Introduction

1. During the period of 1 January to 31 December 2023, the Security Council held a total of 290 formal meetings, including 271 public meetings and 19 private meetings. The Council also convened 124 closed consultations and six informal interactive dialogues. Council members continued the practice of holding wrap-in and wrap-up sessions at the beginning and end of their respective presidencies, to increase transparency and accountability.

2. A total of 118 unscheduled meetings were held at the request of Council members, a 47 per cent increase from 2022, when 85 unscheduled meetings were held. The Council spent a total of 702.6 hours in both formal and informal meetings in 2023, compared with 650.9 hours in 2022.

3. The Council considered 47 items on its agenda throughout the year related to its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. It also exchanged views on the impact of various new and emerging issues on international peace and security. The Council continued to maintain its attention on the humanitarian consequences of the conflicts of which it is seized and their impact on civilians and children, as well as on the role of women in preventing and resolving conflict.

4. The Council extended a total of 479 invitations under rule 39, of which 285 were to men (59 per cent) and 194 were to women (41 per cent); of those invitations, 272 were extended to officials from the United Nations system, 84 to officials representing regional intergovernmental organizations, 13 to representatives of international organizations other than the United Nations and 110 to representatives of other entities such as non-governmental organizations and civil society.

5. During the reporting period, the Security Council adopted 50 resolutions and six presidential statements. The Council also issued 34 statements to the press. While there was a decrease in the number of outcome documents compared with the previous year, the number of unanimously adopted resolutions increased from 66 to 70 percent.

6. At the same time, many Member States expressed concern that the Security Council failed to fully utilize the powers granted to it under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security. The tools at the Council's disposal also faced scrutiny, with unease among some Member States regarding the efficacy of United Nations peacekeeping and sanctions mechanisms in certain contexts. The Council adopted decisions regarding nine peacekeeping operations and nine special political missions and renewed the mandates of 11 sanctions committees. It terminated the mandate of one peacekeeping operation, one special political mission and one sanctions regime.

7. On eight occasions, draft resolutions or amendments were not adopted owing to an insufficient number of votes. On five occasions, the casting of a veto by one or more permanent member prevented the adoption of a resolution: one on the Syrian Arab Republic, one on Mali sanctions and three on the Middle East. On one occasion, the casting of a veto by a permanent member prevented the adoption of a draft amendment on a resolution on the Middle East. The Security Council therefore submitted a total of six special reports to the General Assembly, pursuant to resolution 76/262.

8. Following a year-long hiatus, the Council resumed its practice of conducting field missions, with a visit to the Democratic Republic of the Congo in March. In October, the Security Council and the Peace and Security Council of the African Union held their seventeenth annual joint consultative meeting in Addis Ababa.

9. Further information on the work of the Security Council and more detailed reports of its meetings can be found in the monthly assessments of its work. The goal of the present introduction is not to provide an exhaustive list of meetings, developments or responses of the Council. Rather it is intended as a succinct and useful overview of key developments made throughout the year. The introduction also aims to take into account remarks made by Member States at the plenary meeting of the General Assembly on the annual report of the Council for 2022 (A/77/2) on 30 June 2023, as well as the informal consultation on the annual report of the Council for 2023, convened by the President of the General Assembly on 16 January 2024.
