Letter dated 29 June 2000 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Yugoslavia to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council

I have been instructed by my Government to bring to your attention the escalation of terrorism and violence in Kosovo and Metohija, the autonomous province of the Yugoslav constituent Republic of Serbia, as well as pressure and harassment against the Serbs and other non-Albanians, especially in the areas from which a large number of them have already been expelled. Particularly gruesome instances of atrocities have been the killing of people on the doorstep of their homes or in the field during agricultural work, stealing of livestock and attacks on economic establishments, all of them aimed at forcing the Serbs and other non-Albanians to leave their ancestral homes and Kosovo and Metohija altogether.

The Kosovo Force (KFOR) and the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) have failed to create minimum security conditions for Serbs and other non-Albanians. Their freedom of movement is extremely limited in such a way they are denied the basic preconditions for the exercise of any other right. Enclaves in which they live, roads within and between them and convoys providing humanitarian aid to the enclaves are increasingly becoming targets of terrorist attacks even though they are supposedly provided security by KFOR and UNMIK. In the past two months, no case of terrorist attack has been solved and no perpetrator apprehended. No instigator or organizer behind those attacks has been discovered, either. Instead, KFOR and UNMIK blockade Serbian and non-Albanian enclaves and disrupt communications between them, arrest Serbs only on false reports of Albanians, often seizing them from hospital beds, and even open fire on frightened and exasperated Serbs protesting their situation.

The symbols of Serbian presence in Kosovo and Metohija, such as Orthodox churches, monasteries and other cultural and religious shrines, are also targets of terrorist attacks. About 100 of them have been looted, burned or destroyed. A glaring example of this modern-day vandalism was the mortar attack on the Decani monastery, the treasure of Serbian religion and culture, on the night of 21/22 June.

Against the background of these atrocities, reports are being submitted on the alleged successes of the United Nations mission in Kosovo and Metohija. It is claimed that the terrorist so-called Kosovo Liberation Army has been demilitarized and disarmed at a time when large caches of heavy weapons, like the one in the village of Klecka, are being discovered or when a fierce mortar attack on the Decani monastery is being carried out. It is also claimed that security is being improved as Albanian extremists step up their terrorist activities aimed at completing the ethnic cleansing of the remaining Serbs and non-Albanians. Also, the calls of the leaders of ethnic Albanians for tolerance and coexistence in the circumstances ring very hollow indeed.

The atrocities are taking place at a time when the Security Council is debating and deciding the future of the international presences in Kosovo and Metohija and when measures are being taken to hold local elections despite the absence of the most elementary conditions for such elections. In those conditions and short of a full and consistent implementation of Security Council resolution 1244 (1999) of 10 June 1999, the holding of local elections in Kosovo and Metohija is unacceptable for the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

I wish to recall that, upon instructions of my Government, I have written to the Security Council on a number of occasions to bring to its attention the disastrous situation in Kosovo and Metohija and to request a meeting to consider the situation. Yet I have been denied even a courtesy reply and the Security Council has taken no measure whatsoever to stamp out and reverse the lamentable course of events even though, under the provisions of Security Council resolution 1244 (1999) and its earlier decisions, it is responsible for the situation in that southern province of the Yugoslav constituent Republic of Serbia.

In enclosing a short overview of terrorist acts committed by the members of the terrorist so-called Kosovo Liberation Army in Kosovo and Metohija from 24 May to 26 June 2000 (see annex), I kindly request your assistance in having it circulated, along with the present letter, as a document of the Security Council.
