Introduction

1. In its resolutions 1998/57 and 1999/73, the Commission on Human Rights requested the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to submit an analytical report to the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-sixth session on the progress and concrete achievements made as well as obstacles encountered in the implementation of the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation in the field of human rights and on the operation and administration of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights. The present report is submitted pursuant to that request.

I. THE TECHNICAL COOPERATION PROGRAMME IN 1999

A. Policy orientation

2. The Technical Cooperation Programme of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) supports countries in promoting and protecting all human rights at the national and regional level by incorporating international human rights standards in national laws, policies and practices and by building sustainable national capacities to implement these standards and ensure respect for human rights.

3. The Programme is carried out at the request of the concerned Government. Projects are formulated and implemented with the broadest possible participation of all elements of national societies, including civil society and national institutions, as well as the judicial, legislative and executive branches of the Government. The Programme is implemented in the context of the pursuit of national development objectives and national programmes and assistance coordinated by the United Nations system in support of these objectives.

4. Among the key result areas that have been defined by OHCHR for the period 1999-2001 the following deserve particular attention within the Technical Cooperation Programme: national capacity-building to develop strategies and structures for human rights; human rights education; charting a new course for the implementation of economic, social and cultural rights and the right to development; racism; the rights of indigenous people; trafficking of women and children, gender and the human rights of women; the rights of the child; humanitarian law and human rights; human rights and the corporate sector; and developing a policy for future human rights field activities and consolidating existing activities.

B. Systemwide review of technical cooperation in the field of human rights

5. Following the recommendation of the Secretary-General in his report "Renewing the United Nations: A Programme for Reform" (A/51/950 and addenda), the High Commissioner for Human Rights, in cooperation with agencies and programmes of the United Nations, has undertaken an analysis of technical assistance provided by United Nations entities in areas related to human rights in order to formulate proposals for the improvement of both the complementarity of action and responses to the needs of Member States.

6. The following central conclusions from the analysis can be identified:

(a) The interest of Member States in human rights technical assistance continues to increase. This requires a United Nations systemwide response;

(b) In addition to the United Nations human rights programme, an increasing number of agencies and programmes offer human rights-related assistance, including in the areas of sustainable development, good governance, the rule of law, human resources, protection of vulnerable groups, conflict prevention/resolution and confidence-building measures. Almost all respondents to the review perceive strong linkages between their mandated work and human rights;

(c) United Nations agencies and programmes are increasingly interested in human rights methodology. Some apply the "rights-based approach" to their own activities, in particular with regard to projects relating to sustainable development. However, significant measures are still needed to ensure a consistent approach to human rights throughout the United Nations system;

(d) All agencies and programmes share the conviction that technical cooperation in the field of human rights requires close systemwide cooperation, exchange of information and expertise, and more systematic coordination to fully utilize the existing potential. This should be supported by appropriate organizational measures and systemwide training, as well as the perception that human rights technical assistance is a part of the overall United Nations response to the needs of countries;

(e) Cooperation and coordination should be strengthened, both at the Headquarters and country levels. The importance of the latter is today widely recognized. The United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF), including such tools as the Common Country Assessment (CCA) and Country Strategy Notes (CSN), should become an important vehicle for improved cooperation and coordination in the field of human rights technical assistance.

7. The analysis recommends the convening by the High Commissioner for Human Rights of workshops at the regional level involving United Nations partners active in the area. These workshops should elaborate on policies and practical measures to ensure a consistent approach to human rights, development of an appropriate methodology of work and cooperation, expansion of capacities to provide human rights assistance, more efficient use of available resources and thus, effective responses to actual needs on the ground.

8. OHCHR has initiated the follow-up to the recommendations with inter-agency consultations in Geneva and the forming of an inter-agency working group for preparation of a follow-up programme including activities at both regional and Headquarters level.

C. Project identification, formulation, appraisal and approval

9. The Technical Cooperation Programme of OHCHR is developed through established procedures, which include the following phases: request, needs assessment, project formulation, appraisal, approval, implementation, monitoring, evaluation.

10. Request. Technical cooperation projects at the national level are initiated by a formal request by the concerned Government.
11. Needs assessment. Following receipt of a request, the feasibility of the project is studied, taking into account recommendations by the competent United Nations human rights organs and bodies, including relevant recommendations by United Nations bodies and mechanisms, as well as the availability of resources. In case of a positive outcome of this process, a needs assessment mission is then usually fielded to define priority areas for a possible human rights project. The assessment team meets with all interested parties, both governmental and non-governmental, and United Nations and other agencies and organizations engaged in human rights-related areas, and collects all available relevant documentation and legislation. The report contains an analysis and assessment of the needs identified and proposals for action. Such an assessment is essential for tailoring projects to the specific needs of the requesting country.
12. Project formulation. The formulation of a technical cooperation project is an outcome of the priorities identified and the availability of resources. The Programme seeks to establish partnership for positive change. Through dialogue the project is defined within the limits of the Programme's mission, goals and objectives, priorities and limited financial resources. If additional information is necessary, or further discussions are needed to refine the project strategy, a project formulation mission may take place. Technically, projects are based on the Logical Framework Method for project formulation, including a clear identification of the country's human rights context and background; the human rights needs/problems to be addressed; solutions offered by the project; target beneficiaries (direct and indirect); long-term and immediate objectives of the project, results, outputs, activities, inputs and risks; and identification and development of indicators for measuring of impact.
13. Internal appraisal. In December 1998 the Project Review Committee (PRC) was established as a subcommittee of the Senior Policy Committee. PRC is the mechanism through which OHCHR, at senior level, monitors performance, provides guidance and exercises internal control of its action-oriented activities. PRC considers new projects and their revision with the aim of assessing and providing guidance on: the relevance of the proposed objectives, activities and underlying assumptions of the project to the mandates, and priorities of OHCHR, and its possible impact on the issues the project intends to address; the suitability and effectiveness of project management, and institutional and implementation arrangements; the soundness of financial requirements, according to OHCHR's priorities and actual resources; and the possible special interest of the project to OHCHR in terms of policy implications, replicability, innovations and risks.
14. One year after its establishment PRC has proved its value as a useful management tool. It has been an incentive for planning and has promoted operational policy discussions and cooperation across the branches of OHCHR; criteria and policy to guide staff in the preparation of project proposals have been developed. However, there is still room for further improvement. Consideration should be given to improved prescreening of proposals and further in-house consultations before projects are presented to PRC. The process of developing criteria for priority-setting and the process of developing regional strategies should continue and be enhanced.

15. External appraisal. Projects are also subject to an external appraisal system through the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation (VFTC). The establishment of PRC as the internal oversight and appraisal committee (a measure recommended by the Board of Trustees) allows the Board of Trustees to devote more time for other parts of its broad mandate (Commission resolution 1993/87), including advice in long-term programming of the OHCHR Technical Cooperation Programme.

16. Approval. Final approval rests with the High Commissioner, for OHCHR, and the Government concerned, and is formalized through the signature of the project document.

D. Implementation modalities

1. Regional approach and regional frameworks

17. Strengthening national capacities is decisive for any progress in the promotion and protection of human rights. However, OHCHR does not have the capacity to be present in all countries which are interested in technical cooperation projects. Therefore, OHCHR has developed a regional/subregional approach to support national efforts effectively. Initiatives at this level create the opportunity to draw on the expertise and best practices of countries in comparable situations, generate cooperation between neighbours, and allow for utilization of international resources in a concentrated, and thus more efficient manner. Developing regional/subregional frameworks for the promotion and protection of human rights should involve governmental agencies; parliaments; civil society; international organizations, in particular components of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and regional organizations. Such frameworks are not intended to be new structures but a combination of various initiatives at the regional/subregional level, the specific shape of which may vary from case to case, depending largely on local needs. This flexible concept should enhance intergovernmental cooperation, intensify exchange of experience and promote best practices between countries in comparable situations, leading to the design of common policies and programmes and linking various sectors of civil society. OHCHR has already gained some experience, especially in the Asian-Pacific region where activities include: annual workshops, exchanges of best practices and experiences, consultations and designation of a regional adviser on international human rights standards. In November 1999, OHCHR, in cooperation with the Government of Ecuador organized in Quito a regional workshop on the promotion and protection of human rights which adopted a technical cooperation framework programme for Latin America and the Caribbean.

2. Management of projects

18. Projects covering one or few substantive areas or to be carried out in a short time are often implemented by the OHCHR Desk Officer in Geneva alone or with a minimum of administrative support from a UNDP country office. Projects of a more complex nature or requiring a longer period of implementation are often carried out with assistance of human rights presences in the field, acting as offices of OHCHR or components of larger United Nations operations.

19. In 1999, in addition to the technical cooperation field presences in El Salvador, Guatemala, Mongolia, Palestine, South Africa, southern Africa and Togo, which have been operational for several years, new presences were established in Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Indonesia and Uganda. The subregional office based in Pretoria continued to implement and facilitate the implementation of activities at the regional level as well as in various countries of the southern African region. The Afghanistan presence, which is operating from the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Activities (OCHA) in Islamabad, is responsible for assisting other United Nations agencies in integrating a human rights dimension in their assistance programmes. A number of OHCHR field presences combining monitoring and technical cooperation mandates also carried out programmes and activities in Abkhazia-Georgia, Angola, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Cambodia, Croatia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Liberia and Sierra Leone.

20. Representatives of all field presences with technical cooperation mandates participated in the second meeting of OHCHR field presences, which was held in Geneva in September 1999. The meeting included a session on "Technical cooperation: sustainable development of human rights capacity". Lessons learned from the evaluation, conducted in 1999, of two long-term OHCHR programmes in El Salvador and Togo were relayed as a starting point for a discussion on issues such as the sustainability of the results of OHCHR involvement in these countries, possible best practices on sustainable development of national capacities through technical cooperation projects, and an analysis of the conditions which may facilitate or hinder successful technical cooperation programmes. The session also included a discussion on the objectives and impact of regional technical cooperation initiatives, the relationship between regional and country programmes, and possible forms of involvement of field presences in the development and implementation of regional programmes, carried out in the context of recent OHCHR regional technical cooperation programmes.

3. Partnership with United Nations agencies and programmes

21. Enhanced collaboration with other United Nations actors in the implementation of technical cooperation activities allows for maximizing their impact and more efficient use of resources. Close cooperation is particularly significant with UNDP, based on the Memorandum of Understanding in force between the two agencies. One example is the joint programme for Human Rights Strengthening, HURIST, supporting the implementation of UNDP's policy on human rights as presented in the policy document "Integrating Human Rights with Sustainable Human Development". Its primary purposes are to test guidelines and methodologies and to identify best practices and learning opportunities in the development of national capacities for the promotion and protection of human rights and in the application of a human rights approach to development programming. HURIST contributes to the international debate concerning major areas of relevance for human rights, particularly the economic and social effects of globalization. It supports UNDP country offices so requested by Governments to provide assistance in the field of human rights and generally contributes to the development of UNDP's capacity to apply a human rights approach to its work.

22. Another joint initiative is the ACT (Assisting Communities Together) project, launched in 1998 as a practical contribution to the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It focuses on a "bottom-up approach" by emphasizing the role which civil society plays in the promotion and protection of human rights. The long-term objectives of the ACT project are to empower people at the local level to be pro-active in ensuring greater respect for human rights and to strengthen partnerships between the United Nations and local human rights constituencies. The project supports institutions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals undertaking human rights initiatives by providing micro-grants of up to US$ 3,000. ACT is funded by the United Nations Foundation/United Nations Foundations for International Partnerships.

23. OHCHR is presently also implementing technical cooperation projects at the national, regional and global levels in close cooperation with other United Nations agencies and programmes, such as the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Secretariat, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the United Nations Staff College and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) (see also para. 5).

4. Cooperation with non-United Nations partners

24. The Programme is also seeking to work with non-United Nations partners such as the Organization of African Unity (OAU), the African Commission on Human Rights and Peoples' Rights, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), the Organization of American States (OAS), the Inter-American Institute of Human Rights (IHR), the United Nations Latin American Institute for Crime Prevention and the Treatment of Offenders (ILANUD), the Andean Commission of Jurists and others. For example, in Abkhazia (Georgia) OHCHR and OSCE have a joint office to, inter alia, implement a technical cooperation project.

E. Monitoring, evaluation and lessons learned

25. Monitoring. Progress in project implementation is assessed on an ongoing basis by desk officers, the Project Review Committee, and through project monitoring missions involving broad consultations with all national and international counterparts. Project monitoring involves examination of the strategy pursued by the project and ensures that any adjustment needed to meet the project objectives and the human rights needs of the country will be made.

26. Evaluation. The final evaluation assesses the effectiveness and efficiency of the project activities. It also aims at assessing the sustainability of the project, in particular in terms of the impact on the human rights situation of the country concerned with specific regard to the sectors and problems addressed by the project. The Board of Trustees of the VFTC and external consultants play an increasing role in the evaluation of the projects.

27. Lessons learned. Evaluation results provide documented evidence on the experience gained from past action to improve the future work of the OHCHR Technical Cooperation Programme. Lessons learned are the ultimate expression of evaluation results and should highlight the strengths and weaknesses in project identification, design and management that affected the performance and impact. Thus, they should form the basis for policy recommendations. This crucial part of the project cycle is still a weak part of the Programme and further development is needed. Part of the problem is linked to the recognized difficulty of measuring the direct impact of technical cooperation projects and programmes on the implementation of human rights.

F. Substantive areas

28. The Technical Cooperation Programme offers assistance in a wide range of substantive areas which are summarized below (see also sect. II.B of the report which provides information on specific projects).

1. National human rights institutions

29. An important objective of the Technical Cooperation Programme is to consolidate and strengthen the role which national human rights institutions can play in the promotion and protection of human rights. To this end, information materials and a manual have been developed for those involved in the establishment and functioning of national human rights institutions. In addition, a number of seminars and workshops have been conducted to provide government officials with information and expertise in the structure and functioning of such bodies. These events have also served as forums for exchange of information and experience concerning the establishment and operation of national human rights institutions. Direct cooperation in establishing or strengthening national human rights institutions has been offered, often in collaboration with UNDP, to some 30 countries. For further and more detailed information reference is made to the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly (A/54/336).

2. Administration of justice

30. The Programme provides training courses for judges, lawyers, prosecutors and prison officials, as well as law enforcement officers. Such courses are intended to familiarize participants with international human rights standards relevant for the administration of justice; facilitate examination of humane and effective techniques for the performance of penal and judicial functions in a democratic society; and teach trainers to include this information in their own training activities. Topics offered in courses for judges, lawyers, magistrates and prosecutors include: international systems of human rights protection; the independence of judges and lawyers; human rights standards applicable in criminal investigations, arrest and pre-trial detention; elements of a fair trial; juvenile justice; protection of the rights of women in the administration of justice; and human rights under a state of emergency.

31. Similarly, the training courses for law enforcement officials cover a variety of topics, including the following: relevant international human rights standards; the duties and principles of the code of conduct for the police in democracies; the use of force and firearms by law enforcement agencies; protection against torture and other inhuman treatment or punishment; effective methods of legal and ethical interviewing; human rights during arrest and pre-trial detention; and the legal status and the rights of the accused.

3. Assistance for constitutional and legislative reform

32. Assistance is provided with a view to ensuring consistency of national legislation with the international human rights standards. The assistance may take the form of advisory services provided by experts, organization of conferences, provision of human rights information and documentation, assistance in drafting laws, or support for public information campaigns to ensure the involvement of all sectors of society in law-making. This Programme component includes assistance with respect to constitutional law; penal codes and codes of criminal procedure; prison regulations; laws regarding minority protection; laws affecting freedom of expression, association and assembly; immigration and nationality laws; laws on the judiciary and legal practice; security legislation; and, in general, any law which might have an impact, directly or indirectly, on the realization of internationally protected human rights.

4. National parliaments

33. Projects developed in cooperation with national parliaments address, inter alia, ratification of international human rights instruments, the provision of information on comparative national human rights legislation, the role of parliamentary human rights committees and, in general, the role of parliament in promoting and protecting human rights.

5. The armed forces

34. The Programme has carried out a number of training activities for military officers on the principles of human rights. It conveys the importance and applicability of the rule of law and human rights in the activities of the armed forces, as well as their role in a democratic State.

6. Electoral assistance

35. This component includes the preparation of guidelines for analysis of electoral laws and procedures, publication of a handbook on human rights and elections, and public information relating to human rights and elections.

7. Treaty reporting

36. The Programme regularly organizes training activities for government officials responsible for the reports due under international human rights treaties to which their State is a party. Such assistance is provided at national and regional levels. The fellowship programme facilitates participation in the training which includes workshops with experts from various treaty-monitoring bodies, as well as specialized OHCHR staff. An OHCHR Manual on Human Rights Reporting has been produced and visits to observe meetings of treaty bodies are being organized.

37. The fellowship course for 1999 was facilitated by the United Nations Staff College Project in Turin, Italy. Due to circumstances beyond the control of the organizers, the training course has been postponed and will take place from 7 to 18 February 2000. Twenty-six candidates have been selected to attend the training representing 13 countries: Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Gambia, Indonesia, Kenya, People's Democratic Republic of Korea, Seychelles, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Uganda, Viet Nam, Yemen and Zambia.

8. Non-governmental organizations and civil society

38. Strengthening civil society is one of the aims of the Programme. OHCHR is increasingly being called upon to provide assistance to national non-governmental organizations in the context of its country activities, including them in seminars and training courses and supporting appropriate projects they have developed. Non-governmental organizations are not only addressees of technical cooperation projects but increasingly are also involved in their implementation. This empowers civil society and increases the potential of the Programme.

9. Training materials

39. As part of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, OHCHR has continued to develop its series of training manuals and handbooks, for use by both instructors and participants. OHCHR training materials support all training activities implemented within the framework of global, regional and national technical cooperation programmes. Training manuals are tailored for specific audiences and thus focus on the relevant substantive aspects of human rights protection and appropriate pedagogical techniques. In addition to their role in training, the manuals constitute a valuable resource for organizations and individuals involved in human rights education at all levels.

40. The OHCHR Professional Training Series is designed primarily to provide support to the training activities carried out by the Office under its programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights, and to assist other organizations involved in human rights education for professional groups. Recently, Human Rights and Law Enforcement: A Manual on Human Rights Training for the Police,¹ and its pocket guide, International Human Rights Standards for Law Enforcement: A Pocket Book on Human Rights for the Police² have been issued in French and Spanish. Another publication, Human Rights Training: A Guide to Human Rights Training for Adult Professionals, is planned.

41. The Office, in collaboration with the International Training Centre of the International Labour Organization (ILO) at Turin, has developed the Training Package on Human Rights Treaty Reporting, which is composed of three distinctive elements: a manual, a trainer's guide and a pocket guide. The package has been published in English, French and Spanish.

42. Work has continued on the six training packages for human rights monitors, judges and lawyers, prison officials, primary and secondary schoolteachers, journalists, and national and local non-governmental organizations. In the development of these materials, OHCHR works in close cooperation with relevant experts and organizations. These training packages are in the final stage of preparation.

G. Integration of a gender dimension and economic, social and cultural rights in the technical cooperation programme

43. OHCHR has developed guidelines for integrating economic, social and cultural rights as well as guidelines for integrating a gender perspective in the preparation and execution of workshops, training and seminars. Guidelines have also been prepared for integrating a gender perspective in project formulation and project evaluation missions. These guidelines are currently being reviewed by OHCHR with a view to emphasizing the relationship between economic, social and cultural rights and gender. Once finalized, dissemination of the guidelines will be accompanied by staff training to ensure their practical implementation in technical cooperation activities. Further, the development has commenced of a manual for practitioners on "Implementing Economic, Social and Cultural Rights into the Work of National Human Rights Institutions". OHCHR, together with the Council of Europe, has also initiated a Human Rights Anti-Trafficking programme comprising a series of awareness-raising and training activities.

H. Management, administration and financing

44. The Activities and Programmes Branch through the Geographical Teams, assisted by the Methodology Team, is responsible for the Programme's management. Administrative support is provided by United Nations Office at Geneva, United Nations Office for Project Services or UNDP, as appropriate. To improve programme performance two training courses on project management were held in 1999 for geographical desk officers.

45. The Board of Trustees of the VFTC was set up in 1993 pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/87, to advise the Secretary-General on the administration and operation of the Fund and to encourage contributions to the Fund. The Board is composed of the following members: Ms. Leila Takla (Egypt), Chairperson; Mr. Luis Pérez Aguirre (Uruguay); Ms. Anne-Marie Lizin (Belgium); Mr. Kinhide Mushakoji (Japan); and Mr. Krzysztof Skubiszewski (Poland). The new Coordinator of the Voluntary Fund has been serving as secretary of the Board since he took up his responsibilities in March 1999.

46. In 1999, the Board held its eleventh and twelfth sessions, from 14 to 17 June and from 13 to 15 December, respectively. During its sessions and through correspondence, the Board considered 14 new project proposals; reviewed 2 recently completed and evaluated projects; examined the implementation status of 9 current projects and activities; discussed project priorities, formats and procedures; examined financial and administrative matters concerning the Fund and discussed the Board's fund-raising efforts.

47. Technical cooperation activities are funded mainly by the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights and partly from the United Nations regular budget for technical cooperation in the field of human rights. Financial information concerning the Voluntary Fund is provided in the annex. Status reports on activities and contributions are prepared by the secretariat of the Voluntary Fund and are available upon request.

48. Since April 1999 a senior fund-raising officer has taken up her responsibilities in OHCHR. As part of a new fund-raising strategy, OHCHR has developed a global Annual Appeal, beginning in the year 2000, which provides a thorough presentation of the planned activities and which it is hoped will encourage more predictable and timely funding and permit longer-term planning of activities. The Annual Appeal includes projects to be funded by the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation.
