Bearing also in mind that the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean has been including the Joint Organization of American States/Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean Meeting on Statistical Matters in its programme of work, and that therefore the technical, operational and financial implications of establishing a Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean as one of its subsidiary bodies can be dealt with by reallocating existing regular budgetary resources,

Considering that by its resolution No. 34, the Permanent Executive Committee of the Inter-American Council for Integral Development had entrusted the representatives of the statistical offices of Canada, Mexico and Peru, and the secretariat of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean with the task of preparing a proposal on the organization and operation of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, the content of which was improved and approved by consensus at the Meeting of Directors of Statistics of Latin America and the Caribbean held at Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean headquarters in Santiago, Chile, from 24 to 26 March 1999,

Recalling Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean resolution 489 (PLEN.19), on the intergovernmental structure and functions of the Commission, in which the Commission recommended that the current institutional structure of ECLAC should be maintained; Commission resolution 553 (XXVI),⁵ on the reform of the United Nations and its impact on the Commission, in which the Commission recommended that the current pattern of conferences of the Commission system should be continued; and Commission resolution 573 (XXVII),⁶ on technical cooperation among developing countries and regions,

Having examined the proposal on the establishment of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, which is contained in the annex to the present resolution,

Considering, finally, the nature of and the objectives set forth in the proposal on the establishment of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean,⁷

1. Approves the proposal on the establishment, as one of the subsidiary bodies of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution, with the observations and suggestions included in the report of the Commission on its twenty-eighth session;

2. Requests the Executive Secretary to submit for consideration by the relevant United Nations bodies such proposals as may be necessary for the establishment of the Statistical Conference of the Americas of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean;

3. Also requests the Executive Secretary to report on the fulfilment of the present resolution at the twenty-ninth session of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean.

3. Approves the holding of the twenty-ninth session of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean during the first half of 2002.

II. Matters brought to the attention of the Council

A. Economic Commission for Europe

3. At its fifty-fifth session, the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) adopted unanimously its annual report covering the period from 7 May 1999 to 5 May 2000. The matters set out below, taken from that report, are brought to the attention of the Council.

Operational activities: rethinking the strategy

4. ECE agreed that priority should continue to be given to demands for assistance from the most vulnerable transition economies, particularly those belonging to the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Balkan countries. It also agreed that the decisions on the basis of which operational activities were selected and given priority should take into account guidance from intergovernmental discussions and be based on actual ECE expertise, and reflect the recommendations of the external auditors. There was general agreement that ways to strengthen the Coordinating Unit for Operational Activities should be exploited in order to facilitate its work in terms of selection, prioritization and evaluation of its activities.

5. ECE also welcomed the secretariat's initiative with regard to developing joint projects with the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) for the Mediterranean region, as well as with ESCAP. It requested the secretariat to pursue its discussions with ECA and ESCWA after holding consultations with member countries to determine the areas of cooperation with the other two regional commissions. Some countries specifically requested to be informed by the secretariat in detail and in advance concerning the secretariat's tentative proposals in this field.

Report on the work of the Group of Experts on the Programme of Work

6. ECE endorsed the recommendation that biennialization would not be in its best interests at the present time. It requested the Group of Experts on the Programme of Work to consider whether any improvements should be made to the format of the annual session of the Commission and agreed that any recommendations arising from such deliberations should be submitted to an Ad Hoc Informal Meeting of the Commission later in the year.

B. Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific

Regional perspective on energy for sustainable development

7. The Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) noted that energy was a crucial input to economic and social development and improved quality of life, and that the energy sector was one of the major contributors to the deteriorating quality of the environment in the Asian and Pacific region. ESCAP also noted the report of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Energy and Sustainable Development (E/CN.17/2000/12), held in New York in March 2000, which recognized the need for the active exchange of information on energy and sustainable development leading to the ninth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, and the importance the Intergovernmental Group of Experts attached to regional cooperation in addressing the challenges of energy for sustainable development as well as the potential role of the regional commissions in providing a regional perspective thereon.

8. In recognition of the above considerations, ESCAP decided to hold a high-level regional meeting on energy for sustainable development and welcomed the offer of the Government of Indonesia to host the meeting. It urged all members, associate members, United Nations bodies and concerned agencies, regional institutes and organizations, and civil society to participate actively in the preparations for the meeting as well as in the meeting itself. ESCAP requested the secretariat to organize the high-level regional meeting on energy for sustainable development during November/December 2000 and to initiate substantive preparation for the meeting, in collaboration with the Government of Indonesia and other regional agencies and organizations, and in cooperation with the secretariat of the Commission on Sustainable Development. It also requested the secretariat to ensure effective coordination among Governments, relevant regional institutions and civil society to enable them to participate in and contribute to the meeting and to report to ESCAP at its fifty-seventh session on the outcome of the high-level regional meeting.

C. Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean

9. At its twenty-eighth session, held from 3 to 7 April 2000, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean adopted one resolution of particular interest to the Economic and Social Council.

Resolution 582 (XXVIII)

Mexico resolution on equity, development and citizenship

10. In resolution 582 (XXVIII) entitled "Mexico resolution on equity, development and citizenship", the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean welcomed the main document presented by the secretariat entitled "Equity, development and citizenship" inasmuch as it reinforced the idea that development was an integral process, regarded equity as the central pillar of the reorientation of the region's development pattern and brought to the forefront the validity of economic, social and cultural rights and their interdependence with civil and political rights. In that resolution, the Commission underscored the fact that the document had served to consolidate the Commission's approach to the necessary integration of macroeconomic aspects, institutions and regulatory systems with the operation of factor markets and micro-economic performance. It urged the secretariat to continue to deepen its analysis of the following issues: social policy as an integrative force; responsible macroeconomic policy based on a longer time-horizon; reinforcement of citizenship, understood as the effective participation of social actors, as an essential tool for strengthening social cohesion; the interrelationship between the development agendas of the countries and the policies associated with globalization process; and the construction of a stable, predictable financial system and its linkage with social development.
