I. Introduction

The Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) provides preferential duty-free entry to numerous products imported into the United States from over one hundred designated beneficiary countries and territories. The United States and twenty-six other industrialized countries adopted GSP programs in the 1970s, each of which varies according to the beneficiaries, products covered, and type of preferences granted. The purpose of this handbook is to spell out the terms of the U.S. program, with a special emphasis on how firms and governments in the beneficiary countries can best use this program to their fullest advantage.

Two major themes underlie the analysis here. The first is that policymakers and exporters should bear in mind the limitations of the GSP. This program is not, and cannot be, the principal basis for bilateral trade relationships between the United States and the beneficiary countries. Due to the numerous limitations of the program, it should instead be assessed on the basis of its significance for specific products. There are many products for which the program is entirely irrelevant (either because they are not eligible for the GSP or are already eligible for duty-free entry on a most-favored-nation basis),¹ others for which the program is extremely important (because they are GSP-eligible and would otherwise be subject to relatively high tariffs), and many more for which the GSP is of modest significance (because they are GSP-eligible but otherwise subject to relatively low tariffs). The first step that firms and governments should take in optimizing their benefits under the GSP is to determine where products of interest to them fit along this spectrum.

The second theme in this handbook is that, notwithstanding the limitations of the GSP, countries can take steps to make the most of the program. Countries would do well to determine whether their exporters are taking full advantage of the available opportunities. Moreover, the U.S. rules offer several means by which interested parties — U.S. and foreign — can petition for changes to the product coverage of the program. After finding out how the existing GSP product coverage affects products of interest to them, firms and governments should determine whether there are any steps that they should take to preserve or expand their benefits. Chief among these calculations is whether products of interest to the country are affected by the “competitive-need limits” on the amount of benefits that any country could receive for any product. While these limits generally work to the disadvantage of GSP beneficiary countries, there are steps that countries can take to protect their interests. These rules are discussed at length below, together with guidance on how firms and governments can best deal with them.

In addition to examining the information and the analysis that follows, readers should also consult the information in the appendices. Some of these issues are further explored in Appendix 8, which answers a series of frequently asked questions about the GSP.

II. How the U.S. Program is Administered

The administration of the U.S. GSP program can be divided into two distinct areas. The day-to-day operation of the program is primarily the responsibility of the U.S. Customs Service, which is part of the Department of the Treasury. See Appendix 4 for the regulations that govern the Customs Service’s implementation of the program.

While many of the policy issues in the GSP are theoretically decided by the president of the United States, in reality the chief executive’s decisions are made on the basis of advice provided by the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR) and other agencies. See Appendix 5 for the regulations that govern the USTR's conduct of GSP reviews. The address of the USTR's GSP office is as follows:

Office of the U.S. Trade Representative
600 17th Street, N.W., Room 518
Washington, D.C. 20508
Tel: (202) 395-6971 Fax: (202) 395-9481

The USTR consults with other U.S. Government agencies on all important issues affecting the GSP. The GSP Subcommittee of the Trade Policy Staff Committee is responsible for recommending to the president the actions that he should take on petitions that seek changes in the program's product or country coverage. This subcommittee is chaired by a USTR official and includes members from all government agencies with an interest in international economic relations (e.g., the departments of State, Commerce, Labor, etc.).

The GSP Subcommittee conducts annual reviews of the GSP program, in which it considers a wider range of petitions. Any interested party — embassies, government agencies, U.S. or foreign firms, etc. — may petition the GSP Subcommittee to request modifications in the list of products or countries eligible for GSP treatment. A beneficiary country can use this annual review to ask that the subcommittee add a product to the GSP, or that it waive the limits that apply to imports of a specific product. Other interested parties variously ask that the subcommittee add a product to the GSP, remove a product from the program, remove a specific country's eligibility for a specific product, or remove a country altogether from the GSP. The GSP Subcommittee usually decides within several weeks which of these petitions it will accept for review. The petitions that are accepted for review are then subject to a months-long process of hearings, advice from the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC),² and internal deliberations; the petitions that are not accepted die at this point.

III. Magnitude of the U.S. Program

The overall size of the GSP relative to total U.S. imports is rather small. This point is illustrated by the data in Figure 1, which show the break-down of U.S. imports in 1999. Imports from GSP beneficiary countries accounted for only about one-eighth of total U.S. imports, and the GSP accounted for only about ten percent of the imports from beneficiary countries. Altogether, only 1.3 percent of U.S. imports in 1999 entered duty-free under the GSP.

² Note that the USITC conducts an investigation that runs parallel to the GSP Subcommittee's consideration of petitions. Most of the same information that is presented in petitions and hearings to the GSP Subcommittee will also be presented to the USITC.

Figure 1
GSP Share of Total U.S. Imports
Shares of Total U.S. Imports in 1999

Source: Calculated from U.S. International Trade Commission data.

The place of the GSP in the U.S. import regime is further defined by the data in Table 1. Although the GSP does offer preferential access to the U.S. market, the program's beneficiary countries do not enjoy the most preferential treatment. The program covers fewer products than either the three free trade agreements that the United States has negotiated thus far (which cover all products) or the special trade preferences that have been established for Andean and Caribbean Basin countries.³

These data underline the point that the GSP should not be seen as the defining element in the trade relationship between the United States and the program's beneficiary countries. It instead provides a margin of preference for some products imported from some developing countries and territories. The restrictions on country and product eligibility are explained in greater depth in the next section.

³ Note that the data in Table 1 indicate that 13.0 percent of all imports from GSP beneficiary countries entered duty-free under the program in 1999, while the analysis of the data in Figure 1 indicated that the figure is closer to ten percent. The difference is explained by the fact that Figure 1 is based on imports from all GSP beneficiary countries, while the data in Table 1 isolate out those countries that are also beneficiaries of the ATPA and CBI.

Hierarchy of Access to the U.S. Market

Presented in descending order of preferential treatment; import data as of 1999

Type	Terms	Countries	Share of Imports	Share Entering Under Preferences
Free trade agreements	Comprehensive duty-free access to the U.S. market	Israel (since 1985), Canada (since 1989), and Mexico (since 1994)	31.2%	59.9%
Special trade preferences	Duty-free access for almost all exports other than oil, textiles and apparel, most leather products, and a few other exceptions	Most Central American and Caribbean countries under the Caribbean Basin Initiative (since 1984); Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru under the Andean Trade Preferences Act (since 1991, expires in 2001)	2.9%	15.8%
Generalized System of Preferences	Duty-free access for many exports, but several significant product areas are excluded, and numerous provisions allow for the removal of specific products or countries	Most developing and transition economies; among the exceptions are China, most OPEC members, some Asian newly-industrialized economies, and Nicaragua (a CBI country)	10.2%	13.0%
Permanent normal trade relations (NTR or PNTR)	Also known as unconditional most favored nation or non-discriminatory treatment. Countries benefit from tariff reductions negotiated since 1934 (Column 1 of the tariff schedules)	Major partners that receive PNTR but no preferences include the European Union, Japan, most OPEC countries, and Asian newly-industrialized economies	47.3%	0.0%
Conditional NTR	NTR treatment (as defined above) is subject to the freedom-of-emigration provisions of the Jackson-Vanik law	China, Albania, and most former Soviet republics are in this category (Albania and most former Soviet republics are also designated for GSP)	8.0%	0.0%
Denial of NTR treatment	Countries are subject to the tariff rates established under the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act of 1930 (i.e., Column 2)	This status is currently held only by Afghanistan, Cuba, Laos, North Korea, and Vietnam	0.1%	0.0%
Trade embargo	Countries are subject to partial or total embargoes; some of them nominally receive NTR treatment	Cuba, Iran, Iraq, Libya, North Korea, Sudan, and Yugoslavia are each subject to embargoes of varying intensity	0.3%	0.0%

Note: Some countries fall under more than one category. For data on shares of U.S. imports, countries are counted in the most favorable category that is applicable. For example, Russia can be classified both as a GSP beneficiary and a recipient of conditional NTR treatment; imports from that country are counted here in the GSP category.

“Share Entering Under Preferences” includes all imports from a group that enter under terms other than MFN.

Chronology of the GSP and Other U.S. Preferential Trade Programs

1947 Havana Charter for the International Trade Organization provides for “preferences ... in the interests of economic development,” but does not enter into effect.	1980 Ecuador, Indonesia, and Venezuela are designated as GSP beneficiaries.	1993-1995 Following a change in the law, most states of the former Soviet Union are designated for GSP.
1964 GSP is proposed at the first United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD I).	1983 The Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act provides superior preferences for Central American and Caribbean countries.	1993 The GSP is renewed several days after it expires.
1967 President Johnson indicates at the Punta del Este conference of Western Hemisphere leaders that he is prepared to consider preferences for developing countries.	1984 The Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 renews the GSP through mid-1993.	1994 The GSP is renewed three months after it expires.
1969 President Nixon declares his support for the GSP and includes it in the proposed Trade Act of 1969 that he sends to Congress for approval.	1985-1987 A general review of the GSP program leads to numerous changes in product eligibility.	1995 Israel is graduated from the GSP.
1971 GATT contracting parties grant a ten-year waiver for the GSP.	1985 Nicaragua’s GSP privileges are terminated for reasons of workers’ rights.	1996 The GSP is renewed thirteen months after it expires.
1974 Congress approves the GSP as part of the Trade Act of 1974.	1987 Paraguay is suspended from the GSP for reasons of workers’ rights.	1997 Many products are made GSP-eligible when imported from least-developed countries.
1975 The Trade Act of 1974 is signed into law, and countries are designated for the program.	1988 Chile is suspended from the GSP for reasons of workers’ rights.	In a dispute over intellectual property protection the United States removes half of Argentina’s GSP privileges. President Clinton proposes the African Growth and Opportunity Act for sub-Saharan African countries.
1976 The GSP enters into effect.	1989 Chinese Taipei, Hong Kong, Singapore, and South Korea are graduated from the GSP.	1998 Aruba, the Cayman Islands, Cyprus, Greenland, Malaysia, Macau, and the Netherlands Antilles are graduated from GSP.
1979 GATT contracting parties approve an Enabling Clause in the Tokyo Round, providing a permanent waiver and exempting the GSP from GATT rules. A provision in the Trade Agreements Act of 1979 allows for the designation to the GSP of OPEC member countries if they did not participate in the oil embargoes.	1991 Chile and Paraguay are reinstated to the GSP. The Andean Trade Preferences Act is enacted, providing superior preferences for Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, and Peru.	1999 Mongolia is designated for the GSP. President Clinton proposes the Southeast Europe Trade Preferences Act.
	1990-1992 Several Eastern European and Baltic states are designated for the GSP.

IV. Benefits and Eligibility

While some industrialized countries' GSP schemes provide for varying levels of preferential treatment, this aspect of the U.S. program is much more simple. All products that are eligible for preferential treatment enter entirely free of duty. For an import to qualify for duty-free treatment under the GSP, it must meet the following three requirements:

1. The article must be from a designated beneficiary country;
2. The product must be eligible for GSP treatment; and
3. The product must meet the rules of origin.

Each of these points is worth examining separately. In addition to reading the description that follows, readers are encouraged to examine the laws and regulations in the appendices. Appendix 3 reproduces the full text of the authorizing legislation for the GSP in the U.S. Code, while Appendix 4 consists of the U.S. Customs Service rules on the GSP (from the Code of Federal Regulations).

A. Country Eligibility

Many, but not all, developing countries and territories are designated as GSP beneficiaries. See the appendices for the status of independent (Appendix 1) and non-independent countries and territories (Appendix 2) under the U.S. program.

Country eligibility has evolved considerably over the past quarter century. The original GSP statute excluded Communist countries (other than Yugoslavia) and OPEC members, but both of those restrictions were later relaxed. Ecuador, Indonesia, Venezuela were designated to the GSP in 1980 (being OPEC countries that had not joined in the Arab countries' oil embargo), and most former Soviet republics and satellites won GSP benefits with the end of the Cold War. Other countries have been “graduated” from the GSP upon achieving sufficiently high levels of income and development; the four main Asian NIEs (i.e., Hong Kong, Korea, Singapore, and Taiwan) were graduated in 1989, and Malaysia was graduated in 1997. Mexico lost GSP when the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) entered into effect in 1994. Other countries have seen their benefits reduced, suspended, or terminated as a result of disputes over workers’ rights and other matters, as is discussed in a later section.

The U.S. program distinguishes between two categories of countries. Thirty-eight countries are considered by the United States to be least-developed beneficiary countries, as identified in Appendix 1. These countries enjoy two advantages not shared by the other beneficiaries: A much wider range of products that are eligible for GSP treatment (as discussed in section IV.B section), and they are not subject to the competitive-need limitations (as discussed in section V).

The law provides that a beneficiary country can be graduated completely from the program if “the President determines that a beneficiary developing country has become a ‘high income’ country, as defined by the official statistics of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.” This provision has been used to graduate several Asian newly-industrialized economies, among others.

B. Product Eligibility

Articles eligible for duty-free treatment are defined at the eight-digit level of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States (HTSUS). The products eligible for GSP treatment include most dutiable manufactures and semi-manufactures, as well as selected agricultural, fishery, and primary industrial products that are not otherwise duty-free.

In order to determine whether a product is GSP-eligible, one should know how to read the HTSUS. Figure 3 reproduces part of a page from the U.S. schedule, together with an explanation of its structure and codes. The principal distinction is between countries that receive NTR (MFN) treatment, as specified in Column 1, and those that are still subject to the high tariff rates in Column 2. While the Column 2 tariffs applied to many Communist countries during the Cold War, today only five countries remain subject to these rates.⁴ Countries that receive MFN treatment pay the tariffs that are shown in Column 1. Some of the countries that receive NTR treatment also benefit from preferential trade agreements or program tariffs, as shown in the “Special” sub-column of Column 1. Products that are eligible for GSP treatment are identified by the letter “A” in this sub-column. This designation is further qualified in the case of products for which some GSP countries are denied duty-free treatment (A*), and products that are eligible for GSP treatment only when imported from least-developed countries (A+).

Certain articles are prohibited from receiving GSP treatment. These include most textiles,⁵ watches, footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves and other leather wearing apparel which were not eligible for GSP on April 1, 1984. In addition, any other article determined to be “import sensitive” cannot be made eligible; in this regard, the GSP law specifically cites steel, glass, and electronic articles. Beyond these restrictions, the GSP Subcommittee is generally authorized to designate products for GSP treatment.

⁴ Afghanistan, Cuba, Laos, North Korea, and Vietnam. NTR agreements with Laos and Vietnam are currently pending.

⁵ Although textile and apparel products are generally excluded from the GSP, there are some exceptions to this rule. For example, six categories of textile products are eligible for GSP treatment when the GSP beneficiary has signed an agreement with the United States to provide certification that the items are hand-made products of the exporting beneficiary. The covered tariff categories are 5701.10.13, 5702.10.10, 5702.91.20, 5805.00.20, 6304.99.10, and 6304.99.40.

0703.90.00	00	Leeks and other alliaceous vegetables	kg	20%	Free (A+,CA,E,IL, J,MX)	50%

The numbers and nomenclature (product descriptions) used in the U.S. tariff schedule are identical to those used by all countries that adhere to the Harmonized Tariff System. The actual tariff rates applied by each country vary.

HTS item 0703.10.20 would face a tariff of 0.83 cents per kilogram rate if imported from a country that receives NTR treatment, or 5.5 cents per kilogram from a country that does not. It can be imported duty-free under the GSP, but the asterisk indicates that one or more countries are excluded.

HTS item 0703.10.40 can be imported duty-free from any GSP beneficiary country.

HTS item 0703.90.00 can be imported duty-free only from least-developed beneficiary countries of the GSP.

The eight-digit tariff item number identifies the product. It is at this level of specificity that tariff rates are determined.

The two-digit statistical suffix further distinguishes products for reporting purposes, but has no effect on the tariff rate.

The unit of quantity indicates whether the item is counted by weight, volume, number, etc. This helps to determine the tariff when rates are expressed in specific terms (e.g., the cents per kilogram for most products shown here) rather than ad valorem terms (e.g., the 20.0 percent for HTS item 0703.90.00).

Letters in the "Special" column indicate whether the product is eligible for duty-free or reduced-duty treatment under various preferential trade agreements or programs:

- A = Generalized System of Preferences
- A* = GSP (certain countries not eligible)
- A+ = GSP (only least-developed countries)
- CA = Canada (NAFTA)
- E = Caribbean Basin Initiative
- IL = U.S.-Israel FTA
- J = Andean Trade Preferences Act
- MX = Mexico (NAFTA)

C. Rules of Origin

The rules of origin provide that an article must be shipped directly from the beneficiary country to the United States without passing through the territory of any other country or, if shipped through the territory of another country, the merchandise must not have entered the commerce of that country in route to the United States.⁶ In all cases, the invoices must show the United States as the final destination.

The rules further provide that the sum of the cost or value of materials produced in the beneficiary country plus the direct costs of processing⁷ must equal at least 35 per cent of the appraised value of the article at the time of entry into the United States. Imported materials can

⁶ Articles transshipped between the beneficiary country and the United States are eligible for GSP under certain circumstances. Eligible articles shipped from a beneficiary developing country through a free trade zone in any other beneficiary will qualify for GSP if: (1) the merchandise does not enter into the commerce of the country maintaining the free trade zone; and (2) the eligible articles do not undergo any operations other than sorting, grading or testing, packing, unpacking, changing or packing, decanting, or repacking, affixing marks, labels, or any other distinguishing signs, or operations necessary to ensure the preservation of the merchandise in its condition as introduced into the free trade zone. Shipments may also be made through free trade zones in non-beneficiaries and still qualify for GSP if: (1) the merchandise remained under the customs authority of the intermediate country; (2) the merchandise does not enter into the commerce of the country maintaining the free zone, except for purchases or sale other than at retail; (3) the eligible articles do not undergo any operations other than loading and unloading, or other operations necessary to ensure the preservation of the merchandise in the condition as introduced into the free trade zone; and, (4) for articles transshipped through former beneficiaries who are members of regional associations (see below), the processing described in (2) above is permitted. This exception currently applies to goods of ASEAN beneficiaries transshipped through Singapore or Brunei Darussalam. If merchandise is purchased and resold, other than at retail, for export within the free trade zone, two Certificates of Origin are required: one from the original beneficiary noting that the goods are eligible for the United States GSP and containing the name of the consignee in the United States or the free trade zone, and one from the person responsible for the articles in the free trade zone, or any other person having knowledge of the facts, declaring what operations were performed within the zone.

⁷ The following may be included in the direct costs of processing: All those costs whether directly incurred in or which can be reasonably allocated to, the growth, production, manufacture or assembly of the merchandise in question, including: actual labour costs, fringe benefits, on-the-job training, and the cost of engineering, supervisory, quality control, and similar personnel; dies, moulds, tooling and depreciation on machinery and equipment, research, development, design, blue-print costs and engineering; and inspection and testing costs. The following may not be included in the direct cost of processing: Those items which are not directly attributable to the merchandise under consideration or are not "costs" of manufacturing, including profit and general expenses and business overhead (such as administrative salaries, casualty and liability insurance, advertising, and the salesman's salaries, commissions or expenses).

be counted toward the value-added requirement, only if they are “substantially transformed” into new and different constituent materials of which the eligible article is composed. Where articles are imported from GSP eligible regional associations, member countries of the association will be accorded duty-free entry if they together account for at least 35 percent of the appraised value of the article, the same for a single country. The Customs Service is charged with determining whether an article meets the GSP rules of origin.

The 35 percent value-added can be spread across more than one country when imported from GSP-eligible members of certain regional associations. Articles produced in two or more eligible member countries of an association will be accorded duty-free entry if the countries together account for at least 35 per cent of the appraised value of the article, the same requirement as for a single country. The competitive need limits will be assessed only against the country of origin and not against the entire association. There are currently five associations that may benefit from this provision: the Andean Group, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) excluding Singapore and Brunei Darussalam, the Caribbean Common Market (CARICOM), the Southern Africa Development Community (SADC), and the West African Economic and Monetary Union (WAEMU). The status of countries and territories under this regional-cumulation rule is summarized in appendices 1 and 2.

In most cases the merchandise will be appraised at the transaction value. This is the price actually paid or payable for the merchandise when sold for export to the United States, plus the following items if not already included in the price: (1) the packing costs incurred by the buyer; (2) any selling commission incurred by the buyer; (3) the value of any assist; (4) any royalty or license fee that the buyer is required to pay as a condition of the sale; and, (5) the proceeds, accruing to the seller, of any subsequent resale, disposal, or use of the imported merchandise. As a general rule, shipping and other costs related to the transport of the GSP articles from the port of export to the United States are neither included in the value of the article, nor in the value-added calculation.

It should be noted that the U.S. program does not require that GSP imports be accompanied by extensive documentation. It used to be the case that importers had to file a special “Form A” in order to obtain GSP treatment, but that requirement was eliminated several years ago.⁸ Today an importer requests GSP treatment simply by placing the prefix “A” before the HTSUS tariff number on the entry documentation. The only additional documentary requirements (other than those mentioned above for transactions within a free zone) pertain to certified handicraft textile products eligible for GSP duty-free treatment. A triangular seal certifying their authenticity and placed on the commercial invoice is required for entry.

V. The Competitive-Need Limitations

The principal restriction under the U.S. program, apart from the non-eligibility of certain categories of products, is the competitive-need limitations (CNLs). The CNLs are intended to prevent the extension of preferential treatment to countries that are already competitive in the production of an item. This section describes the general rules and principles of the CNLs, but readers are also urged to examine Appendix 5 (the USTR rules on the GSP in the Code of Federal Regulations). Note also that Appendix 8 offers a case study in the operation of the CNLs, examining the experience of ceramic roofing tiles imported from Venezuela.

The CNLs set a ceiling on GSP benefits for each product and country, and are triggered by the trade data that the GSP Subcommittee reviews on an annual basis. With certain exceptions and qualifications, a country will automatically lose its GSP eligibility for a given product (i.e., an eight-digit item in the tariff schedule) the year after the CNLs are exceeded. Since 1985 there have been two CNLs in place: the original, “upper” competitive need limit and a new, “lower” limit. The “upper” CNL remains the most common, and applies to the great majority of products and countries. It is triggered on a product if during any calendar year U.S. imports from a country account for half or more of the value of total U.S. imports of that product⁹ or exceed a certain dollar value that is adjusted annually. The figure was originally set at $25 million in 1975, and rose to $95 million by 2000. It will go up by an additional $5 million in each subsequent year (i.e., it will be $100 million in 2001, $105 million in 2002, etc.). Products that have been found by the GSP Subcommittee to be “sufficiently competitive” when imported from a specified beneficiary are subject to the “lower” CNL. For these products the trigger is 25 percent or a dollar value set at approximately 40 percent of the “upper” competitive need level. GSP modifications resulting from the application of competitive need limit take effect July 1 of the next calendar year.

Products that have exceeded the CNLs can be “graduated” (i.e., permanently removed) from the program. A product can be graduated on any one of three grounds: (1) in response to petitions submitted in the annual review; (2) in precluding individual beneficiaries from GSP eligibility on newly-designated articles; and (3) in denying redesignation to countries eligible for reinstatement of GSP status on specific articles.

There are two principal ways that a country can maintain its GSP benefits for a product even when it has exceeded the CNLs. One is by obtaining a de minimis waiver, which is a temporary (one year) exception available only to products that the United States imports in relatively small quantities. The other option is to obtain a permanent waiver of the CNLs for a specific product. A CNL waiver provides much greater protection than a de minimis waiver, and is correspondingly more difficult to obtain. Whereas a de minimis request can take the form of a relatively brief filing, in which the request for a waiver is backed by a modest amount of supporting data and arguments, a CNL petition requires a very substantial amount of information and is subject to a lengthy and difficult review.

Note that all CNLs are automatically waived for the 38 GSP beneficiaries that are designated as least developed countries (see Appendix 1).

A. De Minimis Waivers of the CNLs

The GSP Subcommittee can waive application of the CNLs for any product that is imported at a de minimis level. De minimis waivers are considered for all beneficiaries that exceeded the percentage CNL for a product, but only when U.S. imports from all countries (including GSP beneficiaries and all others) were below a certain dollar limit. Like the dollar-value CNL, the de minimis level is adjusted each year. For 1999 imports, it is set at $14.5 million. The GSP Subcommittee accepts public comments that either support or oppose the granting of waivers. The subcommittee is more likely to grant a waiver when it receives one or more detailed comments in support of a waiver (e.g., from an embassy or foreign exporter), and does not receive any comments opposing a waiver (e.g., from a U.S. producer).

It should be stressed that these waivers are temporary, and are granted only on a year-by-year basis. They are made entirely at the discretion of the GSP Subcommittee.

The schedule for the de minimis waivers and redesignations is summarized in Figure 4.

Typical Annual Schedule for De Minimis Decisions

Late January or early to mid-February	USTR publishes a “warning list” in the Federal Register , identifying products that (based on the previous year’s January-October data) appear in danger of exceeding the CNLs. The list further identifies those products that appear to be eligible for de minimis waivers or redesignation (pending the availability of full-year data).
Mid-March	Deadline for comments on de minimis waivers and petitions for redesignation, based on the USTR’s “warning list.”
Late spring or early summer	President’s decisions on competitive-need exclusions, de minimis waivers, and redesignations announced. These decisions are based on full-year data, and hence may differ from what the ten-month “warning list” had suggested. [This step used to be taken much earlier, but in recent years the deadline has been moved closer to the time that the changes take effect.]
July 1	Changes in the GSP take effect.

Note: The last two dates in the schedule coincide with the deadlines for the consideration of petitions in annual reviews, as discussed in the next section (see Figure 5).

B. Permanent Waivers of the CNLs

As amended in 1984, the GSP law also allows interested parties to petition for a CNL waiver for a product. This means submitting a request to the GSP Subcommittee in the annual review of the GSP, asking that a country be permitted to export unlimited amounts of a product duty-free to the United States. If granted, both the percentage and the dollar limit are waived.

CNL-waiver petitions are considered by the GSP Subcommittee in annual reviews. The timing for these reviews is summarized in Figure 5. In addition to considering CNL-waiver petitions, the reviews also cover “country practices” petitions (as discussed in section VI). The results of annual reviews are announced and implemented at the same time as the de minimis waivers discussed in the preceding section.

Petitions for the waiver of CNLs must conform to the GSP Model Petition prepared by the USTR. The model format is reproduced in Appendix 6 of this report. Given the complexity of the process and the details that are required for such petitions, many interested parties have found that it is useful to secure the services of Washington-based consultants or lawyers who are experienced in the preparation of CNL-waiver petitions.

Typical Annual Schedule for GSP Petitions

Mid-April, Year 1	Approximate time for the USTR to publish a notice in the Federal Register , announcing the schedule for and requesting the submission of petitions in the annual GSP review.
Mid-June, Year 1	Likely deadline for the submission of petitions in the annual GSP review.
Late Summer or early Fall, Year 1	GSP Subcommittee of the Trade Policy Staff Committee announces which of the petitions submitted in the annual review have been accepted for consideration, and the schedule for the investigation.
Winter, Year 2	Deadline for the submission of pre-hearing briefs to the USITC.
Fall or Winter, Year 1	Deadline for the submission of pre-hearing briefs to the GSP Subcommittee (or alternatively the submission of written statements in lieu of a personal appearance).
Winter, Year 1	USITC holds hearings, in preparation for its advice to the GSP Subcommittee.
Winter, Year 1	GSP Subcommittee holds hearings.
Winter, Year 1	Deadline for the submission of written statements to the USITC, either in addition to or in lieu of a personal appearance at the hearings.
Winter, Year 2	Deadline for the submission of post-hearing or rebuttal briefs to the GSP Subcommittee.
Winter, Year 2	USITC issues its advice to the president.
Spring, Year 2	Deadline for public comments on the USITC's advice to the president.
Late spring or early summer, Year 2	President's decisions in the annual review to be announced. [This step used to be taken earlier, but in recent years the deadline has been moved much closer to the time that the changes take effect.]
July 1, Year 2	Changes in the GSP take effect.

There are no absolute rules dictating the outcome of the GSP Subcommittee's deliberations. In deciding whether to grant a CNL waiver, the president (as advised by the subcommittee) must find that a waiver "is in the national economic interest of the United States." The law further specifies that he "shall give great weight to" whether the country is providing reasonable and equitable access to its market for U.S. goods and services, and the extent to which it is providing reasonable and effective protection to U.S. intellectual property rights. The law imposes limits on the value of CNL waivers that can be granted globally or to a specific country. While the law guides and limits what the GSP Subcommittee can do, in fact the members of this committee have fairly wide discretion. Past experience shows that, in general, a petitioner is more likely to be successful if it can offer a well-reasoned and factual argument that granting the petition for a CNL waiver will work to the benefit of both the developing country exporter and its consumers in the United States, without causing harm to U.S. producers. Conversely, it can be very difficult to obtain a CNL waiver if the initiative is actively opposed by a domestic U.S. producer. The process outlined in Figure 5 gives those producers multiple opportunities to express any objections that they might have.

C. Redesignation

Redesignation of a product and country will be considered if U.S. imports of that article from the affected country fall below the competitive need limitations in a subsequent year. As a practical matter, however, it is the policy of the GSP Subcommittee to redesignate a product only in conjunction with the granting of a CNL waiver.

VI. Elements of Reciprocity in the U.S. Program

As originally devised, the GSP program was supposed to be free from reciprocity. Industrialized countries were to extend these benefits to developing countries "with no strings attached,” but they did so in a non-contractual and autonomous fashion. This meant that it was within the legal right of the donor countries to reduce or terminate the benefits at any time. The operation of the GSP changed significantly with enactment of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984, which expanded the number of criteria that beneficiary countries were required to meet and enhanced the USTR’s authority to enforce these eligibility requirements. The USTR used these provisions as a neo-reciprocal tool in a general review of the GSP in 1985-1987, and in subsequent annual reviews.

The original impetus for the transformation of the GSP was bargaining between Congress and the White House. The Trade Act of 1974 had authorized the program for ten years. When the Reagan administration asked that Congress renew the GSP in 1984, interest groups and legislators saw an opportunity to promote their aims. The Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 allowed U.S. trade officials to make each GSP beneficiary country’s continued eligibility, either on a country-wide or product-specific basis, conditional upon its meeting certain eligibility requirements. The law specifically provided that beneficiary countries could lose some or all of their GSP privileges if they did not protect intellectual property, respect labor rights, resolve investment disputes, and meet other stipulations. It also allowed the USTR to offer countries more secure benefits on some products if they cooperated with the United States. The law and regulations of the GSP also require that when considering CNL-waiver petitions, the GSP Subcommittee must place “great weight” on the extent to which the country is providing reasonable and equitable access to its market for U.S. goods and services, and the extent to which the country is providing reasonable and effective protection to U.S. intellectual property rights.

The 1985-1987 general review allowed groups to bring complaints regarding “country practices,” including trade issues such as alleged restrictions on market access or failure to protect intellectual property rights. The issues raised in these petitions were discussed in the consultations that U.S. trade officials conducted in 1986. Although these consultations were not identified as “GSP negotiations,” so as not to violate the nonreciprocal nature of the program, they constituted negotiations for all practical purposes. The general review afforded U.S. negotiators an opportunity to raise issues with their counterparts in several countries, with the results of these consultations leading to continued GSP privileges for some countries, and reduced preferences for others.

The reciprocal elements of the U.S. program have also been encouraged by a key change in the rules of the global trade regime. While the Uruguay Round produced very significant gains for the United States in the form of agreements on each of the “new issues” (i.e., services, investment, and intellectual property rights), the revised dispute-settlement rules make it far more difficult for the United States to pursue its interests through unilateral action. There nevertheless remain some “loopholes” in the system. It would generally be WTO-illegal for the United States to retaliate against a WTO member country without first obtaining authorization from the WTO’s Dispute Settlement Body, that general rule does not apply if the retaliatory action does not itself violate the WTO rights of the target country. In this respect, it is extremely important to note that the preferences extended under the GSP are privileges rather than enforceable rights. Under the terms of the 1979 Enabling Clause (which “legalized” the GSP within the GATT regime), the beneficiary countries have no right to the preferences granted under these initiatives. The United States has increasingly employed the GSP and other preferential trade programs as substitute form of enforcement authority. This is true both for cases involving established trade issues such as intellectual property rights, as well as new issues such as labor rights.

The workers' rights issue has been the single most frequent issue raised in country-practices petitions. Following a precedent set in 1983 by the CBI legislation, which made trade privileges conditional inter alia upon a country's labor practices, the 1984 trade law amended the GSP by adding a nearly identical provision. Under the amended law, a GSP beneficiary country can lose its eligibility "if such country has not taken or is not taking steps to afford internationally recognized workers rights to workers in the country." The law defined these rights to include —

- (a) the right of association,
- (b) the right to organize and bargain collectively,
- (c) a prohibition on any form of forced or compulsory labor,
- (d) a minimum age for the employment of children, and
- (e) acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health.

The workers' rights issue has been the single most frequent issue raised in annual reviews of the GSP. It accounted for 121 out of the 192 "country practices" petitions that were filed with the USTR during 1985-1999.¹⁰ The investigations that followed these petitions led to commitments from some countries to improve their observance of labor rights, while others lost their GSP benefits either through temporary suspension (Burma, Central African Republic, Chile, Maldives, Mauritania, Paraguay, Sudan, and Syria) or permanent termination (Liberia and Nicaragua). One special case is Romania, where benefits were "permanently" terminated in 1987 but were then redesignated in 1994.

Violations of intellectual property rights (IPRs) are the second most common source of complaint in country-practices petitions. For example, in 1997 Argentina lost half of its GSP benefits in an IPR dispute with the United States. The decision was not made as part of a GSP annual review, but was instead a consequence of the “Special 301” IPR law. This statute requires that the USTR conduct annual reviews of trading partners’ IPR regimes, and can lead to the imposition of such sanctions as the imposition of penalty tariffs. In this instance, the USTR determined that the new Argentine patent law was not consistent with the Uruguay Round TRIPS agreement and decided to impose sanctions via the GSP law.

VII. Duration and Stability of the U.S. Program

The Trade Act of 1974 authorized the program for a ten-year period. The 1984 renewal act provided for reauthorization of the program until July 4, 1993, and ever since that date the survival of the GSP has been tenuous. The program lapsed for a period of several days in 1993, until Congress approved a fourteen-month renewal (applied retroactively to the date of expiration). The program then expired once again on September 30, 1994, with Congress retroactively renewing the program that December. This renewal expired on July 31, 1995. Congress renewed the GSP on August 20, 1996, only to let it expire once more on May 31, 1997. The August, 1997, renewal lasted through May 31, 1999. The most recent renewal was enacted in December, 1999, and will last through the end of September, 2001.

The principal reason for these brief GSP reauthorizations is that the program is no longer cost-free from a budgetary standpoint. The United States adopted new budget rules in 1990 that required a “pay-as-you-go” (PAYgo) approach to any measures that affect the budget.¹¹ Under the PAYgo rules, any bill that provides for an increase in government expenditures or (as is the case with tariff cuts) a decrease in government revenues must include offsetting measures. The ¹¹ The PAYgo principle dates back to the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget rules of 1985, but it was not applied to trade agreements and related programs (each of which affect tariffs and hence government revenue) until 1990.

PAYgo principle thus required that the NAFTA and the Uruguay Round implementing bills include new taxes, fees, spending cuts, or other measures in order to offset the effect of the foregone tariffs, and these same rules also apply to the GSP. These provisions created a new political complication for GSP. For every year that the GSP is renewed, legislators must approve hundreds of millions of dollars in spending cuts or tax increases. Proposals to liberalize imports from developing countries are already quite unpopular in many circles, and they do not become more politically attractive to legislators when they are associated with new taxes or spending cuts.

VIII. How Countries Can Make the Most of the GSP

The preceding analysis has emphasized the point that there are several restrictions built into the U.S. GSP program. Beneficiary countries can nevertheless take steps to ensure that they maximize the available benefits under the program. Four specific suggestions follow.

A. Ensure that GSP-Eligible Products Take Advantage of the Program

The first and most simple step is to ensure that GSP-eligible products are in fact taking advantage of the program. Firms and governments should take the following steps for all products of interest to them:

1. Determine what the HTSUS number is for a product, and whether or not that product is eligible for the GSP.
2. Look up whether or not the U.S. imports of that product are actually entering under the GSP. This can be done by examining the most recent trade data reported in the database of the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC), accessible on the Internet at <http://dataweb.usitc.gov/>.

3. If the data show that significant shares of the country's exports of a GSP-eligible product are not entering under the GSP, the firm or government should determine why the duty-free privileges are not being claimed.

It may be the case that the country's producers do not meet the GSP rules of origin, in which case it may be advisable to determine whether it is economically rational to change production processes (e.g., sourcing of components) in order to meet the rules of origin. If the rules of origin are already being met, the GSP privileges should be claimed.

B. Seek CNL Waivers When Appropriate

Countries should seek to avoid the loss of GSP benefits by reason of the CNLs. As a general rule, a GSP beneficiary country will do well to follow four simple rules:

1. Always submit comments in support of de minimis waivers for any products that are included in the USTR's annual "warning list."
2. All of the products identified in the warning list should also be considered candidates for CNL-waiver petitions later that same year.
3. Products that are eligible for redesignation to the GSP should also be considered candidates for CNL-waiver petitions, especially those for which current imports are near (but below) either the dollar-value or the percentage CNL.
4. Examine all available information, including recent trade data (as reported on the aforementioned USITC Web site) and any known plans for the expansion of production and exports, to determine whether CNL waivers should be sought for any other GSP-eligible products.

The logic behind point (2) is simple: Any product that needs a de minimis waiver in one year is in danger of losing its GSP benefits permanently in a future year. That could easily happen if the total U.S. imports of that product (i.e., from the specific country and all other sources) are growing. Even if there is little or no change in the amount that the country itself ships to the United States, it will not be possible to obtain such a waiver in the future if total U.S. imports exceed the de minimis level. These points can best be illustrated by considering a concrete example — ceramic roofing tiles (HTS item 6905.10.00) imported from Venezuela — which demonstrates the potential costs of not seeking a permanent CNL waiver.

C. Defend Against Petitions to Restrict or Remove Products

Countries should also be aware that the annual petition process offers opportunities for firms and interest groups that seek to restrict import competition in the U.S. market. Even if the firms and governments of beneficiary countries do not file petitions of their own, they should examine the petitions that are filed each year to determine whether any of them would reduce or remove their own benefits under the GSP. If necessary, they should be prepared to oppose these petitions by participating in the annual reviews.

D. Consider Seeking the Designation of New Products

The GSP Subcommittee can add new products to the list of GSP-eligible items, provided that the goods in question are not explicitly prevented from obtaining GSP treatment. It is worthwhile for a country or firm to consider petition for the GSP designation of any product that meets the following criteria:

1. The product is subject to duty on an NTR basis, and the tariff is high enough to matter (e.g., at least one percent).
2. The item has not yet been designated for the GSP.

3. The country is (among the GSP beneficiaries) one of the principal suppliers of this product to the United States, and/or has plans to expand its production and exportation of this item.
4. The item is not among those goods that are ineligible for the GSP by statute (i.e., the law specifically provides that certain goods such as textiles, steel products, oil, etc. cannot be designated for the GSP).

As in the case of CNL-waiver petitions, countries should be aware that the GSP Subcommittee requires substantial information in support of such a request. In addition to examining closely the GSP Model Petition (see Appendix 6), firms and governments should consider the option of retaining the services of Washington-based consultants or law firms that are experienced in the preparation of such petitions.

TITLE 19	—	CUSTOMS DUTIES
CHAPTER 12	—	TRADE ACT OF 1974
SUBCHAPTER V	—	GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES

Sec. 2461. Authority to extend preferences

The President may provide duty-free treatment for any eligible article from any beneficiary developing country in accordance with the provisions of this subchapter. In taking any such action, the President shall have due regard for:

- (1) the effect such action will have on furthering the economic development of developing countries through the expansion of their exports;
- (2) the extent to which other major developed countries are undertaking a comparable effort to assist developing countries by granting generalized preferences with respect to imports of products of such countries;
- (3) the anticipated impact of such action on United States producers of like or directly competitive products; and
- (4) the extent of the beneficiary developing country's competitiveness with respect to eligible articles.

Sec. 2462. Designation of beneficiary developing countries

(a) Authority to designate countries

(1) Beneficiary developing countries

The President is authorized to designate countries as beneficiary developing countries for purposes of this subchapter.

(2) Least-developed beneficiary developing countries

The President is authorized to designate any beneficiary developing country as a least-developed beneficiary developing country for purposes of this subchapter, based on the considerations in section 2461 of this title and subsection (c) of this section.

(b) Countries ineligible for designation

(1) Specific countries

The following countries may not be designated as beneficiary developing countries for purposes of this subchapter:

- (A) Australia.
- (B) Canada.
- (C) European Union member states.
- (D) Iceland.
- (E) Japan.
- (F) Monaco.
- (G) New Zealand.
- (H) Norway.
- (I) Switzerland.

(2) Other bases for ineligibility

The President shall not designate any country a beneficiary developing country under this subchapter if any of the following applies:

- (A) Such country is a Communist country, unless:
 - (i) the products of such country receive nondiscriminatory treatment,
 - (ii) such country is a WTO Member (as such term is defined in section 3501(10) of this title) and a member of the International Monetary Fund, and
 - (iii) such country is not dominated or controlled by international communism.
- (B) Such country is a party to an arrangement of countries and participates in any action pursuant to such arrangement, the effect of which is:
 - (i) to withhold supplies of vital commodity resources from international trade or to raise the price of such commodities to an unreasonable level, and
 - (ii) to cause serious disruption of the world economy.
- (C) Such country affords preferential treatment to the products of a developed country, other than the United States, which has, or is likely to have, a significant adverse effect on United States commerce.
- (D) (i) Such country:
 - (I) has nationalized, expropriated, or otherwise seized ownership or control of property, including patents, trademarks, or copyrights, owned by a United States citizen or by a corporation, partnership, or association which is 50 percent or more beneficially owned by United States citizens,
 - (II) has taken steps to repudiate or nullify an existing contract or agreement with a United States citizen or a corporation, partnership, or association which is 50 percent or more beneficially owned by United States citizens, the effect of which is to nationalize, expropriate, or otherwise seize ownership or control of property, including patents, trademarks, or copyrights, so owned, or
 - (III) has imposed or enforced taxes or other exactions, restrictive maintenance or operational conditions, or other measures with respect to property, including patents, trademarks, or copyrights, so owned, the effect of which is to nationalize, expropriate, or otherwise seize ownership or control of such property, unless clause (ii) applies.

- (ii) This clause applies if the President determines that:
 - (I) prompt, adequate, and effective compensation has been or is being made to the citizen, corporation, partnership, or association referred to in clause (i),
 - (II) good faith negotiations to provide prompt, adequate, and effective compensation under the applicable provisions of international law are in progress, or the country described in clause (i) is otherwise taking steps to discharge its obligations under international law with respect to such citizen, corporation, partnership, or association, or
 - (III) a dispute involving such citizen, corporation, partnership, or association over compensation for such a seizure has been submitted to arbitration under the provisions of the Convention for the Settlement of Investment Disputes, or in another mutually agreed upon forum, and the President promptly furnishes a copy of such determination to the Senate and House of Representatives.

- (E) Such country fails to act in good faith in recognizing as binding or in enforcing arbitral awards in favor of United States citizens or a corporation, partnership, or association which is 50 percent or more beneficially owned by United States citizens, which have been made by arbitrators appointed for each case or by permanent arbitral bodies to which the parties involved have submitted their dispute.

- (F) Such country aids or abets, by granting sanctuary from prosecution to, any individual or group which has committed an act of international terrorism or the Secretary of State makes a determination with respect to such country under section 2405(j)(1)(A) of title 50, Appendix.

- (G) Such country has not taken or is not taking steps to afford internationally recognized worker rights to workers in the country (including any designated zone in that country).

Subparagraphs (D), (E), (F), and (G) shall not prevent the designation of any country as a beneficiary developing country under this subchapter if the President determines that such designation will be in the national economic interest of the United States and reports such determination to the Congress with the reasons therefor.

(c) Factors affecting country designation

In determining whether to designate any country as a beneficiary developing country under this subchapter, the President shall take into account:

- (1) an expression by such country of its desire to be so designated;
- (2) the level of economic development of such country, including its per capita gross national product, the living standards of its inhabitants, and any other economic factors which the resident deems appropriate;
- (3) whether or not other major developed countries are extending generalized preferential tariff treatment to such country;
- (4) the extent to which such country has assured the United States that it will provide equitable and reasonable access to the markets and basic commodity resources of such country and the extent to which such country has assured the United States that it will refrain from engaging in unreasonable export practices;
- (5) the extent to which such country is providing adequate and effective protection of intellectual property rights;
- (6) the extent to which such country has taken action to:
 - (A) reduce trade distorting investment practices and policies (including export performance requirements); and
 - (B) reduce or eliminate barriers to trade in services; and
- (7) whether or not such country has taken or is taking steps to afford to workers in that country (including any designated zone in that country) internationally recognized worker rights.

(d) Withdrawal, suspension, or limitation of country designation

(1) In general

The President may withdraw, suspend, or limit the application of the duty-free treatment accorded under this subchapter with respect to any country. In taking any action under this subsection, the President shall consider the factors set forth in section 2461 of this title and subsection (c) of this section.

(2) Changed circumstances

The President shall, after complying with the requirements of subsection (f)(2) of this section, withdraw or suspend the designation of any country as a beneficiary developing country if, after such designation, the President determines that as the result of changed circumstances such country would be barred from designation as a beneficiary developing country under subsection (b)(2) of this section. Such country shall cease to be a beneficiary developing country on the day on which the President issues an Executive order or Presidential proclamation revoking the designation of such country under this subchapter.

(3) Advice to Congress

The President shall, as necessary, advise the Congress on the application of section 2461 of this title and subsection (c) of this section, and the actions the President has taken to withdraw, to suspend, or to limit the application of duty-free treatment with respect to any country which has failed to adequately take the actions described in subsection (c) of this section.

(e) Mandatory graduation of beneficiary developing countries

If the President determines that a beneficiary developing country has become a “high income” country, as defined by the official statistics of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, then the President shall terminate the designation of such country as a beneficiary developing country for purposes of this subchapter, effective on January 1 of the second year following the year in which such determination is made.

(f) Congressional notification

(1) Notification of designation

(A) In general

Before the President designates any country as a beneficiary developing country under this subchapter, the President shall notify the Congress of the President’s intention to make such designation, together with the considerations entering into such decision.

(B) Designation as least-developed beneficiary developing country

At least 60 days before the President designates any country as a least-developed beneficiary developing country, the President shall notify the Congress of the President’s intention to make such designation.

(2) Notification of termination

If the President has designated any country as a beneficiary developing country under this subchapter, the President shall not terminate such designation unless, at least 60 days before such termination, the President has notified the Congress and has notified such country of the President’s intention to terminate such designation, together with the considerations entering into such decision.

Sec. 2463. Designation of eligible articles

(a) Eligible articles

(1) Designation

(A) In general

Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the President is authorized to designate articles as eligible articles from all beneficiary developing countries for purposes of this subchapter by Executive order or Presidential proclamation after receiving the advice of the International Trade Commission in accordance with subsection (e) of this section.

(B) Least-developed beneficiary developing countries

Except for articles described in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (E) of subsection (b)(1) of this section and articles described in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) of this section, the President may, in carrying out section 2462(d)(1) of this title and subsection (c)(1) of this section, designate articles as eligible articles only for countries designated as least-developed beneficiary developing countries under section 2462(a)(2) of this title if, after receiving the advice of the International Trade Commission in accordance with subsection (e) of this section, the President determines that such articles are not import-sensitive in the context of imports from least-developed beneficiary developing countries.

(C) Three-year rule

If, after receiving the advice of the International Trade Commission under subsection (e) of this section, an article has been formally considered for designation as an eligible article under this subchapter and denied such designation, such article may not be reconsidered for such designation for a period of 3 years after such denial.

(2) Rule of origin

(A) General rule

The duty-free treatment provided under this subchapter shall apply to any eligible article which is the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country if :

- (i) that article is imported directly from a beneficiary developing country into the customs territory of the United States; and
- (ii) the sum of:
 - (I) the cost or value of the materials produced in the beneficiary developing country or any two or more such countries that are members of the same association of countries and are treated as one country under section 2467(2) of this title, plus
 - (II) the direct costs of processing operations performed in such beneficiary developing country or such member countries, is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of such article at the time it is entered.

(B) Exclusions

An article shall not be treated as the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country by virtue of having merely undergone:

- (i) simple combining or packaging operations, or
- (ii) mere dilution with water or mere dilution with another substance that does not materially alter the characteristics of the article.

(3) Regulations

The Secretary of the Treasury, after consulting with the United States Trade Representative, shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out paragraph (2), including, but not limited to, regulations providing that, in order to be eligible for duty-free treatment under this subchapter, an article:

- (A) must be wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country, or
- (B) must be a new or different article of commerce which has been grown, produced, or manufactured in the beneficiary developing country.

(b) Articles that may not be designated as eligible articles

(1) Import-sensitive articles

The President may not designate any article as an eligible article under subsection (a) of this section if such article is within one of the following categories of import-sensitive articles:

- (A) Textile and apparel articles which were not eligible articles for purposes of this subchapter on January 1, 1994, as this subchapter was in effect on such date.
- (B) Watches, except those watches entered after June 30, 1989, that the President specifically determines, after public notice and comment, will not cause material injury to watch or watch band, strap, or bracelet manufacturing and assembly operations in the United States or the United States insular possessions.
- (C) Import-sensitive electronic articles.
- (D) Import-sensitive steel articles.
- (E) Footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and leather wearing apparel which were not eligible articles for purposes of this subchapter on January 1, 1995, as this subchapter was in effect on such date.
- (F) Import-sensitive semi-manufactured and manufactured glass products.
- (G) Any other articles which the President determines to be import-sensitive in the context of the Generalized System of Preferences.

(2) Articles against which other actions taken

An article shall not be an eligible article for purposes of this subchapter for any period during which such article is the subject of any action proclaimed pursuant to section 2253 of this title or section 1862 or 1981 of this title.

(3) Agricultural products

No quantity of an agricultural product subject to a tariff-rate quota that exceeds the in-quota quantity shall be eligible for duty-free treatment under this subchapter.

(c) Withdrawal, suspension, or limitation of duty-free treatment; competitive need limitation

(1) In general

The President may withdraw, suspend, or limit the application of the duty-free treatment accorded under this subchapter with respect to any article, except that no rate of duty may be established with respect to any article pursuant to this subsection other than the rate which would apply but for this subchapter. In taking any action under this subsection, the President shall consider the factors set forth in sections 2461 and 2462(c) of this title.

(2) Competitive need limitation

(A) Basis for withdrawal of duty-free treatment

(i) In general

Except as provided in clause (ii) and subject to subsection (d) of this section, whenever the President determines that a beneficiary developing country has exported (directly or indirectly) to the United States during any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1995:

- (I) a quantity of an eligible article having an appraised value in excess of the applicable amount for the calendar year, or
- (II) a quantity of an eligible article equal to or exceeding 50 percent of the appraised value of the total imports of that article into the United States during any calendar year, the President shall, not later than July 1 of the next calendar year, terminate the duty-free treatment for that article from that beneficiary developing country.

(ii) Annual adjustment of applicable amount

For purposes of applying clause (i), the applicable amount is:

- (I) for 1996, $75,000,000, and
- (II) for each calendar year thereafter, an amount equal to the applicable amount in effect for the preceding calendar year plus $5,000,000.

(B) “Country” defined

For purposes of this paragraph, the term “country” does not include an association of countries which is treated as one country under section 2467(2) of this title, but does include a country which is a member of any such association.

(C) Redesignations

A country which is no longer treated as a beneficiary developing country with respect to an eligible article by reason of subparagraph (A) may, subject to the considerations set forth in sections 2461 and 2462 of this title, be redesignated a beneficiary developing country with respect to such article if imports of such article from such country did not exceed the limitations in subparagraph (A) during the preceding calendar year.

(D) Least-developed beneficiary developing countries

Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any least-developed beneficiary developing country.

(E) Articles not produced in the United States excluded

Subparagraph (A)(i)(II) shall not apply with respect to any eligible article if a like or directly competitive article was not produced in the United States on January 1, 1995.

(F) De minimis waivers

(i) In general

The President may disregard subparagraph (A)(i)(II) with respect to any eligible article from any beneficiary developing country if the aggregate appraised value of the imports of such article into the United States during the preceding calendar year does not exceed the applicable amount for such preceding calendar year.

(ii) Applicable amount

For purposes of applying clause (i), the applicable amount is:

- (I) for calendar year 1996, $13,000,000, and
- (II) for each calendar year thereafter, an amount equal to the applicable amount in effect for the preceding calendar year plus $500,000.

(d) Waiver of competitive need limitation

(1) In general

The President may waive the application of subsection (c)(2) of this section with respect to any eligible article of any beneficiary developing country if, before July 1 of the calendar year beginning after the calendar year for which a determination described in subsection (c)(2)(A) of this section was made with respect to such eligible article, the President:

- (A) receives the advice of the International Trade Commission under section 1332 of this title on whether any industry in the United States is likely to be adversely affected by such waiver,
- (B) determines, based on the considerations described in sections 2461 and 2462(c) of this title and the advice described in subparagraph (A), that such waiver is in the national economic interest of the United States, and
- (C) publishes the determination described in subparagraph (B) in the Federal Register.

(2) Considerations by the President

In making any determination under paragraph (1), the President shall give great weight to:

- (A) the extent to which the beneficiary developing country has assured the United States that such country will provide equitable and reasonable access to the markets and basic commodity resources of such country, and
- (B) the extent to which such country provides adequate and effective protection of intellectual property rights.

(3) Other bases for waiver

The President may waive the application of subsection (c)(2) of this section if, before July 1 of the calendar year beginning after the calendar year for which a determination described in subsection (c)(2) of this section was made with respect to a beneficiary developing country, the President determines that:

- (A) there has been a historical preferential trade relationship between the United States and such country,
- (B) there is a treaty or trade agreement in force covering economic relations between such country and the United States, and
- (C) such country does not discriminate against, or impose unjustifiable or unreasonable barriers to, United States commerce, and the President publishes that determination in the Federal Register.

(4) Limitations on waivers

(A) In general

The President may not exercise the waiver authority under this subsection with respect to a quantity of an eligible article entered during any calendar year beginning after 1995, the aggregate appraised value of which equals or exceeds 30 percent of the aggregate appraised value of all articles that entered duty-free under this subchapter during the preceding calendar year.

(B) Other waiver limits

The President may not exercise the waiver authority provided under this subsection with respect to a quantity of an eligible article entered during any calendar year beginning after 1995, the aggregate appraised value of which exceeds 15 percent of the aggregate appraised value of all articles that have entered duty-free under this subchapter during the preceding calendar year from those beneficiary developing countries which for the preceding calendar year:

- (i) had a per capita gross national product (calculated on the basis of the best available information, including that of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development) of $5,000 or more; or
- (ii) had exported (either directly or indirectly) to the United States a quantity of articles that was duty-free under this subchapter that had an aggregate appraised value of more than 10 percent of the aggregate appraised value of all articles that entered duty-free under this subchapter during that year.

(C) Calculation of limitations

There shall be counted against the limitations imposed under subparagraphs (A) and (B) for any calendar year only that value of any eligible article of any country that:

- (i) entered duty-free under this subchapter during such calendar year; and
- (ii) is in excess of the value of that article that would have been so entered during such calendar year if the limitations under subsection (c)(2)(A) of this section applied.

(5) Effective period of waiver

Any waiver granted under this subsection shall remain in effect until the President determines that such waiver is no longer warranted due to changed circumstances.

(e) International Trade Commission advice

Before designating articles as eligible articles under subsection (a)(1) of this section, the President shall publish and furnish the International Trade Commission with lists of articles which may be considered for designation as eligible articles for purposes of this subchapter. The provisions of sections 2151, 2152, 2153, and 2154 of this title shall be complied with as though action under section 2461 of this title and this section were action under section 2133 of this title to carry out a trade agreement entered into under section 2133 of this title.

(f) Special rule concerning Puerto Rico

No action under this subchapter may affect any tariff duty imposed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico pursuant to section 1319 of this title on coffee imported into Puerto Rico.

TITLE 19 — CUSTOMS DUTIES

PART 10 — ARTICLES CONDITIONALLY FREE, SUBJECT TO A REDUCED RATE, ETC.

Sec. 10.172 Claim for exemption from duty under the Generalized System of Preferences.

A claim for an exemption from duty on the ground that the Generalized System of Preferences applies shall be allowed by the port director only if he is satisfied that the requirements set forth in this section and Secs. 10.173 through 10.178 have been met. If duty-free treatment is claimed at the time of entry, a written claim shall be filed on the entry document by placing the symbol “A” as a prefix to the subheading of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States for each article for which such treatment is claimed.

Sec. 10.173 Evidence of country of origin.

(a) Shipments covered by a formal entry

(1) Merchandise not wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country.

(i) Declaration. In a case involving merchandise covered by a formal entry which is not wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a single beneficiary developing country, the exporter of the merchandise or other appropriate party having knowledge of the relevant facts shall be prepared to submit directly to the port director, upon request, a declaration setting forth all pertinent detailed information concerning the production or manufacture of the merchandise. When requested by the port director, the declaration shall be prepared in substantially the following form:

GSP DECLARATION

I, _____
 (name), hereby declare that the articles described below were produced or manufactured in _____ (country) by means of processing operations performed in that country as set forth below and were also subjected to processing operations in the other country or countries which are members of the same association of countries as set forth below and incorporate materials produced in the country named above or in any other country or countries which are members of the same association of countries as set forth below:

(ii) Retention of records and submission of declaration. The information necessary for preparation of the declaration shall be retained in the files of the party responsible for its preparation and submission for a period of 5 years. In the event that the port director requests submission of the declaration during the 5-year period, it shall be submitted by the appropriate party directly to the port director within 60 days of the date of the request or such additional period as the port director may allow for good cause shown. Failure to submit the declaration in a timely fashion will result in a denial of duty-free treatment.

(2) Merchandise wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country.

In a case involving merchandise covered by a formal entry which is wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a single beneficiary developing country, a statement to that effect shall be included on the commercial invoice provided to Customs.

(b) Shipments covered by an informal entry.

Although the filing of the declaration provided for in paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section will not be required for a shipment covered by an informal entry, the port director may require such other evidence of country of origin as deemed necessary.

(c) Verification of documentation.

Any evidence of country of origin submitted under this section shall be subject to such verification as the port director deems necessary. In the event that the port director is prevented from obtaining the necessary verification, the port director may treat the entry as dutiable.

Sec. 10.174 Evidence of direct shipment.

(a) Documents constituting evidence of direct shipment.

The port director may require that appropriate shipping papers, invoices, or other documents be submitted within 60 days of the date of entry as evidence that the articles were “imported directly”, as that term is defined in Sec. 10.175. Any evidence of direct shipment required by the port director shall be subject to such verification as he deems necessary.

(b) Waiver of evidence of direct shipment.

The port director may waive the submission of evidence of direct shipment when he is otherwise satisfied, taking into consideration the kind and value of the merchandise, that the merchandise clearly qualifies for treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences.

Sec. 10.175 Imported directly defined.

Eligible articles shall be imported directly from a beneficiary developing country to qualify for treatment under the Generalized System of Preferences. For purposes of Secs. 10.171 through 10.178 the words “imported directly” mean:

- (a) Direct shipment from the beneficiary country to the United States without passing through the territory of any other country; or
- (b) If the shipment is from a beneficiary developing country to the U.S. through the territory of any other country, the merchandise in the shipment does not enter into the commerce of any other country while en route to the U.S., and the invoice, bills of lading, and other shipping documents show the U.S. as the final destination; or
- (c) If shipped from the beneficiary developing country to the United States through a free trade zone in a beneficiary developing country, the merchandise shall not enter into the commerce of the country maintaining the free trade zone, and
 - (1) The eligible articles must not undergo any operation other than:
 - (i) Sorting, grading, or testing,
 - (ii) Packing, unpacking, changes of packing, decanting or repacking into other containers,
 - (iii) Affixing marks, labels, or other like distinguishing signs on articles or their packing, if incidental to operations allowed under this section, or
 - (iv) Operations necessary to ensure the preservation of merchandise in its condition as introduced into the free trade zone.
 - (2) Merchandise may be purchased and resold, other than at retail, for export within the free trade zone.
 - (3) For the purposes of this section, a free trade zone is a predetermined area or region declared and secured by or under governmental authority, where certain operations may be performed with respect to articles, without such articles having entered into the commerce of the country maintaining the free trade zone; or
- (d) If the shipment is from any beneficiary developing country to the U.S through the territory of any other country and the invoices and other documents do not show the U.S as the final destination, the articles in the shipment upon arrival in the U.S. are imported directly only if they:
 - (1) Remained under the control of the customs authority of the intermediate country;
 - (2) Did not enter into the commerce of the intermediate country except for the purpose of sale other than at retail, and the port director is satisfied that the importation results from the original commercial transaction between the importer and the producer or the latter's sales agent; and
 - (3) Were not subjected to operations other than loading and unloading, and other activities necessary to preserve the articles in good condition; or
- (e) (1) Shipment to the U.S. from a beneficiary developing country which is a member of an association of countries treated as one country under section 502(a)(3), Trade Act of 1974, as amended (19 U.S.C. 2462(a)(3)), through the territory of a former beneficiary developing country whose designation as a member of the same association for GSP purposes was terminated by the President pursuant to section 504, Trade Act of 1974, as amended (19 U.S.C. 2464), provided the articles in the shipment did not enter into the commerce of the former beneficiary developing country except for purposes of performing one or more of the operations specified in paragraph (c)(1) of this section and except for purposes of purchase or resale, other than at retail, for export.
 - (2) The designation of the following countries as members of an association of countries for GSP purposes has been terminated by the President pursuant to section 504 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2464):

The Bahamas
Brunei Darussalam
Singapore

Sec. 10.176 Country of origin criteria.

(a) Merchandise produced in a beneficiary developing country or any two or more countries which are members of the same association of countries.

Merchandise which is (1) the growth, product, manufacture, or assembly of (i) a beneficiary developing country or (ii) any two or more countries which are members of the same association of countries and (2) imported directly from such beneficiary developing country or member countries, may qualify for duty-free entry under the Generalized System of Preferences (“GSP”). However, duty free entry under GSP may be accorded only if: (i) The sum of the cost or value of the materials produced in the beneficiary developing country or any two or more countries which are members of the same association of countries which is treated as one country under section 502(a)(3), Trade Act of 1974, as amended (19 U.S.C. 2462(a)(3)), plus (ii) the direct costs of processing operations performed in such beneficiary developing country or member countries, is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of the article at the time of its entry into the customs territory of the United States.

(b) [Reserved]

(c) Merchandise grown, produced, or manufactured in a beneficiary developing country.

Merchandise which is wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of a beneficiary developing country, or an association of countries treated as one country under section 502(a)(3) of the Trade Act of 1974 as amended (19 U.S.C. 2462(a)(3)) and Sec. 10.171(b), and manufactured products consisting of materials produced only in such country or countries, shall normally be presumed to meet the requirements set forth in this section.

Sec. 10.177 Cost or value of materials produced in the beneficiary developing country.

(a) “Produced in the beneficiary developing country” defined.

For purposes of Secs. 10.171 through 10.178, the words “produced in the beneficiary developing country” refer to the constituent materials of which the eligible article is composed which are either:

- (1) Wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of the beneficiary developing country; or
- (2) Substantially transformed in the beneficiary developing country into a new and different article of commerce.

(b) Questionable origin.

When the origin of an article either is not ascertainable or not satisfactorily demonstrated to the port director, the article shall not be considered to have been produced in the beneficiary developing country.

(c) Determination of cost or value of materials produced in the beneficiary developing country.

- (1) The cost or value of materials produced in the beneficiary developing country includes:
 - (i) The manufacturer's actual cost for the materials;
 - (ii) When not included in the manufacturer's actual cost for the materials, the freight, insurance, packing, and all other costs incurred in transporting the materials to the manufacturer's plant;
 - (iii) The actual cost of waste or spoilage (material list), less the value of recoverable scrap; and
 - (iv) Taxes and/or duties imposed on the materials by the beneficiary developing country, or an association of countries treated as one country, provided they are not remitted upon exportation.
- (2) Where the material is provided to the manufacturer without charge, or at less than fair market value, its cost or value shall be determined by computing the sum of:
 - (i) All expenses incurred in the growth, production, manufacture or assembly of the material, including general expenses;
 - (ii) An amount for profit; and
 - (iii) Freight, insurance, packing, and all other costs incurred in transporting the materials to the manufacturer's plant.

If the pertinent information needed to compute the cost or value of the materials is not available, the appraising officer may ascertain or estimate the value thereof using all reasonable ways and means at his disposal.

Sec. 10.178 Direct costs of processing operations performed in the beneficiary developing country.

(a) Items included in the direct costs of processing operations.

As used in Sec. 10.176, the words "direct costs of processing operations" means those costs either directly incurred in, or which can be reasonably allocated to, the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the specific merchandise under consideration. Such costs include, but are not limited to:

- (1) All actual labor costs involved in the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the specific merchandise, including fringe benefits, on-the-job training, and the cost of engineering, supervisory, quality control, and similar personnel;
- (2) Dies, molds, tooling, and depreciation on machinery and equipment which are allocable to the specific merchandise;
- (3) Research, development, design, engineering, and blueprint costs insofar as they are allocable to the specific merchandise; and
- (4) Costs of inspecting and testing the specific merchandise.

(b) Items not included in the direct costs of processing operations.

Those items which are not included within the meaning of the words "direct costs of processing operations" are those which are not directly attributable to the merchandise under consideration or are not "costs" of manufacturing the product. These include, but are not limited to:

(1) Profit; and

(2) General expenses of doing business which are either not allocable to the specific merchandise or are not related to the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the merchandise, such as administrative salaries, casualty and liability insurance, advertising, and salesmen's salaries, commissions, or expenses

(GSP (15 CFR PART 2007))

Sec. 2007.0 Requests for reviews.

(a) An interested party may submit a request (1) that additional articles be designated as eligible for GSP duty-free treatment, provided that the article has not been accepted for review within the three preceding calendar years; or (2) that the duty-free treatment accorded to eligible articles under the GSP be withdrawn, suspended or limited; or (3) for a determination of whether a like or directly competitive product was produced in the United States on January 3, 1985 for the purposes of section 504(d)(1) (19 U.S.C. 2464(d)(1)); or (4) that the President exercise his waiver authority with respect to a specific article or articles pursuant to section 504(c)(3) (19 U.S.C. 2464(c)(3)); or (5) that product coverage be otherwise modified.

(b) During the annual reviews and general reviews conducted pursuant to the schedule set out in Sec. 2007.3 any person may file a request to have the GSP status of any eligible beneficiary developing country reviewed with respect to any of the designation criteria listed in section 502(b) or 502(c) (19 U.S.C. 2642 (b) and (c)). Such requests must (1) specify the name of the person or the group requesting the review; (2) identify the beneficiary country that would be subject to the review; (3) indicate the specific section 502(b) or 502(c) criteria which the requestor believes warrants review; (4) provide a statement of reasons why the beneficiary country's status should be reviewed along with all available supporting information; (5) supply any other relevant information as requested by the GSP Subcommittee. If the subject matter of the request has been reviewed pursuant to a previous request, the request must include substantial new information warranting further consideration of the issue.

(c) An interested party or any other person may make submissions supporting, opposing or otherwise commenting on a request submitted pursuant to either paragraph (a) or (b) of this section.

(d) For the purposes of the regulations set out under Sec. 2007.0 et seq., an interested party is defined as a party who has significant economic interest in the subject matter of the request, or any other party representing a significant economic interest that would be materially affected by the action requested, such as a domestic producer of a like or directly competitive article, a commercial importer or retailer of an article which is eligible for the GSP or for which such eligibility is requested, or a foreign government.

(e) All requests and other submissions should be submitted in 20 copies, and should be addressed to the Chairman, GSP Subcommittee, Trade Policy Staff Committee, Office of the United States Trade Representative, 600 17th Street, NW., Washington, DC 20506. Requests by foreign governments may be made in the form of diplomatic correspondence provided that such requests comply with the requirements of Sec. 2007.1.

(f) The Trade Policy Staff Committee (TPSC) may at any time, on its own motion, initiate any of the actions described in paragraph (a) or (b) of this section.

Sec. 2007.1 Information required of interested parties in submitting requests for modifications in the last of eligible articles.

(a) General Information Required. A request submitted pursuant to this part, hereinafter also referred to as a petition, except requests submitted pursuant to Sec. 2007.0(b), shall state clearly on the first page that it is a request for action with respect to the provision of duty-free treatment for an article or articles under the GSP, and must contain all information listed in this paragraph and in paragraphs (b) and (c). Petitions which do not contain the information required by this paragraph shall not be accepted for review except upon a showing that the petitioner made a good faith effort to obtain the information required. Petitions shall contain, in addition to any other information specifically requested, the following information:

- (1) The name of the petitioner, the person, firm or association represented by the petitioner, and a brief description of the interest of the petitioner claiming to be affected by the operation of the GSP;
- (2) An identification of the product or products of interest to the petitioner, including a detailed description of products and their uses and the identification of the pertinent item number of the Tariff Schedules of the United States (TSUS). Where the product or products of interest are included with other products in a basket category of the TSUS, provide a detailed description of the product or products of interest;
- (3) A description of the action requested, together with a statement of the reasons therefor and any supporting information;
- (4) A statement of whether to the best of the Petitioner's knowledge, the reasoning and information has been presented to the TPSC previously either by the petitioner or another party. If the Petitioner has knowledge the request has been made previously, it must include either new information which indicates changed circumstances or a rebuttal of the factors supporting the denial of the previous request. If it is a request for a product addition, the previous request must not have been formally accepted for review within the preceding three calendar year period; and
- (5) A statement of the benefits anticipated by the petitioner if the request is granted, along with supporting facts or arguments.

(b) Requests to withdraw, limit or suspend eligibility with respect to designated articles. Petitions requesting withdrawal or limitation of duty-free treatment accorded under GSP to an eligible article or articles must include the following information with respect to the relevant United States industry for the most recent three year period:

- (1) The names, number and locations of the firms producing a like or directly competitive product;
- (2) Actual production figures;
- (3) Production capacity and capacity utilization;
- (4) Employment figures, including number, type, wage rate, location, and changes in any of these elements;
- (5) Sales figures in terms of quantity, value and price;
- (6) Quantity and value of exports, as well as principal export markets;

- (7) Profitability of firm on firms producing the like product, if possible show profit data by product line;
- (8) Analysis of cost including materials, labor and overhead;
- (9) A discussion of the competitive situation of the domestic industry;
- (10) Identification of competitors; analysis of the effect imports receiving duty-free treatment under the GSP have on competition and the business of the interest on whose behalf the request is made;
- (11) Any relevant information relating to the factors listed in section 501 and 502(c) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended (19 U.S.C. 2501, 502(c)) such as identification of tariff and non-tariff barriers to sales in foreign markets;
- (12) Any other relevant information including any additional information that may be requested by the GSP Subcommittee.

This information should be submitted with the request for each article that is the subject of the request, both for the party making the request, and to the extent possible, for the industry to which the request pertains.

(c) Requests to designate new articles. Information to be provided in petitions requesting the designation of new articles submitted by interested parties must include for the most recent three year period the following information for the beneficiary country on whose behalf the request is being made and, to the extent possible, other principal beneficiary country suppliers:

- (1) Identification of the principal beneficiary country suppliers expected to benefit from proposed modification;
- (2) Name and location of firms;
- (3) Actual production figures (and estimated increase in GSP status is granted);
- (4) Actual production and capacity utilization (and estimated increase if GSP status is granted);
- (5) Employment figures, including numbers, type, wage rate, location and changes in any of these elements if GSP treatment is granted;
- (6) Sales figures in terms of quantity, value and prices;
- (7) Information on total exports including principal markets, the distribution of products, existing tariff preferences in such markets, total quantity, value and trends in exports;
- (8) Information on exports to the United States in terms of quantity, value and price, as well as considerations which affect the competitiveness of these exports relative to exports to the United States by other beneficiary countries of a like or directly competitive product. Where possible, petitioners should provide information on the development of the industry in beneficiary countries and trends in their production and promotional activities;
- (9) Analysis of cost including materials, labor and overhead;
- (10) Profitability of firms producing the product;
- (11) Information on unit prices and a statement of other considerations such as variations in quality or use that affect price competition;
- (12) If the petition is submitted by a foreign government or a government controlled entity, it should include a statement of the manner in which the requested action would further the economic development of the country submitting the petition;
- (13) If appropriate, an assessment of how the article would qualify under the GSP's 35 percent value-added requirements; and
- (14) Any other relevant information, including any information that may be requested by the GSP Subcommittee.

Submissions made by persons in support of or opposition to a request made under this part should conform to the requirements for requests contained in Sec. 2007.1(a) (3) and (4), and should supply such other relevant information as is available.

Sec. 2007.2 Action following receipt of requests for modifications in the list of eligible articles and for reviews of the GSP status of eligible beneficiary countries with respect to designation criteria.

(a) (1) If a request submitted pursuant to Sec. 2007.0(a) does not conform to the requirements set forth above, or if it is clear from available information that the request does not warrant further consideration, the request shall not be accepted for review. Upon written request, requests which are not accepted for review will be returned together with a written statement of the reasons why the request was not accepted.

(2) If a request submitted pursuant to Sec. 2007.0(b) does not conform to the requirements set forth above, or if the request does not provide sufficient information relevant to subsection 502(b) or 502(c) (19 U.S.C. 2642 (b) and (c)) to warrant review, or if it is clear from available information that the request does not fall within the criteria of subsection 502(b) or 502(c), the request shall not be accepted for review. Upon written request, requests which are not accepted for review will be returned together with a written statement of the reasons why the request was not accepted.

(b) Requests which conform to the requirements set forth above or for which petitioners have demonstrated a good faith effort to obtain information in order to meet the requirements set forth above, and for which further consideration is deemed warranted, shall be accepted for review.

(c) The TPSC shall announce in the Federal Register those requests which will be considered for full examination in the annual review and the deadlines for submissions made pursuant to the review, including the deadlines for submission of comments on the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC) report in instances in which USITC advice is requested.

(d) In conducting annual reviews, the TPSC shall hold public hearings in order to provide the opportunity for public testimony on petitions and requests filed pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of Sec. 2007.0.

(e) As appropriate, the USTR on behalf of the President will request advice from the USITC.

(f) The GSP Subcommittee of the TPSC shall conduct the first level of interagency consideration under this part, and shall submit the results of its review to the TPSC.

(g) The TPSC shall review the work of the GSP Subcommittee and shall conduct, as necessary, further reviews of requests submitted and accepted under this part. Unless subject to additional review, the TPSC shall prepare recommendations for the President on any modifications to the GSP under this part. The Chairman of the TPSC shall report the results of the TPSC's review to the U.S. Trade Representative who may convene the Trade Policy Review Group (TPRG) or the Trade Policy Committee (TPC) for further review of recommendations and other decisions as necessary. The U.S. Trade Representative, after receiving the advice of the TPSC, TPRG or TPC, shall make recommendations to the President on any modifications to the GSP under this part, including recommendations that no modifications be made.

(h) In considering whether to recommend: (1) That additional articles be designated as eligible for the GSP; (2) that the duty-free treatment accorded to eligible articles under the GSP be withdrawn, suspended or limited; (3) that product coverage be otherwise modified; or (4) that changes be made with respect to the GSP status of eligible beneficiary countries, the GSP Subcommittee on behalf of the TPSC, TPRG, or TPC shall review the relevant information submitted in connection with or concerning a request under this part together with any other information which may be available relevant to the statutory prerequisites for Presidential action contained in Title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended (19 U.S.C. 2461-2465).

Sec. 2007.3 Timetable for reviews.

(a) Annual review.

Beginning in calendar year 1986, reviews of pending requests shall be conducted at least once each year, according to the following schedule, unless otherwise specified by Federal Register notice:

- (1) June 1, deadline for acceptance of petitions for review;
- (2) July 15, Federal Register announcement of petitions accepted for review;
- (3) September/October — public hearings and submission of written briefs and rebuttal materials;
- (4) December/January — opportunity for public comment on USITC public reports;
- (5) Results announced on April 1 will be implemented on July 1, the statutory effective date of modifications to the program. If the date specified is on or immediately follows a weekend or holiday, the effective date will be on the second working day following such weekend or holiday.

(b) Requests filed pursuant to paragraph (a) or (b) of Sec. 2007.0 which indicate the existence of unusual circumstances warranting an immediate review may be considered separately.

Requests for such urgent consideration should contain a statement of reasons indicating why an expedited review is warranted.

(c) General Review.

Section 504(c)(2) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2464(c)(2)) requires that, not later than January 4, 1987 and periodically thereafter, the President conduct a general review of eligible articles based on the considerations in sections 501 and 502(c) of Title V. The initiation and scheduling of such reviews as well as the timetable for submission of comments and statements will be announced in the Federal Register. The first general review was initiated on February 14, 1985 and will be completed by January 3, 1987. The initiation of the review and deadlines for submission of comments and statements were announced in the Federal Register on February 14, 1985 (50 FR 6294).

Sec. 2007.4 Publication regarding requests.

(a) Whenever a request is received which conforms to these regulations or which is accepted pursuant to Sec. 2007.2 a statement of the fact that the request has been received, the subject matter of the request (including if appropriate, the TSUS item number or numbers and description of the article or articles covered by the request), and a request for public comment on the petitions received shall be published in the Federal Register.

(b) Upon the completion of a review and publication of any Presidential action modifying the GSP, a summary of the decisions made will be published in the Federal Register including:

- (1) A list of actions taken in response to requests; and

(2) A list of requests which are pending.

(c) Whenever, following a review, there is to be no change in the status of an article with respect to the GSP in response to a request filed under Sec. 2007.0(a), the party submitting a request with respect to such articles may request an explanation of factors considered.

(d) Whenever, following a review, there is to be no change in the status of a beneficiary country with respect to the GSP in response to a request filed under Sec. 2007.0(b), the GSP Subcommittee will notify the party submitting the request in writing of the reasons why the requested action was not taken.

Sec. 2007.5 Written briefs and oral testimony.

Sections 2003.2 and 2003.4 of this chapter shall be applicable to the submission of any written briefs or requests to present oral testimony in connection with a review under this part. For the purposes of this section, the term “interested party” as used in Secs. 2003.2 and 2003.4 shall be interpreted as including parties submitting petitions and requests pursuant to Sec. 2007.0(a) or (b) as well as any other person wishing to file written briefs or present oral testimony.

Sec. 2007.6 Information open to public inspection.

With exception of information subject to Sec. 2007.7 any person may, upon request inspect at the Office of the United States Trade Representative:

- (a) Any written request, brief, or similar submission of information made pursuant to this part; and
- (b) Any stenographic record of any public hearings which may be held pursuant to this part.

Sec. 2007.7 Information exempt from public inspection.

(a) Information submitted in confidence shall be exempt from public inspection if it is determined that the disclosure of such information is not required by law.

(b) A party requesting an exemption from public inspection for information submitted in writing shall clearly mark each page “Submitted in Confidence” at the top, and shall submit a nonconfidential summary of the confidential information. Such person shall also provide a written explanation of why the material should be so protected.

(c) A request for exemption of any particular information may be denied if it is determined that such information is not entitled to exemption under law. In the event of such a denial, the information will be returned to the person who submitted it, with a statement of the reasons for the denial.

Sec. 2007.8 Other reviews of article eligibilities.

(a) As soon after the beginning of each calendar year as relevant trade data for the preceding year are available, modifications of the GSP in accordance with section 504(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 as amended (19 U.S.C. 2464) will be considered.

(b) General Review. Section 504(c)(2) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974 as amended (19 U.S.C. 2464(c)(2)) requires that not later than January 4, 1987 and periodically thereafter, the President conduct a general review of eligible articles based on the considerations in sections 501 and 502 of Title V. The purpose of these reviews is to determine which articles from which beneficiary countries are “sufficiently competitive” to warrant a reduced competitive need limit. Those articles determined to be “sufficiently competitive” will be subject to a new lower competitive need limit set at 25 percent of the value of total U.S imports of the article, or $25 million (this figure will be adjusted annually in accordance with nominal changes in U.S. gross national product (GNP), using 1984 as the base year). All other articles will continue to be subject to the original competitive need limits of 50 percent or $25 million (this figure is adjusted annually using 1974 as the base year).

(1) Scope of General Reviews.

In addition to an examination the competitiveness of specific articles from particular beneficiary countries, the general review will also include consideration of requests for competitive need limit waivers pursuant to section 504(c)(3)(A) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974 as amended (19 U.S.C. 2464(c)) and requests for a determination of no domestic production under section 504(d)(1) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974 as amended (19 U.S.C. 2464(d)(1)).

(2) Factors To Be Considered.

In determining whether a beneficiary country should be subjected to the lower competitive need limits with respect to a particular article, the President shall consider the following factors contained in sections 501 and 502(c) of Title V:

- (i) The effect such action will have on furthering the economic development of developing countries through expansion of their exports;
- (ii) The extent to which other major developed countries are undertaking a comparable effort to assist developing countries by granting generalized preferences with respect to imports of products of such countries;
- (iii) The anticipated impact of such action on the United States producers of like or directly competitive products;
- (iv) The extent of the beneficiary developing country’s competitiveness with respect to eligible articles;
- (v) The level of economic development of such country, including its per capita GNP, the living standard of its inhabitants and any other economic factors the President deems appropriate;
- (vi) Whether or not the other major developed countries are extending generalized preferential tariff treatment to such country;
- (vii) The extent to which such country has assured the United States it will provide equitable and reasonable access to the markets and basic commodity resources of such country and the extent to which such country has assured the United States that it will refrain from engaging in unreasonable export practices;
- (viii) The extent to which such country is providing adequate and effective means under its laws for foreign nationals to secure, to exercise and to enforce exclusive rights in intellectual property, including patents, trademarks and copyrights;
- (ix) The extent to which such country has taken action to:
 - (A) Reduce trade distorting investment practices and policies (including export performance requirements); and
 - (B) Reduce or eliminate barriers to trade in services; and
- (x) Whether or not such country has taken or is taking steps to afford workers in that country (including any designated zone in that country) internationally recognized worker rights.

The GSP Model Petition

Appendix 6

The GSP Model Petition

Part 1: General Information Required of all Petitioners:

1. Provide the name of the petitioner, and the person, firm or association represented by the petitioner. Briefly describe interest of petitioner that is being affected by the operation of the GSP.
2. Identify the product or products or interest, including a detailed description of the product(s) and the item number(s) in the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States (HTSUS). Where the product or products of interest are included with other products in a basket category of the HTSUS, provide a detailed description of the product or products or interest.
3. Describe the action requested, together with a statement of the reasons therefore and any supporting information.
4. Indicate whether, to the best of the petitioner's knowledge, the reasoning and information in this request has been presented previously to the Trade Policy Staff Committee (TPSC) by the petitioner or any party. If petitioner has knowledge the request has been made previously, petitioner must include information that indicates changed circumstances or rebut the previous supporting arguments. (If it is a request for product addition, the previous request must not have been formally accepted for the review within the proceeding three calendar year period.) Information on prior petitions is available from the GSP Information Center.
5. Provide a statement of the benefits anticipated by the petitioner if the request is granted.

Part 2: Supporting Information:

(NOTE: Requests to withdraw, limit, or suspend eligibility with respect to designated articles must include the information in Section 1. Requests to designate new articles must include the information in Section 2.)

Section 1: Request to withdraw, limit or suspend eligibility with respect to designated articles:

Provide the following information with respect to the relevant U.S. industry for the most recent three calendar year period:¹

1. Number and location of firms;
2. Actual production figures;
3. Production capacity and capacity utilization;
4. Employment figures, including number, type, wage rate, location, and changes in any of these elements;
5. Sales figures in terms of quantity, value and price;
6. Quantity and value of exports, and principal export markets;
7. Profitability of firm(s) producing the like product, including profit data by product line, if possible;
8. Analysis of costs, including materials, labor and overhead;
9. A discussion of the competitive situation of the U.S. domestic industry;

¹ This information should be submitted for each articles that is the subject of the request, both for the party making the request, and to the extent possible, for the industry to which the request pertains.

10. Identification of competitors; analysis of the effect imports receiving duty-free treatment under the GSP have on competition and the business of the interest on whose behalf this request is being made;
11. Any relevant information relating to the factors listed in sections 501 and 502(c) of Title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended, such as identification of tariff and non-tariff barriers to sales in foreign markets;
12. Any other relevant information, including any additional information that may be requested by the GSP Subcommittee.

Section 2: Requests to designate new articles or waive competitive need limits:

Provide the following information for the most recent three calendar year period for the beneficiary country on whose behalf the request is being made and, to the extent possible, other principle beneficiary country suppliers:

1. Identification of the principal beneficiary country suppliers expected to benefit from the proposed modification(s);
2. Name and location of firm(s);
3. Actual production figures and estimated increase if GSP eligibility is granted;
4. Actual production and capacity utilization and estimated increase if GSP eligibility is granted;
5. Employment figures (including numbers, type, wage rate and location) and changes in any of these elements if GSP eligibility is granted;
6. Sales figures in terms of quantity, value and prices;
7. Information on total exports, including principle markets, the distribution of products, existing tariff preferences in the such markets, total quantity, value and trends in exports;
8. Information on exports to the United States in terms of quantity, value, and price, and considerations which affect the competitiveness of these exports relative to exports to the United States by other beneficiary countries of a like or directly competitive product, including, where possible, information on the development of the industry in beneficiary countries and trends in production and promotional activities;
9. Analysis of costs, including materials, labor, and overhead;
10. Profitability of firms producing the product;
11. Information on unit prices and other considerations, such as variations in quality or use, that affect price competition;
12. If the petition is submitted by a foreign government or a government controlled entity, a statement on how the requested modification would further the economic development of the country submitting the petition;
13. If appropriate, an assessment of how the article would qualify under the GSP's 35 percent value added requirements;
14. Any other relevant information, including any information that may be requested by the GSP Subcommittee.

A Case Study in the Operation of the Competitive-Need

Appendix 7

A Case Study in the Operation of the Competitive-Need Limits: Ceramic Roofing Tiles from Venezuela

The case of ceramic roofing tiles from Venezuela offers a useful illustration of how the CNLs operate, and also illustrates the dangers of relying solely on de minimis waivers in order to maintain GSP privileges. In this instance, a Venezuelan exporter lost but regained its duty-free status for a product that faces an extraordinarily high tariff rate (13.5 percent ad valorem). Venezuela enjoyed GSP benefits for this product during 1980-1993, lost eligibility in 1994 because its shipments to the United States grew sharply (if temporarily) in 1993, but petitioned for reinstatement in 1995. The GSP Subcommittee granted this petition in 1997, but the exporter's interests would have been much better served by seeking a CNL waiver before losing GSP in the first place.

The pattern of U.S. imports of this product is shown in Table A.1. Venezuela's share of imports exceeded 50 percent during 1991-1993, and the country could have been denied GSP-eligibility in any one of those years. In each year the GSP Subcommittee exercised its authority to waive the restrictions, and hence allow the product to continue receiving GSP treatment, because total U.S. imports were below the de minimis level. Venezuela did not request a CNL waiver, however, and came to regret this omission when U.S. imports jumped up in 1993. The sharp increase in demand for roofing tiles was due principally to the after-effects of Hurricane Andrew. This disaster tore through Florida in August, 1992, causing some $20 billion in damages to homes, businesses, and other property, and producing a temporary boom in the construction industry and allied fields. This in turn caused imports of ceramic roofing tiles to grow rapidly, if temporarily, in the final months of 1992 and all of 1993. Total U.S. imports of ceramic roofing tiles in 1993 were 46.9 percent higher than they had been in 1992, and 73.0 percent above the 1991 level. Venezuela once again accounted for just over half of U.S. imports in 1993, but total imports of this product were in excess of the de minimis level. The excess was just 2.2 percent above the de minimis level, but that was enough to prevent even the consideration of a waiver. Beginning on July 1, 1994, imports from Venezuela were therefore subject to the 13.5 percent duty.

The rules required that in order to be reinstated to GSP eligibility, imports from Venezuela had to dip once again below the 50 percent mark. The data in Table 2 indicate that this standard clearly was met in 1994. Total U.S. imports fell back to the normal, pre-hurricane levels, and imports from Venezuela fell at a particularly sharp rate. Indeed, Venezuela's loss of GSP appeared to work to the advantage of suppliers from Mexico (which enjoyed duty-free treatment for this product under NAFTA) and Colombia (which have enjoyed duty-free treatment for this product under the Andean Trade Preferences Act since 1992).

Note: No de minimis level is shown for 1995 because the United States opted not to conduct a GSP review that year, and hence no CNL or de minimis levels were calculated.

A U.S. importer filed a petition to the GSP Subcommittee in the 1995 GSP review. This petition requested that (a) imports of this product from Venezuela be restored to the GSP, and that (b) Venezuela be granted a waiver from any further application of the CNLs for this product. The GSP Subcommittee accepted this petition for review, but it took nearly two years for the process to be completed. Because Congress allowed the GSP to lapse in 1995, the subcommittee suspended its conduct of the review until the program was reinstated. It then held hearings in October, 1996, where the U.S. importer of Venezuelan tiles gave testimony. The subcommittee did indeed grant the Venezuelan request, which did not take effect until Congress reinstated the GSP once again in August, 1997 (but the importer could request refunds, with interest, for any tariffs paid on these imports since May 31, 1997).

This case demonstrates the danger of not seeking a CNL waiver for a product, and relying instead on the temporary and uncertain protection of de minimis waivers. Suppose that in the early 1990s, one of the interested parties — the Venezuelan producer, the Government of Venezuela, or the U.S. importer — had taken the preventive measure of seeking a CNL waiver. The unexpected surge of imports in 1992-1993 would not have led to the loss of GSP treatment in mid-1994. Instead, three years passed between the loss and restoration of GSP privileges for Venezuelan roofing tiles. During this time the United States imported $9.9 million worth of roofing tiles from Venezuela, on which duties of $1.4 million were paid. Those duties represent a loss that can never be recovered. Moreover, the suspension of Venezuelan GSP during this period offered an opportunity to producers in Mexico and Colombia. These two countries' combined share of the U.S. market rose from 13.1 percent in 1993 (the last year that Venezuela enjoyed GSP for the full year) to an estimated 51.3 percent in 1998. It may be a long time before Venezuela recaptures the market share that it once held.

In the end, however, the petition to redesignate the product and waive the CNLs has been of great benefit to the Venezuelan industry. With an estimated $3.2 million worth of U.S. imports during 1998 (based on the assumption that October-December imports were at the same rate as January-September), the savings in foregone tariffs amounted to some $440,000. Moreover, this industry is permanently protected from the loss of its GSP status. Even if Venezuela once again ships more than half of U.S. imports, it will be free from the threat of the CNLs.

Frequently Asked Questions About the GSP

Appendix 8

Frequently Asked Questions About the GSP

Adapted from the USTR's Web Site

I.1 GSP-Eligible Articles

Which imports qualify for duty-free treatment under the GSP?

The imported merchandise must meet the following qualifications:

1. It must be included on the list of GSP-eligible articles.
2. It must be from a designated beneficiary country.
3. The beneficiary country must be eligible for GSP treatment for that article.
4. It must meet the value-added requirements.
5. It must be imported directly into the United States from the beneficiary country or association.
6. The exporter/importer must request duty-free treatment under GSP by placing an "A" before the HTSUS number that identifies the imported product on the appropriate shipping documents.

Which products are eligible for duty-free treatment?

The GSP comprises two categories of eligible products defined at the 8-digit level of the HTSUS. The original list now includes approximately 4,650 articles that are duty free for all eligible GSP beneficiaries. The second list, added in 1996, made approximately 1,770 articles from the LDBDCs duty free. The LDBDCs are countries which the World Bank has estimated to have incomes (1996 GNP per capita) below $786. See Parts III and IV for the lists of articles eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP. These lists contain most dutiable manufactures and semimanufactures and selected agricultural, fishery, and primary industrial products not otherwise duty free. Articles eligible for GSP treatment are also identified in the current edition of the HTSUS, which is published by the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC). The complete 1998 HTSUS can be downloaded from the USITC home page, purchased from the U.S. Government Printing Office, or inspected at the USTR Reading Room, the field offices of the Department of Commerce, and the U.S. Embassies or Consulates.)

Can any article be designated as eligible for GSP?

No. Certain articles are prohibited by law (19 U.S.C. 2461) from receiving GSP treatment. These are articles that were not eligible for GSP on January 1, 1995, and include most textiles, watches, footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and other leather wearing apparel. In addition, any other articles determined to be import-sensitive cannot be made eligible for GSP. In this regard, the GSP law specifically cites steel, glass, and electronics.

What is the rate of duty on a GSP-eligible article?

All imports of GSP-eligible articles are duty-free.

I.2 GSP Beneficiary Countries

Where are the official lists of the GSP-eligible countries, the LDBDCs, and the articles with country restrictions on eligibility?

Sec. 4(a) of the General Notes at the beginning of the HTSUS contains the official list of the GSP-eligible countries. Sec. 4(c) contains the list of the LDBDCs. Sec. 4(d) contains the list of the imported articles that are not eligible for GSP treatment from the designated GSP countries, for example, where imports from a country have exceeded the competitive-need limitation (CNL). (See Part II.1, 2, and 7.)

How does an importer request GSP treatment?

The request is made by placing the Special Program Indicator (SPI), the letter “A” used as a prefix, before the HTSUS tariff number on the shipment entry documentation to indicate that a product is eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP.

If the GSP program expires and is later renewed retroactively, must an importer pay duties in the interim?

If the GSP program expires, importers cannot make claims for duty-free treatment under GSP for merchandise entered or withdrawn for consumption. Duties at the Normal Trade Relations (NTR) rate must be deposited. A claim for duty-free treatment may be made if the merchandise qualifies under another preferential program such as the Andean Trade Preference Act or the Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act.

If the GSP program is renewed retroactively, how does an importer arrange to be reimbursed for tariffs paid during the period after the expiration and before the reauthorization of GSP?

Importers who file their entries electronically should use the appropriate SPI (“A”) as a prefix to the tariff numbers of articles that would qualify for GSP if GSP were in effect at the time of the entry. The U.S. Customs Service has arranged for the timely processing of refunds of duties deposited on these GSP-eligible entries without requiring further action by the filer. The use of the SPI, in effect, constitutes an importer’s request for a refund of duties. For entries made without using the SPI, refunds of duties deposited must generally be requested in writing. (For further information on securing refunds, see 63 Federal Register 115, page 32911, June 16, 1999.)

How can the correct HTSUS classification of a product be determined?

The U.S. Customs Service is responsible for classifying products under the HTSUS. Questions about a specific product HTSUS number should be referred to the Classification and Value Division. Questions about the appropriate classification of a product should be referred to the Office of Regulations and Rulings.

Is the list of eligible articles and countries ever modified?

Yes. The U.S. Government, through the GSP Subcommittee of the Trade Policy Staff Committee (TPSC), conducts an annual review of petitions to modify the eligibility of articles and countries for duty-free treatment. The GSP Subcommittee comprises representatives of the Executive Branch Agencies that have roles in U.S. trade policy formulation. (See page v for the list of these agencies.) A list of articles for which modifications have been petitioned and accepted for review is published in the Federal Register each summer, usually in mid-July. Public comments are invited, hearings are held, USITC advice is requested and prepared, all of which are reviewed by the GSP Subcommittee as it prepares its recommendations for Presidential decisions. The President's decisions are usually announced in late spring of the following calendar year and take effect on July 1.

How does one petition for a modification in the list of articles or countries?

Each year a Federal Register notice invites interested parties to petition the GSP Subcommittee for modifications in the list of products or countries eligible for GSP treatment. (See Part II.8 for a sample petition outline for anyone seeking modifications in the GSP product coverage.) Petitions must conform to the applicable rules and regulations contained in the Code of Federal Regulations (15 CFR Part 2007) in order to be accepted for formal review. Petitions must be submitted to the GSP Subcommittee by the scheduled submission date, usually in late spring, to be considered in that year's annual review. Petitions accepted for review are subject to public hearings and a full review by the GSP Subcommittee. Modifications made as a result of the annual review are implemented by Executive Order or Presidential Proclamation and are then published in the Federal Register.

Which factors must be considered when the list of eligible articles or countries is modified?

When the GSP list is modified, the following factors must be considered:

1. The statement of a country requesting GSP eligibility
2. The effect that a modification would have on furthering the economic development of a beneficiary country
3. The anticipated impact on the U.S. producers of like or directly competitive products
4. The extent of the beneficiary developing country's competitiveness regarding eligible products
5. The extent to which other major developed countries are undertaking a comparable effort to assist developing countries by granting generalized preferences on imports of products from such countries

All decisions to modify the list of GSP-eligible articles are made in light of the extent to which beneficiaries accomplish the following:

- Offer reasonable and equitable market access for U.S. goods and services
- Protect U.S. intellectual property rights adequately and effectively
- Reduce trade-distorting investment policies/practices (including export performance requirements)
- Eliminate trade-distorting export practices
- Ensure internationally recognized worker rights, which include the following:
 - Right of association
 - Right to organize and bargain collectively

- Prohibition of any form of forced or compulsory labor
- Minimum age for child employment
- Acceptable work conditions regarding, for example, minimum wages, work hours, and occupational safety and health standards

What is the three-year rule?

Many products not currently eligible for GSP may have been eligible previously or considered for eligibility since 1976. An article may not be considered for designation as GSP-eligible if it has been the subject of a formal review and denied eligibility during the previous three calendar years. The petition history of a product may indicate its current potential for obtaining GSP eligibility. The public version of petitions is on file at the Office of the USTR in Room 101. Interested parties may call (202) 395-6186 for an appointment to examine the files.

Who makes the determinations regarding GSP product and country eligibility?

The GSP Subcommittee of the Trade Policy Staff Committee, chaired by the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, reviews GSP issues. All Executive Branch Agencies directly involved in trade participate in the interagency review of GSP eligibility modifications. The GSP Executive Director conducts the day-to-day operations and, together with the GSP Subcommittee, prepares recommendations for GSP eligibility modifications for the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR). After reviewing the proposed modifications, the U.S. Trade Representative decides which recommendations will be submitted to the President, whose final decisions are published in the Federal Register, usually in late spring.

I.3 Handicraft Textiles

What is the certified handicraft textile arrangement?

Six categories of textile products are eligible for GSP treatment when the GSP beneficiary has signed an agreement with the U.S. Government certifying that the items are handmade products of the exporting beneficiary. To date, such agreements have been signed with Botswana, Colombia, Egypt, Guatemala, Jordan, Macao, Malta, Morocco, Nepal, Pakistan (suspended June 30, 1996), Peru, Romania, Thailand, Tunisia, and Uruguay. GSP benefits for duty-free treatment of handicraft textile exports are available to other beneficiary governments that are prepared to initiate the required exchange of letters. The six covered tariff categories are 5701.10.13, 5702.10.10, 5702.91.20, 5805.00.20, 6304.99.10, and 6304.99.40.

Is any special paperwork necessary for a GSP shipment?

For certified handicraft textile products eligible for GSP duty-free treatment, a triangular seal certifying the products' authenticity as handcrafted articles must be included with the commercial invoice to be accepted for entry. As noted, only products produced in those beneficiary developing countries that have completed an official exchange of letters with the U.S. Government can receive GSP treatment.

Do other countries maintain GSP programs?

Yes. In addition to the United States, twenty-six other industrialized nations maintain GSP programs. The beneficiaries, products, and type of preferences granted vary for each donor country.

I.4 Competitive-Need Limitations and Requests for Waivers

Do all beneficiary countries receive duty-free treatment on the entire list of articles?

No. A country may not be eligible for GSP treatment on certain imports for the following reasons:

- The GSP imports of an article from a beneficiary country exceed the competitive-need limitation.
- The country has been graduated from the program.
- The value added in the beneficiary country is insufficient to meet the GSP rule-of-origin requirement.
- The country fails to supply complete documentation or does not meet other U.S. Customs requirements.

What are competitive-need limitations?

Competitive-need limitations impose ceilings on GSP benefits for each product and country. A country will automatically lose its GSP eligibility for a product (which is defined by its HTSUS eight-digit tariff category) if the CNLs are exceeded. A beneficiary country loses GSP eligibility for a product if, during the previous calendar year, U.S. imports of a GSP article from that country

(1) account for 50 percent or more of the value of total U.S. imports of that product, or

(2) exceed a certain dollar value.

Legislation reauthorizing GSP in 1996 set the dollar limit at $75 million for 1996 with an annual increase of $5 million for each subsequent calendar year. GSP modifications that result from imports that exceed CNLs in one year take effect on July 1 of the next calendar year.

Are the competitive-need limitations ever waived?

Yes. The President may waive competitive-need limitations under the circumstances listed in Table 3.

How are competitive-need limitations waived?

An interested party may petition USTR in an annual review for a CNL waiver for a product when it is imported from a specific beneficiary. In deciding whether to grant a CNL waiver, the President is required to place “great weight” on the extent to which the beneficiary is providing reasonable and equitable access to its market for U.S. goods and services, and the extent to which the beneficiary is providing reasonable and effective protection to U.S. intellectual property rights.

Table 3. Types of Competitive-Need Limitation Waivers

Types of Waivers	50% Limit Waivable	Value Limit Waivable
Petitioned Request	Yes	Yes
503(c)(E) No U.S. production	Yes	No
503(c)(D) LDBDC	No Limits	No Limits
De Minimis	Yes	No

Are any limits placed on the President’s CNL waiver authority?

Yes. In general, the President may not grant a waiver for a GSP-eligible article if imports of it from all beneficiary countries equal or exceed 30 percent of the total value of the GSP duty-free imports in a calendar year. Furthermore, the President cannot grant a waiver for the import of a GSP-eligible product that exceeds 15 percent of total GSP imports if the originating beneficiary has either a per capita gross national product (GNP) in excess of $5,000 or generates imports of GSP products that account for 10 percent or more of total GSP duty-free imports.

How long do CNL waivers remain in effect?

If the petitioned waiver is granted, both the percentage limit and the dollar limit are waived and remain in effect until the President determines that such a waiver is no longer warranted because of changed circumstances.

What is a 503(c)(E) waiver?

Section 503(c)(E) of the GSP law provides for a waiver of the CNL percentage for certain GSP-eligible articles that were not produced in the United States on January 1, 1995. Articles that were determined not to be produced in the United States are listed in Part II.5. Interested persons may petition USTR to modify the list in an annual review. For those articles on this list, a 503(c)(E) waiver will automatically be granted each year when required.

What is a de minimis waiver?

The President may grant a waiver from the percentage provision when total U.S. imports from all countries of a product are small or de minimis. Like the dollar value CNL, the de minimis level is adjusted annually. In 1996 the level was set at $13 million with an annual increment of $500,000. Each year, a de minimis waiver will automatically be considered for imports of a GSP-eligible product from a beneficiary that exceeded the 50 percent CNL, provided total imports from all countries for the preceding year were below the dollar limit. Although such waivers cannot be requested by petition, public comments are accepted, nonetheless, early each year. Granting such waivers is a discretionary decision of the President.

Does a special CNL exist for Least Developed Beneficiary Developing Countries?

Section 503(c)(D) of the GSP law automatically waived all CNLs for the GSP beneficiaries designated as LDBDCs. (See Part II.2 for the current list of LDBDCs.)

What happens if imports reach or exceed the CNLs during the year?

Nothing. GSP eligibility for articles from countries that reach or exceed the CNLs will continue for the rest of the year and for part of the following year. In the meantime, the GSP Subcommittee conducts a review of import statistics to determine which articles have exceeded the CNLs for the previous calendar year. Articles that exceeded the CNLs lose eligibility for GSP treatment no later than July 1 of the following year unless a waiver is granted.

Does the GSP Subcommittee publish a warning list of articles that may exceed the CNLs?

Yes. USTR publishes a warning list based on statistics of GSP articles imported during the first 10 months of the past calendar year. The list generally appears early in the following year in the Federal Register.

Can an interested party monitor the imports of an article?

Yes. Several sources maintain a monthly compilation of all imports. The Foreign Trade Reference Room at the Department of Commerce can be contacted by telephone at (202) 482-2185 or by Internet at <http://www.ita.doc.gov/industry/otea/trade-detail/about.html>. The Office of Trade Data at the Census Bureau can be contacted by telephone at (301) 457-3041, by fax at (301) 457-4615, or by Internet at <http://www.census.gov/foreign-trade/www>. The statistics should be requested by the 8-digit HTSUS tariff number.

The early warning list of the 10-month import statistics is available for review each February in the USTR public reading room.

Can a country ever have an article redesignated as GSP-eligible after the article has been removed from GSP eligibility?

Yes. Redesignation of GSP eligibility for an article can be considered if U.S. imports of the article from the affected country fall below the CNL in a subsequent year. Interested parties may also petition for a CNL waiver to restore eligibility for a product.

I.5 Graduation from GSP

What is graduation?

There are two types of graduation: The first type refers to the removal of GSP eligibility for one or more articles of a beneficiary country, for example, when its imports of an article or articles exceed the CNL. The second type refers to the mandatory removal of a beneficiary country's entire GSP eligibility, which occurs when a country's per capita GNP exceeds the threshold level of income set for high-income countries by the World Bank or the discretionary removal when a country is deemed no longer to be a developing country.

How is mandatory country graduation implemented?

Country graduation is required when the President determines that a beneficiary is a high-income country as defined by the official statistics of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) or the World Bank. In its 1998 World Development Indicators, the World Bank set the threshold level of per capita GNP for high-income countries at $9,636 on the basis of 1996 GNP statistics. The per capita GNP for upper middle-income countries ranged from $3,116 to $9,635; incomes for lower middle-income countries ranged from $786 to $3,115; low-income countries had incomes of less than $786 a year.

When the President determines that a beneficiary has exceeded the middle-income level, its GSP benefits will be terminated on January 1 of the second year following the President's determination.

How is product graduation implemented?

Product graduation decisions are made by the President in the four following contexts:

1. When interested parties submit petitions to remove GSP eligibility for an article and are accepted for the annual GSP Product Review, the President may grant the petition.
2. When articles are newly designated, eligibility for individual beneficiaries may be precluded.
3. When countries are eligible for redesignation of GSP status for a specific article, redesignation may be withheld.
4. When an individual beneficiary country fails to provide access to its market or fails to protect internationally recognized worker rights or intellectual property rights, the country may be deprived of GSP eligibility for selected articles.

I.6 Rule-of-Origin Requirements

What are the rule-of-origin requirements for qualifying products as GSP-eligible for a beneficiary country?

The sum of the cost or value of materials produced in the beneficiary country plus the direct processing costs must equal at least 35 percent of the appraised value of the product at the time of entry into the United States.

Can imported materials be counted toward the 35 percent value-added requirement?

Yes, but only if the materials are "substantially transformed" into new and different constituent materials of which the eligible article is composed. If an imported article has been produced in part in several countries that are members of an association of countries contributing to the regional economic integration of its members, the articles will be accorded duty-free entry if the value of their collective production of the article accounts for at least 35 percent of the appraised value of the article. The level of value added is the same as would be required for a product imported from a single country. The U.S. Customs Service is charged with determining whether an article meets the GSP rule-of-origin requirements.

How can an exporter in a developing country know the value at which the U.S. Customs authorities will appraise an article?

In most cases, U.S. Customs will appraise the merchandise at the transaction value, that is, the price actually paid or payable for the merchandise when sold for export to the United States. This value would include the following elements:

1. The packing costs incurred by the buyer
2. The selling commission incurred by the buyer
3. The value of any assistance provided to the producer free of charge by the buyer
4. The royalty or license fee that the buyer is required to pay as a condition of the sale
5. The proceeds accruing to the seller of any subsequent resale, disposal, or use of the imported merchandise

In general, shipping and other costs related to transporting the GSP articles from the port of export to the United States are included neither in the value of the article nor in the value-added calculation.

What costs may be included in the direct costs of processing?

The direct costs of processing include all costs, whether directly incurred in or those that can be reasonably allocated to the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the merchandise in question. These include the following:

- Actual labor, fringe benefits, and on-the-job training costs
- Engineering, supervisory, quality control, and similar personnel costs
- Dies, molds, and tooling costs, as well as depreciation on machinery and equipment
- Research, development, design, blueprints and engineering, and inspection and testing costs

Which costs may not be included in the direct costs of processing?

The costs that may not be included in the direct costs of processing are those that are not directly attributable to the merchandise being considered or are not “costs” of manufacturing. These costs include profit and general expenses and business overhead such as administrative salaries, casualty and liability insurance, advertising, and sales representative’s salaries, commissions, or expenses.

Does the U.S. GSP contain any special provisions for beneficiary developing countries that are members of regional associations?

Yes. A regional association contributing to the comprehensive regional economic integration of its members may be granted GSP cumulation benefits. A GSP cumulation benefit occurs when U.S. imports from association members are counted as if they were imported from one country for purposes of rule-of-origin requirements. A GSP cumulation benefit also occurs when an imported article that was produced in two or more eligible member countries of an association is accorded duty-free entry. The benefit is granted when the countries together account for at least 35 percent of the appraised value of the article, which is the same requirement for a single country.

The CNLs will be assessed only against the country of origin and not against the entire association. Currently, qualified members of the following six associations can benefit from this provision:

- The Andean Group
- The Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), excluding Brunei, Darussalam, Malaysia, and Singapore
- Member countries of the Caribbean Common Market (CARICOM)
- The West African Economic and Monetary Union (WAEMU)
- The Southern African Development Community (SADC)
- The Tripartite Commission on East African Cooperation (EAC)

The President has delegated responsibility to the U.S. Trade Representative for determining which members of SADC and EAC qualify for the cumulation benefit. The U.S. Trade Representative has determined that Botswana, Mauritius, and Tanzania are the qualifying members of SADC that are entitled to the cumulation benefit under GSP. (See Part II.3.)

I.7 “Imported Directly” Requirement

What is meant by the requirement that the article must be “imported directly”?

The article must be shipped directly from the beneficiary country to the United States without passing through the territory of any other country. Or, if shipped through the territory of any other country, the merchandise must not have entered the commerce of that country while en route to the United States. In all cases, the invoices, bills of lading, and other documents connected with the shipment must show that the United States is the final destination of the imported article. (See 19 CFR 10.175(e) for the U.S. Customs Service definition of “imported directly.”)

Is entrepot trade (articles transshipped between the beneficiary country and the United States) permitted?

Entrepot trade is eligible for GSP under certain circumstances. Eligible articles shipped from a beneficiary developing country through a free-trade zone in any other beneficiary country will qualify for GSP as follows:

1. The eligible articles do not enter into the commerce of the country maintaining the free-trade zone.
2. The eligible articles do not undergo any operations other than sorting, grading, or testing; packing, unpacking, changing or packing; decanting or repacking; affixing marks, labels, or other distinguishing signs; or operations necessary to ensure that the articles are preserved in the condition they were in when they entered the free-trade zone. (See 19 CFR 10.175.)

Are shipments also permitted to be made through free-trade zones in nonbeneficiary countries and still qualify for GSP?

Yes. The procedure is as follows:

1. The eligible articles must remain under the control of the customs authority of the intermediate country while in transit through the free-trade zone.
2. The eligible articles do not enter into the commerce of the country maintaining the free-trade zone, except for sale at other than retail.
3. The eligible articles do not undergo any operations other than loading and unloading or other operations necessary to ensure that articles are preserved in the condition they were in when they entered into the free-trade zone.
4. For articles transshipped through former beneficiary countries that are members of regional associations (see Part II.3), the operations such as sorting, grading, or testing; packing, unpacking, changing or packing; decanting or repacking; affixing marks, labels, or other distinguishing signs; or operations necessary to ensure that the articles are preserved in the condition they were in when they entered the free-trade zone are permitted. (This exception currently applies to the products of the ASEAN beneficiaries that are transshipped through Brunei, Darussalam, Malaysia, and Singapore.)

Are shipments permitted through a “non-independent territory” of any other country?

Shipments from a beneficiary developing country to the United States may be made through the non-independent territory of another country, provided that

(1) the article does not enter into the commerce of the territory while en route, and

(2) the invoice, bills of lading, and other shipping documents show that the United States is the final destination.

May the merchandise be purchased and resold, other than at retail, for export within the free-trade zone?

Yes, as noted previously. However, for such transactions, two Certificates of Origin are required. One is required from the original beneficiary acknowledging that the merchandise is eligible for the U.S. duty-free treatment under GSP and contains the name of the consignee in the United States or in the free-trade zone. A second Certificate of Origin is required from the person responsible for the articles in the free-trade zone or from any other person having knowledge of the facts and declaring the operations that were performed within the free-trade zone.

GSP Eligibility of Specific Products Imported into the United States

Appendix 9

GSP Eligibility of Specific Products Imported into the United States

The pages that follow reproduce those sections of the Harmonized Tariff Schedules of the United States (HTSUS) that cover GSP-eligible products. To understand how to read these tariff schedules, see Figure 3 in the main text of this handbook.

Products that are generally eligible for the GSP are identified in this appendix in bold type. These are items for which an “A” or and “A*” is given in the “Special” sub-column of Column 1. Note that when there is an “A*” this means that one or more countries is ineligible for the GSP; consult the complete HTSUS to determine which county or countries are excluded from the GSP for any specific product. Those items that are eligible for the GSP only when imported from a least-developed country are shown in ordinary type (i.e., not bold), and are further identified by an “A+” in the “Special” sub-column.
