and UN conferences; maintenance of international peace and security; development of Africa; promotion of human rights; effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts; promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations; and effective functioning of the Organization.

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), at its fifty-fourth session (New York, 2–27 June) [A/69/16], examined the proposed framework and recommended that the General Assembly approve the eight priorities for the 2016–2017 biennium, as set out in paragraph 34 of the plan outline. In view of the differences among Member States on some aspects of the plan outline, the Committee recommended that the Assembly review the plan outline at its sixty-ninth session, under the agenda item entitled "Programme planning".

On 2, 5, 10, 18 and 19 December, the General Assembly took note of the reports on the item "Programme planning" of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/69/450] (decision 69/521); the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/69/464] (decision 69/526); the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/69/508] (decision 69/530); the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/69/492] (decision 69/540); and the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/69/477] (decision 69/549).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/539], adopted resolution 69/17 without vote [agenda item 133].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 55/234 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/282 of 20 December 2002, 58/268 and 58/269 of 23 December 2003, 59/275 of 23 December 2004, 60/257 of 8 May 2006, 61/235 of 22 December 2006, 62/224 of 22 December 2007, 63/247 of 24 December 2008, 64/229 of 22 December 2009, 65/244 of 24 December 2010, 66/8 of 11 November 2011, 67/236 of 24 December 2012 and 68/20 of 4 December 2013,

Recalling also the terms of reference of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, as outlined in the annex to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008(LX) of 14 May 1976,

Recalling further the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, by which the relevant programmes and subprogrammes of the proposed strategic framework shall be reviewed by the relevant sectoral, functional and regional intergovernmental bodies, if possible during the regular cycle of their meetings,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its fifty-fourth session, the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017: part one: plan outline and part two: biennial programme plan and the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2012–2013,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Committee for Programme and Coordination as the main subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for planning, programming and coordination;

2. Re-emphasizes the role of the plenary and the Main Committees of the General Assembly in reviewing and taking action on the appropriate recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination relevant to their work, in accordance with regulation 4.10 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2012–2013, contained in chapter II, section A, of its report on the work of its fifty-fourth session, and on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017, contained in chapter II, section B;

4. Decides that the priorities of the United Nations for the period 2016–2017 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

5. Stresses that setting the priorities of the United Nations is the prerogative of the Member States, as reflected in legislative mandates;

6. Also stresses the need for Member States to participate fully in the budget preparation process, from its early stages and throughout the process;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 on the basis of the above priorities and the strategic framework as adopted in the present resolution;

8. Decides not to take a decision on the content of part one: plan outline of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure, when preparing future plan outlines, that the proposed strategic frameworks take fully into account the guidelines provided by the General Assembly in its resolutions 59/275, 61/235, 62/224, 63/247 and subsequent relevant resolutions;

10. Emphasizes the need for the Secretary-General to strictly adhere to the concepts, terms and mandates approved in the strategic frameworks, while preparing the related programme performance reports;

11. Recognizes the importance of continuing to improve the logical framework, and in this regard encourages programme managers to further improve the qualitative aspects of indicators of achievement in order to enable better evaluation of results, bearing in mind the importance of defining the indicators in a way that ensures their clear measurability;

12. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on evaluation, contained in chapter II, section C, of its report, on the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for 2013, contained in chapter III, section A, and on United Nations system support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development, contained in chapter III, section B, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the timely implementation of the above-mentioned recommendations.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on programming planning remained for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Programme performance

Reporting in March [A/69/144] on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 2012–2013 biennium, the Secretary-General provided a comprehensive overview of the major developments and the work performed by the UN Secretariat during that period. Specifically, it included information on the results achieved by the Organization in terms of expected accomplishments and the achievement of outputs. The key results achieved by the Organization under its 10 programme elements gave Member States a high-level overview of the Secretariat's performance. The analysis of programme performance in regard to 33,696 mandated and additional outputs indicated an increase in implementation rates, from 90 to 91 per cent for mandated outputs and from 90 to 92 per cent for all outputs, compared with the previous biennium. The report also included a detailed recounting of the results obtained by each individual budget section on 876 expected accomplishments implemented under the 36 sections of the programme budget, as well as a brief summary of the main challenges encountered in the implementation of each programme and lessons learned to improve performance.

CPC consideration. Following consideration of the Secretary-General's report, CPC, at its fifty-fourth session (New York, 2–27 June) [A/69/16], stressed the importance of the Secretariat using programme performance reports as a management tool in the strategic framework planning process, in line with the principles of results-based management, including by regularly reviewing programme performance. It recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to continue to provide information on the strains on some programme budgets and their impact on programme implementation. CPC noted the absence of information requested by the Assembly in resolution 67/236 [YUN 2012, p. 1459] on the impact of the reduction in the number of printed documents on the intergovernmental decision-making process in UN conferences and meetings, and therefore recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to pursue full implementation of the decision in future programme performance reports. With a view to improving the presentation of the report, it stated that the Secretary-General should also be requested to include in future reports, under each section of the programme, a comparison with the previous biennium of the rate of implementation of mandated outputs, a comparison with the previous biennium of additional outputs implemented at the initiative of the Secretariat, and information on the main factors affecting the implementation of mandated outputs, when the rate of implementation for the biennium was below 90 per cent.

Programme evaluation

CPC considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the triennial review of the implementation of recommendations made by the Committee at its fifty-first session on the programme evaluation of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) [E/AC.51/2014/2].

Support was expressed for the efforts made by DESA to successfully develop an implementation matrix to organize system-wide efforts to implement conference outcomes; the view was expressed that that initiative could be used as a best practice. CPC was of the view that the overall reduction by DESA in its report titles and printed copies should not adversely affect Member States' access to information or access to reports in those countries with poor Internet access. Further, the paper-smart initiative had been approved only as a pilot and should not be seen as a means to increase the use of technology; there should be assurance, however, that the target audience was being reached. The view was also expressed that the paper-smart concept was a good one since it helped to reduce, among other things, the carbon footprint.

CPC recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to entrust OIOS to include in its future recommendations indicators that make the impact/result of implementing such recommendations measurable.

Administrative and staff matters

In 2014, the United Nations continued to strengthen its organizational and administrative functioning, with a view to better implementing the decisions and mandates of its legislative bodies more efficiently. The General Assembly and its subsidiary bodies, including the Office of Internal Oversight Services, which celebrated its twentieth anniversary, the Independent Audit Advisory Committee and the Joint Inspection Unit, examined issues of managerial reform and external and internal oversight. The Assembly approved the recommendations of those bodies for improving internal controls, accountability mechanisms and organizational efficiency.

Progress was made on the organizational resilience management system (ORMS), a comprehensive emergency management system, linking actors and activities across preparedness, prevention, response and recovery to enhance resilience in order to improve the capacity of the Organization to manage the risks of disruptive events. ORMS policy was endorsed by the Secretary-General, approved by the High-level Committee on Management on 8 October and subsequently by the Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) at its 20 November session. Following implementation of ORMS at Headquarters, the focus of implementation shifted to the offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, field missions of the Departments of Peacekeeping Operations and Political Affairs, and specialized agencies, funds and programmes.

Progress was also achieved in implementing the UN enterprise resource planning system (Umoja). A milestone was reached with Umoja Foundation having been deployed and being fully operational in all peacekeeping operations, special political missions and offices at UN Headquarters involved in the support and oversight of those missions.

With the completion and occupancy of the General Assembly Building in September, the Capital Master Plan (CMP) drew closer to completion. The renovation of the Library Building and the South Annex Building, however, were suspended because of security concerns. The construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa was completed in August. Planning moved forward on the strategic heritage plan project, which aimed to renovate the facilities at the Palais des Nations in Geneva and to construct a new building on the premises.

The International Civil Service Commission considered the conditions of service applicable to Professional and General Service categories of staff, locally recruited staff and staff in the field by, among others, continuing its review of the common system compensation package. The Commission followed up on its 2013 recommendation that the mandatory age of separation for current staff members be raised to age 65, with effect from 1 January 2016.

Reform of human resources management continued as well, encompassing issues such as preparations for the new mobility and career development framework, the assessment of the system of desirable ranges, performance management, the young professionals programme and other matters. The General Assembly approved a refined managed mobility framework and preparations continued for its implementation. Promotion of multilingualism and the use of new communications platforms were the focus of discussion at the Committee on Information.

The number of global staff of the UN Secretariat totalled 41,426 as at 30 June, comprising all categories of staff holding permanent/continuing, fixed-term and temporary contracts, recruited both internationally and locally from 188 Member States. As the global security environment was far from improving and the United Nations conducted and expanded its operations in countries and areas with unprecedented security challenges, including armed conflict and volatile post-conflict environments, UN personnel and premises were targets of attacks. Their safety and security being of increasing concern, the Secretary-General outlined measures to strengthen the UN security management system, in order to enable the Organization to “stay and deliver” critical programmes in high-risk areas while upholding the “duty of care” towards UN personnel.

Despite a general downward trend in the number of allegations, instances of sexual exploitation and abuse by UN personnel persisted, and sustained efforts were made to implement the policy of zero-tolerance and strengthen inter-agency activities to prevent such acts. A risk management framework for sexual exploitation and abuse was developed, along with a draft action plan, for application in field missions.

The UN system of justice served approximately 74,000 staff in the Secretariat and the separately administered funds and programmes. The system offered an informal (Office of the Ombudsman and Mediation Services) and a formal (Management Evaluation Unit, Dispute Tribunal, Appeals Tribunal, Office of Staff Legal Assistance) option to address grievances and solve staff-management disputes.

Reacting to new evidence regarding the death in 1961 of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld and of the members of the party accompanying him, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to appoint an independent panel of experts to examine the new information and assess its value.

The United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund recorded 122,759 active participants at the end of 2014.

Procurement

Report of Secretary-General. In December [A/69/710], the Secretary-General provided an update on United Nations procurement activities since his previous report [YUN 2012, p. 1461]. The report outlined achievements and progress made in major areas of procurement in the Secretariat, also describing initiatives undertaken by the Procurement Division towards increasing transparency and accountability while enhancing the delivery of services to clients globally.

The procurement volume for the Secretariat increased to $3,230,502,384 in 2013, 55 per cent of which coming from developing or transitioning countries and 45 per cent from industrialized countries. Air transportation services, fuel and petroleum products, and food rations were the major commodities. The Procurement Division enhanced the acquisition processes for all three commodity areas in order to ensure best value for money. Air chartering services, with expenditure of more than $670 million, represented 21 per cent of total procurement value.

The Regional Procurement Office in Entebbe, Uganda, which serviced missions in South Sudan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Darfur and Abyei (the Sudan), had established 43 regional system contracts under joint acquisition plans and 134 mission-specific contracts. As at September, the UN Secretariat had registered through the Office 2,051 vendors in 25 African countries.

Review of long-term agreements

JIU report. In April [A/69/73-JIU/REP/2013/1], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) entitled "Review of long-term agreements in procurement in the United Nations system", which covered a variety of issues related to long-term agreements (LTAs).

The review suggested that the use of such agreements was relevant and, to some extent, efficient and effective. The JIU Inspectors collected numerous examples of monetary and non-monetary benefits being realized by different UN organizations. Most prevalent were examples of how LTAs created administrative efficiencies for goods and services required on a regular basis by consolidating recurrent procurements into a single one. In addition, they allowed opportunities for greater volume leverage and best value for money through demand aggregation across each organization and the UN system.

The Inspectors, however, identified several potential risks associated with policies and practices in the use of LTAs. Many organizations lacked LTA-specific policies, adequate procurement planning, strategy development, contract management and monitoring and data collection capabilities. The inability of organizations to strategically establish and manage LTAs, and monitor and assess their outcomes, could reduce their capacity to realize the potential benefits of those contracts. Due to their relatively long duration and demand aggregation, those contracts had a significant monetary value, which entailed higher risks. Therefore, the Inspectors suggested that the use of LTAs be planned and strategized as a whole process, which included managing the procurement process, aggregating demand, conducting market analysis, reaching out to a greater pool of vendors, ensuring competition, assessing and managing risks and effectively managing the contracts. Every LTA should have a contract management plan that clearly defined the contract work breakdown structure, roles and responsibilities of all parties involved, and control and accountability mechanisms. Unless the establishment and use of LTAs were based on proper LTA policies, there was the possibility of missed opportunities, inefficiencies or misuse. Proper planning, strategy development and contract management enabled UN organizations to identify opportunities for collaboration through joint LTAs, piggy-backing and information sharing. Collaboration across the UN system through LTAs served to reduce duplications and increase volume leverage and synergies.

The Inspectors noted that, in the UN system, procurement was generally viewed as a transactional, back-office function instead of a strategic one. Yet, given the importance and amount spent on procurement in the UN system ($14.3 billion in 2011), making procurement more strategic would better assist organizations in achieving their objectives. Procurement should be an integral part of overall corporate planning and strategy development. The procurement function needed to evolve from a transactional and reactive administrative function to a proactive strategic function.

The Inspectors further noted that among multi-organization or system-wide collaboration modalities, joint procurement was the most advantageous. It allowed organizations to aggregate demand system-wide and use greater volume leverage to achieve better prices, terms and conditions. The report identified good examples of joint procurement activities in some locations. In order to increase procurement collaboration in the system, organizations should integrate collaboration-specific provisions into their procurement regulations and harmonize their procurement policies and documents. The Procurement Network of the High-level Committee on Management should play a greater role in harmonization and collaborative procurement.

The Inspectors concluded that procurement, as one of the highest expenditure items, and a strategic tool that contributed to achieving organizational goals, required the close oversight of legislative/governing bodies. To that end, executive heads should periodically report to legislative/governing bodies on procurement function and activities, including procurement planning and strategies.

The JIU report included five recommendations, four of which were addressed to the executive heads of the organizations (see below), while the fifth was addressed to the legislative/governing bodies of the organizations, which should exercise their oversight role to ensure that the procurement function fulfilled its strategic role and that procurement activities, including LTAs, were based on sound procurement plans and strategies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 April [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/68/691/Add.1], adopted resolution 68/263 without vote [agenda item 132].

Procurement

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on United Nations procurement activities, the pilot project on the independent procurement challenge system, the response to the comprehensive report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on United Nations procurement activities, the procurement governance arrangements within the United Nations and sustainable procurement, the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of procurement management in the Secretariat,

Having also considered the reports of the Joint Inspection Unit on offshoring in United Nations system organizations and the environmental profile of the United Nations system organizations, as well as the related notes by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon, Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session.

Note of Secretary-General. In May [A/69/73/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted his comments, as well as those of the United Nations System

Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), on the recommendations provided in the JIU report. He said that UN organizations found the report informative, with many entities generally supportive of its analysis and conclusions. Organizations supported the assessment of JIU that moving procurement to a more strategic function would assist organizations in achieving their objectives. They agreed that the issue of sharing long-term agreements among UN system entities should remain a key focus of UN system procurement harmonization activities, although they noted that the use of LTAs in the UN system was, to some extent, already efficient and effective, with variations in specifications between organizations possibly being the single biggest limiting factor. Common specifications, organizations suggested, would allow for greater volume leveraging and best value for money through demand aggregation across the UN system. Organizations also agreed with the assessment of JIU that the Procurement Network of the High-level Committee on Management should play a greater role in harmonization and collaborative procurement.

Making specific comments on the recommendations of JIU, agencies supported the call in recommendation 1 for the development of policies and guidelines for the strategic use of LTAs. While agencies generally supported the concepts presented in recommendation 2, calling for executive heads to ensure that contract management plans were in place for LTAs, some agencies indicated that not all issues had been fully taken into account in the report. Some of the measures mentioned in the report required resources that might not be available, especially in smaller organizations, and the net benefits-losses between resource expenses (staff or software) and cost savings (through better contract monitoring) might not justify sophisticated contract management.

Many agencies indicated their support for recommendation 3, which called for executive heads to pursue long-term agreement opportunities. In some cases, agencies had implemented policy changes that allowed for the use of LTAs negotiated by other agencies. The General Assembly, however, had not rendered a formal decision on the lead organization concept, and the UN Secretariat was limited in its ability to pursue collaboration apart from making its systems contracts available to other UN organizations.

Agencies concurred with recommendation 4 calling for executive heads to support the efforts of the Procurement Network as it proceeded with the harmonization of procurement documents and other areas. Several agencies, however, expressed concerns regarding the emphasis on the harmonization of general terms and conditions. The experience of some agencies with collaborative procurement indicated that differences in the general terms and conditions did not unduly hamper joint procurement activities, and the resources, time and effort required to obtain harmonized general terms and conditions might be better spent identifying areas of collaboration even in the absence of harmonized documents.

While recommendation 5 was directed at legislative bodies, agencies noted progress in recent years on improving procurement rules, policies and procedures to harmonize practices across UN organizations.

Oversight

Internal oversight

OIOS activities

On 29 July, OIOS marked the twentieth anniversary since its inception through the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362]. Various events and publications during the year celebrated the anniversary.

OIOS report. In August [A/69/308 (Part I)], in conformity with General Assembly resolution 64/263 [YUN 2010, p. 1449] and previous resolutions, OIOS submitted a report on its activities from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014. The oversight of peacekeeping activities was covered in a separate report [A/69/308 (Part II)].

During the reporting period, OIOS issued 326 oversight reports, including 5 reports to the General Assembly and 92 closure reports. The reports included 936 recommendations to improve internal controls, accountability mechanisms and organizational efficiency and effectiveness, of which 45 were classified as critical to the Organization. A number of reports focused on areas of strategic interest to the Organization, including Umoja (see p. 1631) and the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) (see p. 1650). Others represented significant advancements in the investigation of fraud committed against the Organization by external parties.

The financial implications of OIOS recommendations during the period amounted to approximately $13.8 million. The recommendations were aimed at cost savings, recovery of overpayments, efficiency gains and other improvements. The financial implications of recommendations issued in prior periods that were implemented during the reporting period totalled approximately $2.4 million.

An addendum [A/69/308 (Part I/Add.1)] provided an analysis of the status of implementation of the recommendations, a breakdown of recommendations with financial implications and a list of all reports issued for all areas of OIOS work between 1 July 2013 and 30 June 2014.

Independent Audit Advisory Committee report.

Reporting in August [A/69/304] on its activities from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014, the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, as per General Assembly resolution 68/21 [YUN 2013, p. 1473], also dealt with the effectiveness, efficiency and impact of the audit activities and other functions of OIOS. The Committee focused its assessment on three areas: strategic planning, OIOS effectiveness and performance management; OIOS internal management and efficiency; and coordination and collaboration of audit, evaluation and investigations across the UN Secretariat.

The Committee found that OIOS did not have a long-term strategic plan other than the two-year plan. It recommended that OIOS establish a fully integrated long-term strategic plan, which would address goals and strategies that were aligned with key UN risks and the latest transformational initiatives of the Secretariat, including mobility, IPSAS, Umoja and the capital master plan; a focus on challenges, such as procurement fraud, which were apparent in the financial statements of the oversight bodies; and annual goals for each division that were consistent with the strategic plan.

The Committee examined how OIOS measured its effectiveness and performance both overall and within its divisions. OIOS informed the Committee that in 2013 it had established programme impact pathways for each division and for OIOS as a whole, which it intended to make a management tool that would integrate the work of the respective divisions and assist in breaking down the silos that existed in the Office. The Committee viewed the development of the programme impact pathways as positive developments. It recommended that OIOS should establish specific goals, with associated performance measures, for its divisions and for OIOS as a whole; and that would provide OIOS as well as stakeholders with a clear view of where the organization was headed, what results were achieved and what opportunities for improvement existed.

In response to its request to be provided with the results of surveys from its clients, the Committee received surveys from the OIOS Internal Audit Division and the Inspection and Evaluation Division. Noting that no surveys had been done for the Investigations Division or for OIOS as a whole, the Committee noted that well-designed and frequent surveys were useful tools to measure performance and improve effectiveness. It recommended that all divisions and OIOS as a whole conduct surveys; for divisions, not only should surveys be conducted annually, but where practical, after each engagement.

Concerning its operational and budgetary independence, OIOS informed the Committee of some concerns, including the fragmentation of funding sources; internal inconsistency in seeking funding for its activities; inflexibility of resources between internal oversight functions; timing and governance arrangements for a client's budget cycles; and lack of financial independence, especially with respect to extrabudgetary sources. OIOS had developed a list of options for possible improvements in the funding arrange that it felt would address those concerns. The Committee recommended that OIOS formalize those options into a set of proposals, develop business cases for recommended options and submit them to the General Assembly in the context of the long-awaited report on the funding arrangement requested pursuant to resolution 61/275 [YUN 2007, p. 1471].

The Committee remained concerned about the persistently high vacancy rate in the Investigations Division, especially in the field, which in turn called into question the ability of OIOS to fulfil its mandate. It reiterated its recommendation that OIOS address the issue.

With regard to OIOS workplans, the Committee's observations and recommendations were contained in its report on the OIOS budget under the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2014 to 30 June 2015 [A/68/773] (see p. 161) and its report on the proposed OIOS programme budget for the 2014–2015 biennium [YUN 2013, p. 1474].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/689], adopted resolution 69/252 without vote [agenda item 142].

Report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

The General Assembly,

I

Activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 59/272 of 23 December 2004, 60/259 of 8 May 2006, 63/265 of 24 December 2008, 64/232 of 22 December 2009, 64/263 of 29 March 2010, 65/250 of 24 December 2010, 66/236 of 24 December 2011, 67/258 of 12 April 2013 and 68/21 of 4 December 2013,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities for the period from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014,

1. Reaffirms its primary role in the consideration of and action taken on reports submitted to it;
2. Also reaffirms its oversight role and the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;
3. Further reaffirms the independence and the separate and distinct roles of the internal and external oversight mechanisms;
4. Recalls that the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat shall exercise operational independence relating to the performance of its internal oversight functions, under the authority of the Secretary-General, in accordance with the relevant resolutions;
5. Encourages United Nations internal and external oversight bodies to further enhance the level of cooperation with one another, such as through joint work-planning sessions, without prejudice to the independence of each;
6. Takes note of the report of the Office;

7. Reaffirms that the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit shall continue to be provided with copies of all reports produced by the Office, requests that those reports be made available within one month of their finalization, and emphasizes the need for comments by the Board and the Unit, as appropriate;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the full implementation of the accepted recommendations of the Office, including those relating to cost avoidance, recovery of overpayments, efficiency gains and other improvements, in a prompt and timely manner, and to provide detailed justifications in cases in which recommendations of the Office are not accepted;

9. Emphasizes the need for the Office to continue to refine its risk-based workplan in order to ensure that it fully captures high-risk areas such as those relating to procurement activities at the mission level as well as those related to fraud, including by contractors and implementing partners;

10. Recalls paragraph 18 of its resolution 62/247 of 3 April 2008, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at the main part of its seventieth session the report on terms of reference to strengthen the investigations function in the United Nations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the annual reports of the Office continue to include a brief description of any impairment of its independence;

12. Recalls paragraph 14 of its resolution 68/21, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly by no later than the main part of its seventieth session on the proposal set out therein;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions pertaining to the work of the Office are brought to the attention of the relevant managers;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions, including those of a cross-cutting nature, are brought to the attention of relevant managers and that the Office also takes those resolutions into account in the conduct of its activities;

15. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to make every effort to fill the remaining vacant posts, particularly in the Investigations Division and in the field, in accordance with the relevant provisions governing recruitment in the United Nations;

Activities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee

Recalling its resolutions 61/275 of 29 June 2007, 64/263, section II of its resolution 66/236, section II of its resolution 67/258 and section II of its resolution 68/21,

Having considered the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee on its activities for the period from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014,

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;
2. Reaffirms the terms of reference of the Committee, as contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 61/275;
3. Endorses the observations, comments and recommendations contained in paragraphs 16, 22, 26, 30, 31, 34, 40, 46, 48, 54, 57, 59, 62, 66, 70, 73, 75, 76, 88, 94 and 95 of the report of the Committee.

Also on 29 December [meeting 77], also on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/690], the Assembly adopted resolution 69/253 without vote [agenda item 143].

Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244, 59/272 and 64/263

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the relevant Articles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 59/272 of 23 December 2004 and 64/263 of 29 March 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 61/275 of 29 June 2007,

Reaffirming that the purpose of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat is to assist the Secretary-General in fulfilling his internal oversight responsibilities in respect of the resources and staff of the Organization,

1. Reaffirms its resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244, 59/272 and 64/263;

2. Also reaffirms its primary role in the consideration of and action on reports submitted to it;

3. Further reaffirms its oversight role and the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;

4. Reaffirms the independence and the separate and distinct roles of internal and external oversight mechanisms;

5. Recalls that the Office of Internal Oversight Services shall exercise operational independence under the authority of the Secretary-General relating to the performance of its internal oversight functions, in accordance with the relevant resolutions;

6. Reaffirms that the Office of Internal Oversight Services is an internal body under the authority of the Secretary-General, and that, as such, it shall comply with all relevant regulations, rules, policies and procedures of the United Nations;

7. Also reaffirms the role of the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit as external oversight bodies, and in this regard affirms that any external review, audit, inspection, monitoring, evaluation or investigation of the Office of Internal Oversight Services can be undertaken only by such bodies or those mandated to do so by the General Assembly;

8. Further reaffirms the existing mandates of relevant intergovernmental and expert bodies of the General Assembly in the field of administration, budgetary and management matters;

9. Emphasizes that the recruitment and promotion of staff of the Office of Internal Oversight Services shall be carried out in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Staff Regulations and Rules of the Organization, taking into account Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter;

10. Recalls section III of its resolution 67/258 of 12 April 2013, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with publishing audit and evaluation reports on the website of the Office as from 1 January 2015;

11. Requests the Independent Audit Advisory Committee to continue to keep under review the practice of the publication of audit and evaluation reports, including those on the relationship of the Office of Internal Oversight Services with management, the reputation of the Organization and the effectiveness of the new report format, and to provide relevant comments and observations in the context of its future reports, as appropriate;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to take all measures necessary to ensure that the credibility of the Organization and its staff is protected;

13. Notes the role of the Management Committee in monitoring closely the implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies, and stresses the importance of follow-up with programme managers to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations in a prompt and timely manner;

14. Reaffirms that the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services shall be appointed by the Secretary-General, following consultations with Member States, and shall be approved by the General Assembly, and for this purpose the Secretary-General shall appoint the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services with due regard for geographic rotation, and in so doing shall be guided by the provisions of paragraph 3 (e) of Assembly resolution 46/232 of 2 March 1992, whereby the Assembly decided in particular that, as a general rule, no national of a Member State should succeed a national of that State in a senior post and that there should be no monopoly on senior posts by nationals of any State or group of States;

15. Notes that the five-year non-renewable term of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services will expire in July 2015, and in this regard urges the Secretary-General to ensure that timely arrangements are made to find a successor in full conformity with the provisions of paragraph 5 (b) of resolution 48/218 B;

16. Decides to evaluate and review at its seventy-fourth session the functions and reporting procedures of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and any other matter which it deems appropriate, and to that end to include in the provisional agenda of that session an item entitled "Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244, 59/272, 64/263 and 69/253".

On the same date (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the review of the implementation of resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], 59/272 [YUN 2004, p. 1370] and 64/263 [YUN 2010, p. 1449], would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session, as would the item on the report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight.

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

At its resumed sixty-eighth (2014) session, the General Assembly had before it the annual report [A/68/34] of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) for 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1474], including its programme of work for 2014.

Note of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 65/270 [YUN 2011, p. 1409], the Secretary-General, in February, submitted a note [A/68/739] on support provided by CEB member organizations in the preparation and circulation of JIU reports, notes and confidential letters. In 2013, CEB secretariat prepared comments for seven JIU system-wide reports and collected and collated responses from UN system organizations. In addition, CEB continued to work closely with JIU on the preparation of its annual work programme.

CEB maintained a constant dialogue with JIU to ensure a smooth report preparation process and to identify methods for enhancing the value of its reports. During 2013, the Procurement Network of the High-level Committee on Management of CEB provided input into the JIU report on long-term agreements in procurement in the UN system (see p. 1656); the Information and Communication Technology Network supported the preparation of the report on enterprise resource planning systems (see p. 1631); and the Human Resources Network provided input into reports that concerned human resource issues.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 April [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/68/819], adopted resolution 68/266 without vote [agenda item 140].

Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 31/192 of 22 December 1976, 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002, 58/286 of 8 April 2004, 59/267 of 23 December 2004, 60/258 of 8 May 2006, 61/238 of 22 December 2006, 61/260 of 4 April 2007, 62/226 of 22 December 2007, 62/246 of 3 April 2008, 64/262 of 29 March 2010, 65/270 of 4 April 2011, 66/259 of 9 April 2012 and 67/256 of 12 April 2013,

Reaffirming the statute of the Unit and the unique role of the Unit as the only external and independent system-wide inspection, evaluation and investigation body,

Having considered the report of the Unit for 2013 and programme of work for 2014 and the note by the Secretary-General on the report of the Unit for 2013,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2013 and programme of work for 2014;

2. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on the report of the Unit for 2013;

3. Reaffirms that oversight is a shared responsibility of Member States, the organizations and the internal and external oversight bodies;

4. Stresses the importance of the oversight functions of the Unit in identifying concrete managerial, administrative and programming questions within the participating organizations and providing the General Assembly and other legislative organs of participating organizations with practical and action-oriented recommendations to improve and strengthen the governance of the United Nations as a whole;

5. Recognizes the need to continue to enhance the impact of the Unit on the management efficiency and transparency of the participating organizations within the United Nations system;

6. Notes the need to enhance the effectiveness of the Unit and its system-wide oversight capability;

7. Welcomes the reform efforts undertaken by the Unit to better serve the interests of the participating organizations and Member States, including a self-evaluation, a peer review and the completion of norms and standards, in this regard encourages the Unit to continue its efforts, including on selection of the subjects for its programme of work, and looks forward to receiving updates in the context of the annual reports of the Unit;

8. Recalls section II of its resolution 61/238 and section II of its resolution 64/262, and in this regard reaffirms the existing procedure for the appointment of the inspectors in accordance with article 3 of the statute of the Unit;

9. Reiterates its request to the executive heads of the participating organizations to fully comply with the statutory procedures for consideration of the reports of the Unit and, in particular, to submit their comments, including information on what they intend to do regarding the recommendations of the Unit, to distribute reports in time for their consideration by legislative organs and to provide information on the steps to be taken to implement those recommendations accepted by the legislative organs and the executive heads of participating organizations;

10. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the other executive heads of the participating organizations to fully assist the Unit with the timely provision of all information requested by it;

11. Reiterates its request to the Unit to consider optimizing the number of projects in its programme of work through prioritization;

12. Also reiterates its request to the Unit to issue its reports well in advance of meetings of the legislative organs of participating organizations so that the reports can be thoroughly and effectively utilized in their deliberations;

13. Reaffirms article 20 of the statute of the Unit, in which it is stipulated that the Unit shall be invited to be represented at meetings when its budget estimates are being discussed;

14. Requests the heads of participating organizations to make full use of the web-based system of the Unit and to provide an in-depth analysis of how the recommendations of the Unit are being implemented;

15. Welcomes the benefit and utility of the web-based system for tracking recommendations.

JIU activities. In its annual report to the General Assembly [A/69/34], JIU reviewed its activities in 2014, during which it issued six system-wide reports and one note, addressing policies for coherence, management and risk issues in the areas of resource mobilization [A/69/737-JIU/REP/2014/1]; capital refurbishment and construction [JIU/REP/2014/3]; environmental governance within the UN system [A/69/763-JIU/REP/2014/4]; the evaluation function [JIU/REP/2014/6]; the use of non-staff personnel and related contractual modalities [JIU/REP/2014/8]; contract management and administration [JIU/REP/2014/9]; and the use of retirees [JIU/NOTE/2014/1]. Reviews of individual organizations were completed for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights [JIU/REP/2014/7], the World Tourism Organization [JIU/REP/2014/5] and the World Intellectual Property Organization [JIU/REP/2014/2].

During the year, JIU continued its reform process by making improvements in the areas under its purview, including strategic planning and priority-setting; adopting new approaches in the ways it worked; enhancing the professional and technical rigour of its work; and engaging in partnerships and global platforms to share knowledge and perspectives about the UN system and new changes and challenges.

In accordance with Assembly resolution 68/266 (see p. 1661), JIU sought to improve the process of selection of subjects for its programme of work. The consultation process in the identification of topics was expanded to include not only the management of the Unit's participating organizations, but also the oversight and evaluation community, including the United Nations Evaluation Group, representatives of internal audit services of the UN organizations and multilateral financial institutions and the members of the external oversight committees of the participating organizations.

JIU assumed a lead role in establishing the independent system-wide evaluation mechanism requested by Assembly resolution 67/226 [YUN 2012, p. 859] on the quadrennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development.

The lack of budgetary independence and the stagnation in the regular budget had prevented JIU from achieving its full potential, the Chair noted. The budget submission process was not in full conformity with articles 17 and 20 of the JIU statute, which hampered the Unit's independence. The statute required that the original budget proposal of JIU be incorporated into the Secretary-General's overall budget estimates.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the item on the Joint Inspection Unit would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Conference management

Committee on Conferences

The Committee on Conferences held its organizational session on 23 April (reconvened on 20 June) and its substantive session from 2 to 8 September [A/69/32]. At its organizational session, the Committee elected its officers to serve in 2014 and adopted its provisional agenda.

At the same session, the Committee reviewed the proposed strategic framework for the period 2016–2017, programme 1, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management. The Chair, by a letter of 20 May, transmitted the Committee's recommendations to the Chair of the Committee for Programme and Coordination.

On 3 September, the Committee adopted the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2015 [A/AC.172/2014/L.2]. Following approval by the General Assembly in resolution 68/251 [YUN 2013, p. 1478], the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2014 and 2015 was issued in February as a Committee document [A/AC/172/2014/2 & Corr.1].

Also on 3 September, the Committee had before it a letter from 32 Member States addressed to the Chair [A/AC.172/2014/3] urging that the United Nations recognize the holiest day of the Jewish faith, Yom Kippur. On 8 September, the Committee requested the Secretary-General to report to the Fifth Committee on the modalities and criteria for approving additional official UN holidays.

At its substantive session, the Committee also discussed meetings management, including the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities and impact of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach) [YUN 2005, p. 1555] on meetings held at UN Headquarters; integrated global management; matters related to documentation and publications; and matters related to translation and interpretation. The Committee considered those issues based on information contained in a report by the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences [A/69/120 & Corr.1], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 68/251 [YUN 2013, p. 1478] and 32/72 [YUN 1977, p. 1039]. In October [A/69/527], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) commented on the Secretary-General's report and made recommendations.

The Committee approved requests from several bodies for additional meetings and extended meeting hours, as well as a request for a change of venue. It recommended that the General Assembly authorize 11 bodies to meet in New York during the main part of its sixty-ninth session, on the understanding that all such meetings would be allocated conference services on an "as available" basis, in such a way that the work of the Assembly and its Main Committees would not be impeded. Those bodies were listed in a letter of 2 September [A/69/370] from the Chair of the Committee to the President of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, on 16 September (decision 69/501), authorized those subsidiary organs to meet as requested. On 19 September (decision 69/502), the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/69/250], included in the agenda of its sixty-ninth session the item entitled "Pattern of conferences" and allocated it to the Fifth Committee.

Meetings management

In his July report [A/69/120 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General noted that the overall utilization factor for meetings at all four duty stations (New York, Geneva, Vienna, Nairobi) in 2013 was 83 per cent which, although above the established benchmark of 80 per cent, showed a decrease of 2 per cent from 84 per cent in 2012. The percentage of unassigned cancelled meetings in New York had increased to 9 per cent in 2013 from 8 per cent in 2012. Overall, the time lost as a result of late starts and early endings increased to 13 per cent in 2013 compared to 12 per cent in 2012. Globally, the number of cancellations in 2013 reached a historical high, a trend especially prevalent in New York where 225 meetings were cancelled. The number of meetings added at all four duty stations was also at its highest in the past three years.

Since the start of 2014, the Secretariat had addressed the situation by working closely with the calendar bodies to identify and address any issues that might affect their utilization of conference servicing resources. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/251 [YUN 2013, p. 1478], the Secretariat identified the following four core sample bodies, all meeting in New York, as having a utilization factor below 80 per cent for the previous three consecutive years: the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the Committee on Contributions, the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and its Working Group, and the Committee on Information. The 10-year averages of those bodies were also below the 80 per cent benchmark.

In 2013, there were no bodies in the core sample at the Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi duty stations whose utilization factor fell below the 80 per cent benchmark for each of the previous three consecutive years. The UN Conference Centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) in 2013 hosted and serviced 3,644 meetings, representing an occupancy rate of 67.4 per cent. A new marketing strategy had enabled the Conference Centre to gradually improve its monthly occupancy and to secure new conference commitments for 2014 and 2015. There had been an increase in partnerships with the Ethiopian tourism agency, the Ministry of Culture and Tourism, major airlines and key tour operators, which would assist the Conference Centre in becoming a more efficient and effective one-stop service provider.

As to the impact of the implementation of the capital master plan (see p. 1662) on meetings held at UN Headquarters, it was expected that meeting capacity would be temporarily reduced until the reopening of the General Assembly Hall and the conference rooms in the General Assembly Building. To minimize the impact of CMP on meetings management, the Secretariat had made alternative arrangements for programmed meetings and limited the scheduling of additional new meetings.

The Advisory Committee, in an October report on pattern of conferences [A/69/527], noted that the overall utilization rate for the four duty stations was approaching the 80 per cent benchmark; the rate, however, should be monitored closely considering the drop in utilization by 3 percentage points, from 85 per cent in 2011 to 82 per cent in 2013. The Committee reiterated its concern over the rates of utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities. For budgetary purposes, the Committee believed that information concerning the utilization rates showing actual occupancy against existing full capacity for all Secretariat conference facilities should be provided to it in future budget submissions.

Integrated management

As indicated by the Secretary-General [A/69/120 & Corr.1], the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Directors General of the UN Offices at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna had agreed to clearly delineate their responsibilities concerning conference management policies, operations and resource utilization, and accordingly revise the bulletins of the Secretary-General that defined the organization of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Offices.

Work was progressing on the development of single information technology systems. The meetings management system, gMeets, was operational at UN Headquarters and in Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna. The documents planning and processing system, gDoc, was launched in Geneva and New York in May. The computer-assisted translation and text processing system, gText, which included computer-assisted translation, machine translation, referencing and access to the terminology databases, was being prepared for a phased roll-out at all four duty stations. The information warehouse, gData, captured conference management-related budget and finance data from the four duty stations for statistical reporting and performance management. Data on meetings and documentation would be provided through gDoc and gMeets.

The term "proximity role", previously used to describe the practice of using the conference servicing resources of the four duty stations and the regional commissions to assemble in a cost-effective manner a team for servicing meetings held away from the four duty stations, was replaced by the term "integrated global management rule", or "IGM rule". In 2013, the application of the rule was estimated to have led to savings of over $1 million, which generally accrued to the host countries or the substantive departments, rather than to the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM). The four duty stations were moving towards systematic document sharing through joint workload forecasting and capacity planning.

A global e-survey measuring the level of satisfaction with conference services was conducted (15 April–15 May), during which time it was accessed 1,201 times. The overall quality at all four duty stations was rated as “good”.

The Advisory Committee in October [A/69/527] welcomed the successful conclusion of the process of defining the delineation of responsibilities as well as the efficiencies achieved under the IGM rule.

Documentation and publications

As reported by the Secretary-General [A/69/120 & Corr.1], progress was achieved at all four duty stations in the timely submission by authoring entities of documents for processing by the conference services. The overall timely submission rate in New York reached 92 per cent, although only 84 per cent of the submitters met the 90 per cent timely submission benchmark. New York conference services were able to process 98 per cent of documents in a timely manner, namely, taking no more than 28 calendar days to turn around submitted documents on time and within word limits. Of all pre-session documents issued in New York, 71 per cent met the mandated timely issuance benchmarks. At the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG), the timely submission rate reached 87 per cent. Owing to capacity constraints, however, the timely processing rate fell to 50 per cent for Secretariat reports and 22 per cent for non-Secretariat reports. At the United Nations Office at Vienna (UNOV), the timely submission rate reached 98 per cent. At the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON), timely submission in 2013 stood at 22 per cent; although up in comparison to 2012 and 2011, the figure left much room for improvement. The Office ensured 100 per cent timely processing.

The General Assembly, in resolution 68/251 [YUN 2013, p. 1478], acknowledged that a multipronged approach was required to find a solution to the perennial difficulties related to the late issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee. DGACM and the secretariats of the Fifth Committee and ACABQ had intensified their efforts in analysing the situation and seeking solutions. Despite improvements in timeliness achieved in recent years, late submission by authoring entities remained a problem, often compounded by the excessive length of documents and heavy editing needs. Remedial actions, however, were being taken by authors and conference managers by building on those improvements.

In accordance with the principle of simultaneous distribution, all official documents were only distributed when they became available in all of the official languages, both as electronic versions on the Official Documents System and in hard copy.

The Department of Public Information and DGACM were working together to increase online access to historical UN documents. An estimated 17 million paper documents existed in UN repositories, mostly from the pre-digital era before 1993. Around 3 million such documents had been identified as particularly important and in need of digitalization, of which around 300,000 had been digitized. The complementary skills and resources of both Departments had been molded into a single team to address that challenge. The initial estimated output was 6,000 finished documents per month.

The Advisory Committee, in its October report [A/69/527], welcomed the joint effort to digitize UN documents and trusted that the two Departments would report on the resources designated for that exercise, including any voluntary contribution.

Translation and interpretation

The Secretary-General described [A/69/120 & Corr.1] outreach efforts and succession planning covering the six official languages, including support to the pan-African project and the use of language rosters. Agreements with the International Association of Conference Interpreters and the International Association of Conference Translators that came into force in 2012 and 2013 rationalized the recruitment of qualified freelance professionals needed to supplement in-house capacity, by aligning the remuneration of short-term interpreters and translators with that of regular staff. The new mechanisms enhanced the predictability, transparency and ease of administration of temporary staff recruitment at all duty stations, thereby improving the competitiveness of the United Nations. Other measures included reviewing the conditions of recruitment of language staff, offering language staff increased opportunities for enhancing their skills and interacting with language training institutions. The conference services at all four duty stations enhanced their collaboration with such academic institutions. Remote learning tools had been leveraged and good practices continued to be exchanged with leading specialists in the field. In 2013, the language internship programme hosted 107 interns.

All language services made use of temporary assistance through the recruitment of freelance staff, including retirees, to help handle the workload during peak periods. While the recruitment of local freelancers was strongly preferred for economic reasons, DGACM recruited internationally for certain language combinations if adequate local expertise was not available.

To find a long-term solution to high vacancy rates in the language services at UNON, the Department had taken a number of steps, including lateral transfers from other conference-servicing duty stations. The Office also provided on-the-job training to young freelance translators and interpreters and assisted in the training and testing of students.

A broad range of measures to enhance the quality, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of editorial and related Secretariat services was being implemented, including updated and strengthened application standards for all UN documents; enhanced author outreach; enhanced global document management, including standardized editorial guidelines and practices at all duty stations; consolidated terminology production and maintenance through UNTERM; and enhanced dissemination of UN documents to web-based media and mobile devices. The Advisory Committee, in its October report [A/69/527], noted that a projected 114, or 13 per cent, of 887 professional-level language staff across all language groups were forecast to retire between 1 July 2014 and 31 December 2017. The Committee believed that succession planning merited the development of a comprehensive long-term plan, taking into consideration the various factors influencing current and future vacancies. In addition, the outreach programme should be expanded and consideration should be given to approaching universities in all Member States that offered high-quality language programmes in any of the six official languages.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/695], adopted resolution 69/250 without vote [agenda item 135].

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 40/243 of 18 December 1985, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 43/222 A to E of 21 December 1988, 51/211 A to E of 18 December 1996, 52/214 of 22 December 1997, 53/208 A to E of 18 December 1998, 54/248 of 23 December 1999, 55/222 of 23 December 2000, 56/242 of 24 December 2001, 56/254 D of 27 March 2002, 56/262 of 15 February 2002, 56/287 of 27 June 2002, 57/283 A of 20 December 2002, 57/283 B of 15 April 2003, 58/250 of 23 December 2003, 59/265 of 23 December 2004, 60/236 A of 23 December 2005, 60/236 B of 8 May 2006, 61/236 of 22 December 2006, 62/225 of 22 December 2007, 63/248 of 24 December 2008, 63/284 of 30 June 2009, 64/230 of 22 December 2009, 65/245 of 24 December 2010, 66/233 of 24 December 2011, 67/237 of 24 December 2012 and 68/251 of 27 December 2013,

Reaffirming its resolution 42/207 C of 11 December 1987, in which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure the equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2014 and the relevant report of the Secretary-General,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming the provisions relating to conference services in its resolutions on multilingualism, in particular resolution 67/292 of 24 July 2013,

Reaffirming also the role of the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly in administrative and budgetary matters,

Recalling its resolution 14(I) of 13 February 1946 and the role of the Advisory Committee as a subsidiary body of the General Assembly,

I

Calendar of conferences and meetings

1. Welcomes the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2014;

2. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2015, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, taking into account the observations of the Committee and subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2015 that may become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session;

4. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretariat has taken into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 53/208 A, 54/248, 55/222, 56/242, 57/283 B, 58/250, 59/265, 60/236 A, 61/236, 62/225, 63/248, 64/230, 65/245, 66/233, 67/237 and 68/251 concerning Orthodox Good Friday and the official holidays of Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha, and requests all intergovernmental bodies to observe those decisions when planning their meetings;

5. Acknowledges that Yom Kippur is a significant local holiday which is observed in the host city of the Headquarters of the United Nations, invites United Nations bodies at Headquarters and other duty stations where observed to avoid holding meetings on Yom Kippur, and in this regard encourages this arrangement be taken into account when drafting future calendars of conferences and meetings;

6. Acknowledges the significance of the Day of Vesak, which is observed in many Member States, invites United Nations bodies at Headquarters and other duty stations where observed to avoid holding meetings on the Day of Vesak, and in this regard encourages this arrangement be taken into account when drafting future calendars of conferences and meetings;

7. Acknowledges the significance of Diwali, which is observed in many Member States, invites United Nations bodies at Headquarters and other duty stations where observed to avoid holding meetings on Diwali, and in this regard encourages this arrangement be taken into account when drafting future calendars of conferences and meetings;

8. Acknowledges the significance of Gurpurab, which is observed in many Member States, invites United Nations bodies at Headquarters and other duty stations where observed to avoid holding meetings on Gurpurab, and encourages this arrangement be taken into account when drafting future calendars of conferences and meetings;

9. Acknowledges the significance of Orthodox Christmas, which is observed in many Member States, invites United Nations bodies at Headquarters and other duty stations where observed to avoid holding meetings on the day of Orthodox Christmas, and encourages this arrangement be taken into account when drafting future calendars of conferences and meetings;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any modification to the calendar of conferences and meetings is implemented strictly in accordance with the mandate of the Committee on Conferences and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

11. Invites Member States to include in new legislative mandates adequate information on the modalities for the organization of conferences or meetings;

12. Recalls rule 153 of its rules of procedure, and, for resolutions involving expenditure, requests the Secretary-General to include the modalities of conferences, taking into account the trends of similar meetings, with a view to mobilizing conference services and documentation in the most efficient and cost-effective manner possible;

13. Reaffirms the need to address the issue of duplications and redundancies in conference servicing, and notes in this regard that the Economic and Social Council decided in its resolution 2013/13 of 22 July 2013 to consider at a later date the necessity of reviewing its provisional biennial calendar of conferences and meetings in the light of the ongoing intergovernmental consultations on the further strengthening of the Council;

II

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources

14. Reaffirms the practice that, in the use of conference rooms, priority must be given to meetings of Member States;

15. Calls upon the Secretary-General and Member States to adhere to the guidelines and procedures contained in the administrative instruction for the authorization of the use of United Nations premises for meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits;

16. Emphasizes that such meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits must be consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

17. Notes that the overall utilization factor at the four main duty stations in 2013 was 82 per cent, that in 2012 it was 84 per cent and that in 2011 it was 85 per cent, which is above the established benchmark of 80 per cent;

18. Welcomes the steps taken by those bodies that have adjusted their programmes of work in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources, and requests the Committee on Conferences to intensify consultations with the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference-servicing resources;

19. Also welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General to increase the utilization rates of conference-servicing resources, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to enhance the efficiency of conference servicing and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

20. Urges those intergovernmental bodies whose average utilization factor has for the past 10 years been below the benchmark of 80 per cent to take that factor into account when planning their future sessions in order to achieve that benchmark;

21. Recognizes that late starts and unplanned early endings seriously affect the utilization factor of the bodies owing to the amount of time lost, and invites the secretariats and bureaux of bodies to pay adequate attention to avoiding late starts and unplanned early endings;

22. Notes that the percentage of meetings held by the bodies entitled to meet "as required" that were provided with interpretation services in New York in 2013 was 98 per cent, and that in 2012 it was 97 per cent, as compared with 96 per cent in 2011, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to impress upon such bodies the need to continue to improve the utilization of the conference services provided and to report on the provision of conference services to those bodies through the Committee on Conferences;

23. Reiterates its request to intergovernmental bodies to review their meeting entitlements and to plan and adjust their programmes of work on the basis of their actual utilization of conference-servicing resources in order to improve their efficient use of conference services;

24. Recognizes the importance of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the smooth functioning of the sessions of intergovernmental bodies, requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as far as possible, all requests for conference services for the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States are met, and requests the Secretariat to inform the requesters as early as possible about the availability of conference services, including interpretation, as well as about any changes that might occur before the holding of meetings;

25. Notes that the percentage of meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States that were provided with interpretation services at the four main duty stations was 93 per cent in 2013, as compared with 91 per cent in 2012, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to employ innovative means to address the difficulties experienced by Member States owing to the lack of conference services for some meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

26. Once again urges intergovernmental bodies to spare no effort at the planning stage to take into account the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work and to notify conference services, well in advance, of any cancellations so that unutilized conference-servicing resources may, to the extent possible, be reassigned to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States;

27. Welcomes the efforts of all users of conference services to inform the Secretariat as early as possible of any cancellation of service requests so as to allow for such services to be smoothly redeployed to other meetings;

28. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with several resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolution 68/251, section II.A, paragraph 22, in conformity with the headquarters rule, all meetings of Nairobi-based United Nations bodies were held in Nairobi in 2013, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Assembly at its seventieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

29. Notes with concern the recurring underutilization of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa, specifically given the ongoing renovation of its facilities, recognizes the continuing promotional efforts and initiatives of the Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

30. Welcomes the efforts undertaken to improve the conference facilities at the Economic Commission for

Africa, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to ensure that the ongoing work on the improvement of the remaining facilities, in particular Africa Hall, is completed in a timely manner;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore additional means to increase the utilization of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa, including with its partners such as the African Union, and to report thereon, including on the impact of the initiatives of the Commission, to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

32. Also requests the Secretary-General to encourage the heads of entities of the United Nations system to use as a matter of priority, when applicable, the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa to ensure greater utilization of the conference facilities;

33. Recalls section II.A, paragraph 26, of its resolution 68/251, reiterates its request that the Secretary-General formulate a competitive pricing structure and an appropriate marketing strategy for the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

34. Recognizes the proactive efforts of the Secretary-General to identify ways to enhance efficiency and effectiveness in conference services;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to propose, at the seventieth session of the General Assembly, a comprehensive review of conference servicing, highlighting any duplication or redundancy, with a view to identifying innovative ideas, potential synergies and other cost-saving measures, without compromising the quality of the services;

36. Reiterates its request to the Committee on Conferences that it consult those bodies that have consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark of their allocated resources for the past three years, with a view to making appropriate recommendations in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources, and urges the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference-servicing resources to work more closely with the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat and to consider changes to their programmes of work, as appropriate, including adjustments based on previous patterns of recurring agenda items, with a view to making improvements in their utilization factors;

37. Requests the Chair of the Committee on Conferences to address a letter to the presiding officers of intergovernmental bodies based at duty stations other than New York if their utilization factor falls below the benchmark of 80 per cent;

B. Impact of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach), on meetings held at Headquarters during its implementation

38. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the implementation of the capital master plan, including the reassignment of conference-servicing staff to swing spaces, will not compromise the quality of conference services provided to Member States in the six official languages and the equal treatment of the language services, which should be provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to receiving the maximum quality of services;

39. Requests all meeting requesters and organizers to liaise closely with the Department on all matters relating to the scheduling of meetings to allow maximum predictability in coordinating activities at Headquarters during the construction period;

40. Requests the Committee on Conferences to keep the matter under constant review, and requests the Secretary-General to report regularly to the Committee on matters pertaining to the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations during the construction period;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate information technology support for conference services, within the existing resources of the Department, in order to ensure their seamless operation throughout the implementation of the capital master plan;

42. Emphasizes the need to continue to improve all conference facilities, including the videoconferencing infrastructure, in all four main duty stations and in the regional commissions, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to report thereon no later than at the seventieth session of the General Assembly;

43. Notes that, for the duration of the implementation of the capital master plan, a part of the conference-servicing staff and information technology resources of the Department has been temporarily relocated to swing spaces, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate support, within the existing resources of the Department, to ensure continued maintenance of the information technology facilities of the Department, implementation of the global information technology initiative and delivery of high-quality conference services;

44. Requests the Secretary-General to consult Member States on initiatives that affect the utilization of conference services and conference facilities;

45. Welcomes the measures taken to ensure access to and use of conference services and conference facilities for persons with disabilities, including the establishment of the Accessibility Centre, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue further efforts in this regard and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

46. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to address issues related to the accessibility of conference facilities as a matter of priority and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

III

Integrated global management

47. Notes with appreciation the efforts of the Secretary-General in the context of the integrated global management initiative to establish and implement in the four main duty stations common performance indicators and single information technology systems (such as gData, gDoc, gMeets and gText), and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

48. Reiterates with concern its request that the Secretary-General complete the internal reviews concerning accountability mechanisms and the clear delineation of responsibility between the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Directors General of the United Nations Offices at Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna for conference management policies, operations and resource utilization, requests the Secretary-

General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, and in this regard recalls section III, paragraph 15, of its resolution 66/233, section III, paragraph 2, of its resolution 67/237 and section III, paragraph 38, of its resolution 68/251;

49. Notes the initiatives undertaken in the context of integrated global management aimed at streamlining procedures, achieving economies of scale and improving the quality of conference services, and in this regard stresses the importance of ensuring the equal treatment of conference-servicing staff, as well as the principle of equal grade for equal work at the four main duty stations;

50. Also notes that the effects of workload-sharing in the context of global document management remain minimal, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to seek ways to promote workload-sharing among the four main duty stations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

51. Emphasizes that the major goals of the Department are to provide high-quality documents in a timely manner in all official languages, in accordance with established regulations, as well as high-quality conference services to Member States at all duty stations, and to achieve those aims as efficiently and cost-effectively as possible, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

52. Notes that the pool of language professionals at duty stations is uneven in terms of language combinations, and requests the Secretary-General to develop recruitment, subcontracting and outreach policies that take full account of these imbalances and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

53. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving the maximum quality of services, with full respect for the specificities of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

54. Reiterates the need for the Secretary-General to ensure the compatibility of technologies used in all duty stations and to ensure that they are user-friendly in all official languages;

55. Takes note of the progress made in the development and implementation of the conference management software gData, gDoc, gMeets and gText, and requests the Secretary-General to include all relevant information on their operation, maintenance and harmonization with existing systems, as appropriate, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017;

56. Notes the development of an experimental statistical machine translation system (Tapta4UN) to accelerate translation services for some categories of documents, and requests the Secretary-General to report on updates, including cost-benefit analysis and quality preservation and control, about this system to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, through the Committee on Conferences;

57. Reiterates that the satisfaction of Member States is a key performance indicator in conference management and conference services;

58. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that measures taken by the Department to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, as a key performance indicator of the Department, provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and are in full compliance with relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly, through the Committee on Conferences, on progress made in this regard;

59. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore best practices and techniques in client satisfaction evaluations and to report regularly to the General Assembly on the results achieved;

60. Welcomes the efforts made by the Department to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, taking into consideration comments and complaints raised by Member States either in writing or during meetings, and requests the Secretary-General to intensify his exploration of innovative ways to systematically capture and analyse feedback from Member States and Chairs and Secretaries of committees on the quality of conference services and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

61. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to seek evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, including through the language-specific informational meetings held once a year, ahead of the substantive session of the Committee on Conferences, or any necessary meeting scheduled upon the request of Member States, not to exceed two meetings per year, and to ensure that such measures provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and that they are in full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

62. Also requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly and its Committee on Conferences apprised of progress made in achieving integrated global management and to provide accurate and up-to-date information on new initiatives falling under the purview of the Committee;

63. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General provide in his next report on the pattern of conferences information about the financial savings achieved through the implementation of the integrated global management projects, as requested in section III, paragraph 4, of its resolution 63/248, in section III, paragraph 12, of its resolution 64/230, in section III, paragraph 14, of its resolution 65/245, in section III, paragraph 14, of its resolution 66/233, in section III, paragraph 15, of its resolution 67/237 and in section III, paragraph 51, of its resolution 68/251;

64. Notes the Flextime pilot project initiated by the United Nations Office at Vienna, stresses that the rules and regulations of the United Nations governing human resources issues should be applied uniformly during the implementation of the pilot project, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the evaluation of the pilot project, including a recommendation on whether the project should be continued at the United Nations Office at Vienna and further implemented at other duty stations;

65. Welcomes the integrated global management rule as an efficient approach, where feasible, to servicing meetings away from duty stations, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to strengthen his efforts to realize further savings by rigorously applying the integrated global management rule to applicable meetings without jeopardizing the quality of services and to report thereon to the Committee on Conferences at its substantive session in 2015;

IV

Matters related to documentation and publications

66. Emphasizes the paramount importance of the equality of the six official languages of the United Nations;

67. Underlines that all the initiatives on the evolution of the working methods, including those introduced on a trial basis, shall comply with the principle of parity among the official languages of the Organization, with a view to preserving or enhancing the quality and scope of the services provided by the Secretariat;

68. Emphasizes the importance of multilingualism in the activities of the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to ensure full parity among the six official languages in accordance with General Assembly resolution 67/292 on multilingualism and to report thereon to the Assembly at its seventieth session;

69. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management as a new Coordinator for Multilingualism responsible for the overall implementation of multilingualism Secretariat-wide and to instruct the Under-Secretary-General for Public Information to continue to inform the public about the importance of this principle;

70. Reaffirms its decision in section IV of its resolution 64/230 that all reports adopted by the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Human Rights Council shall be issued as documents in all official languages of the United Nations in a timely manner before their consideration by the Council, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 36/117 A of 10 December 1981, 51/211 A to E, 52/214, 53/208 A to E and 59/265, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the support necessary to that effect and to report to the General Assembly thereon at its seventieth session;

71. Recalls section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 55/222, and reiterates with concern its request that the Secretary-General ensure strict respect for the rules concerning the simultaneous distribution of documents in all six official languages as regards both the distribution of printed copies and the posting of parliamentary documentation on the Official Document System and the United Nations website;

72. Stresses that matters related to conference management, including documentation, fall within the purview of the Fifth Committee;

73. Reiterates the importance of the timely issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

74. Acknowledges that a multipronged approach is required to find a solution to the perennial difficulties related to the late issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

75. Notes with concern the perennial difficulties related to the late issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee, and urges the Secretary-General to ensure the timely presentation of these official documents to the Committee and to find a lasting and sustainable solution to the problem so as to guarantee the quality of the intergovernmental process;

76. Takes note of the work done by the interdepartmental task force on documentation chaired by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management in positively addressing the problem of issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

77. Encourages the Chairs of the Fifth Committee and the Advisory Committee to continue to promote cooperation between the two bodies in the sphere of documentation;

78. Welcomes the continued efforts of the task force to shepherd the submission of documents by the author departments of the Secretariat;

79. Notes that accurate, timely and consistent information provided by the Secretariat to the Fifth Committee during its informal consultations facilitates the decision-making process in the Committee;

80. Notes with deep concern that the increased number of cases of the late submission of documents by author departments for translation into all official languages has resulted in serious difficulties for Member States in participating in the discussion and in taking decisions in a timely manner;

81. Emphasizes the importance of enhancing accountability within the Secretariat for the timely production and delivery of documents by ensuring that managers are fully informed of their responsibilities;

82. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the senior managers' compacts a new standard managerial indicator related to the timely issuance of official documentation to intergovernmental bodies and General Assembly committees and to report thereon in the context of the next progress report on accountability;

83. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in each section of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2016–2017 and all future budget proposals, under executive direction and management, an expected accomplishment of the Secretariat related to the timely submission of documentation needed for meetings of relevant intergovernmental bodies;

84. Notes with satisfaction that all documents submitted on time and within the word limit were processed by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management within four weeks, and encourages the Secretary-General to sustain that level of performance;

85. Reaffirms its decision in section III, paragraph 9, of its resolution 59/265 that the issuance of documents in all six official languages on planning, budgetary and administrative matters requiring urgent consideration by the General Assembly shall be accorded priority;

86. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General direct all departments of the Secretariat to include the following elements in their reports:

(a) A summary of the report;

(b) Consolidated conclusions, recommendations and other proposed actions;

(c) Relevant background information;

87. Also reiterates its request that all documents submitted to legislative organs, including the Committee on Conferences, by the Secretariat and intergovernmental and expert bodies for consideration and action have conclusions and recommendations in bold print;

88. Notes with concern that only 84 per cent of the author departments reached the compliance rate of 90 per cent in the timely submission of their reports to the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General enforce the slotting system more rigorously through a dedicated focus, such as the interdepartmental task force on documentation, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

89. Urges author departments to fully adhere to deadlines in meeting the goal of 90 per cent submission compliance, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that documents submitted late do not adversely affect the issuance of documents submitted on time and in compliance with set guidelines;

90. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on concrete measures taken by author departments and the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to improve the predictability of document delivery and ensure accountability for the meeting of deadlines in order to ensure the timely issuance of documentation;

91. Reiterates its request in section IV, paragraph 72, of its resolution 68/251 that the Secretary-General provide information on the waiver process for documents that are submitted over the word limit;

92. Welcomes the interactions between the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the author departments on waiver management, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure continuous efforts in this regard and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

93. Emphasizes the role of Member States and their intergovernmental bodies in determining the policies on conference management;

94. Stresses that proposals to change such policies are to be approved by Member States in their relevant intergovernmental bodies;

95. Notes that the Official Document System is the official digital repository of the United Nations;

96. Requests the Secretary-General to complete the task of uploading all important older United Nations documents onto the United Nations website in all six official languages on a priority basis so that these archives will also be available to Member States through that medium;

97. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all measures necessary to ensure that the digitization of key documents in the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and in the main duty stations is completed in a timely manner, as appropriate;

98. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on a detailed time frame for the digitization of all important older United Nations documents, including parliamentary documents, and on options for expediting this process within existing resources;

99. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretariat on the digitization of important older United Nations documents, and requests the Secretary-General to propose ways to accelerate the implementation of this work and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

100. Expresses concern that the anticipated lengthy digitization project may jeopardize the retention of historical knowledge and information in view of the delicate state and risk of breakage of many of the related documents;

101. Requests the Secretary-General to expedite the process of the digitization of important older United Nations documents, in particular those that have been identified as particularly important and in urgent need of digitization;

102. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to seek additional voluntary contributions for the digitization of important older United Nations documents;

103. Welcomes with appreciation the donations from China and Qatar to the digitization project;

104. Recalls the pilot project undertaken by the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space at the United Nations Office at Vienna to make a transition to digital recordings of meetings in the six official languages of the Organization as a cost-saving measure;

105. Emphasizes that the further expansion of this measure would require consideration, including of its legal, financial and human resources implications, by the General Assembly and full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Assembly, and requests that the Secretary-General report thereon and on the evaluation of the pilot project referred to in paragraph 104 above to the Assembly at its seventieth session;

106. Recalls paragraph 5 of its resolution 49/221 B of 23 December 1994, and stresses that the timely issuance of verbatim records constitutes an important part of the services provided to Member States;

V

Matters related to translation and interpretation

107. Requests the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to ensure the highest quality of interpretation and translation services in all six official languages;

108. Underlines that the translation of official documents of the Organization must be provided in all required languages and in due time, in full compliance with the rules of procedure of the respective legislative bodies;

109. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General ensure that the terminology used in the translation and interpretation services reflects the latest linguistic norms and terminology of the official languages in order to ensure the highest quality, and in this regard welcomes the development, within existing resources, of a global terminology portal that will be equally accessible to United Nations staff, Member States and civil society;

110. Reaffirms section V, paragraph 85, of its resolution 68/251, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General, when recruiting temporary assistance in the language services, including through the use of international or local contracts, as appropriate, ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving maximum quality of their services, with full respect for the specificities of each of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

111. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General consider further measures aimed at decreasing the vacancy rates at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

112. Requests the Secretary-General to hold competitive examinations for the recruitment of language staff sufficiently in advance in order to fill current and future vacancies in the language services in a timely manner and to inform the General Assembly at its seventieth session of efforts in this regard;

113. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to make every effort to enhance access to competitive examinations for applicants in all regions by bringing, to the extent possible, examination sites closer to their locations in order to allow the greatest number of potentially qualified candidates to participate in them, and to report to the General Assembly at the main part of its seventieth session on progress made in this regard;

114. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the quality of translation of documents into the six official languages, giving particular significance to the accuracy of translation;

115. Reiterates paragraph 8 of the annex to resolution 2(I) of 1 February 1946 on the rules of procedure concerning languages, whereby all resolutions and other important documents shall be made available in the official languages and, upon the request of any representative, any other document shall be made available in any or all of the official languages;

116. Stresses the need to ensure the highest possible quality of contractual and in-house translation, and requests the Secretary-General to report on measures to be taken in this regard;

117. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General provide, at all duty stations, adequate staff at the appropriate level, with a view to ensuring appropriate quality control for external translation, with due consideration of the principle of equal grade for equal work;

118. Requests the Secretary-General to apply common standards for the quality control of documents processed by external translators in all four duty stations, within existing resources, in order to ensure high-quality translations in the six official languages of the United Nations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

119. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the experience, lessons learned and best practices of the main duty stations in performing quality control of contractual and in-house translations, including on requirements relating to the number and appropriate level of staff needed to carry out this function;

120. Encourages the Secretary-General to establish globally standardized performance indicators and costing models aimed at a more cost-effective strategy for the in-house processing of documents, and requests the Secretary-General to submit such information to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

121. Notes with appreciation the measures taken by the Secretary-General, in accordance with its resolutions, to address, among other things, the issue of the replacement of retiring staff in the language services, and requests the Secretary-General to maintain and intensify those efforts, including the strengthening of cooperation with institutions that train language specialists, in order to meet the needs in the six official languages of the United Nations;

122. Notes the need for energetic measures to avoid a disruptive shortage of applicants and a high turnover rate in the language career fields, particularly where rare language combinations are involved, and requests the Secretary-General to use the appropriate means to improve the internship programme, including through partnerships with organizations that promote the official languages of the United Nations;

123. Also notes, in this regard, that recent efforts have led to the signing of memorandums of understanding and collaboration agreements with two universities in Africa and that a memorandum of understanding has been signed with a Latin American institution;

124. Welcomes the existing memorandums of understanding between the Organization and 22 universities as a way to strengthen the training of language professionals in order to improve the recruitment of qualified language staff, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to assess the appropriate number of memorandums of understanding in order to fulfil the needs of the Organization;

125. Requests the Secretary-General to make further concerted efforts to promote outreach programmes, such as traineeships and internships, and to introduce innovative methods to increase awareness of the programmes, including through partnerships with Member States, relevant international organizations and language institutions in all regions, in particular to close the wide gap in Africa and Latin America, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

126. Notes that the "African project" has the aim of establishing postgraduate university programmes in translation, conference interpreting and public service interpreting through centres of excellence on the African continent, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report on the achievements of this project;

127. Also notes the current difficulties in recruiting translators at headquarters duty stations, particularly in New York, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, in cooperation with the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat, continues its efforts to raise awareness among all Member States about opportunities for employment and internships in the language services at the four main duty stations and to report to the Assembly at its seventieth session on efforts to identify and select qualified applicants;

128. Notes with appreciation the positive experience with traineeships at Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Vienna in training young professionals in and attracting them to the translation and interpretation services of the United Nations, while enhancing the pool of qualified language professionals in language combinations that are critical for succession-planning purposes, and requests the Secretary-General to develop the initiative further, to extend it to all duty stations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

129. Notes the difficulties in identifying and retaining qualified language professionals and the need to replenish the pool of language experts in order to prevent further negative impact on the capacity of the Secretariat to provide services in the six official languages of the United Nations;

130. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve and strengthen his initiatives related to training and to replenishing the language capacity of the Organization, including through the outreach programmes, to ensure sufficient capacity to address the interpretation and translation requirements of the Organization;

131. Recalls paragraph 27 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to approach permanent missions to identify outreach opportunities with universities, educational institutions and language learning centres located worldwide, in order to ensure the continued availability of high-quality professional language services in the six official languages of the United Nations;

132. Requests the Secretary-General, through the Department, to improve and expand the list of universities having memorandums of understanding with the United Nations, ensuring the inclusion of universities, educational institutions and language learning centres located in all geographical regions, whenever possible;

133. Also requests the Secretary-General to refrain from making any change of a substantive nature to agreed texts of both draft and adopted resolutions and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its seventieth session, including on measures to enhance the quality, efficiency and cost-effectiveness of editing services within existing resources.

Also on 29 December, the Assembly retained the agenda item on patterns of conferences for consideration at its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

UN information systems

Information and communications technology

Report of Board of Auditors. In its financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2013 [A/69/5 (Vol. I)], the Board of Auditors noted that the Administration had accepted all of its 16 recommendations contained in its 2012 report on the handling of information and communications technology (ICT) affairs in the Secretariat [YUN 2012, p. 1472], and that all of them were under implementation as they were linked to the new ICT strategy that the Administration presented to Member States.

Report of Secretary-General. In October [A/69/517], in accordance with General Assembly resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439], the Secretary-General submitted a report on a revised ICT strategy. The objectives of the proposed strategy were to set the direction of ICT in support of organizational priorities; harmonize infrastructure and processes; and place greater emphasis on innovation to support the work of the United Nations. He proposed a road map for achieving the objectives of the revised strategy over a five-year period, which was summarized in annex I to his report. The key measures and activities proposed to achieve the strategy's objectives included the modernization of enterprise solutions and infrastructure in support of organizational priorities, including technical support for Umoja, as well as other enterprise applications, such as Inspira; implementation of a standardized approach to designing, managing and monitoring the performance of local area networks and the corporate-wide area network; the establishment of a comprehensive information security framework for the Secretariat; and the implementation of disaster recovery and business continuity arrangements for all the critical applications of the Secretariat.

Also included was the transformation of the enterprise delivery framework of the United Nations and restructuring of the delivery of ICT across the Organization through the merging of many large processing environments into a few highly interconnected enterprise environments, as well as through the use of enterprise applications instead of locally developed applications, and of enterprise data centres or technology centres rather than local data centres. In particular, it was proposed that five enterprise service desks be established at Headquarters, the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the Global Service Centre at Brindisi, Italy, and the UN Offices at Geneva and Nairobi; four regional technology centres be established at Headquarters, the UN Offices at Geneva and Nairobi and ESCAP, building on existing capacity; and three enterprise applications centres be established in New York, Bangkok and Vienna by strengthening existing capacities. That would allow the restructuring of ICT delivery across the Organization, the streamlining of ICT systems and the harmonization of technology units, with a reduction in the fragmentation of ICT environment. The Secretary-General expected, in particular, to reduce the existing 2,000 applications to approximately 100 key applications and 300 websites; over 131 existing service desks to 5; and the number of data centres from 44 to the two existing enterprise data centres at Valencia, Spain and Brindisi, Italy.

The revised strategy was designed to build the right architecture and structure and mainstream ICT in support of Umoja as well as other critical initiatives, the Secretary-General concluded. The proposals to harmonize functions in regional ICT units, data centres and application centres would bring about a better balance between central control and operational freedom and at the same time reduce fragmentation, inefficiencies and the carbon footprint. The Organization's service-desk help needed to become more dependable; a proposed unified enterprise service desk would provide around-the-clock coverage and would be tightened to ensure that it could handle the responsibilities arising from the implementation of Umoja.

The Secretary-General indicated that most of the proposals, if approved, would be implemented on a cost-neutral basis during the biennium 2014–2015, and that he would put forward detailed resource requirements in the context of the proposed programme budget for 2016–2017, estimated on an indicative basis at an additional $3 million. He requested the General Assembly to endorse the strategy.

ACABQ report. Commenting in November [A/69/610] on the Secretary-General's report, the Advisory Committee observed that the United Nations was implementing a number of major ICT-enabled business transformation and change management initiatives, including Umoja, IPSAS and the global field support strategy, as well as ongoing human resources management reforms. ACABQ was informed that ICT was already implementing some of the activities in the proposed revised ICT strategy, including planning and preparation for the mainstreaming of Umoja ICT-related activities. In addition, ICT continued to implement projects to rationalize its organization and improve its enterprise management, which were approved by the General Assembly in resolutions 65/259 [YUN 2010, p. 1429] and 66/249 [YUN 2011, p. 1398]. Noting that those initiatives were interrelated and interdependent, ACABQ emphasized the need to harmonize their implementation and ensure coherence.

Regarding the 2,000 existing applications mentioned in the Secretary-General's report, the Advisory Committee recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide in his next report updated information on the total number of applications and those that could be decommissioned, including details on the total number of systems to be replaced by Umoja.

ACABQ believed that the proposed strategy constituted a good basis for the future development of ICT at the United Nations and supported the strategy's overall direction. It considered that the strategy proposed a pragmatic approach to reducing the fragmentation of ICT capacities by building on the existing strengths of ICT units across the Secretariat while taking into account the decentralized nature of the United Nations and its complex organizational structures. At the same time, the Committee considered that the distribution of responsibility for ICT delivery across multiple centres in numerous geographically dispersed centres could present management challenges.

ACABQ also believed that a more detailed analysis should be carried out. It recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to develop and refine his proposal for consideration and endorsement by the Assembly at its seventieth session. He should also be requested to elaborate a plan for implementing the strategy and to establish baseline information to assess progress.

In conclusion, ACABQ recommended that, subject to its comments and recommendations, the General Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report and request him to submit at its seventieth session a refined ICT strategy proposal.

In resolution 69/262 (Section II) of 29 December (see p. 1632), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and endorsed the Advisory Committee's conclusions and recommendations, subject to the resolution's conclusions and recommendations. It welcomed the new ICT strategy, endorsed all its elements and requested the Secretary-General to ensure its implementation and provide to the Assembly's seventieth session detailed information on such implementation.

Organizational resilience management system

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/254 [YUN 2013, p. 1439], the Secretary-General in January [A/68/715] reported on progress in the implementation of the organizational resilience management system, including information on the steps taken to expand the system to include the specialized agencies, funds and programmes. The report described the vision of the system and summarized the expected impact on the ability of the Organization to prevent and prepare for, respond to and recover from crisis events. It also described the status of implementation of the system at UN Headquarters, offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, field missions of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) and the Department of Political Affairs (DPA), and the participating specialized agencies, funds and programmes, as well as the next steps in implementation.

The elements of the system—crisis management, security management, business continuity, information technology disaster recovery, mass casualty incident response, crisis communications and support to staff, survivors and families—shared a common basis and objective, namely, to enhance the management of risks that could disrupt the Organization's operations, the Secretary-General said. The system contributed to operational risk management by prioritizing threats through a joint risk assessment and then aligning efforts to jointly prevent and mitigate them under a common governance structure, which in turn mitigated unintentional internal risk transfer. A common framework also reduced the burden on offices, especially smaller field offices, to implement emergency management.

The system consisted of the following processes: policy and plan development; risk assessment and mitigation; situational awareness; crisis management decision-making, operational execution and coordination; recovery of people and assets and reconstitution of business practices; reviewing actions and identifying lessons to improve processes; execution and training; and implementation of lessons learned.

Turning to progress in implementation, the Secretary-General reported that under the oversight of the senior emergency policy team, the Under-Secretary-General for Management had been appointed the organizational resilience management system project owner. The Under-Secretaries-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Political Affairs and Field Support were responsible for implementing that policy in peacekeeping operations, special political missions and logistic facilities, respectively. An interdepartmental and inter-agency working group, overseen by the senior emergency policy team, had developed the implementation strategy and key deliverables. Each Secretariat duty station had been requested to appoint a project manager to lead the local implementation of the organizational resilience management system and the harmonization of emergency management plans. The United Nations Operations and Crisis Centre, located at Headquarters, became operational on 28 January 2013 and would provide support to senior leaders across the system to enable decision-making and strategic engagement. The organizational resilience management system had been fully implemented at UN Headquarters.

UN Headquarters had an approved crisis management plan, business continuity plan, information technology disaster recovery plan and pandemic preparedness plan. To operationalize those policy documents and offer guidance to managers during a crisis response, Headquarters had produced an organizational resilience management system playbook that consolidated essential crisis management, business continuity, information technology disaster recovery, crisis communications, medical response information and contact lists.

At UNOG, a crisis management team, which included representatives of all Secretariat entities based in Geneva and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), was in place. Progress towards implementing the system had also been made in the specialized agencies, funds and programmes.

Building staff capacity to prepare for, respond to and recover from critical incidents remained an ongoing priority, the Secretary-General noted. The focus of implementation would now shift to offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, DPKO and DPA field missions, and specialized agencies, funds and programmes.

Implementation of recommendations from the after-action review of storm Sandy

In response to General Assembly resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439], the Secretary-General submitted, in February [A/68/732], a report on progress in the implementation of the recommendation from the after-action review of storm Sandy. The review, conducted by the Secretariat, focused on the areas of governance of the crisis management programme, information and communications technology, physical infrastructure, communications and support to staff. The report provided a description of the steps taken in preparation for the arrival of the storm, the impact of the storm on Headquarters, and the main recommendations and action taken. It also provided a description of enhancements in emergency management resulting from the after-action review process, the recommendations of which were being mainstreamed into the Headquarters emergency management programme. Specifically, since the issuance of the Secretary-General's 2013 report on the subject [YUN 2013, p. 1439], offices of the Department of Management worked closely with the Organization's consultants and insurers to implement the remediation activities covered by the insurance programmes and to receive or plan for financial compensation for the damage. As at January, the Organization had recovered $64.169 million in costs incurred for works relating to the storm and anticipated further recoveries. Since the Secretary-General had utilized $62.140 million of the $131.421 million authorized by resolution 67/254 [YUN 2013, p. 1439] for the 2012–2013 biennium, no further commitment authority was necessary as the Organization could finance recoverable work relating to the storm for the reimbursed money already received. Expenditure for mitigation measures in 2013 amounted to $6,063,200 million out of the $6,0563,400 million appropriated by the Assembly. As at January 2014, approximately 81 per cent of the contracted remediation work had been completed, with full completion expected by the end of May. Construction remediation works planned but not yet under contract included: modifications to the building management system required for the chiller plant and modular chiller system; third basement level of the Conference, Secretariat and South Annex Buildings, including repairs to the security system; raising of air handling units; replacement of electrical equipment; repairs to plumbing systems; replacement of the coiling doors for the service drive; electrical work associated with elevators; restoration of doors, walls and floor finishes; and emergency and temporary work: removal of temporary chillers for the service drive. In terms of risk mitigation, a Secretariat team of risk management professionals located in the Insurance and Disbursement Service of the Accounts Division, was tasked with ensuring that the Secretariat's insurance requirements were efficiently and optimally fulfilled. It was continually engaged to ensure that it provided comprehensive coverage at the best value for money for the Organization, while also attentively monitoring outstanding claims.

ACABQ in its March report [A/68/780], recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to complete implementation of the recommendations of the after-action review, finalize the global information technology disaster recovery plan and assessment, and address the weaknesses identified in the area of business continuity during the storm. The Committee emphasized the importance of ensuring that the information technology infrastructure, business continuity and disaster recovery arrangements put into place were sufficiently robust and effective to ensure the continuation or restarting of operations in the event of a disruption. It recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report on progress made in his report on the revised information and communications technology strategy to be submitted for consideration by the Assembly no later than at its sixty-ninth (2014) session.

ACABQ noted the Secretary-General's statement that no further commitment authority beyond the amount utilized in 2013 was required. It recommended, however, that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide, in the context of the first performance report for the 2014–2015 biennium, comprehensive information on the remedial work undertaken, as well as a detailed accounting of the related expenditures and insurance recoveries. The Secretary-General should include the costs of the establishment and operations of the emergency operations centre in the consolidated presentation, and continue to closely monitor the insurance market with a view to securing adequate coverage at a reasonable cost for all UN installations. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly note the Secretary-General's report.

ACABQ report. Commenting in March on the Secretary-General's report [A/68/780], ACABQ stated that the governance arrangements of the organizational resilience management system initiative appeared to be satisfactory. ACABQ noted that the report of the Secretary-General did not consolidate details of the full cost of the initiative, which were included under the individual budgets of various offices and departments involved in the initiative and presented a fragmented picture of the overall cost. It emphasized the importance of tracking the resources dedicated for the system in various departments and offices and of providing the General Assembly with a consolidated view of the actual overall costs, as well as the costs related to emergency management and emergency preparedness activities. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide henceforth in the proposed programme budget a consolidated presentation of the full cost under all sources of funding.

It also recommended that, subject to its observations and recommendations, the General Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

In resolution 68/247 B (Section III) of 9 April (see p. 1639), the General Assembly endorsed the Advisory Committee's conclusions and recommendations, subject to the resolution. It welcomed the progress achieved in implementing the organizational resilience management system and underlined the importance of full implementation in the offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions, DPKO and DPA field missions, and the UN agencies, funds and programmes. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide a detailed accounting of the cost of the initiative in the context of future progress reports, and to submit to the Assembly's seventieth session a progress report on the implementation of the system.

Enterprise resource planning

Report of Secretary-General. In September [A/69/385 & Corr.1], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/243 [YUN 2009, p. 1395], the Secretary-General issued his sixth annual progress report on the enterprise resource planning project, Umoja. Since his fifth progress report [YUN 2013, p. 1486], steady progress had been made. After considering the lessons learned from pilot implementation at the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) and the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for Lebanon in July 2013, Umoja Foundation was deployed on 1 November 2013 at all peacekeeping operations, the United Nations Logistics Base in Brindisi and the Regional Service Centre in Entebbe (cluster 1). On 1 March 2014, Umoja Foundation was also deployed in 14 special political missions, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization, the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan and the United Nations Kuwait Joint Support Office (cluster 2).

Umoja Foundation was fully operational in all UN peacekeeping operations, special political missions supported by the Department of Field Support and offices at UN Headquarters involved in the support and oversight of those missions. In addition, the integration of Umoja Foundation and Extension 1 was deployed in pilot format at the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti on 1 July 2014. At the end of August, Umoja had more than 5,000 transactional end users.

As the project moved forward and the Organization absorbed the lessons learned, the steering committee had made adjustments to the deployment plan, which were approved by the steering committee in September 2014. The plan remained in keeping with the overall timeline approved by the Assembly.

The strengthened governance model described in the fifth progress report [YUN 2013, p. 1486] remained in force, the Secretary-General said. Project management, integrated planning capability, and oversight and management of risks had been strengthened. Improved responsiveness had resulted in a dramatic decrease in identified risk items from 199 to 38 and issues from 491 to 41 in the year ending March 2014.

The report provided details of the revised resource requirements for the project until the end of 2015 in the amount of $385,060,300, which the General Assembly was requested to approve, and details of the projected costs for 2016 and 2017 in the amounts of $30,395,800 and $23,895,700, respectively, which the Assembly was requested to take note of. Those additional resource requirements reflected adjustments to the implementation plan, including extended post-implementation support to the peacekeeping missions and special political missions, enhancement of training activities and strengthening of organizational preparedness and provisions for design work, in anticipation of the deployment of clusters 3, 4 and 5.

The Assembly was requested to approve the Secretary-General's proposal to fund additional requirements of $36,921,800, the details for which were set out in the report.

Report of Board of Auditors. In its third annual progress report on the implementation of Umoja, [A/69/158], the Board of Auditors set out the status of the project as at 31 May.

The Board noted that the project had undergone significant changes, affecting the original approach, the expected cost and the planned implementation time. Some 4,000 staff in 300 locations were using the system. The technical solution was viable and would be able to support a large and complex part of the United Nations. Nevertheless, the Organization had experienced difficulty in embedding the new standard business processes, primarily owing to the level of divergence of existing processes and the lack of business readiness to shift to new ways of working. The scale and depth of the problems illustrated not only the fundamental need for the new system, but also the challenge of introducing standardized business processes and new ways of working into a highly federated Organization with a deeply entrenched staff and managerial culture. The Administration had demonstrated perseverance and pragmatism in responding to emerging risks and issues that could compromise the system's aims and objectives. The problems, however, had not been resolved.

With regard to achieving project delivery, the Board stated that in the absence of any clear linkage between planned expenditure and planned deliverables, it could provide no assurance that expenditure was matched by the appropriate level of delivery. As at 31 March, the project had spent $271 million, or 78 per cent, of the approved budget of $348 million to the end of the biennium 2014–2015. The Administration was forecasting that it would need to spend $372 million to complete the design, build and implementation of Foundation and Extension 1 and the design of Extension 2, leaving a funding gap of at least $24 million. The anticipated final cost of the project was unknown because the cost of Extension 2 had not been fully defined. While the Board could not provide assurance about the accuracy of the projected cost of Foundation and Extension 1, it considered their delivery within the current budget highly unlikely. On the basis of the current rate of monthly expenditure and the likelihood that more support than expected would be needed for the remaining roll-outs, the project would exceed the approved budget in June 2015 at the latest. The level of associated costs, such as data cleansing and training, remained unknown, as they were not recorded centrally; therefore the full costs of the project remained unknown. In the light of the delays incurred, and the likelihood of further delays, the Board considered that the revised deployment schedule agreed upon in February 2014 was unlikely to be met.

The Board reiterated 16 of its previous recommendations, which had been partially implemented or not implemented, and made five additional recommendations.

ACABQ report. Following consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General and the Board of Auditors, the Advisory Committee in October [A/69/418] noted that with the deployment of Umoja Foundation in peacekeeping and special political missions (clusters 1 and 2), the system had become an operational reality. Notwithstanding the difficulties encountered, the Committee considered that first large-scale deployment of Umoja to be a milestone. The Committee, however, was concerned by the extent and serious nature of the issues faced following deployment, the magnitude of the effort required to resolve the issues and the resulting delays and cost escalation projected for the remaining phases of the project. ACABQ emphasized the need to adhere to the revised timeline approved by the General Assembly in resolution 67/246 [YUN 2012, p. 1434] for implementation of the project by December 2018, pointing out that the revised timeline reflected a delay of over six years compared with the original target of completing the design, build and deployment of the system by the end of 2012. The Advisory Committee recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General: to closely monitor the design, build and deployment of the remaining phases of the project and ensure strict management of the implementation timetable and costs; to keep under continuous review the adequacy of project governance, oversight and risk management, as well as the level of cooperation and coordination throughout the Secretariat; to take action, if necessary, to strengthen ownership and accountability; and to implement the recommendations of the oversight bodies expeditiously.

In conclusion, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the revised resource requirements of the project until 31 December 2015, as presented in the Secretary-General's report; and approve the reclassification of the post of Deputy Project Director at the D-2 level. With regard to the programme budget, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly appropriate an amount of $5,538,200 under the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015, representing the regular budget share for the additional Umoja project costs until 31 December 2015, to be charged against the contingency fund for the biennium. ACABQ further recommended that the Assembly note that resource requirements in the amount of $22,891,500 would be included in the subsequent requirements for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the financial period from 1 July 2015 to 30 June 2016, and that requirements in the amount of $8,492,100 would be funded from extrabudgetary resources in the financial period from 1 January to 31 December 2015.

By decision 69/553 A of 29 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the documents related to enterprise resource planning to its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

UN premises and property

Capital master plan

Implementation of CMP

Reports of Secretary-General (February). Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/247 A [YUN 2013, p. 1451], the Secretary-General in February [A/68/352/Add.2] provided an update on the status of the capital master plan (CMP) since the issuance of his eleventh annual progress report [YUN 2013, p. 1487]. He reported that renovation work on remaining portions of the project had proceeded quickly and on schedule, and comprised three areas: the General Assembly Building, the basements and First Avenue security enhancements.

The Secretariat and Conference Buildings had been completed and the General Assembly Building was projected to be completed in time for the general debate of 2014. Construction activity for the project, including remaining work relating to the basements and security on First Avenue, was set to be completed within 2014, although continued delays in the permitting process by the host city might move that date to 2015. Renovation of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and South Annex Building remained suspended because of security concerns. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 68/247 A (see above), the Secretary-General laid out additional options related to the Library and the South Annex Building.

The General Assembly was asked to take note of the progress made since the issuance of the eleventh annual progress report; request the Secretary-General to seek resolution of the perimeter security concerns with the host country and the host city; and decide on the financing of the cumulative associated costs and the cost of the secondary data centre.

Also in February [A/68/352/Add.3], in accordance with resolution 68/247 A (see above), the Secretary-General provided updated information on final expenditure for associated costs for the period 2008–2013, which were $140,253,300, as compared to the previously reported $141,408,600, representing a decrease of $1,155,300. The costs of activities associated with CMP, as well as the cost of the secondary data centre ($15 million) were not included in the original scope of CMP. As approved by the General Assembly, those costs had been incurred and borne by the cash funds of CMP project since 2008. The Secretary-General reiterated that those costs could not be absorbed within the approved CMP budget. A decision on the financing of the cumulative associated costs and the cost of the secondary data centre was required, since without the replenishment of the cash resources, the project would not be able to proceed to completion in 2014.

ACABQ report. Considering the Secretary-General updates in March [A/68/797], ACABQ noted with concern that the timeline for the CMP project indicated that the projected completion had been postponed by one year. It recommended that the Secretary-General provide explanations to the General Assembly for the delays related to the work at the entrances on First Avenue, in particular the planning process for the permit application. ACABQ also recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report on his plans for the management and supervision of the delayed work, including the possibility of reducing the projected 18-month work schedule, and to confirm the timing for the closure of the Office of CMP.

ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General provide to the General Assembly the most up-to-date information on the final expenditure of the associated costs, and that the Assembly decide to appropriate an amount, based on that information, to finance the cumulative associated costs and the cost of the secondary data centre before the CMP funds were exhausted.

ACABQ requested that the Secretary-General provide information to the Assembly on the plans for the continued use of the Library and South Annex Buildings. Regarding alternative options for the locations of the functions housed in those buildings, the Committee recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit new proposals.

ACABQ recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of CMP was phased out with the completion of the remaining activities of the project, and that its operation would not be extended for the planning and management of solutions for the functions in the Library and South Annex Buildings. Any solutions for the functions of the two buildings should be developed and managed by the Office of Central Support Services of the Department of Management.

In section VII of resolution 68/247 B of 9 April (see p. 1639), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's reports and endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of ACABQ. The Assembly welcomed the donations from Member States contributing to the CMP project; and noting that as at 28 March an amount of $678,214 in assessments remained unpaid to CMP, urged the Member States concerned to disburse those contributions. It called on the Secretary-General to reduce the delay in the schedule for the completion of the project, to confirm the timing of the closure for the Office of CMP and to report on the plans for the management and supervision of the work remaining after the closure of the Office.

With regard to project funding, the Assembly authorized the Secretary-General, on an exceptional basis, to make use of the Working Capital Fund and the Special Account as a bridging mechanism to address possible cash flow challenges until project completion. The Assembly decided that the bridging mechanism would be replenished at its sixty-ninth session.

Report of Secretary-General (August). In his twelfth annual progress report on the implementation of CMP [A/69/360], submitted in August pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General reviewed the status of the project, which would begin to draw to a close with the completion and occupancy of the General Assembly Building in September. All the other major portions of the project had been completed, including the renovation and reoccupancy of the Secretariat and Conference Buildings, the replacement of major infrastructure in the basements and the enhanced security upgrades to strengthen the eastern and western perimeters of UN Headquarters. Following completion of the renovation phase in 2014, the remaining work, reflecting approximately 1 per cent of the budget, would be to complete post-renovation activities and to close out the project. Post-renovation and close-out would continue under the management of the Office of CMP until the Office was disbanded in June 2015, and thereafter would be completed by the Office of Central Support Services by the end of 2016. The cost of post-renovation construction and close-out activities would be met from within the approved resources.

As at 30 June 2014, the cost to complete the CMP project was projected to be $2,215 million, as compared with the approved resources of $2,150 million. Approved resources comprised the original budget plan and donations of 1,990.6 million, plus interest income and the working capital reserve fund of $159.4 million. The scope of CMP remained unchanged, although the approved funding was being applied to ongoing renovation activities and contracts. Renovation of the Library and South Annex Buildings, the original cost of which was estimated at $65 million, remained suspended because of security concerns. The cash balance of $150 million as at 30 June was used to make payments for contractual obligations and project commitments. The estimated cost of activities associated with CMP amounted to $139.8 million as at 30 June, and the cost of the secondary data centre borne by CMP amounted to $15 million (net of the $4.2 million contributions from the support account for peacekeeping operations). Those activities were not included in the original scope or budget of CMP. In summary, the consolidated project requirements amounted to $2,369.8 million.

The Secretary-General recommended, among other things, that the General Assembly note his intention to seek interim measures for the reduction of functions housed in the Library and South Annex Buildings; take a decision on the relocation of the functions taking place in both buildings; and decide on the financing of the cumulative associated costs and the cost of the secondary data centre.

Review of CMP

Report of Board of Auditors. In its report on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2013 [A/69/5 (Vol. V)], the Board of Auditors noted that the project was approaching closure, with the substantial completion of the General Assembly Building planned for September 2014. All other construction work, including the dismantling of the North Lawn Building and landscaping, was expected to be completed by April 2015, and financial closure of the project was planned for June 2015. The Board noted that costs had largely been contained since it last reported in 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1487], reflecting a skilled and agile approach by the Office of CMP. Since the Board's last report, the estimated total cost to the United Nations was largely unchanged at $2,374 million, reflecting a $379 million (19 per cent) cost overrun against the consolidated budget of $1,995 million, which took into account the associated costs of the project and the cost of the secondary data centre.

The Board recommended that the Administration clarify to the General Assembly which elements of the scope of the project would not be delivered as part of CMP and define plans for delivery and on budgetary implications. The Board also recommended that the Administration apply independent project assurance to all major projects; and that it review maintenance arrangements on the basis of the operating data with respect to new assets being collected and assess possibilities for obtaining better value for money. The Board further recommended that the Administration commit to visible senior management leadership on the flexible workplace project; senior management leading by example would be vital in gaining staff buy-in and securing the intended benefits.

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/353], the Secretary-General responded to the Board of Auditor's recommendations, indicating that of the four recommendations made by the Board, two (on project scope and project assurance) had been implemented, while the other two were in progress and set for implementation by the end of 2015 and 2016, respectively.

ACABQ report. In November [A/69/529], ACABQ commented on the Board of Auditor's report as well as on the Secretary-General's twelfth annual progress report. Concerning CMP project benefits realization, ACABQ understood that post-CMP maintenance requirements would be funded under the regular budget, but questioned the basis for the request for financial resources under the regular budget for improvements to Headquarters premises. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to ensure that resources for activities within the approved scope of the CMP project would not be borne by the regular budget; and the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report on the actual, as compared with the planned, project benefits.

With reference to project schedule and scope, ACABQ stressed that the conclusion of the CMP project by late 2016 was not in line with the approved project schedule and did not include all the scope of the approved project. It pointed out that the schedule presented by the Secretary-General for the demolition of the temporary North Lawn Building by late 2015 and the site landscaping thereafter would represent a further delay; it reiterated that the matter relating to the future of the temporary North Lawn Building was to be decided by the Assembly. ACABQ noted with concern that the latest change in the completion of the work at the entrances on First Avenue from late 2015 to 2016 would represent a delay of an additional year; it believed that the Secretary-General should strive to reduce the delay and recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide clear information and justification on the completion of the work. Should the Assembly approve the delay, the Committee believed that the Board of Auditors should continue its annual audit on the project until the final report was submitted.

Concerning project costs, ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly encourage the Secretary-General to continue to seek additional voluntary contributions to help finance the CMP budget shortfall.

The Committee was concerned that the Secretary-General had not presented plans for the future of the Library and South Annex Buildings and related costs, nor had presented feasible alternative options. It was therefore not in a position to recommend a most preferable option relating to the functions housed in those buildings, and reiterated its recommendation that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit new proposals.

By decision 69/553 A of 29 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the documents related to CMP until its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Strategic capital review

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to resolution 65/259 [YUN 2010, p. 1429], the Secretary-General in February [A/68/733] described preliminary findings on progress, since his last report on overseas property [ibid., p. 1465], on the strategic capital review, which involved next steps in developing a strategy, requirements and sequencing for major maintenance, alterations and improvements, as well as new construction for the UN Secretariat global premises.

ACABQ report. ACABQ in March [A/68/796] noted that, inter alia, it expected the next report of the Secretary-General would address the implications of alternative workplace strategies, including justifications of their applicability in the Secretariat; broaden the review's scope to include all global premises that the Organization owned and/or managed; and that future decisions on capital investment and maintenance would depend on reliable, consistent and realistic valuation methodology.

Headquarters accommodation needs

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to the General Assembly's request in resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439], the Secretary-General in February [A/68/734] provided information on the long-term accommodation needs of the United Nations in New York, including options not previously considered. The report gave an update on the population of the Secretariat and other offices, with and without the staff of funds and programmes anticipated to co-locate with the Secretariat, the impact of flexible workplace strategies, information on the sequencing of UN construction projects and on the short- and long-term financing alternatives for each option, a consideration of the potential impact on the architectural integrity of the UN compound, an analysis of the target ratio of owned versus leased space, and information on options for the renovation of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and South Annex Buildings.

The population forecast of the Secretariat and other offices, funds and programmes expected to require accommodation was 9,593 in 2018, assuming no growth, of which 850 were from funds and programmes. As set out in the Secretary-General's report on flexible workplace [YUN 2013, p. 1489], the implementation of flexible workplace strategies was anticipated to reduce the overall space requirement by 20 per cent; taking that into account, the total off-campus space requirement, in a no-growth scenario, was approximately 1,109,311 square feet, which included office space, shared amenities and building support spaces.

In addition to the four options put forward in previous reports, six additional ones were presented in the Secretary-General's report, but ultimately only three options were considered viable and advantageous for the Organization, and were financially analysed in detail. They were: a new building on the North Lawn, to be funded through a special assessment; a new DC-5 building, through a lease-to-own arrangement with the United Nations Development Corporation; and a continuation of the status quo scenario of leasing on the commercial real estate market. Of those options, in a no-growth population scenario, the North Lawn option was the least costly, at $3.528 billion; the DC-5 option was $4.083 billion; and the status quo option was the most costly, at $4.551 billion.

The General Assembly was requested to take note of the report, approve the most preferred option and authorize the Secretary-General to take the steps necessary for implementation.

ACABQ report. ACABQ in March [A/68/798] noted that the three options deemed viable by the Secretary-General were all from his previous report on the expanded feasibility study [YUN 2013, p. 1488], while the six additional options presented in February were all considered unfeasible and had not benefited from further consideration and analysis. The Committee believed that the Secretary-General should have given adequate consideration to the additional options and alternative financing opportunities, some of which, or a combination of which, could prove viable. In the Committee's view, other options, including but not limited to those considered viable by the Secretary-General, should be kept open for further development and consideration.

ACABQ felt that it was not in a position to recommend any of the options for consideration by the General Assembly. Without prejudice to any decision by the Assembly concerning the Headquarters office space needs for 2014–2034 on the basis of every option, and given the time sensitivity of the option of a DC-5 building, the Committee recommended that the Assembly allow the Secretary-General to continue to negotiate with the United Nations Development Corporation so as to ensure that that option remained viable.

On 9 April, the General Assembly, by decision 68/549 B, deferred consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General and ACABQ until its sixty-ninth (2014) session.

On 29 December, the Assembly, in resolution 69/262 (Section VII), endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of ACABQ. It requested the Secretary-General to present, at its seventieth (2015) session, comprehensive information on all aspects pertinent to the DC-5 option which, subject to additional information to be provided, appeared to be a feasible and serious option. It urged him to ensure equal treatment of all viable four options and to work towards securing the most favourable terms for the Organization in addressing its long-term accommodation needs. It encouraged the Secretary-General to continue to conduct high-level dialogue with all relevant entities regarding the long-term accommodation needs for UN Headquarters. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide updated comprehensive information on the four viable options, particularly financial costs and accurate cost projections. It further requested him to obtain statistically substantiated estimations of the impact that the implementation of a flexible workplace strategy would have on the projection of the office space requirements, and to inform the Assembly of the possible impact of the implementation of Umoja and the new global service delivery model. The Assembly underlined the need to respect the architectural integrity of the UN complex and of the original design.

Additional office/conference facilities

Geneva

In October [A/69/417 & Corr.1], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/247 A (section V) [YUN 2013, p. 1454], the Secretary-General in October presented a progress report on the planning and implementation of the strategic heritage plan of the United Nations Office at Geneva, which summarized the work undertaken during 2014 and contained updated information on the establishment of the internal project control mechanisms and the governance and oversight framework, as well as a refined proposal with regard to the core functions of the dedicated project management team.

In addition, the report provided information with regard to the status of negotiations with the host country on the loan package, details of which had been determined, including separate loans for the new construction and for the renovation portions of the project and the impact of that loan upon project financing. The report provided details of the revised resource requirements for the project until the end of 2015 in the amount of CHF 26,283,400, equivalent to $28,383,800 at initial appropriation rates, which the General Assembly was requested to approve. The Assembly was also requested to approve the establishment of a multi-year special account for the strategic heritage plan and to approve the next steps as outlined in the Secretary-General's report.

ACABQ report. Commenting on the Secretary-General's proposals, ACABQ in November [A/69/580] recommended that the General Assembly approve nine new positions for the project and appropriate an additional amount of $28,378,800 at initial appropriation 2014–2015 rates, of the programme budget for the biennium 2014–2015; and approve the establishment of a multi-year special account for the strategic heritage plan and request the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements in that regard.

The General Assembly, in resolution 69/262 (section III) of 29 December (see p. 1632), endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of ACABQ. It welcomed the continued support of Switzerland for the construction project and requested the Secretary-General to provide at the Assembly's seventieth session information on measures to expedite the commencement of construction work. It welcomed the loan package offered by Switzerland and requested the Secretary-General to continue negotiating on the most preferential terms and modalities for the loan arrangements. It requested him to continue exploring all possible funding mechanisms to reduce the overall assessment on Member States and to present a proposal for the donation policy. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to present revised proposals with a view to ensuring effective oversight. It encouraged the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to preserve the heritage and architectural integrity of the Palais des Nations and to continue assessing the potential for flexible workplace strategies. The Assembly decided to appropriate an additional amount of $28,199,400; to revert to the establishment of the multi-year special account for the strategic heritage plan at its seventieth session; and to establish seven positions comprising three project team positions and four operational experts, effective 1 January 2015.

Addis Ababa

In August [A/69/359], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/263 [YUN 2008, p. 1546], the Secretary-General provided an update on the completion of the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) in Addis Ababa and the full occupancy of the premises in August. He also presented the cost plan for project completion, which entailed completion of the remaining ancillary projects and close-out in mid-2015.

Pursuant to resolution 68/247 A (section III) [YUN 2013, p. 1452], the Secretary-General's report set out the findings of an assessment of the structural conditions of the conference buildings and standard of facilities at ECA, and presented his proposals for the renovation of the conference facilities, which included a proposed project scope, implementation schedule and cost plan for the renovation of the Africa Hall Building. An update on the progress of renovation work at the UN Conference Centre was also provided.

The Secretary-General requested approval of the proposed scope of the Africa Hall Building renovation project, its schedule and estimated cost plan for the period 2015–2021. He also requested the Assembly to approve the project budget of $56,896,300 for the Africa Hall Building renovation project and the establishment of a multi-year special account for the duration of the project. In addition, the Secretary-General proposed the establishment of an additional 18 security officers posts, effective 1 January 2015, under the 2014–2015 programme budget, related to the increased safety and security operations for the new office facilities, and two temporary positions, effective 1 July 2015, related to the dedicated project management team. He further requested the Assembly to appropriate an additional $2,695,900 under the 2014–2015 programme budget, to be charged against the contingency fund for the biennium.

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee, in October [A/69/415], noted the continued support by the host country throughout the construction of the additional office facilities at ECA. It recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to ensure that the remaining ancillary work was completed within the planned time frame, by June 2015, and to avoid any further delay or cost escalation. It recommended that the Assembly approve the establishment of 14 security officers and two temporary positions related to the dedicated project management team. It recommended the appropriation of an additional amount of $2,610,000 under the 2014–2015 programme budget, to be charged against the contingency fund. It also recommended approving the establishment of a multi-year special account for the duration of the Africa Hall renovation project and requesting the Secretary-General to submit a progress report to the Assembly's seventieth session.

The General Assembly, in resolution 69/262 (section V) (see p. 1635), endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of ACABQ, and noted with appreciation the continued efforts of the host country in facilitating construction of the additional office facilities. It requested the Secretary-General to bring the construction project to a swift conclusion and to ensure completion of the remaining ancillary work by June 2015. It further requested him to monitor the Africa Hall renovation in order to avoid further delays and to submit information on expenditures and total cost estimates. It decided to appropriate an additional amount of $2,610,000 and to make a final decision on the establishment of a separate and multi-year account for the renovation of Africa Hall at its seventieth session.

Strengthening property management in the UN Secretariat

Report of Secretary-General. In September [A/69/400], the Secretary-General presented a report on strengthening property management at the UN Secretariat, describing changes being made in property management pursuant to the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards and required as a result of the implementation of Umoja. Those major administrative reforms had increased the scope and complexity of financial reporting, record-keeping and management of the diverse portfolio of assets held by the United Nations. Those reforms were set against the background of concerns expressed by oversight bodies on the need to strengthen the management of UN property. The report described improvements made to the framework for property management, also outlining a plan for the management of property across the UN Secretariat.

ACABQ report. Commenting on the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ in November [A/69/571] noted that the total net book value of UN property, plant and equipment, including assets under construction, was estimated at $4.1 billion, comprising $2.1 billion in unaudited opening balances for property, plant and equipment as at 1 January for UN operations listed under volume I of the financial statements of the Organization, and $1.4 billion in unaudited closing balances for property, plant and equipment as at 30 June 2014 for peacekeeping operations. As to inventory, the total value was estimated at $393.3 million, comprising 4.2 million in unaudited opening balances as at 1 January 2014 for UN operations listed under volume I of the financial statements, and $389.1 million in unaudited closing balances as at 30 June 2014 under volume II (peacekeeping operations).

ACABQ maintained that, should the Secretary-General wish to take action to strengthen property management at the Secretariat, he should submit his proposal to the General Assembly, with a clear business case, including full justification for any new staffing requirements. ACABQ recommended that, subject to its observations and recommendations, the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

The General Assembly, by decision 69/553 A (section C) of 29 December, deferred consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General and of the Advisory Committee until its resumed seventieth (2016) session.

Staff matters

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body regulating and coordinating the conditions of service and the salaries and allowances of the UN common system, held its seventy-eighth (New York, 17–28 March) and seventy-ninth (Rome, 21 July–1 August) [A/69/30] sessions. It considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to Professional and General Service categories of staff, locally recruited staff and staff in the field (see below).

Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

Compensation package

In 2014, ICSC continued its review of the common system compensation package begun in 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1494]. The Commission noted that substantial progress had been made, with the exploratory phase, including research and analysis, which had been completed. Based on those and subsequent feedbacks from both the working groups and the Commission, some general directives were agreed upon. The next step would be for the Commission to develop a specific outline of the system. The Commission would appraise the revised compensation package at its eightieth (2015) session, and finalize its package proposals at its eighty-first (2015) session for presentation to the General Assembly's seventieth (2015) session.

Health insurance

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 68/253 [YUN 2013, p. 1491] and 68/244 [ibid., p. 1497], ICSC reviewed the item of health insurance coverage within the UN system. It recommended to the Assembly that the current apportionment of health insurance premiums between the Organization and both active and retired staff in United States and non-United States health insurance plans be maintained at their existing ratios.

The United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (UNJSPB), at its sixty-first session in July [A/69/9] (see p. 1706), considered the Assembly's request, in resolution 68/244 [YUN 2013, p. 1497], and examined the option of broadening the mandate of UNJSPF to include the administration of after-service health insurance scheme (ASHI) benefits. Noting that the investment objectives of UNJSPF differed from those of ASHI benefits, the Board felt that it might be inappropriate for the Fund to manage the resources related to those benefits and agreed that it would not be advisable to broaden the mandate of UNJSPF to include their administration, as that option could jeopardize the Fund's operational viability.

ACABQ, in its October report on the UN pension system [A/69/528], reaffirmed that the funding and administration of ASHI benefits was an issue of system-wide concern that would be best resolved through a system-wide approach in which UNJSPF could play a key role. ACABQ concurred with the conclusion of the consulting actuary that the Pension Fund could provide a cost-effective solution to the investment of ASHI assets if a proper structure were in place. The Committee welcomed the initiative by the High-level Committee on Management to establish a working group on ASHI and looked forward to receiving its findings.

Mandatory age of separation

In 2014, ICSC followed up on its 2013 recommendation [YUN 2013, p. 1494] that the mandatory age of separation for current staff members be raised to age 65, with effect from 1 January 2016. As requested by General Assembly resolution 68/253 [YUN 2013, p. 1491], the secretariat had provided the Commission with an analysis of increasing the mandatory separation age to 65, discussing the costs to the UNJSPB organizations and the impact on human resources. The analysis posited that while such an increase could delay some organizational programmes, there would be an overall benefit to the common system and the impact on human resources would be minimal. In many Member States, there was a trend towards increasing the retirement age in line with longer life expectancy in order to preserve pension funds. Increasing the mandatory age of separation for current UN staff would lead to a reduction in the actuarial deficit of UNJSPF, which had been estimated to be in the range of 0.13 per cent of pensionable remuneration, or $13.5 million per year.

Based on its consideration of the analysis, ICSC concluded that changing the mandatory age of separation would not have a deleterious effect on the organizations or their strategic plans.

Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

Gender balance in the UN common system

At its seventy-eighth session, ICSC considered a report by its secretariat providing information on its collaborative efforts with the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) on gender balance, an update on the status of women in the UN Secretariat as at 31 December 2011 and an overview of staffing profiles by region of origin as at 31 December 2012. The scope of the review extended to international staff holding an appointment of one year or more in the Professional and higher categories.

The representation of women in such categories in the UN system had increased marginally from 39.9 per cent in 2009 to 40.7 per cent in 2011, an increase of 0.8 per cent. As at 31 December, at the D-1 level and above, women represented 29.5 per cent compared with 28.4 per cent in 2009, an increase of 1.1 per cent. The qualitative analysis showed that there were already sufficient numbers of policies and measures in place towards achieving gender balance.

ICSC decided to: take note of the progress made with regard to the status of women in the Professional and higher categories in the UN common system, while expressing concern that the goal of 50/50 gender balance remained unmet, especially at the D-1 level and above; urge organizations to fully implement gender balance policies and measures; underscore the importance of integrating gender balance and geographical distribution into its review of the UN common system compensation package; monitor progress in achieving gender balance, together with geographical distribution, as part of a comprehensive report on diversity in the UN system; and request its secretariat to provide a report and thereafter monitor progress in achieving gender balance every four years.

Diversity in the UN system

ICSC considered measures that the organizations of the common system had taken to attract and recruit staff to secure as diverse a workplace as possible, while at the same time ensure that the best qualified person was appointed to each position. It further reviewed diversity policies within organizations as well as barriers to diversity.

The Commission decided to review diversity periodically, including geographical representation and gender balance, and to include the following elements in the definition and scope of diversity as it related to the UN common system: cultural diversity (multiculturalism); generational diversity; gender parity; and multilingualism. It requested its secretariat to develop a compendium of good practices concerning inclusiveness and diversity.

Base/floor salary scale

The concept of the base/floor salary scale was introduced by General Assembly resolution 44/198 [YUN 1989, p. 886], with effect from 1 July 1999. The scale was set by reference to the General Schedule salary scale of the comparator civil service, currently the United States federal civil service, excluding any locality pay. Periodic adjustments were made on the basis of a comparison of net base salaries of UN officials at the midpoint of the scale (P-4, step VI, at the dependency rate), with the corresponding salaries of their counterparts in the United States federal civil service. The adjustments were implemented through the standard method of consolidating post adjustment points into the base-floor salary, namely, by increasing base salary while commensurately reducing post adjustment.

ICSC was informed that a 1 per cent increase had been implemented in the comparator's base General Schedule scale effective 1 January 2014. Minor changes were also introduced in the United States tax schedules at the federal level for 2014.

Accordingly, the Commission recommended to the General Assembly for approval, with effect from 1 January 2015, the revised base/floor salary scale for the Professional and higher categories, reflecting a 1.01 per cent adjustment, to be implemented by increasing the base salary and commensurately reducing post adjustment multiplier points, resulting in no change in net take-home pay. It also recommended that no revisions were necessary to the staff assessment rates used in conjunction with gross base salaries.

Evolution of the net remuneration margin

ICSC continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of United States federal civil service staff in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. For that purpose, the Commission annually tracked changes in the remuneration levels of both civil services.

The Commission noted that with the lifting of the statutory freeze in United States federal pay adjustments, which had been in effect from 1 January 2011 until 31 December 2013, a 1.0 per cent general increase was granted as at 1 January 2014 for all statutory pay systems in the comparator civil service. ICSC reported to the General Assembly that the margin between the net remuneration of UN staff in New York in the Professional and higher categories and officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C., for the calendar year 2014 amounted to 117.4 and its five-year average (2010–2014) amounted to 116.4, which was above the desirable midpoint of 115. The Commission decided that the normal procedure for management of the margin within the established range would be suspended, and that the freeze in net remuneration in New York would be continued until such time that the margin had been brought back to its desirable midpoint.

Post adjustment

ICSC continued to keep under review the operation of the post adjustment system and in that context considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions (ACPAQ) on the work of its thirty-sixth session (Budapest, Hungary, 7–14 April). ACPAQ found the structure of the post adjustment index to be fit for the purpose and saw no compelling reason to change it. It recommended, however, that the Commission consider modifications to the operational rules governing the post adjustment system as a means of improving the stability and predictability of salary adjustments, as well as ensuring the sustainability of the UN common system remuneration over time. ACPAQ recommended the use, with effect from the next round of surveys, of a harmonized specification of the weight of the out-of-area component for all duty stations, with financial implications in terms of increases in net remuneration estimated at about $13 million per annum for group I duty stations. The Committee had, at an earlier session, also recommended a new methodology for calculating the rent index for all group I duty stations, based on weights derived from ICSC staff housing surveys, with financial implications, in terms of system-wide reductions in net remuneration, estimated at about $56 million per annum for group I duty stations.

ICSC approved the ACPAQ recommendations and requested the secretariat to initiate preparations for the next round of surveys and to submit proposals to the Advisory Committee at its next session.

Regarding proposals on synchronizing the post adjustment classification review cycles, ICSC decided that the post adjustment classifications of all headquarters and other group I duty stations should be reviewed once a year, on the anniversary date of the post adjustment classification review for New York. The Commission referred the question of the continued use of the 5 per cent rule for group I duty stations to ACPAQ for consideration at its next session.

Conditions of service of the General Service and other categories of staff

Salary adjustments at duty stations with fewer than 30 staff

ICSC outlined alternative modalities other than surveys to review salary scales at duty stations with fewer than 30 General Service staff (non-survey, or category V, duty stations). Given the small numbers of locally recruited staff in those duty stations and the fact that it would not be cost-effective to conduct comprehensive salary surveys at those locations, the Commission agreed that adopting a form of indexation mechanism to revise salaries would streamline the process. On that basis, it established the modalities for such revisions. The Commission also decided that, wherever justified by the labour market based on economic circumstances in highly developed economies, it would be desirable to reference the national civil service in adjusting salaries in category V duty stations.

Conditions of employment in Madrid

On the basis of the methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment of the General Service and other locally recruited staff at headquarters and similar duty stations, ICSC conducted a survey in Madrid, with reference date of October 2013. The Commission recommended a new salary scale for the General Service category of the Madrid-based organizations, with annual financial implications at approximately $110,000. In view of the General Assembly's request to ICSC in resolution 68/253 [YUN 2013, p. 1491] not to increase any of the allowances under its purview until the comprehensive review decided by resolution 67/257 [ibid., p. 1493] was submitted to the Assembly, the Commission decided that dependency allowances for the General Service staff of the Madrid-based organizations would not be adjusted pending the decision by the Assembly on the 2015 Commission report containing recommendations on the review.

Administrative and financial implications

Statement by Secretary-General. In a September statement [A/C.5/69/3], the Secretary-General described the administrative and financial implications arising from the decisions and recommendations of ICSC, in particular for the 2014–2015 UN programme budget, as well as implications for the budgets of peacekeeping operations, commencing with those for the 2014/15 and 2015/16 peacekeeping financial periods.

Resource requirements arising from ICSC recommendations were estimated at $65,800 under the 2014–2015 programme budget and would be addressed in the context of the performance report for that biennium. The resources requirements for peacekeeping operations for the financial periods 2014/15 and 2015/16 were estimated at $66,400 (six months) and $132,800 (one year), respectively, and would be taken into account in the context of the performance reports for the financial period from 1 July 2014 to 30 June 2015 and in the context of the proposed budgets for the financial period from 1 July 2015 to 30 June 2016.

The Advisory Committee, in an October report [A/69/546], voiced no objection to the financial implications and proposals by the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/683], adopted resolution 69/251 without vote [agenda item 139].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/198 of 21 December 1989, 51/216 of 18 December 1996, 52/216 of 22 December 1997, 53/209 of 18 December 1998, 55/223 of 23 December 2000, 56/244 of 24 December 2001, 57/285 of 20 December 2002, 58/251 of 23 December 2003, 59/268 of 23 December 2004, 60/248 of 23 December 2005, 61/239 of 22 December 2006, 62/227 of 22 December 2007, 63/251 of 24 December 2008, 64/231 of 22 December 2009, 65/248 of 24 December 2010, 66/235 A of 24 December 2011, 66/235 B of 21 June 2012, 67/257 of 12 April 2013 and 68/253 of 27 December 2013 and its decisions 67/551 and 67/552 A of 24 December 2012,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2014,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single, unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the International Civil Service Commission;

2. Takes note of the report of the Commission for the year 2014;

3. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in approving conditions of service and entitlements for all staff serving in the organizations of the United Nations common system, bearing in mind articles 10 and 11 of the statute of the Commission;

4. Recalls articles 10 and 11 of the statute of the Commission, and reaffirms the central role of the Commission in regulating and coordinating conditions of service and entitlements for all staff serving in the organizations of the United Nations common system;

I

Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

A. Comprehensive review of the common system compensation package

1. Takes note of the information provided in the report of the Commission on the status of the comprehensive review of the common system compensation package;

2. Notes the ongoing work of the Commission on the comprehensive review of compensation, and looks forward to considering the results of this exercise at the seventieth session of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Commission to provide, at the first part of the resumed sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, an informal briefing on the progress of the comprehensive review of compensation;

B. Health insurance

Approves the recommendation of the Commission to maintain at their existing ratios the current apportionment of health insurance premiums between the Organization and both active and retired staff participating in United States and non-United States health insurance plans;

C. Mandatory age of separation

1. Takes note of the analysis undertaken by the Commission, as requested in General Assembly resolution 68/253, on the impact of the suggested change in the mandatory age of separation on workforce and succession planning frameworks and all relevant human resources management policies;

2. Decides to raise the mandatory age of separation to 65 years for staff recruited before 1 January 2014, taking into account the acquired rights of staff, and requests the Commission to revert to the General Assembly with an implementation date at its earliest opportunity, but no later than the seventy-first session of the General Assembly, after consultations with all the organizations of the common system;

II

Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

A. Gender balance in the United Nations common system

Notes with disappointment the insufficient progress made with regard to achieving the goal of 50/50 gender balance in the United Nations common system, especially in the Professional and higher categories, requests the Commission to encourage the organizations of the common system to fully implement existing gender balance policies and measures, and encourages the Commission to continue to monitor progress in achieving gender balance and to report thereon in compliance with the decision contained in paragraph 137 of the report of the Commission;

B. Diversity in the United Nations common system

Welcomes the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 149 of its report, requests the Commission to continue to recommend measures that would be more favourable to diversity, and encourages the Commission to continue its periodic reviews and reports on all diversity-related issues in the common system;

C. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling its resolution 44/198, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service),

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2015, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 157 of its report, the revised base/floor scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories, as contained in annex III to the report;

D. Evolution of the margin and margin management around the desirable midpoint

Recalling section I.B of its resolution 51/216 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of the United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as “the margin”),

1. Reaffirms that the range of 110 to 120 for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and officials in comparable positions in the comparator civil service should continue to apply, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable midpoint of 115 over a period of time;

2. Notes that the estimated margin between net remuneration of the United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C., for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2014 is 117.4 and that its five-year average (2010–2014) stands at 116.4, which is above the desirable midpoint of 115;

3. Recalls section II.B, paragraph 5, of its resolution 68/253, and requests the Commission to continue action to bring the calendar year margin to around the desirable midpoint, without prejudice to any future decision of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the Commission to further examine issues relating to margin management in the context of its ongoing comprehensive review of compensation;

E. Post adjustment matters

Recalling its request, contained in its resolution 68/253, that the Commission submit proposals on synchronizing the post adjustment cycles at headquarters duty stations,

1. Takes note of the decision of the Commission to review the post adjustment classifications of all headquarters and other group I duty stations once a year, on the anniversary date of the post adjustment classification review for New York;

2. Also takes note of the decision of the Commission to refer the question of the continued use of the 5 per cent rule for group I duty stations for consideration by the Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions, in the context of its review of the operational rules governing the post adjustment system;

III

Conditions of service of staff in the General Service and other locally recruited categories

Notes the intention of the Commission to review the compensation package for staff in the General Service and National Professional Officer categories once the review of the compensation package for staff in the Professional and higher categories is completed.

Also on 29 December, the Assembly retained the agenda item on the United Nations common system for consideration at its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session (decision 69/554).

Human resources management

Reform

In 2014, progress was made in implementing the human resources management reforms approved by the General Assembly since 2009, which included preparations for the new mobility and career development framework, an assessment of the system of desirable ranges, performance management, the young professionals programme and other matters.

By decision 69/553 A of 29 December, the General Assembly deferred until its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session consideration of a number of reports by the Secretary-General (for details see below), as well as the related report of ACABQ [A/69/572], tabled under the agenda item “Human resources management”. On the same date, by decision 69/554, the Assembly retained the agenda item on human resources management for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Mobility framework

In 2014, the General Assembly approved the refined managed mobility framework put forward by the Secretary-General in 2013 [YUN 2013, p. 1512] and preparations continued for its phased implementation slated to begin in 2016.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 April [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/68/690/Add.1], adopted resolution 68/265 without vote [agenda item 139].

Mobility framework

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 67/255 of 12 April 2013 and 68/252 of 27 December 2013 as well as its decision 68/549 of 27 December 2013,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Towards a global, dynamic and adaptable workforce: mobility”, the letter dated 22 October 2013 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chair of the Fifth Committee and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Towards a global, dynamic and adaptable workforce: mobility” and the letter dated 22 October 2013 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chair of the Fifth Committee;

2. Recalls its resolutions expressing support for staff mobility in the Organization, in particular section IV of its resolution 67/255, and welcomes the efforts made by the Secretary-General in submitting his refined managed mobility framework, as well as an alternative proposal, to the General Assembly;

3. Approves the refined managed mobility framework, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Emphasizes that the managed mobility framework should ensure a fair sharing of the burden of service in hardship duty stations;

5. Recalls regulation 1.2 (c) of the United Nations Staff Regulations, and in this regard underlines that the calculation of post occupancy for staff members under the managed mobility framework shall include time served in their current posts;

6. Decides that staff members who have reached the maximum occupancy limit when managed mobility comes into effect for their job network will not be subject to reassignment in the first year of operationalization in that job network;

7. Authorizes the Secretary-General to implement the refined mobility framework with a view to commencing mobility for one job network in 2016 and one in 2017, followed by two job networks each year thereafter;

8. Decides that the number of geographic moves for the job networks in 2016 and 2017 shall be no greater than the average number of geographic moves in those networks in 2014 and 2015;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that managed mobility shall not have a negative effect on mandate implementation under the peace and security, development and human rights pillars of the United Nations;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, when considering applicants for vacancies, to give equal treatment to internal and external candidates;

11. Acknowledges that additional information is required on the managed mobility framework, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his first annual report, to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-ninth session, inter alia, data and information on the following:

(a) Current staff mobility statistics and an analysis of trends, including the tracking of actual costs related to geographic and non-geographic moves and of vacancy rates by job network and other potential costs that may arise;

(b) The number of posts open to external candidates and the number of external candidates selected in 2013 and the first quarter of 2014;

(c) The number of staff moves within and among duty stations and the direct and indirect costs of each move by job network in 2013 and the first quarter of 2014;

(d) An explanation of the criteria to be applied in the implementation of paragraph 8 above should the number of staff reaching the post occupancy limit exceed the average number of geographic moves in 2014 and 2015;

(e) The comprehensive list of non-rotational positions;

(f) The terms of reference and operating guidelines of the job network boards and the special constraints panel;

(g) An analysis of the link between the recruitment and selection recommendations of the job network boards and the future workforce planning agenda for the Organization;

(h) An analysis of how the recommendations of the job network boards would incorporate the Organization's gender balance and geographical representation targets and ensure the equal treatment of internal and external candidates;

(i) The training and knowledge management plans associated with the refined framework;

(j) The structure and reporting lines involved in the functioning of the job network boards, including all expected numbers, configurations and roles of staff members involved in the semi-annual staffing exercises;

(k) Transitional measures to ensure the sustainable implementation of mobility for staff;

12. Decides that the job network boards shall include a staff representative in an observer capacity;

13. Also decides that the minimum post occupancy limits for duty stations classified as D and E will be one year and for all other duty stations will be two years, with the exception of special circumstances in which the movement of staff members earlier than the minimum post occupancy limit is necessary for their health and safety or for the prompt delivery of mandates;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the fair treatment of all staff members in the context of the reassignment pool related to the managed mobility framework;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore ways of assisting spouses and children of staff members in resolving family issues arising from mobility requirements;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General to identify the number of posts open to external candidates and the number of external candidates selected in 2014 and the first quarter of 2015 and to report thereon in his second annual report, to be submitted to the General Assembly at its seventieth session;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to identify the number of staff moves within and among duty stations and the direct and indirect costs of each move by job network in 2014 and the first quarter of 2015 and to report thereon in his second annual report;

18. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide a full estimate of and rationale for the financial resources required for mobility in 2016 and 2017, including requests for any additional geographic moves necessary to achieve the strategic objectives of mobility, in his regular and peacekeeping-related budget requests over the course of that period;

19. Recalls paragraph 78 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and, in the context of the managed mobility framework, emphasizes the importance of a thorough reform of performance management, to be implemented at the same time as the framework, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-ninth session an update on progress and further proposals in this regard;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly annual reports on mobility until its seventy-second session, a five-year comprehensive review of the mobility framework at its seventy-third session and biennial reports on mobility thereafter.

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/190/Add.1], pursuant to resolution 68/265 (see above), the Secretary-General submitted his first annual report on mobility reviewing preparations for the phased implementation of the new mobility and career development framework. The Secretary-General stressed that the report should be read in connection with his report [A/69/190/Add.2 & Corr.1] outlining proposals aimed at strengthening the performance management system (see p. 1689), which would be implemented at the same time as the mobility framework.

The mobility framework, the Secretary-General noted, would apply to all internationally recruited staff of the UN Secretariat in the Field Service and Professional and higher categories up to and including the D-2 level, holding fixed-term, continuing and permanent appointments, except those on non-rotational positions (which required an advanced level of technical expertise, knowledge and qualifications with respect to which there was no comparable position at the same level in another organizational unit or at another duty station). The Office of Human Resources Management had consulted with departments and created a provisional list of 109 non-rotational positions. Prior to the launch of mobility, each job network board would review and confirm the provisional list of non-rotational positions corresponding to its job network; the boards would then present those lists to the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management for final approval.

The report provided data and statistics on mobility trends of those staff who would be subject to mobility. According to the 30 June 2013 data as reflected in the Secretary-General's September 2013 report [YUN 2013, p. 1505], there were 14,094 Professional, Director and Field Service staff in the "mobility population".

Mobility had been defined as a change in position, which could include one or more of the following: a change in role, function, department or duty station, or a move to or from an agency, fund or programme. During each of the past five years, the Secretary-General said, internationally recruited staff had made an average of 1,762 duty station moves.

The report also provided additional data requested by the General Assembly on the direct and indirect costs of moves, as well as the number of positions open to external candidates and the number of such candidates appointed. For 2011 and 2012, direct costs associated with duty station moves between departments, offices away from Headquarters and regional commissions totalled $33.4 million and those associated with field missions totalled $64.3 million (not including some one-time costs of moves to or from missions). The indirect costs of administering the mobility framework were related primarily to the reconfiguration of Inspira to manage the selection and reassignment and the creation of network staffing teams, which would carry out staffing and career support functions. The number of opportunities for selection between 1 July 2009 and 30 June 2013 was 9,211; the number fluctuated over the years, ranging from 1,931 to 2,809. The majority of opportunities (6,215, or 67.5 per cent of the total number available) occurred in the Professional category, which was the largest category of staff in the mobility population. In the Field Service category there were 2,435 opportunities, representing 26.4 per cent of the total. At the Director level, opportunities numbered 561, or 6.1 per cent of the total.

External appointments from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2013 totalled 3,102, ranging from 637 to 857 annually. The proportion of external appointments as compared with the proportion of all job opportunities for selection ranged from 30 to 40 per cent. The highest number of appointments (2,535) was in the Professional category; there were 421 external appointments in the Field Service category and 146 at the Director levels.

Turning to the staffing process under the new mobility and career development framework, the Secretary-General said that it would operate through semi-annual staffing exercises through which job network boards would manage the selection and reassignment of staff in the Field Service category and at the P-3 to P-5 levels (and staff at the P-2 level who were not subject to the young professionals programme). A senior review board would manage the selection and reassignment of staff at the Director level.

Regarding implementation, mobility would be phased in by job network, starting with one network in 2016, one in 2017 and two each year thereafter. The Secretary-General intended to begin implementation with the political, peace and security network. A global steering committee was set up to oversee the project, chaired by the Under-Secretary-General for Management and with the Under-Secretary-General for Field Support as the Vice-Chair. The committee membership included representatives at the Under-Secretary-General level from various departments, offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions and field missions. The steering committee would provide strategic oversight through 2020. More specific advice and feedback relating to selection and reassignment would be provided by a technical advisory group.

ACABQ report. In its November report [A/69/572] on human resources management, the ACABQ commented on the new mobility framework. Since the different aspects of the implementation plan and its underlying support structures and systems had not been finalized, its observations and recommendations were to be considered to be of a preliminary nature.

Towards a global, dynamic and adaptable UN workforce

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/190], pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498], 68/252 [ibid., p. 1503] and 68/265 (see above), the Secretary-General presented an overview of human resources management in the Organization, specifically addressing progress in implementing the human resources management reforms approved by the Assembly since 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1463]. The report provided information on the learning and career development strategy and on efforts to improve gender and geographical representation, including the representation of developing countries, and to improve staff health and well-being. The annex to the report set out the status of implementation of requests by the Assembly in its resolutions 63/250 [YUN 2008, p. 1616], 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498], 68/252 [ibid., p. 1503] and 68/265 (see above) and of requests and recommendations of ACABQ endorsed by the Assembly. Four addenda contained an update on the preparatory work for implementing the mobility and career development framework [A/69/190/Add.1] (see above); a proposal for strengthening the performance management system [A/69/190/Add.2 & Corr.1] (see below); a progress report on and proposed next steps for the young professionals programme [A/69/190/Add.3] (see below); and a comprehensive review of the system of desirable ranges [A/69/190/Add.4] (see below).

ACABQ report. In its November report [A/69/572], ACABQ made recommendations on various aspects of the Secretary-General's report, including implementation of human resources reform, workforce planning, staff selection and recruitment, gender parity, equitable geographical representation and permanent resident status.

Performance management

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/190/Add.2 & Corr.1], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 68/252 [YUN 2013, p. 1503], the Secretary-General submitted a report containing a proposal to revise the performance management system. Based on extensive research and consultations with Member States, staff, managers and the senior leadership of the Organization, the Secretary-General's proposal contained the following elements: increasing accountability; simplifying the policy and the appraisal process; improving the management culture; and addressing underperformance more effectively.

Concerning the financial implications of the proposal, the Secretary-General said that the Inspira e-performance tool would need to be reconfigured in late 2014 or early 2015 in order to align it with the policy changes. Those technical changes, which represented the main costs associated with the reforms, would be financed by reprioritizing existing resources. As to the time frame, the aim was for the revised policy to enter into effect by April 2015.

The General Assembly was requested to endorse the revisions proposed in the report.

ACABQ report. In its November report [A/69/572] on human resources management, ACABQ voiced no objection to the proposed amendments to the performance management system.

Young professionals programme

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/69/190/Add.3], pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498] and 68/252 [ibid., p. 1503], the Secretary-General summarized progress made in implementing the young professionals programme since its inception in 2011 and proposed improvements to the examination format and delivery methods.

The Secretary-General recalled that in resolution 65/247 [YUN 2010, p. 1480], the General Assembly approved the programme, which would rejuvenate the Organization by providing an influx of young talent with increased diversity and geographical representation. The programme would employ an efficient and effective examination process. The existing eligibility requirements (maximum age limit of 32) and available positions (15 per cent of the positions at the P-1 and P-2 levels in field operations financed through the regular budget and voluntary contributions only) were maintained.

The report also dealt with legacy rosters from national competitive recruitment examinations which, the report noted, were open indefinitely. As at 23 June, 84 candidates remained unplaced from the legacy rosters of those examinations, representing 31 Member States in 19 job families. The Secretariat had made some progress in reducing the legacy rosters by placing more candidates in positions, and proposed that those candidates who had been on the roster for more than seven years be removed; that would eliminate the rosters entirely by December 2018. The Secretary-General requested that the General Assembly take note of the report and approve those measures.

ACABQ report. In its November report [A/69/572] on human resources management, ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly broaden the pool of available posts and positions for successful candidates from the young professionals programme. It encouraged the Secretary-General to place successful candidates within the two-year time limit of the roster. The Committee recommended against the proposal to remove candidates from the legacy roster after seven years and to abolish those rosters in 2018.

Assessment of the system of desirable ranges

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/69/190/Add.4], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498], the Secretary-General reviewed the system of desirable ranges for staff in posts subject to geographical distribution, which had remained mostly unchanged since its adoption by resolution 42/220 A [YUN 1987, p. 1132] and which, in the Secretary-General's view, had served well). As at 30 June, only 342 persons (9.8 per cent of the 3,500 base figure) needed to be recruited from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States; that number was smaller than that of vacant geographical posts and of posts temporarily encumbered by staff without geographical status.

The Secretary-General reviewed the steps necessary for determining desirable range and representation of individual Member States and recommended two changes: updating the calculation to determine the lower limit of the desirable range, which would increase the number of Member States that were within range from 120 to 127; and updating the calculation to determine the upper limit of the desirable range, which would increase the number of Member States within range from 120 to 126. Both calculations would be updated every six months to take account of any change in the base figure or number of Member States.

The Secretary-General invited the Assembly to take note of the report, approve the recommended changes and give further guidance to the Secretariat.

ACABQ report. In its November report [A/69/572], ACABQ stated that once again, the Secretary-General had not responded adequately to the General Assembly's request for a comprehensive review of the system of desirable ranges and had not put forward any new elements that could enhance the effectiveness of the system. Until the requested comprehensive review had been completed and considered by the Assembly, ACABQ did not see merit in making the minor changes to the calculations put forward by the Secretary-General. It did not, therefore, recommend that the Assembly approve the proposed changes.

Amendments to Staff Rules

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/69/117], the Secretary-General presented the full text of amendments to the Staff Rules that he proposed to implement as at 1 January 2015. The amendments pertained to rules 3.12 (Night differential); 3.19 (Repatriation grant); 4.16 (Competitive examinations); 7.11 (Miscellaneous travel expenses); 9.8 (Termination indemnity); 10.4 (Administrative leave pending investigation and the disciplinary process); and Appendix C (Arrangements relating to military service). The report provided the rationale for those amendments.

ACABQ report. In its November report on human resources management [A/69/572], ACABQ noted that aside from several technical amendments, some of the proposed amendments were put forward to correct inconsistencies in the 100 series of staff rules stemming from past human resources reforms and/or legislative decisions. Some other amendments were proposed to ensure that the correct wording was reflected. ACABQ concurred with the Secretary-General's proposal that the Assembly take note of the amendments, taking into account the Committee's comments.

Other matters

On 23 December [A/C.5/69/SR.26], the Russian Federation introduced in the Fifth Committee a draft decision [A/C.5/69.L.9] entitled "Human resources management" which, it said, concerned one aspect of human resources management that unfortunately had not been included in the Secretary-General's reports. By the draft, the General Assembly would request the Secretary-General to withdraw a document entitled "Personal status for the purposes of United Nations entitlements", and would request him to submit a report at the Assembly's seventieth session on the implementation of resolution 58/285, on human resources management [YUN 2004, p. 1486].

The Chair of the Committee stated that action on the draft decision would be taken at a subsequent meeting.

Staff composition

Staff demographics

Reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498] and 68/252 [ibid., p. 1503] on human resources management, as well as previous resolutions, the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/69/292] containing a demographic analysis of the composition of Secretariat staff from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014. The global staff of the Secretariat totalled 41,426 as at 30 June 2014, 153 more than the previous year, comprising all categories of staff holding permanent/continuing, fixed-term and temporary contracts, recruited both internationally and locally from 188 Member States. Staff were employed in four entity groups: departments/offices, regional commissions, tribunals and field operations. Non-field operations comprised 20,178 staff members (48.7 per cent) and field operations 21,248 (51.3 per cent). The largest change in the number of staff took place in the United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali, with an increase of 826 staff.

By category, staff were distributed as follows: 24,855 General Service and related categories (60 per cent), with the largest number (6,467) at grade G-4; 12,420 Professional and higher categories (30 per cent), with the largest number (4,216) at the P-3 level; and 4,151 Field Service (10 per cent), with the largest number (2,164) at FS-4 the level. Staff were appointed under one of three appointment types: 32,235 fixed-term (78 per cent), with the largest number at the G-4 level totalling 5,827; 6,993 permanent/continuing (17 per cent); and 2,198 temporary (5 per cent). As at 30 June 2014, the percentage of female staff was 34.1 per cent, with the percentages in non-field operations being 47.8 per cent and in field operations 21 per cent. The highest level of female representation in a non-field operation entity was found in the United Nations Compensation Commission (80 per cent), while the highest percentage of females in a field operation was in the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Sahel (50 per cent). The average age for all staff as at 30 June was 43.8 years, in non-field operations 44.6 years and in field operations 43.1 years.

In order to provide analysis and trends as requested by the General Assembly, the Secretary-General proposed adjusting the reporting period to the calendar year, with a cut-off date of 15 March of the following year. He proposed that the next report, to be presented to the Assembly at its seventy-first session, cover the demographic data for the period from 1 January 2015 to 31 December 2015, with a data cut-off date of 15 March 2016.

Pursuant to a General Assembly request in resolution 67/255 [YUN 2013, p. 1498], the Secretary-General provided, also in August [A/69/292/Add.1], a demographic analysis of the engagement of gratis personnel (4,531), retired staff (3,051), and consultants and individual contractors (40,655) during the biennium 2012–2013.

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee, in its November report on human resources management [A/69/572], had no objection to the proposed change in the reporting cycle and the cut-off date for the data included in the composition report. Commenting on the number of staff at the levels of Under-Secretary-General and Assistant-Secretary-General, which at 15 October 2014 had grown to 161, or over 10 per cent more than a year previously, ACABQ expressed concern that the growth trend in senior-level positions was continuing. ACABQ stressed that greater clarity was required in terms of the functions for which government-provided personnel might be appropriate and reiterated that proper reporting lines should be established for them, so as to ensure that they acted in accordance with UN mandates. It reiterated its recommendation that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive review of the engagement of government-provided personnel.

Disciplinary matters

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/283], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/287 [YUN 2005, p. 1474], the Secretary-General presented his annual report, covering the period from 1 July 2013 to 30 June 2014, on action taken in cases of established misconduct and/or criminal behaviour, as well as disciplinary action and, where appropriate, legal action. The cases in which the Secretary-General had imposed disciplinary measures pertained to abuse of authority, harassment and discrimination; theft and misappropriation; misrepresentation and false certification; misuse of UN property or assets; misuse of ICT resources; sexual exploitation and abuse; unauthorized outside activities and conflict of interest; assault; failure to comply with financial disclosure obligations; and failure to honour private obligations. During the reporting period, 115 cases were completed. A relatively small percentage of disciplinary measures had been appealed since 1 July 2009. The Secretary-General also provided information about the status and outcome of the 38 cases before the Dispute and Appeals Tribunal from 1 July 2009 to date.

During the reporting period, 140 cases were referred to OHRM for possible disciplinary action, 35 (or 24 per cent) of which related to staff based at UN Headquarters and offices away from Headquarters, and 105 (or 76 per cent) related to field staff. Of those 140 cases, 34 related to theft and misappropriation; 18 to misrepresentation and false certification; 16 to abuse of authority/harassment/discrimination; 11 to inappropriate or disruptive behaviour; 8 to verbal and physical assault; 7 to misuse of ICT resources and computer-related misconduct; 5 to misuse of UN property or assets; 5 to unauthorized outside activities and conflict of interest; 4 to failure to honour private legal obligations; 4 to failure to comply with financial disclosure obligations; 3 to sexual exploitation and abuse; 1 to retaliation; 1 to violation of local laws; and 23 to other acts. Eleven cases involving credible allegations of criminal conduct by UN officials or experts on mission were referred to Member States.

ACABQ report. Referring to the 140 cases referred to OHRM during the reporting period 2013/2014, the Advisory Committee, in its November report on human resources management [A/69/572], said that it intended to keep the matter under review.

Ethics Office

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/332], in accordance with General Assembly resolution 60/254 [YUN 2006, p. 1633], the Secretary-General submitted the ninth annual report on the Ethics Office, covering its activities from 1 August 2013 to 31 July 2014.

The Office, which provided direct services to UN staff at all levels, received 924 requests for its services in the period under review. Highlights included responding to 476 confidential requests for ethics advice; managing the 2013 cycle of the financial disclosure programme, requiring review of 4,573 disclosure files; undertaking 152 outreach, training and education activities; administering the Secretariat's first-ever leadership dialogue; enhancing the coherent application of ethics among UN entities and advancing policy development; and receiving 55 matters relating to the Organization's protection against retaliation policy. In addition, the Office continued its work to promote an ethical organizational culture, including highlighting ethical leadership, promoting understanding about ethical obligations, conducting ethical risk assessments and developing evaluative metrics.

The Secretary-General observed that the Office had devoted significant effort to promoting a culture of ethics and ensuring that UN staff members around the world had access to ethics advice that was independent, confidential, impartial and helpful. The Office had increased its visibility in order to reach offices away from Headquarters, peacekeeping and field missions, special political missions and regional commissions. Global attention to whistle-blowing and retaliation continued.

As requested in resolution 63/250 [YUN 2008, p. 1616], the Secretary-General provided information on the activities of the Ethics Panel of the United Nations, the sole mandated mechanism to promote the coherent and consistent application of ethical standards and to consult on important system-wide matters.

During the reporting period, the Ethics Panel held 10 formal sessions. It focused on enhancing coherence and consistency in the application of ethics standards and reviewed lessons learned from the implementation of its mandates, in particular financial disclosure and conflict of interest management, protection against retaliation and ethics training. The Ethics Office and members of the Ethics Panel participated in the activities of the Ethics Network of Multilateral Organizations, which provided support to professional development, benchmarking and the exchange of ethics policies and practices within the UN system. The sixth meeting of the Network (Copenhagen, Denmark, 9–11 July) was hosted by the United Nations Office for Project Services.

ACABQ report. Commenting on the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ in November [A/69/572] recommended that the Ethics Office, in collaboration with the Office of Internal Oversight Services and OHRM, undertake additional efforts to clarify the reporting and advisory mechanisms relating to cases of alleged wrongdoing.

Staff safety and security

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 68/101 [YUN 2013, p. 1508], the Secretary-General in September [A/69/406] submitted a report on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of UN personnel during 2013 and the first six months of 2014. The report provided an update on the safety and security of UN personnel and on the efforts of the Department of Safety and Security (DSS) to implement the recommendations contained in resolution 68/101 that fell within the Department's purview.

Threats against the United Nations were of increasing concern, the Secretary-General said. The reporting period had witnessed complex attacks targeting UN personnel and premises. Security threats had become more complex, with the use of unconventional tactics, including improved explosive devices, suicide bombings and abductions. The line between criminals and hostile groups, including extremists with transnational strategies and using sophisticated tactics, was increasingly blurred. The number of countries, missions and areas characterized by those conditions, as well as the number of UN personnel involved in operations at such locations, had increased significantly.

Despite those challenges, the UN security management system enabled the delivery of critical programmes in several high-risk areas of Afghanistan, the Central African Republic, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Iraq, Libya, Mali, Somalia, South Sudan, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen.

In 2013, 1,216 UN personnel were affected by significant security incidents—incidents resulting in death, injury or abduction and other incidents such as robbery, residence break-in, aggravated sexual assault, burglary, intimidation, harassment, arrest and detention. Twenty-eight personnel lost their lives in those incidents; 18 personnel lost their lives as a result of violence (7 were killed in military hostilities, 2 died in extremist attacks and 9 were victims of crime) and 10 were killed in road traffic accidents. A total of 226 personnel were injured, 82 as a result of violence and 144 in safety-related incidents.

In 2013, 17 UN personnel were abducted. Most of the abductions and hostage-taking incidents occurred in the Sudan, Syria and Yemen.

During 2013, 314 personnel were affected by robberies, 23 by break-ins of their residences and 35 by aggravated assault; 81 personnel were subjected to acts of intimidation and there were 28 incidents of harassment. There were 18 cases of intrusion into UN premises and 14 armed attacks.

Females accounted for some 40 per cent of UN personnel and almost 36 per cent of all personnel affected by significant security incidents. Female personnel were more affected by certain types of incidents; about 52 per cent of the personnel affected by robberies and almost 100 per cent of those affected by sexual assault were female.

In 2013, 35 per cent of significant security incidents affected 406 internationally recruited personnel, while 65 per cent affected 810 locally recruited personnel. Of the 18 UN personnel killed by violence, 13 were locally recruited. In addition, incidents involving harassment, arrest and detention, and intimidation had a greater impact on locally recruited staff.

In 2013, 138 UN personnel were detained or arrested; 88 per cent of them were locally recruited and about 80 per cent were detained or arrested following traffic accidents and for alleged civil or criminal offences. In 2013, in 21 cases of arrest or detention, the United Nations was denied access to detainees and given no reasons for the arrest. The number of UN personnel detained or arrested by host country authorities remained unacceptably high, the Secretary-General said. DSS had intensified its efforts, in cooperation with host Governments, to address that issue. Efforts included improving the reporting system and proactive engagement with host government authorities.

Although staff of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) did not fall under the UN security system and were not included in the statistics contained in the report, the Secretary-General considered it important to highlight the security incidents affecting UNRWA staff because they were symptomatic of the environment in which the United Nations operated. From 1 January 2013 to 30 June 2014, 13 UNRWA staff were killed and 21 injured as a result of acts of violence, 4 were abducted, 12 reported missing and 68 detained or arrested. Most of the incidents occurred in Syria, where 10 UNRWA staff were killed, 16 injured, 2 abducted, 10 reported missing and 46 detained or arrested.

The Secretary-General also outlined measures to strengthen the UN security management system. During the reporting period, DSS senior leadership maintained dialogues with Member States authorities, and the Organization promoted collaboration in the areas of information-sharing, situational awareness, threat analysis, contingency planning and other aspects of security risk management. A critical aspect of collaboration with the host Government was the effort to address impunity. DSS worked closely with Member States to ensure that attacks against the United Nations were fully investigated.

The Secretary-General said that the United Nations continued to refine its security management system in line with the Organization's shift from a "when to leave" to "how to stay" approach; one of the main challenges was how to balance security risks and programme imperatives. At the same time, there was a need to re-examine the strategic approach towards enhancing the "duty of care" towards UN personnel.

Programme criticality

In October [A/69/530], in response to General Assembly resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439], the Secretary-General submitted a report containing the final conclusions of the High-level Working Group on Programme Criticality. According to the report, under the Programme Criticality Steering Committee, the Coordination Team continued to support UN teams in country (in mission and non-mission settings) that wished to undertake programme criticality assessments. To date, support had been provided to 15 countries based on the programme criticality framework approved by the United Nations Chief Executives Board for Coordination in 2013. Training sessions on programme criticality were carried out with UN teams at the country level and various Headquarters personnel, contributing to better knowledge of the framework and its intended use throughout the UN system. An e-learning module was also developed. In January, the Steering Committee commissioned an independent review of programme criticality, which concluded that, overall, the programme criticality framework was working as intended, and no major immediate changes to the framework were envisaged. It was expected that programme criticality would continue to be supported by the Steering Committee and the Coordination Team at the global and country levels based on demand from UN teams in country. All support would be provided on the basis of voluntary contributions and was subject to the availability of resources. The Assembly was requested to take note of the report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 70], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/133 [draft: A/69/L.33 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 69].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on the strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling all relevant resolutions on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, including its resolution 68/101 of 13 December 2013, as well as Security Council resolutions on the protection of humanitarian personnel, including resolution 2175(2014) of 29 August 2014, and relevant statements by the President of the Council,

Recalling also all Security Council resolutions and presidential statements and reports of the Secretary-General to the Council on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Reaffirming the principles, rules and relevant provisions of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, as well as all relevant treaties, and the need to further promote and ensure respect thereof,

Recalling the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto of 8 June 1977, and the obligation of parties to armed conflict to respect and ensure respect for international humanitarian law in all circumstances, and urging all such parties to comply with international humanitarian law and ensure respect for and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Deeply concerned by the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international law, in particular international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming the principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter of the United Nations or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Expressing its appreciation to those Governments which respect the internationally agreed principles on the protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, while expressing concern over the lack of respect for these principles in some areas,

Noting the fact that the number of States parties to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has reached 91, mindful of the need to promote the universality of the Convention, and welcoming the entry into force on 19 August 2010 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which expands the scope of legal protection under the Convention,

Expressing deep concern at the threats and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, and the unprecedented increase in the scale and the increasingly complex nature of the threats faced by such personnel at the field level, as they operate in increasingly high-risk environments, and noting that the majority of such incidents continue to affect locally recruited personnel,

Expressing deep concern also that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel is a factor that severely restricts the provision of assistance and protection to populations in need, and commending the commitment of the United Nations and other humanitarian personnel to stay and deliver the most critical programmes even in dangerous environments,

Stressing the need to uphold the respect and protection which the flag of the United Nations, and the nature of humanitarian work, should command and ensure, and stressing the importance of fully respecting the obligations relating to the use of vehicles and premises of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel as defined by relevant international instruments, as well as the obligations relating to distinctive emblems recognized in the Geneva Conventions,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part in humanitarian operations, often at great personal risk, especially national and locally recruited personnel,

Commending also the courage and commitment of those who take part in peace operations, including peacekeeping operations, often at great personal risk, especially national and locally recruited personnel,

Noting with concern that, despite the decrease in the number of the United Nations system personnel affected by security incidents in 2013, 1,216 persons, representing 0.8 per cent of the United Nations system personnel, were still affected by significant security incidents, with 28 personnel killed, 226 injured and 17 abducted,

Strongly condemning all attacks against humanitarian personnel, expressing profound regret at the deaths, injuries and abductions resulting from these attacks, and noting with concern that the number of attacks against humanitarian personnel in 2013 was the highest ever recorded, with at least 155 personnel killed, 171 injured and 134 abducted,

Strongly condemning also all attacks against medical personnel and humanitarian personnel engaged in medical duties, their means of transport and equipment, as well as hospitals and other medical facilities, and deploring the long-term consequences of such attacks for the population and health-care systems of the countries concerned,

Expressing profound regret at the deaths of humanitarian personnel and health-care personnel as a result of public health hazards such as the current outbreak of the Ebola virus disease, and stressing the need for a conducive environment, appropriate equipment and resilient public health systems and the urgency of preparedness,

Expressing deep concern at the deep and long-lasting impacts of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Strongly condemning acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault and all forms of violence committed in particular against women and children, and intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of property,

Affirming the need for States to ensure that perpetrators of attacks committed on their territory against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and against their premises or assets do not operate with impunity, and that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice, as provided for by national laws and obligations under international law,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter, as long as they are entitled to the protection given to civilians or civilian objects under the international law of armed conflict, as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and noting the role that the Court can play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming the need to ensure adequate levels of safety and security for United Nations personnel and associated personnel, including locally recruited staff, which constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, and mindful of the need to promote and enhance security consciousness within the organizational culture of the United Nations and a culture of accountability at all levels, as well as to continue to promote awareness of and sensitivity to national and local cultures and laws,

Gravely concerned at the high number of accidents and resulting casualties among United Nations and associated personnel, and conscious of the importance of road safety and aviation safety in ensuring the continuity of United Nations operations and preventing casualties among civilians and United Nations and associated personnel, and in this regard regretting the loss of civilian life as a result of such incidents,

Stressing that acceptance of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel by the host Governments, local authorities, local communities, populations and other parties as appropriate crucially contributes to their safety and security,

Noting the importance of reinforcing close collaboration between the United Nations and the host country on contingency planning, information exchange and risk assessment in the context of good mutual cooperation on issues relating to the security of United Nations and associated personnel,

Noting also that the effective functioning of the United Nations security management system requires, among other elements, an effective management structure, adequate and predictable resources and the timely deployment of security personnel with appropriate skills and field experience and of the equipment necessary for the performance of their duties, including vehicles and telecommunications equipment, which have an essential role in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Urges all States to make every effort to ensure the full and effective implementation of the relevant principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, and refugee law as applicable, related to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel;
3. Condemns in the strongest possible terms the alarming increase in threats to and deliberate targeting of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and the unprecedented increase in the scale and the increasingly complex nature of threats faced by such personnel, such as the disturbing trend of politically and criminally motivated attacks, including extremist attacks, against them;

4. Strongly urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of national and international humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and to respect and ensure respect for the inviolability of United Nations premises, which are essential to the continuation and successful implementation of United Nations operations;

5. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel and the delivery of supplies and equipment, in order to allow those personnel to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

6. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments;

7. Also calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

8. Further calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, and urges States parties to put in place appropriate national legislation, as necessary, to enable its effective implementation;

9. Calls upon all States, all parties involved in armed conflict and all humanitarian actors to respect the principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance;

10. Welcomes the contribution of female humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel in humanitarian and United Nations operations, expresses concern that in some cases these personnel are relatively more exposed to certain forms of crime and acts of intimidation and harassment, and strongly urges the United Nations system and Member States to take appropriate and gender-sensitive action for their safety and security;

11. Strongly condemns all threats and acts of violence against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, also condemns attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations as long as they are entitled to protection from attack under international humanitarian law, reaffirms the need to prosecute, penalize and punish those responsible for such acts, strongly urges all States to take stronger action to ensure that crimes against such personnel do not remain unpunished and are investigated fully, and affirms the need for States to ensure that perpetrators of any such acts committed on their territory do not operate with impunity, as provided by national laws and obligations under international law;

12. Stresses the importance of continued close coordination and consultation with host Governments on the functioning of the security level system and related tools, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to continue to consult with the host Governments;

13. Calls upon all States to comply fully with their obligations under international humanitarian law, including as provided by the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949, in order to respect and protect civilians, including humanitarian personnel, in territories subject to their jurisdiction;

14. Stresses the obligation, in accordance with international humanitarian law and national laws and regulations as applicable, to respect and protect medical personnel, as well as humanitarian personnel exclusively engaged in medical duties, their means of transport and equipment, as well as hospitals and other medical facilities, in all circumstances, in this regard notes the role of domestic legal frameworks and other appropriate measures in promoting the safety and protection of such personnel, and urges States to develop effective measures to prevent and address violence against such personnel;

15. Calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of the arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel, so as to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and to ensure their right to legal counsel, and urges States to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of those who have been arrested or detained in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

16. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflict to refrain from abducting, taking hostage or kidnapping humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel or detaining them in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm or requirement of concession, any abductee or detainee;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to promote full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and associated personnel, and also requests the Secretary-General to seek the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

18. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to seek the inclusion of, and that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, among others, those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of the operation, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission, host country and other related agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements, and encourages further efforts in this regard;

19. Calls attention to and reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel to respect and, where required, observe the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter;

20. Stresses the importance of ensuring that humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel are aware and respectful of national and local customs and traditions in their countries of assignment and communicate clearly their purpose and objectives to local populations in order to enhance their acceptance, thereby contributing to their safety and security, and in this regard ensure that humanitarian action is guided by humanitarian principles;

21. Urges the United Nations and other relevant humanitarian actors to include as part of their risk-management strategy the building of good relations and trust with national and local governments and the promotion of acceptance by local communities and all relevant actors with a view to enhancing safety and security;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the necessary measures to ensure that United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation are properly informed about and operate in conformity with the minimum operating security standards and relevant codes of conduct and are properly informed about the conditions under which they are called upon to operate and the standards that they are required to meet, including those contained in relevant national laws and international law, and that adequate training in security, human rights law and international humanitarian law is provided so as to enhance their security and effectiveness in accomplishing their functions, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

23. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue, in coordination with Member States, to take the necessary measures to ensure that all United Nations premises and assets, including staff residences, are compliant with the United Nations minimum operating security standards and other relevant United Nations security standards, and to continue the ongoing assessment of the United Nations premises and physical security worldwide;

24. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General to ensure that all United Nations personnel receive adequate safety and security training, stresses the need to continue to improve training so as to enhance cultural awareness and knowledge of relevant law, including international humanitarian law, prior to their deployment to the field, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

25. Also welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to provide counselling and support services to United Nations personnel affected by safety and security incidents, and emphasizes the importance of making available stress management, mental health and related services for United Nations personnel throughout the system, and encourages all humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

26. Notes with appreciation the ongoing measures taken by the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to enhance road safety, including through improved training and initiatives to promote road safety so as to reduce incidents caused by road hazards and, in particular, to reduce casualties or injuries resulting from these incidents among United Nations and associated personnel and among the civilian population in the host country, and requests the Secretary-General to continue the collection and analysis of data and to report on road incidents, including civilian casualties resulting from road accidents;

27. Welcomes the progress made towards further enhancing the security management system of the United Nations, and supports the continued implementation of the good practice to stay and deliver while focusing on effectively managing the risks to which personnel are exposed in order to enable the United Nations system to deliver the most critical programmes, even in high-risk environments;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue consistent implementation of the programme criticality framework as an operational tool allowing informed decisions on acceptable risk to United Nations personnel;

29. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to develop enabling procedures that facilitate the deployment of suitably qualified United Nations security personnel, with the aim of improving the safety and security measures of the United Nations, in order to strengthen the ability of the United Nations to deliver on its programmes, mandates and activities, including humanitarian programmes;

30. Requests the Secretary-General, inter alia through the Inter-Agency Security Management Network, to continue the increased cooperation and collaboration among United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations, including between their headquarters and field offices, in the planning and implementation of measures aimed at improving staff security, training and awareness, and calls upon all relevant United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations to support those efforts;

31. Calls upon all relevant actors to make every effort to support in their public statements a favourable environment for the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel;

32. Emphasizes the need to pay particular attention to the safety and security of locally recruited humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, who account for the large majority of casualties and who are particularly vulnerable to attacks, including in cases of kidnapping, harassment, banditry and intimidation, requests the Secretary-General to keep under review the relevant United Nations safety and security policy and to enhance the safety and security of locally recruited personnel, while maintaining operational effectiveness, and calls upon the United Nations and humanitarian organizations to ensure that their personnel are adequately consulted on, informed about and trained in the relevant security measures, plans and initiatives of their respective organizations, which should be in line with applicable national laws and international law;

33. Notes with appreciation the progress reported in implementing the recommendations of the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of United Nations Personnel and Premises Worldwide;

34. Requests the Department of Safety and Security of the Secretariat to further strengthen the security management of the United Nations, focusing on strengthening security risk management policy and tools as well as their application, increasing situational awareness and analysis capacity, strengthening policy development and promoting best practices, increasing compliance with minimum operating security standards and improving monitoring and evaluation, enhancing surge capacity for emergency response, devising effective physical security measures, developing the expertise of security professionals and strengthening support to the designated officials and the security management teams in the field, and promoting an effective and preventive security management approach that is multidimensional;

35. Welcomes the work of the Secretary-General in enhancing security collaboration with host Governments, including efforts to support United Nations designated officials with regard to collaboration with host Government authorities on staff safety and security;

36. Stresses that the effective functioning at the country level of security operations requires a unified capacity for policy, standards, coordination, communication, compliance and threat and risk assessment, and notes the benefits thereof to United Nations and associated personnel, including those achieved by the Department of Safety and Security since its establishment;

37. Welcomes the steps taken by the Secretary-General thus far and encourages further efforts to enhance coordination and cooperation, at both the headquarters and the field levels, between the United Nations and other humanitarian and non-governmental organizations on matters relating to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, with a view to addressing mutual security concerns in the field, based on the "Saving Lives Together" framework as well as other relevant national and local initiatives in this regard, and in this respect requests the Secretary-General to encourage further collaborative initiatives to address the security needs of implementing partners, including through enhanced information-sharing and, where appropriate, training, invites Member States to consider increasing support to those initiatives, and requests the Secretary-General to report on steps taken in this regard;

38. Underlines the urgent need to allocate adequate and predictable resources to the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel, through regular and extrabudgetary resources, including through the consolidated appeals process, and encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System, inter alia, with a view to reinforcing the efforts of the Department of Safety and Security to meet its mandate and responsibilities to enable the safe delivery of programmes;

39. Also underlines the need for better coordination between the United Nations and host Governments, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, on the use and deployment of essential equipment required to provide for the safety and security of United Nations personnel and associated personnel working in the delivery of humanitarian assistance by United Nations organizations;

40. Calls upon States to consider acceding to or ratifying the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations of 18 June 1998, which entered into force on 8 January 2005, and urges them to facilitate and expedite, consistent with their national laws and international obligations applicable to them, the use of communications equipment in those and other relief operations, inter alia, by limiting and, whenever possible, expeditiously lifting the restrictions placed on the use of communications equipment by United Nations and associated personnel;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its seventieth session a comprehensive and updated report on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution, including an assessment of the impact of safety and security risks on such personnel, and the development, implementation and outcomes of policies, strategies and initiatives of the United Nations system in the field of safety and security.

Investigation into the death of Dag Hammarskjöld

On 7 March [A/68/PV.75], the General Assembly included in the agenda of its sixty-eighth session the item "Investigation into the conditions and circumstances resulting in the tragic death of Dag Hammarskjöld and of the members of the party accompanying him".

By a 21 March note [A/68/800], the Secretary-General, pursuant to Assembly resolution 1759(XVII) [YUN 1962, p. 159], informed the Assembly that new evidence had come to his attention relating to the conditions and circumstances resulting in the death of Dag Hammarskjöld and of the members of his party [YUN 1961, p. 63 & 161].

In July 2012, an enabling committee chaired by Lord Lea of Crondall, and consisting of the former Secretary-General of the Commonwealth, Emeka Anyaoku, and the Archbishop Emeritus of the Church of Sweden, K. G. Hammar, set up the Commission of Jurists on the Inquiry into the Death of Dag Hammarskjöld (the "Hammarskjöld Commission") chaired by Sir Stephen Sedley (United Kingdom) and composed also of Ambassador Hans Corell (Sweden), Justice Richard Goldstone (South Africa) and Justice Wilhelmina Thomassen (The Netherlands).

The report of the Hammarskjöld Commission was made public on 9 September 2013. In successive submissions between 27 September and 20 December 2013, the Commission also made available the information it had relied on in its report. It was the Secretary-General's assessment that the documentation presented to the Commission included new evidence. In that connection, he said, it appeared that additional new evidence might exist which, for national security reasons, was and remained classified by several Governments for more than 50 years. The General Assembly might wish to encourage Member States, in the light of the passage of time, to seek to declassify any records in their possession. Given the open verdict of the 1961–1962 UN Inquiry and the possibility that the new evidence in the Secretary-General's possession might lead to a conclusive finding about the theories of the causes of the crash of Dag Hammarskjöld's plane, the Assembly might wish to consider three options: establishing an independent panel of experts to examine the new evidence, assess its probative value and make recommendations; reopening the 1961–1962 Inquiry; or establishing a new inquiry.

Annexed to the Secretary-General's note was the report of the Hammarskjöld Commission, "Report of the Commission of Inquiry on whether the evidence now available would justify the United Nations in reopening its inquiry into the death of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 1759(XVII) of 26 October 1962".

In April [A/68/800/Add.1], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that on 28 March he had received a subsequent submission from the Hammarskjöld Commission stating that the Commission was functus officio (that is, it had no longer authority because its duties had been accomplished); any further action would be a matter for the United Nations, but the former Commissioners felt obliged to pass on to the Organization any new and possibly relevant materials that might reach them. The Commissioners had accordingly made available to the Secretariat declassified material that had reached them in February from a Member State. The Secretariat would consolidate the additional new material, and any further new material it received from the Commission, with the information received in earlier submissions.

By decision 68/667 of 15 September, the General Assembly, on a request by Sweden, deferred consideration of the item and included it in the draft agenda of its sixty-ninth session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly adopted resolution 69/246 [draft: A/69/L.42 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 128].

Investigation into the conditions and circumstances resulting in the tragic death of Dag Hammarskjöld and of the members of the party accompanying him

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1759(XVII) of 26 October 1962,

Acknowledging the report of the Commission of Jurists on the Inquiry into the Death of Dag Hammarskjöld,

Considering the note by the Secretary-General with his assessment that the report of the Hammarskjöld Commission includes new evidence,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint an independent panel of experts to examine new information and to assess its probative value;

2. Encourages Member States to release any relevant records in their possession and to provide to the Secretary-General relevant information related to the death of Dag Hammarskjöld and of the members of the party accompanying him;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the progress made.

Other staff matters

Multilingualism

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/69/282], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 67/292 [YUN 2013, p. 1513], the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the Assembly's resolutions on multilingualism, reviewing the activities undertaken to promote multilingualism throughout the various activities of the Secretariat since his 2012 report [YUN 2012, p. 1491].

The report noted that the diversity of individuals working for the United Nations itself had served to promote multilingualism. The UN career portal was fully bilingual in English and French. Peacekeeping missions continued to promote multilingualism and conduct public information outreach in several languages, including through radio broadcasts. Virtually all UN entities—from the Department of Political Affairs and the Office for Disarmament Affairs to the Office of Legal Affairs—had promoted multilingualism. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs had made its information products available in official languages in over 50 countries. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights had collected translations of the 1949 Universal Declaration of Human Rights [YUN 1948–1949, p. 535] in a record 437 languages. A review of 272 websites across the Secretariat, including regional commissions and 53 United Nations information centres (UNICs), found a high degree of adherence to multilingualism. The Department of Public Information (DPI) offered UN publications for sale in all official languages. During the reporting period, 45 contracts were signed for individual UN publications. Translation agreements led to 11 additional language editions of many flagship publications in Arabic, Bahasa Indonesia, Bengali, Chinese, French, Greek, Japanese, Korean, Latvian, Russian and Turkish. Licensing agreements increased the Organization's visibility worldwide by generating some 19,000 additional printed and over 18,000 electronic pages. DPI also increased the number of language versions of flagship publications offered on its e-commerce website and through local distributors. The network of 63 UNICs epitomized the spirit of multilingualism, communicating in English and in local languages. In addition to working in five of the six official languages, UNICs produced print and multimedia products and promotional materials in 40 languages in 2013, also maintaining websites in 30 local languages. UNICs had expanded their use of websites and social media tools, and continued to engage audiences in local languages through traditional media, such as radio and television.

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library and the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG) Library were digitizing UN official documents in all official languages. The United Nations Bibliographic Information System thesaurus used for the cataloguing and retrieval of UN official documents was maintained in all official languages. In conclusion, the Secretary-General said that the United Nations continued to improve and seek creative ways to increase its communication with the peoples of the world in their own languages.

In resolution 69/96 B of 5 December (see p. 738), the General Assembly underlined the responsibility of the Secretariat in mainstreaming multilingualism into all its communication and information activities, within existing resources on an equitable basis. The Assembly called on DPI to continue working with the Coordinator for Multilingualism on best practices throughout the Secretariat to fulfil that responsibility, and requested the Secretary-General to report on such best practices and their implementation in his upcoming report to the Committee on Information.

By decision 69/554 of 29 December, the Assembly retained the agenda item on multilingualism for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

Protection from sexual exploitation and abuse

Report of Secretary-General. In February [A/68/756], in accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/306 [YUN 2003, p. 1237], the Secretary-General provided data on allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse in the UN system for 2013, as well as information on actions taken to prevent and address sexual exploitation and abuse by UN personnel.

Ninety-six allegations were received for the 2013 reporting period, 66 of which were reported in peacekeeping operations and none in special political missions. Allegations were received from 42 entities. Six entities, including peacekeeping operations, reported receiving one or more allegations, while 36 received none.

Allegations reported against UN staff and related personnel other than those deployed in peacekeeping operations and special political missions numbered 30. At the end of the reporting period, 19 (or 63 per cent) allegations were under investigation and 11 (37 per cent) had been closed because they were found not to be substantiated or lacking sufficient supporting evidence. Investigations into 19 allegations received in 2012 continued; of those, ten were concluded, six were found to be unsubstantiated and four were further reviewed, found to be substantiated and subsequently closed. Investigations into the remaining nine allegations were either continuing or the investigation report was under review.

Of the 66 allegations reported in nine peacekeeping operations, 37 involved members of military contingents or UN military observers, 21 involved staff members, contractors or United Nations Volunteers, 7 involved UN police officers or members of formed police units and one involved a person of a yet unidentified category. The majority (53, or 80 per cent) of the allegations were received from four peacekeeping missions: the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, with 23 allegations; the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, with 17 allegations; the United Nations Mission in Liberia, with 7 allegations; and the United Nations Mission in South Sudan, with 6 allegations. The remaining 13 allegations were from the United Nations Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (5); the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (4); the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (2); the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (1) and the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (1). Nine of the 66 allegations had been substantiated and 13 were reported without sufficient information on the number of potential adult or minor victims.

Responses from Member States on referrals for action increased in 2013, with an overall response rate of 91 per cent. The enhanced level of follow-up and communication between Member States and the Organization had led to a number of cases being closed, as well as to a reduction in the number of pending investigations from previous periods. According to data compiled by the Secretariat on the status of completed investigations received between 2010 and 2012, 69 allegations were substantiated, while for 12 an investigation was pending. Of the 69 allegations, 40 involved sexual abuse. In 66 per cent of instances, information was deemed insufficient to launch an investigation or allegations were found to be unsubstantiated.

The Secretary-General also reviewed activities undertaken to implement the programme of action for a strengthened accountability and governance framework. A risk management framework for sexual exploitation and abuse was developed, along with a draft action plan, for application in field missions. Field mission capacity to conduct investigations was enhanced through training for security and investigative personnel. A team of experts was established to identify risk factors that could undermine implementation of the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy. Between June and August 2013, the team visited the four field missions most affected by allegations. It identified factors that posed a challenge to the zero-tolerance policy, including post-conflict and post-disaster situations which resulted in degrading conditions for women; poverty; differences in cultural norms; improvements in security providing more opportunities for interaction; and reluctance to report given possible money exchanges to silence complainants. The team's recommendations included enhanced mandatory training; outreach to communities and strengthening partnerships with civil society; regular risk assessment for prevention; engagement of mission leadership; strengthening investigations; and enhancing conditions of welfare and recreation.

The Secretariat continued to follow-up with Member States on results of investigations or disciplinary processes by Member States. Two database interface projects were completed in 2013 to ensure the screening of field mission personnel against records of prior misconduct. The Secretary-General continued to require that field missions report allegations that might involve criminal conduct to Headquarters and that they cooperate with the host State in carrying out investigations. All field missions conducted systematic induction training that addressed misconduct, including sexual exploitation and abuse. Field missions continued to implement the victim assistance strategy.

The Secretary-General remained committed to ensuring that all reported allegations for which there was sufficient information to allow for an investigation to be initiated were investigated fully and promptly. Should allegations be substantiated, he would continue to take measures within his authority and request that Member States also ensure that those responsible were held accountable.

In October 2013 the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse merged with the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Task Force on Accountability to Affected Populations to form a task team on creating a system-wide culture of accountability.

ACABQ report. In a May report [A/68/782] on cross-cutting issues related to peacekeeping operations, the Advisory Committee said that it looked forward to receiving in the next report the Secretary-General's proposals on the findings of the panel of experts, trusting that he would propose steps to improve the risk management framework and to ensure stricter enforcement of standards ACABQ looked forward to reviewing the details of the new accountability framework and trusted that it would include steps to give renewed impetus to the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy.

Conditions of service for judges

By decision 69/553 A (section D) of 29 December, the General Assembly deferred until its seventy-first (2016) session consideration of five documents pertaining to the item "Conditions of service for officials other than Secretariat officials: judges": a 2013 report of the Secretary-General [YUN 2013, p. 1497] and the related ACABQ report [ibid.]; a 2011 report of the Secretary-General [YUN 2011, p. 1434] and the related ACABQ report [YUN 2012, p. 1483]; and a letter of 1 February 2012 from the President of the International Court of Justice to the President of the General Assembly [YUN 2012, p. 1482].

Travel-related matters

Report of Secretary-General. In December [A/69/643 & Corr.1], pursuant to a series of General Assembly resolutions and decisions, the latest of which were resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439] and decision 57/589 [YUN 2003, p. 1458], the Secretary-General presented a report on standards of accommodation for air travel for the two-year period ended 30 June 2014 and comparative statistics for the two-year period ended 30 June 2012, as well as trend analyses for the past 10 years. The report also dealt with the first-class travel of delegations and of the President of the General Assembly; exceptions for travel-class update authorized by the Secretary-General; exceptions authorized due to arduous journeys; travel authorized by the President of the General Assembly; and exceptions for some UN agencies, offices and programmes.

Reviewing the implementation of the 2013 recommendations of OIOS [YUN 2013, p. 1518] on the comprehensive audit of air travel activities and related practices, the report noted that the Department of Management had implemented the recommendations to the extent possible. Monitoring of compliance with the advance purchase requirement for all air travel had been strengthened. Departments, offices and peacekeeping missions were required to submit quarterly reports on their compliance to the Office of Central Support Service.

Progress had also been made in moving towards a more global approach to travel management. UN Headquarters and UNOG had worked with a global airline alliance to allow the respective offices to utilize each other's local airline discounts, thereby extending discounts on 13 air carriers for travel issued at the two UN duty stations with the largest travel volume. Both UN Headquarters and UNOG had made progress in obtaining discounts for travel originating at locations other than New York and Geneva. As suggested by OIOS, a dashboard that consolidated travel agency reporting and provided up-to-date data on all travel ticketed at UN Headquarters had been implemented; such reports provided management information on volume and spending for the current month and year-to-date periods and trend analysis through the use of historical benchmarks.

In line with the OIOS recommendation, the Department of Management augmented its practice of concurrent auditing of all airline tickets issued at UN Headquarters by introducing a pre-trip auditing tool that automated parts of the approval process. As a result of the changes, the concurrent review auditing concentrated on higher-priced tickets and ensured that lower-priced options were explored.

Lump-sum option

Report of Secretary-General. In his December report on standard accommodation for air travel [A/69/643 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 67/254 A [YUN 2013, p. 1439], provided an analysis of the impact of the implementation of the Assembly's decision that he revise, as an interim measure pending the outcome of the review to be concluded in 2015, the provision for determining the travel-related lump-sum payment to 70 per cent of the least restrictive economy class fare. He reported that a new administrative instruction on official travel [ST/AI/2013/3] was issued to implement the Assembly's decisions on the standards of accommodation of air travel. The instruction included a revised methodology for calculating the lump-sum travel on home leave, family visit and education grant travel from 75 per cent of the full economy class fare to 70 per cent of the least restrictive economy class base fare, excluding taxes and surcharges, by the least costly scheduled air carrier. The routing for lump-sum calculation was now based on the most economical rather than on the most direct route.

At Headquarters, a 5 per cent decrease in the lump-sum entitlement had resulted in a minimum savings of 6.7 per cent. At the same time, no significant drop was observed in the selection of lump-sum travel entitlement compared with the provision of tickets, and its acceptance remained at approximately 93 per cent. As a result of the new policy, lump-sum amounts granted to UNOG staff decreased by 38 per cent. While the utilization rate had declined from 97 to 90 per cent, most of the UNOG staff continued to opt for the lump-sum. The United Nations Office at Vienna reported an average decrease of 9 per cent in lump-sum payments between 2012 and 2014, while there was a significant increase in the number of staff applying for travel-related services.

The lump-sum option reduced the administrative workload, thereby saving on staff costs. In order for the Organization to continue to benefit from that option, the amount needed to remain attractive enough for the vast majority of staff to opt for it in lieu of issuance of air tickets, while at the same time remaining cost-effective. As the change to the lump-sum option was introduced just over a year ago, the Secretary-General recommended maintaining the lump-sum provision at 70 per cent of the least restrictive economy class fare until the resumed seventieth (2016) Assembly session, when a proposal based on the additional experience gained would be submitted.

Administration of justice

Reports of Secretary-General. In July [A/69/126], the Secretary-General submitted his sixth report covering the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, which delivered workplace informal conflict resolution services to the Secretariat, the funds and programmes—UNICEF, United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS), UN-Women—and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). The report, covering activities carried out in 2013, focused on Secretariat-specific activities, including dispute resolution services offered to staff, initiatives to promote greater conflict competence among staff and managers, and observations on systemic issues. Information on the activities undertaken by the funds and programmes and by UNHCR was provided in separate annual reports.

The Office was headquartered in New York and had seven regional offices and a mediation service. In 2013, the Office opened 2,079 cases; 1,605 originated in the Secretariat, 340 in the funds and programmes and 134 in UNHCR. The categories “job and career” and “evaluative relationships” (the relationship between a supervisor and a supervisee) accounted for more than half of such cases. The mediation service opened 73 cases, including group cases. Most mediation cases were resolved without any financial component in their settlement.

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/254 [YUN 2013, p. 1521], the Secretary-General in August [A/69/227] submitted a report on the administration of justice at the United Nations, providing statistics and observations on the functioning of the system for 2013.

The Secretary-General noted that the system of justice served approximately 74,000 staff members in the Secretariat and the separately administered funds and programmes. The formal system had two tribunals: the United Nations Dispute Tribunal as the first and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal as the second instance, which were composed of independent judges and supported by Registries in Geneva, Nairobi and New York. The Office of Administration of Justice administered the elements of the formal system, providing substantive support to the Tribunals through the Registries; legal assistance and representation to staff members through the Office of Staff Legal Assistance; and assistance to the Internal Justice Council.

The mandatory first step in the formal system in non-disciplinary matters was management evaluation. The Management Evaluation Unit of the Department of Management at Headquarters or the respective entity performing that function in the funds and programmes conducted a first review of a contested decision—that step was designed to give management a chance to correct any improper decision or to provide remedy in cases where the decision had been flawed, reducing the number of cases that proceeded to the Dispute Tribunal.

The majority of cases continued to relate to non-selection, non-promotion and other appointments-related decisions, and to separation from service. Efforts to settle cases in the formal system at the management evaluation stage and before the Dispute Tribunal prior to a judgement on the merits continued, with notable success in terms of the number of cases considered.

The Management Evaluation Unit received 933 requests for management evaluation, many of which reflected problems with performance management issues. The two largest groups of requests continued to relate to the administrative decisions on non-selection and non-promotion (226 requests or 24.2 per cent) and separation from service (200 requests of 21.4 per cent). Only 2.6 per cent of those requests were settled; 23.6 per cent were found moot, and 63.8 per cent were not receivable or the decision was upheld.

Cases continued to be resolved within the formal system without the need for a final judgement on the merits. Some 241 cases were resolved at the management evaluation stage in the Secretariat and separately administered funds and programmes. Some 55 cases before the Dispute Tribunal were withdrawn, with settlement discussions initiated by the counsel for the parties or, in 26 cases, following judicial intervention or case management by the judges of the Dispute Tribunal.

The separately administered funds and programmes—UNDP, UNFPA, UNHCR, UNICEF and the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS)—received 122 requests for management evaluation in 2013.

In 2013, the Dispute Tribunal received 289 new cases and disposed of 325. As at 31 December 2013, 226 cases were pending, including one case from the old system. In 2013, the Tribunal rendered 181 judgements, issued 775 orders and held 218 court sessions. Cases received in 2013 fell into six main categories: appointment-related matters (non-selection, non-promotion and other), 142 cases; separation from service (non-renewal and other separation matters), 59 cases; benefits and entitlements, 36 cases; disciplinary cases, 6; classification, 2 cases; and other, 44 cases.

The Secretary-General reported that on 11 June 2013, a permanent courtroom was inaugurated in Nairobi and on 11 March 2014, a permanent courtroom was inaugurated in Geneva. Work on the construction of a new courtroom in New York had been completed, to be inaugurated in 2014.

The Appeals Tribunal held three sessions in 2013: 18–28 March, 17–28 June, 7–18 October. The Tribunal received 125 new cases and disposed of 137. As at 31 December, it had 110 cases pending. During the year, it rendered 115 judgements, issued 47 orders and held 5 oral hearings. The Tribunal also rendered 19 judgements on applications for revision, interpretation and correction, disposing of 19 applications. An additional application for interpretation was disposed of by an order. The Tribunal also considered seven cross-appeals, which it disposed of in the respective judgements. The Tribunal issued three judgements on appeals of decisions taken by the Standing Committee, acting on behalf of the Pension Board; one was granted in part and two were remanded to the Standing Committee.

The Office of Staff Legal Assistance worked to ensure that staff members received independent and professional legal advice and representation. The Office served approximately 74,000 staff members. In 2013, the Office received 762 new cases and closed or resolved 781, including cases carried over from previous years. As at 31 December, there were 214 cases pending. The single largest client group of the Office was staff at peacekeeping missions. The bulk of the written submissions of the Office on behalf of staff members related to management evaluation.

The funding for the staffing of the Office through the regular budget had not changed since its inception in 2009. By resolution 68/254 [YUN 2013, p. 1521], the General Assembly had decided to implement, on an experimental basis, throughout 2015, a voluntary payroll deduction from staff in order to supplement the funding of the Office.

Under resource requirements, the Secretary-General listed a proposed extension of three ad litem judges of the Dispute Tribunal from 1 January to 31 December 2015; a proposed Legal Officer at the P-3 level in the United Nations Appeals Tribunal Registry; and a revised proposal for conducting an interim independent assessment of the system of administration of justice.

Annexes to the report included the revised proposal for conducting an interim independent assessment of the system of administration of justice (Annex I); a proposed amendment to article 3 of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal relating to qualifications of judges (Annex IV); privileges and immunities of the judges of the Tribunals (Annex V); and proposed mechanism for addressing potential complaints under the code of conduct for the judges of the Tribunals (Annex VII).

Report of Internal Justice Council. In a report issued in August [A/69/205], the Internal Justice Council discussed, among others, the General Assembly request concerning interim judgements and orders. Summarizing its recommendations to the Assembly, the Council noted that the Assembly was expected to approve the establishment of an independent review panel to conduct an interim assessment of the internal justice system. Concerning the Tribunals, the Council recommended that the Assembly ensure that the planned improvements to the search engine on the jurisprudence of the Tribunals become operational, and that the Assembly encourage the Tribunals to consider longer-term measures that could help speed up the disposition of cases. Regarding self-represented litigants, the Council recommended that the Assembly encourage the re-establishment of a volunteer system with incentives to attract qualified staff to assist applicants and appellants in the system of administration of justice.

ACABQ report. Commenting in October [A/69/519] on the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ voiced no objections to the proposed extension of the three ad litem judges of the Dispute Tribunal; recommended against adding a P-3 post in the Appeals Tribunal; saw the interim independent assessment of the system of administration of justice as desirable; recommended that the position of Secretary of the panel carrying out the assessment be at the P-5 level; expected that the revised terms of reference for the Office of the Ombudsman and Mediation Services would be promulgated by year's end; requested the Secretary-General to provide information on the reasons for staff opting out of voluntary contributions to the Office of Staff Legal Assistance; and reiterated the importance of addressing the accountability of individuals where violations of the rules and procedures of the Organization had led to financial loss. Subject to its comments and recommendations, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

Letter of General Assembly President. On 29 October [A/C.5/69/10], the President of the General Assembly transmitted to the Chair of the Fifth Committee a letter from the Chair of the Sixth (Legal) Committee on the administration of justice at the United Nations.

On 10 December (decision 69/413), the Assembly appointed Ms. Deborah Thomas-Felix (Trinidad and Tobago) as a judge of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal for a term of office beginning on 10 December 2014 and ending on 30 June 2019 to fill the vacancy occurring on the resignation of Mr. Jean Courtial.

On 18 December (decision 69/414), the Assembly decided to extend the terms of office of Ms. Alessandra Greceanu and Ms. Nkemdilim Amelia Izuako as ad litem judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal for a term of office beginning on 1 January 2015 and expiring on 31 December 2015. At the same meeting, the Assembly appointed Mr. Rowan Downing (Australia) as an ad litem judge of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal for a term of office beginning on 1 January 2015 and ending on 31 December 2015.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the Assembly decided that the item on the appointment of ad litem judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, and the item on the appointment of the judges of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/664], adopted resolution 69/203 without vote [agenda item 144].

Administration of justice at the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling section XI of its resolution 55/258 of 14 June 2001, its resolutions 57/307 of 15 April 2003, 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 59/283 of 13 April 2005, 61/261 of 4 April 2007, 62/228 of 22 December 2007, 63/253 of 24 December 2008, 64/233 of 22 December 2009, 65/251 of 24 December 2010, 66/237 of 24 December 2011, 67/241 of 24 December 2012 and 68/254 of 27 December 2013,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on administration of justice at the United Nations and on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, the report of the Internal Justice Council on administration of justice at the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, as well as the letter dated 29 October 2014 from the President of the General Assembly to the Chair of the Fifth Committee,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on administration of justice at the United Nations and on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

I

System of administration of justice

3. Emphasizes the importance of the principle of judicial independence in the system of administration of justice;
4. Stresses the importance of ensuring access for all staff members to the system of administration of justice, regardless of their duty station;
5. Reaffirms its decision, contained in paragraph 4 of its resolution 61/261, to establish a new, independent, transparent, professionalized, adequately resourced and decentralized system of administration of justice consistent with the relevant rules of international law and the principles of the rule of law and due process to ensure respect for the rights and obligations of staff members and the accountability of managers and staff members alike;
6. Notes with appreciation the achievements of the system of administration of justice since its inception regarding both the disposal of the backlog and the addressing of new cases, as well as the increased use of informal resolution mechanisms;
7. Acknowledges the evolving nature of the system of administration of justice and the need to carefully monitor its implementation to ensure that it remains within the parameters set out by the General Assembly;
8. Decides to extend the three ad litem judge positions for one year, from 1 January to 31 December 2015;
9. Stresses the importance of continuous consultation among relevant stakeholders in fostering a dialogue-oriented culture across the Organization;

10. Reaffirms its decision, contained in paragraph 12 of its resolution 68/254, that the interim independent assessment shall examine the system of administration of justice in all its aspects, with particular attention to the formal system and its relation with the informal system, including an analysis of whether the aims and objectives of the system set out in resolution 61/261 are being achieved in an efficient and cost-effective manner;

11. Decides that the panel shall be appointed from a pool of experts drawn from all regional groups and judicial systems, selected to ensure the independent nature of the assessment, taking into account geographical representation and gender balance, and that it shall have a broad mix of expertise, comprising members with knowledge of internal United Nations processes and United Nations intergovernmental legislation, as well as judicial experience, knowledge of internal labour dispute mechanisms and knowledge of different legal and justice systems, including expertise in employment and/or human rights law;

12. Also decides that the objective of the interim assessment is the improvement of the current system and that the assessment should include consideration of, inter alia, elements set out in annex II to the report of the Secretary-General and in the letter from the Chair of the Sixth Committee and any other significant issues relevant to the assessment, such as the role of stakeholders in the system of administration of justice in the preparation of relevant proposals;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the recommendations of the panel of experts, together with its final report and his comments, for consideration by the General Assembly at the main part of its seventy-first session;

II

Informal system

14. Recognizes that the informal system of administration of justice is an efficient and effective option for staff who seek redress of grievances and for managers to participate in;

15. Reaffirms that the informal resolution of conflict is a crucial element of the system of administration of justice, emphasizes that all possible use should be made of the informal system in order to avoid unnecessary litigation, without prejudice to the basic right of staff members to access the formal system of justice, and encourages recourse to the informal resolution of disputes;

16. Welcomes the outreach activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services to encourage informal dispute resolution;

17. Also welcomes the recommendations to address systemic and cross-cutting issues contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on progress made in the implementation of those recommendations in his next report;

18. Requests that information on the number and nature of cases from non-staff personnel continue to be clearly set out in future reports on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services;

19. Recalls paragraph 49 of the report of the Advisory Committee and paragraph 23 of its resolution 68/254, and requests the Secretary-General to provide, in his next report on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, data and other relevant information on outreach activities, focusing on conflict resolution, systemic issues and conflict competence, as well as on promotion of the benefits of informal resolution;

20. Also recalls paragraph 32 of the report of the Advisory Committee, regrets that the Secretary-General has not fulfilled the request to ensure that the revised terms of reference and guidelines for the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services are promulgated, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to do so by the end of December 2014 at the latest;

21. Recognizes that in-person access to the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services is a challenge for staff in the field, including for those in special political missions;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen performance management skills among managers, including by enriching training programmes for conflict competence;

23. Recognizes the importance of both staff and managers understanding and adopting conflict competency skills in order to prevent conflicts, cope with potential or actual conflicts and maintain resilience, and in this regard notes with appreciation the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services to promote conflict competence at all levels of the Organization;

24. Reiterates that sound performance management can greatly contribute to avoiding conflict in the workplace, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to promote collaboration among all relevant stakeholders towards the full implementation of a credible, fair and consistent performance management system;

III

Formal system

25. Recognizes the ongoing positive contribution of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance to the system of administration of justice;

26. Also recognizes the importance of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance as a filter in the system of administration of justice, and encourages the Office to continue to advise staff on the merits of their cases, especially when giving summary or preventive legal advice;

27. Recalls the emphasis placed by the General Assembly on the resolution of disputes, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the practice of proactive case management by the judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal in the promotion and successful settlement of disputes within the formal system in his next report;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to track the data on the number of cases received by the Management Evaluation Unit and the Dispute Tribunal in order to identify any emerging trends and to include his observations on those statistics in future reports;

29. Reaffirms the need for the Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal to have at their disposal functional courtrooms equipped with adequate facilities;

30. Welcomes the progress made in the implementation of the voluntary supplemental funding mechanism with respect to additional resources for the Office of Staff Legal Assistance;

31. Stresses the need to explore further means to raise awareness among staff of the importance of financial contributions to the Office of Staff Legal Assistance;

32. Recalls paragraph 35 of its resolution 68/254, and requests the Secretary-General to implement incentives for staff not to opt out and to report thereon to the General Assembly in his next report;

33. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to collect and examine data relating to staff contributions to the Office of Staff Legal Assistance and to report thereon to the General Assembly in his next report;

34. Stresses the importance of the dissemination of the jurisprudence of the Tribunals, including through improvement to the search engine;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that a lessons-learned guide on performance management based on the jurisprudence of the Tribunals is completed before the main part of the seventieth session of the General Assembly and that it is shared with managers across the Organization;

36. Reaffirms that, in accordance with paragraph 25 of its resolution 68/254, paragraph 5 of its resolution 67/241 and paragraph 28 of its resolution 63/253, the Dispute Tribunal and the Appeals Tribunal shall not have any powers beyond those conferred under their respective statutes;

37. Also reaffirms that recourse to general principles of law and the Charter of the United Nations by the Tribunals is to take place within the context of and consistent with their statutes and the relevant General Assembly resolutions, regulations, rules and administrative issuances;

38. Decides to amend article 10, paragraph 5, of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal and article 9, paragraph 1, of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal, by adding the word “only” between the words “may” and “order”, and to amend article 10, paragraph 5 (b), of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal and article 9, paragraph 1 (b), of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal, by adding the words “for harm, supported by evidence” after the word “compensation”;

39. Also decides to amend article 11, paragraph 3, of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal by inserting the words “and orders” after the word “judgements” and by adding, at the end of the paragraph, a sentence reading “Case management orders or directives shall be executable immediately.”, and to amend article 7, paragraph 5, of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal by inserting the words “or order” after the word “judgement”;

40. Emphasizes that the amendments to article 11, paragraph 3, of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal shall not affect the provisions of article 2, paragraph 2, and article 10, paragraph 2, of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly at the main part of its seventieth session a report on the implementation of the amendment to article 11, paragraph 3, of the statute of the Dispute Tribunal and article 7, paragraph 5, of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal, including with respect to the administrative implications, any implications for the timely disposal of these cases, the ultimate disposition of appeals of orders, if any, and any costs saved by reason of stays pending such appeals;

42. Decides to approve the amendments to article 3 of the statute of the Appeals Tribunal proposed in annex IV to the report of the Secretary-General, with the following modifications:

(a) Replace the second sentence of article 3, paragraph 3 (b), as follows: “Relevant academic experience, when combined with practical experience in arbitration or the equivalent, may be taken into account towards 5 of the qualifying 15 years.”;

(b) Delete the third sentence of article 3, paragraph 3 (b);

(c) Delete the following words of article 3, paragraph 3 (c), “and, on appointment, be in a state of health appropriate for effective service during the entirety of the proposed term of appointment”;

43. Requests the Secretary-General to review the issue of harmonization of the privileges and immunities of the judges and to submit a proposal to the General Assembly in his next report on this item;

44. Stresses the need to ensure that all individuals acting as legal representatives appearing before the Dispute Tribunal and Appeals Tribunal are subject to the same standards of professional conduct, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly in his next report a single code of conduct for all legal representatives, without prejudice to other lines of disciplinary authority;

45. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to develop incentives for staff and management, including through training opportunities, to enable and encourage staff to continue to participate as volunteers in the work of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance;

IV

Other issues

46. Notes the proposal of the Secretary-General of a mechanism for addressing complaints under the code of conduct of judges, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, in his next report, a refined proposal with regard to the scope of application and the title of the mechanism;

47. Stresses that the Internal Justice Council can help to ensure independence, professionalism and accountability in the system of administration of justice, and requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Council with including the views of both the Dispute Tribunal and the Appeals Tribunal in its reports;

48. Recalls paragraph 39 of the report of the Advisory Committee and paragraph 8 of its resolution 61/261, and requests the Secretary-General to present, in his next report, proposals with reference to the accountability of all individuals where violations of the rules and procedures of the Organization have led to financial loss;

49. Invites the Sixth Committee to consider the legal aspects of the report to be submitted by the Secretary-General, without prejudice to the role of the Fifth Committee as the Main Committee entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

50. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the item on the administration of justice at the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

As at 31 December 2014, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) recorded 122,759 active participants compared to 120,294 at the end of 2013. The number of member organizations remained unchanged at 23.

Periodic benefits increased to 72,367. The distribution of benefits was as follows: 26,217 full retirement benefits; 15,746 early retirement benefits; 7,673 deferred retirement benefits; 11,233 widow and 923 widower benefits; 9,124 child benefits; 1,410 disability benefits; and 41 secondary dependent benefits.

Contributions received from active participants and member organizations were slightly less, by $158 million or 6.9 per cent, than the benefit payments made of $2.4 billion. The gap between contributions and benefit payments, however, continued to represent a very small portion of total assets (0.3 per cent). The principal of the Fund continued to grow. Income (contributions plus investment income) considerably exceeded benefit payments. During 2014, the Fund earned an approximate 3.21 per cent return.

The Fund continued to be in a strong financial position. Compared to the 3.5 per cent real return objective, long-term investment performance was in line with expectations. In 2014, the Fund carried out its third comprehensive Asset Liability Management study, which provided additional confirmation of the Fund's sound actuarial valuation position and favourable funded status.

The market value of the Fund's assets was $52,280 million as at 31 December 2014, which represented a real rate of return of 2.4 per cent. Through the management and re-balancing of the assets to maintain its long-term investment objectives, the Fund out-performed the policy benchmark in three, seven and ten year periods. The management of the Fund's investments continued to focus on balancing the risk and reward expectations with broad global diversification. As at 31 December 2014, the Fund had investments in 39 countries, 7 international institutions and 23 currencies.

The Fund's actuarial valuation completed as of 31 December 2013 revealed a deficit, amounting to -0.72 per cent of pensionable remuneration, which meant that the theoretical contribution rate required to achieve balance as of 31 December 2013 was 24.42 per cent of pensionable remuneration, compared to the actual contribution rate of 23.70 per cent; those results showed a reverse of the downward trend since 2001 and a significant long-term development considering the size and maturity of the Fund.

The Fund strengthened its internal control framework. The Fund's first Statement of Internal Control (sic) accompanied its financial statements for the year 2013. During 2014, the Fund's management introduced refinements to its Enterprise-wide Risk Management Framework, including the approval of the Internal Control Policy and updates to the Enterprise-wide Risk Management Framework Methodology.

UNJSPB Audit Committee met three times during the year, making recommendations to the Board on the preparation of financial rules for the Fund, expanding sic and the relationship with internal and external auditors. The Assets and Liabilities Monitoring Committee met twice during the year, providing analysis, advice and recommendations to the Board.

UNJSPB held its sixty-first session (Rome, 10–18 July) [A/69/9], addressing actuarial matters, the management of the Fund's investments, the Fund's strategic framework for 2016–2017, the performance report on the strategic framework indicators for 2012–2013, possible changes in the Fund's Regulations and Administrative Rules and other matters. Annexed to the Board's report was the report of the Board of Auditors on the financial statements of the Fund for the year ended 31 December 2013, which also included the Board of Auditors' recommendations.

By resolution 68/247 B (section VIII) of 9 April (see above), the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report [A/68/753] on proposed terms of reference for the representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the Pension Fund, and the related ACABQ report [A/68/805], established the post of full-time representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of the assets of the Pension Fund at the Assistant Secretary-General level. The terms of reference of the post were annexed to the resolution.

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/C.5/69/2], the Secretary-General reported on the investments of the Pension Fund and on measures undertaken to increase the diversification of the Fund, providing information on the management of the investments during the fiscal biennium from 1 April 2012 to 31 March 2014. During the fiscal biennium, the Fund had an annualized return of 10.1 per cent. The total investment return was 8.1 per cent for the fiscal year ended 31 March 2013 and 12.1 per cent for the fiscal year ended 31 March 2014.

As at 31 March 2014, the Fund held direct securities investments in 39 countries and 23 currencies, along with indirect country investments through international institutions and externally managed funds. In terms of geographical diversification, the proportion of the total Fund invested in North America increased to 50.5 per cent in March 2014, compared to March 2012. Investments in Europe decreased to 24.1 per cent, while in Asia and the Pacific the proportion of investments decreased to 14.9 per cent. The rest of the portfolio was invested with international institutions. The equities portfolio was directly invested in 35 countries and 4 supranational and regional institutions as at 31 March 2014. The fixed-income portfolio was directly invested in 28 countries, plus 4 supranational and regional institutions. In terms of currency diversification, the equities portfolio invested in 23 different currencies through direct investments, 55.4 per cent of which were in United States dollars and 44.5 per cent in non-United States dollar currencies. Further diversification opportunities in emerging markets were being carefully reviewed while considering the four investment criteria: safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility.

ACABQ report. In October [A/69/528], the Advisory Committee commented on the reports of the Pension Board and of the Secretary-General. It recommended approval of the Board's proposals, taking into account the Committee's observations and recommendations. The Committee welcomed the appointment of a full-time representative of the Secretary-General for the investment of UNJSPF assets. It had no objections to the Secretary-General's proposed appointments to the Investment Committee and to the proposed amendment of an addition to article 14(b) of the regulations of the Fund to clarify the mandate of the Board of Auditors in relation to the Fund and to establish the terms of reference for the Fund's annual audits.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/69/637], adopted resolution 69/113 without vote [agenda item 140].

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 67/240 of 24 December 2012, section VII of its resolution 68/247 A of 27 December 2013 and section VIII of its resolution 68/247 B of 9 April 2014,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2014, including the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the year ended 31 December 2013, the audit opinion and report of the Board of Auditors thereon, the information provided on the internal audits of the Fund and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and of the Audit Committee, the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund and measures taken to increase the diversification of the Fund and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2014, in particular the actions taken by the Board as set out in chapter II.B of the report;

2. Endorses the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

Actuarial matters

3. Emphasizes the importance of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund meeting its target annual real rate of return of 3.5 per cent over the long term;

4. Takes note of the results of the actuarial valuation of the Fund, which revealed a deficit of 0.72 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 2013, which was a significant improvement over the deficit of 1.87 per cent of pensionable remuneration revealed by the prior actuarial valuation as at 31 December 2011;

5. Welcomes the improvement in the actuarial position of the Fund, which represents a reversal of the downward trend observed since 1999, and in this regard emphasizes the need to ensure the sustainability of these gains;

Financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and report of the Board of Auditors

6. Notes that the Board of Auditors issued an unqualified audit opinion on the financial statements of the Fund for the year ended 31 December 2013;

7. Also notes the observation of the Board of Auditors that the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards in 2012 had enhanced the quality of the financial statements of the Fund;

8. Stresses the need for the Fund to address all the weaknesses identified by the Board of Auditors in relation to financial management and financial statement disclosure, investment management, information system management and other administrative processes;

Amendments to the Regulations and Administrative Rules of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

9. Approves the amendment to article 4 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex XI to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, in order to establish clear authority and reference to the financial rules of the Fund;

10. Emphasizes the importance of the Board promulgating financial rules that will govern the financial management of the Fund, and in this regard looks forward to receiving further information in the next report of the Board;

11. Takes note of paragraph 36 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides not to approve the proposed amendment to article 14 as set out in annex XI to the report of the Board;

12. Encourages the Audit Committee of the Fund to continue to work closely with the Board of Auditors in order to address issues of mutual interest;

13. Approves the technical changes in the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex XI to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, in accordance with past decisions and amendments adopted by the Board and the General Assembly;

14. Takes note of the amendments to the Administrative Rules of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex XII to the report of the Board, to refine the Administrative Rules and align them with the Regulations of the Fund;

Pension adjustment system

15. Approves the amendment regarding the special adjustment for small pensions, as set out in annex XIII to the report of the Board, to reflect the 10 per cent adjustment to small pension threshold amounts for separations on or after 1 April 2016;

16. Concurs with the recommendation of the Board that the following assessments be discontinued, considering the comments of the Committee of Actuaries that the assessments were consistent with the initial estimates of the consulting actuary and were subsumed in the overall cost of the two-track feature, which would continue to be monitored in conjunction with each actuarial valuation: (a) assessment of the costs of the April 1992 modification of the cost-of-living differential factors as applicable to the Professional and higher categories, (b) assessment of actual savings from the reduction of the 120 per cent cap provision to 110 per cent, effective for separations on 1 July 1995 or later and (c) assessment of the costs and/or savings of the minimum guarantee at 80 per cent of the United States dollar track amount;

Other matters

17. Concurs, in accordance with article 13 of the Regulations of the Fund and with a view to securing the continuity of pension rights, with the new transfer agreements of the Fund with the European Organization for the Exploitation of Meteorological Satellites, the European Union Satellite Centre and the European Union Institute for Security Studies, as approved by the Board and set out in annex XIV to its report, which will become effective 1 January 2015;

18. Notes that the transfer agreement of the Fund with the African Development Bank has been withdrawn, because the Bank has not signed the approved agreement;

19. Recalls paragraph 10 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and welcomes the initiative taken by the High-level Committee on Management to establish a working group on after-service health insurance and looks forward to receiving information on its findings at the seventieth session of the General Assembly, pursuant to Assembly resolution 68/244 of 27 December 2013;

20. Also recalls paragraph 13 of section VII of resolution 68/247 A and paragraph 26 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Board to inform the General Assembly of the outcome of the revision of the memorandum of understanding between the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat and the Fund in the context of its next report to the Assembly;

21. Notes with concern the observation of the Board of Auditors regarding performance evaluations not having been completed for Fund staff for the cycle ended 31 March 2013, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue his effort to ensure that the performance of all staff members of the Fund is properly evaluated in a timely manner;

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

22. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund and measures taken to increase the diversification of the Fund and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board as set out in its report;

23. Reaffirms its resolution 33/121 B of 19 December 1978;

24. Notes the overall improved investment performance of the Fund for the year ended 31 December 2013 as compared with its performance benchmarks for the same period in 2012, and commends its success in meeting its investment objectives;

25. Recalls paragraph 14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard commends the Fund for its success in meeting its long-term investment objectives over the past 10, 15, 20, 25 and 50 years;

26. Emphasizes the importance of the policy of the Fund of broad diversification of its investments by currency, type of asset class and geographical area as a reliable method of improving the risk-return profile of its portfolio over long periods of time;

27. Requests the Secretary-General, as fiduciary for the investment of the assets of the Fund, to continue to diversify its investments between developed, developing and emerging markets, wherever this serves the interests of the participants and the beneficiaries of the Fund, and also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that decisions concerning the investments of the Fund in any country are implemented prudently, taking fully into account the four main criteria for investment, namely, safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility, under volatile market conditions;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General, as fiduciary for the investment of the assets of the Fund, to continue to explore prospects in all markets, taking into account risk-return profiles and always applying sound risk management techniques, and taking fully into account the four main criteria for investments of the Fund;

29. Recognizes the importance of the use of in-house expertise, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all measures to ensure that the costs for non-discretionary advisory fees are reduced and to report thereon in the context of future reports.

On 29 December (decision 69/554), the General Assembly decided that the item on the United Nations pension system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-ninth (2015) session.

¹ On 19 September 1991, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to Belarus.

² The Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was an original Member of the United Nations, the Charter having been signed on its behalf on 26 June 1945 and ratified 19 October 1945, until its dissolution following the establishment and subsequent admission, as new Members, of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia, the Republic of Slovenia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia were admitted as Members of the United Nations on 22 May 1992. On 8 April 1993, the General Assembly decided to admit as a Member of the United Nations the state provisionally referred to for all purposes within the United Nations as "the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia", pending settlement of the difference that had arisen over its name. The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was admitted as a Member of the United Nations on 1 November 2000. On 12 February 2003, it informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to Serbia and Montenegro, effective 4 February 2003. In a letter dated 3 June 2006, the President of the Republic of Serbia informed the Secretary-General that the membership of Serbia and Montenegro was being continued by the Republic of Serbia following Montenegro's declaration of independence from Serbia on 3 June 2006. On 28 June 2006, Montenegro was accepted as a United Nations Member State by the General Assembly.

³ On 25 October 2013, the Republic of Cape Verde informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to the Republic of Cabo Verde.

⁵ The Republic of Zaire informed the United Nations that, effective 17 May 1997, it had changed its name to the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

⁶ Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name Egypt on 2 September 1971.

⁸ On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. On 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision, and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

Subject index

Bold capital letters are used for main subject entries (e.g. DEVELOPMENT) and chapter topics (e.g. DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g. AFGHANISTAN), region names (e.g. AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g. GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

Capital letters are used to highlight major issues (e.g. POVERTY), as well as the names of territories (e.g. MONTSERRAT), subregions (e.g. CENTRAL AMERICA), specialized agencies (e.g. WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION) and regional commissions (e.g. ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR AFRICA).

Regular text is used for single and cross-reference entries (e.g. arms embargo, mercenaries).

United Nations bodies are listed alphabetically and may also appear under related entries.
