II. Proceedings

A. Review of social development trends and challenges in the context of the development agenda beyond 2015

1. The Committee had before it the document entitled “Confronting rising inequalities in Asia and the Pacific: trends and opportunities in the context of the development agenda beyond 2015” (E/ESCAP/CSD(3)/1).

2. Representatives of the following ESCAP members made statements: Australia; Azerbaijan; Bangladesh; Bhutan; China; Fiji; India; Iran (Islamic Republic of); Japan; Lao People’s Democratic Republic; Pakistan; Philippines; Russian Federation; and Thailand.

3. The Committee’s attention was drawn to the following main trends and findings: (a) inequality persists in Asia and the Pacific, and in some instances has intensified; (b) inequality takes many forms and pathways; and (c) inequalities reinforce each other creating an “inequality trap” that disproportionately affects women and the most vulnerable, including persons with disabilities and migrants.

4. The Committee commended the secretariat on the selection of the timely theme for its third session of rising inequalities, noting in particular that gender inequality needed to be urgently addressed if the region was to be successful in integrating the social, economic and environmental dimensions of sustainable development.

5. The Committee expressed appreciation for the high quality of the documentation submitted, which captured prevailing inequality trends in the region and framed the mutually reinforcing pathways and forms of inequality in three dimensions: economic inequality; inequality in well-being; and inequalities across key population groups.

6. The Committee took note of the significant progress made by ESCAP members and associate members towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals and addressing economic and social inequalities in the region. While recognizing that progress, the Committee noted that there was an “unfinished agenda”, particularly in relation to ensuring poverty reduction, gender equality and women’s economic empowerment.

7. In acknowledging the importance of the development agenda beyond 2015 and, in particular, welcoming the proposal of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals for stand-alone goals on inequality and gender equality, several delegations noted that the development agenda beyond 2015 must include robust monitoring and accountability mechanisms. The Committee also noted the challenges of articulating concise goals, measurable targets and means of implementation.

8. The Committee acknowledged that income inequality constituted an important driver of poverty and an impediment to socioeconomic mobility. For that reason, several countries had introduced cash transfer schemes, minimum wage legislation and other forms of income security, as well as facilitating access to microcredit and strengthening labour market policies.

9. Many delegations underscored the importance of more inclusive development processes that included ensuring universal access to affordable health services, as well as the provision of basic services such as electricity, water and sanitation. Several delegations stressed that policies and initiatives to reduce poverty and to eliminate social disparities should address horizontal inequalities by focusing on the needs of key population groups, including women, girls, youth, older persons, persons with disabilities and migrants.

10. The Committee noted the progress achieved in primary and secondary school enrolment and completion rates, particularly for girls. The Committee also noted the central role of education in combating discrimination and gender stereotypes. The Committee noted with concern the prevalence of early and child marriage, as well as of adolescent pregnancy, and the consequent intergenerational impacts.

11. In noting that the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action had been instrumental in promoting gender equality and women’s empowerment, the Committee attached high importance to its full and effective implementation in the region.

12. Several delegations reported on their efforts to mainstream gender issues into national policies and programmes, including through capacity-building and allocation of adequate resources. The importance of sex-disaggregated data and gender statistics for informed policymaking was also highlighted.

13. The Committee was further informed of key legal reforms and policies that had supported the enhancement of women’s political participation and representation at national and local levels. Some delegations noted that gender quotas and targets had proven effective in encouraging greater representation of women in decision-making positions.

14. The Committee noted with appreciation the efforts that had been made by several countries to enhance women's economic participation. Those efforts included the promotion of women's entrepreneurship, facilitation of access to credit, introduction of innovative financial products and provision of training opportunities, as well as targeted employment programmes. Several delegations emphasized the need to strengthen support for women in realization of their career and family aspirations, including measures to promote work-life balance.

15. The Committee underscored the need to end violence against women and children across the region. Several delegations reported on their legislative frameworks, policies and programmes that sought to protect women and children from all forms of violence, including domestic violence and sexual assault and harassment in the workplace and other contexts. For that purpose, the Committee noted that crisis centres for women who had experienced violence had been established in several countries. The Committee also noted that a range of laws and policies had been adopted to protect women and children from human trafficking, including for sexual purposes.

16. In reference to Security Council resolution 1325, the Committee noted the critical role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflict, particularly through their leadership and active engagement in peacebuilding processes.

17. In noting that Asia and the Pacific was the most disaster-prone region in the world, the Committee highlighted the increasing vulnerability of particular populations, including the poor, older persons and persons with disabilities, to natural disasters. The impact of climate change was also noted as a potential threat to the achievement of sustainable development.

18. The Committee recognized that reducing inequality in all its forms, particularly addressing the social exclusion of women and girls, would require strategic and gender-responsive investments, including through innovative partnerships. In that respect, the Committee noted the importance of enhancing social protection, promoting productive and decent work, strengthening redistributive taxation systems and increasing data collection to support evidence-based policymaking, as means of addressing inequalities in the region.

19. The consolidated statement made by civil society highlighted the range of challenges faced by women and girls in the region, including the pervasive and entrenched inequalities in wealth, capital and natural resources. The representative of civil society expressed support for investment in redistributive policies and a focus on decent work. The representative further requested Governments to commit to reforming the international trade, finance and taxation architecture in support of sustainable development. In the process of defining the development agenda beyond 2015, civil society applauded the proposed inclusion of a stand-alone goal on gender equality and called for the establishment of more effective accountability mechanisms at the international, regional and national levels.

B. Consideration of a thematic focus on gender equality and women's empowerment in preparation for the twentieth anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women

(a) Review of regional preparations for the Asian and Pacific Conference on Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment: Beijing+20 Review (Bangkok, 17-20 November 2014)

20. The Committee had before it the document entitled “Asia-Pacific road map for the 20-year review of progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action” (E/ESCAP/CSD(3)/2).

21. In providing an overview of the global preparatory process for the 20-year review of progress in implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (Beijing+20), the Executive Secretary of the Commission of the Status of Women informed the Committee that the Beijing+20 review process included national-level reviews, regional intergovernmental review meetings and a communication and social mobilization campaign. The Beijing+20 review process would culminate in a global review during the fifty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women to be held from 9 to 20 March 2015. The Executive Secretary of the Commission on the Status of Women further highlighted the importance of wide stakeholder engagement in the Beijing+20 review process, including men, boys, youth and the media.

22. In providing an overview of the regional preparatory process for the Beijing+20 review for Asia and the Pacific, the Director of the Social Development Division of ESCAP recalled resolution 2013/18 of the United Nations Economic and Social Council, which had mandated the regional commissions to undertake regional-level reviews and appraisals of progress in implementation of the Platform for Action. She presented to the Committee the Asia-Pacific road map for the 20-year review of progress in implementation of the Platform for Action, which had been endorsed by the Commission at its seventieth session. The Director further outlined the three tracks in the road map consisting of: intergovernmental consensus building; research and analysis; and stakeholder engagement. Under the intergovernmental track, the current session of the Committee served as the regional preparatory body for the “Asian and Pacific Conference on Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment: Beijing+20 Review”, which would be convened by ESCAP at the ministerial level, in cooperation with the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), in Bangkok from 17 to 20 November 2014. The outcome of that Conference would serve as the Asian and Pacific regional input to the global Beijing+20 review.

(b) Consideration of the framework and elements of a draft outcome document for the Asian and Pacific Conference on Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment: Beijing+20 Review

23. The Committee had before it the document entitled “Elements of a draft outcome document for the Asian and Pacific Conference on Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment: Beijing+20 Review” (E/ESCAP/CSD(3)/WP.1/Rev.1).

She informed the Committee that the content of the draft outcome document had been grounded in the Beijing Declaration and Platform of Action, particularly the 12 Critical Areas of Concern. The content of the draft outcome document had also been drawn from feedback provided by member States in response to the Asia-Pacific Beijing+20 regional survey conducted by the ESCAP secretariat, as well as Beijing+20 national review reports. The Committee noted that, to date, 38 ESCAP members and associate members had responded to the regional survey. Additionally, 26 countries in the Asia-Pacific region had completed national review reports.

25. The Director of the Social Development Division further explained that the draft outcome document contained four sections as follows:

- (a) Section I. Preamble;
- (b) Section II. Renewing political commitment;
- (c) Section III. Consolidating gains in the Asia-Pacific region;
- (d) Section IV. Moving forward: measures to accelerate the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action in the era beyond 2015.

26. The secretariat outlined the time frame for the review of the draft outcome document, which had been circulated to member States in July 2014. The current session of the Committee would undertake the first reading of the draft outcome document and provide suggestions for changes to reflect government positions. Thereafter, the secretariat would prepare the second version of the draft outcome document for online circulation to member States by mid-September 2014, after which member States would be requested to provide any further comments within 15 working days. On the basis of the feedback received, the secretariat would prepare a third version of the draft outcome document for issuance to member States by early October 2014 in advance of the final reading and anticipated adoption of the draft outcome document by the forthcoming “Asian and Pacific Conference on Gender Equality and Women’s Empowerment: Beijing+20 Review”.

27. The Regional Director of the Asia and Pacific Regional Office for UN-Women highlighted the significance of the 20-year review of the Platform for Action and stressed the need for political will and sufficient resources for the further implementation of the Platform for Action. She noted the repeated calls from the Asia-Pacific region for a stand-alone goal on gender equality and women’s empowerment to be included in the proposed sustainable development goals currently under development through the General Assembly.
