Annex II

[Original: Arabic, English and French]

Recommendations on Refugees, Returnees and Internally Displaced Persons in Africa

1. Root Causes

1. Most of the refugee flows and forced population displacements are caused by armed conflicts, civil strife, ethnic, religious and political intolerance, abuse of human rights, non-respect for democratic principles, poverty, natural and man-made disasters and external interference.
2. Member States are urged to take necessary measures to tackle these root causes.

2. Refugee Instruments

3. The Thirtieth Anniversary of the 1969 OAU Convention Governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, adopted in September 1969 will be marked in 1999.
4. Member States are encouraged to commemorate the anniversary by recommitting themselves to the principles of the OAU Refugee Convention. The commemoration of the OAU Convention also provides an opportunity to Member States, which have not done so, to accede, incorporate and implement the international refugee instruments, including the 1969 OAU Convention, the 1951 UN Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol, the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights, as well as the related Protocol on the establishment of the African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights.

3. Strengthening Refugee Protection in Africa

a) Asylum

5. In conformity with the African tradition of hospitality and bearing in mind that granting asylum to refugees is a peaceful and humanitarian act, Member States are urged to continue to extend asylum to all deserving persons. To this end, Member States in consultation with UNHCR, should establish appropriate mechanisms for the determination of refugee status.

b) Protection

6. Member States are encouraged to strictly observe the principle of non-refoulement, enshrined in the 1969 OAU Convention, the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol and to adopt an approach based on the protection of the human and fundamental rights of refugees within the framework of relevant Regional and Universal Instruments.

7. Special measures should be taken to address the protection and other needs of refugee women, children, the elderly and other vulnerable groups.

8. Given the growing problem of statelessness in Africa, Member States are also urged to take steps to ratify the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons as well as the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

c) Security

9. The presence of armed elements among civilian refugee populations is a major concern. Member States are urged to take necessary measures, in consultation with the OAU and the UNHCR, to preserve the civilian and humanitarian character of refugee camps and settlements by separating armed elements from the civilian population.

10. States and non-State Actors, are requested to ensure the security of humanitarian workers and to allow unconditional and unhindered access to protect and assist refugees and other persons in need.

11. In conformity with the OAU Convention on Refugees, States are requested to locate refugee camps as far away as possible from the frontier at the outset of an emergency operation, rather than promoting their relocation at a later stage.

4. Durable Solutions

12. Voluntary repatriation and reintegration remain the most desirable solution to the problem of refugees. To this end, countries of origin should endeavour to create conditions conducive to the voluntary repatriation of refugees. The right of refugees to return to their country of origin is a fundamental right and should be respected by Member States.

13. Countries of asylum should explore more systematically the potential benefits of local integration programmes for both refugees and hosting communities.

14. To this end, Member States should strengthen, where appropriate, their democratic institutions as well as other mechanisms for the prevention and resolution of disputes including the traditional ones. In this context, the role of women youth and minorities in areas of conflict prevention, management and peace-building should be encouraged.

15. Member States have an obligation under the OAU and UN Charters to resolve disputes peacefully, if solutions to the problem of mass displacement and human insecurity in Africa are to be found or future displacement avoided. The role of third parties in promoting conflicts within and between States, thus generating refugees, should be seriously addressed and discouraged.

16. Conventional reintegration programmes should be complemented with activities which are more specifically designed to promote democracy, reconciliation and justice, including consensus-building on notions of responsibility and justice, and the promotion of human rights and minority rights.

5. Consolidating the Reintegration Process

a) Community-based and Participatory Programmes

17. Member States are requested to develop comprehensive reintegration efforts, benefitting all of those individuals and social groups which have been adversely affected by recent wars and conflicts. Assistance should always be provided on the basis of need, as non-discriminatory reintegration initiatives have an important role to play in promoting the process of social and political reconciliation. In addition, community-based and participatory initiatives should be put in place if the related objectives of reintegration and reconciliation are to be attained.

18. The protection and assistance needs of the most vulnerable, particularly women, children, disabled persons and the elderly, must be provided for at every stage of the return and reintegration operation. Their potential to contribute to reintegration and peace-building efforts should also be fully realized. This is of particular importance, given the large proportion of households headed by women and children in Africa's war-torn states. In this regard, special attention should be given to unaccompanied minors and the need for their protection and reunification with their families.

19. Special efforts should be made to maximize the contribution which women and other groups can make in the process of reconciliation and post-conflict recovery.

b) Reintegration and Rehabilitation Programmes

20. There should be better coordination between national actors and international organizations to ensure the speedy implementation and sustainability of rehabilitation projects.

21. More efforts should be deployed by international financial institutions and developmental agencies to bridge the gap between short-term relief efforts of Agencies such as the UNHCR, the ICRC and Member States and to longer term development programmes especially, in the conflict-affected areas of Africa. In this context, the meeting appealed to the World Bank and other financial institutions to adopt peace-friendly economic reform programmes including debt relief measures in support of long term development efforts and post-conflict recovery.

c) International Support and Commitment

22. Sustainable reintegration and post-conflict recovery cannot take place unless the principles of state responsibility and international solidarity are upheld. In this regard, it is desirable and crucial that such international solidarity be extended to the efforts made by States to bring about post-conflict recovery. Regrettably, donor states have already made substantial reductions to their emergency relief and development assistance budgets. The international financial institutions have generally been reluctant to grant any significant measure of debt relief to Africa's poorest countries, and have continued to insist on the implementation of economic policies which reduce public services and which require some of the poorest people in the world to pay for basic resources which were previously provided free of charge. Indeed, there are already signs of growing social tension and political alienation in some of the African states where armed conflicts have recently been brought to an end.

23. The Meeting reaffirms its belief that modest investment in the process of post-conflict recovery will now help to avert the need for more costly and ultimately less useful interventions at a later date.

24. The Meeting appeals to the international community to give greater recognition to the fact that it is also in their own interest to invest in the peace-building process in the states of Africa. It is in the interest of all states and the international community as a whole to ensure that African States which have been scarred by war are able to reintegrate their displaced populations, consolidate the peace and embark upon a process of sustainable development.

6. Building Africa's Capacity to Respond to Refugee and Internal Displacement Situations

a) African Institution Building

25. In line with the recommendation adopted at the OAU/UN Cooperation Meeting in Addis Ababa in May 1998, the OAU should strengthen its early warning system with the assistance of the UN agencies so that it can better monitor humanitarian developments and crises throughout the continent and better seize its Member States as to areas where they can act to ameliorate and contain the negative aspects of such developments.

26. UN Agencies and international organizations particularly the ICRC and UNHCR, should continue conducting and expanding their training programmes in international and regional refugee and humanitarian law for African institutions and officials at the national, sub-regional and regional levels. Training should also be given in other related areas, such as emergency management and provision of humanitarian assistance.

27. Member States should continue to provide support for the further development and implementation of the OAU Commission on Refugees' Programme of Action, particularly in the area of building the capacity of African Non-Governmental Organizations working with refugees and internally displaced persons.

28. Local Civil society and traditional groups involved in local development activities should be strengthened and encouraged to increase their interaction with African and other NGOs involved in dealing with refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons issues.

b) Resource Mobilization and Public Awareness for Refugees, Returnees and Internally Displaced Persons in Africa

29. The OAU should take the lead in widely disseminating the OAU Refugee Convention in the OAU working languages, particularly to Member States, regional and sub-regional organizations, UN agencies, international and African NGOs. The thirtieth anniversary of the Convention in 1999 provides an opportunity for Member States to work with the UN and other relevant agencies to intensify its education, public information and awareness campaign.

30. The OAU, in cooperation with other concerned parties within and outside Africa, should organize an experts group to prepare and organize the Round Table Conference on resource mobilization and public awareness, pursuant to the OAU Resolution adopted by the Council of Ministers in February 1998 (CM/Dec.388 (LXVII) concerning the need to mobilize resources and raise public awareness for refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa.

31. The OAU Commission on Refugees, in collaboration with the UNHCR and other interested parties, should develop a strategy to facilitate the implementation of the Commission's Programme of Action in the area of resource mobilization and advocacy on behalf of refugees on the continent. This should be based on recommendations outlined in the Report of the 1997 OAU/UNHCR Seminar on Resource Mobilization and Public Awareness for Refugees in Africa, and should be in line with the Commission's Programme of Action. In this regard, the important role of different actors such as women, other continental personalities and entertainers in resource mobilization efforts should be recognized and utilized.

32. Member States are encouraged to work closely with regional and sub-regional organizations to develop a comprehensive strategy to work with the media in promoting refugee and humanitarian issues in Africa. Governmental refugee agencies should themselves take on a more public advocacy role in this regard in order to promote the OAU's refugee instrument and to counter sometimes misleading and even xenophobic allegations faced by refugees and asylum seekers.

7. Assistance and Resolving the Problem of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa

33. The increasing number of internally displaced persons in Africa and how to provide appropriate protection and assistance to them are of grave concern.

34. Given the magnitude of the internally displaced persons problem, the OAU Commission on Refugees, in the context of its planned missions to Member States, is urged to examine the issues, problems and challenges of internal displacement in Africa and to present its findings and recommendations to the OAU Council of Ministers in February 1999. Similarly, the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement should be submitted to the OAU Commission on Refugees at its next Session. The Commission would in turn submit its conclusions to the session of the OAU Council of Ministers in February 1999.
