FRY, on 11 March [A/53/82-S/1998/229], supported the statement of the Government of the Republic of Serbia and called for an open dialogue aimed at finding solutions to all questions. It also supported Serbia's policy, measures and efforts to achieve stable social development in Kosovo and Metohija. FRY confirmed its readiness to cooperate with the international community and called on all responsible international actors to refrain from lending encouragement to the separatist elements in Kosovo and Metohija.

Referring to the Contact Group's March statement (see above), FRY said that it did not accept attempts to internationalize any internal question of the Republic of Serbia or FRY. It was the legitimate right and obligation of every country to oppose terrorism as a method of achieving political goals. Threats to introduce pressure constituted a flagrant violation of the international legal system and were an attempt to create a precedent with unforeseeable consequences for international relations.

OSCE consideration. The OSCE Permanent Council, in an 11 March decision [S/1998/246], authorized operational measures to allow adequate observation of the borders with Kosovo and the prevention of possible spillover effects, including temporary enhancement of the monitoring capability of the OSCE presence in Albania and of the OSCE Spillover Monitor Mission in Skopje.

The Permanent Council requested the OSCE troika in Belgrade (Denmark, Norway, Poland) to coordinate arrangements for continuous monitoring of the situation in Kosovo. It called on FRY to halt the excessive use of force in Kosovo, investigate and accept the international investigation of reported summary executions and bring to justice those found responsible; initiate a meaningful dialogue with Kosovar Albanian representatives; allow access to Kosovo by ICRC and other humanitarian organizations; implement without delay the 1996 Education Agreement concluded between FRY President Milosevic and Ibrahim Rugova, leader of the Kosovar Albanians, and seek agreements on further confidence-building measures; and accept without preconditions an immediate return of the OSCE missions of long duration to Kosovo, Sandjak and Vojvodina, with the understanding that their return was essential for FRY's future participation in OSCE.

Communications. The Republic of Serbia, on 15 March [A/53/86-S/1998/240], formally invited the President of ICRC to designate an ad hoc team of experts, in cooperation with experts of the Yugoslav Red Cross, to be informed on site, through the inspection of forensic documentation, of the facts concerning action taken against terrorists in Kosovo and Metohija, as well as of the consequences of terrorist attacks on Serbs, policemen and members of the Albanian national minority. It was ready to exhume the bodies of the buried victims to eliminate all suspicions.

The Serbian President, Milan Milutinovic, on 18 March [A/53/89-S/1998/250], called on the leaders of the political parties of the Albanian national minority to commence a political dialogue without preconditions and declared his readiness to be guarantor of such talks. He said that co-operation should be renewed with the OSCE mission of longer duration. Serbia, on 31 March [A/5V92-S/1998/289], designated its delegation for an open dialogue on 7 April with representatives of the Albanian and other minorities on human and civil rights and self-administration issues.

Contact Group meeting (25 March). Reviewing the situation at its 25 March meeting in Bonn, Germany [S/1998/272], the Contact Group said that there had been progress, notably in Belgrade's position on dialogue on a range of issues, including the autonomy of Kosovo and the conclusion of the long-overdue agreement on implementation of the education accord. However, further progress on certain points was necessary. The Group demanded that both sides convene rapidly to agree on a framework for negotiation and to participation in that process of an outside representative or representatives, and affirmed its willingness to facilitate talks. It urged President Milosevic to cooperate fully with the mission of Felipe Gonzalez, the Personal Representative of the OSCE Chairman-in-Office and EU Special Representative. It also urged those outside FRY who were supplying financial support, arms or training for terrorist activity in Kosovo to cease doing so immediately.

The Group welcomed the clear commitment by Ibrahim Rugova, the leader of the Kosovo Albanian community, to non-violence and urged others in the leadership of that community to make their opposition to violence and terrorism both clear and public.

Imposition of arms embargo

On 31 March [meeting 3868], the Security Council met to consider the situation in FRY (Kosovo) and the reports of the Contact Group. FRY addressed to the Council President a letter [S/1998/285] conveying its concern and resentment regarding the Council's efforts to adopt a resolution seeking to punish the country. FRY was against inclusion of Kosovo and Metohija, an internal matter, in the Council's agenda without its consent. Any action by the Council against FRY would only encourage the leaders of the Albanian national minority to persevere in their policy of separatism and have a counter-productive effect on the political process and negative consequences for the region at large.

The Council adopted resolution 1160(1998) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/1998/284] was sponsored by France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Portugal, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Noting with appreciation the statements by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of France, Germany, Italy, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America (the Contact Group) of 9 and 25 March 1998, including the proposal on a comprehensive arms embargo on the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including Kosovo,

Welcoming the decision adopted at the special session of the Permanent Council of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe on 11 March 1998,

Condemning the use of excessive force by Serbian police forces against civilians and peaceful demonstrators in Kosovo, as well as all acts of terrorism by the Kosovo Liberation Army or any other group or individual and all external support for terrorist activity in Kosovo, including finance, arms and training,

Taking note of the declaration of 18 March 1998 by the President of the Republic of Serbia on the political process in Kosovo and Metohija,

Noting the clear commitment of senior representatives of the Kosovo Albanian community to non-violence,

Noting that there has been some progress in implementing the actions indicated in the Contact Group statement of 9 March 1998, but stressing that further progress is required,

Affirming the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Calls upon the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia immediately to take the further necessary steps to achieve a political solution to the issue of Kosovo through dialogue and to implement the actions indicated in the Contact Group statements of 9 and 25 March 1998;

2. Also calls upon the Kosovo Albanian leadership to condemn all terrorist action, and emphasizes that all elements in the Kosovo Albanian community should pursue their goals by peaceful means only;

5. Agrees, without prejudging the outcome of that dialogue, with the proposal in the Contact Group statements of 9 and 25 March 1998 that the principles for a solution of the Kosovo problem should be based on the territorial integrity of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and should be in accordance with the standards of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, including those set out in the Final Act of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, signed at Helsinki on 1 August 1975, and the Charter of the United Nations, and that such a solution must also take into account the rights of the Kosovo Albanians and all who live in Kosovo, and expresses its support for an enhanced status for Kosovo, which would include a substantially greater degree of autonomy and meaningful self-administration;

6. Welcomes the signature on 23 March 1998 of an agreement on measures to implement the 1996 Education Agreement, calls upon all parties to ensure that its implementation proceeds smoothly and without delay according to the agreed timetable, and expresses its readiness to consider measures if either party blocks implementation;

7. Expresses its support for the efforts of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe for a peaceful resolution of the crisis in Kosovo, including through the Personal Representative of the Chairman-in-Office for the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, who is also the Special Representative of the European Union, and the return of the long-term missions of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe;

8. Decides that all States shall, for the purposes of fostering peace and stability in Kosovo, prevent the sale or supply to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including Kosovo, by their nationals or from their territories or using their flag vessels and aircraft, of arms and related materiel of all types, such as weapons and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment and spare parts for the aforementioned, and shall prevent arming and training for terrorist activities there;

9. Decides to establish, in accordance with rule 28 of its provisional rules of procedure, a committee of the Security Council, consisting of all the members of the Council, to undertake the following tasks and to report on its work to the Council with its observations and recommendations:

(a) To seek from all States information regarding the action taken by them concerning the effective implementation of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution;

(b) To consider any information brought to its attention by any State concerning violations of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution and to recommend appropriate measures in response thereto;

(c) To make periodic reports to the Security Council on information submitted to it regarding alleged violations of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution;

(d) To promulgate such guidelines as may be necessary to facilitate the implementation of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution;

(e) To examine the reports submitted pursuant to paragraph 12 below;

10. Calls upon all States and all international and regional organizations to act strictly in conformity with the present resolution, notwithstanding the existence of any rights granted or obligations conferred or imposed by any international agreement or of any contract entered into or any licence or permit granted prior to the entry into force of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution, and stresses in this context the importance of continuing implementation of the Agreement on Subregional Arms Control signed in Florence, Italy, on 14 June 1996;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary assistance to the Committee established pursuant to paragraph 9 above and to make the necessary arrangements in the Secretariat for this purpose;

12. Requests States to report to the Committee established pursuant to paragraph 9 above within thirty days of adoption of the present resolution on the steps they have taken to give effect to the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution;

13. Invites the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to keep the Secretary-General informed on the situation in Kosovo and on measures taken by that organization in this regard;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council regularly informed and to report on the situation in Kosovo and the implementation of the present resolution no later than thirty days following the adoption of the present resolution and every thirty days thereafter;

15. Also requests that the Secretary-General, in consultation with appropriate regional organizations, include in his first report recommendations for the establishment of a comprehensive regime to monitor the implementation of the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution, and calls upon all States, in particular neighbouring States, to extend full cooperation in this regard;

16. Decides to review the situation on the basis of the reports of the Secretary-General, which will take into account the assessments of, inter alia, the Contact Group, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the European Union, and decides also to reconsider the prohibitions imposed by the present resolution, including action to terminate them, following receipt of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, cooperating in a constructive manner with the Contact Group, has:

(a) Begun a substantive dialogue in accordance with paragraph 4 above, including the participation of an outside representative or representatives, unless any failure to do so is not because of the position of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia or Serbian authorities;

(b) Withdrawn the special police units and ceased action by the security forces affecting the civilian population;

(c) Allowed access to Kosovo by humanitarian organizations as well as representatives of the Contact Group and other embassies;

(d) Accepted a mission by the Personal Representative of the Chairman-in-Office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe for the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia that would include a new and specific mandate for addressing the problems in Kosovo, as well as the return of the long-term missions of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe;

18. Affirms that concrete progress to resolve the serious political and human rights issues in Kosovo will improve the international position of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and prospects for normalization of its international relationships and full participation in international institutions;

19. Emphasizes that failure to make constructive progress towards the peaceful resolution of the situation in Kosovo will lead to the consideration of additional measures;

20. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1160(1998):

In favour Bahrain, Brazil, Costa Rica, France, Gabon, Gambia, Japan, Kenya, Portugal, Russian Federation, Slovenia, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: China.

Speaking before the vote, China said that the question of Kosovo was an internal matter of FRY and should be resolved through negotiations. It did not think that the situation endangered regional and international peace. Ethnic issues were extremely complicated and sensitive, especially in the Balkans. Getting involved in a dispute without a request from the country concerned might set a bad precedent with wider negative implications. The priority issue was for the parties to start political talks as soon as possible.

Communications (April). FRY, in a 1 April statement [A/53/93-S/1998/291], said that Serbia and FRY could not accept the participation of foreign actors in the resolution of internal matters of importance for the sovereign protection of national and State interests. Such demands contradicted the principles of the UN Charter, the interests of the Member States and the international legal order.

FRY further informed the Council President on 2 April [S/1998/294] of President Milosevic's proposal to hold a referendum on the acceptance of foreign representatives in the resolution of the problems of Kosovo and Metohija. On 23 April [A/53/113-S/1998/345], the date the referendum was held, President Milosevic urged the Albanian leaders to start talks with the Serbian Government.

Further developments

On 8 April [S/1998/313], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that the United Nations did not have the political presence in Kosovo to enable it to provide first-hand information on the situation in the area. Therefore, it could not independently assess the situation on the ground and report thereon as requested in resolution 1160(1998). To discharge that mandate and ascertain whether FRY had complied in a constructive manner with conditions put forward by the Contact Group, the Secretary-General would be relying exclusively on information and assessments of the Contact Group, OSCE and the EU.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In his first report [S/1998/361] on implementation of Security Council resolution 1160(1998), the Secretary-General stated that a sanctions committee had been established to monitor the implementation of the arms embargo imposed on FRY. At its first meeting on 3 April, the Committee considered draft guidelines for the conduct of its work. The Secretary-General transmitted to the Council reports of the EU and OSCE on the situation in Kosovo. The EU reported that the Government of Serbia had issued invitations to representatives of national minorities in Kosovo, including the Kosovar Albanian community, to attend talks in Pristina and had sent a team there headed by Deputy Prime Minister Ratko Markovic. On 19 March, President Milosevic appointed Deputy Prime Minister Vladan Kutlesic as his Special Envoy for talks with the Kosovar Albanians. Although representatives of some of the smaller minorities attended meetings with the Serbian team, the Kosovar Albanians refused to participate. However, their representatives made clear their willingness to enter into dialogue without preconditions with FRY in the presence of a third party. Mr. Rugova, President of the Democratic League of Kosovo, had established a team of advisers and a negotiating team in preparation for the talks, but continued to insist on maintaining, as an objective, independence for Kosovo.

The atmosphere in Kosovo remained extremely tense, in particular in Drenica and surrounding areas. The activities of the security forces continued, albeit at a reduced level, to impede the freedom of movement of the civilian population along main routes. In some areas, the population had returned and appeared to be resuming normal life, although there were reports of harassment of civilians at checkpoints.

OSCE's assessment of the situation on the ground mirrored that of the EU. It observed that its offers to FRY to facilitate a dialogue had been rejected.

Contact Group meeting (April). Having met in Rome on 29 April [S/1998/355], the Contact Group expressed the view that the situation in Kosovo was untenable and the risk of an escalating conflict required immediate action. It firmly opposed both independence for Kosovo and a continuation of the status quo. It condemned the recent increase in violence, in particular the excessive use of force by the Yugoslav Army and the proliferation of arms in the territory. It rejected terrorism as a means of bringing about political change, as well as all other violence to suppress political dissent, and called on political leaders in FRY and the countries of the region to exercise maximum restraint. The Contact Group said that it was not seeking to impose any particular outcome and noted that representatives of Belgrade and Pristina had recently stated their general willingness to open an unconditional dialogue but had not agreed on modalities for those talks, particularly the issue of international participation. The Contact Group regarded international involvement as an essential factor to establish confidence between the parties and to facilitate talks. It suggested a framework for dialogue and a stabilization package, which it urged both sides to adopt.

The Contact Group estimated that the requirements set out in its statements of 9 and 25 March (see above) had not been met, and decided to put into effect a freeze on the funds held abroad by the FRY and Serbian Governments. The Group decided that, if dialogue was blocked because of Belgrade's non-compliance, it would, by 9 May, stop new investment in Serbia. The Russian Federation did not associate itself with those measures.

Communications. On 30 April [A/53/115-S/1998/365], FRY said that its Government had considered the position of the Contact Group, which continued the policies of pressure and interference in the internal affairs of Serbia and FRY, encouraging separatism and terrorism. It expressed surprise that responsibility for the lack of dialogue in Kosovo and Metohija had been placed on Serbia, although it was obvious that the political parties of the Albanian minority had postponed the acceptance of unconditional dialogue. FRY reaffirmed its readiness to cooperate with other countries and international organizations, including with OSCE and other international organizations and institutions, after restoration of its membership rights in those organizations and institutions.

The EU Presidency, on 9 June [S/1998/554], in the light of the deteriorating situation that included widespread house-burning and indiscriminate artillery attacks on whole villages, adopted a ban on new investments in Serbia. The EU Council would adopt the regulation on the freeze of funds of the FRY and Serbian Governments as soon as possible and remained ready to press ahead with other measures against Belgrade if the authorities there failed to halt their excessive use of force and take the steps needed for genuine political progress. The EU encouraged international security organizations to consider all options, including those that would require authorization by the Security Council under Chapter VII of the UN Charter. It condemned President Milosevic's refusal to permit the mission of Felipe Gonzalez to commence work.

Report of Secretary-General (June). In June [S/1998/470 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported that the Security Council Committee established to monitor the prohibitions imposed on FRY had, on 6 May, adopted the guidelines for the conduct of its work. On 7 May, the Committee Chairman had issued an appeal to all States and international and regional organizations to provide information regarding violations or suspected violations of the prohibitions. As at 29 May, 34 States had reported on steps taken to give effect to the terms of resolution 1160(1998).

The Secretary-General, noting that his information was drawn from a number of non-UN sources, said that the situation in Kosovo remained tense and security conditions were steadily deteriorating. Almost daily violent clashes occurred along the borders with Albania and in other parts of Kosovo. FRY asserted that 356 terrorist assaults were perpetrated between 1 January and 27 May in Kosovo, and that the main targets were police officers, police premises and civilians, both ethnic Serbs and Albanians. The highest number of incidents was reported in the Glodovac, Decani, Srbica, Djakovica and Klina areas. The Serbian special police maintained a strong presence in Kosovo, consolidating their positions and reinforcing checkpoints, particularly in Drenica, and were responsible for armed action against civilians, although they also suffered casualties as a result of attacks by armed Kosovo Albanians. The Government of Serbia announced that it was undertaking what it termed more effective measures against terrorism in Kosovo, which entailed the deployment of forces from urban barracks to field camps to restrict the manoeuvrability of the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) and to counter the increased sophistication of KLA weaponry. Fighting continued between government forces and armed Kosovo Albanians in several areas, including Drenica and the Ponosevac region, near the border with Albania.

The upsurge in violence since mid-May was characterized by an increase in civilian casualties and the use of heavy weapons against non-combatants. During recent police operations in Klina, Ponosevac and Decani municipalities, a number of casualties on both sides were reported. Several villages were reportedly razed or burned, and there were reports that police summarily executed a number of ethnic Albanians. Casualties were estimated at approximately 200 since fighting broke out in Kosovo in February.

KLA had increased its attacks in recent weeks, and had shown an increased propensity and ability to attack government security forces. The increased acts of violence on both sides and the heavy presence of the Serbian police, including special police units and military forces, were generating insecurity among the local population. According to some estimates, the number of internally displaced persons, including Kosovo Albanians and ethnic Serbs, exceeded 42,000 by the end of May. The intensity of the conflict significantly increased as a result of a major Serbian police offensive operation in the south-western part of Kosovo. Reports indicated extremely heavy fighting between the Serbian police and armed groups, believed to be KLA, resulting in the loss of dozens of lives. That new wave of violence caused, for the first time, a significant flow of refugees to Albania. As at 4 June, UNHCR had registered some 6,500 refugees and the number was gradually increasing.

There were concerns regarding deterioration of the humanitarian situation. The ability of humanitarian NGOs to provide relief to internally displaced persons in Kosovo was reportedly hampered by incidents of harassment by Serbian police and by blocked access to areas with large humanitarian needs. It was reported that, beginning on 15 May, FRY authorities had impeded food deliveries into Kosovo by blocking the passage of trucks carrying commercial shipments of food and supplies.

Following intensive diplomatic efforts by European regional organizations and individual States, Ambassador Richard Holbrooke and United States Special Representative Robert S. Gelbard were able to gain agreement without preconditions for the start of substantive dialogue on Kosovo. The dialogue began in Belgrade on 15 May with a meeting between President Milosevic and Mr. Rugova, along with their respective teams. The two sides discussed the modalities of the follow-up negotiations process. At a meeting held on 22 May in Pristina, groups of six experts from each side discussed the framework for future talks and confidence-building measures. The United States informed the Secretary-General that it would continue to play an active role in the negotiating process and that Special Representative Gelbard and Ambassador Holbrooke had agreed to facilitate the dialogue if called upon by the parties to do so.

Progress was made in implementing the Kosovo education agreement signed by Serbian and Kosovo Albanian members of the "3 plus 3" commission on 23 March. In compliance with the agreement, the Institute of Albanology opened in Pristina on 31 March. FRY authorities turned over three faculties of the University of Pristina to the Kosovo Albanians on 15 May. However, ethnic Serb protesters attempted to block the transfer and government forces intervened to evict the protesters after they damaged the facilities.

The Secretary-General said that he was concerned that the mounting violence in Kosovo might overwhelm political efforts to prevent further escalation of the crisis. He deplored the excessive use of force by the Serbian police and called on all parties to demonstrate restraint and commit themselves to a peaceful solution. During a meeting with Mr. Rugova on 2 June, the Secretary-General said that he welcomed his non-violent approach and encouraged him to continue the search for a peaceful and mutually acceptable settlement short of independence.

Responding to the Secretary-General's report on 16 July [S/1998/654], FRY said that the increase in violence had been brought about through the escalation of terrorist activity by the extremist separatist elements of the Albanian national minority. Between 1 January and 8 July, Albanian separatists carried out 659 terrorist actions in Kosovo and Metohija, 398 of which were against civilians and their property. Some 62 persons were killed, 36 were gravely wounded and some 100 persons were abducted, of whom 14 were killed, 52 were unaccounted for and 24 were released. Houses had been burned and their residents expelled, sometimes even entire villages.

The Governments of FRY and the Republic of Serbia had invested their best efforts to reach peaceful, democratic and humane solutions, but the leaders of the Albanian national minority in Kosovo and Metohija had used every opportunity to stall the negotiations and eventually to interrupt the dialogue initiated after the meeting between President Milosevic and Mr. Rugova on 15 May. FRY and the Republic of Serbia were ready to continue the dialogue. To that end, they supported the Moscow joint statement of Presidents Milosevic and Yeltsin (see below) and had taken measures to implement its provisions.

Concerning humanitarian questions, the Serbian Government adopted a concrete programme of return for persons displaced by terrorist activities, providing material assistance for the reconstruction of their homes. Contacts had been made with ICRC, UNHCR and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to establish meaningful cooperation to solve questions relating to the return of displaced persons.

relations with that organization and the return of the long-term mission to the country.

Contact Group meeting (June). The Foreign Ministers of the Contact Group met in London on 12 June [S/1998/567], together with the Foreign Ministers of Canada and Japan. The Ministers noted that security forces had again intervened indiscriminately, causing many civilian casualties and forcing tens of thousands of inhabitants to flee their homes. They decided to put to the authorities in Belgrade a set of points for immediate action to prevent any further deterioration in the situation. The concrete measures were: cease all action by the security forces affecting the civilian population and order the withdrawal of security units used for civilian repression; enable effective and continuous international monitoring in Kosovo and allow unimpeded access for monitors; facilitate, in agreement with UNHCR and ICRC, the full return to their homes of refugees and displaced persons and allow free and unimpeded access for humanitarian organizations and supplies to Kosovo; and make rapid progress in the dialogue with the Kosovo Albanian leadership. The Ministers expected that leadership to make clear its rejection of violence and acts of terrorism and that Kosovo Albanian extremists would refrain from further violent attacks. The Ministers said that political dialogue was unlikely to take root if violence continued to be espoused by members of the Kosovo Albanian community and expressed support for those in the Kosovo Albanian leadership who were committed to peaceful dialogue.

The Ministers insisted that the fighting stop and that effective dialogue resume quickly. There should be a clear timetable for rapid progress, and President Milosevic had a special responsibility to ensure that steps were taken to achieve a political solution. They welcomed the invitation by President Boris Yeltsin of the Russian Federation to President Milosevic to a meeting on 16 June (see below) and stressed the importance of President Milosevic's taking advantage of that meeting to announce progress on the steps outlined by the Ministers. Failing that, further measures would be adopted to halt the violence and protect the civilian population, including those that might require the authorization of a Security Council resolution.

In the meantime, the Ministers urged ICTY to investigate any possible violations of international humanitarian law in Kosovo; agreed to give active support to UNHCR and other humanitarian organizations dealing with the crisis in the region; and undertook to accelerate efforts to assist neighbouring countries to improve their security and cope with the humanitarian burden imposed on them.

The Foreign Ministers of Canada, France, Germany, Italy, the United Kingdom and the United States confirmed their decision to implement the ban on new investment in Serbia and to freeze funds held abroad by the FRY and Serbian Governments, and agreed to ban flights by Yugoslav carriers between FRY and their countries. Japan supported that approach and agreed to consider similar action, but the Russian Federation did not associate itself with those measures.

Moscow discussion on Kosovo

Following their meeting on 16 June in Moscow, Russian Federation President Yeltsin and FRY President Milosevic, in a joint statement [S/1998/526], reaffirmed their position of principle on the necessity of preserving the territorial integrity and respecting the sovereignty of FRY, and condemned all forms of terrorism, separatism and armed activity that affected the civilian population.

To stabilize the situation in Kosovo and Metohija, the Yugoslav side announced its willingness to resolve the existing problems by political means, based on the equality of all citizens and national communities in Kosovo, and continue without delay the negotiations between representatives of the State and the Kosovar Albanian political parties. Negotiations, including on forms of autonomy, should be pursued according to the timetable established by the parties with a view to achieving significant and speedy progress. FRY also expressed its willingness to refrain from taking any repressive measures against peaceful populations and to guarantee complete freedom of movement throughout Kosovo as a means of strengthening confidence-building measures. No restrictions should be imposed on diplomatic representatives of foreign countries and international organizations accredited to FRY who wished to learn about the situation. FRY would also guarantee free access by humanitarian organizations, ICRC and UNHCR, and allow the unimpeded entry of humanitarian supplies into those territories and the free return of all refugees and displaced persons on the basis of programmes agreed upon with UNHCR and ICRC. State assistance would be provided to reconstruct destroyed homes and, to the extent that terrorist activities were halted, the presence of security forces outside the areas in which they were permanently deployed would be reduced. FRY would announce its willingness to begin negotiations with OSCE on receiving that organization's mission to Kosovo and on the reinstatement of FRY as a member of OSCE.

Escalation of conflict

Report of Secretary-General (July). In July [S/1998/608], the Secretary-General reported that the situation in Kosovo had deteriorated significantly. An outbreak of violence in early June led to an influx of refugees to Albania and to an increase in internally displaced persons in Kosovo and the FRY Republic of Montenegro. It was estimated that there could be as many as 13,000 more refugees in Albania than the 6,900 registered at the end of June. In addition, an estimated 3,150 had departed to southern Albania. As at 19 June, the Montenegrin authorities had registered another 10,177 internally displaced persons from Kosovo. UNHCR estimated that some 45,000 people had been displaced within Kosovo itself. Anticipating that further deterioration of the situation might lead to a major humanitarian crisis, UN agencies expanded their activities in the region.

OSCE, whose report on the situation was annexed to the Secretary-General's report, indicated that since the 15 May agreement between President Milosevic and Mr. Rugova on weekly working contacts between the two sides, only one meeting had been held (22 May) in Pristina. The Albanian side contended that the military-cum-police operation unleashed on south-west Kosovo by Belgrade in late May and the whole of June precluded its participation in further meetings. By 16 June, no signs had emerged of a possible resumption of the dialogue. The situation had also deteriorated further along the Yugoslav-Albanian border and along the Pec-Decani, Djakovica-Prizren and Pristina-Pec highways. Serious armed clashes were noted in those areas. The wholesale destruction of Albanian villages had sent consecutive waves of refugees streaming out of the area. Casualty figures released by both sides differed considerably, but unofficial sources indicated that there might be over 200 dead. Observers agreed that the range and scope of combat operations validated the contention that a guerrilla war was under way. More people were crossing illegally into Kosovo from Albania and weapons were pouring into Kosovo, brought by armed groups of ethnic Albanians.

With regard to the implementation of the arms embargo imposed by Security Council resolution 1160(1998), the Secretary-General had contacted NATO, the EU, the Western European Union (WEU) and the Danube Commission regarding their readiness to submit to him reports on suspected embargo violations. The four organizations agreed to assist in monitoring the implementation of the resolution within the areas of their competence and expertise. Their responses were annexed to the Secretary-General's report.

Contact Group meeting (July). At its 8 July meeting in Bonn, [S/1998/657], the Contact Group noted that the security forces used for civilian repression had not been withdrawn, although they had shown some measure of restraint recently, and rapid progress in the dialogue with the Kosovo Albanian leadership had not been achieved. The Group acknowledged the significance of the undertakings given by President Milosevic in his meeting with President Yeltsin on 16 June and emphasized the need for them to be fully implemented. It expected Belgrade to cooperate fully with those States that were enhancing their capability to observe developments in Kosovo and that President Milosevic's stated commitment to allow international observers in Kosovo would also permit an increase in the size of the European Community Monitoring Mission in Kosovo. It urged Belgrade to do more to facilitate the return of refugees and displaced persons, in particular by agreeing to security confidence-building measures, and expressed support for UNHCR's regional approach to the refugee question. The Group encouraged the EU and other international organizations to continue to commit resources in order to create conditions for an early return of refugees throughout the region.

The Contact Group called for an immediate cessation of hostilities to pave the way for talks between Belgrade and the Kosovo Albanian leadership on additional confidence-building measures and the future status of Kosovo; its members would pursue that goal through immediate talks with both sides. It insisted that those outside FRY who were supplying financial support, arms or training for armed Kosovo Albanian groups should cease doing so immediately and requested all States, as a matter of urgency, to prevent funds collected on their territory from being used to contravene the Security Council's arms embargo. The Group decided to pursue Council consideration of a resolution reiterating those requirements, as well as authorization of a resolution to bring about compliance by those who blocked the process.

The Contact Group agreed to recommend to the negotiating teams basic elements for a resolution of the question of Kosovo's status and initiated work to define possible further elements for that status. It was prepared to promote Belgrade's full integration in the international community, including participation in OSCE, should substantive talks begin with the necessary security confidence-building measures in place and the launch of the mission of the Special Representative of the OSCE Chairman-in-Office.

Expressing concern about the situation in neighbouring countries, the Contact Group asked competent international organizations to examine options for stabilizing the situation in Albania. It noted the view of the ICTY Prosecutor that the situation in Kosovo represented an armed conflict within the terms of the Tribunal's mandate; reiterated its call for Belgrade and all those in Kosovo to cooperate with the Prosecutor's investigation of possible violations of international humanitarian law; and requested international observers operating in Kosovo to supply the Prosecutor with any relevant information. It also noted that a representative of the OSCE Chairman-in-Office had met FRY government representatives on 3 July in Belgrade. The Contact Group supported the continuation of those contacts with a view to the early return of the long-term OSCE missions to FRY, the early launching of the mission of the Special Representative of the OSCE Chairman-in-Office and a dialogue across the full range of FRY's relations with OSCE.

Communication. The EU President, in a 20 July statement [S/1998/675], said that the EU was appalled by reports of recent intensified hostilities in Kosovo, according to which up to 450 people were unaccounted for, several dozens of whom seemed to have been killed. It condemned the alleged infiltrations of several hundred fighters from Albania into Kosovo, as well as the violence in the Albanian-Yugoslav border area, and called urgently on the armed Kosovar groups and the Serbian authorities to exercise restraint and cease hostilities immediately.

Report of Secretary-General (August). On 5 August [S/1998/712], the Secretary-General reported that the situation in Kosovo continued to deteriorate, with heavy fighting in several areas, civilian and military casualties were at their highest point since the outbreak of the conflict, the attitudes of the two sides appeared to be hardening and there was no progress on renewal of dialogue. Most disturbing were the reports of increased tensions along the border between FRY and Albania. The unrelenting violence led to a dramatic increase in internally displaced persons in Kosovo and Montenegro. According to UNHCR, more than 100,000 people had been driven from their homes and between 70,000 and 80,000 were internally displaced in Kosovo by the end of July. With the increasing number of displaced persons and the approaching winter, Kosovo had the potential of becoming a humanitarian disaster. In that regard, the United Nations had launched a consolidated inter-agency flash appeal for humanitarian assistance (see PART THREE, Chapter III).

In a report annexed to the Secretary-General's report, OSCE stated that a technical mission of its Chairman-in-Office visited FRY from 14 to 22 July to make a preliminary assessment of OSCE/FRY relations, with a view to facilitating the mission of Felipe Gonzalez, his Personal Representative, and a comprehensive resolution of issues, such as the re-establishment of the OSCE long-term mission.

As to the arms embargo, the Secretary-General noted that the Council, in resolution 1186(1998), by which it had extended and strengthened UNPREDEP, had included in UNPREDEP's mandate the task of monitoring the border areas and reporting on illicit arms flows (see above).

Communication. On 13 August [S/1998/757], FRY drew the Secretary-General's attention to the incomplete data and arbitrary assessments in his 5 August report. According to FRY, the misperception of the Kosovo situation at the United Nations derived from the lack of first-hand knowledge of events taking place on the ground. To allay future misunderstandings and to help obtain a better picture of the situation and the measures FRY and the Republic of Serbia had taken to solve the problems, FRY invited the Secretary-General to visit the country at his earliest convenience.

Call for ceasefire

On 24 August [meeting 3918], the Security Council President, following consultations among the members, made the following statement on the Council's behalf [S/PRST/1998/25]:

The Security Council has considered the report of the Secretary-General of 5 August 1998 submitted pursuant to its resolution 1160(1998) of 31 March 1998.

The Council remains gravely concerned about the recent intense fighting in Kosovo which has had a devastating impact on the civilian population and has greatly increased the numbers of refugees and displaced persons.

The Council shares the concern of the Secretary-General that the continuation or further escalation of the conflict in Kosovo has dangerous implications for the stability of the region. In particular, the Council is gravely concerned that given the increasing numbers of displaced persons, coupled with the approaching winter, the situation in Kosovo has the potential to become an even greater humanitarian disaster. The Council affirms the right of all refugees and displaced persons to return to their homes. In particular, the Council emphasizes the importance of unhindered and continuous access of humanitarian organizations to the affected population. The Council is concerned over reports of increasing violations of international humanitarian law.

The Council calls for an immediate ceasefire. The Council emphasizes that the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanians must achieve a political solution to the issue of Kosovo and that all violence and acts of terrorism from whatever quarter are unacceptable, and reiterates the importance of the implementation of its resolution 1160(1998). The Council reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and urges the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanian leadership to enter immediately into a meaningful dialogue leading to an end to the violence and a negotiated political solution to the issue of Kosovo. It supports in this context the efforts of the Contact Group, including its initiatives to engage the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanian leadership in discussions on the future status of Kosovo.

In this regard, the Council welcomes the announcement by Mr. Ibrahim Rugova, the leader of the Kosovo Albanian community, of the formation of a negotiating team to represent the interests of the Kosovo Albanian community. The formation of the Kosovo Albanian negotiating team should lead to the early commencement of a substantial dialogue with the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, with the aim of ending the violence and achieving a peaceful settlement, including the safe and permanent return of all internally displaced persons and refugees to their homes.

It remains essential that the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanians accept responsibility for ending the violence in Kosovo, for allowing the people of Kosovo to resume their normal lives and for moving the political process forward.

The Council will continue to follow the situation in Kosovo closely and will remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (September). On 4 September [S/1998/834], the Secretary-General reported that continued international efforts to facilitate a political solution to the Kosovo crisis had had limited results and the situation remained volatile. In mid-July and early August, heavy fighting occurred in the towns of Oraovac and Malisevo, as well as in the Suva Reka and Stimlje areas. By mid-August, fierce fighting was raging in the western parts of Djakovica, Decani and Pec. Towards the end of August, fighting continued in several areas: west of Pec in the Rugovska Klisura area, along the Stimlje-Suva Reka road, on the Komorane-Kijevo stretch of the Pristina-Pec road and near Pristina airport. Although the scale of fighting between FRY's security forces and KLA had decreased, and the Government had announced that life was returning to normal, it was evident that the conflict continued and any prediction of its end would be premature.

An estimated 600 to 700 civilians had been killed in the fighting in Kosovo since March and over 230,000 persons had been displaced, the vast majority of whom were within Kosovo (170,000). Others had moved to locations in Montenegro (33,500) and Serbia (20,000). Some 14,000 refugees were currently in Albania. Deserted towns and villages, as well as destroyed houses, slaughtered livestock and burned fields, bore witness to the scale of displacement and destruction. However, it was not always possible fully to gauge the level of population movement inside Kosovo, owing to the increasingly insecure environment, impediments to access and the fluidity of the population movements. Thousands of civilians were constantly in flight to escape attacks by government forces.

The Secretary-General also reported that the human rights situation in Kosovo was marked by widespread violations. The Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights was receiving increasing reports of persons being arbitrarily arrested for questioning and kept in pre-trial detention for periods well beyond the legal time limit (see PART TWO, Chapter III).

On 1 September, the Secretary-General had written to President Milosevic to underline his alarm at the excessive use of force by Serbian military and police forces, noting that Kosovo Albanian extremists also bore responsibility for their acts of provocation. Persistent tensions on the border between FRY and Albania, including reports of border violations and cross-border shelling, were a further cause of serious concern. He urged both parties to demonstrate restraint and to start the negotiating process as soon as possible. Efforts by the Contact Group, regional organizations and individual States to put an end to the violence and to create appropriate conditions for a political settlement of the conflict had his full support.

The provision of humanitarian assistance was of great urgency, particularly with the onset of the harsh winter months in the Balkans. In cooperation with ICRC, international NGOs and local organizations, UN agencies were attempting to deal with the crisis in the face of difficult conditions and limited funding. The Secretary-General urged the parties in FRY to assure unhindered access to all affected areas and to ensure the security of relief personnel.

In a 21 September addendum [S/1998/834/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted information on the situation in Kosovo provided by the OSCE Chairman-in-Office. He stated that the past four weeks were characterized by a sharp escalation of military operations in Kosovo, as a result of an offensive launched by Serb forces against armed groups of Kosovo Albanians in the central, southern and western regions of the province. A number of armed clashes had also been reported along the Albanian-Yugoslav border. In August, after KLA seized control of a part of Kosovo, Serb forces went on the offensive, regaining control of the principal roads of Kosovo and capturing a number of towns previously viewed as KLA strongholds; many KLA fighters discarded their weapons and escaped to Albania.

Continued efforts by the international community aimed at ceasing hostilities and resuming the dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina had not resulted in any breakthrough. In early August, the Contact Group transmitted to the two belligerents options for a future status of Kosovo, but no binding opinions in respect of those proposals had so far been forwarded by either of the opposing parties. Although the invitation of the FRY authorities to start the negotiations over the future status of Kosovo was submitted to the Kosovo Albanian leaders, no substantial talks had begun, mainly because of the continuing military offensive. KLA militants continued to operate in some towns and villages, crossing the border into and out of Kosovo, with recent evidence pointing to substantial numbers withdrawing into Albania.

The Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission, made up of representatives from the United States, the Russian Federation and the EU, and permanently posted in Kosovo, ran several score patrol missions weekly in the province's trouble spots. Kosovo was also toured on a regular basis by diplomats from other Belgrade-based embassies, as well as politicians and diplomats on visits to FRY.

A second round of exploratory talks between OSCE and FRY was held on 4 August in Warsaw, Poland, which led to further clarification of positions between FRY and OSCE, but did not result in any breakthrough.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 September [meeting 3930], the Security Council, on the basis of a draft [S/1998/882] sponsored by France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Portugal, Slovenia, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States, adopted resolution 1199(1998) by vote (14-0-1).

Recalling its resolution 1160(1998) of 31 March 1998,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General pursuant to resolution 1160(1998), and in particular his report of 4 September 1998,

Taking note with appreciation of the statement by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of France, Germany, Italy, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America (the Contact Group) of 12 June 1998 at the conclusion of the meeting of the Contact Group with the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Canada and Japan, and the further statement of the Contact Group made in Bonn on 8 July 1998,

Taking note also with appreciation of the joint statement of 16 June 1998 by Presidents of the Russian Federation and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia,

Taking note of the communication by the Prosecutor of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 addressed to the Contact Group on 7 July 1998, expressing the view that the situation in Kosovo represents an armed conflict within the terms of the mandate of the Tribunal,

Gravely concerned at the recent intense fighting in Kosovo and in particular the excessive and indiscriminate use of force by Serbian security forces and the Yugoslav Army, which have resulted in numerous civilian casualties and, according to the estimate of the Secretary-General, the displacement of over 230,000 persons from their homes,

Deeply concerned by the flow of refugees into northern Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina and other European countries as a result of the use of force in Kosovo, as well as by the increasing numbers of displaced persons within Kosovo, and other parts of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, up to 50,000 of whom the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has estimated are without shelter and other basic necessities,

Reaffirming the right of all refugees and displaced persons to return to their homes in safety, and underlining the responsibility of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for creating the conditions which allow them to do so,

Condemning all acts of violence by any party, as well as terrorism in pursuit of political goals by any group or individual, and all external support for such activities in Kosovo, including the supply of arms and training for terrorist activities in Kosovo, and expressing concern at the reports of continuing violations of the prohibitions imposed by resolution 1160(1998),

Deeply concernedly the rapid deterioration in the humanitarian situation throughout Kosovo, alarmed at the impending humanitarian catastrophe as described in the report of the Secretary-General, and emphasizing the need to prevent this from happening,

Deeply concerned also by reports of increasing violations of human rights and of international humanitarian law, and emphasizing the need to ensure that the rights of all inhabitants of Kosovo are respected,

Reaffirming the objectives of resolution 1160(1998), in which the Council expressed support for a peaceful resolution of the Kosovo problem, which would include an enhanced status for Kosovo, a substantially greater degree of autonomy, and meaningful self-administration,

Reaffirming also the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia,

Affirming that the deterioration of the situation in Kosovo, Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, constitutes a threat to peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Demands that all parties, groups and individuals immediately cease hostilities and maintain a ceasefire in Kosovo, Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which would enhance the prospects for a meaningful dialogue between the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanian leadership and reduce the risks of a humanitarian catastrophe;

2. Demands also that the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Kosovo Albanian leadership take immediate steps to improve the humanitarian situation and to avert the impending humanitarian catastrophe;

4. Demands that the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, in addition to the measures called for under resolution 1160(1998), implement immediately the following concrete measures towards achieving a political solution to the situation in Kosovo as contained in the Contact Group statement of 12 June 1998:

(a) Cease all action by the security forces affecting the civilian population and order the withdrawal of security units used for civilian repression;

(b) Enable effective and continuous international monitoring in Kosovo by the European Community Monitoring Mission and diplomatic missions accredited to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including access and complete freedom of movement of such monitors to, from and within Kosovo, unimpeded by government authorities, and expeditious issuance of appropriate travel documents to international personnel contributing to the monitoring;

5. Notes, in this connection, the commitments of the President of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, in his joint statement with the President of the Russian Federation of 16 June 1998:

(a) To resolve existing problems by political means on the basis of equality for all citizens and ethnic communities in Kosovo;

(b) Not to carry out any repressive actions against the peaceful population;

(c) To provide full freedom of movement for and ensure that there will be no restrictions on representatives of foreign States and international institutions accredited to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia monitoring the situation in Kosovo;

17. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1199(1998):

In favour Bahrain, Brazil, Costa Rica, France, Gabon, Gambia, Japan, Kenya, Portugal, Russian Federation, Slovenia, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: China.

Speaking before the vote, China said that the draft resolution did not take into full consideration the situation in Kosovo and the legitimate rights of FRY within its sphere of sovereignty. The draft invoked Chapter VII of the Charter all too indiscreetly in order to threaten FRY. That would not help bring about the fundamental settlement of the issue and might, on the contrary, reinforce the separatist and terrorist forces in the region and increase the tension there.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In October [S/1998/912], the Secretary-General reported that fighting in Kosovo continued unabated. Government security forces conducted offences in various parts of the province, intensifying their operations in the last week of September by launching another offensive in the Drenica region and in the Suva Reka-Stimlje-Urosevac triangle. Reports indicated that military forces had withdrawn from the Drenica and Prizren areas on 1 October, and observers indicated a decrease in their activities. However, the Secretariat continued to receive information of a significant government armed presence and operations by its special police.

The Secretary-General said that the desperate situation of civilians, who had become the main target in the conflict, remained the most disturbing aspect of the hostilities in Kosovo. The fighting resulted in their mass displacement, the extensive destruction of villages and means of livelihood and the deep trauma and despair of displaced populations. Many villages were destroyed by shelling and burning and there were concerns that the disproportionate use of force by the security forces was designed to terrorize and subjugate the population. Serbian security forces demanded the surrender of weapons and reportedly used terror and violence to force people to flee their homes or places of refuge. There were disruptions in electricity and other services, empty dwellings were burned and looted, abandoned farm vehicles destroyed, and farm animals burned in their barns or shot in the fields.

According to the OSCE report annexed to the Secretary-General's report, the United States Ambassador to FYROM and Peace Envoy, Christopher Hill, had announced at the beginning of September that an outline agreement had been reached between the Kosovo Albanians and the Belgrade authorities on the future of Kosovo. The agreement, based on options proposed by the Contact Group, envisaged a three-year stabilization and normalization period to allow for the re-establishment of democratic institutions. It was agreed also that indirect talks should continue.

The Secretary-General supported the efforts of the Contact Group, and in particular Ambassador Hill, to negotiate a political settlement between the Serb authorities and Kosovo Albanian leaders, of whom Mr. Rugova remained the most prominent figure, although his leadership was contested by the Albanian opposition and Kosovar paramilitary units.

At a 2 October meeting in London, the Contact Group said that it expected full and immediate compliance with Security Council resolution 1199(1998) but that had not so far been achieved. A revised paper, based on the work of Ambassador Hill, would be put to the parties on behalf of the Contact Group.

The Secretary-General declared that there was no alternative to a direct dialogue in search of a mutually acceptable settlement in the interest of all people of Kosovo and FRY. The consequences of the current repressive approach not only affected the immediate humanitarian situation, they also had a direct and major adverse impact on the prospects for a just and lasting political solution.

Threat of air strikes

Communications. The Russian Federation transmitted to the Secretary-General a 4 October statement [S/1998/921], indicating that reports that NATO was planning to carry out air strikes against objectives in FRY on the pretext of "giving fresh impetus" to the settlement of the Kosovo problem had aroused deep disquiet in Moscow.

The Russian Government felt compelled to emphasize yet again that use of force against a sovereign State without the due and proper approval of the Security Council would constitute a serious violation of the Charter and compromise the entire system of international relations. Extremely complex ethnic conflicts could not be resolved through military means, but needed painstaking work to establish a legal mechanism to ensure that people of different nationalities and religious persuasions could live together in freedom and full security. Military intervention in Kosovo would not only fail to tackle the causes of the problem, but also serve to strengthen resistance in Kosovo and counter the diplomatic efforts of the international community to initiate dialogue between Serbs and Albanians. The security of the peacekeeping forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina would be compromised, as would the outcome of the peace process in the territory of the former Yugoslavia and the prospects for stability in the Balkans in general.

The Russian Federation invited Belgrade to apply strictly the Moscow accords of 16 June. The authorities of FRY and the leaders of the Albanian community in Kosovo should fully respect Security Council resolution 1199(1998), immediately end acts of hostility, urgently take steps to prevent the impending humanitarian catastrophe and begin negotiations with a view to a peaceful settlement of the Kosovo crisis.

In identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President [A/53/678-S/1998/1089], Belarus transmitted a statement adopted by its Council of the Republic of the National Assembly on 12 November, expressing serious concern over the continued threat of military action in the Balkans by NATO, despite the fact that the Yugoslav leadership had taken steps to implement Council resolution 1199(1998). The members of the Belarus Council were convinced that the use of military force by NATO would only make the situation worse, destroy the prospects for peace talks and lead to a marked deterioration of the situation. It would result in loss of life among the civilian population and increase the flow of refugees. Belarus was in favour of the international community sending to Kosovo impartial observers to make a realistic assessment of the situation and promote a peaceful settlement. There was a need to resume as soon as possible the work of the OSCE mission in Kosovo, since the FRY Parliament had confirmed its readiness to facilitate the mission's work in implementing the Council's resolution.

Milosevic-Holbrooke agreement

On 14 October [S/1998/953], FRY informed the Security Council President of the endorsement by the Republic of Serbia of the accord reached by FRY President Slobodan Milosevic and the United States Special Envoy, Richard Holbrooke. The principles of that agreement were: a political approach and a peaceful solution of problems in Kosovo and Metohija, achieved through dialogue, were the only acceptable means of reaching a lasting solution; violence and terrorism had to stop immediately; any solution had to respect the territorial integrity and sovereignty and internationally recognized boundaries of FRY, and had to be based on the full respect for the equality of all citizens and national communities in Kosovo and Metohija, whose equal treatment should be guaranteed; the future of Kosovo and Metohija lay in peace, equality, integration, economic prosperity and free and common life, not in ethnic, confessional, cultural or any division or isolation; the legal arrangements establishing Kosovo and Metohija's self-governance and the legal frameworks of the Republic of Serbia and FRY were to be harmonized in accordance with international standards and the Final Act of the 1975 Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (Helsinki Conference); citizens in Kosovo and Metohija should govern themselves democratically through assemblies and executive and judicial organs and, within nine months, there would be free and fair elections for Kosovo and Metohija authorities, which FRY would invite OSCE to supervise to ensure their openness and fairness; members of the national communities should have additional rights in order to preserve and express their national, cultural, religious and linguistic identities, and national communities should be legally equal and not use their additional rights to endanger those of other national communities or other rights of citizens; in the context of the political settlement for Kosovo and Metohija, which would devolve many responsibilities to the communal level, a police force would be established and would be representative of the local population, under local-communal direction and coordinated by administrative organs of Kosovo; no person would be prosecuted in State courts for crimes related to the conflict in Kosovo, except for crimes against humanity and international law, and the State would allow complete, unimpeded access to foreign (including forensic) experts, along with State investigators in order to facilitate full transparency; and the competent organs would re-examine, with the aim of extraordinary mitigation of the punishments, the sentences of members of the national communities in Kosovo and Metohija for criminal offences motivated by political aims.

By 14 October, a comprehensive timetable would be agreed, building on the following elements: by 19 October, an agreement on the status of the international presence, including verification, OSCE and other elements; by 2 November, the completion of an agreement containing core elements for a political settlement in Kosovo and Metohija using, as a basis, the paper proposed by the Contact Group (2 October); by 9 November, the completion of rules and procedures for elections.

In a 14 October statement [S/1998/955], the FRY Government fully approved the text of the agreement between it and OSCE on the OSCE Kosovo Verification Mission (see below) and had authorized its signature. As part of the verification and compliance with Council resolution 1199(1998), FRY would permit non-combat aircraft to observe, for purposes of peaceful verification, the situation in Kosovo.

Canada, on 16 October [S/1998/963], stated that the Council should adopt a resolution to lock in the agreement and provide for its enforcement, giving explicit authorization for the use of force should that be required to enforce the agreement in the event it was violated. Canada encouraged Council members to insist on compliance with the requirement of resolution 1199(1998) calling for cooperation by FRY with ICTY, including facilitating investigations of possible crimes against humanity.

Establishment of Kosovo verification missions

On 16 October [S/1998/959], Poland transmitted to the Security Council President a decision adopted by the OSCE Permanent Council, in which it declared its preparedness to embark on verification activities related to compliance of all parties in Kosovo with the requirements set forth by the international community regarding the crisis there, and supported the efforts of its Chairman-in-Office to make those arrangements with FRY authorities.

The United States transmitted the text of the Kosovo Verification Mission Agreement [S/1998/991], signed by NATO and FRY on 15 October. The Agreement provided for an air surveillance system, to be known as the NATO Kosovo Verification Mission, to verify compliance by all parties with the provisions of Security Council resolution 1199(1998). The system would comprise NATO non-combatant reconnaissance platforms. FRY transmitted the text of a parallel agreement [S/1998/962], the Agreement on the Kosovo Verification Mission of OSCE, which had been signed by OSCE and FRY on 16 October. That agreement would allow the OSCE Mission to verify maintenance of the ceasefire by all elements and investigate reports of violations; receive weekly information regarding movements of forces into, out of or within Kosovo; report on roadblocks and other emplacements that influenced lines of communication; maintain liaison with FRY authorities about border control activity; accompany police units in Kosovo in their normal policing roles; assist UNHCR, ICRC and other international organizations in facilitating the return of displaced persons; and provide support in election supervision, in the establishment of Kosovo institutions and police force development. The Mission would comprise 2,000 unarmed verifiers from OSCE member States and would be headquartered in Pristina, with a small liaison office in Belgrade. Coordination centres would be established in the capital of each municipality in Kosovo, with sub-stations in smaller towns/villages. The same text was transmitted to the Secretary-General by Poland on 19 October [S/1998/978].

The President of ICTY (see PART FOUR, Chapter II), in a 22 October letter to the Security Council President [S/1998/990], said that FRY's agreements with NATO and OSCE for a peaceful solution to the conflict in Kosovo, while they committed FRY to accept an international verification system, contained no provisions regarding FRY's obligation to cooperate with ICTY. Moreover, a statement by the President of Serbia appeared to reserve to FRY's domestic judicial system the right to investigate, prosecute and try offences committed in Kosovo that might fall within ICTY's jurisdiction. The ICTY President said that it was imperative that the competence of the Tribunal was unambiguously reaffirmed and that FRY's obligation to cooperate with it was made an explicit part of any resolution of the situation in Kosovo. In the absence of a specific commitment to obey the will of the Security Council, the Tribunal would continue to experience further difficulties with FRY.

FRY, in a 23 October statement [S/1998/993] regarding a meeting between President Milosevic and the head of the OSCE Mission in Kosovo, William Walker, said that President Milosevic expressed his expectation that the OSCE Mission would contribute to a comprehensive and objective assessment of the situation, the speedy normalization of which was under way, as well as positively influence the intensification of the political process. The Federal Government had formed a commission to coordinate relations and liaise with the OSCE Mission.

The OSCE Permanent Council, in a 25 October decision [S/1998/994], formally established the Mission for one year and authorized immediate start-up deployment.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 October [meeting 3937], the Security Council, on the basis of a draft [S/1998/992] sponsored by Bahrain, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Portugal, Slovenia, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States, adopted resolution 1203(1998) by vote (13-0-2).

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1160(1998) of 31 March 1998 and 1199(1998) of 23 September 1998, and the importance of the peaceful resolution of the problem of Kosovo, Federal Republic of Yugoslavia,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General pursuant to resolutions 1160(1998) and 1199(1998), in particular his report of 3 October 1998,

Welcoming the agreement signed in Belgrade on 16 October 1998 by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Chairman-in-Office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, providing for that organization to establish a verification mission in Kosovo, including the undertaking of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to comply with resolutions 1160(1998) and 1199(1998),

Reaffirming that, under the Charter of the United Nations, primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security is conferred on the Security Council,

Recalling the objectives of resolution 1160(1998), in which the Council expressed support for a peaceful resolution of the Kosovo problem, which would include an enhanced status for Kosovo, a substantially greater degree of autonomy and meaningful self-administration,

Condemning all acts of violence by any party, as well as terrorism in pursuit of political goals by any group or individual, and all external support for such activities in Kosovo, including the supply of arms and training for terrorist activities in Kosovo, and expressing concern at the reports of continuing violations of the prohibitions imposed by resolution 1160(1998),

Deeply concerned at the recent closure by the authorities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia of independent media outlets in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and emphasizing the need for these to be allowed freely to resume their operations,

Deeply alarmed and concerned at the continuing grave humanitarian situation throughout Kosovo and the impending humanitarian catastrophe, and re-emphasizing the need to prevent this from happening,

Endorses and supports the agreements signed in Belgrade on 16 October 1998 between the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and on 15 October 1998 between the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, concerning the verification of compliance by the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and all others concerned in Kosovo with the requirements of its resolution 1199(1998), and demands the full and prompt implementation of those agreements by the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia;

2. Notes the endorsement by the Government of Serbia of the accord reached by the President of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the United States Special Envoy, and the public commitment of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to complete negotiations on a framework for a political settlement by 2 November 1998, and calls for the full implementation of these commitments;

17. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1203(1998):

In favour Bahrain, Brazil, Costa Rica, France, Gabon, Gambia, Japan, Kenya, Portugal, Slovenia, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: China, Russian Federation.

The Russian Federation, speaking before the vote, stated that the draft did not take fully into account recent positive changes with respect to Belgrade's implementation of Council demands and it could not agree with the one-sided assertion that the situation in Kosovo constituted a continuing threat to peace and security in the region. The Russian Federation regretted that the draft's sponsors refused to delete the text relating to freedom of operation of media outlets in FRY. Questions of freedom of the press lay far beyond the Council's powers and therefore could not be the object of a Council resolution. It hoped that the resolution would accelerate implementation of the Belgrade agreements and the dispatch of the OSCE Mission, and expected the immediate rescission of the NATO decision on the possible use of force, the so-called activation order, which currently remained in force.

China, in explanation of its vote, said that it understood the agreements on Kosovo reached between FRY and the parties concerned and evaluated positively FRY's efforts in alleviating the humanitarian situation in Kosovo and pursuing lasting peace and reconciliation in the region. China was of the view that the international community should try to maintain and promote that momentum towards a peaceful solution. However, a regional organization had made the decision to take military action against FRY and interfere in its internal affairs. That decision was made unilaterally, without consulting the Council or seeking its authorization. Such an irresponsible act was not conducive to the creation of a peaceful atmosphere for dealing with the question of Kosovo and would not help resolve the issue. Furthermore, it violated the purposes, principles and relevant provisions of the UN Charter, as well as international law and widely acknowledged norms governing relations between States. It was a disparagement of and a challenge to the authority of the United Nations and the Security Council and created an extremely dangerous precedent in international relations. China was opposed to using Council resolutions to pressure FRY or to interfere in its internal affairs. It believed that the resolution did not entail any authorization to use force or to threaten to use force against FRY, nor should it in any way be interpreted thus.

The United States said that a credible threat of force was key to achieving the OSCE and NATO agreements and remained key to ensuring their full implementation. The NATO allies, in agreeing on 13 October to the use of force, made it clear that they had the authority, the will and the means to resolve the issue. It retained that authority and would not tolerate the continued violence that had resulted in nearly a quarter of a million refugees and displaced persons and thousands of deaths, and jeopardized the prospects for peace in the wider Balkans.

UN presence in Kosovo

On 14 October [S/1998/966], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that, pursuant to the President's 6 October request, made in a press statement, that the Secretary-General consider how the Secretariat might be ensured a first-hand capability to assess developments on the ground and to continue reporting to the Council on compliance with resolutions 1160(1998) and 1199(1998), he intended to send an interdepartmental mission to FRY. The mission would be headed by Staffan de Mistura, Director of the United Nations Information Centre in Rome. The mission would also assess modalities for coordination of activities between OSCE and UN agencies on the ground. The Council, on 19 October, took note of the Secretary-General's intention [S/1998/967].

Between 17 and 27 October, the mission visited FRY, including Kosovo and Montenegro, as well as the OSCE secretariat in Vienna. Members of the mission met government and local officials and representatives of the Kosovo Albanian community, international organizations, international and local NGOs and members of the diplomatic community, and interviewed a number of local citizens of different ethnic backgrounds. The Secretary-General said that the Secretariat's capability to assess developments on the ground was limited to the humanitarian and human rights situation, with information in those areas being provided by UNHCR in its capacity as lead agency, and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). Although the UN liaison office in Belgrade informed the Secretariat on political and military developments in FRY, including in Kosovo, it did not have a mandate to report to the Security Council on those issues, nor did it have a presence in Kosovo. Having explored various modalities for providing the Council with first-hand information on the situation in Kosovo, Mr. de Mistura prepared several alternatives for consideration.

In doing so, he took into account that UNHCR had enhanced its coordinating role with other humanitarian partners operating in Kosovo and the increasing number of international and national NGOs represented on the ground. Effective coordination arrangements were thus in place to ensure comprehensive reporting on the humanitarian situation. The activities of OHCHR in FRY, in particular in Kosovo, were to be strengthened in the areas of monitoring, training and capacity-building, by increasing the number of personnel in the field. The memorandum of understanding between OHCHR and FRY was concluded on 9 November.

It was evident, the Secretary-General said, that OSCE was becoming the lead political organization dealing with the Kosovo crisis. Initial consultations by Mr. de Mistura with OSCE reflected a strong desire to ensure early agreement on coordination issues to avoid overlapping or any misconception of their respective roles, and to ensure the optimal use of international resources.

The UN role in Kosovo would, therefore, focus on humanitarian and human rights issues, with UNHCR remaining the lead agency in the humanitarian field and OHCHR in the field of human rights. To facilitate coordination with the Kosovo Verification Mission, UNHCR had established close liaison with OSCE in Vienna and with the Kosovo Verification Mission advance party in the field. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs was also expected to establish a presence in Pristina, under the UNHCR umbrella, to assist in coordination efforts and longer-term reconstruction/post-conflict development plans. OHCHR was planning to open a sub-office in Pristina and, with the Kosovo Verification Mission and UNHCR, would establish an effective system of information sharing on cases of human rights violations in Kosovo. While liaison with NATO was expected to be maintained primarily through the NATO liaison office at UN Headquarters, it was anticipated that coordination on the ground would be established in Pristina.

Further developments

Reports of Secretary-General (November and December). In November [S/1998/1068], the Secretary-General reported that the accord reached between President Milosevic and the United States Special Envoy, Richard Holbrooke, and the subsequent agreements signed with NATO and OSCE had contributed towards defusing the immediate crisis situation in Kosovo and had created more favourable conditions for a political settlement. FRY had welcomed the 16 October agreement establishing the Kosovo Verification Mission (see above) and indicated its willingness to cooperate fully with it. It pledged to ensure full freedom of movement for the Mission's monitors and to inform them of possible dangers. The Serbian Interior Minister indicated his Government's intention to inform the Mission promptly of all incidents, excluding those it might classify as "criminal activity". Government officials informed the United Nations that they were considering holding elections in Kosovo in about nine months. The local administration in Kosovo, the Kosovo Executive Council, became functional, albeit with no Kosovo Albanian participation. The FRY Deputy Prime Minister indicated the need for joint national and international efforts to address the humanitarian situation and pledged to promote active cooperation with humanitarian organizations. The Kosovo Albanian leaders expressed reservations about the 16 October agreement, continued to insist on their right to self-determination and signalled their continuing wish for an international armed presence on the ground. They indicated, with varying degrees of certainty, that Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units would respect the 13 October accord, but did not discount the possibility of splinter armed groups continuing attacks.

Both the parties to the conflict and the international observers on the ground acknowledged that the military situation had stabilized and that, despite some serious but isolated incidents, no major fighting had occurred since 1 October. However, recent attacks by Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units indicated their readiness, intention and capability to actively pursue the advantage gained by the partial withdrawal of the police and military formations, which had been significantly reduced since early October. Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units were asserting their authority to supplant that of the Serbian police in areas where the police had withdrawn and had established their own checkpoints on a number of secondary roads. While the ceasefire was generally holding, there were continued reports of sporadic violations, including armed provocations against police and police harassment of ethnic Albanians.

On 4 December [S/1998/1147], the Secretary-General reported that no major combat between military forces had occurred in Kosovo but the situation on the ground was still far from peaceful. Sporadic ceasefire violations were reported by both sides. In most cases it was impossible to identify who initiated the clashes. The Secretary-General observed that the relative tranquillity in Kosovo was very deceptive. Members of the Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units, which were reappearing in greater numbers throughout Kosovo, seemed to be motivated, well armed and ready for renewed action, while the Government had enough security forces to launch a new crackdown should those units engage in provocative action. The Secretary-General urged all parties to show restraint so as not to undermine the efforts for a political settlement.

The Secretary-General's fears were realized as various reports indicated growing tensions on the ground. During the first half of December, violence reached its highest level since the 16 October agreement, as more than 50 persons died in violent attacks, the Secretary-General reported on 24 December [S/1998/1221]. Meanwhile, despite the efforts of United States Ambassador Hill and the EU Envoy, Wolfgang Petritsch (Austria), no progress was made in the political dialogue in Kosovo. Statements by both sides regarding the draft agreement proposed by Ambassador Hill (see above) indicated that there was considerable distance between the positions of the parties and that they were far from engaging in meaningful negotiations.

Communications. In several letters to the Secretary-General in December [S/1998/1138, S/1998/1187, S/1998/1231], FRY provided information on its assessment of the situation in Kosovo. It reiterated that the only way towards a lasting solution was political dialogue based on the 11-point framework [S/1998/953] of the Government of the Republic of Serbia. Representatives of all national and ethnic communities, including two Albanian political parties, had accepted the joint agreement of 25 November on the political framework of self-governance in Kosovo, guaranteeing the equality of all citizens, ethnic and national communities, international standards in human rights and rights of national minorities, as well as the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Serbia and FRY.

FRY was committed to: the further implementation of the agreement on the OSCE Verification Mission and strict adherence to the Mission's mandate; guaranteeing security to all citizens of Kosmet (Kosovo-Metohija); making a resolute response to all terrorist attacks and elimination of terrorism; the protection of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of FRY and its borders; and further cooperation with international humanitarian organizations and guaranteeing freedom of movement and access to UNHCR, ICRC and others.

However, progress in the political process would depend on the explicit condemnation of terrorism by the so-called KLA and placing it on the list of terrorist organizations; public condemnation of terrorism by leaders of the Albanian national minority and the cutting off of foreign resources for financing terrorism; cessation of all contacts with terrorists and closing down KLA representative offices and their training centres; and condemnation of Albania for its open support of separatism and terrorism, the prevention of the infiltration of terrorists, mujahedin and arms into FRY and the closing down of the recruitment, training and arming centres of terrorists in Albania.

Other matters

Monitoring mechanisms

Throughout the year, the general situation in Kosovo and at its borders, and implementation of Security Council resolutions 1160(1998) and 1199(1998) in particular, were monitored by various mechanisms. OSCE developed its border-monitoring capacities in Albania and FYROM. In Albania, temporary field offices were established in Bajram Curri and Kukes. Its mission in Albania cooperated closely with local authorities, the European Community Monitoring Mission, UNHCR and the OSCE Spillover Monitor Mission in Skopje.

As the conflict in Kosovo escalated, the Council, by resolution 1186(1998) of 21 July, increased the troop strength of its mission in neighbouring FYROM (UNPREDEP) and extended its mandate to 28 February 1999, including monitoring the border areas and reporting on illicit arms flows and other activities prohibited under resolution 1160(1998) (see above).

The European Community Monitoring Mission, through its regional centres in Tirana, Belgrade and Skopje and its coordinating centres in Pristina and Podgorica, also participated in monitoring the implementation of resolution 1160(1998). Those centres were alerted to the possibility of weapons transfers from their respective areas of responsibility into FRY.

On 6 July, the International Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission, comprising representatives from Canada, the EU, the Russian Federation and the United States, started work in Kosovo, with the participation of the OSCE troika (Denmark, Norway, Poland) from offices in Pristina. The Mission ran several score patrol missions weekly in the province's trouble spots and reported to the Contact Group (see above), the EU Presidency and the OSCE Chairman. In November, the Secretary-General reported that, pending the establishment of the Kosovo Verification Mission (see above), the Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission was expected in the transition period to act as the Kosovo Verification Mission and eventually be absorbed by it.

On 10 December [S/1998/1154], Austria, on behalf of the EU, brought to the attention of the Secretary-General the lack of compliance of FRY with the provisions of resolution 1199(1998) regarding the European Community Monitoring Mission. Austria said that FRY authorities, on 3, 4, 11 and 23 November, indicated to the head of the Mission in Belgrade and the EU Special Envoy that the Mission's presence was senseless in the light of the Milosevic-Holbrooke agreement and the establishment of the Kosovo Verification Mission. Since then, applications for FRY visas for Mission monitors, including the head of Mission, had been turned down.

Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1160(1998)

Security Council resolution 1160(1998) of 31 March (see above) imposed an embargo on the sale or supply to FRY, including Kosovo, of arms and related materiel and on the arming and training for terrorist activities there. It established a Committee to monitor the embargo consisting of all Council members, which kept the Council informed of its activities through reports submitted by the Secretary-General.

The Committee's mandate was to seek and consider from all States information regarding action taken by them for the effective implementation of the prohibitions imposed and to recommend measures in response thereto; to make periodic reports regarding alleged violations; to promulgate guidelines to facilitate implementation of the prohibitions; and to examine reports by States on steps taken to give effect to the prohibitions. By 30 November, 53 States had submitted reports.

On 12 November, the Committee expressed concern at the continuing serious violations of the arms embargo and other prohibitions and urged States, particularly those neighbouring FRY, to make every effort to comply with Council resolutions 1160(1998) and 1199(1998).

Comprehensive monitoring regime

The Secretary-General, responding to the Security Council's request contained in resolution 1160(1998) that he make recommendations for the establishment of a comprehensive regime to monitor implementation of that resolution, said that implementation would require the deployment of teams of qualified experts, supported by a fully equipped communications centre, to provide advice and assistance to neighbouring and other States responsible for enforcing the embargo [S/1998/361]. Since the United Nations was unable, within its existing budget, to establish and administer such a regime, he explored with OSCE and other regional organizations (the EU, NATO, WEU and the Danube Commission) their participation in such a regime.

In August, the Secretary-General reported that, although the four organizations had indicated their readiness to contribute to monitoring the prohibitions, the resources pledged by them would not allow the establishment of a comprehensive regime. However, their proposed contributions, coupled with that of an expanded UN-

PREDEP, provided a useful framework for reporting on violations. In the absence of an integrated coordinating mechanism, it would be essential for participating organizations, UNPREDEP and the Secretariat to hold periodic meetings to exchange information. In December, the Secretary-General reported that the first such meeting took place at United Nations Headquarters on 19 October. Members supported holding such meetings periodically and considered that, in the absence of a comprehensive coordinating mechanism, they could provide a useful framework for exchanging information on monitoring the prohibitions and addressing practical issues arising in that connection.

Refugee and displaced persons

By September, the escalating conflict in Kosovo had resulted in the estimated cumulative displacement of over 230,000 persons. The number of refugees in Albania rose to 14,000. Although the FRY authorities committed themselves to creating conditions for the return of refugees and displaced persons, inadequate security and the destruction of homes made return to many areas virtually impossible. There were also unconfirmed reports that some Kosovo Albanian groups might be blocking the return process to prolong the humanitarian crisis and maintain international attention on Kosovo.

In addition, at the beginning of 1998, some 1,800 refugees from Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina were housed in 28 collective centres in Kosovo, whom UNHCR requested the federal authorities to transfer to safe locations outside the conflict areas; that had not been done. Some 600 of them were being assisted at their request to return, a number that was expected to grow, and more than 1,000 had requested resettlement abroad. In Albania, while the estimated number of refugees (20,000) was relatively small, the political and economic impact of their presence was clearly felt. The poor infrastructure and rampant lawlessness in some areas magnified the impact of their arrival. In the FRY Republic of Montenegro, the most worrying problem was the impact of internally displaced persons on the demographic balance and the high burden placed on that Republic. With 45,000 recent arrivals from Kosovo, Montenegro had about the same number of displaced persons as in 1993—some 12 per cent of its population. On 11 September, it announced the closure of its borders to Kosovo refugees on economic and security grounds, and concern about the potential destabilization in Montenegro as a result of the situation in Kosovo. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, the number of Kosovo Albanian asylum-seekers stood at some 7,000 and that number continued to rise. In FYROM, the presence of an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 Kosovo Albanians was directly linked to the conflict.

The FRY Government claimed that some 100,000 refugees had returned to their homes (independent estimates were some 30,000 to 50,000) and pledged to facilitate the process. It opened 12 centres around Kosovo to provide assistance but the absence of adequate security remained the main obstacle to return.

However, that situation turned around as significant progress was made in the return of displaced persons in Kosovo following the ceasefire and the 13 October accord (see above). Since the military withdrawal on 27 October, thousands of displaced persons had returned to their villages. UNHCR estimated that up to 50,000 returned to their original villages, including 2,000 from Montenegro.

In December, the Secretary-General reported that, with the onset of winter, villages across Kosovo were being repopulated as people uprooted by eight months of fighting were looking for better shelter. As at 24 November, UNHCR estimated that some 75,000 displaced persons had gone back to their villages in hard-hit central and western Kosovo. About 175,000 remained displaced. Many of them returned to their villages to find their homes reduced to rubble, forcing them to stay with neighbours; they were thus still displaced. A trickle of refugee families from northern Albania returned to Kosovo's western frontier villages. Albania hosted some 24,000 refugees from Kosovo. Lawlessness and bandit attacks on aid agencies in the northern Albanian district of Tropoja caused some of the approximately 2,500 refugees located there to return home for lack of other options. UNHCR was working to relocate such refugees to safer areas within Albania, thus avoiding involuntary returns. Some 10,000 to 12,000 internally displaced returned from Montenegro, but many returned there again, went to Albania or moved to Western Europe.

However, in December, despite reports that the ceasefire was holding, there were indications of growing tension on the ground and violence reached its highest level since the 16 October agreement. Nevertheless, displaced persons continued to return to their homes, due to the cold winter and encouraged by the growing presence of humanitarian agencies and the Kosovo Verification Mission (see above). Returns began even to such sensitive locations as Junik, near the Albanian border; the Djakovica area; and Lodja.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees visited FRY from 20 to 22 December to review the effectiveness of the UN humanitarian action and to ensure close cooperation between the Kosovo Verification Mission and UNHCR. The High Commissioner noted that the humanitarian operation was now able to meet the challenge and an immediate humanitarian catastrophe had been averted. She noted also that many Kosovo Albanians feared detention on suspicion of having been involved in the conflict and that that was adversely affecting prospects for the return of those still displaced, as well as the sustainability of the returns that had occurred. She expressed concern that the safeguards on return would not be in place at the time they were most needed and requested President Milosevic to adopt an amnesty law as soon as possible. The High Commissioner underlined the importance of restoring essential services and the need to help health and education services recover from the effects of the conflict.

Human rights

In 1998, OHCHR continued its monitoring presence in Kosovo, reporting regularly to the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights (Jiri Dienstbier) (see PART TWO, Chapter III). OHCHR had opened an office in Belgrade in 1996 and maintained a continuous presence in Pristina from March 1998.

The human rights situation in Kosovo was marked by widespread violations. In September, the Secretary-General reported that OHCHR received increasing reports of persons being arbitrarily arrested for questioning and kept in pre-trial detention beyond the legal limit. It registered more than 200 persons in police detention and another 200 reported missing by various sources. Some persons were also believed to be in unacknowledged detention. In a growing number of cases, Kosovo Albanian political activists, lawyers, humanitarian workers and medical personnel were being arrested and interrogated by the police. OHCHR was also informed that detainees were recently transferred to Belgrade from prisons in Kosovo. Lawyers and families encountered serious problems in obtaining permission to see those detained and reports were also received of torture and ill-treatment during pre-trial detention. OHCHR monitored the trials of persons charged with crimes against the State, including terrorism. Serious concerns were expressed about the independence of the courts and defendants' access to legal counsel.

Of concern also were reports that Serb, Kosovo Albanian and Roma civilians, as well as Serbian police officers, had been abducted since early April by armed Kosovo Albanians, believed to be KLA members. FRY authorities indicated that, as of 7 December, the number of persons abducted by Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units had risen to 282,136 of whom had not been accounted for.

The Secretary-General expressed outrage at reports of mass killings of civilians in Kosovo. Following reports concerning the killing of 20 Kosovo Albanian internally displaced persons on 28 September, a Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission team saw at least 14 bodies, some severely mutilated, mostly children and women. The Serb authorities denied any involvement of the police force in those atrocities. However, further killings of Kosovo civilians were reported, including the alleged summary execution of some 12 to 23 males (accounts varied) in the Golubovac area on 27 September, which was investigated by the Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission. While the victims of the conflict were overwhelmingly ethnic Albanians, Kosovo Serbs suffered as well. The village of Zocite, which was once half-Serb and half-Kosovo Albanian, had only 30 Serbs in October, and 80 per cent of the houses were burned and destroyed when the village was under the control of Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units. Mass graves of Serbs were discovered in Klecka, Glodjane and Ratis. The Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission also investigated mass graves in Glodjane. The ambushing of members of the security forces by Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units led to reprisals, not only by the Serbian authorities, but also by armed Serb civilians, against the innocent population.

In November, the Secretary-General reported that the human rights situation appeared not to have changed significantly since the signing of the 16 October agreement. Violations were attributed to Serbian security forces, Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units and village defence groups. Retaliatory and armed action, torture and ill-treatment, arbitrary detention, forced disappearances, harassment and discriminatory treatment were widely reported. Religious and cultural monuments were damaged and vandalized, both in conflict-affected areas and in urban areas where no fighting had taken place. Returning internally displaced persons and government officials confirmed the practice of the "screening" of internally displaced persons, in which men were separated from women and children and then held for questioning for periods ranging from hours to several days; many were reported to have been beaten and ill-treated during interrogation.

Following the October accord, information on the activity of Kosovo Albanian paramilitary "tribunals" became public, suggesting a pattern of arbitrary arrests and execution. The need for independent investigations into alleged arbitrary executions gained renewed urgency with the discovery of additional concentrations of corpses in several locations in Kosovo. Reports were also received of alleged extrajudicial killings and massacres at Cornje Obrinje, Klecka, Golubovac, Volujak, Malisevo, Rausic, Glogovac and Gremnik. A group of Finnish forensic experts arrived in FRY to assist the authorities in investigating alleged arbitrary killings and mass graves. However, the FRY Government failed to cooperate fully with ICTY (see PART FOUR, Chapter II).

The Secretary-General observed that abductions and arbitrary arrests, coupled with the fear of such actions, posed the most dangerous potential threat to the security and human rights of all persons in Kosovo. He urged the Serbian authorities to stop the practice of arbitrary arrests and to cooperate fully with the international community in human rights. He urged the Kosovo Albanian paramilitary units to immediately release all abductees without preconditions.

The General Assembly, in resolutions 53/163 and 53/164 of 9 December, addressed the human rights situation in Kosovo (see PART THREE, Chapter III).

Georgia

The United Nations, through the efforts of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and in cooperation with OSCE, the Russian Federation as facilitator, and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (France, Germany, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States), intensified efforts to reinvigorate the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process. Those efforts continued to be supported by the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG).

During the early part of the year, the security situation in the zone of conflict, especially in the Gali district, deteriorated and, although a protocol on a ceasefire was signed on 25 May, the situation on the ground remained tense and the risk of new confrontations high. At the same time, efforts continued to move the political process forward through meetings of the Coordinating Council of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides. The Secretary-General's Special Representative convened a high-level meeting between the two sides in July and a special meeting in October in Athens, Greece, where agreement was reached on measures in support of lasting non-resumption of hostilities, improving security and facilitating direct economic and commercial activity between them. Bilateral contacts also increased markedly during the year but the parties failed to finalize arrangements for the long-anticipated meeting between President Eduard Shevardnadze of Georgia and the Abkhaz leader, Vladislav Ardzinba.

Of major concern to the United Nations during the year was the security environment in which UNOMIG operated, following numerous attacks on its personnel and facilities. In November, the Security Council condemned the deliberate attacks against those personnel and approved the Secretary-General's proposal to increase the number of international and local lightly armed security personnel to provide internal security to the Mission's installations. The Council extended UNOMIG's mandate twice during the year. The second six-month extension was to terminate on 31 January 1999.

UN Observer Mission in Georgia

The United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, established by Security Council resolution 858(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 509], continued to monitor and verify compliance with the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces [YUN 1994, p. 583] and to fulfil other tasks as mandated by Council resolution 937(1994) [ibid., p. 584]. The Mission operated in close collaboration with the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) (CIS peacekeeping force) that had been in the zone of conflict, at the request of the parties, since 1994 [ibid., p. 583]. The Council extended the Mission's mandate twice during the year, the first time until 31 July 1998 and the second until 31 January 1999.

UNOMIG's main headquarters was located in Sukhumi (Abkhazia, Georgia), with administrative headquarters in Pitsunda, a liaison office in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi and team bases and a sector headquarters in each of the Gali and Zugdidi sectors. A team base in the Kodori Valley was manned by observers operating from Sukhumi. UNOMIG, as of November 1998, maintained a strength of 100 military officers, compared to its authorized strength of 136.

The Mission continued to be headed by Liviu Bota (Romania), who was also the Secretary-General's Special Representative. Heidi Tagliavini (Switzerland) was appointed Deputy Head of Mission, stationed in Sukhumi.

On 10 November [S/1998/1053], the Security Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention [S/1998/1052] to appoint Major-General Tariq Waseem Ghazi (Pakistan) to succeed

Major-General Harun Ar-Rashid (Bangladesh) as Chief Military Observer of UNOMIG.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In response to Security Council resolution 1124(1997) [YUN 1997, p. 361], the Secretary-General on 19 January [S/1998/51] reported on developments in Abkhazia, Georgia, since his October 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 363], including the operation of UNOMIG. He said that efforts to move the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process forward continued. The political machinery to address the military, political and economic ramifications of the peace process was in place and further meetings of the Coordinating Council and its three working groups, established to implement the provisions of the 1997 concluding statement [ibid., p. 365], were scheduled to take place in 1998. Progress therefore depended more than ever on the determination of the two sides to negotiate in earnest and work constructively with the Special Representative to achieve substantive results. The Secretary-General appealed to them to continue to expand their bilateral contacts.

The Secretary-General also reported that UNHCR had increased its presence in Abkhazia. It continued to provide shelter materials for rebuilding homes and, in collaboration with Acción contra el Hambre, repaired 31 schools throughout the region and began rehabilitation of the hospital in Tqvarcheli; it also began capacity-building work with Peace and Accord, a local humanitarian NGO. ICRC had expanded its home-care programme for extremely vulnerable people and, with Counterpart International, was addressing needs, particularly in health and education, in the Kodori Valley. The level of security in the region continued to threaten aid workers and their property. A recent mine incident involving a humanitarian agency, violent attacks against aid workers and looting of agencies' property suggested that the security situation was deteriorating. In the area of human rights, particular attention was paid to the Gali region to investigate the issue of the language of instruction in view of Abkhaz efforts to replace Georgian with Russian in the first three years of schooling. Special attention was given to improving conditions for the return of refugees and internally displaced persons to Gali and follow-up to alleged human rights violations.

The situation in the security and restricted weapons zones of the Gali sector deteriorated due to a number of significant incidents, including one on 7 January when Abkhaz militia stopped and detained a bus carrying 30 passengers for what it considered the illegal crossing of the Inguri River. Several attacks on selected targets using direct fire weapons and command-detonated mines were reported. The situation in the Zugdidi region also remained unstable.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend UNOMIG's mandate for an additional period of six months, ending on 31 July.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 30 January [meeting 3851], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1150(1998). The draft [S/1998/79] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, reaffirming in particular resolution 1124(1997) of 31 July 1997, and recalling the statement of its President of 6 November 1997,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 19 January 1998,

Supporting the vigorous efforts to move the peace process forward made by the Secretary-General and his Special Representative aimed at achieving a comprehensive political settlement of the conflict, including on the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, respecting fully the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Georgia, with the assistance of the Russian Federation as facilitator, as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe,

Stressing in this context the importance of the concluding statement adopted in Geneva on 19 November 1997 in which both sides welcomed, inter alia, the proposals of the Secretary-General to strengthen the involvement of the United Nations in the peace process, approved a programme of action and set up a mechanism for its implementation,

Reaffirming the necessity for the parties strictly to respect human rights, expressing its support for the efforts of the Secretary-General to find ways to improve their observance as an integral part of the work towards a comprehensive political settlement, and noting developments in the work of the United Nations Human Rights Office in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Deeply concerned at the continuing unsettled and tense security situation in the Gali region, characterized by the laying of mines, by a rising number of criminal activities, including kidnapping and murder, and, most seriously, by significantly increased subversive activities by armed groups which disrupt the peace process and impede a settlement of the conflict and the return of refugees, and at the resulting lack of safety and security for the local population, for the refugees and displaced persons returning to the region, for aid workers and for the personnel of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and of the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States,

Welcoming in this context the contribution that the collective peacekeeping force and the Mission have made to stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, noting that the cooperation between the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force is good and has continued to develop, and stressing the importance of continued close cooperation and coordination between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 19 January 1998;

2. Notes with satisfaction that much groundwork has now been laid towards achieving substantive progress in the peace process, but reiterates its deep concern that, as yet, no significant progress has been made on the key issues in the settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia;

3. Commends the parties for the constructive approach shown at the meeting held in Geneva from 17 to 19 November 1997, welcomes in this context the establishment and the first meetings of the Coordinating Council and, within its framework, of working groups, under the chairmanship of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and stresses the importance of the effective working of these bodies in order to help progress towards a settlement;

4. Emphasizes the fact that the primary responsibility for reinvigorating the peace process rests upon the parties themselves, and reminds them that the ability of the international community to assist them depends on their political will to resolve the conflict through dialogue and mutual accommodation and on their taking real steps towards bringing about a comprehensive political settlement of the conflict through the speediest possible agreement on and signature of the relevant documents;

5. Reaffirms the particular importance it attaches to the more active role for the United Nations in the peace process, encourages the Secretary-General and his Special Representative to continue their efforts, with the assistance of the Russian Federation as facilitator, and with the support of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and calls upon the parties to work constructively with them to achieve a comprehensive settlement;

6. Encourages the continuation of direct dialogue between the parties, calls upon them to intensify the search for a peaceful solution by further expanding their contacts, and requests the Secretary-General to make available all appropriate support if so requested by the parties;

7. Recalls the conclusions of the Lisbon summit of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict and the right of all refugees and displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure conditions in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons, of 4 April 1994, encourages the Secretary-General to take such steps as are necessary, in cooperation with the parties, to ensure a prompt and safe return of the refugees and displaced persons to their homes, and stresses the urgent need for progress in this area, in particular from the Abkhaz side;

8. Calls upon the parties to ensure the full implementation of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

9. Condemns the intensified activities by armed groups, including the continued laying of mines, in the

Gali region, and calls upon the parties to honour fully their commitments to take all measures in their power and to coordinate their efforts to prevent such activities, and to cooperate fully with the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in order to ensure the safety and the freedom of movement of all personnel of the United Nations, the collective peacekeeping force and international humanitarian organizations;

10. Welcomes the additional steps taken in order to improve security conditions so as to minimize the danger to Mission personnel and to create conditions for the effective performance of the mandate of the Mission, and urges the Secretary-General to continue to make further arrangements in this field;

11. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 July 1998, subject to a review by the Council of the mandate of the Mission in the event of any changes that may be made in the mandate or in the presence of the collective peacekeeping force;

12. Encourages further contributions to address the urgent needs of those suffering most from the consequences of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, in particular internally displaced persons, including contributions to the voluntary fund in support of the implementation of the Moscow Agreement and/or for humanitarian aspects, including demining, as specified by donors, requests the Secretary-General to consider the means of providing technical and financial assistance aimed at the reconstruction of the economy of Abkhazia, Georgia, following the successful outcome of the political negotiations, and welcomes the planning of a needs assessment mission;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed, to report after three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, including on the operations of the Mission, and to provide recommendations in that report on the nature of the United Nations presence, and, in this context, expresses its intention to conduct a thorough review of the operation at the end of its current mandate;

14. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communications (January-April). On 12 January [S/1998/25], Georgia transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a 9 January statement by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs in which it condemned acts of continued coercion against the Georgian population in Abkhazia, in particular the taking of 40 civilians as hostages on 6 and 7 January by armed Abkhaz mercenaries in villages of the Gali region. There was an imminent threat that the peace process itself might become hostage of those reactionary forces. Georgia believed that the Security Council, the Secretary-General, his Special Representative and the Russian Federation would make every effort to prevent the escalation of tensions from creating grounds for reversing the process of the return of refugees and displaced persons and the protection of their rights. To that end, Georgia considered it necessary to reinforce the mandate of UN observers to include police functions, qualitatively enhance the activities of the Human Rights Office and seriously consider the commencement of a comprehensive international peacekeeping operation. More effective international support was needed for Georgia's efforts to defuse the crisis peacefully.

Georgia, on 14 April [S/1998/329], informed the Secretary-General of another ethnic-related massacre of Georgian civilians in the Gali region on 2 April, when an armed group of 50 to 60 Abkhazians killed three teenagers and withdrew, taking their bodies and about 20 hostages.

CIS consideration. On 5 May [S/1998/372], the Russian Federation transmitted to the Secretary-General a 28 April decision of the CIS Council of Heads of State on additional measures for the settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia. The Council extended the stay of its collective peacekeeping force (CPF) in the conflict zone to 31 July. It demanded that the organized return of refugees and displaced persons should begin and that their return to the Gali district be completed by the end of 1998 on the basis of the mechanisms worked out by representatives of the parties, the Russian Federation and UNHCR. The CIS Council recommended that the parties resolve the question of the establishment of a temporary transitional administration, which would work with the direct participation of the intermediaries, the United Nations and OSCE, and that the CPF command ensure implementation of the measures envisaged in the Council's 1997 decision [YUN 1997, p. 357]. It also decided that, within one month, on the basis of a mechanism worked out by the parties to the conflict, a plan should be drawn up to redeploy CPF, including a plan to bring its unified headquarters closer to areas where its units were deployed, and other measures associated with the organized return of refugees and displaced persons, especially to the Gali district. The CPF command should devote increased attention to ensuring the safe operation of vitally important structures in the security zone, in particular the Inguri hydroelectric power station, bridges and the water supply system.

The CIS Council also expressed concern that its 1997 decision concerning the expansion of the security zone remained unimplemented and called on the Abkhaz party to consider and resolve it.

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in an 11 May report [S/1998/375], stated that sustained efforts to move the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process forward continued, but were negatively affected by a new wave of tension in the area, marked by an assassination attempt on 9 February against President Shevardnadze [A/53/66-S/1998/115], and deteriorating security conditions in the UNOMIG area of operations.

On 22 January, the Coordinating Council held an extraordinary session in Tbilisi, convened at the request of the Abkhaz side, to address the "escalation of diversionary and terrorist activities" in the area. This was preceded by meetings of its Working Groups I (issues related to the lasting non-resumption of hostilities and to security problems) and III (economic and social problems). The Coordinating Council, among other things, adopted a mandate for the United Nations Needs Assessment Mission to Abkhazia, Georgia; instructed Working Group I to work out a mechanism for investigating and preventing violations of the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces [YUN 1994, p. 583] and subversive/terrorist acts in the zone of conflict; and requested Working Group II (refugees and internally displaced persons) to convene in order to discuss implementation of the tasks entrusted to it.

At its third session (Sukhumi, 31 March), the Coordinating Council requested Working Group I to expedite the elaboration of mechanisms for investigating and preventing violations of the 1994 Agreement, as well as subversive and terrorist acts in the zone of conflict. It decided to examine legalization of the status of spontaneous returnees in the Gali sector and additional humanitarian assistance from the Russian Federation and to convene a special meeting on measures to promote an atmosphere of mutual trust and understanding (see below). Bilateral contacts also continued between the two sides.

Georgia announced that, as agreed with the Russian authorities, Georgian border guards would take over from their Russian counterparts the responsibility for patrolling Georgia's maritime border from 1 July. The Abkhaz side stated that it would resist any attempt by Georgia to patrol the waters adjacent to the coastline or to control maritime traffic in those waters.

On 14 March, the Abkhaz authorities held "local government elections" throughout Abkhazia, with the exception of the Gali sector, despite calls by the international community not to do so as long as the political status of the region remained undecided and refugees and internally displaced persons were not given the option to participate. The legality of the elections was denounced by the Security Council, OSCE and the Russian Federation, as well as by the Government and Parliament of Georgia [S/1998/209]. The Abkhaz authorities also continued preparations to implement the "privatization law" and set up a property management committee for that purpose. In response, the Georgian Parliament issued a 1 April statement stipulating that any legislation passed by the Abkhaz authorities was null and void and any civil and legal transaction violating Georgian legislation on property was also invalid.

UNOMIG personnel and property continued to be subjected to violence by criminal groups. On 24 January, several armed men beat up a newly arrived Mission observer and burglarized his living quarters in Gali town. On 19 February [A/53/71], a group of 15 to 20 armed men forcibly entered the UNOMIG sector headquarters in Zugdidi, taking four observers hostage and fleeing in one of the Mission's vehicles. Following negotiations between the Georgian authorities and the hostage-takers, three of the captured observers were released between 22 and 25 February. The fourth escaped and was later found safe.

Steps taken by UNOMIG to deal with the threat posed by criminal and related groups in the region included revising its modus operandi; making arrangements with the CIS peacekeeping force; and concentrating the military observers' quarters in Gali and Zugdidi into clusters of designated houses, which were randomly patrolled at night by the Mission. Forces of the Georgian Ministry of the Interior guarded the Zugdidi sector headquarters on a 24-hour basis and locally contracted guards were deployed at each of the Mission's facilities in Gali, Sukhumi and Pitunda. In addition to helicopter support, arrangements were also under way to provide the Mission with ballistic-protective vehicles.

A UN security assessment team visited the Mission area on 19 February to evaluate security measures and to consider whether additional ones might be required. In view of subsequent developments and based on the team's assessment, the Secretary-General proposed providing UNOMIG with a self-protection unit to guard each of the Mission's facilities, except Tbilisi. The 294-strong unit would be deployed around the clock to protect the four team bases in the Gali and Zugdidi sectors, the two sector headquarters and the main headquarters in Sukhumi. An additional 16 officers would constitute the command structure and a further 47 would ensure logistic support. The unit would also provide protection to other UN agencies as requested. Georgia expressed its readiness to assist the Mission as necessary, but the Abkhaz authorities expressed reservations. The Special Representative continued to hold consultations to ensure that an agreement could be reached on modalities for protection, which would allow UNOMIG to resume its mandated activities.

The Secretary-General said that, should the Security Council agree with the concept of a self-protection unit, his Special Representative would consult on it with the Abkhaz authorities, in close consultation with the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, bearing in mind that the agreement of both parties would be a condition sine qua non for its deployment. If the Council preferred a different approach, three options remained: reduce UNOMIG to the minimal possible presence, pending a significant improvement in the security situation; redeploy UNOMIG at its authorized strength and resume previous operations, using mine- and ballistic-protected vehicles; and strengthen security arrangements with the CIS peacekeeping force. However, each option had its drawbacks.

In a later addendum [S/1998/375/Add.1], the Secretary-General reported that the estimated cost of deploying the UNOMIG self-protection unit for 12 months would be approximately $21.7 million.

Communications (May). On 22 May [S/1998/423], Georgia expressed concern at the development of events in Abkhazia. Tension reached a climax on 19 and 20 May when the villages of Sida, Repo-Etseri, Khumushkhuri and Zemo Bargebi were subjected to a full-scale punitive operation by a unit of some 300 heavily armed Abkhaz militia. Civilians were taken hostage and houses were ransacked, plundered and set on fire. The local population responded with armed resistance. Georgia said that, although the clashes had subsided, the situation remained precarious and tense.

In the face of those developments, Georgia, on 26 May [S/1998/432], reported that, at a meeting of the Coordinating Council (Tbilisi, 22 May), the Georgian and Abkhaz sides arrived at an agreement on a ceasefire. The Protocol on the Cessation of Military Operations was signed on 25 May and took effect at 6 a.m. the following day. Despite the signing of the Protocol, Abkhaz separatists carried out a large-scale military operation in the security zone. Hundreds of civilians were reported dead and villages in the Gali region were levelled to the ground. The renewed ethnic cleansing prompted the exodus of thousands of people.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May)

On 28 May [meeting 3887], the Security Council, having considered the Secretary-General's report, authorized its President to make the following statement [S/PRST/1998/16] on its behalf:

The Security Council has considered the report of the Secretary-General of 11 May 1998 concerning the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia.

The Council is gravely concerned by the recent outbreak of violence in the zone of conflict, which has resulted in the loss of human life and a significant outflow of refugees, and calls upon the parties to observe strictly the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994 and also the ceasefire protocol signed on 25 May 1998, as well as all their obligations to refrain from the use of force and to resolve disputed issues by peaceful means only.

The Council is deeply concerned by the recent slowing of the peace process. The Council calls upon the parties to display the necessary political will to achieve substantial results on the key issues of the negotiations within the framework of the United Nations-led peace process and through direct dialogue, with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Georgia.

The Council reaffirms the right of all refugees and displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure conditions, calls upon both sides to fulfil their obligations in this regard, and welcomes in this context the efforts undertaken by the members of the Commonwealth of Independent States, as set out in their decision of 28 April 1998, in support of the return of refugees and of a comprehensive political settlement.

The Council is deeply concerned that the deteriorating security situation in the Gali region gravely impedes the work of aid workers, personnel of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and of the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States. The Council calls upon the parties to honour fully their commitments to take all measures in their power to improve the security situation, including the creation of a joint mechanism for investigation and prevention of acts that represent violations of the Moscow Agreement and terrorist acts in the zone of conflict.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to consult both sides on the basis of paragraphs 26, 48 and 49 of his report, in particular on the concept of the self-protection unit outlined therein, and on other options as appropriate, in close cooperation with the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, bearing in mind the need to secure the consent of both parties to his proposal. The Council also requests the Secretary-General to report to it on the outcome of those consultations as soon as possible and no later than 12 June 1998.

Report of Secretary-General (June). The Secretary-General, on 10 June [S/1998/497], reported that the situation in the Gali sector was deteriorating sharply and there was general apprehension in the population that a resumption of hostilities was imminent. The tension level rose considerably when representatives of the Abkhaz Government-in-exile raised the Georgian flag in the Gali district, and shortly thereafter relocated its headquarters from Tbilisi to Zugdidi and announced its intention to create a "liberated zone" in the Gali district. Subsequently, hostilities broke out on 19-20 May in the security zone of the Gali sector between Abkhaz militia and Georgian armed groups. The situation calmed down following the Special Representative's announcement that the Coordinating Council would meet in extraordinary session on 22 May. Although it was agreed at that meeting to take steps to stop the confrontation, hostilities erupted again on 23 May and continued the following day when the Abkhaz militia reportedly launched a large-scale operation. As hostilities escalated, thousands of inhabitants fled the Gali district southwards across the Inguri River.

In the light of those developments, UNOMIG offered to provide logistic support to facilitate an immediate face-to-face meeting between representatives of the Government of Georgia and the Abkhaz authorities. The resulting signing on 25 May at Gagra of the Protocol on a Ceasefire and Withdrawal of Armed Formations by the Government of Georgia and the Abkhaz authorities allowed for the establishment of special groups composed of representatives of the parties, UNOMIG and the CIS peacekeeping force to monitor the ceasefire. The Special Representative partially lifted the freeze on UNOMIG's patrolling to enable it to take part in the Protocol's implementation.

However, on 27 May, the Abkhaz leader, Mr. Ardzinba, decreed a state of emergency in the Gali sector, which, among other things, provided for reinforcing to full strength the Abkhaz militia of the Gali sector and supplementing it with arms and logistics resources; the introduction of a curfew; the creation of a military commandant structure; and the strict control of persons and traffic moving in and out of the sector. On 29 May, it appeared that the parties had begun to disengage and that the situation was calming down but, by 31 May, the situation again became critical and preparations by both sides for renewed conflict were apparently under way.

Meanwhile, consultations took place in Moscow between the personal representatives of the President of Georgia and the Abkhaz leader concerning a possible meeting between the two leaders to address the current crisis and to attempt to put the peace process back on track. However, the apparent lack of progress in those consultations was cause for serious concern and underlined the need for intensified efforts by all concerned.

It was widely reported during the renewed hostilities that Abkhaz armed groups had looted and burned houses, resulting in the destruction of up to 90 per cent of the houses in some villages of the Gali district. About 30,000 inhabitants of the sector were displaced as a result.

Concerning UNOMIG security arrangements, the Special Representative consulted with the parties on the concept of the self-protection unit and the other options proposed by the Secretary-General (see above). Georgia reiterated its support for the deployment of such a unit but the Abkhaz leader continued to object. Neither party supported the option that UNOMIG be reduced to the minimal possible presence; both reaffirmed their support for the continuation of its presence and activities. The Secretary-General therefore recommended that the Council approve a modified version of his second option, which proposed redeploying UNOMIG and resuming operations using mine- and ballistic-protected vehicles. Such a redeployment would take place only in the current limited manner. The Mission's strength would be temporarily established at 98 military observers; its protected vehicle fleet would be increased to ensure that all Mission personnel were protected when on the road; its team bases would remain closed; and the security arrangements already in place would be maintained, including protection by the parties of Mission headquarters and accommodations.

The Secretary-General hoped that the talks in Moscow would bear fruit and that the proposed meeting between the Georgian President and the Abkhaz leader would take place soon.

In a later addendum [S/1998/497/Add.1], the Secretary-General informed the Council that the estimated cost of increasing UNOMIG's vehicle fleet would be approximately $1.1 million.

Communications (June/July). In a 14 June statement [S/1998/516], Georgia said that Abkhaz militia forces had raided the village of Gagida in the Gali district on the previous day, driving the population into the street and pillaging and burning their homes. Some 1,731 houses were burned down and industrial installations destroyed.

The Council President informed the Secretary-General on 10 July [S/1998/633] that the Council members supported the measures envisaged in his 10 June report to strengthen the security of UNOMIG. They noted the measures already taken to improve security conditions to minimize the danger to Mission personnel and to create conditions for the implementation of its mandated tasks, while underlining the need to continue to make further arrangements in that regard.

On 16 July [S/1998/655], Georgia expressed deep concern at the murder of a UNOMIG staff member, Maria Magdalena Wewiorska. It said that Georgian authorities, in particular law enforcement agencies, would take all necessary measures to bring those responsible to justice and hoped that the incident would not impede the activities of the United Nations and other organizations aimed at resolving conflicts and facilitating democratic build-up.

Report of Secretary-General (July). On 14 July [S/1998/647], the Secretary-General reported that, with the joint mediation of the First Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation and the CIS Executive Secretary, the two sides continued extensive negotiation efforts on two documents—Agreement on Peace and Guarantees for the Prevention of Armed Confrontation, and Protocol on the Return of Refugees to the Gali District and Measures for Economic Rehabilitation—in preparation for a meeting between the Georgian President and the Abkhaz leader. However, the sides did not agree on key points of the Protocol: the definition of the "Gali district"; the means by which the provision and guarantee of security for those returning to the district should be accomplished; and the nature and timing of economic rehabilitation measures, including the lifting of restrictions imposed in 1994 by the Russian Federation and in 1996 by the CIS Council of Heads of State.

As those efforts proceeded, the Special Representative held direct consultations with President Shevardnadze, Mr. Ardzinba and other prominent political figures. Each leader continued to express willingness to meet with the other to address current problems and explore avenues for the settlement of the conflict. In addition, on 16 June, the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General met with President Shevardnadze in Tbilisi and, on 17 June, with Mr. Ardzinba in Sukhumi, at his invitation. On 15 June, President Shevardnadze requested Russian President Boris Yeltsin, in his capacity as Chairman of the CIS Council of Heads of State, to convene an extraordinary session of the Council to address the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia.

Humanitarian assistance to the most vulnerable civilians in Abkhazia, including the internally displaced, was severely disrupted by the blockage of the main bridge over the Inguri River and by the resumption of armed hostilities in the Gali district in May. The blockade of the bridge also delayed the distribution by UNHCR of roof kits and fertilizer to returnees; hampered UNICEF plans to strengthen its immunization programme; and caused Acción contra el Hambre to reduce the number of recipients of daily food rations to 3,000. During and immediately after the May hostilities, some 40,000 persons, mostly spontaneous returnees permanently residing in the Gali district, fled across the Inguri River towards Zugdidi. Although hostilities subsided following the 25 May signing of the Protocol on a Ceasefire and Withdrawal of Armed Formations, widespread looting and burning of houses by Abkhaz militia and armed groups continued. UNHCR estimated that some 1,400 private homes were destroyed, including houses recently rebuilt with international assistance. Given that the majority of spontaneous returnees to the Gali district again had to flee their homes, UNHCR's focus of operations shifted to the Zugdidi side, and all its international staff members temporarily vacated the Sukhumi office. Nonetheless, that office, operated by local staff, was maintaining a liaison function. Similarly, the UN Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) temporarily relocated its base for coordination activities in western Georgia from Sukhumi to Zugdidi.

The Secretary-General observed that, as the situation on the ground was tense and the risk of new confrontations high, he had asked his Special Representative to make demarches to both sides to prevent the resumption of hostilities. He was also maintaining liaison with the parties with a view to organizing another high-level meeting in Geneva to bring the Geneva process back on track (see below).

The Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend UNOMIG's mandate for a further period of six months, terminating on 31 January 1999, subject to a review by the Council in the event of any changes in the mandate or in the presence of the CIS peacekeeping force.

Communications (July). On 15 July [S/1998/650], Georgia transmitted to the Security Council a 13 July letter from its President, stating that the situation in Abkhazia, particularly the Gali district, posed a threat, not only to Georgia but to the entire international community, and necessitated augmentation of the UN role in the peace process and a determination of effective methods of conflict resolution. To expedite the peace process, Georgia considered as pressing: increasing humanitarian aid to displaced persons; development and implementation of an effective mechanism for their unconditional and safe return and assistance for rehabilitation of their property; expansion of UNOMIG activities and action to ensure the safety of its personnel; and drawing up an agreement on the shared responsibility for the security of the Abkhaz population, returnees and international personnel, as well as for the prevention of armed confrontation and for determining the regime and conditions of the activities of the coordinating bodies. The United Nations should elaborate a draft political accord and ensure observance of its provisions.

Georgia hoped that the UN Secretariat, the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, the Secretary-General himself and members of the Security Council would spare no effort to lead the peace process out of deadlock.

On 15 July [S/1998/649], Georgia issued a statement on a 12 July incident in which an armoured patrol car of the Russian peacekeeping forces was blown up, killing five military servicemen and wounding three.

On 14 July [S/1998/645], the Russian Federation said that terrorist activities of extremist forces in the Gali district, of which Russian peacekeepers were the targets, were increasing. To ensure the safety of its personnel, the command of the peacekeepers was instructed to neutralize terrorist groups in both sectors of the security zone. Russia warned that, if terrorist acts against Russian peacekeepers persisted, it would consider the advisability of their continued presence in the conflict zone.

Georgia, on 16 July [S/1998/660], described a 15 July incident in which eight persons were killed and three seriously wounded as a result of the explosion of a cart travelling from Sida to Zugdidi. Georgia said that the Abkhaz separatists, backed by a number of leaders of the collective peacekeeping force, were carrying out an anti-Georgian campaign to convince the public that that and earlier incidents were carried out by the Georgian side. Full responsibility for the incident lay with the Abkhaz separatist regime.

High-level meeting (Geneva). The Secretary-General reported that the second high-level meeting of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides took place in Geneva from 23 to 25 July [S/1998/647/Add.1] under the chairmanship of his Special Representative. Also participating were representatives of the Russian Federation (as facilitator), OSCE, the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, UNDP, UNHCR and OCHA.

The participants exchanged views on the state of negotiations on the main aspects of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict and identification of areas where concrete political progress could be made; elaboration of effective mechanisms for preserving the ceasefire and concrete guarantees of the non-resumption of hostilities; the return of refugees and displaced persons; and economic, humanitarian and social efforts.

Participants renewed their support for the Secretary-General's proposals to strengthen UN involvement in the peacekeeping process and recognized that the process was continuing and should be stepped up.

The parties welcomed the implementation of the programme of action and the work of the machinery agreed upon at the previous meeting in Geneva [YUN 1997, p. 365], including establishment of the Coordinating Council and its three working groups. At the same time, it was noted that the machinery had not been fully activated, as several key provisions of the concluding statement and of decisions of the Coordinating Council had not been implemented. The parties indicated the need for the full implementation of prior decisions.

The Special Representative, the Russian Federation, OSCE and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General expressed concern that the parties were still far from agreement on key aspects of a settlement. They stressed that the major responsibility for resolution of the problems lay with the parties themselves and called on them to refrain from any action that might undermine efforts to support the peace process and to demonstrate the necessary political will so that concrete results could be achieved on fundamental issues.

The participants stressed the importance of bilateral contacts and direct dialogue at various levels and in various spheres, including the work of the Bilateral Joint Coordination Commission on Practical Issues.

The parties reaffirmed their adherence to the 1997 Tbilisi Declaration [ibid., p. 363] and stressed the need for the immediate implementation of the Coordinating Council's decision to elaborate a mechanism for the investigation and prevention of violations of the 1994 Moscow Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces [YUN 1994, p. 583] and of subversive terrorist acts. They reaffirmed their agreement to refrain from hostile propaganda towards each other and to promote mutual trust and understanding. The participants acknowledged Greece's invitation (see below) to hold a special meeting of the parties in Athens to elaborate measures to strengthen mutual trust and understanding.

The parties reaffirmed their commitments regarding the right of refugees and displaced persons to voluntary return to the places of their former permanent residence, and ensuring the freedom of movement and security of humanitarian aid workers.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 30 July [meeting 3912], the Security Council adopted unanimously resolution 1187(1998). The draft [S/1998/699] was sponsored by France, Germany, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States.

16. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communications (August/September). Georgia, on 26 August [S/1998/815], informed the Security Council President that an explosion on 24 August in the city of Zugdidi, located in the security zone, killed two persons and injured 55. Georgia was deeply concerned by that act and deemed it necessary to focus the Council's attention on the situation, which remained tense.

Georgia stated that, following adoption of Council resolution 1187(1998), with the assistance of the Special Representative and countries and organizations involved in the process of the conflict settlement, Georgian/Abkhaz bilateral contacts had intensified and some of the displaced persons from the Gali region were repatriated. Georgia was taking measures to prevent the activities of uncontrolled armed groups, and new ways and channels were being sought to reconcile the Georgians and Abkhazians. Georgia remained committed to its proposal to create joint groups to investigate crimes and to elaborate measures for their prevention. It expressed strong resentment at the ongoing coercive actions against returnees from the Gali region and the increasingly subversive actions from the right bank of the Inguri River, territory under the control of the Abkhaz side. The firing of automatic weapons in the direction of Zugdidi and Georgian villages in other regions of the security zone had a systematic character. Corroborating evidence proved that mines had been laid in the Gali region and facts had been uncovered regarding the smuggling of weapons and military equipment in Abkhazia and the introduction of armed groups into the region from outside Georgia.

Georgia hoped that the United Nations would not delay taking measures to promote the peace process, support existing positive initiatives and take measures to prevent exacerbation of the dispute.

On 22 September [S/1998/892], Georgia expressed deep concern at a terrorist act in Sukhumi the day before, in which a UNOMIG vehicle was ambushed and subjected to gunfire, including a number of UN military observers. Georgia regretted that it had been impossible to achieve agreement on the creation of a mechanism to ensure the safety and normal functioning of UNOMIG and its personnel. The incident again demonstrated the need to adopt a decision on the Secretary-General's proposal and the unacceptability of further procrastination.

Georgian President Shevardnadze, in a 28 September statement [S/1998/898] on the fifth anniversary of the fall of Sukhumi (September 1993), proposed a meeting with Mr. Ardzinba and other leaders to remove the deadlock in the negotiations in the cause of a final reconciliation between the two peoples.

Report of Secretary-General (October). On 29 October [S/1998/1012], the Secretary-General reported that bilateral contacts between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, facilitated by the United Nations, had increased markedly and were aimed at achieving specific agreements on security issues, the return of refugees and economic projects. On 9 October, he met in New York with the new Georgian State Minister, Vazha Lordkipanidze, to discuss important aspects of the peace process, including the political and peacekeeping roles of the United Nations and the larger geopolitical context of the conflict. The Secretary-General stressed the need for the parties to maintain a security environment within which UNOMIG could operate safely and effectively.

The fifth session of the Coordinating Council (Sukhumi, 2 September) decided that both sides had to put an end to the firing incidents across the line of separation of forces and prevent terrorist and subversive groups, as well as armed formations and individuals, from crossing it; the Abkhaz side would protect civilians living in the Gali district from unlawful acts involving the use of force; and a joint group, composed of representatives of the two sides, UNOMIG and the GIS peacekeeping force, should be established to investigate and prevent terrorist acts and other violations of the law. Although the parties signed a 24 September protocol agreeing to cease construction of military fortifications and to dismantle existing ones, the defensive positions remained and the number of armed personnel on both sides was unchanged.

Within the framework of the Bilateral Joint Coordination Commission on Practical Questions, the de facto Abkhaz Prime Minister, Sergei Bagapsh, accompanied by the personal representative of Mr. Ardzinba to the peace process, Anri Jergenja, and a group of experts on communications, energy, transport and construction, met with President Shevardnadze and Mr. Lordkipanidze in Tbilisi on 22 September. At that time, both parties reported having received information that a renewed outbreak of hostilities was imminent. As a result of those direct contacts between the two sides, the situation on the ground was clarified and the immediate tension defused. The parties, the Special Representative and the Commander of the CIS peacekeeping force signed a "Protocol on the meeting of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides concerning stabilization of the situation along the line of separation", in which they agreed to bring the number of armed personnel and weapons in the security and restricted weapons zones into conformity with the 1994 Moscow Agreement and to clarify the demarcation of the line of separation in the two Georgian-controlled pockets on the northern bank of the Inguri River. Direct contact would be established between the heads of administration of the Gali and Zugdidi sectors and between the leaders of armed formations of the two sides; the respective law enforcement bodies would cooperate to stop terrorist and subversive activities; and the respective Offices of the Prosecutors would establish working groups to develop rules for joint investigation. Mr. Lordkipanidze also met with Mr. Ardzinba on 22 September.

As part of the Geneva process, the Secretary-General's Special Representative convened near Athens, from 16 to 18 October, a meeting of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides on confidence-building measures. In a concluding statement, both sides agreed on measures in support of the lasting non-resumption of hostilities, improving security and facilitating direct economic and commercial activity between them. Both sides made use of the meeting, which was the largest and most representative gathering of the Georgian and Abkhaz sides since 1993, to engage in bilateral discussions on those issues, as well as on the return of refugees and measures for the economic rehabilitation of Abkhazia. During the meeting, the Special Representative, the Russian Federation and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General jointly submitted to the parties a draft text addressing the non-use of force, the return of refugees to the Gali district and measures for economic rehabilitation. It was proposed that the document be discussed at the sixth session of the Coordinating Council.

On 19 October, some 200 soldiers, led by a supporter of late former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia, mutinied in the western Georgian town of Senaki, seizing a number of tanks and armoured personnel carriers and demanding the re-establishment of "legal authority" in the country. The insurgents were stopped by Georgian government troops, the mutiny quickly collapsed and the ringleaders went into hiding.

The situation in the security and restricted weapons zones remained tense and unstable. Exchanges of fire across the ceasefire line continued, at times threatening to escalate into serious hostilities. The campaign of mine attacks and ambushes by armed groups in the lower Gali district against the CIS peacekeeping force and the Abkhaz militia continued, although it had considerably diminished. Despite the level of tension, the Gali district inhabitants who had fled to the other side of the Inguri River in May continued to trickle back home.

In the Gali sector, the Abkhaz militia consolidated its control over the whole of the district and established posts in all the principal villages, primarily along the ceasefire line. The discipline of the militia appeared to have greatly improved, and reports of looting or poor behaviour decreased markedly. The new head of administration in Gali was making considerable efforts to encourage the population to return from the Zugdidi side of the ceasefire line and took positive steps to control the militia and deter armed robberies.

In the Zugdidi sector, the deployment of Georgian Interior Ministry troops along the ceasefire line continued, and substantial defensive positions and trenches were constructed against a possible Abkhaz attack. In the Kodori Valley, UNOMIG resumed limited patrolling on 30 August. The situation in the valley was quiet and contacts by the Kodori administration with the Abkhaz side, though infrequent, were cordial.

In terms of a possible solution to the security problems faced by UNOMIG, the Secretary-General further proposed a significant increase in the number of internationally recruited security personnel to provide internal security to the Mission's installations, while the local authorities would remain responsible for perimeter security. The Mission currently had eight internationally recruited security officers and the security of its mobile patrols would be enhanced by the expected arrival of an additional 25 ballistic-protected vehicles. UNOMIG could take further measures to improve the security of its personnel, but only at the cost of further limiting its capacity to implement its mandate. However, unless the parties took urgent measures to improve the security environment for the United Nations, the Secretary-General would be obliged to draw down UNOMIG's strength and relocate UN personnel and facilities to more secure locations. He urged Member States, and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in particular, to use their influence with the parties to ensure that the security environment improved significantly.

The Secretary-General also appealed to both sides to implement in good faith the measures agreed upon at their meeting in Athens (see above) and encouraged them to expand further their relations at all levels, in order to create a network of contacts that could help to unblock the political stalemate regarding the two core problems—the political status of Abkhazia and the return of refugees and displaced persons.

In a later addendum [S/1998/1012/Add.1], the Secretary-General reported that the cost associated with the increase of 17 international and 37 locally recruited security personnel and related logistic requirements would be approximately $1.5 million for six months.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (November)

On 25 November [meeting 3948], the Security Council authorized its President to make the following statement on its behalf [S/PRST/1998/34]:

The Security Council has considered the report of the Secretary-General of 29 October 1998 concerning the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia.

The Council remains deeply concerned at the continuing tense and unstable situation in the Gali and Zugdidi regions and at the threat of resumption of serious hostilities. The Council demands that both sides observe strictly all their obligations to refrain from the use of force and to resolve disputed issues by peaceful means only.

The Council welcomes the reinvigoration of the negotiations within the United Nations-led peace process. It particularly welcomes the meeting of the two sides on confidence-building measures held in Athens from 16 to 18 October 1998, the largest and most representative meeting of the parties since the military confrontation of 1993, and the increased bilateral contacts between the two sides. The Council strongly urges the two sides to build on this momentum to widen their commitment to the United Nations-led peace process, to continue to intensify their discussion, in particular within the Coordinating Council, and to expand their relations at all levels. The Council also strongly encourages the parties to work together in order to convene a meeting between the President of Georgia and Mr. Vladislav Ardzinba and to reach agreements, in particular on the return of refugees and measures for the economic rehabilitation of Abkhazia, Georgia, as a concrete step towards easing tensions and leading to improvement in the security environment. The Council reiterates its call to both sides to display without delay the necessary will to achieve substantial results on the key issues of the negotiations, and calls upon them to implement promptly and in good faith their undertakings, so that living conditions for the population on both sides can be improved by practical confidence-building measures.

The Council strongly condemns the deliberate acts of violence against the personnel of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and of the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States, including the continued laying of mines, which also endangers the civilian population and impedes the work of the humanitarian organizations. The Council demands that both sides take determined and prompt measures to put a stop to such acts, which subvert the peace process, and to ensure that the security environment of all international personnel improves significantly.

The Council welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General aimed at improving the security of the Mission, approves his proposal to increase the number of internationally recruited lightly-armed security personnel and additional local security personnel to provide internal security to the installations of the Mission, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the security of the Mission under constant review, taking into account the observations contained in his report.

The Council reminds both sides that the continued commitment of the international community to assist them depends on their progress in achieving peacefully a comprehensive political settlement.

Further report of Secretary-General. In a later report [S/1999/60], the Secretary-General said that contacts between the two sides included visits to Tbilisi on 29 October and 22 November by the personal representative of Mr. Ardzinba, Anri Jergenja, accompanied by the Abkhaz de facto Deputy Defence Minister, Major-General Givi Agrba, for talks with Georgian State Minister Lordkipanidze. The Executive Secretary of the Bilateral Joint Coordination Commission, Zurab Lakerbaia, also facilitated communication between the sides. The Group of Friends of the Secretary-General actively supported the peace process. The heads of their diplomatic missions in Tbilisi carried out a number of consultations, including meetings with Mr. Ardzinba on 2 December and President Shevardnadze on 10 December. In addition, the United States announced its readiness to allocate up to $15 million for the rehabilitation of the infrastructure of Abkhazia, primarily in the Gali district, if substantial progress in the peace process was achieved.

By early November, it appeared that the parties were very close to reaching agreement on the two draft documents on the non-use of force, the return of refugees, and measures for the economic rehabilitation of Abkhazia, and it was anticipated that they would be signed at a meeting between President Shevardnadze and Mr. Ardzinba. Although tentative dates and possible venues for that meeting were discussed, the talks broke down and the Abkhaz side stated that it would no longer engage in direct contacts with the Georgian side. The stalemate in the peace talks was accompanied by a sudden and rapid deterioration of the security situation in the zone of conflict. Together, those developments led to the real danger of another outbreak of hostilities. To prevent such an occurrence and to resume the peace talks, the Secretary-General's Special Representative decided urgently to convene the sixth session of the Coordinating Council (Geneva, 17-18 December).

During the meeting, the Abkhaz delegation stated that it had decided to start unilaterally the process of the return of refugees to the Gali district, and appealed to the United Nations, the Russian Federation, OSCE, the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and the Georgian side to support that decision. The Georgian delegation characterized the Abkhaz statement as mere rhetoric, since such a process was not possible without proper mechanisms and guarantees and without the active participation of the Georgian side and the international community. The two sides decided, among other things, to convene, in the Gali district and not later than 22 December, an urgent meeting to prevent the destabilization of the situation in the zone of conflict and to agree on measures to implement the bilateral agreements contained in the protocols signed on 25 May in Gagra and on 24 September in Sukhumi (see above). On 24 and 25 November, the OSCE Chairman-in-Office and Poland's Minister for Foreign Affairs, Bronislaw Geremek, visited Georgia and discussed issues connected with the conflicts in the region with President Shevardnadze and other officials. The OSCE Ministerial Council (Oslo, Norway, 2-3 December) stressed that the Geneva process was a leading framework for the peaceful settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, underlined the primary responsibility of the United Nations for advancing that process, and declared its readiness to assist the United Nations in its efforts. The Georgian/Abkhaz peace process was also on the agenda of the CIS Executive Secretary, Boris Berezovski, during his visit to Tbilisi on 18 November.

On 3 November, the Russian Federation and Georgia concluded two agreements on cooperation on border issues, providing for a phased transfer by the Russian border guards of property and duties to their Georgian counterparts. The agreements were criticized by the Abkhaz side.

On 15 November, elections to local organs of self-governance (councils) were held in Georgia (with the exception of the territory controlled by the Abkhaz side and certain areas in the Tskhinvali region). They were the first such elections since the country regained independence in 1991.

Financing

In January [A/52/770], the Secretary-General submitted the financial performance report of UNOMIG for the period 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997, showing an unencumbered balance of $1,152,600 gross ($882,000 net), resulting from military and civilian vacancies and the provision by Switzerland of costs associated with the operation of its fixed-wing aircraft, made available as a voluntary contribution in kind. In February [A/52/787], he submitted the UNOMIG budget for 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, amounting to $20,743,400 gross ($19,756,700 net), including budgeted voluntary contributions in kind totalling $2,294,000. The increase, 4 per cent over the resources provided for the previous period, was due mainly to increased requirements for civilian personnel ($289,400), transportation ($357,800), communications ($142,600) and other equipment ($155,400).

In March [A/52/860/Add.2], ACABQ submitted its comments and recommendations on both reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 June [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/52/938], adopted resolution 52/242 without vote [agenda item 131].

Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 854(1993) of 6 August 1993, by which the Council approved the deployment of an advance team of up to ten United Nations military observers for a period of three months and the incorporation of the advance team into a United Nations observer mission if such a mission was formally established by the Council,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 858(1993) of 24 August 1993, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Observer Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1150(1998) of 30 January 1998,

Recalling further its decision 48/475 A of 23 December 1993 on the financing of the Observer Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 51/236 of 13 June 1997,

Reaffirming that the costs of the Observer Mission are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the Observer Mission, a different procedure is required from the one applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of such operations,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Observer Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Observer Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia as at 15 May 1998, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 6.4 million United States dollars, representing 10 per cent of the total assessed contributions from the inception of the Observer Mission to the period ending 30 June 1998, notes that some 22 per cent of the Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States concerned, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses concern about the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursement of troop contributors, which bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full;

4. Urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Observer Mission in full and on time;

5. Takes note of the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

6. Decides to examine the recommendation of the Advisory Committee for 5 per cent across-the-board reductions in the budget proposals of the Secretary-General in the light of the next series of relevant financial performance reports;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Observer Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to employ locally recruited staff for the Observer Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

9. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia the amount of 19,439,280 dollars gross (18,452,580 dollars net) for the maintenance of the Observer Mission for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, inclusive of the amount of 989,880 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations, to be apportioned, as an ad hoc arrangement, among Member States at a monthly rate of 1,619,940 dollars gross (1,537,715 dol-

12. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, their share of the unencumbered balance of 818,300 dollars gross (616,700 dollars net) for the period ending 30 June 1997 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations;

13. Invites voluntary contributions to the Observer Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-third session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia".

On 18 December, the Assembly, by decision 53/458, decided that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the agenda item on the financing of UNOMIG at its resumed fifty-third (1999) session.

Armenia-Azerbaijan

In 1998, the Minsk Group of OSCE continued efforts to reach a settlement of the armed conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan that had erupted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388] over the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan. During the year, Armenia and Azerbaijan addressed several letters to the Secretary-General regarding developments in the conflict between them.

Communications. On 5 February [S/1998/110], the President of Azerbaijan, Heydar Aliyev, stated that Azerbaijan had been following with concern the situation in Armenia and the recent events that had occurred there—the resignation of President Levon Ter-Petrosian. President Aliyev hoped that the internal situation in Armenia would soon stabilize and that negotiations between Armenia and Azerbaijan on a peaceful settlement of the conflict would continue. He believed that, with the participation and mediation of the Co-Chairmen of the Minsk Group—France, the Russian Federation and the United States—they would be able to continue the negotiation process and, on the basis of what had been accomplished so far, achieve complete peace.

On the same date [S/1998/106], Armenia categorically rejected statements alleging that there was a danger that military operations would resume in the Nagorny Karabakh conflict zone following recent events in Armenia. It reasserted its commitment to adhere to the 1994 ceasefire [YUN 1994, p. 577] and was firm in its determination to utilize all means to transform the ceasefire into a stable and durable peace.

Azerbaijan, on 26 February [A/53/77-S/1998/171], transmitted to the Secretary-General two texts: a 22 February appeal to the peoples and States of the world and international organizations by the inhabitants of the town of Khodjaly, and a 23 February appeal to the heads of State and peoples and religious leaders of the world by the heads of the Christian and Jewish communities of Azerbaijan, in connection with the sixth anniversary of the genocide perpetrated by Armenian forces in the town of Khodjaly on 26 February 1992. In a 26 March decree [A/53/94-S/1998/309], the President of Azerbaijan proclaimed 31 March as the Day of Genocide of the Azerbaijanis, in commemoration of all the tragic acts of genocide perpetrated against the Azerbaijani people since the nineteenth century, and recommended that the Milli Majlis (Parliament) consider holding a special session devoted to the events involving genocide of the Azerbaijanis.

On 20 April [A/53/99-S/1998/344], Armenia said that recently the leadership of Azerbaijan had launched a new campaign of lies and slander against it and its people. Its aim was to achieve a solution of the Karabakh problem in line with Azerbaijan's own scenario and erase from memory the crime of genocide planned and committed against Armenians in Nagorny Karabakh throughout the twentieth century. Such propaganda also prevented the Azerbaijani leadership from pursuing flexible approaches in the negotiating process. Armenia condemned the destructive steps being taken by the Azerbaijani authorities, which were not in line with the process of peaceful settlement of the Karabakh conflict.

Azerbaijan, in a 19 June statement [S/1998/544], said that on 17 June Armenia's Minister for Foreign Affairs, Vartan Oskanian, explaining at a press conference Armenia's approach to settling the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan, had mentioned the possibility of incorporating the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan into Armenia. Azerbaijan saw that statement as an undisguised call to the international community and an unjustified attempt to dictate conditions for the settlement of the conflict to OSCE and to its member States co-chairing the Minsk Conference. Azerbaijan believed that there was no reason why negotiations should not be resumed in the context of the OSCE Minsk Group. The question was not what kind of structure the negotiations should have, but the bases on which they should take place. Accordingly, Azerbaijan felt that the failure of the three countries co-chairing the Minsk Conference to respond to the statements made by Armenia could give a false impression as to the Co-Chairmen's firmness in upholding the mandatory rules of international law in their mediation efforts.

Azerbaijan believed that the factors that led to a review of the question of the structure of future negotiations had a very negative impact on the Co-Chairmen's efforts to move forward with the process of peacefully settling the conflict. It intended to demonstrate a constructive approach in the context of that process, and requested the Co-Chairmen to accelerate their efforts to bring about positive changes in the position of the party that was blocking progress.

On 20 July [S/1998/667], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General an 18 July statement by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding a visit to Armenia on 14 and 15 July by the Minister of Defence of the Russian Federation and a delegation of Russian military leaders, as well as high-ranking representatives of the concern Rossvoo-ruzhenie. Azerbaijan stated that the visit gave rise to serious concern, noting with particular anxiety its officially declared outcome: coordination of plans for further cooperation in the military and military-technical sphere; improvement of the functioning of the Russian military base in Armenia and its cooperation with the Armenian armed forces, including refinement of unified anti-aircraft defence systems, with plans to equip those systems with S-300 anti-aircraft missile complexes; plans to deliver "modern weapons" to Armenia, including the re-equipping of a Russian military base; joint instruction of Russian and Armenian servicemen at the military training ground in the environs of Erevan; and plans to strengthen the Russian military group in Armenia by reducing Russian forces in Georgia.

Azerbaijan expressed concern at the plans to expand the military alliance between the Russian Federation and Armenia, the implementation of which was not conducive to a settlement of the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan or to the achievement of peace and stability in Transcaucasia. It considered deliveries of arms from the Russian Federation to Armenia a gross violation of the OSCE Treaty, and called on the Russian Federation to reconsider its plans until the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan was settled.

Cyprus

Efforts by the Secretary-General to bring about a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus issue advanced in 1998 when the leaders of the Greek and Turkish communities agreed to his proposal that his Deputy Special Representative for Cyprus, Ann Hercus, begin a process of on-island talks with both parties with a view to reducing tension and promoting progress towards a just and lasting settlement. Both sides agreed that the "shuttle talks", which began on 16 October, should focus on the reduction of tension, core issues and humanitarian/goodwill issues.

The Security Council twice extended the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP), the second time until 30 June 1999.

The question of Cyprus was included in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-third session by Assembly decision 52/495 of 8 September. By decision 53/465 of 18 December, the Assembly decided that the item should remain on its agenda for consideration during the resumed fifty-third (1999) session.

Incidents

Communications. Throughout 1998, the Secretary-General received numerous letters from the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot sides, as well as from Greece and Turkey, containing charges and countercharges, protests and accusations and statements of explanation of position. The letters from the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus were transmitted by Turkey.

A number of communications between 14 January and 22 December contained protests by Cyprus against violations of Cypriot airspace and unauthorized intrusions into the flight information region of Nicosia by military aircraft of the Turkish Air Force, and letters from Turkey refuting those allegations. On 28 January [A/52/779-S/1998/81], Turkey drew the Secretary-General's attention to the military escalation in southern Cyprus, which had reached a new stage with the construction of the military airbase in Paphos, which became operational on 24 January. Turkey said that that added a highly destabilizing dimension to the military equation on the island and in the region, contravened Security Council resolutions calling on the parties to refrain from any action that could exacerbate the situation, and brought the parties to the threshold of a crisis. The Turkish Government would not remain indifferent in the face of provocative and hostile actions and would act to protect the Turkish Cypriot people and preserve the balance between Turkey and Greece.

Rauf R. Denktas, President of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, on 25 January [A/52/797-S/1998/140], argued that since the introduction of the "joint military doctrine" in 1993, the Greek Cypriot administration, together with Greece, had accelerated the build-up of arms and armed forces in southern Cyprus. The construction of air and naval bases in southern Cyprus for Greek fighter planes and warships was part of that ongoing belligerent stance. In a letter of 25 March [A/52/866-S/1998/299], Mr. Denktas reported plans by the Greek Cypriot administration to establish an air force which, if pursued, would constitute a serious destabilizing factor both on the island and the region.

On 18 June [A/52/961-S/1998/543], Turkey informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that four Greek fighter aircraft and a C-130 transport plane had landed at the military airbase in Paphos on 16 June. That was the first time Greek military aircraft were being deployed in southern Cyprus outside of a military exercise and, according to the Greek Cypriot spokesman, they were using the Paphos base within the framework of the "joint military doctrine". Turkey viewed that as an extremely serious and provocative development. Turkey asked for UN intervention in preventing attempts to undermine security and stability in Cyprus and the region and reserved the right to take measures to safeguard its own security, as well as that of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus.

In response, Greece, on 19 June [S/1998/539], said that Greek Air Force flights had repeatedly taken place at the invitation of the Government of Cyprus and it was within that framework that a short training visit of four aircraft was carried out to Paphos airbase. The visit could hardly be regarded as a threat. Greece remained committed to a solution to the Cyprus problem, based on relevant Security Council resolutions, and insisted on the implementation of provisions regarding the gradual disarmament of Cyprus, aiming at total demilitarization.

On 23 June [A/52/965-S/1998/559], Cyprus said that it was obvious that the Turkish aim was to stir up and maintain a climate of artificial tension. The enhancement of the National Guard was an exercise of the right of self-defence. The landing of Greek aircraft at Paphos, with the consent of the Government of Cyprus, was in the framework of a scheduled routine exercise.

On 19 July [A/52/989-S/1998/671], Cyprus protested the sending by Turkey of five warships, including two submarines, two frigates and a gunboat, to the port of Kyrenia, as well as the landing of seven military aircraft at the Lefkoniko airfield, to take part in ceremonies of 20 July to mark the thirty-fourth anniversary of the Turkish invasion and occupation of the northern part of Cyprus.

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, on 3 August [A/52/1001-S/1998/710], reiterated that flights of Turkish aircraft within its airspace was a matter that concerned itself and Turkey as two sovereign independent States that recognized each other. Similarly, the navigation of ships in its territorial waters and use of port facilities took place with the full knowledge and consent and at the invitation of the appropriate authorities of the State. The Greek Cypriot administration had no jurisdiction, control or authority over the national territory, airspace or flight information region of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus. It was regrettable that the Greek Cypriot side was pursuing a campaign of harmful rhetoric, coupled with an intense and dangerous militarization.

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, on 24 November [A/53/705-S/1998/1122], stated that the Greek Cypriot campaign of propaganda and defamation against the Turkish Cypriot side indicated that it was not interested in resolving the Cyprus dispute but preferred the current state of affairs under which it was treated as the "Government of Cyprus" and saw the prospect of becoming a full member of the EU in the name of "Cyprus". Those parties interested in a peaceful resolution should accord equal treatment to the two States in Cyprus, if ever the Greek Cypriot administration was to have an incentive to seek a realistic settlement.

On 15 April [E/1998/18] and 9 November [A/53/658-S/1998/1056], the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus rejected allegations of human rights violations by the Greek Cypriot representative at a meeting of the Commission on Human Rights on 31 March and in the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee of the General Assembly in October.

On 30 July [A/52/1017-S/1998/762], Mr. Denktas refuted statements on Cyprus contained in the final communiqué [A/52/922-S/1998/437] of the Ministerial Meeting of the Coordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries (Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, 18-20 May). Cyprus, on 15 September [A/53/394-S/1998/859], drew the Secretary-General's attention to the position of the heads of State or Government of the Movement contained in a similar communiqué issued at the end of their twelfth summit (Durban, South Africa, 29 August-3 September). In a letter of 2 November [A/53/640-S/1998/1037], the representative of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus responded to statements made by the Greek Cypriot representative at a meeting of the Sixth (Legal) Committee of the General Assembly on 22 October under the agenda item "Establishment of an international criminal court".

Other letters from Cyprus and Greece contained complaints about the desecration of sacred places of worship and acts of vandalism at historic monuments. The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus refuted those allegations.

Demilitarization

Communications. The Russian Federation, on 24 April [A/52/876-S/1998/346], transmitted to the Secretary-General proposals on the demilitarization of Cyprus and the maintenance of the security of its inhabitants. It stated that the demilitarization of Cyprus was a key element in a comprehensive settlement, based on 1977 and 1979 high-level agreements [YUN 1977, p. 344; YUN 1979, p. 421] between the Cypriot communities and on United Nations resolutions to create in Cyprus an equal level of security for all inhabitants of the island and an atmosphere of mutual trust and cooperation between the two communities within the framework of a Federal Cypriot State. Demilitarization would be effected by an agreed system of international guarantees under the auspices of the Security Council, the basic principles of which would be: the Federal Republic would have no federal armed forces except for a coastguard corps (service), nor any reserve forces, and there should be no military or paramilitary training of civilians; and the Federal Republic and each component of the Federation should have a police force and their security should be guaranteed.

Implementation measures would provide for agreement on the specific parameters and phases of demilitarization, including, in particular: a timetable for withdrawal, prior to the establishment of the Federal Republic, of all non-Cypriot armed forces whose presence was not provided for by existing agreements; a timetable for reducing the strength of Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot units until they were completely disbanded, with their weapons and military equipment being handed over to UN forces for safe keeping; halting of military construction programmes in both communities and handing over of existing military installations and facilities for use by the civilian authorities; and cessation of arms purchases.

Other implementation measures would include: establishment of an observation and verification committee (commission) with the participation of both Cypriot communities, the guarantor States, the United Nations and OSCE; the assumption by Turkey and Greece of a commitment to cease completely their military activity in and around Cyprus, to be monitored by the United Nations; maintenance of the 1960 Treaty of Guarantee and Treaty concerning the Establishment of the Republic of Cyprus, with possible agreed additions and amendments relating to the demilitarization of the Republic of Cyprus; and review by the Security Council of UNFICYP's mandate to reflect the new situation.

Responding on 13 May [A/52/902-S/1998/395], the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus stated that, in accordance with the Cyprus negotiating process, only the Secretary-General had the mandate to make suggestions, in consultation with both sides, on any aspect of the Cyprus question. Demilitarization of Cyprus was never on the UN agenda to be discussed and agreed to but an ultimate objective to be taken up by the parties after an overall settlement. If the Russian Federation genuinely desired to help ease the tension, it could do so by halting the sale of heavy and sophisticated armaments to the Greek Cypriot administration.

The President of Cyprus, Glafcos Clerides, on 18 June [A/52/960-S/1998/542], requested the Secretary-General to undertake a personal initiative along the lines of paragraphs 6 and 7 of resolution 1146(1997) [YUN 1997, p. 374], which encouraged him to continue to promote efforts to achieve progress in reducing military tensions. He believed that paragraph 7 offered a sufficient framework for a comprehensive discussion aimed at a package agreement on all fundamental aspects of the security situation in Cyprus, both short-term and long-term. In addition, the reciprocal measures for reducing tension along the ceasefire line proposed by UNFICYP, as well as Canada's idea for an initiative on demining of the buffer zone, would constitute a component of those discussions with immediate application. President Clerides repeated his commitment to reconsider the issue of non-importation of new weapon systems to Cyprus provided that progress was made on a schedule that included measures leading towards the eventual goal of demilitarization.

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, on 10 July [A/52/982-S/1998/636], said that if Mr. Clerides was genuinely interested in demilitarization, he should first accept implementation of UNFICYP's package of military measures for reducing border tension. On 28 October [A/53/558-S/1998/1013], referring to statements made by the Greek Cypriot representative in the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee on 21 October, it contended that the Greek Cypriot demilitarization proposal constituted a blatant contradiction in terms for that administration to pursue an intensive campaign of militarization while paying lip-service to demilitarization.

On 30 July [A/52/1017-S/1998/762], Mr. Denktas said that demilitarization was a long-term objective that could be taken up only in the context of a political settlement. In any event, an administration that continued a massive militarization campaign in collaboration with Greece could not possibly be serious about demilitarization. The Greek Cypriot administration was even refusing the more realistic and practical proposals contained in the UN package of "deconfrontation" measures, which would help to reduce tension along the borders.

Settlement proposal

On 18 March [A/52/834-S/1998/255], Turkey informed the Secretary-General that Rauf R. Denktas, President of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, had written to Glafcos Clerides, leader of the Greek Cypriot administration, regarding a peace initiative. In his 5 March letter, Mr. Denktas stated that, as the year 2000 approached, he believed the two leaders had to make a new beginning based on the realities. As a result of what had happened over the years, they had two fully functioning democratic States on the island of Cyprus and efforts to build a worthwhile future for their peoples had to be based on the acknowledgment of that fact. What needed to be done was to work out an arrangement that would enable the two States to resolve certain basic matters, specifically the delineation of borders. When the two sides reached that stage and created a climate of confidence then they might be able to visualize a joint future. Their primary aim should be the immediate achievement of a working relationship between their two States so that peace, stability and mutual trust could be secured and the danger of conflict averted.

In a press conference of 6 March, Mr. Denktas said that he regarded Mr. Clerides' refusal to receive his letter as a missed opportunity.

On 2 April [A/52/863-S/1998/293], President Clerides informed the Secretary-General that he did not consider it proper to comment on the contents of Mr. Denktas's letter but considered it appropriate to make some general observations relating to the document, since it contained the official position of the Turkish Government on the issues raised in it. He said that there was one State in Cyprus, the Republic of Cyprus, established under international agreements. As provided in Security Council resolution 939(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 600], and reaffirmed ever since, a Cyprus settlement had to be based on a State of Cyprus with a single sovereignty and international personality and a single citizenship, with its independence and territorial integrity safeguarded, and comprising two politically equal communities in a bicomunal and bi-zonal federation, and that such a settlement should exclude union in whole or in part with any other country or any form of partition or secession. The parameters of the solution of the Cyprus problem were defined and set in the Council resolutions, which, together with the 1977 and 1979 high-level agreements [YUN 1977, p. 344; YUN 1979, p. 421], constituted the only basis for any negotiated settlement. The Turkish attempt to change the basis of the negotiations struck at the heart of the negotiating process with unforeseen consequences not only for Cyprus but for peace and stability in the region. Cyprus felt that the Council should reconfirm its commitment to a peaceful solution of the Cyprus problem and urge the Turkish side to return to the negotiating process.

On 2 September [A/52/1030-S/1998/832], Mr. Denktas proposed the establishment of a Cyprus Confederation based on the following arrangements: special relationships between Turkey and the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus and between Greece and the Greek Cypriot administration on the basis of symmetrical agreements to be concluded; establishment of a Cyprus Confederation between the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus and the Greek Cypriot administration; and continuation of the 1960 guarantee system. The Cyprus Confederation might, should the parties jointly agree, pursue accession to the EU.

The ultimate aim would be a confederated structure composed of two peoples and of two States of the island supported by symmetrical agreements with the two respective motherlands and guarantor States. All rights and powers that were not referred to the confederal entity would reside with the two confederated States. Any agreement reached would be submitted for approval in separate referendums.

By participating in negotiations on the proposal, the parties would acknowledge that the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot sides were two sovereign and equal States, each with its own functioning democratic institutions and jurisdiction. That structure would provide for the security of both sides and would safeguard their identity and well-being. If the Greek Cypriots agreed to that final basis, the Turkish Cypriot side was ready to begin negotiations to establish the Cyprus Confederation.

On 31 July [A/52/1028-S/1998/826], President Clerides, in response to the Denktas proposal, stated that it was obvious that it was the Turkish Government's intention to turn Cyprus from an independent and sovereign State into two protectorates. The proposal was contrary to the high-level agreements and UN resolutions, in particular the recent Council resolution that affirmed the basis for settlement talks. Under no circumstances could Mr. Denktas's proposal form a basis for talks. President Clerides had already given instructions for convening the National Council on 7 September to consider further policy to be adopted on account of the unacceptable Turkish proposal.

In response to President Clerides' address to the General Assembly on 25 September [A/53/PV.15], Mr. Denktas on 16 October [A/53/531-S/1998/983] said that his proposal for a confederate settlement would give Cyprus security, provide for all Cypriots to pursue their livelihoods free from economic restrictions and fear of instability, and prevent restrictions, harassment and economic and other embargoes. The confederate settlement was the way to override the crisis of confidence and security that had been created between the two peoples. He said that the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus was as much a reality as the Greek Cypriot administration in the south. It had no policy of extending its boundaries or its sovereignty over the south and the Greek Cypriot administration should make a similar announcement. He proposed that an autonomous claims commission should be established to work on the modalities of an exchange of property and compensation.

On 2 December [A/53/725-S/1998/1148], the representative of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus said that, until the international community accorded equal treatment to the two States on the island, there could be no prospect for a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus dispute.

Good offices mission

Peace talks on a comprehensive settlement

Communication (April). On 20 April [S/1998/410], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that his Special Adviser on Cyprus, Diego Cordovez, visited Nicosia from 17 to 22 March for consultations with the leaders of the two Cypriot communities on the resumption of his efforts under the Secretary-General's good offices mandate. However, it was not possible to find a common basis on which to resume the negotiations. While both interlocutors emphasized their continued belief that a peaceful solution to the Cyprus problem should be pursued through the United Nations, they strongly disagreed on the parameters that should govern the process.

Mr. Clerides reconfirmed his readiness to resume discussions in the long-established framework, which should not be changed as it provided the appropriate forum for discussing and solving all problems relating to a peaceful settlement.

Mr. Denktas rejected the validity of the intercommunal framework, based on developments in connection with the accession of Cyprus to the EU. He set out his views during his meetings with Mr. Cordovez in Cyprus and elaborated on them in a meeting with the Secretary-General, at his request, in Geneva on 28 March. At that meeting, Mr. Denktas stated that he firmly believed that the United Nations offered the best venue through which the Cyprus question could be most successfully handled. Any resolution had to be based on existing realities and the equal status of the two peoples. The time had come to recognize the fact that the Greek Cypriot administration did not have the legal or moral right to determine the future of the whole island and of the Turkish Cypriot people. It was necessary to adopt a new approach to the Cyprus question that would reflect those facts.

In shaping the future, Mr. Denktas said that the two States should work out an arrangement to enable them to resolve three major issues: settlement of reciprocal property claims; security; and delineation of borders. Furthermore, the embargoes imposed on the Turkish Cypriot people should be removed. The current system of guarantees had to continue, he stated, and the final settlement had to maintain the internal balance between the two peoples of the island and the external balance between Turkey and Greece in the eastern Mediterranean. He was confident that the new platform would create a new environment in which the two sides could work towards a common future based on cooperation, mutual trust and respect. Mr. Denktas referred to his 5

March letter to Mr. Clerides, in which he had stated those views and had also invited him to make together, in good faith, a new beginning on the basis of those realities.

Mr. Denktas said that all concerned would have to adapt and realign their current positions to help the process forward, in which connection he hoped that the Secretary-General would agree to adjust the role of UNFICYP and the good offices mission to the realities in Cyprus.

The Secretary-General reported that he had subsequently urged Mr. Denktas to agree to resume talks within the framework of his good offices mission, pointing out that the talks between the two leaders were the only framework within which the two communities in Cyprus were treated on the basis of full political equality. He also told him that he intended to ask Mr. Cordovez to continue to explore with the parties ways to establish fair and effective modalities for the continuation of the talks.

Both Mr. Clerides and Mr. Denktas requested that the Secretary-General inform the Security Council about their positions and the consequent status of the Cyprus efforts.

The Council President, on 19 May [S/1998/411], informed the Secretary-General that Council members reiterated their strong support for his mission of good offices for Cyprus and for the efforts of his Special Adviser.

Report of Secretary-General (June). The Secretary-General, in a 16 June report [S/1998/518], said that, accompanied by his Special Adviser on Cyprus, he met on 12 March with the permanent members of the Security Council who, while expressing strong support for his mission of good offices, called for urgent action by the United Nations to bring about the earliest possible resumption of face-to-face talks between the two parties. The following day, on the eve of his trip to the region, his Special Adviser reported that both leaders had agreed to receive him, albeit separately, to explore the possibility of resuming face-to-face talks. The Council President reiterated the Council's full support for the Secretary-General's mission of good offices and commended the efforts of Mr. Cordovez to that end. The Council expressed concern about the high levels of tension on the island and in the region and called on both sides to take the practical steps necessary to move the negotiation process forward in an effective manner.

In letters to the leaders of the two Cypriot communities, dated 26 February, the Secretary-General expressed his hope that both sides would spare no effort to reach an agreement with his Special Adviser on arrangements for a continuing and sustained process of direct negotiations.

In two additional letters, delivered to the two leaders personally by Mr. Cordovez, the Secretary-General reiterated the importance he attached to revitalizing negotiations between the two Cypriot communities and called on the leaders to work wholeheartedly with the Special Adviser to overcome the obstacles that for so long had impeded progress towards a solution.

During the second visit of the Special Adviser to the island (18-22 March), Mr. Clerides reiterated his readiness to resume direct talks under the Secretary-General's auspices, while Mr. Denktas felt it necessary to adopt a new approach based on the "acknowledgement of the existence of two fully functioning democratic States on the island". Mr. Denktas also requested the Special Adviser to convey his views to the Security Council. Following his visit to Cyprus, the Special Adviser was received in Ankara by the Prime Minister of Turkey, who expressed his full support for the mission of good offices. A similar statement of support was conveyed to Mr. Cordovez by the Prime Minister of Greece on an earlier occasion.

The Special Adviser and the Secretary-General kept in close touch with the various envoys and representatives involved, particularly those from the United States, the United Kingdom and the EU Presidency, as well as others with whom his Special Adviser met regularly for consultation and cooperation. The Secretary-General said it was regrettable that, so far, all those efforts had not proved sufficient to lead to a resumption of the process. He hoped that all parties involved would abstain from any action that could further exacerbate tension and he counted on their fullest support in the continuing UN efforts.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

On 29 June [meeting 3898], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1179(1998). The draft [S/1998/576] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 1998 on his mission of good offices in Cyprus,

Reaffirming all its earlier resolutions on Cyprus,

Calling once more upon all States to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus, and requesting them, along with the parties concerned, to refrain from any action which might prejudice that sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity, as well as from any attempt of partition of the island or its unification with any other country,

Reiterating its growing concern that negotiations on a comprehensive political solution have yet to make progress, despite the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Adviser and others in support of the United Nations efforts to promote a comprehensive settlement,

1. Reaffirms that the status quo is unacceptable and that negotiations on a final political solution of the Cyprus problem have been at an impasse for too long;

2. Reaffirms its position that a Cyprus settlement must be based on a State of Cyprus with a single sovereignty and international personality and a single citizenship, with its independence and territorial integrity safeguarded, and comprising two politically equal communities as described in the relevant Security Council resolutions, in a bicomunal and bi-zonal federation, and that such a settlement must exclude union in whole or in part with any other country or any form of partition or secession;

3. Stresses its full support for the Secretary-General's mission of good offices and for the efforts of his Special Adviser on Cyprus to resume a sustained process of direct negotiations aimed at achieving a comprehensive settlement on the basis of the relevant Security Council resolutions, and stresses also the importance of concerted efforts to work with the Secretary-General to that end;

4. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to continue to explore possibilities that may lead to a new momentum in that process of negotiations;

5. Calls once again upon the leaders of the two communities, in particular the Turkish Cypriot side, to commit themselves to this process of negotiations, to cooperate actively and constructively with the Secretary-General and his Special Adviser and to resume the direct dialogue without further delay, and urges all States to lend their full support to these efforts;

6. Calls upon, in this context, all parties concerned to create a climate for reconciliation and genuine mutual confidence on both sides, and to avoid any actions which might increase tension, including through further expansion of military forces and armaments;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 10 December 1998 on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication (December). In a 14 December letter [S/1998/1166], the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council President that, on 25 and 30 September, he met in New York with Mr. Clerides and Mr. Denktas, respectively. He suggested to them that his Deputy Special Representative for Cyprus, Ann Hercus, begin a process of on-island talks with both parties with a view to reducing tension and promoting progress towards a just and lasting settlement. Both leaders supported such a process and promised to cooperate with it in a constructive and flexible manner. At the meetings, which began on 16 October, both sides agreed that the "shuttle talks" would involve three clusters of problems: reduction of tension, core issues and humanitarian/goodwill issues. Since then, there had been numerous meetings, as well as consultations with representatives of Greece and Turkey.

The Secretary-General said that he was encouraged by the constructive manner in which both Mr. Clerides and Mr. Denktas were engaging in the talks and considered it positive that both leaders had respected their confidentiality. Both sides made clear their commitment to avoiding tension, building peace in Cyprus and the region, and achieving an overall settlement by peaceful means. While each leader faced the difficult responsibility of representing the views and aspirations of his side, they had a joint responsibility for a concrete, mutually acceptable and forward-looking solution. The flexible approach by both sides during the talks provided hope for tangible progress in achieving those objectives. The elements being discussed included, among others, a commitment to reject the use of force or the threat of use of force; the prevention of further expansion of military forces and armaments, as well as the principle of substantial reciprocal reductions; and a confirmation of agreement to the UNFICYP package of measures for reducing tension along the ceasefire lines and further possible steps, including demining. The objective was that both sides would continue working with the Deputy Special Representative towards achieving agreement on the core aspects of a comprehensive settlement. Mr. Clerides and Mr. Denktas had indicated their wish that the Secretary-General's initiative should continue.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (December)

On 22 December [meeting 3959], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1218(1998). The draft [S/1998/1208] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its earlier resolutions on Cyprus,

Reiterating its grave concern at the lack of progress towards an overall political settlement on Cyprus,

1. Expresses its appreciation for the letter dated 14 December 1998 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the Security Council on his mission of good offices in Cyprus, in particular on the work of his Deputy Special Representative;

2. Endorses the initiative of the Secretary-General announced on 30 September 1998 within the framework of his mission of good offices, with the goal of reducing tensions and promoting progress towards a just and lasting settlement in Cyprus;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the spirit of cooperation and constructive approach the two sides have demonstrated thus far in working with the Deputy Special Representative of the Secretary-General;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in view of the objectives of promoting progress towards a just and lasting settlement and of reducing tension, set out in his initiative of 30 September 1998, and building on the serious engagement already demonstrated by the two sides to continue to make progress towards these two objectives, on the basis of relevant Security Council resolutions;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General, in particular, to work intensively with the two sides on the following, taking into account resolution 1178(1998) of 29 June 1998:

(a) An undertaking to refrain from the threat or use of force or violence as a means to resolve the Cyprus problem;

(b) A staged process aimed at limiting and then substantially reducing the level of all troops and armaments on Cyprus;

(c) Implementation of the package of measures of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus aimed at reducing tensions along the ceasefire lines, and a commitment to enter into discussions with the Force with a view to early agreement on further specific and related tension-reducing steps, including demining along the buffer zone;

(d) Further progress in the area of tension-reduction;

(e) Efforts to achieve substantive progress on the core aspects of a comprehensive Cyprus settlement;

(f) Other measures that will build trust and cooperation between the two sides;

6. Calls upon the two sides to show compliance with all the objectives in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, in full cooperation with the Secretary-General;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council informed of progress made on his initiative;

8. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

UNFICYP

The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, established by Security Council resolution 186(1964) [YUN 1964, p. 165], continued in 1998 to monitor the ceasefire lines of the Turkish forces on the northern side and the Cypriot National Guard on the southern side; to maintain the military status quo and prevent a recurrence of fighting; and to undertake humanitarian and economic activities. In the absence of a formal ceasefire agreement, the military status quo, as recorded by UNFICYP in 1974, remained the standard by which the Force judged whether changes constituted violations of the status quo.

Under the overall authority of the Deputy Special Representative and Chief of Mission, UNFICYP continued to monitor the ceasefire lines and to keep the buffer zone between the ceasefire lines under constant surveillance from 22 permanent observation posts, two posts for daytime surveillance and 19 patrol bases for periodic daily surveillance. It also carried out periodic surveillance from 118 additional observation posts and maintained surveillance of the seaward extension of the ceasefire lines for 5 kilometres.

On 13 May [S/1998/389], the Security Council agreed with the Secretary-General's stated intention of 8 May [S/1998/388] to appoint Ann Hercus (New Zealand) to the post of Deputy Special Rep-representative and Chief of Mission to succeed Gustave Feissel, with effect from 1 July.

As at November 1998, UNFICYP, under the command of Major-General Evergisto Arturo de Vergara (Argentina), comprised 1,230 troops and 33 civilian police. The military personnel were from Argentina, Austria, Canada, Finland, Hungary, Ireland, the Netherlands, Slovenia and the United Kingdom. The civilian police were from Australia and Ireland. UNFICYP's civilian component comprised 41 international and 221 local staff.

During the year, a review of UNFICYP was conducted to bring it in line with the approaches in more recently established peacekeeping missions, while achieving additional efficiencies by integrating civilian and military personnel in terms of sharing responsibilities and decision-making, initiating more transparency and better financial controls. That included, in particular, the consolidation of responsibility for intercommunal liaison, economic and humanitarian tasks in a new Civil Affairs Branch with both civilian and military personnel. That took into account changes over time in the mission's activities in the humanitarian and economic fields, which had come to focus predominantly on civil affairs matters, such as the support of persons working or living in the buffer zone and in locations beyond the ceasefire lines.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (June). The Secretary-General submitted a report covering developments and UNFICYP activities from 8 December 1997 to 8 June 1998 [S/1998/488 & Add.I]. He said that although the situation along the ceasefire lines remained calm and both sides generally respected the ceasefire and the military status quo, there were frequent minor incidents. Both sides continued to dispute the delineation of their respective ceasefire lines in a number of areas within the buffer zone, often challenging UNFICYP's authority, creating friction at times. A number of shooting incidents were reported, including two on 13 March and 5 April when each side accused the other of firing.

Both sides continued major military construction works, including anti-tank ditches and other defensive fortifications east and south-east of Nicosia, and a network of bunkers with connecting trenches to the west of the Old City of Nicosia.

A number of overflights were reported, including the 12 January flight of a Turkish F-4 Phantom fighter aircraft over the buffer zone near Pyla, and a live firing ground attack exercise onto a range area north of Avlona by two Turkish

Air Force RF-4 Phantoms on 30 April. On several occasions, helicopters from both sides overflew parts of the buffer zone.

Both sides continued to upgrade their military capabilities. The Republic of Cyprus reconfirmed its plan to deploy S-300 surface-to-air missiles unless there was progress in negotiations towards an overall settlement or towards the demilitarization of the island. The military airbase in Paphos was declared operational, although it had not come into use (see above).

No agreement was reached on implementation of the revised UNFICYP package of measures to reduce tension along the ceasefire lines that was presented to both sides in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 3741]. The military authorities in the north reconfirmed their acceptance of the package in its entirety. The National Guard accepted the code of conduct and the prohibition of loaded weapons, but continued to reject UNFICYP proposals for the unmanning of positions in close proximity to each other, on the grounds that it would leave the inhabitants of Nicosia unprotected. It made counter-proposals, which, in UNFICYP's view, would not contribute to creating distance between the soldiers deployed on each side of the buffer zone. With regard to the Dherinia area, the National Guard's counter-proposal would entail the unmanning of the entire area between Dherinia and Varosha and would go well beyond the limited objective of creating distance between the opposing forces.

UNFICYP continued to carry out regular inspections of the facilities and park at Roccas Bastion in Nicosia and to monitor maintenance of the status quo in the fenced area of Varosha. Its freedom of movement in the northern part of the island continued to be restricted, and the Force remained subject to stricter limitations than those imposed on tourists and foreign diplomats. The National Guard restricted movement by UNFICYP humanitarian personnel at the Potamia checkpoint on several occasions.

The military authorities in the north indicated that they would be ready to negotiate the mine-field issue with UNFICYP immediately following agreement on the UNFICYP package of measures to reduce tension along the ceasefire lines.

On 21 December 1997, UNFICYP arranged for 193 Greek Cypriots to visit the Apostolos Andreas Monastery on the Karpas Peninsula. On 31 January 1998, 1,285 Turkish Cypriots visited the Hala Sultan Tekke Mosque in Larnaca, and 1,314 visited it on 9 April. On 7 and 14 March, 94 Turkish Cypriot students were permitted access to the Kokkina enclave to mark anniversaries there.

On 26 December 1997, the Turkish Cypriot authorities announced that they were reevaluating bicomunal contacts following the decision by the EU Council (Luxembourg, 12-13 December) to begin EU accession negotiations with Cyprus in March 1998 and that, as of 27 December, all bicomunal activities would be suspended. Despite repeated requests, the Turkish Cypriot authorities continued to prevent Turkish Cypriot participation in bicomunal meetings on the island.

UNFICYP continued to carry out humanitarian tasks in respect of Greek Cypriots and Maronites in the northern part of the island and Turkish Cypriots in the southern part. During the reporting period, the Turkish Cypriot authorities lifted most age restrictions for Greek Cypriot and Maronite children visiting their families in the north, although the age limit of 16 remained in force for Greek Cypriot boys. However, in mid-February, the Turkish Cypriot side imposed new regulations and fees for entry to and exit from the north.

On 23 January, the two sides met to exchange information concerning the location of graves of Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot missing persons and agreed to meet again to discuss the arrangements for the return of the remains of missing persons. At a 30 April meeting, however, the Turkish Cypriot representative stated that he was not prepared to discuss the arrangements for the exhumation and return of the remains of Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot missing persons until the Greek Cypriot side agreed to first look into the fate of the Greek Cypriot victims of the 1974 coup d'etat against Archbishop Makarios, whom it claimed were among those persons listed as missing. As a result of the Turkish Cypriot position, no progress was made towards implementing the 31 July 1997 agreement on the exhumation and identification of remains [YUN 1997, p. 374]. The Greek Cypriot side had since decided to begin exhumation and identification of the remains located in graves in the area under its control.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council extend the UNFICYP mandate for a further period of six months, until 31 December 1998.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

On 29 June [meeting 3898], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1178(1998). The draft [S/1998/575] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 10 June 1998 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions on the island it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 30 June 1998, Reaffirming all its earlier resolutions on Cyprus, Noting with concern that tensions along the ceasefire lines and restrictions to the freedom of movement of the Force continue,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period ending on 31 December 1998;

2. Reminds both sides of their obligations to prevent any violence directed against Force personnel, to cooperate fully with the Force and to ensure its complete freedom of movement;

3. Calls upon the military authorities on both sides to refrain from any action, particularly in the vicinity of the buffer zone, which would exacerbate tensions;

4. Underlines the importance of early agreement to the reciprocal measures for the reduction of tension along the ceasefire lines proposed and subsequently adapted by the Force, notes the fact that only one side has so far accepted this package, calls for early agreement to and rapid implementation of reciprocal measures, and encourages the Force to continue its efforts towards that end;

5. Reiterates its grave concern at the continuing excessive and increasing levels of military forces and armaments in the Republic of Cyprus and the rate at which they are being expanded, upgraded and modernized, including by the introduction of sophisticated weaponry, and the lack of progress towards any significant reduction in the number of foreign troops in the Republic of Cyprus, which threaten to raise tensions both on the island and in the region and complicate efforts to negotiate an overall political settlement;

6. Calls upon all concerned to commit themselves to a reduction in defence spending and a reduction in the number of foreign troops in the Republic of Cyprus to help to restore confidence between the parties and as a first step towards the withdrawal of non-Cypriot forces as described in the set of ideas, stresses the importance of eventual demilitarization of the Republic of Cyprus as an objective in the context of an overall comprehensive settlement, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue to promote efforts in this direction;

7. Calls upon the leaders of the two communities to resume the discussions on security issues begun on 26 September 1997;

8. Welcomes the ongoing efforts by the Force to implement its humanitarian mandate in respect of Greek Cypriots and Maronites living in the northern part of the island, and Turkish Cypriots living in the southern part, and welcomes also the progress in the implementation of recommendations arising out of the humanitarian review undertaken by the Force in 1995, as mentioned in the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Welcomes also the appointment of the new third member of the Committee on Missing Persons, and calls for implementation without delay of the agreement on missing persons of 31 July 1997;

10. Reiterates its support for the efforts of the United Nations and others concerned to promote the holding of bicomunal events so as to build cooperation, trust and mutual respect between the two communities, regrets the suspension of such activity by the Turkish Cypriot leadership, and urges both sides, and in particular the Turkish Cypriot side, to facilitate arrangements within which bicommunal contacts can take place uninterrupted and without formalities;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 10 December 1998 on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (December). In a report covering the period 9 June to 8 December [S/1998/1149 & Add.1], the Secretary-General said that the situation along the ceasefire lines remained essentially the same and there was also no change with regard to reducing tension, the increasing levels of military forces and armaments, demilitarization and discussions on security issues. There were a number of instances of both sides moving forward of their ceasefire lines into the UN buffer zone and the National Guard continued significant military construction along the ceasefire line, some of which encroached on the buffer zone. While troop levels remained unchanged, both sides continued to upgrade their military capabilities. The delivery of S-300 surface-to-air missiles to the Greek Cypriot side of the island, which had been a matter of controversy for nearly two years, was postponed until the end of the year. The annual National Guard exercise "Nikiforos" was conducted from 20 to 25 October in conjunction with the Greek exercise "Toxotis". During the exercise, it was announced that construction plans for a naval base at Zygi, east of Limassol, were complete and that preliminary work had started. The annual Turkish forces exercise "Toros II" took place from 18 to 20 November in conjunction with the naval exercise "Sea Determination". UNFICYP continued to monitor the maintenance of the status quo in the fenced area of Varosha.

As a result of the suspension of bicommunal contacts by the Turkish Cypriot authorities in December 1997, there was no Turkish Cypriot participation in bicommunal meetings on the island. However, some meetings were held off-island with Turkish Cypriots in attendance. The Turkish Cypriot policy not only limited intercommunal contacts but also hindered routine UNFICYP liaison between health, water and electricity officials of both sides.

On 2 October, the Turkish Cypriot authorities informed UNFICYP that they were reviewing legislation that barred Greek Cypriots and Maronites residing in the northern part of the island from bequeathing their property to heirs who did not reside there. Pending the review, such estates would not be seized or made available for occupation by third persons, although they would continue to be placed in the custody of the authorities. Turkish Cypriot authorities also announced the lifting of controls on the movement of Greek Cypriots and Maronites in the north and of the limit on visits by first-degree relatives from the south to Greek Cypriots in the Karpas.

UNDP, through the United Nations Office for Project Services, started implementation in April of a bicommunal development programme aimed at promoting confidence-building by encouraging the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities to work together on projects in areas of mutual concern, notably public health, environment, sanitation, water, urban renovation, preservation of cultural heritage, natural resources and education. Four projects were ongoing: the rehabilitation of the neighbourhoods of Chrysaliniotissa and Arab Ahmet in Nicosia; the restoration of the Nicosia Venetian Walls; the Nicosia sanitation sewerage system; and development of the village of Pyla. Up to $30 million would be allocated over three years.

The Secretary-General observed that UNFICYP continued to maintain the ceasefire by controlling the buffer zone and responding quickly to any incidents. It also provided liaison and support on a range of practical matters. The planned changes to its headquarters organization were designed to improve those services to the two sides. In that connection, it was to be hoped that the Turkish Cypriot authorities would reconsider their position concerning contacts between Turkish Cypriots and Greek Cypriots on the island. He recommended that the Security Council extend the mandate of the Force for a further period of six months, until 30 June 1999.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (December)

On 22 December [meeting 3959], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1217(1998). The draft [S/1998/1207] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 17 December 1998 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus,

Welcoming also the letter from the Secretary-General dated 14 December 1998 addressed to the President of the Security Council on his mission of good offices in Cyprus,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that, in view of the prevailing conditions on the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 31 December 1998,

Reaffirming all its earlier resolutions on Cyprus,

Calling once more upon all States to respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus, and requesting them, along with the parties concerned, to refrain from any action which might prejudice that sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity, as well as from any attempt of partition of the island or its unification with any other country,

Noting with concern that restrictions to the freedom of movement of the Force continue,

Noting with satisfaction that the situation along the ceasefire lines has remained generally calm, notwithstanding numerous minor violations,

Reiterating the need to make progress on a comprehensive political solution,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period ending on 30 June 1999;

2. Reminds both sides of their obligations to prevent any violence directed against Force personnel, to cooperate fully with the Force and to ensure its complete freedom of movement;

3. Calls upon the military authorities on both sides to refrain from any action, particularly in the vicinity of the buffer zone, which would exacerbate tensions;

4. Reiterates its grave concern at the continuing excessive levels of military forces and armaments in the Republic of Cyprus and the rate at which they are being expanded, upgraded and modernized, including by the introduction of sophisticated weaponry, and the lack of progress towards any significant reduction in the number of foreign troops in the Republic of Cyprus, which threaten to raise tensions both on the island and in the region and complicate efforts to negotiate an overall political settlement;

5. Calls upon all concerned to commit themselves to a reduction in defence spending and a reduction in the number of foreign troops in the Republic of Cyprus to help to restore confidence between the parties and as a first step towards the withdrawal of non-Cypriot forces as described in the set of ideas, stresses the importance of eventual demilitarization of the Republic of Cyprus as an objective in the context of an overall comprehensive settlement, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue to promote efforts in this direction;

6. Reaffirms that the status quo is unacceptable and that negotiations on a final political solution of the Cyprus problem have been at an impasse for too long;

7. Reaffirms its position that a Cyprus settlement must be based on a State of Cyprus with a single sovereignty and international personality and a single citizenship, with its independence and territorial integrity safeguarded, and comprising two politically equal communities as described in the relevant Security Council resolutions, in a bicomunal and bi-zonal federation, and that such a settlement must exclude union in whole or in part with any other country or any form of partition or secession;

8. Stresses its full support for the Secretary-General's mission of good offices and for the efforts of his Special Adviser and Deputy Special Representative in Cyprus to resume, when appropriate, a sustained process of direct negotiations aimed at achieving a comprehensive settlement on the basis of the relevant Security Council resolutions, and stresses also the importance of concerted efforts to work with the Secretary-General to that end;

9. Calls once again upon the leaders of the two communities to commit themselves to this process of negotiations, to cooperate actively and constructively with the Secretary-General, his Special Adviser and his Deputy Special Representative and to resume when appropriate the direct dialogue, and urges all States to lend their full support to these efforts;

10. Welcomes the ongoing efforts by the Force to implement its humanitarian mandate in respect of Greek Cypriots and Maronites living in the northern part of the island and Turkish Cypriots living in the southern part, as mentioned in the report of the Secretary-General;

11. Welcomes also the resumption of work of the Committee on Missing Persons, and calls for implementation without delay of the agreement on missing persons of 31 July 1997;

12. Reiterates its support for the efforts of the United Nations and others concerned to promote the holding of bicomunal events so as to build cooperation, trust and mutual respect between the two communities;

13. Welcomes the efforts made to improve the efficiency of the Force, including by the establishment of a new Civil Affairs Branch;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 10 June 1999 on the implementation of the present resolution;

15. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

The EU, in a 30 December statement [S/1999/4], welcomed President Clerides' decision of 29 December not to bring S-300 missiles to the island, thus eliminating a source of tension. That should be followed by gestures from the Turkish side also. It was an important signal for the reduction of the excessively high level of armaments in Cyprus and the EU hoped that further steps in that direction would be taken by both sides. The decision was also a positive development in the perspective of EU accession for Cyprus. The EU called on all parties to cooperate with the Secretary-General with a view to reaching a comprehensive and lasting settlement in accordance with the relevant Security Council resolutions.

Financing

In January [A/52/775], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly the financial performance report of UNFICYP for 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997. He requested the appropriation of an additional amount of $602,900 gross ($647,400 net), of which $215,800 would be met by voluntary contributions from Cyprus, and the assessment on Member States of the remaining amount of $387,100 gross ($431,600 net). He also submitted the proposed budget [A/52/775/Add.1] of $43,009,000 gross ($41,269,700 net) for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999 and the related recommendations of ACABQ [A/52/860/Add.4].

OIOS report. The Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) [A/52/886] on the termination benefits paid to the locally employed civilians in UNFICYP.

The report stated that the Assembly, in resolution 51/235 [YUN 1997, p. 375], had requested OIOS to evaluate and report on the events and circumstances that led to UN responsibility for termination pay to locally employed civilians in UNFICYP, including all aspects of accountability and responsibility of UN staff. That involved an amount of $5,284,000 in the proposed UNFICYP budget for 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998, representing the UN share of the one-time cost of termination benefits and redundancy payments for 304 former locally employed civilians in Cyprus.

Differences emerged in 1994 over responsibility for the payment of the termination benefits—the United Nations or the United Kingdom—when the United Kingdom notified the United Nations that, effective the end of June 1995, it would cease providing the contractual services for local support staff. The United Nations took the position that as the issue was generated by the United Kingdom's decision to withdraw from providing those services, the cost should be based on the same cost-sharing formula that was applied to locally employed civilians' salaries and other staff costs, including termination payments to individual locally employed civilians who had been terminated during the life of the 1979 Memorandum of Understanding between the United Nations and the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom's position was that the United Nations was responsible for the totality of the termination payments, as the decision to terminate was made by the United Nations. The United Nations and the United Kingdom agreed in 1997 on the cost-sharing formula as the mechanism for settling the dispute.

OIOS found no impropriety in the actions of UN staff members. The problem was caused by lack of precision in the Memorandum of Understanding, which did not define the respective obligations of the two parties for the contractual employees' various benefits and entitlements. That allowed for contradictory interpretations by the parties. OIOS recommended to the UN Departments of Management and of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) that in the future either the United Nations enter into memorandums of understanding that detailed the agreement between the parties or, alternatively, that additional written agreements be prepared within the framework of the terms of the memorandums of understanding that so provided. As legal and financial issues were apparent at the initial stage of problem definition and consideration of options, it would have been advisable for UNFICYP/DPKO to have obtained assessments of possible legal and financial liabilities to the Organization from the Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) and from the Office of Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts (OPPBA), respectively.

OIOS also recommended that in future programme managers faced with issues of significant legal and financial implications should consider the benefits of early consultation with OLA and OPPBA.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 June [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/52/937], adopted resolution 52/241 without vote [agenda item 130].

Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having considered also the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the termination benefits paid to the locally employed civilians in the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus,

Recalling Security Council resolution 186(1964) of 4 March 1964, by which the Council established the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1146(1997) of 23 December 1997,

Recalling also its resolution 51/235 of 13 June 1997 on the financing of the Force,

Reaffirming that the costs of the Force that are not covered by voluntary contributions are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force by certain Governments,

Recalling its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the Force, a different procedure is required from the one applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of such operations,

Expressing its appreciation to all those Member States and observer States which have made voluntary contributions to the Special Account established for the financing of the Force for the period prior to 16 June 1993,

Noting that voluntary contributions were insufficient to cover all of the costs of the Force, including those incurred by troop-contributing Governments prior to 16 June 1993, and regretting the absence of an adequate response to appeals for voluntary contributions, including that contained in the letter dated 17 May 1994 from the Secretary-General to all Member States,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus as at 15 May 1998, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 15.3 million United States dollars, representing 13.2 per cent of the total assessed contributions from 16 June 1993 to the period ending 30 June 1998, notes that some 21.1 per cent of the Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States concerned, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

Cooperation with OSCE

Report of Secretary General. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/22 [YUN 1997, p. 379], the Secretary-General, in a November report [A/53/672], described cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE).

He stated that, during the year, multifaceted cooperation between the two organizations significantly increased and improved, both at the headquarters level and in the field, thus solidifying the foundation for cooperation between them in the future. Interaction between UNHCR and OSCE, including in their field missions, was further enhanced and an exchange of information was maintained on issues of mutual interest and cooperation. In recognition of the rapidly growing partnership between OSCE and UNHCR in the field, the Assistant High Commissioner for Refugees, on 25 June, discussed ways to further strengthen mutual interaction in the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), the countries that emerged from the former Yugoslavia and Albania. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees signed a memorandum of understanding between OSCE and UNHCR on 15 October. Partnership framework agreements were also developed between UNHCR and individual OSCE institutions. Letters were exchanged between UNHCR and the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR) and High Commissioner on National Minorities, respectively. UNHCR, in cooperation with the International Organization for Migration and ODIHR, organized the annual steering group meeting in June to review the progress made in implementing the Programme of Action adopted by the Regional Conference to Address the Problems of Refugees, Displaced Persons, Other Forms of Involuntary Displacement and Returnees in CIS Countries and Relevant Neighbouring States.

The United Nations and OSCE took further steps to enhance cooperation in promoting and protecting human rights. On 25 June, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights signed a memorandum of understanding between her Office (OHCHR) and ODIHR. Both institutions committed themselves to strengthening cooperation in support of national human rights institutions, human rights education and the human rights of women. OHCHR also maintained regular contact with the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities. Within the framework of technical assistance and advisory services for countries in transition, collaboration was developed in Latvia, the Republic of Moldova and other countries.

In January, informal high-level tripartite consultations were held between the United Nations, OSCE and the Council of Europe. Special emphasis was placed on regional issues. Activities in Albania, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia, as well as the Caucasus and Central Asia, were reviewed. The tripartite gathering made further advances in the sharing of information, improvement of coordination and facilitation of joint action in the field with optimal use made of available resources. Participants recognized that those meetings had proved effective in facilitating personal interaction, establishing new channels of communication and bridging differences in the cultures of international organizations.

Information technology experts of the two organizations met in Geneva in January and agreed to set up an operations database and create a pilot project on activities in the Caucasus, with a view to further improving coordination among participants and strengthening their early warning capabilities. The database was established at the United Nations Office at Geneva, with the involvement of several organizations affiliated with the tripartite process.

Cooperation between UNDP and OSCE, particularly in the field, accelerated further. Joint projects and action became an important factor in the advancement of democratic institution-building and good governance, promotion of human and minority rights, and establishment of a framework for donor coordination. In several countries, the offices of UNDP resident representatives provided support and facilitated short-term OSCE missions, in particular those related to election monitoring. In turn, ODIHR organized workshops in Warsaw, Poland, and Stockholm, Sweden, on electoral assistance for UNDP local staff members.

Steps to enhance cooperation between the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) and OSCE were undertaken with regard to the economic dimension of security. The OSCE Parliamentary Assembly organized a colloquium, in cooperation with ECE, on strengthening cooperation between the two organizations and subregional institutions in Europe. The establishment within the OSCE secretariat of an office for coordinating economic and environmental activities would further facilitate interaction with ECE and help to develop a joint response by the two organizations.

Cooperation between UN peacekeeping missions, programmes and agencies and OSCE missions and field activities was further strengthened.

ened. UNMIBH supported OSCE in activities related to elections, including the national elections in September. It also supported the OSCE media monitoring effort and coordinated media policy with OSCE within the Media Support Advisory Group. The United Nations and OSCE also worked together in monitoring and promoting human rights in Bosnia and Herzegovina. OSCE human rights officers supported the UNHCR open cities programme, designed to promote the return of minority groups. In that context, the two organizations initiated consultations to establish a consolidated returnee monitoring framework.

In Croatia, the UNTAES mandate expired on 15 January and OSCE took the lead in monitoring Croatia's compliance with the 1995 Basic Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 587]. A smooth transition was ensured by excellent interaction between the two organizations. The devolution of the functions of the United Nations Police Support Group to OSCE was completed on 15 October. There was close cooperation between the OSCE and UNHCR missions in Croatia with regard to the two-way return of refugees and displaced persons. To further strengthen cooperation, OSCE and UNHCR, together with the European Commission Monitoring Mission, established the return facilitation group to monitor the implementation of the programme of return adopted by the Government of Croatia. The OSCE and UNHCR missions in Croatia signed letters of agreement establishing area return facilitation groups at the local level.

In FYROM, UNPREDEP continued close cooperation with the OSCE spillover monitoring mission in monitoring and reporting on developments in the border areas adjacent to FRY. UN programmes and agencies and the Secretariat cooperated closely with OSCE in Albania. Interaction between the two organizations included the development of a strategy for the collection of weapons, the establishment of an independent national human rights or ombudsman institution, and jointly providing a framework for donor coordination.

Given the deterioration of the situation in Kosovo, FRY, since April, the Chairman-in-Office of OSCE contributed on a regular basis to the Secretary-General's reports to the Security Council. In view of the challenge faced by the OSCE Kosovo Verification Mission in the logistical and personnel training fields, the United Nations was ascertaining, in its dialogue with OSCE, the kind of assistance that could be provided by the United Nations Logistics Base (Brindisi, Italy) and the United Nations Staff College (Turin, Italy). To facilitate coordination between the Verification Mission and UNHCR on the ground, close liaison was established with OSCE in Vienna and with the Mission's advance party in the field.

In South Ossetia, Georgia, where OSCE was taking the lead in conflict resolution, UNDP was facilitating programmes to benefit both communities, thus contributing to building confidence and strengthening the hand of OSCE in the negotiations. UNHCR facilitated the return of refugees and internally displaced persons, providing them with humanitarian assistance, rehabilitating their shelter and promoting reintegration. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities facilitated the conclusion of an agreement between Ukraine and Uzbekistan, simplifying the procedure for the acquisition of Ukrainian citizenship by Crimean Tartars who returned to Ukraine from exile.

The United Nations Mission of Observers in Tajikistan (see preceding chapter) continued to work closely with the OSCE mission in the country to promote human rights and democratic institution-building and to protect Tajik refugees and internally displaced persons. UNHCR handed over to OSCE responsibility for protecting returnees and promoting human rights in the southern districts of the country. The Mission, UNDP and the OSCE mission in Tajikistan were jointly assisting the Commission on National Reconciliation in drafting amendments to the Constitution and related laws. They also intensified their cooperation in electoral assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/589], adopted resolution 53/82 without vote [agenda item 76].

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 52/43 of 9 December 1997,

Reaffirming the primary role of the Mediterranean countries in strengthening and promoting peace, security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region,

Bearing in mind all the previous declarations and commitments, as well as all the initiatives taken by the riparian countries at the recent summits, ministerial meetings and various forums concerning the question of the Mediterranean region,

Recognizing the indivisible character of security in the Mediterranean and that the enhancement of cooperation among Mediterranean countries with a view to promoting the economic and social development of all peoples of the region will contribute significantly to stability, peace and security in the region,

Recognizing also the efforts made so far and the determination of the Mediterranean countries to intensify the process of dialogue and consultations with a view to resolving the problems existing in the Mediterranean region and to eliminating the causes of tension and the consequent threat to peace and security, and their growing awareness of the need for further joint efforts to strengthen economic, social, cultural and environmental cooperation in the region,

Recognizing further that prospects for closer Euro-Mediterranean cooperation in all spheres can be enhanced by positive developments worldwide, in particular in Europe, in the Maghreb and in the Middle East,

Reaffirming the responsibility of all States to contribute to the stability and prosperity of the Mediterranean region and their commitment to respect the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Expressing its concern at the persistent tension and continuing military activities in parts of the Mediterranean that hinder efforts to strengthen security and co-operation in the region,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that security in the Mediterranean is closely linked to European security as well as to international peace and security;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the continuing efforts by Mediterranean countries to contribute actively to the elimination of all causes of tension in the region and to the promotion of just and lasting solutions to the persistent problems of the region through peaceful means, thus ensuring the withdrawal of foreign forces of occupation and respecting the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of all countries of the Mediterranean and the right of peoples to self-determination, and therefore calls for full adherence to the principles of non-interference, non-intervention, non-use of force or threat of use of force and the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with the Charter and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Commends the efforts by the Mediterranean countries in meeting common challenges through co-ordinated overall responses, based on a spirit of multilateral partnership, towards the general objective of turning the Mediterranean basin into an area of dialogue, exchanges and cooperation, guaranteeing peace, stability and prosperity, and encourages them to strengthen such efforts through, inter alia, a lasting multilateral and action-oriented cooperative dialogue among States of the region;

4. Recognizes that the elimination of the economic and social disparities in levels of development and other obstacles, as well as respect and greater understanding among cultures, in the Mediterranean area will contribute to enhancing peace, security and cooperation among Mediterranean countries through the existing forums;

5. Calls upon all States of the Mediterranean region that have not yet done so to adhere to all the multilaterally negotiated legal instruments related to the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, thus creating the necessary conditions for strengthening peace and co-operation in the region;

6. Encourages all States of the region to favour the necessary conditions for strengthening the confidence-building measures among them by promoting genuine openness and transparency on all military matters, by participating, inter alia, in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures and by providing accurate data and information to the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms;

7. Encourages the Mediterranean countries to strengthen further their cooperation in combating terrorism, in all its forms and manifestations, which poses a serious threat to peace, security and stability in the region and therefore to the improvement of the current political, economic and social situation;

8. Invites all States of the region to address, through various forms of cooperation, problems and threats posed to the region, such as terrorism, international crime and illicit arms transfers, as well as illicit drug production, consumption and trafficking, which jeopardize the friendly relations among States, hinder the development of international cooperation and result in the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and the democratic basis of pluralistic society;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on means to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region".

Chapter VI

Middle East

In 1998, the United Nations continued to support the Middle East peace process and remained involved in the region in a number of ways—through its peacekeeping operations, through the good offices of the Secretary-General, as well as through programmes of economic, social and other forms of assistance. The peace process, which began in Madrid, Spain, in 1991, regained momentum in late October with the signing of the Wye River Memorandum between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). Despite the revived peace negotiations, however, one of the principal stumbling blocks to the peace process remained the growth of settlements throughout the occupied Palestinian territory, especially in and around Jerusalem. Settlement activities led to an increase in tensions and violence, further undermining the confidence between Israelis and Palestinians. No headway was made in the Israel-Syrian Arab Republic negotiations. In March, the Secretary-General visited the region, including Israel, Lebanon and Syria.

In view of Israel's decision to broaden the jurisdiction and planning boundaries of Jerusalem, the Security Council met in June to discuss the issue. The President of the Council issued a statement calling on Israel not to proceed with the expansion of the municipality and not to take any other steps that would prejudice the outcome of the permanent status negotiations.

In March, the General Assembly resumed its tenth emergency special session, which first convened in 1997, to discuss the item "Illegal Israeli actions in occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the occupied Palestinian territory". The Assembly demanded, among other things, that Israel comply with the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the emergency special session in 1997 and recommended that the High Contracting Parties to the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) hold a conference on measures to enforce the Convention in the occupied Palestinian territory. The Assembly also recommended that the Government of Switzerland, as the depositary of the Convention, undertake the necessary steps to prepare for that conference.

In July, the Assembly conferred on Palestine additional rights and privileges, including the right to participate in the general debate, to speak under any agenda items in the plenary, and to exercise the right of reply. However, Palestine would not have the right to vote.

The Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories served as the focal point for UN assistance to the Palestinians. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for the Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide a wide-ranging programme of education, health, relief and social services to over 3.5 million Palestinian refugees living both in and outside camps in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, as well as in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Faced with the prospect of financial insolvency, UNRWA had been obliged to enforce austerity measures and to make an extraordinary appeal for additional contributions to avoid a disruption in services.

During the year, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported to the General Assembly on the situation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and the Golan Heights. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinians.

The situation in southern Lebanon remained volatile and dangerous during 1998, with a rising level of hostilities and an increase in the number of civilian casualties. In the context of Israel-Lebanon negotiations, the Israeli Ministerial Committee for National Security decided to accept Security Council resolution 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312], by which the Israel Defence Forces were to leave southern Lebanon under proper security arrangements, while the Lebanese Government was to assume control of the area and guarantee that its territory was not used as a base for terrorist activities against Israel. The withdrawal had yet to take place at the end of 1998. The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) pursued efforts to limit the conflict and protect inhabitants from its consequences. The mandates of UNIFIL and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights were both extended twice during the year, and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) continued to assist both peacekeeping operations in their tasks.

By decision 53/426 of 8 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item entitled "Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security" and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth (1999) session. The item had been inscribed yearly on the Assembly's agenda since 1981, following the bombing by Israel of a nuclear research centre near Baghdad [YUN 1981, p. 275].

Peace process

Overall situation

The first nine months of 1998 were marked by a stalemate in the peace negotiations. Continued settlement activities by Israel and the failure to hold a conference of the High Contracting Parties to the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention), as recommended by the General Assembly at its tenth emergency special session in 1997, led to the reconvening of the emergency session in March.

A break in the deadlock took place in October, however, with the signing by Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) of the Wye River Memorandum. The Memorandum, which was signed in Washington, D.C., on 23 October by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and witnessed by United States President William J. Clinton, outlined steps to facilitate implementation of the 1995 Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Interim Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 626] and other related agreements, including the 1997 Hebron Protocol [YUN 1997, p. 384]. Agreement on the Memorandum was reached following the Middle East peace talks (Wye River, Maryland, 16-23 October), which were sponsored by the United States.

In a November report [A/53/652-S/1998/1050] on the question of Palestine (see below, under "Issues related to Palestine") and the situation in the Middle East, the Secretary-General observed that the signing of the Wye River Memorandum was a promising development. That agreement complemented and added details to past accords between the parties and paved the way to permanent status negotiations, and it was hoped that it would bring to an end the delays and unilateral actions that had hampered progress in the peace process for far too long. The primary obligations of the Palestinians and Israelis were clear: respectively, to take all legal measures to combat violence and terrorism, and to carry out, on time, further redeployments in the West Bank as laid down in the agreement.

The Secretary-General also welcomed the fact that the Wye agreement offered economic opportunities for the Palestinian people, which were essential if peace in the Middle East was to prosper. The United Nations would continue to support progress in the Israeli-Palestinian talks and to provide economic, social and other assistance to the occupied territories. It was further hoped that advances in the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations would create favourable momentum for the resumption of the Israel-Syrian Arab Republic and Israel-Lebanon talks. That would be essential for the settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257], 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213] and 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312].

In resolution 53/42 of 2 December, the General Assembly, expressing the hope that the Wye River Memorandum would be fully implemented, voiced its full support for the ongoing peace process, which began in Madrid in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 221], and the 1993 Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements [YUN 1993, p. 521], as well as subsequent agreements, including the Interim Agreement. It also expressed the hope that the process would lead to the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

Committee on Palestinian Rights. In its annual report [A/53/35], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) welcomed the signing on 23 October of the Wye River Memorandum, which provided, among other things, for: further Israeli redeployment from 13 per cent of the West Bank; the steps to be taken by the parties in the area of security; the renewal of negotiations on safe passage between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; the agreement to address without delay the issue of the Port of Gaza; and the commitment to resume permanent status negotiations.

Occupied territories

Communications (January-March). In a 13 January letter [A/52/766-S/1998/31] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer of Palestine to the United Nations said that, on 8 January, the Israeli Government approved the construction of 574 new units in the occupied territory and, on 10 January, plans were revealed by the Israeli Housing Ministry for the construction of more than 30,000 additional units in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem. Also on 8 January, Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu had described the capture of the West Bank during the 1967 war as the most important strategic development in the history of the Jewish State other than its inception. Those kind of statements reflected expansionist intentions, violated international law and sustained illegal claims by the Israeli Government to at least parts of the territory occupied since 1967, the Permanent Observer stated.

By a 19 January letter [A/52/769-S/1998/48], the Permanent Observer said that, on 14 January, the Israeli Government took a decision establishing that Israel's vital and national interests in Judea, Samaria and the Jordan Valley would constitute the basis of the interim agreement with the Palestinians. Those vital interests included, among other things, the area surrounding the Jerusalem region, the areas of the Israeli communities, the eastern and western security zones, infrastructure interests and historic sites sacred to the Jewish people. The Permanent Observer said that decision represented a grave breach of the existing agreements between the parties and jeopardized the entire peace process.

By a 12 March letter [A/52/827-S/1998/224], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General of the latest developments in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem. According to the letter, between 10 and 11 March Israeli soldiers shot and killed three Palestinian labourers and wounded many others at an army checkpoint and in subsequent clashes in the West Bank. It was pointed out that Israeli army checkpoints, which remained positioned throughout the West Bank owing to delays in the redeployment of the Israeli army, were often the scenes of harassment and violence against the Palestinian people. The Permanent Observer said that the situation was characterized by the deadlock in the Israeli-Palestinian peace process owing to continuous Israeli violations and non-compliance with the agreements reached between the two sides. Moreover, there had been a serious deterioration of the living conditions in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, as a result of Israeli policies and practices. The Permanent Observer called for the resumption of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly to address Israeli actions in East Jerusalem and the rest of the occupied Palestinian territory.

Emergency special session

In accordance with General Assembly resolution ES-10/4 [YUN 1997, p. 408] and at the request of the Syrian Arab Republic [A/ES-10/21], as Chairman of the Group of Arab States at the United Nations, supported by the Coordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries [A/ES-10/22], the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly was resumed on 17 March 1998 to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the occupied Palestinian territory". The session was first convened in April 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 394] and met twice in resumed sessions in July and November of that year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 March [meeting 9], the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/5 by recorded vote (120-3-5) [draft: A/ES-10/L.4/Rev.1 & Add.1] [agenda item 5].

Illegal Israeli actions in occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the occupied Palestinian territory

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions ES-10/2 of 25 April 1997, ES-10/3 of 15 July 1997 and ES-10/4 of 13 November 1997,

Determined to uphold the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, international humanitarian law and all other instruments of international law, as well as relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Increasingly concerned about the persistent violations by Israel, the occupying Power, of the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, including its settlement construction at Jebel Abu Ghneim to the south of occupied East Jerusalem, and its failure to accept the de jure applicability of the Convention to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the rest of the Arab territories occupied since 1967,

Aware that the necessary steps recommended in paragraph 5 of resolution ES-10/4, including the convening of a meeting of experts with a target date not later than the end of February 1998 in order to follow up on the recommendations mentioned in paragraph 10 of resolution ES-10/3 and paragraph 4 of resolution ES-10/4, remain to be fulfilled,

1. Reiterates its condemnation of the failure of the Government of Israel to comply with the provisions of resolutions ES-10/2, ES-10/3 and ES-10/4;

2. Reiterates all the demands made in resolutions ES-10/2, ES-10/3 and ES-10/4, and stresses the necessity of the full and immediate implementation by Israel, the occupying Power, of those demands;

3. Reiterates once again its recommendation that the High Contracting Parties to the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, convene a conference on measures to enforce the Convention in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and to ensure its respect in accordance with common article 1;

4. Reiterates its recommendation to the Government of Switzerland, in its capacity as the depositary of the Geneva Convention, to undertake the necessary preparatory steps, including the convening of a meeting of experts in order to follow up on the above-mentioned recommendation;

5. Extends the target date for the convening of the meeting of experts of the High Contracting Parties until the end of April 1998;

6. Reiterates the request made in paragraph 6 of resolution ES-10/4 to the Government of Switzerland to invite the Palestine Liberation Organization to participate in the above-mentioned conference and in any preparatory steps for that conference;

7. Reiterates its decision that, in case of continued lack of compliance by Israel, the occupying Power, with the provisions of resolutions ES-10/2, ES-10/3 and ES-10/4, it shall reconsider the situation with a view to making further appropriate recommendations to the States Members of the United Nations in accordance with its resolution 377 A (V) of 3 November 1950;

8. Decides to adjourn the tenth emergency special session temporarily and to authorize the President of the most recent General Assembly to resume its meeting upon request from Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION ES-10/5:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Cote d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Australia, Bulgaria, Marshall Islands, Romania, Swaziland.

Speaking before the vote [A/ES-10/PV.8], the Assembly President drew attention to the Conference in Support of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Brussels, Belgium, 24-25 February), organized by the Committee on Palestinian Rights in cooperation with the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) and the League of Arab States (LAS) (see below, under "Committee on Palestinian Rights").

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel had refused to comply with the provisions of the resolutions that the Assembly had adopted during the tenth emergency special session in 1997 and that it had repeatedly violated the agreements signed within the framework of the Middle East peace process. In addition, the Israeli Government had continued its settlement activities and its attempts to change the legal status and demographic composition of Jerusalem. The Permanent Observer noted that Israel had almost completed the first stage of the construction of the settlement at Jebel Abu Ghneim, to the south of occupied East Jerusalem, while it continued to deport Palestinian Jerusalemites from the city. The Permanent Observer concluded that the main problem was the ideological position of the Israeli Government, which was in direct contradiction to the essence and texts of the agreements reached.

Israel said that the emergency special session had been resumed even before the session's 1997 recommendation that a meeting of experts be convened to consider the holding of a conference of the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention (resolution ES-10/4) [YUN 1997, p. 408] could be implemented. The current resumed session had been convened to adopt a resolution that tried to supersede what had been previously decided. Israel pointed out that it had redeployed from Hebron; it had freed Palestinian prisoners; it had transferred large funds to the Palestinian Authority (PA); it had lifted the closure of border crossings, more than doubling the number of Palestinian workers benefiting from the Israeli economy; and, in March 1997, it had offered the first phase of further redeployment, in accordance with its commitments, which the PA refused to accept. According to Israel, the PA had chosen a deliberate strategy of constant crisis. The underlying assumption was that, under conditions of diplomatic impasse, international political pressure would automatically build on Israel, forcing it to make concessions that went beyond the 1993 Declaration of Principles [YUN 1993, p. 521] and the 1995 Interim Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 626] (the so-called Oslo agreements).

The Acting Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian Rights said that, in terms of the peace negotiations, 1997 was largely wasted, owing to the measures taken by the Israeli authorities. Although attempts at restarting the negotiations on certain issues had been made in Washington, D.C., the overall frustration had taken its toll and had allowed the level of mistrust and suspicion between the two sides to grow over the months. The latest flare-up of violence in the West Bank was another signal of the illegal nature of Israeli actions in the occupied Palestinian territory and of the pressing need to ensure Israel's acceptance of the de jure applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to all the territories occupied since 1967.

Tunisia said that the Assembly in resolution ES-10/4 had recommended that the Government of Switzerland, in its capacity as the depositary of the Fourth Geneva Convention, undertake the necessary steps to prepare for a conference on measures to enforce the Convention in the occupied territories, including the convening of a meeting of experts. That meeting, for which the Assembly had set a target date not later than February 1998, had not been convened, despite the fact that the Swiss Government had contacted and held consultations with the High Contracting Parties.

The United States opposed the call for Switzerland to convoke experts to prepare for a meeting of the Convention's High Contracting Parties to enforce the Convention in the occupied territories. It believed that it was unreasonable to ask the Government of Switzerland, a non-member observer State, to respond to a non-binding Assembly resolution. The United States said that the November 1997 resolution was and remained another step towards politicizing the Fourth Geneva Convention.

The Observer of Switzerland, who participated in the debate at the Assembly's invitation, said that his Government had held informal consultations in order to draw up a plan for following up on paragraphs 4 and 5 of resolution ES-10/4. On 5 March, Switzerland had submitted a proposal to the main parties concerned, suggesting the holding of a closed meeting, which could be repeated if necessary, between Israel and the PLO. The Observer requested that Switzerland's proposal be given a chance and that a dialogue at least be attempted.

Fourth Geneva Convention meetings. A closed meeting, convened by Switzerland, was held between Israel and the PLO, in the presence of representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) (Geneva, 9-11 June), to examine measures and machinery that could contribute to the effective implementation of the Fourth Geneva Convention in the occupied Palestinian territories. The participants exchanged views on the possibility of enacting specific implementation measures and they agreed to meet again to consider ideas and suggestions that could promote respect for the Convention. That meeting did not take place in 1998.

Switzerland also convened a meeting of experts of the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention (Geneva, 27-29 October) on general problems in implementing the Convention, including in the occupied territories. The participants identified ways to put an end to violations of the Convention and to prevent future breaches. Among the measures mentioned was the organization of meetings in which States or entities particularly concerned would participate to consider specific situations, as had been the case with the June meeting between Israel and the PLO.

Included among the 17 measures mentioned in the report of the Chairman of the meeting was consideration of the timing and modalities of conferences on specific situations, such as those recommended by the General Assembly in the case of the occupied Palestinian territories. Convening such a conference, however, raised many questions that the Geneva Conventions and their additional protocols did not resolve and which only the States parties could address.

Despite the consultations undertaken since mid-1997, and in spite of the questions raised by its delegation at the October meeting of experts, Switzerland, as the depositary of the Convention, did not receive a conclusive reply regarding the holding of the conference recommended by the Assembly.

Communications (April-June). In a 1 April letter [A/52/862-S/1998/290] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer of Palestine noted that while on a visit to an Israeli settlement in the West Bank on 31 March, Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu referred to the settlement as a part of greater Jerusalem. The statement was made only one day after the conclusion of the visit to the region by the United States Special Envoy to the Middle East peace process, Dennis Ross, which did not produce any tangible results owing to continuing intransigence by Israel, added the Permanent Observer.

On 14 May [A/52/899-S/1998/393], the Permanent Observer, in a letter to the Secretary-General, said that in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of al-nakba (the catastrophe), which marked the dispossession and uprooting of more than 750,000 Palestinians from their homes and land, marches were organized throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israeli soldiers opened fire against the participants, killing eight people and injuring approximately 400 others. In addition, Bab Al-Ghawanima, one of the gates of Al-Haram Al-Sharif and one of the holy places in Jerusalem, had been burned by some Israeli fanatics, according to the letter.

By a 15 May letter [A/52/906-S/1998/400] to the Secretary-General and to the Security Council President, Saudi Arabia, as Chairman of the Arab Group for May, lamented the killing and wounding of Palestinians by the Israeli army during the commemoration of al-nakba. It added that the Middle East peace process had reached a dangerous crossroads as a result of the intransigence of the Israeli Government and its defiance of the will of the international community.

On 26 May [A/52/921-S/1998/436], Egypt and France transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of an appeal for peace issued by the President of France, Jacques Chirac, and the President of Egypt, Hosni Mubarak, following a meeting in Paris on 18 May. The two Presidents expressed concern at the continuing deadlock on all aspects of the Middle East peace process, and in particular at the lack of progress on the Palestinian aspect, despite efforts being made by the United States to relaunch the negotiations. The two Presidents reaffirmed their commitment to the peace process launched in Madrid in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 221] and believed that security could be assured only through the establishment of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East, based on the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) and 425(1978) and on the principles agreed at Madrid, notably the exchange of land for peace and the attainment of the legitimate political rights of the Palestinian people. That in turn should lead to the exercise of the right of the Palestinian people to establish its own independent State, based on its right of self-determination. The two Presidents also emphasized the need to respect the agreements signed within the framework of the Oslo process and to refrain from unilateral measures, in particular the building of settlements. Egypt and France proposed a conference of countries that were determined to save the peace process. Such a conference would maintain and confirm all existing principles and agreements.

By a 29 May letter [A/52/926-S/1998/444] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine reported that on 24 May Israeli authorities had staged a military parade in Jerusalem to mark the thirty-first anniversary of the occupation of East Jerusalem, in violation of international law and relevant UN resolutions. Israel's actions threatened to plunge the region into an even more unstable situation, even when attempts were being made by the United States and the international community to save the peace process.

On 8 June [A/52/947-S/1998/481], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General that Israel had started archaeological excavations in the area of Burj al-Laqlaq inside the Old City of East Jerusalem. The excavation work was taking place as part of preliminary activities to build an illegal new Jewish settlement in the heart of occupied East Jerusalem, and it was being carried out following a failed attempt on 25 May by the Jewish settler group Ateret Cohanim to establish the nucleus of a new settlement in that area. In addition, another Jewish settler group, Elad, had taken over four housing units in the Silwan neighbourhood of East Jerusalem, instigating clashes with Palestinians. The Permanent Observer called on the Security Council and the international community to take action against such Israeli violations and illegal practices.

On 9 June [A/52/948-S/1998/487], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General that the Interior Ministry of Israel had approved the construction of 58 housing units for Jewish settlers in the area of the Mount of Olives in East Jerusalem. That decision was yet another example of an intensified expansionist policy for the colonization and Judaization of Arab Jerusalem, he said.

By a 15 June letter [A/52/949-S/1998/511] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that on 11 June the Israeli army issued an order allowing for the establishment of the so-called civil guards, or armed militia, in the Jewish settlements in the West Bank. On the same day, the Israeli army issued another order granting the settlement "Ariel" the formal status of a city, implicitly indicating that it was no longer part of the occupied territory.

Also on 15 June [A/52/952], Israel, in a letter to the Secretary-General, said that it was seeking to complete a new set of understandings with the PA, through the assistance of the United States, with the aim of putting the peace process back on track. Israel was hopeful that those understandings would provide a framework for achieving Palestinian compliance with commitments made at the time of the 1997 Hebron Protocol [YUN 1997, p. 384].

Israel's insistence on Palestinian compliance had chiefly focused on the area of security, for since the signing of the Oslo agreements hundreds of Israelis had died from terrorist attacks emanating from PA-controlled territory. Restoring security required not only constant action by the Palestinian security services, but also creating an environment free from incitement to violence, stated Israel. The letter noted that since May 1998 the PA had escalated its widespread incitement to violence in all of its official media. PLO Chairman Arafat had participated in that campaign, which culminated in massive demonstrations during the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of what the PLO called al-nakba. In addition, Chairman Arafat's security forces had failed to crack down specifically on the Hamas military capability. Hamas military operatives, even those involved in bomb attacks, had not been kept imprisoned. Israel stated that according to Colonel Jabril Rajoub, head of the PA's preventive security agency in the West Bank, the PA had no responsibility for preventing attacks on Israel from area B—the area of full Palestinian civilian control and shared Israeli-Palestinian security control. That was a critical fact since the process of further redeployment involved converting large tracts of the West Bank from area C (full Israeli security control) to area B status.

For Israel, the peace process was not a temporary truce, but an irreversible commitment to reach a permanent reconciliation with the Palestinian people and the Arab world. If the Palestinian commitment to comply with the Oslo agreements was established in both word and deed, then, stated Israel, the peace process could move forward.

By an 18 June letter [A/52/958-S/1998/535] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu had announced a programme to strengthen Israel's hold on Jerusalem, which included the creation of an "umbrella municipality" with administrative powers over nearby towns in Israel, thus expanding the border of Jerusalem, as well as over some Jewish settlements in the West Bank. It included construction of roads for those settlements, a multi-year housing investment plan and new infrastructure. Regarding the Israeli attempt to build a new settlement at Jebel Abu Ghneim (Har Homa) to the south of East Jerusalem, the Israeli Prime Minister was reported as saying that houses would be built in that area by the year 2000.

In a follow-up letter of 22 June [A/52/963-S/1998/557], the Permanent Observer stated that on 21 June the Israeli Government approved the programme announced by the Israeli Prime Minister aimed at expanding Jerusalem's municipality. Noting that the Security Council had adopted 16 resolutions regarding Jerusalem and had repeatedly declared that all measures taken by Israel to change the legal status, demographic composition and character of the city were null and void and without any legal validity, the Permanent Observer stated that the Council was under an obligation to take specific concrete measures to prevent the plan from being implemented. The Council was asked to consider the situation in a formal meeting and take the necessary measures.

On 26 June [A/52/971-S/1998/579], the Sudan transmitted to the Secretary-General and to the Security Council President a 25 June statement issued by an emergency meeting of the Council of LAS concerning the decision of Israel to expand the municipality of Jerusalem. The LAS Council stated that Israel's decision threatened to erase the Arab identity of Jerusalem and destroy the city's landmarks. Israel's action also entailed the illegal appropriation of land and the loss of the rights of Palestinian citizens in the occupied territories. The LAS Council called on the United States to compel Israel to comply with the terms of reference of the Madrid Peace Conference and urged the Russian Federation and the European Union (EU) to adopt decisive positions concerning Israeli practices. The United Nations, particularly the Security Council, was urged to convene an emergency session to discuss that serious matter, which would have grave repercussions for the entire peace process.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (30 June)

At the request of the Sudan [S/1998/558], the Security Council, on 30 June, discussed the situation in the occupied Arab territories [meeting 3900]. In its capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group for the month of June and on behalf of the members of LAS, the Sudan requested a formal Council meeting to consider Israel's decision to expand the boundaries of the municipality of Jerusalem. In that regard, the Sudan referred to the 22 June letter from the Observer of Palestine (see above). With the Council's consent, the President invited Algeria, Bangladesh, Colombia, Cuba, Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Malaysia, Mauritania, Morocco, Norway, Oman, Peru, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. The President also invited the representative of Palestine to participate, at his own request [S/1998/587] and in accordance with the Council's provisional rules of procedure and previous practice. Invitations were also extended to the Permanent Observer of OIC, at the request of Qatar [S/1998/592], to the Charge d'affaires of the Office of the Permanent Observer of LAS, at the request of Bahrain [S/1998/588], and to the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian Rights, at his own request.

The first speaker, the representative of Palestine, said that Israel's decision to expand the municipal boundaries of Jerusalem constituted a violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention, several Security Council resolutions and those of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly. Moreover, the policies and practices of the Israeli Government were clearly aimed at the systematic destruction of the agreements reached between the two sides within the framework of the Middle East peace process. Given the existence of the Israeli plan for Jerusalem, it was not possible to imagine the peace process being revitalized and continuing, the representative stated.

Israel said it was determined to protect Jerusalem for all its residents and had therefore taken a ministerial-level initiative to strengthen the city. That was not a new political programme affecting the political status of Jerusalem, nor was it a plan to gerrymander district lines in order to affect political outcomes. It consisted of a municipal blueprint for bolstering the city's economy and infrastructure and was fully in accordance with the Interim Agreement, which provided that Jerusalem remain under Israeli jurisdiction while remaining an issue for permanent status negotiations.

Israel rejected allegations that its plan was developed within the context of annexing more Palestinian territory; rather, it was intended to provide land for housing and high-technology industries, thereby creating affordable homes and new employment opportunities for Jerusalem's residents. Neither did the plan call for the incorporation into Jerusalem of the populations of the major western suburbs. Any decision to shift the municipal boundary of the city would be strictly limited to areas westward of Jerusalem that were within the pre-1967 lines. The so-called "umbrella municipality" was merely a coordination mechanism between Jerusalem and surrounding communities, said Israel. It did not entail a shift in municipal boundaries or the extension of municipal authority over any Israeli settlements. Israel also pointed out that plans had been approved for the construction of 100 housing units for the Palestinian Arab residents of the A-Tur neighbourhood in Jerusalem, just next to the Mount of Olives, and not 58 housing units for Jewish settlers as had been reported by the Palestinian Observer in a 9 June letter (see above).

Israel noted that the greatest problem for Jerusalem was Palestinian non-compliance in fighting terrorism and preventing violence. Since the signing of the Oslo agreements, nearly 250 Israelis had been killed in successive suicide bombings that emanated from areas under the control of the PA. Bomb factories belonging to the Hamas organization were operating in Ramallah and in Bethlehem, and the bulk of the infrastructure used for repeated suicide bombing attacks in the heart of Jerusalem remained intact.

The United States regretted the announcement by Israel that it planned to create an "umbrella municipality" and to broaden the jurisdiction and planning boundaries of Jerusalem. The United States viewed Israel's decision as unhelpful to the peace process and reiterated that all parties had to refrain from unilateral actions that could prejudice the outcome of the permanent status negotiations. Nevertheless, it welcomed Israel's statement that there would be no change in the political status of Jerusalem pending the outcome of those negotiations. The United States had offered a fair and balanced set of ideas to break the stalemate, to which the Palestinians had already agreed in principle. It was currently working with the Israelis to determine whether they could also accept what was outlined so that both sides could begin the task of negotiating the core issues of permanent status.

The LAS representative said that Israel's decision to annex to the municipality of Jerusalem several villages west of the city and some settlements in the Palestinian territories was designed to tighten the Israeli grip on the Holy City and to separate it from the other Palestinian territories. He added that Israel controlled 84 per cent of the territory of Jerusalem, with Arabs owning 14 per cent and foreigners 2 per cent. With regard to the possession of the territory of East Jerusalem, Israelis controlled 74 per cent and Arabs 26 per cent.

In view of the stalling of the peace process as a consequence of Israel's actions in the occupied territories, LAS called on the sponsors of the peace process—the United States and the Russian Federation—to take a stand against Israel's measures. It also called on the Council to take action against Israel's plan and practices, which represented a contravention of international legitimacy and the position adopted by the international community.

Communication. By an 8 July letter [A/52/975] to the Secretary-General, Egypt transmitted the joint communique of the Jordan-Palestine-Egypt tripartite summit held in Cairo on 5 July. The President of Egypt, the King of Jordan and the Chairman of the PA urged the United States to make public the results of its efforts based on the initiative that it had proposed to the Palestinians and Israelis and that had met with the agreement of the Palestinian side, but which had not been accepted by the Israeli Government.

The leaders affirmed their unconditional rejection of the plan for the Judaization of Jerusalem. They called on Israel to abandon the plan forthwith and to refrain from taking any measures to implement it on the ground. They further urged Israel to desist from taking unilateral measures, and in particular from engaging in settlement activity, from expropriating land and from demolishing homes, in conformity with the agreements concluded that prohibited any of the parties from taking measures that might prejudice the issues for the final status negotiations.

The three leaders stressed that the only way to save the peace process was full and meticulous commitment to the terms of reference of the Madrid Conference, namely Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973) and the principle of land for peace on all respective tracks, in such a manner as to ensure withdrawal from the occupied Lebanese, Syrian and Palestinian territories and the exercise by the Palestinian people of its legitimate rights, primarily the right to exercise self-determination and establish an independent Palestinian State with its capital in Jerusalem. They reaffirmed the need for compliance with the agreements already concluded, including the implementation of all three stages of further re-deployment in accordance with the commitments given and the observance of all deadlines set by the Interim Agreement.

The leaders expressed their support for the Egyptian-French initiative for the convening of an international conference of those countries that were determined to save the peace process.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (13 July)

On 13 July [meeting 3904], the President of the Security Council issued the following statement [S/PRST/1998/21] on behalf of its members:

The Security Council has considered the letters dated 18 and 22 June 1998, as well as the letters dated 8, 9 and 15 June 1998, from the Permanent Observer of Palestine to the United Nations, and the letter dated 23 June 1998 from the Permanent Representative of the Sudan to the United Nations, on behalf of the States members of the League of Arab States, relating to the issue of Jerusalem.

The Council recognizes the importance and sensitivity of the issue of Jerusalem to all parties and expresses its support for the decision of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel, in accordance with the Declaration of Principles of 13 September 1993, that the permanent status negotiations shall cover the issue of Jerusalem. The Council therefore calls upon the parties to avoid actions which might prejudice the outcome of these negotiations.

In the context of its previous relevant resolutions, the Council considers the decision by the Government of Israel on 21 June 1998 to take steps to broaden the jurisdiction and planning boundaries of Jerusalem a serious and damaging development. The Council therefore calls upon the Government of Israel not to proceed with that decision and also not to take any other steps which would prejudice the outcome of the permanent status negotiations. Further, the Council calls upon Israel to abide scrupulously by its legal obligations and responsibilities under the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949.

The Council supports the efforts of the United States aimed at breaking the stalemate in the peace process, calls upon the parties to respond positively to these efforts, notes that the Palestinian side has already given agreement in principle to the proposals of the United States, and expresses the hope that the permanent status negotiations can resume and progress can be made towards the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace based on Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

The Council will keep Israeli actions under review.

Communications (July-November). By a 27 July letter [A/52/995] to the Secretary-General, Israel addressed the issue of the Palestinian National Covenant, the founding charter of the PLO. According to Israel, almost all of the articles in the Covenant explicitly or implicitly denied Israel's right to exist and rejected any peaceful solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict. The Covenant also denied the existence of the Jewish people as a nation and any ties it might have to the land of Israel. For that reason, the Israeli Government had insisted on the revision of the Covenant as a fundamental requirement in any process of mutual recognition and reconciliation between Israel and the PLO.

While the Palestinian National Council (PNC) declared its readiness in April 1996 to change the document, the only practical step taken was the empowerment of a legal committee to draft a new Covenant for presentation at a future date. In May 1996, PNC Chairman Selim Zaanoun asserted that the Covenant had been amended but added that no specific articles were cancelled, and in an interview on 22 January 1998 the head of the PNC's legal committee, Faisal Hamdi Husseini, stated that the changes had not been carried out. Israel pointed out that Chairman Arafat had committed himself to the Note for the Record of the Hebron Protocol, an agreement which included the principle of reciprocity: Israel would not be expected to implement its commitments if the PLO did not fulfil its pledges, including its pledge to revise the Covenant.

Israel noted that the Covenant stated that any amendment had to be approved by a two-thirds majority of the PNC in a special session. It said the PLO's obligation to convene the PNC in order to amend the Covenant remained unfulfilled and insisted that the amendments had to be carried out in a clear-cut and indisputable manner.

By a 31 July note verbale [A/53/212-S/1998/716] to the Secretary-General, Morocco transmitted the final declaration of the seventeenth session of the Al-Quds "Jerusalem" Committee (Casablanca, 29-30 July), which stated that Israel was attempting to Judaize Jerusalem by carrying out unilateral acts aimed at altering the demographic and geographic status of the city, such as the expansion of the boundaries of Jerusalem's municipality. The Committee reaffirmed its solidarity with the PLO in its struggle to end the Israeli occupation and, among other things, to re-establish the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and to statehood with Jerusalem as the capital. All legislative and settlement-related steps and measures that were designed to alter the legal status of the city were null and void and inconsistent with the decisions of international legitimacy, the declaration affirmed.

The Committee, among other things, called on the Security Council to ensure the implementation of its resolutions on the protection of the status of Jerusalem and to revive the International Supervision and Control Committee entrusted with preventing settlement activities in the city and in other Palestinian and Arab territories in accordance with resolution 446(1979) [YUN 1979, p.400]; urged those Islamic countries that had normalized relations with Israel in the context of the peace process to reconsider such relations; and requested all countries to refrain from moving their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem, which Israel considered as its capital. The Committee welcomed the invitation extended by the Swiss Government to hold, before the end of the year, a meeting of the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention in order to take the necessary measures to ensure the observance of the Convention in the Palestinian territories, including Jerusalem.

On 26 August [A/53/289-S/1998/807], Austria transmitted to the Secretary-General a statement issued by the Presidency of the EU, which expressed concern about reports that on 19 August an Israeli ministerial committee approved a plan to expand settlements in the Golan Heights. Under the plan, 2,300 new housing units and 2,500 holiday units were to be built. The plan, if implemented, would represent a significant setback to the efforts to resume the Israeli-Syrian negotiations and would raise questions about Israel's commitment to the peace process. The EU urged Israel not to implement the new settlement plan in the Golan Heights and reiterated its position that settlements in the occupied territories were illegal and in contravention of international law.

By a 27 August letter [A/52/1025-S/1998/816] to the Secretary-General, the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that the Israeli municipality of Jerusalem had given final approval to build a new settlement in the Ras al-Amud neighbourhood of occupied East Jerusalem, which was inhabited by 11,000 Palestinians. The Permanent Observer called on the Security Council to bring an end to Israel's violations.

By an 8 October letter [A/53/475-S/1998/932], the Permanent Observer informed the Secretary-General that on 7 October Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu had announced further construction of settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, as well as the transformation of the settlement "Ariel" in the West Bank into a city, a step tantamount to a de facto annexation. In addition, in the city of Al-Khalil (Hebron), a cornerstone had been laid by the Israeli authorities for future construction of a settlement in Tel Rumeida. Those acts came at a time of increased tension and conflict in the city; during clashes in Al-Khalil, Israeli soldiers killed one Palestinian and injured 20 others.

On 20 October [A/53/532-S/1998/984], Israel informed the Secretary-General that on the previous day Palestinian terrorists had hurled two fragmentation grenades at a crowd of passengers in Beersheba's central bus station, injuring over 64 individuals. The attack, said Israel, had been timed to coincide with the Israeli-Palestinian Wye River summit meeting, taking place in the United States, in order to undermine its success.

On 30 October [A/53/561-S/1998/1021], Israel forwarded a letter by its Foreign Minister to the Secretary-General, which detailed the contents of the Wye River Memorandum.

Israel had undertaken, among other things, a number of commitments as a result of the negotiations: the transfer of land in Judea and Samaria (West Bank), which would result in the PA's controlling 40 per cent of the territory in those two areas, and exercising its jurisdiction over 98 per cent of the Palestinian inhabitants; the release of Palestinian prisoners incarcerated in Israel, before the expiration of their sentences; the conclusion of a protocol on the opening of the international airport in Gaza; agreement on arrangements to permit the opening of the Gaza Industrial Estate (at Kami); and agreement to renew negotiations on the "safe passage" of goods and people between Gaza and the West Bank, with the intention of concluding an agreement within a week of the Wye River Memorandum's entering into force.

Israel's commitments were conditional upon the Palestinian side's abiding by its obligations. They included: zero tolerance for terror and violence and the implementation of a work plan to ensure the systematic and effective combat of terrorist organizations and their infrastructures; the criminalization of unlicensed weapons, and their collection and appropriate handling; a reduction in the numbers of Palestinian police; the annulment of the Palestinian National Covenant by the convening of the PNC, as well as the representatives of other Palestinian organizations; and an end to incitement to violence in the Palestinian media, to be monitored by a United States-Israel-Palestinian committee.

Israel said that the Memorandum had to be utilized to reinvigorate the peace process. To that end, it anticipated the reconvening of bilateral negotiations between Israel and Syria and Israel and Lebanon; the strengthening of "people-to-people" programmes in order to engender grassroots support for the peace process and encourage reconciliation; an end to the denigration of Israel in international forums; and the full reconvening of the multilateral track.

Israel expressed the hope that, following the Memorandum, the General Assembly would not put forth resolutions that prejudged the outcome of the final status negotiations, including the issue of statehood. Israel also expressed the view that outdated resolutions readopted by the Assembly year after year, which no longer reflected current realities and achievements, should be finally removed from the annual agenda. In that context, the Israeli Foreign Minister stated that Israel's exclusion from any regional grouping in the UN system had deprived it of its right to be a full participant in all UN bodies. As Israel was prevented from joining its natural regional group in Asia, owing to the objection of certain Member States, it was seeking a way of gaining membership, at least temporarily, in another group.

On 6 November [A/53/646-S/1998/1044], Israel notified the Secretary-General that on that day a car laden with explosives detonated on Jaffa Street in downtown Jerusalem. Two individuals, apparently the terrorists, were killed in the blast, and about two dozen passers-by were injured. The attack followed in the wake of other Palestinian terrorist attacks against Israel, which were perpetrated by individuals who came from territories under the control of the PA, asserted Israel. Under the Wye River Memorandum, the Palestinian side had pledged to do everything in its power to prevent such acts. The ongoing implementation of the Memorandum was conditional upon Palestinian fulfilment of their agreed-upon security responsibilities.

By a 13 November letter [A/53/671-S/1998/1075], the Permanent Observer of Palestine informed the Secretary-General that Israel had decided to invite tenders for the construction of housing units in a new settlement to be established in Jebel Abu Ghneim in the West Bank to the south of occupied East Jerusalem. Israel had also decided to pave 13 new so-called bypass roads in the West Bank to service the Jewish settlements, which would require additional confiscation of land. Those decisions violated, among other agreements, the Wye River Memorandum. The Permanent Observer called for the resumption of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly.

On 19 November [A/53/686-S/1998/1101], Israel informed the Secretary-General that the use of anti-Semitism had not stopped in official Palestinian media since the Wye River Memorandum. In addition, the PLO leadership had violated the fundamental principles of the Memorandum and the Oslo agreements by incitement to violence.

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. In its thirtieth report [A/53/661], the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Special Committee on Israeli Practices) stated that, according to information received by it, 194 Jewish settlements had been established in occupied Palestinian territory, 67 of which had been expanded or built since the signature of the Oslo agreements. The Special Committee was told that the new settlements were built and the existing ones expanded not only for social but also for political and strategic purposes, believed to be aimed at isolating Palestinian towns and villages. The construction of settlements had given rise to the displacement of the population inhabiting the area, and it had resulted in acts of violence between Palestinians and Israeli settlers. In addition, Israeli authorities had allowed the establishment of armed settler militias to patrol the areas around settlements and bypass roads.

The Special Committee welcomed the resumption of dialogue in the peace process through the signing of the Wye River Memorandum. Nevertheless, in a later report [A/54/325], it noted that Israeli settlement activity accelerated markedly after signature of the Memorandum.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/53/598], adopted resolution 53/55 by recorded vote (150-3-2) [agenda item 84].

Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session, as well as relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980 and 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Aware of the Middle East peace process started at Madrid and the agreements reached between the parties, in particular the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip of 28 September 1995,

Expressing grave concern about the decision of the Government of Israel to resume settlement activities, including the construction of the new settlement in Jebel Abu Ghneim, in violation of international humanitarian law, relevant United Nations resolutions and the agreements reached between the parties,

Gravely concerned in particular about the dangerous situation resulting from actions taken by the illegal armed Israeli settlers in the occupied territory, as illustrated by the massacre of Palestinian worshippers by an illegal Israeli settler in Al-Khalil on 25 February 1994,

1. Reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to peace and economic and social development;

2. Calls upon Israel to accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan and to abide scrupulously by the provisions of the Convention, in particular article 49;

3. Demands complete cessation of the construction of the new settlement in Jebel Abu Ghneim and of all Israeli settlement activities in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan;

4. Stresses the need for full implementation of Security Council resolution 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, in which, among other things, the Council called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to continue to take and implement measures, including, inter alia, confiscation of arms, with the aim of preventing illegal acts of violence by Israeli settlers, and called for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians in the occupied territory;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Communication (December). On 22 December [A/53/772-S/1998/1222], the United Arab Emirates transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the final communique and Abu Dhabi declaration adopted at the nineteenth session of the Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council (Abu Dhabi, 7-9 December), which the Secretary-General had attended. With regard to developments in the Middle East peace process, the Supreme Council welcomed the Wye River Memorandum and called on Israel to honour its obligation to implement it. The Council also expressed condemnation of the settlement policy pursued by Israel in the occupied Arab territories and of Israel's decision to expand Jerusalem's geographical boundaries, and demanded an end to such activities.

The Supreme Council urged the United States, the Russian Federation and the EU to continue their efforts to put the peace process back on track and to insist on the need for negotiations to be resumed on the Syrian track from the point at which they broke off, as well as on the Lebanese track.

Jerusalem

The issue of Jerusalem continued to be a focal point of concern for the United Nations in 1998. East Jerusalem, where most of the city's Arab inhabitants lived, was one of the most sensitive issues in the Middle East peace process, and Israel's June decision to extend Jerusalem's municipal boundaries, thereby creating a greater Jewish majority in the city, was a contributing factor in the resumption of the General Assembly's tenth emergency special session (see above).

Communication. By a 3 March letter [A/52/812-S/1998/188] to the Secretary-General, the Syrian Arab Republic, in its capacity as Chairman of the Group of Arab States for the month, transmitted a note verbale stating that Israel was holding several events in Jerusalem as part of its fiftieth anniversary celebrations under the pretext of Jerusalem being the capital of Israel. Those events, it said, constituted a violation of a number of Security Council resolutions and were aimed at pre-determining the status of the city.

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. In its annual report [A/53/661], the Special Committee on Israeli Practices described restrictions imposed by the Israeli authorities on Jerusalem's Palestinian population and Israeli violation of their human rights.

The confiscation of Palestinian-owned land in the heart of the Old City exclusively inhabited by Arabs greatly contributed to the housing shortage in East Jerusalem. Since the occupation of Jerusalem in 1967, 34 per cent of East Jerusalem had been completely annexed while 52 per cent had been designated as a "green zone", where building was not allowed. However, that designation had on occasion been removed to allow for building by Jewish inhabitants. The demolition of houses in Jerusalem had intensified, with more than 150 Arab-owned houses demolished in 1997. According to testimony received by the Special Committee, the confiscation of Arab-owned houses in the Old City was done through falsified documents, which had been proved as such in Israeli courts. Only 5 per cent of the cases filed with courts by legal Arab house owners had been successful since 1967. The situation was compounded by the fact that members of the Palestinian Bar were not allowed to speak and appear in Israeli courts.

The situation relating to identity cards for the Arab inhabitants of Jerusalem was particularly serious. The municipal boundaries of Jerusalem were being redrawn by the Israeli authorities to exclude neighbourhoods inhabited by Arabs, which entailed automatic loss of a Jerusalem identity card and residency rights, thus further reducing the number of Palestinians in the city. It was estimated that the redrawing of the boundaries had already placed some 60,000 to 80,000 Palestinian Jerusalemites outside the city limits. In addition, Palestinian inhabitants risked losing their identity cards if they lived outside Jerusalem for five years, while the residence permits of some Arab Jerusalemites had been withdrawn after only one year of absence. Those measures were in keeping with the policy of the Israeli authorities to maintain a Jewish majority in the city.

The Special Committee was told that Israel was trying to suppress the national identity of Palestinians in Jerusalem through education and a system of administrative and legal changes. An example of an administrative attempt to create new territorial and demographic conditions was the 21 June decision of the Israeli authorities to extend Jerusalem's municipal boundaries, thereby creating a greater Jewish majority in the city by including settlements on occupied Palestinian territory in the West Bank (see above).

The situation in Jerusalem was also described by witnesses as moving from a territorial to a religious dispute, which was conducive to a consolidation of the Arab-Israeli conflict, with the Israeli Government providing the context through settlers. The Special Committee received information that Israeli policemen and border guards had, among other things, restricted the access of worshippers to the Al-Aqsa Mosque in East Jerusalem on Fridays, while often denying access on ordinary days.

Over the preceding four or five years, many tribunals for Palestinians in Jerusalem had been closed and other techniques of pressure had been used with a view to breaking down institutions and causing a gradual movement of the Arab population out of the city. In addition, heavy taxation, the sealing of shops, the confiscation of goods on account of non-payment of taxes and lack of trade had led to a paralysis of the social and economic system of East Jerusalem and, consequently, to the development of a general sense of hopelessness and despair among the Palestinian inhabitants of the city.

Transfer of diplomatic missions

Report of Secretary-General. On 3 November [A/53/550], the Secretary-General reported that 10 Member States had replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 52/53 [YUN 1997, p. 416], which addressed the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980) [YUN 1980, p. 426] and called on them to abide by the relevant UN resolutions.

Committee on Palestinian Rights. In its annual report [A/53/35], the Committee on Palestinian Rights said that it was particularly concerned about settlement activities in and around Jerusalem, where Palestinian residency rights were under increasing threat. In June, an extremist settler group took over four housing units and a plot of land in the Silwan neighbourhood. At the end of August, the Israeli authorities gave final approval for the construction of 132 units in the Ras al-Amud neighbourhood of the city. On Jebel Abu Ghneim, the infrastructure stage of construction of the "Har Homa" settlement had been completed and the Government had declared that building was soon to begin. Following Israel's decision to further expand the boundaries of Jerusalem and create an umbrella municipality that would include a number of settlements in the West Bank, the Security Council met on 30 June to consider the situation in the occupied Arab territories (see above) and the Chairman of the Committee had participated.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/37 [draft: A/53/L.52 & Add.1] by recorded vote (149-1-7) [agenda item 40].

Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/120 E of 10 December 1981, 37/123 C of 16 December 1982, 38/180 C of 19 December 1983, 39/146 C of 14 December 1984, 40/168 C of 16 December 1985, 41/162 C of 4 December 1986, 42/209 D of 11 December 1987, 43/54 C of 6 December 1988, 44/40 C of 4 December 1989, 45/83 C of 13 December 1990, 46/82 B of 16 December 1991, 47/63 B of 11 December 1992, 48/59 A of 14 December 1993, 49/87 A of 16 December 1994, 50/22 A of 4 December 1995, 51/27 of 4 December 1996 and 52/53 of 9 December 1997, in which it determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which have altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called "Basic Law" on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the "Basic Law" and called upon those States which had established diplomatic missions at Jerusalem to withdraw such missions from the Holy City,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Determines that the decision of Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem is illegal and therefore null and void and has no validity whatsoever;

2. Deplores the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980) and their refusal to comply with the provisions of that resolution;

3. Calls once more upon those States to abide by the provisions of the relevant United Nations resolutions, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Economic and social situation

A report [A/53/163-E/1998/79] on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of Palestinians in the occupied territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan was prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1997/67 [YUN 1997, p. 417] and General Assembly resolution 52/207 [ibid., p. 418]; it covered the period from June 1997 to May 1998.

Reviewing Israel's settlements policy, the report noted that there had been an explosion in building construction throughout the occupied territories during the second half of 1997.

The unemployment situation among Palestinians in the occupied territories remained critical, in particular owing to border closures and increased reliance of Israel on expatriate workers from outside the region. The average number of Palestinian workers in Israel dropped from 120,000 on a monthly basis in 1992 to some 25,000 in 1996. In 1997, gross domestic product was estimated to have grown by 1.2 per cent, down from 5.5 per cent in 1996, according to the PA and the International Monetary Fund, while population growth was estimated at 4.5 per cent.

While incentives and investment continued to promote the Israeli civilian presence in the Syrian Golan, the Arab population faced further deterioration in their living conditions owing to Israeli settlements, restrictions on employment opportunities and education, as well as prohibitive levels of taxation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/239, took note of the ESCWA report. On the same date, the Council adopted resolution 1998/32 [draft: E/1998/L.26] by recorded vote (44-1) [agenda item 11].

Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan

Recalling General Assembly resolution 52/207 of 18 December 1997,

Recalling also its resolution 1997/67 of 25 July 1997,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in

Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Stressing the importance of the revival of the Middle East peace process on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 and 425(1978) of 19 March 1978, and the principle of land for peace, as well as the full and timely implementation of the agreements reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Convinced that the Israeli occupation impedes efforts to achieve sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan,

Gravely concerned about the deterioration of economic and living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan, and the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of their natural resources,

Aware of the important work being done by the United Nations and the specialized agencies in support of the economic and social development of the Palestinian people,

Conscious of the urgent need for the development of the economic and social infrastructure of the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and for the improvement of the living conditions of the Palestinian people as a key element of a lasting peace and stability,

1. Stresses the need to preserve the territorial integrity of all of the occupied Palestinian territory and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods in the territory, including the removal of restrictions on going into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

2. Also stresses the vital importance of the operation and construction of the Gaza airport, the seaport in Gaza and safe passage to the economic and social development of the Palestinian people;

3. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to cease its measures against the Palestinian people, in particular the closure of the occupied Palestinian territory, the enforced isolation of Palestinian towns, the destruction of homes and the isolation of Jerusalem;

4. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the Palestinian people and the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan to all their natural and economic resources, and calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, endanger or cause loss or depletion of these resources;

5. Also reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan, are illegal and an obstacle to economic and social development;

6. Stresses the importance of the work of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations, and of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories under the auspices of the Secretary-General;

7. Urges Member States to encourage private foreign investment in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, in infrastructure, job-creation projects and social development, in order to alleviate the hardship of the Palestinian people and improve living conditions;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include, in the report of the Special Coordinator, an update on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in collaboration with relevant United Nations agencies;

9. Decides to include the item entitled "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan" in the agenda of its substantive session of 1999.

Other aspects

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. On 11 November, the three-member Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, established in 1968 [YUN 1968, p. 556], reported for the thirtieth time to the General Assembly on events in the territories it considered to be occupied—the Golan Heights, the West Bank, including Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip.

In addition to that annual report [A/53/661], the Special Committee, at the request of the Assembly, submitted two periodic reports in 1998, one in June [A/53/136], covering the period from 30 August to 31 December 1997, and the other in November [A/53/136/Add.1], covering the period from 1 January to 31 May 1998. The three reports contained information obtained from the Arab and Israeli press; testimony from persons from the occupied territories given at hearings held in Amman, Jordan, Cairo, Egypt, and Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic; and communications and reports from Governments, organizations and individuals. The Committee had benefited from the cooperation of Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Palestinian representatives, UN offices in the field and UN information centres. As in the past, the Committee received no response from Israel to its requests for cooperation and was unable to obtain access to the occupied territories, which had been the case since 1968.

The Special Committee observed that the Israeli authorities had put in place a comprehensive and elaborate system of laws and regulations and administrative measures which affected all aspects of the lives of the Palestinian and Syrian peoples in the occupied territories. They were designed to meet the policy objectives of the Israeli Government and to enhance its control over the territories and their population.

The evidence received by the Committee showed that restrictions with respect to land, housing and water severely affected the Palestinians' quality of life in the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and East Jerusalem. The expropriation of Palestinian-owned land continued during the period under review. The land confiscated (more than 74 per cent of the land in the West Bank and some 40 per cent of land in the Gaza Strip) was used for the building of new Israeli settlements, the expansion of existing ones, for stone quarries and for the construction of bypass roads, which were used only by settlers and linked settlements to each other while bypassing towns and villages inhabited by Palestinians.

Israeli officials had taken various kinds of actions regarding housing. According to witnesses, Israel had made maps that did not allow for more building or expansion of Palestinian housing in so-called "green areas", on paths leading to set-dements or near bypass roads. At the same time, the Israeli human rights organization Betzelem reported that the rate of house demolition had risen 75 per cent over the past three years and that 1.16 houses were demolished every day in the occupied territories.

Israel continued to control the principal water sources supplying Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. It was estimated that the 3,000 to 4,000 settlers living in Gaza used 75 per cent of the available groundwater while the approximately 1 million Palestinians used less than 25 per cent. For the past five years, the majority of Palestinians' homes had often been without water in the summer.

Restrictions relating to the freedom of movement in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and East Jerusalem were administered by way of passports, identity cards, travel permits and closures. The Special Committee was informed that there had been fewer closures of the occupied territories which could be described as "dramatic" but that, in general, the Palestinian population did not feel that any significant improvements had taken place. The Gaza Strip, which was described by witnesses as an open prison, was divided into three main areas—northern, central and southern—despite the fact that the peace accords had stipulated that there should be freedom of movement for Palestinians in Gaza. During absolute closures, Gaza was completely isolated from Israel, the West Bank and Egypt. In addition, closures had adverse economic effects in the West Bank on farmers who were denied access to their fields for hours or days at a time.

The implementation of restrictions took place in the following ways: delays and difficulties in granting authorization; checkpoints; interrogation procedures; administrative detention and conditions of detention; imprisonment and conditions of imprisonment; the use of force; the proposed law absolving persons of liability to compensate; aspects of the administration of justice, including military courts; and the lack of access to legal representation and intelligence files.

The policy pursued by the Israeli authorities that limited the number of workers from the occupied territories who were allowed to work in Israel was seen as one of the principal factors for the bad economic and social situation in those areas, in particular the Gaza Strip. According to Palestinian sources, the unemployment rate was 63 per cent in Gaza and 46 per cent in the West Bank, while the poverty rate was 36 per cent and 10.5 per cent, respectively. The Special Committee was told by witnesses that there were no employment opportunities in Gaza. The borders were closed and all goods going in and out of the Strip had to transit through Israel. Some families were unable to send children to school as they could not afford clothes for them and some inhabitants could not afford even the cheapest medical treatment. The Committee was alerted also to the emergence of malnourishment of children in the Gaza Strip, which was said never to have occurred before.

Three decades of Israeli occupation and the prevailing disastrous economic situation had seriously affected the children of the occupied Palestinian territories. More than 50 per cent of the Palestinian population was under 15 years of age. During 1997 and the first half of 1998, 17 children were killed by the Israeli army and settlers, while others (some 425 in 1997) were injured by landmines and unexploded ordnance, tear gas, rubber-coated and live bullets, stabbing and beatings by soldiers and settlers. Children between the ages of 14 and 16 years had been placed in administrative detention as political prisoners where they had been subjected to the same treatment as adult prisoners. Soldiers and settlers had carried out 35 raids on schools, especially in the Hebron area.

In the Gaza Strip, 49 per cent of the inhabitants were below 18 years of age. Approximately 21 per cent of Palestinian children in Gaza suffered from anxiety disorders resulting from the unemployment of parents and overcrowding in refugee camps. Child labour in the 12- to 16- year age group had gone from 22 to 44 per cent since 1995 due to the serious economic situation. More than 15 per cent of children in the Gaza Strip were underweight for their age, while 25 per cent suffered from malnutrition.

The Special Committee also visited the Syrian Arab Republic and reported on the Israeli occupied Syrian Golan Heights (for details see below, under "Peacekeeping operations").

The Special Committee reaffirmed the recommendations made in its reports of past years and called on the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in consultation with the Secretary-General, to establish a system of continuous communication with the Israeli authorities with a view to improving the difficult circumstances under which the Palestinian and Syrian peoples of the occupied territories lived.

In a later report [A/54/73], the Committee presented updated information on the human rights situation in the occupied territories at the end of 1998, providing details on restrictions relating to land, housing and water, as well as those affecting the movement of Palestinians within and between the occupied territories; the manner of implementation of restrictions and their economic, social and cultural effects on the Palestinian population. Also included was information on the occupied Syrian Golan.

Report of Secretary-General. On 18 August [A/53/264], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that Israel had not replied to his May request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 52/67 [YUN 1997, p. 422] demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all practices and actions which violated the human rights of the Palestinian people and accelerate the release of all remaining Palestinians arbitrarily detained or imprisoned.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], following consideration of the Special Committee's annual and periodic reports and four reports of the Secretary-General on specific aspects of the situation in the occupied territories [A/53/259, A/53/260, A/53/264, A/53/660], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/598], adopted resolution 53/56 by recorded vote (151-2-4) [agenda item 84].

Recalling its relevant resolutions,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Having considered the reports of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Palestinian women

In a January report [E/CN.6/1998/2/Add.2] to the Commission on the Status of Women, the Secretary-General, in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1997/16 [YUN 1997, p. 426], reviewed the situation of Palestinian women and described assistance provided by UN organizations in 1997. He stated that the situation of Palestinian women living in the Palestinian self-rule areas and in the occupied territories had not improved and that daily life in those areas continued to be affected by the imposition of security-related measures by the Israeli authorities, which had a detrimental impact on the economic and social situation. As in the past, Palestinian women were experiencing the gender-specific impact of those measures, which was reinforced by existing inequalities in society between women and men.

The deterioration of the economic situation, aggravated by Israel's policy of border closure, had a negative impact on women. Economic pressure was also contributing to the erosion of the social fabric, resulting in delayed marriages and an increase in the divorce rate.

The closure affected the health conditions of the Palestinian population, especially in Gaza. Patients needing specialized treatment available only in Israeli hospitals frequently did not receive entry permits. Women's reproductive health was of particular concern. At least seven pregnant women were believed to have died for want of ready access to better-equipped medical facilities.

In the Palestinian self-rule areas and occupied territories, progress had been reported with regard to the elimination of some discriminatory laws and practices. The draft Palestinian constitution emphasized the principle of equality between men and women. Women could obtain a passport without written consent of so-called guardians, widows could obtain passports for their children without the permission of a brother or father, women could take driving lessons without a male chaperone and married students were no longer dismissed from school. The action plan to implement the Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170], entitled "Strategies for a Post-Beijing Palestinian Governmental Plan of Action Through the Year 2000", was prepared under the leadership of an Intergovernmental Coordinating Committee, which included representatives of the various ministries, the Directorate for Women's Development and a committee of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), jointly with the EU, launched a "Post-Beijing Follow-up Operation" in the occupied territories and Palestinian self-rule areas, as well as in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yemen.

Information provided by the UN system showed that an increasing number of agencies and programmes paid attention to gender aspects in development and continued to provide support to Palestinian women, in particular in the field of conference follow-up, income generation, health, education and training.

UNIFEM was supporting the effective implementation of the Palestinian action plan, its translation into national projects, and the establishment of institutional and human capacities within women's committees and NGOs at the national and regional levels. Furthermore, UNIFEM launched a women in development facilitation initiative to better coordinate and exchange information on projects for women as carried out by donors, the PA and NGOs. It included the establishment of a database of institutions and workshops on the use of the Internet. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) was providing support to established women's departments in a number of PA ministries.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), despite a serious funding crisis, continued to assist disadvantaged refugees, especially women, to raise their economic status through skills training, production units, group savings and credit provision. Women were particularly interested in utilizing group savings and loan schemes for home improvement and income generation.

Other organizations within the UN system that provided assistance to Palestinian women included the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the International Labour Organization (ILO), ESCWA, the International Trade Centre (ITC), the World Bank, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the World Food Programme (WFP), the World Health Organization (WHO), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Within the UN Secretariat, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Department of Political Affairs organized a round table on promoting equality and the full participation of women in society as part of the UN Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People (Amman, 20-22 May 1997).

The Secretary-General observed that, in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1169], the international community, including the United Nations, had provided assistance at various levels to implement the recommendations contained in the Platform for Action, to prepare a Palestinian strategy of action, to collect data disaggregated by sex, and to establish women-specific projects, especially in the field of income generation. Further efforts and assistance were needed to implement the policies on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the UN system.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 July [meeting 44], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/1998/27 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 1998/10 by recorded vote (40-1-2) [agenda item 14 (a)].

Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General concerning the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Recalling also its resolution 1997/16 of 21 July 1997 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Concerned about the stalemate facing the Middle East peace process, including the lack of implementation of the agreements reached in Washington, D.C., between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel, and the deterioration of the socio-economic conditions of the Palestinian people as a result of the Israeli positions and measures,

Concerned also about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Stresses its support for the Middle East peace process and the need for speedy and full implementation of the agreements already reached between the parties;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907 and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties in the occupied Palestinian territory, in compliance with relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Urges Member States, financial organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and other relevant institutions to intensify their efforts to provide financial and technical assistance to Palestinian women for the creation of projects responding to their needs, especially during the transitional period;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, and the Platform for Action of the Fourth World Conference on Women;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-third session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1998/10:

In favour: Algeria, Argentina, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Cuba, Czech Republic, Djibouti, El Salvador, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Guyana, India, Italy, Japan, Lesotho, Mauritius, Mexico, Mozambique, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Oman, Pakistan, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Turkey, United Kingdom, Viet Nam.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Colombia, Iceland.

Speaking before the vote, the United States said that parts of the draft resolution were unacceptable because they addressed the status of issues that the parties had agreed would be the subject of direct negotiations in the Middle East peace process. Other language was one-sided, lacked objectivity and would not advance the status or well-being of women in society.

Issues related to Palestine

General aspects

The General Assembly continued to consider the question of Palestine in 1998. Having discussed the annual report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) [A/53/35], the Assembly adopted four resolutions, reaffirming, among other things, the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question—the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict—and stressing the need for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians, primarily the right to self-determination, for Israeli withdrawal from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees. The Assembly considered and adopted a draft resolution on the participation of Palestine in the work of the United Nations, conferring upon Palestine additional rights and privileges.

At the request of the Committee, the Assembly also adopted a resolution welcoming the celebration in Bethlehem in the year 2000 of the birth of Jesus Christ and the beginning of the third millennium.

In commemoration of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, celebrated annually on 29 November in accordance with Assembly resolution 32/40 B [YUN 1977, p. 304], the Committee, on 30 November, held a solemn meeting and other activities. Under the Committee's auspices, an exhibit entitled "Bethlehem 2000" was presented by the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine.

Report of Secretary-General. In a November report on the question of Palestine [A/53/652-S/1998/1050], the Secretary-General made observations on the Middle East peace process (see above, under "Peace process").

By a 31 August note verbale, the Secretary-General sought the positions of the Governments of Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, as well as the PLO, regarding steps taken by them to implement the relevant provisions of resolution 52/52 [YUN 1997, p. 428]. As at 30 October, only the PLO had responded. The PLO stated that, since the adoption of the resolution, the deadlock in the peace process had continued, owing to Israel's policies and actions; no progress had been made in regard to the implementation of the agreements reached and the economic and living conditions of the Palestinians had deteriorated. The Israeli Government had continued its colonial settlement activities in the occupied territories in order to change the status and demographic composition of Jerusalem. The tunnel it had opened in the vicinity of Al-Aqsa Mosque in occupied East Jerusalem had not been closed, in flagrant violation of Security Council resolution 1073(1996) [YUN 1996, p. 384].

The Palestinian side welcomed the fact that the United Nations played an expanded role in the peace process and in the implementation of the 1993 Declaration of Principles [YUN 1993, p. 521], especially in providing economic, social and other assistance to the Palestinian people. It hoped that the Organization would contribute to the efforts being made to salvage the peace process and to bring it back on track, as the Security Council had done by responding to some serious events in the occupied Palestinian territory on more than one occasion.

For a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question to be achieved within the framework of the current peace process, it was necessary to respect the mutual recognition between the two sides and the basis on which the process was initiated, namely, the principle of the return of land for peace and the implementation of Council resolutions 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257] and 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213]. All actions violating those agreements, international law and relevant Council resolutions had to cease completely; the international community, especially the co-sponsors of the peace process, had a great responsibility in that regard, the PLO stressed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/42 [draft: A/53/L.51 & Add.1] by recorded vote (154-2-3) [agenda item 39].

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973,

Aware that 1997 marked fifty years since the adoption of resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 52/52 of 9 December 1997,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Affirming also the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the signing by the two parties of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993, as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995,

Recalling also the withdrawal of the Israeli army, which took place in the Gaza Strip and the Jericho area in 1995 in accordance with the agreements reached by the parties, and the initiation of the Palestinian Authority in those areas, as well as the beginning of the redeployment of the Israeli army in the rest of the West Bank in 1996,

Noting with satisfaction the successful holding of the first Palestinian general elections,

Noting with appreciation the work of the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories and its positive contribution,

Welcoming the convening of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, as well as all follow-up meetings and the international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Concerned about the serious difficulties facing the Middle East peace process, and expressing the hope that the Wye River Memorandum, signed in Washington, D.C., on 23 October 1998, will be fully implemented towards full compliance with the existing agreements,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects;

2. Expresses its full support for the ongoing peace process which began in Madrid and the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993, as well as the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip of 1995, and expresses the hope that the process will lead to the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East;

3. Stresses the necessity for commitment to the principle of land for peace and the implementation of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973), which form the basis of the Middle East peace process, and the need for the immediate and scrupulous implementation of the agreements reached between the parties, including the redeployment of the Israeli forces from the West Bank and the commencement of the negotiations on the final settlement;

4. Calls upon the concerned parties, the co-sponsors of the peace process and other interested parties, as well as the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts and initiatives to bring the peace process back on track and to ensure its continuity and success;

5. Stresses the need for:

(a) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination;

(b) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

6. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948;

7. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic and technical assistance to the Palestinian people during this critical period;

8. Emphasizes the importance for the United Nations to play a more active and expanded role in the current peace process and in the implementation of the Declaration of Principles;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, for the promotion of peace in the region and to submit progress reports on developments in this matter.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 53/42:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Cote d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Marshall Islands, Nicaragua, Uzbekistan.

Speaking before the vote, the United States said the text injected the Assembly into questions that were the subject of direct negotiations. The United States wanted to support that process rather than focus on issues that divided or polarized.

Israel stated that the draft resolution was an attempt to impose a particular solution that was in keeping with the interests of one party and against the interests of the other, in violation of the agreements already reached between the sides.

Speaking after the vote, the Syrian Arab Republic explained that its vote in favour did not mean that it either supported or opposed the 1993 Declaration of Principles referred to in the text. Syria stated that complete Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab territories and the establishment of a just and comprehensive peace, in accordance with the principles and mandate of the Madrid conference [YUN 1991, p. 221] and the principle of land for peace, was the only way to enable the people of the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized boundaries.

Participation of Palestine in UN work

In July, at the request of the Sudan, as Chairman of the Arab Group for June [A/52/953], the General Assembly considered a draft resolution on participation of Palestine in the work of the United Nations. By the draft, the Assembly would confer on Palestine additional rights and privileges.

The proposal had already been debated in December 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 429] but was not put to the vote.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 July [meeting 89], the General Assembly adopted resolution 52/250 [draff. A/52/L.53/Rev.2 & Add.1] by recorded vote (124-4-10) [agenda item 36].

Participation of Palestine in the work of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, in which, inter alia, it recommended the partition of Palestine into a Jewish State and an Arab State, with Jerusalem as a corpus separatum,

Recalling also its resolution 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974, by which it granted observer status to the Palestine Liberation Organization,

Recalling further its resolution 43/160 A of 9 December 1988, adopted under the item entitled "Observer status of national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity and/or by the League of Arab States", in which it decided that the Palestine Liberation Organization was entitled to have its communications issued and circulated as official documents of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 43/177 of 15 December 1988, in which it acknowledged the proclamation of the State of Palestine by the Palestine National Council on 15 November 1988 and decided that the designation "Palestine" should be used in place of the designation "Palestine Liberation Organization" in the United Nations system,

Recalling also its resolutions 49/12 A of 9 November 1994 and 49/12 B of 24 May 1995, through which, inter alia, arrangements for the special commemorative meeting of the General Assembly on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations, in addition to applying to all Member and observer States, were also applied to Palestine, in its capacity as observer, including in the organizing process of the list of speakers for the commemorative meeting,

Recalling further that Palestine enjoys full membership in the Group of Asian States and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia,

Aware that Palestine is a full member of the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, and the Group of 77 and China,

Aware also that general democratic Palestinian elections were held on 20 January 1996 and that the Palestinian Authority was established on part of the occupied Palestinian territory,

Desirous of contributing to the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, thus attaining a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East,

1. Decides to confer upon Palestine, in its capacity as observer, and as contained in the annex to the present resolution, additional rights and privileges of participation in the sessions and work of the General Assembly and the international conferences convened under the auspices of the Assembly or other organs of the United Nations, as well as in United Nations conferences;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to inform the General Assembly, within the current session, about the implementation of the modalities annexed to the present resolution.

ANNEX

The additional rights and privileges of participation of Palestine shall be effected through the following modalities, without prejudice to the existing rights and privileges:

1. The right to participate in the general debate of the General Assembly;

2. Without prejudice to the priority of Member States, Palestine shall have the right of inscription on the list of speakers under agenda items other than Palestinian and Middle East issues at any plenary meeting of the General Assembly, after the last Member State inscribed on the list of that meeting;

3. The right of reply;

4. The right to raise points of order related to the proceedings on Palestinian and Middle East issues, provided that the right to raise such a point of order shall not include the right to challenge the decision of the presiding officer;

5. The right to co-sponsor draft resolutions and decisions on Palestinian and Middle East issues. Such draft resolutions and decisions shall be put to a vote only upon request from a Member State;

6. The right to make interventions, with a precursory explanation or the recall of relevant General Assembly resolutions being made only once by the President of the General Assembly at the start of each session of the Assembly;

7. Seating for Palestine shall be arranged immediately after non-member States and before the other observers, and with the allocation of six seats in the General Assembly Hall;

8. Palestine shall not have the right to vote or to put forward candidates.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 52/250:

In favour Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Cote d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Estonia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, United States.

Abstaining: Bulgaria, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Honduras, Liberia, Malawi, Paraguay, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, Zambia.

Before the vote, the United States stated that if the draft resolution was adopted, it would undermine efforts to get the peace process back on track and would hurt everyone's interests, including those it was most intended to help. Moreover, its adoption would also set a precedent. By overturning decades of Assembly practice and precedent governing the participation of non-members and observers, others who did not enjoy full member status in the United Nations could press their own claims for enhanced status.

According to Israel, the draft resolution misrepresented previous UN resolutions, attempted to affect the outcome of the permanent status negotiations over the West Bank and Gaza Strip, contradicted the bilateral basis of the Arab-Israeli peace process begun in Madrid in 1991 and violated the principles of the Oslo agreements.

Speaking after the vote, the Observer of Palestine expressed his gratitude to all those States that had sponsored the resolution since December 1997 and to those UN Members that supported it. He hoped that the United Nations would accept Palestine as a Member State in the near future.

Note of Secretary-General. In August [A/52/1002 & Corr.1], pursuant to resolution 52/250, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly about the implementation of the modalities contained in the resolution's annex.

Committee on Palestinian Rights

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 52/49 [YUN 1997, p.433], the Committee on Palestinian Rights, established in 1975 by Assembly resolution 3376(XXX) [YUN 1975, p. 248], continued to review the situation relating to the Palestine question, reported on it and made suggestions to the Assembly or the Security Council. The Committee monitored the situation in the occupied Palestinian territory, including Jerusalem, and developments in the peace process.

In accordance with previous decisions to streamline its programme of meetings, and in the light of the need to redeploy funds towards other initiatives, the Committee decided not to hold the annual meeting of consultations with the coordinating committees of NGOs in 1998, and to review that decision in the context of its programme for 1999.

The Committee continued to follow the Palestine-related activities of intergovernmental bodies, such as the Organization of African Unity and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, and, through its Chairman, participated in a number of high-level meetings of those bodies. Through its Bureau, the Committee made efforts to involve additional Member States in its work, in particular the members of the EU.

In cooperation with the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the League of Arab States, the Committee organized the Conference in Support of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Brussels, Belgium, 24-25 February). The organizers of the Conference stated that the stalemate in the peace process was caused by setbacks and obstacles put in place by the Government of Israel and underlined the fact that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian and Arab lands, including Jerusalem, had to be brought to an end without delay. They referred to Israeli violations of the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention, its settlement policies, attempts at altering the demographic, historical and cultural character and status of Jerusalem and the imposition of an economic blockade on the Palestinian territory.

In its annual report to the Assembly [A/53/35], covering the period from 5 November 1997 to 4 November 1998, the Committee stated that the reluctance of the Israeli Government to abide by the existing agreements precluded the possibility of a constructive dialogue and the continuation of the peace process in accordance with the agreed timetable. Essential aspects of the agreements, such as further Israeli withdrawals from the West Bank, safe passage between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the Gaza airport and seaport, and the release of prisoners, remained unimplemented in the year under review. The signing of the Wye River Memorandum in October (see above) was viewed as an important breakthrough in the efforts to restart the peace process.

Noting the intensification of settlement activities, the Committee reported that the settler population in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip grew by 3.3 per cent, to a total of 169,339 in the first six months of 1998, with 163,173 settlers in the West Bank and 6,166 in the Gaza Strip. In addition, some 180,000 settlers were estimated to be living in the Jerusalem area. Since the beginning of the year, some 112 Palestinian homes had been demolished in the West Bank and 14 in East Jerusalem, resulting in the displacement of more than 440 Palestinians. As at August 1998, some 1,800 Palestinian homes were reportedly targeted for demolition and were being destroyed at a rate of about one a day.

To encourage settlement, prospective settlers were offered various incentives in the form of low-rate loans, favourable purchase prices and grants. In addition to the expansion of existing settlements, new ones had been or were being established. According to reports, they included, in June, a new settlement known as "Hadar Betar", south of Bethlehem, as well as approval for the construction of 150 new housing units in "Kiryat Arba", east of Hebron; allocation by the Knesset Finance Committee of some $24 million for the construction of 400 new units in village settlements; and approval by the Ministry of Defence of the transfer of 150 mobile homes to three existing settlements, in response to a campaign by settlers against further Israeli redeployment in the West Bank. In late July, the Civil Administration approved the construction of a new neighbourhood of 200 units in "Kiryat Arba". Further housing units, including mobile homes, were added to a number of other settlements, in particular in the area of Hebron still under occupation, where clashes between settlers and Palestinians had generated increasing tension. It was reported in August that 5,235 new units were under construction throughout the occupied territory.

The presence of settlements exacerbated an already tense situation because of the provocative actions of extremist and armed settler groups, noted the Committee. On numerous occasions, settlers had moved illegally into Palestinian areas, forcefully occupying housing or beginning the construction of new housing under Israeli police protection. Violent confrontations with Palestinian civilians had often ensued. On 11 June, the Israeli army authorized the creation of civil defence militias that operated alongside Israeli police and security forces inside settlements in the West Bank.

Another issue of concern to the Committee was the continued imprisonment of Palestinians in Israel, with a total of 3,228 detainees as at August without counting those held under administrative detention or jailed in facilities run by the Israel Defence Forces. Information reviewed by the human rights treaty bodies indicated that the Israeli authorities had continued to use psychological and physical torture against Palestinian detainees. The Committee called on Israel to respect its obligations under human rights treaties and to release the prisoners in implementation of the bilateral agreements signed to date.

The Committee observed with concern that, during the year, the Palestinian economy continued to suffer, in particular owing to the prolonged closures of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and the resulting fragmentation of the territory under the Authority, which restricted the movement of workers and goods and led to a decline in output, exports, investment and income. Economic conditions in the Gaza Strip were particularly precarious, with an unemployment rate of some 30 per cent. Overall, the gross national product per capita had declined by at least 20 per cent since 1993.

The Committee reported that water shortages in the occupied Palestinian territory were seriously harming Palestinian agriculture. Increasing industrial pollution, including groundwater pollution resulting from Israeli industrial activity in the occupied territory, had emerged as an issue for concern.

The Committee was encouraged by the international community's continued efforts to meet emergency needs and to promote the Palestinians' economic and social development. It welcomed the continued assistance rendered to the Palestinian people by the UN family of organizations and noted with appreciation the dedicated efforts of the UN Special Coordinator and of UNRWA, which provided much-needed services to refugees and families despite its difficult financial situation (see below). The Committee reiterated that the involvement of the United Nations in the peace process, both as the guardian of international legitimacy and in mobilizing and providing international assistance, was essential for the successful outcome of that process.

In making its recommendations, the Committee noted that in 1998 the dispossession of the Palestinian people had passed the half-century mark, and that 4 million Palestinians lived in refugee camps under precarious conditions while still yearning for the establishment of their own State. The Committee stressed that the continuation of that situation and the widespread suffering it entailed was unacceptable, particularly since agreements outlining the framework for a peaceful solution had already been reached by the parties. The policies and practices of occupation violated the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and statehood and made the achievement of real peace impossible.

The Committee would continue to review and assess its programme in order to achieve maximum effectiveness in its activities, and to respond adequately to developments on the ground and in the peace process.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/39 [draft: A/53/L.48 & Add.1] by recorded vote (110-2-48) [agenda item 39].

Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

The General Assembly,

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Equatorial

Guinea, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, United Kingdom, Uzbekistan.

The United States said that the draft resolution, as well as all of those introduced under the agenda item on the question of Palestine, promoted institutions whose activities and approach to Middle East peace were unbalanced and outdated and did nothing to support the process of negotiations under way. Instead, they drained away millions of dollars each year that could better serve economic development in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Israel stated that, since its inception, the Committee on Palestinian Rights had obstructed dialogue and understanding through its one-sided and distorted portrayal of the Arab-Israeli conflict in general and its Palestinian component in particular.

Austria, on behalf of the EU, welcomed the ongoing dialogue with the Committee on Palestinian Rights. The EU would continue that exchange of views with the particular aim of adapting the mandate and activities of the Committee to the spirit of the Madrid and Oslo accords.

Bethlehem 2000

By a 15 May letter [A/53/141] to the Secretary-General, members of the Bureau of the Committee on Palestinian Rights (Afghanistan, Cuba, Malta, Senegal) requested the inclusion of an item entitled "Bethlehem 2000" in the agenda of the fifty-third session of the General Assembly. The event would celebrate the two thousandth anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ and the beginning of a new millennium. The commemoration would begin at Christmas 1999 and conclude at Easter 2001. The Bureau members fully supported the PA decision to honour that legacy and noted that a High Committee for the Bethlehem 2000 project, headed by PA President Arafat, had been established.

In order to increase the engagement and participation of the international community, a Bethlehem 2000 Participants Conference was convened by the Bethlehem 2000 project, in association with the European Commission, UNDP, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the World Bank (Brussels, 11-12 May).

The Committee stated that the Division, in cooperation with relevant technical services of the Secretariat, had continued to develop the electronic information system on the question of Palestine (UNISPAL), as mandated by Assembly resolution 46/74 B [YUN 1991, p. 228]. The technical resources of the Division were also used to assist in the electronic conversion of the records of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, in accordance with Assembly resolution 51/129 [YUN 1996, p. 423].

Assistance to Palestinians

UN activities

Report of Secretary-General. In a June report [A/53/153-E/1998/75], the Secretary-General described UN assistance to the Palestinian people between June 1997 and May 1998, assessed ongoing programmes and needs still unmet and presented specific proposals for additional assistance.

Chinmaya R. Gharekhan (India) continued to serve concurrently as the Special Coordinator in the Occupied Territories and as the Secretary-General's Representative to the multilateral peace talks on the Middle East. Throughout the reporting period, the Special Coordinator focused his efforts on coordinating donor-funded projects to alleviate unemployment and related socio-economic hardship and to encourage employment generation; working with partners in the development effort to provide budgetary support to the PA and to address the budget deficit; strengthening institution-building programmes and targeted technical assistance so that greater progress could be made towards achieving sustainable socio-economic development; encouraging greater private sector involvement in order to stimulate growth, economic development and employment generation; providing logistic and other assistance to the PA in the preparation of the Palestinian Development Plan, 1998-2000; and expediting donor disbursements so that the Plan could be implemented. The Plan, which represented the PA's commitment to developing national capacity in medium-term development planning and in the implementation of development projects, was presented to the donor community at the fifth meeting of the consultative group for the West Bank and Gaza Strip, convened by the World Bank (Paris, 14-15 December 1997). Pledges were made for $750 million in grants, loans and equity towards development activities in 1998 and a further $150 million was pledged in political risk guarantees for private investment. The United Nations was involved as donor or implementing partner in 102 of the total of 658 projects in the Plan project catalogue, with a combined value of some $224 million.

As part of his efforts to improve UN coordination, the Special Coordinator convened the fourth UN inter-agency meeting in Gaza on 2 and 3 July 1997. Representatives of 23 agencies attended the meeting in order to forge a common development strategy in response to needs and priorities identified by the PA. As in previous years, the meeting provided a forum for finalizing the document entitled "United Nations programme of cooperation for the West Bank and Gaza Strip", which outlined UN strategies, priorities and plans for 1998-1999.

By decision 1998/282 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Living conditions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip

The pattern of economic growth and development in the West Bank and Gaza Strip had been largely conditioned by the Israeli economy. The results of the integration of the West Bank and Gaza Strip into the Israeli economy had included significant labour flows from the former to the latter, a narrow range of Palestinian exports, and a large flow of Israeli exports to the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Licensed monthly average labour flows from the West Bank and Gaza Strip to Israel were about 15 per cent higher in 1997 than in the previous year, at approximately 38,000 workers. The relative stabilization in the movement of goods and persons during 1997 led to a corresponding stabilization in tax revenues and improved public finances; the recurrent budget of the PA for 1998 envisaged no deficit. However, despite improvements in labour and commodity flows, as well as marginal reductions in unemployment and underemployment, per capita income levels registered further declines in 1997. Continuing the trend witnessed since 1992, population growth exceeded income growth, resulting in falling average incomes.

Notwithstanding the modest economic improvements during the reporting period, the Secretary-General stressed that significant economic and social progress depended principally on meaningful advancement in the Israeli-Palestinian peace process. Such political progress had to entail greater Palestinian access to vital resources, such as land and water, and to external markets for inputs and exports. That would create a more stable environment, enhance private investment and generate economic growth and employment.

The private sector

The Secretary-General noted that, in the long term, economic growth and development would be generated by the private sector. Excluding agriculture, there were over 50,000 individual private establishments in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, principally small, sole proprietorships with average capitalization levels of approximately $10,000. Commerce and services made up 75 per cent of those businesses, while manufacturing accounted for up to 20 per cent. The relatively large number of commerce and service businesses accounted for about 50 per cent of the value of privately produced output, with manufacturing accounting for about 20 per cent of such output.

A survey of private sector specialists in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, undertaken by the Office of the Special Coordinator, found near unanimity in the view that closures and the unclear business operating environment were the main problems facing private businesses. The majority also indicated that better management and planning techniques, and better market access, were the most important things needed to develop private businesses.

UN agencies and programmes

The Special Coordinator gave an update on assistance provided to the Palestinian people in the occupied territories during the reporting period by UN departments, agencies and programmes. The update included information from the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the UN Secretariat, ESCWA, FAO, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), ILO, the International Maritime Organization (IMO), ITC, the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), UNDP, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), UNESCO, UNFPA, UNICEF, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), UNIFEM, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), UNRWA, the Office of the UN Special Coordinator, WFP and WHO.

Seminar on assistance to Palestinian people.

By an 18 June letter [A/53/152-E/1998/71], the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian Rights transmitted to the Secretary-General the report of the 1998 Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People (Cairo, 27-28 April), which had as its theme "Facing the challenges of the year 2000: promoting Palestinian national development". The Seminar's plenary session discussed planning Palestinian national development while the round-table meetings discussed the Palestinian Development Plan, the results of the Palestinian census and the role of the international community. Representatives of 62 Governments, three intergovernmental organizations, 10 UN bodies and agencies and 27 NGOs participated in the seminar, at which nine experts from various regions presented papers.

UNRWA

In 1998, stagnation in the Middle East peace process and a serious funding crisis combined to confront the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) with one of the most difficult years in its nearly 50-year history. The effects of austerity measures and budget constraints, dictated by a widening gap between the financial resources available to fund the Agency's programmes and the natural growth of the Palestine refugee population, were more acutely felt than ever during the year.

In carrying out its humanitarian work, UNRWA continued to coordinate its activities closely with the host authorities, including the PA, with its major donors and with the refugees themselves. As funding shortfalls put pressure on the Agency's three traditional service areas—education, health and relief and social services—a self-financing income-generation programme, aimed at creating sustainable job opportunities by providing working-capital loans to small businesses or micro-enterprises, became a fourth major area of activity for UNRWA, as well as an important factor in depressed local economies.

In his annual report on the work of the Agency (1 July 1997-30 June 1998) [A/53/13], the UNRWA Commissioner-General said that the critical financial situation had necessitated the imposition of another round of austerity measures in late 1997, with a direct negative impact on service delivery. For the second consecutive year, the Agency had been compelled to make an extraordinary appeal for additional contributions to avoid a disruption in services. Despite the additional support and the measures taken, the Agency only narrowly averted insolvency during 1997, ending the year with the fifth consecutive year-end deficit in its approved budget, as well as depleted cash and working capital reserves. However, progress was achieved in combating the ongoing deficit problem through new approaches to traditional programme activities, while the reform effort initiated in the previous reporting period continued to produce results in enhancing organizational efficiency and effectiveness.

The Agency continued to provide basic services for Palestine refugees and contributed to improving socio-economic conditions in refugee communities. Living standards in those communities remained poor throughout the area of operation, and were characterized by high unemployment, falling household income, overburdened infrastructure, and restrictions on employment and mobility.

UNRWA's humanitarian work was carried out against the backdrop of the continuing impasse in the various tracks of the peace process (see above).

On 30 June 1998, 3.52 million Palestine refugees were registered with UNRWA, an increase of 3 per cent over the 1997 figure of 3.42 million. The largest refugee population was registered in Jordan (1.5 million, or 41.6 per cent, of the Agency-wide total), followed by the Gaza Strip (773,000, or 21.9 per cent), the West Bank (555,000, 15.8 per cent), the Syrian Arab Republic (about 366,000, 10.4 per cent) and Lebanon (about 365,000, 10.4 per cent).

Peace Implementation Programme

UNRWA's Peace Implementation Programme (PIP) continued to contribute to the quality of life of the Palestine refugees, with generous donor support. Launched in October 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 569] after the signing of the Declaration of Principles between the PLO and Israel, PIP aimed to demonstrate the tangible benefits of the peace process by developing infrastructure, improving living conditions and creating employment opportunities in refugee communities. In its fifth year, PIP remained the main channel for extra-budgetary project funding of activities carried out under the umbrella of UNRWA programmes in education, health, relief and social services and income generation. The infrastructure development component of PIP focused on constructing or expanding facilities to meet increasing demand for Agency services, maintaining or upgrading existing facilities to an adequate standard, and improving housing and environmental health conditions in camps. PIP also allowed the Agency to meet urgent needs that it might otherwise have been unable to address, and to prevent a qualitative deterioration in services. The latter aspect was becoming increasingly significant in view of continuing budget shortfalls.

By the end of 1998, $221.3 million had been pledged or contributed towards PIP. The number of projects funded under PIP was 332 at mid-1998. Between mid-1997 and mid-1998, PIP funding enabled UNRWA to complete construction of four schools, 44 additional classrooms, two specialized rooms, a remedial education centre, a vocational training centre workshop, two health centres or points, five women's programme centres and one community rehabilitation centre. The Agency rehabilitated 463 shelters for special hardship families and performed comprehensive maintenance on two schools. Work to upgrade facilities was carried out on two vocational and technical training centres, and three health centres were renovated. PIP also helped to sustain regular Agency programmes by providing for additional hospitalization assistance and medical supplies in Lebanon, funding additional teacher posts in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and university scholarships for refugee students, and supporting the income-generation programme.

Cash expenditure under PIP totalled $31 million between mid-1997 and mid-1998, accounting for 10 per cent of total Agency expenditure. In view of the marked decrease in pledges and contributions compared to previous reporting periods, as well as financial constraints experienced by major donors and the establishment of new channels of implementation, the Agency assumed that funding for PIP had peaked.

Lebanon appeal

With available resources insufficient to cope with the growing needs of the refugee community in Lebanon, UNRWA had launched a special emergency appeal in July 1997, seeking $11 million in additional contributions to support essential services activities for the 365,000 Palestine refugees registered in that country. Most of those refugees faced deplorable living conditions and depended almost entirely on UNRWA for basic services. The deteriorating socio-economic situation in the country, combined with the inability of refugees to gain full access to the job market or avail themselves of public health facilities, heightened their desperation and misery. Eight countries and one intergovernmental organization responded generously to the appeal, announcing total pledges of $9.3 million by 30 June 1998. The Agency had received $8.7 million of that amount and allotted $8.2 million by mid-1998. Of total pledges, $4.6 million was for hospitalization assistance, procurement of medical supplies and other projects in the health sector; $3.8 million was for the construction, equipping and running costs of two secondary schools, and the introduction of new training courses at the Sibilin training centre; and $900,000 was for other activities, mainly shelter rehabilitation. Most of those projects were under way at mid-1998.

Major service areas

Education

During the 1997/98 school year, the 649 UNRWA schools in the Agency's five fields of operation had a total enrolment of 447,268 pupils, mainly in the elementary and preparatory cycles, but also including 649 students in two Agency secondary schools in Lebanon. Total enrolment increased by 2.5 per cent, or 11,099 pupils, over the 1996/97 school year. However, growth in enrolment was unevenly distributed, with rapid growth in the Gaza Strip (7.2 per cent), moderate growth in the West Bank and Lebanon (4.4 per cent and 3 per cent, respectively), zero growth in the Syrian Arab Republic (0.1 per cent increase) and negative growth in Jordan (1.7 per cent decrease). The education programme remained UNRWA's single largest area of activity, with the 14,372 education personnel representing more than two thirds of all Agency staff.

Steadily rising enrolment at UNRWA elementary and preparatory schools was a permanent feature of the Agency's operating environment, which, in turn, increased the demand for teachers. UNRWA had to continue to rely on contract teachers at rates of pay lower than those of equivalent Agency posts. In the 1997/98 school year, 592 contract teachers were in the Gaza field (15.2 per cent of the field's teaching force); 138 contract teachers and 28 daily-paid teachers in the West Bank field (10.3 per cent); and 248 daily-paid teachers in the Jordan, Lebanon and Syria fields combined (3.5 per cent).

The overall capacity of the Agency's education system was not keeping up with enrolment growth. Between the 1993/94 and 1997/98 school years, the number of school buildings increased by 1.2 per cent and the number of schools by 1.4 per cent, while total enrolment increased by 12.2 per cent. The excess increase in enrolment was accommodated by expanding classroom sizes, building or renting additional classrooms and converting schools from single to double shift. Moreover, many Agency schools, especially those constructed in the 1950s or 1960s, had become dilapidated beyond the point of economical repair and were in need of replacement. Overcrowding within the Agency's education system continued, owing to limited resources to hire teachers or build new schools and classrooms. The average classroom occupancy rate Agency-wide was 43.6 pupils in the 1997/98 school year, the fifth consecutive increase. UNRWA sought to obtain project funding, particularly under PIP, to improve and expand its education infrastructure. During the 1997/98 reporting period, UNRWA completed construction of 10 school buildings to expand capacity or replace unsatisfactory rented premises or dilapidated structures; 76 additional classrooms to avoid triple shifting and replace unsafe classrooms; and six specialized rooms, such as libraries, science laboratories, computer rooms, vocational education rooms or multi-purpose rooms, for school premises that lacked those facilities. Another five schools, 12 classrooms, two specialized rooms and four toilet blocks were under construction.

As UNRWA's basic education programme followed that of the host authority in each field of operation as a matter of policy, changes in host authority education programmes had implications for the Agency. The most significant issue in that regard was the extension of the basic education cycle in the West Bank and Gaza Strip from nine to 10 years, which the Agency remained unable to carry out owing to financial constraints and lack of funding for a $25.5 million project proposal. A project proposal in the amount of $370,000 to introduce the tenth grade at Agency schools in Jerusalem also remained unfunded. In March 1998, the PA approved the new Palestinian curriculum to replace the Jordanian curriculum in the West Bank and the Egyptian curriculum in Gaza. The new curriculum was to be phased in over five years starting in the 2000/01 school year. In Syria, a new study plan, curriculum and textbooks for the elementary and preparatory cycles were being gradually introduced. In Lebanon, a new education structure, curriculum and textbooks for the elementary and preparatory cycles were to be implemented in Agency schools over a three-year period beginning in the 1998/99 school year. The implementation of curricular changes in national school systems was undertaken by the host authorities in cooperation with UNRWA. In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, the joint UNRWA-PA technical coordination committee discussed a range of issues including textbooks, school buildings, in-service teacher training, vocational and technical training, introduction of the tenth grade, and developments in the preparation of the new Palestinian curriculum. UNRWA provided the PA with several in-service teacher-training programmes and related instructional materials, as well as a short course in measurement and evaluation techniques for 24 newly appointed PA school supervisors in the West Bank. UNRWA continued to cooperate with the PA in offering short-term vocational training courses for released prisoners in the West Bank.

The eight UNRWA vocational and technical training centres had a total enrolment of 4,560 in the 1997/98 school year, an increase of 116 over the previous year. At the post-preparatory level, 22 two-year vocational training courses were offered to male trainees in the building, electrical, electronic, mechanical and metalworking trades, and to female trainees in hairdressing, clothing production and dressmaking. At the post-secondary level, 26 two-year technical/semi-professional courses were offered to male and female trainees in a variety of technical, paramedical and commercial skills. Women accounted for 62 per cent of all trainees enrolled in technical/semi-professional courses in 1997/98. Course offerings varied from centre to centre according to local labour market needs and the availability of training opportunities at other institutions. Besides the two-year training course, which remained the principal mode of job preparation utilized by UNRWA, Agency training centres in Jordan and the West Bank offered 11 short-term training courses organized in cooperation with NGOs or the PA. Those courses covered executive secretary skills, electrical installation, building decoration, radio and television repair and refrigeration and air-conditioning repair. The Agency also sponsored 44 Palestine refugee students in vocational training courses at private institutions in Lebanon and the West Bank, mainly with project funding. According to surveys conducted by the Agency, 79 per cent of the 1996 graduates of its training centres were employed in 1997.

The three branches of the Educational Sciences Faculty in Jordan and the West Bank provided pre-service and in-service teacher training leading to a first-level university degree, as part of the process to upgrade the qualifications of UNRWA teaching staff to meet revised standards set by the Government of Jordan and the PA. The four-year pre-service programme, which granted university-level degrees in classroom teaching, Arabic, English, mathematics, science, vocational education or Islamic education, was offered to 811 secondary school graduates, including 598 women, at three training centres. The three-year in-service programme was offered at the Amman centre to 644 teachers holding two-year teacher training diplomas, including 212 women, to upgrade their qualifications to a first-level university degree. In 1997/98, 151 students graduated from the pre-service programme and 177 from the in-service programme. Of the 378 pre-service graduates to date, 46 had been recruited by the Agency on a competitive basis to meet staffing requirements in the West Bank and Jordan.

During the 1997/98 school year, UNRWA awarded scholarships to 1,055 refugee students, including 488 women, for study at 44 universities in 11 countries in the region. Following the freeze on the regular budget allocation for university scholarships in August 1997, the entire scholarship programme was funded through project contributions.

The education budget of $160.3 million for 1998 accounted for half of UNRWA's total budget. Actual expenditure for the year was expected to be less than the amount budgeted owing to austerity and other cost-reduction measures taken in response to funding shortfalls. In all fields except Gaza, nominal contributions at prescribed rates were collected from pupils and trainees on a voluntary basis for use in improving the facilities and equipment of schools and training centres. In March 1998, the Agency issued a request for donor-funded technical expertise to assist in education planning, to which one donor responded favourably. Another donor pledged technical assistance and funding to introduce computer training at UNRWA training centres.

The education programme was run in cooperation with UNESCO, which assumed technical responsibility by providing a group of seven senior managers to UNRWA, including the Director of Education.

Health

UNRWA's health programme remained focused on comprehensive primary health care, including a full range of maternal and child health (MCH) and family planning services, school health services, health education and promotion, out-patient medical care, prevention and control of communicable diseases and of non-communicable diseases such as diabetes mellitus and hypertension, and specialist care, with an emphasis on gynaecology and obstetrics, paediatrics and cardiology. Those services were provided through a network of 122 primary health-care facilities—including 89 health centres, 23 health points offering a wide range of health-care services on a part-time basis, and 10 MCH centres offering comprehensive family health services—supported by basic services such as X-ray and laboratory facilities. During the reporting period, Agency outpatient facilities handled 5.4 million medical and 0.5 million dental visits, as well as 1.2 million visits for nursing services, such as dressings and injections. Essential medical supplies, supplementary feeding for vulnerable groups and rehabilitation of physical disabilities were also provided within the primary health-care programme.

The health programme had a budget of $62.6 million for 1998. Actual expenditure was expected to be less than the amount budgeted owing to austerity and other cost-reduction measures taken in response to funding shortfalls. Average budgeted health expenditure for 1998 stood at $ 15.3 per refugee per year, well below expenditures by other health-care providers in the region. Approximately two thirds of the health budget was allocated to medical care services, comprising treatment and support services, family health, and disease prevention and control, with the remaining third divided equally between environmental health services and the supplementary feeding programme. Approximately 63 per cent of cash allocations to the health programme were for the costs of UNRWA's 3,500 locally recruited health staff, who implemented all core programme activities. Workloads in UNRWA primary health-care facilities remained high, with an average of 100 patients seen by each doctor each day Agency-wide, compared to about 51 a day seen by a PA doctor in the Gaza Strip.

gramme. During the reporting period, Agency MCH care clinics and centres cared for some 201,600 children below the age of three, representing approximately 6 per cent of the registered refugee population, and some 69,000 pregnant women. Over 21,400 family planning acceptors were registered during the reporting period, bringing the total number of women utilizing the Agency's family planning services to more than 58,000. The number of health centres providing intra-uterine devices increased from 61 in mid-1997 to 74 in mid-1998. Overall coverage of maternal antenatal services Agency-wide was approximately 70 per cent of the target population, while coverage of child health care was approximately 75 per cent.

Performance indicators were developed to measure progress in coverage and quality of antenatal, post-natal and family planning services. The Agency conducted studies of infant and early child mortality in Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and the Gaza Strip, which revealed that the infant mortality rate among Palestine refugees ranged between 27 and 35 deaths per 1,000 live births, consistent with regional rates as reported by the host authorities. The UNRWA studies also found that a major proportion of infant deaths fell within the early neonatal period, when they were normally more difficult to prevent. In national, regional and international meetings sponsored by WHO and other health organizations, the Agency's field experience in reproductive and family health continued to be regarded as a major asset in developing appropriate intervention strategies to improve standards throughout the region.

UNRWA exerted special efforts to maintain and further develop an effective programme to address the prevention and control of communicable diseases preventable through immunization, such as poliomyelitis and tetanus; vector-borne diseases transmitted through environmental channels, such as brucellosis and intestinal parasites; newly emerging infectious diseases, such as HIV/AIDS; re-emerging infectious diseases, such as tuberculosis; and non-communicable diseases associated with lifestyles, such as diabetes mellitus, hypertension, heart disease and cancer. To that end, the Agency maintained optimal immunization coverage against the major childhood diseases, participating in the spring of 1998 in two rounds of national immunization days for eradication of poliomyelitis, in the context of a WHO regional strategy implemented in coordination with local health authorities. Using vaccines donated by UNICEF, the Agency immunized 211,800 refugee children under age five in the first round and 187,000 in the second. Special care, comprising close monitoring and management of diabetes mellitus and hypertension, was provided through all Agency health centres, benefiting 71,400 patients during the reporting period. Special attention continued to be paid to early detection and management of micronutrient disorders, especially iron-deficiency anaemia, which was highly prevalent among pre-school children and women of reproductive age. The Agency was also taking steps to strengthen its tuberculosis surveillance and control measures and coordinate them with those of public health authorities throughout the area of operations, based on the directly observed short-course treatment strategy and the recommendations of a WHO technical adviser on communicable diseases, who conducted an assessment of UNRWA's tuberculosis programme in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria in May/June 1998. A generous contribution of human insulin from a United States corporation channelled through an NGO helped the Agency to meet its requirements for treatment of insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus in 1997 and 1998.

Palestine refugees received assistance with secondary care through partial reimbursement of costs incurred for treatment at governmental or non-governmental hospitals or contractual agreements with non-governmental or private hospitals, depending on the field of operation. Secondary care was also provided directly by the Agency at two facilities in the West Bank, the 43-bed Qalqilia hospital and a small maternity unit in Nur Shams refugee camp. The steadily rising cost of secondary care as a result of revised rates by governmental and non-governmental hospitals continued to jeopardize the sustainability of the hospitalization programme, making effective management of resources paramount. Hospitalization services in Lebanon could be maintained at the current level only through extrabudgetary contributions, without which services would have been seriously curtailed. Hospitalization accounted for approximately 27 per cent of the 1998 medical care budget, with the highest per capita allocations in the West Bank and Lebanon. Given the severe strain under which the hospitalization programme was operating, any further cost-containment measures would likely endanger the lives of needy refugees, particularly in Lebanon, while threatening the sustainability of some non-governmental hospitals, which depended on contracts with UNRWA, such as Augusta Victoria Hospital in Jerusalem.

UNRWA continued to implement a wide range of health education activities aimed at promoting a healthy lifestyle and raising public awareness within the refugee community. Counselling sessions and audio-visual programmes were offered on a continuous basis for health centre attendees, schoolchildren were targeted through planned activities organized by a health tutor in each Agency school, and community health education campaigns were organized on an occasional basis, mainly in camps.

More than 1.1 million Palestine refugees in 59 camps benefited from environmental health services provided by UNRWA in cooperation with local municipalities, including sewage disposal, management of storm water run-off, provision of safe drinking water, collection and disposal of refuse, and control of insect and rodent infestation. The Agency continued to play an active role, particularly in the Gaza Strip, in planning and implementing large-scale projects for the installation of sewerage, drainage and water networks in camps and the expansion of solid-waste collection and disposal capacity.

UNRWA continued to cooperate closely with the PA in the health sector and provided assistance for projects to enhance health infrastructure. A close dialogue was maintained among UNRWA, the PA and the EU to reach a common understanding on the commissioning and future operation of the European Gaza Hospital, which had been built by UNRWA with multilateral and bilateral European funding near Khan Younis in the southern Gaza Strip. The Agency cooperated with the PA and concerned donors on projects for construction of a public health laboratory in the West Bank, the upgrading of UNRWA's Qalqilia hospital in the West Bank and improvements to environmental health infrastructure in the Gaza Strip. It also maintained close cooperation with health ministries in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria, including the exchange of information, coordination of disease-control measures and participation in national conferences and immunization campaigns.

Relief and social services

UNRWA assisted refugee families unable to meet basic needs for food, shelter and other life essentials through its special hardship programme. The number of refugees in households meeting the stringent eligibility criteria—no male adult medically fit to earn an income, and no other identifiable means of financial support above a defined threshold—increased by 5.6 per cent, from 185,259 at mid-1997 to 195,616 at mid-1998. The proportion of special hardship cases within the total registered refugee population increased slightly, from 5.4 per cent to 5.6 per cent. The overall increase in special hardship case enrolment generally corresponded to the introduction of the cash subsidy for food support. The percentage of refugees enrolled in the programme continued to be highest in Lebanon (10.3 per cent) and the Gaza Strip (8.6 per cent) and lowest in Jordan (2.6 per cent).

Assistance to special hardship case families included food support, selective cash grants, shelter rehabilitation, poverty alleviation initiatives, higher hospitalization subsidies and preferential access to UNRWA training centres. Implementation of a modified form of food support introduced in the previous reporting period, under which a cash subsidy equivalent to $40 per person per year replaced certain lesser-valued commodities in the food ration (with the other commodities still being distributed in kind), continued to proceed smoothly. Special hardship case families in Lebanon continued to receive a full complement of rations in kind, in accordance with previous arrangements. However, in view of the dire socio-economic conditions facing such families in Lebanon, and following consultations with donors, it was decided to provide the same level of cash subsidy to those families, over and above the full complement of rations that they had been receiving, starting in January 1998.

With project funding, UNRWA rehabilitated a total of 505 shelters of special hardship case families, compared with 600 in the previous period. Work for shelter rehabilitation was carried out either on a self-help basis, with the Agency providing financial and technical assistance and beneficiary families arranging volunteer labour, or by small camp-based contractors, with the aim of creating employment within the refugee community. Following the freeze of the regular budget allocation for shelter rehabilitation in August 1997, the entire shelter rehabilitation programme was funded through earmarked contributions, with one donor making available $1 million for that purpose. Nonetheless, available resources continued to fall far short of identified need. It was estimated that some 12,516 special hardship case families, representing 25 per cent of the total and comprising 48,904 persons, still lived in housing which did not meet minimally acceptable standards for structural soundness, hygiene, ventilation and space relative to family size. Those families tended to be living in extreme socio-economic hardship, and in some cases the condition of their shelters posed a hazard to the safety and health of occupants. Need was particularly great in Lebanon where a large number of special hardship case families inhabited substandard shelters and many families were living outside camps in desperate conditions. With project funding, UNRWA completed a facility to accommodate 55 displaced and impoverished refugee families in Beddawi camp in north Lebanon.

Under its poverty alleviation programme, UNRWA continued to assist disadvantaged refugees, especially women, to raise their socioeconomic status through skills training, production units, group-guaranteed savings and loan schemes and credit provision. During the reporting period, 58 grants and 118 loans were awarded to special hardship cases and other impoverished families to assist them in establishing micro-enterprises. Though some of the credit extended was in the form of soft loans (70 per cent grant and 30 per cent loan), the programme's emphasis shifted towards fully repayable loans, which allowed capital to be recovered and reinvested. UNRWA staff provided training in credit provision and served as trainers in courses organized by other UN organizations in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. Group-guaranteed savings and loan schemes benefited 143 participants in Jordan and Syria with loans to promote sustainable income-generation activities or improvements to participants' homes or shelters. Like a small community bank, each group had its own seed capital that provided loans to members, mainly women, through a revolving fund established with pooled savings and Agency support. A total of 25 skills-training and production units were in operation, including income-generation projects established at women's programme centres and community rehabilitation centres. The poverty alleviation programme totalled 1,331 participants during the reporting period.

Participation in UNRWA's community-based social development programmes for women, youth and persons with disabilities increased by 18.5 per cent, from 32,407 at mid-1997 to 38,417 at mid-1998. The focal point for the programmes was the network of 128 Agency-supported community centres, comprising 70 women's programme centres, 32 community rehabilitation centres and, in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, 26 youth activities centres. Activities at the women's centres emphasized income-earning projects and training; lectures and workshops on issues of concern to women and the community, including a special educational programme on HIV/AIDS; courses to enhance women's social development; and provision of support services for women, such as kindergartens and legal advice bureaux. The community rehabilitation centres worked to raise community awareness of the needs and rights of the disabled; integrate persons with disabilities into mainstream activities such as schooling; help disabled persons and their families cope with disability; assist disabled adults to obtain training and employment; offer referrals to specialist services; and provide equipment such as hearing aids and prosthetic devices. The youth activities centres offered sports, recreational and cultural activities, which were increasingly open to young women; organized community service activities, such as training of volunteer rehabilitation workers; and held lectures and workshops on issues of community concern. UNRWA supported the community centres by providing financial and technical support and promoting institution-building in the framework of a five-year plan (1995-1999) to achieve their full managerial and financial sustainability. By 30 June 1998, 68 of the 70 women's programme centres were managed by local committees, up from 52 the previous year, as were all community rehabilitation and youth activities centres. The Agency provided small subsidies to each centre towards an approved annual programme plan and budget, helped the committees establish income-generation projects to provide revenue for the centre and income for participants, and trained community volunteers in fund-raising skills. The centres derived most of their income from participation fees for activities and contributions from external sources, with support from UNRWA accounting for less than half of most centres' operating requirements. In the Gaza Strip, self-sustainability was promoted through a special organizational development unit, which provided intensified training and assistance to community centres.

In May 1998, a comprehensive UNRWA service compound was inaugurated in Waqqas, in the Jordan Valley, where more than 18,000 registered refugees lived. Built with project funding on a site provided by the Government of Jordan, the compound, comprising a women's programme centre, a community rehabilitation centre, a health point, a kindergarten and a nursery, was the largest community centre in the area. Besides enhancing the quality of services, the project was the first of its kind in terms of making a variety of Agency services available at one location.

Further progress was achieved by mid-1998 in developing a unified registration system to integrate electronically three sets of UNRWA records: a computerized database containing registration data for Palestine refugees; a computerized database containing socio-economic data on special hardship cases; and a hard-copy archive of an estimated 700,000 family files. Following the decentralization of the registration database in previous reporting periods, a pilot version of the field social study system was installed in the West Bank in October 1997, ahead of full installation in all fields by late 1998. An enhanced version of the socio-economic database, the system would enable data to be updated at the field and area level for better programme planning and management.

Income generation

UNRWA's income-generation programme supported small-scale enterprises and micro-enterprises within the refugee community by providing capital investment and working capital loans through field-based revolving loan funds, as well as technical assistance. The programme aimed to create and maintain jobs, generate income for participants, support sustainable enterprises and encourage the participation of women in economic life. The capacity of the programme and its range of activities continued to expand.

In the Gaza Strip, where UNRWA's income-generation efforts were concentrated, business activity was heavily influenced by closures and movement restrictions, which contributed to unemployment, hindered movement of finished goods and raw materials and increased business costs. Those conditions resulted in a shortage of working capital for many small enterprises and micro-enterprises, which were increasingly faced with trading conditions which dictated that they purchase in cash but sell on credit. The programme continued to target such enterprises, in both the formal and informal sectors of the economy, through a range of flexible collateral and guarantee mechanisms, including business plan-based lending and individual-, group- and cheque-guarantee methods, all backed by workable enforcement procedures. Those mechanisms enabled the Agency to lend to target groups at minimal risk, while increasing financial sustainability. Despite a decrease in donor contributions to the Gaza programme, the number of loans increased from 4,452 loans valued at $5.4 million in the previous reporting period to 6,193 loans valued at $7.3 million by mid-1998. Some 53 per cent of borrowers were women. UNRWA's solidarity group lending programme provided short-term working capital loans to women working in micro-enterprises who, because of the size and informal nature of the businesses, had no access to formal credit.

A small-scale enterprise programme in the West Bank continued to operate at full capacity, issuing 79 loans valued at $1.1 million during the reporting period. In the absence of additional contributions to expand the capital base, the programme relied entirely on revolved principal, limiting possibilities for growth. The programme had a capital base of $1.7 million at mid-1998 and an overall recovery rate of 94 per cent. A micro-enterprise credit programme was launched in the Nablus area of the West Bank in April 1998, and by the end of June had disbursed 288 loans valued at $243,380.

UNRWA also operated revolving loan funds for small-scale enterprises in Jordan and Lebanon, though on a smaller scale than in the Gaza Strip and West Bank. In Jordan, the income-generation programme was in abeyance from August 1997 pending conclusion of a more favourable agreement with the local bank. At mid-1998, some 100 loan applications were under review, ahead of the expected reactivation of the programme in August 1998. In Lebanon, the Agency awarded 35 loans valued at $223,500 during the reporting period. At mid-1998, the Jordan and Lebanon programmes had capital bases of $494,208 and $330,000 and overall recovery rates of 96 per cent and 99 per cent, respectively.

Advisory Commission. By a letter of 28 September to the Commissioner-General, included in his report [A/53/13], the Advisory Commission of UNRWA confirmed its support for the Middle East peace process, but noted its concern about the lack of progress in the preceding year, which had directly and indirectly affected Palestine refugee communities. While noting that, unlike in each of the two preceding years, it had not been necessary to convene an extraordinary meeting on UNRWA's financial situation, the Commission voiced concern about the negative effects, in both the short and long terms, of funding shortfalls and the depletion of the Agency's working capital. It agreed that the partnership approach, drawing together the host authorities, the donors and UNRWA, should continue to be actively pursued to enable the Agency to regain a viable financial footing and ensure the continuation of its activities. The Commission appealed to the international community to share in making that partnership possible and requested the prompt payment of pledges and other funds to UNRWA.

The Commission noted with appreciation the internal restructuring and reforms initiated by the Commissioner-General in 1996 and encouraged the Agency to expedite financial and administrative reforms. It expressed concern about the continuing deterioration of living conditions of the Palestine refugees in all the fields of UNRWA operations and hoped that additional contributions to UNRWA would ease the situation. In particular, the Commission appealed to the international community to back with contributions its political support for Palestine refugees for the stability of the region and the peace process. It also called on the Israeli authorities to do their part to ensure that Agency operations proceeded unhampered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/597], adopted resolution 53/46 by recorded vote (157-1-2) [agenda item 83].

Assistance to Palestine refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/57 of 10 December 1997 and all its previous resolutions on the question, including resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948,

Taking note of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

Welcoming the signature in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993 by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the people of Palestine, of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements and the subsequent implementation agreements, and also the signature of the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995,

Encouraging the Multilateral Working Group on Refugees of the Middle East peace process to continue its important work,

Welcoming the completion of the transfer of the headquarters of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to Gaza, to its area of operations,

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

Taking note of the letter dated 28 September 1998 from the Chairman of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General, contained in the report of the Commissioner-General,

Further aware of the valuable work done by the refugee affairs officers of the Agency in providing protection to the Palestinian people, in particular Palestine refugees,

Deeply concerned about the critical financial situation of the Agency and its effect on the continuity of provision of necessary Agency services to the Palestine refugees, including the emergency-related programmes,

Aware of the work of the new Peace Implementation Programme of the Agency,

Recalling the signing in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993 of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, and the subsequent implementation agreements, including the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995,

UNRWA financing

Throughout 1998, UNRWA continued to face a critical financial situation, characterized by large funding shortfalls in the regular budget, continued enforcement of austerity measures, depleted working capital and cash reserves and cumulative deficits in certain project accounts. The structural deficit—representing the inability of contributions to keep pace with natural growth in the refugee population and inflation, which increased the cost of maintaining a constant level of services—showed no sign of improving. Although the Agency was already operating well below earlier levels, it had been able to avert insolvency in 1997 only by introducing additional austerity measures and issuing extraordinary appeals for additional funding to allow services to continue without disruption.

UNRWA began 1998 with depleted working capital, low cash reserves and no indication of a significant increase in overall income. As expected cash income for 1998 fell far short of the $314 million regular budget for the year, the Agency was obliged to carry forward all austerity measures previously implemented, including those announced in August 1997 and not rescinded. Expected cash expenditure was also reduced slightly by other factors, such as managed higher vacancy rates and delayed recruitment for international and local posts in the context of the general recruitment freeze; realization of benefits from previous and ongoing restructuring measures, mainly contract teachers and reduced international staffing; and non-utilization in certain budget lines owing to stricter financial controls. At 30 June 1998, expected 1998 cash expenditure in the regular programme was $253 million, as compared to expected 1998 cash income of $252 million. Additional contributions were being sought to overcome the estimated core deficit of $1 million. Nevertheless, the Agency's 1998 budget remained only partially funded, and the estimated 1998 budget deficit remained high, at $62 million. Available resources remained insufficient to enable the lifting of any of the austerity and other cost-reduction measures previously imposed, which represented non-implementation of certain activities included in the General Assembly-approved budget. The cash position remained extremely weak, forcing the Agency to live from hand to mouth in terms of balancing incoming funds and outgoing payments. Working capital was for all practical purposes non-existent, making the Agency vulnerable to any change in expected income or expenditure.

Repeated funding shortfalls in previous years had severely eroded UNRWA's cash position—the amount of cash on hand in Agency bank accounts at any point in time that could be used to meet basic obligations. On 31 December 1997, outstanding cash pledges under all accounts amounted to $71 million, of which $24.7 million related to the regular budget and $46.3 million to projects. In addition, the Agency had not been reimbursed by the PA for payments of value-added tax and port and related charges, which amounted to $17.7 million at the close of 1997. Those factors exerted further strain on the Agency's cash position, making it especially difficult to meet obligations in time towards the end of the fiscal year.

The 1996-1997 General Fund budget included a provision in the amount of $12.7 million per year to be set aside towards an estimated $127 million in termination indemnities payable to local staff upon the eventual dissolution of UNRWA. The overall amount was later revised to $121 million to reflect termination indemnities paid to staff in connection with the relocation of UNRWA headquarters to the area of operations. Accordingly, the termination indemnities provision included in the 1998-1999 budget was in the amount of $12.1 million per year. Owing to financial constraints, the provision was unfunded in both 1996 and 1997, although termination indemnities represented a contingent liability on the Agency.

UNRWA's financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium 1996-1997 were submitted by its Commissioner-General to the General Assembly [A/53/5/Add.3], together with the report of the UN Board of Auditors on UNRWA.

Working Group. The Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA held two meetings in 1998, on 3 September and 22 October. In its November report to the General Assembly [A/53/569], the Group noted that UNRWA ended the 1997 financial year with a deficit of $1.9 million in its cash budget, representing the difference between actual cash expenditures of $252.4 million and actual cash income of $250.5 million. However, the difference between cash income and the cash budget of $312 million for the year meant that the Agency recorded a budget deficit of $61.5 million in 1997. Total cash and in-kind income received by the Agency in 1997 was $317.2 million, of which $270.9 million was for the regular budget, with the remainder, $46.3 million, being for projects. The Agency's total cash expenditure in 1997 was $281.5 million, of which $252.4 million was for the regular budget and $29.1 million for projects.

The Working Group noted that UNRWA began 1998 with depleted working capital, low cash balances, and no indication of a significant increase in overall income. As at the end of June, cash expenditure for the regular programme in 1998 was expected to be $253 million, compared with expected 1998 cash income of some $252 million. The revised projection of cash income of $252 million for 1998 represented an increase of $16 million from the projection made at the end of the first quarter of the year due to an additional $12 million in income from pledges announced at an informal meeting of major donors and host authorities held in May 1998, together with some $4 million in savings resulting from developments on international currency markets and the early payment of some regular contributions. The Agency's 1998 budget remained only partially funded, and the estimated 1998 budget deficit remained high, at $62 million. If UNRWA received the same amount from donors in 1999 as was expected for 1998, the Agency would still face a budget deficit of $71 million in 1999. That figure made no provision for the restoration of cuts made in previous years or for the cost of termination indemnities. A further complicating factor brought to the Working Group's attention was the issue of the Agency's outstanding claims for the repayment of value-added tax and other charges by the PA. As at August 1998, the value of those claims had reached some $19 million.

The Working Group expressed alarm at the continuing negative effect of five years of austerity measures due to shortfalls in funding. Those measures had prevented programmes from expanding at a rate commensurate with the growth in the refugee population, necessitated curtailments in ongoing programme activities, and precluded certain actions that would normally have been part of the Agency's regular programme activities. Most seriously, restrictions on hiring had led to increased class sizes in Agency schools, rising patient/staff ratios in the health services and higher caseloads for social workers dealing with the poorest refugees. The employment of teachers on a contract basis had made a significant contribution to reducing costs in the Agency's largest programme, education. However, the Working Group appreciated that that action was not a long-term solution to securing funding of the Agency's regular activities on a sustainable basis, and that it could have potential negative effects on the Agency's relations with its area staff, who were the bedrock on which UNRWA's continued functioning depended.

As for the effects of other austerity measures, the Working Group was concerned that the freeze on regular budget allocations for university scholarships, shelter rehabilitation and selective cash assistance had not only reduced the Agency's activities in those areas, but made them dependent on extrabudgetary contributions; that cuts in allocations for facilities maintenance had led to the deterioration of the Agency's extensive physical assets; and that reductions in hospitalization allocations had meant that some patients who required hospital care may have been unable to receive it. The Working Group agreed that while the problem of the refugees was deeply rooted in a political issue that had originated more than half a century before, the problems now faced by the refugees were humanitarian ones that had to be addressed as a shared international responsibility. Any further reduction in the services provided by UNRWA would not only unfairly deprive the refugees of the minimum level of support to which they were entitled, but could also have a destabilizing effect on the entire region.

The Working Group expressed the hope that the international support for UNRWA embodied in annual General Assembly resolutions recognizing the importance of the Agency's work and requesting that Governments contribute to it would be translated into measures for ensuring the survival of the Agency on a secure financial basis. The Group urged Governments to continue contributing generously and to consider additional contributions to finance deficit amounts so that services could continue uninterrupted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/53/597], adopted resolution 53/47 without vote [agenda item 83].

Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2656(XXV) of 7 December 1970, 2728(XXV) of 15 December 1970, 2791(XXVI) of 6 December 1971, 52/58 of 10 December 1997 and the previous resolutions on this question,

Recalling also its decision 36/462 of 16 March 1982, by which it took note of the special report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,

Having considered the report of the Working Group,

Taking into account the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

Deeply concerned about the persisting critical financial situation of the Agency, which has affected and affects the continuation of the provision of the necessary Agency services to Palestine refugees, including the emergency-related programmes,

Emphasizing the continuing need for extraordinary efforts in order to maintain, at least at the current minimum level, the activities of the Agency, as well as to enable the Agency to carry out essential construction,

1. Commends the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for its efforts to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency;

2. Takes note with approval of the report of the Working Group;

3. Requests the Working Group to continue its efforts, in cooperation with the Secretary-General and the Commissioner-General, for the financing of the Agency for a further period of one year;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work.

Displaced persons

In an October report [A/53/471] on compliance with General Assembly resolution 52/59 [YUN 1997, p. 450], which called for the accelerated return of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, the Secretary-General said that since UNRWA was not involved in arrangements for the return of either refugees or displaced persons not registered with it, Agency information was based on requests by returning registered refugees for the transfer of their entitlements to their areas of return. Displaced refugees known by UNRWA to have returned to the West Bank and Gaza Strip since June 1967 numbered about 17,100. Records indicated that, between 1 July 1997 and 30 June 1998, 534 refugees had returned to the West Bank and 177 to the Gaza Strip. Some of the refugees might not have been displaced in 1967, but might be family members of a displaced registered refugee whom they either had accompanied on return or had joined later.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/53/597], adopted resolution 53/48 by recorded vote (156-2-1) [agenda item 83].

Persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 237(1967) of 14 June 1967 and 259(1968) of 27 September 1968,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 52/59 of 10 December 1997,

Taking note also of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

Concerned about the continuing human suffering resulting from the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities,

Taking note of the relevant provisions of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements, signed in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993 by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, with regard to the modalities for the admission of persons displaced in 1967, and concerned that the process agreed upon has not yet been effected,

1. Reaffirms the right of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to return to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Expresses the hope for an accelerated return of displaced persons through the mechanism agreed upon by the parties in article XII of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements;

3. Endorses, in the meanwhile, the efforts of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis, and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are currently displaced and in serious need of continued assistance as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities;

4. Strongly appeals to all Governments and to organizations and individuals to contribute generously to the Agency and to the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned for the above purposes;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, after consulting with the Commissioner-General, to report to the General Assembly before its fifty-fourth session on the progress made with regard to the implementation of the present resolution.

Education, training and scholarships

In an October report [A/53/472], the Secretary-General transmitted responses received to the General Assembly's 1997 appeal contained in resolution 52/60 [YUN 1997, p.450] for States, specialized agencies and NGOs to augment special allocations for scholarships and grants to Palestine refugees, for which UNRWA acted as recipient and trustee.

In the 1997/98 academic year, Japan awarded 11 fellowships to Palestine refugees, of which 3 were to vocational training staff employed by UNRWA, 2 were fellowships in vocational training administration and 6 were fellowships in community health. All the fellowships were for training in Japan. Under Japanese grants of $400,000 made annually between 1992 and 1994, $500,000 in 1995 and $600,000 in both 1996 and 1997, some 494 students were participating in the UNRWA university scholarship programme during 1997/98. Contributions from Switzerland in 1997 totalling $338,000 enabled 334 Palestinians to pursue university studies. UNESCO offered seven new scholarship awards to Palestinian students in 1997/98, while WHO provided 50 fellowships or study tours for candidates nominated by the PA, and the United World Colleges offered one scholarship for 1998/99 for its branch in Canada.

Proposed University of Jerusalem "Al-Quds"

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/63 [YUN 1997, p. 451], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/53/551] on the proposal to establish a university for Palestine refugees in Jerusalem. First mentioned by the Assembly in resolution 35/13 B [YUN 1980, p. 443], the issue had been the subject of annual reports by the Secretary-General.

To assist in the preparation of a feasibility study and at the Secretary-General's request, the Rector of the United Nations University again asked expert Mihaly Simai to visit the area and meet with Israeli officials. In response to the Secretary-General's note verbale of 25 August, requesting Israel to facilitate the visit, Israel in a 9 October reply stated that it had consistently voted against the resolution on the proposed university and that its position remained unchanged. It charged that the resolution's sponsors sought to exploit higher education for political purposes extraneous to genuine academic pursuits. Accordingly, Israel was of the opinion that the proposed visit would serve no useful purpose. The Secretary-General reported that it had not been possible to complete the study as planned.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, acting on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/53/597], adopted resolution 53/52 by recorded vote (156-2-2) [agenda item 83].

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Having also considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East for the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

1. Emphasizes the need for strengthening the educational system in the Palestinian territory occupied by Israel since 5 June 1967, including Jerusalem, and specifically the need for the establishment of the proposed university;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary measures for establishing the University of Jerusalem "Al-Quds", in accordance with General Assembly resolution 35/13 B of 3 November 1980, giving due consideration to the recommendations consistent with the provisions of that resolution;

3. Calls once more upon Israel, the occupying Power, to cooperate in the implementation of the present resolution and to remove the hindrances that it has put in the way of establishing the University of Jerusalem "Al-Quds";

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Property rights

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/62 [YUN 1997, p. 452], the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/53/644] on steps taken to protect and administer Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel and to establish a fund for income derived therefrom, on behalf of the rightful owners. He indicated that he had transmitted the resolution to Israel and all other Member States, requesting information on any steps taken or envisaged with regard to its implementation.

In a 19 August reply, reproduced in the report, Israel stated that its position on the resolutions on Palestine refugees had been set forth in successive annual replies, the latest of which had been included in the Secretary-General's 1997 report on the subject [YUN 1997, p. 452]. Israel regretted that the resolutions regarding UNRWA remained rife with political issues irrelevant to the Agency's work and detached from the new reality in the area. While Israel believed that UNRWA could play an important role in promoting the social and economic advancement foreseen in agreements between Israel and the Palestinians, and accordingly looked forward to continuing cooperation with UNRWA, Israel considered it essential that the Assembly consolidate the UNRWA resolutions into one directly related to the Agency's humanitarian tasks.

Report of Conciliation Commission. The United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, in its fifty-third report covering the period from 1 September 1997 to 31 August 1998 [A/53/518], noted that, pursuant to Assembly resolution 51/129 [YUN 1996, p. 423], the Secretariat had engaged a contractor to modernize the existing records; the project would be completed in early 1999. The Commission had authorized access by the PLO to its records in the UN archives for the purpose of making a scanned image of them.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/597], adopted resolution 53/51 by recorded vote (156-2-1) [agenda item 83].

Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 36/146 C of 16 December 1981 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 52/62 of 10 December 1997,

Taking note also of the report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine for the period from 1 September 1997 to 31 August 1998,

Recalling in particular its resolution 394(V) of 14 December 1950, in which it directed the Conciliation Commission, in consultation with the parties concerned, to prescribe measures for the protection of the rights, property and interests of the Palestine Arab refugees,

Taking note of the completion of the programme of identification and evaluation of Arab property, as announced by the Conciliation Commission in its twenty-second progress report, and of the fact that the Land Office had a schedule of Arab owners and file of documents defining the location, area and other particulars of Arab property,

Recalling that, in the framework of the Middle East peace process, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel agreed, in the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993, to commence negotiations on permanent status issues, including the important issue of the refugees, and calling for the commencement of those negotiations,

1. Reaffirms that the Palestine Arab refugees are entitled to their property and to the income derived therefrom, in conformity with the principles of justice and equity;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate steps, in consultation with the United Nations

Conciliation Commission for Palestine, for the protection of Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel, expresses its appreciation for the work done to preserve and modernize the existing records of the Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to complete this task;

3. Calls once more upon Israel to render all facilities and assistance to the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Calls upon all the parties concerned to provide the Secretary-General with any pertinent information in their possession concerning Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel that would assist him in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Urges the Palestinian and Israeli sides, as agreed between them, to deal with the important issue of Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues in the framework of the final status negotiations of the Middle East peace process;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Peacekeeping operations

In 1998, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), originally set up to monitor the ceasefire called for by the Security Council in May 1948 in newly partitioned Palestine, continued its work. UNTSO's unarmed military observers fulfilled changing mandates—from supervising the original four armistice agreements between Israel and its neighbours (Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic) to observing and monitoring other ceasefires, as well as performing a number of additional tasks.

During the year, UNTSO personnel worked with the two remaining UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East—the Observer Group Golan with the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights, and the Observer Group Lebanon with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL). In July, through an exchange of letters between the Secretary-General [S/1998/679] and the President of the Security Council [S/1998/680], Slovakia and Slovenia were added to the list of Member States providing military observers to UNTSO.

On 25 February [S/1998/183], the Secretary-General informed the Council President of his intention to appoint Major-General Timothy Roger Ford (Australia) as the new Chief of Staff of UNTSO, replacing Major-General Rufus Kupolati (Nigeria). By a 2 March letter [S/1998/184] to the Secretary-General, the Council agreed to the new appointment.

Lebanon

The situation in southern Lebanon remained volatile and dangerous in 1998, with a heightened risk of escalation. In the second half of the year, UNIFIL recorded the highest number of operations ever against the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) by armed elements resisting the Israeli occupation of the area.

By a 6 April letter [S/1998/301], Israel informed the Secretary-General that on 1 April the Ministerial Committee for National Security had decided to accept Security Council resolution 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312]. As a result, IDF would leave Lebanon with appropriate security arrangements, so that the Lebanese Government could restore its control over southern Lebanon and assume responsibility for guaranteeing that its territory would not be used as a base for terrorist activity against Israel. IDF would continue its activity against terrorist threats in the "security zone" until the necessary security arrangements were effected. Israel called on Lebanon to begin negotiations to restore its effective control over territories that were under IDF control. Israel viewed the guaranteed security and safety of the residents of the "security zone" and the soldiers of the South Lebanese Army (SLA) as an integral part of the implementation of resolution 425(1978).

Referring to Israel's letter, Lebanon, in similar letters dated 21 April to the President of the Security Council [S/1998/341] and to the Secretary-General [A/52/878-S/1998/352], said that the acceptance of resolution 425(1978) was issued not by the Israeli Government but by the Committee for National Security. The Government itself had not issued any clear statement as to its position.

Lebanon asserted that Israel's proposal was an attempt to exact the principle of negotiation and the principle of security arrangements, contrary to the meaning of resolution 425(1978), which made no provision for negotiation and did not allow Israel to gain security guarantees at the expense of Lebanese sovereignty. Any negotiations between Lebanon and Israel could only be on subjects relating to resolutions 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257] and 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213], Arab rights, the situation of the city of Al-Quds (Jerusalem), the rights of the Palestinian refugees and a future framework for peaceful relations, concluded Lebanon.

Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter of 23 June from its Minister for Foreign Affairs [A/52/969-S/1998/570] on the subject of the approximately 213 Lebanese detainees held in Israeli prisons and detention centres in southern Lebanon. According to Lebanon, the Israeli High Court of Justice announced on 4 March that Lebanese detainees could continue to be held without trial as hostages and as a bargaining chip despite the fact that they had been in detention for years. That decision, said Lebanon, was a violation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and of all humanitarian principles. Lebanon called for the closing down of the Khiyam detention centre and for the release of the Lebanese detainees. Israel's claim that SLA was in charge of the Khiyam detention centre did not exonerate Israel from responsibility, as SLA could survive only with Israel's support, stated Lebanon.

On 3 November [A/53/572-S/1998/1030], Lebanon informed the Secretary-General that Israeli forces had excavated hundreds of tons of soil in the occupied areas of southern Lebanon in order to transport it into Israeli territory for the purpose of reclaiming Israeli agricultural land. That action inflicted environmental damage on the surrounding area and caused harm to farm owners, whose land had been so transformed that they were no longer able to cultivate it and were forced to abandon it.

By a 23 December letter [A/53/768-S/1998/1215] to the Secretary-General, Lebanon stated that on the previous day Israeli military aircraft fired missiles on the area around the village of Janta, killing seven people, including six children. Though Israeli officials had announced that the bombing was committed unintentionally, Lebanon asserted that it was in fact the outcome of a policy of aggression against its territory and people.

In a series of monthly communications [A/52/763-S/1998/20, A/52/796-S/1998/138, A/52/830-

UNIFIL

The Security Council twice extended the mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon in 1998, in January and July, each time for a six-month period.

UNIFIL, which was established by Council resolution 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312] following Israel's invasion of Lebanon [ibid., p. 296], was originally entrusted with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restoring international peace and security, and assisting the Lebanese Government in ensuring the return of its effective authority in southern Lebanon. Following a second Israeli invasion in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 428], the Council, in resolution 511(1982) [ibid., p. 450], authorized the Force to carry out, in addition to its original mandate, the interim task of providing protection and humanitarian assistance to the local population, while maintaining its positions in the area of deployment.

The Force headquarters, based predominantly in Naqoura, provided command and control, as well as liaison with Lebanon and Israel, UNDOF, UNTSO and a number of NGOs.

Composition and deployment

As at December 1998, UNIFIL comprised 4,483 troops from Fiji (588), Finland (492), France (247), Ghana (646), India (617), Ireland (611), Italy (46), Nepal (604) and Poland (632). At the end of November, an Indian battalion was deployed in the east sector, replacing the Norwegian unit, which departed UNIFIL after more than 20 years of service. UNIFIL was assisted in its tasks by 51 military observers of UNTSO. In addition, UNIFIL employed 486 civilian staff, of whom 142 were recruited internationally and 344 locally. Major-General Jioji Konousi Konrote (Fiji) continued as Force Commander.

Since the establishment of UNIFIL, 222 members of the Force had lost their lives: 76 as a result of shooting or bomb explosions, 92 in accidents and 54 from other causes. A total of 334 had been wounded by shooting or by mine or bomb explosions.

UNIFIL's military component comprised a force headquarters, six infantry battalions and a mobile reserve company, together with supporting logistic and administrative units. The battalions were deployed throughout southern Lebanon in a network of 151 positions, staffed 24 hours a day and consisting of: checkpoints, for the control of movement on the principal roads in the UNIFIL area of operation; observation posts, for observing movement on and off the roads in the area of operation; and checkpoints/observations posts, which combined the functions of control and observation. The battalions were supported in their task by a Force Mobile Reserve consisting of a composite mechanized company used to reinforce positions during rotation and deployed during serious incidents. UNTSO military observers assisting UNIFIL manned a number of observation posts along the Israel-Lebanon armistice demarcation line and operated mobile patrols in the area of operation controlled by Israel. A helicopter wing was maintained with the primary function of patrol and reconnaissance flights over the mission area; it also undertook coastal patrols, medical evacuations and search and rescue operations.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In a report [S/1998/53] on developments from 17 July 1997 to 15 January 1998 in the UNIFIL area of operation, the Secretary-General said that hostilities continued between IDF and its local Lebanese auxiliary, the de facto forces (DFF), on the one hand, and armed elements who had proclaimed their resistance to the Israeli occupation, on the other.

During the reporting period, UNIFIL recorded 249 operations by armed elements against IDF/DFF, a significant increase over the 154 operations recorded in the previous reporting period [YUN 1997, p. 460]. There were also reports of almost 200 operations north of the Litani River, the vast majority of which were carried out by the Islamic Resistance, the military wing of the Hizbullah organization. A number of them were carried out by the Shiite movement Amal, while the Islamic Jihad movement took responsibility for one. The armed elements fired more than 2,517 mortar rounds, rockets and anti-tank missiles and also used small arms, rocket-propelled grenades, recoilless rifles and explosive devices, causing a number of casualties. IDF/DFF, in response to attacks or in operations they initiated, employed artillery, mortars, tanks, helicopter gunships, fixed-wing aircraft and explosive devices. IDF continued its practice of conducting pre-emptive artillery bombardments and long-range patrols beyond its forward positions. UNIFIL recorded more than 10,539 rounds of artillery, mortar, tank and missiles fired by IDF/DFF. Israeli air raids were all against targets north of the Litani River, except for two attacks in the Nepalese battalion sector on 23 and 24 November. The Israeli navy continued to patrol the Lebanese territorial waters in the south and to impose restrictions on local fishermen.

The Secretary-General reported a significant increase in civilian casualties, with 34 civilians killed as compared to nine in the previous reporting period. In addition, the Secretary-General reported the deaths of seven UNIFIL soldiers. Five soldiers were killed in a helicopter crash during a routine exercise, one was killed in a traffic accident and one died of natural causes.

UNIFIL continued in its efforts to limit the conflict and to protect the inhabitants from the fighting through its network of checkpoints and observation posts and an active programme of patrolling, as well as continuous contacts with the parties.

Although IDF and the Islamic Resistance showed restraint in carrying out operations in the vicinity of UNIFIL positions, 73 firings—41 by IDF, 26 by armed elements and 6 by unidentified elements—at or close to UNIFIL positions and personnel were recorded, which were promptly protested to the authorities concerned. The monitoring group set up in accordance with the understanding of 26 April 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 428] held 12 meetings at UNIFIL headquarters to consider complaints by Israel and Lebanon.

Within the Israeli-controlled area (ICA), Israel continued to maintain a civil administration and security service. The infrastructure of ICA was improved, primarily due to aid provided by the Government of Lebanon. However, ICA remained economically dependent on Israel, where more than 2,000 of the inhabitants worked. IDF/DFF carried out sporadic search operations in several villages in ICA and made several arrests, while its security apparatus restricted the movement of the inhabitants on a number of occasions.

UNIFIL extended assistance to the civilian population in its area of operation in the form of medical care, casualty evacuation, harvest patrols, clothes, blankets, food, engineering works and the distribution of educational material and equipment to poorer schools. In addition, water projects, equipment or services for schools and orphanages, and supplies to social services and needy people were provided from resources made available by troop-contributing countries. UNIFIL medical centres and mobile teams provided care to an average of 5,200 civilian patients per month. UNIFIL also assisted the Government of Lebanon in distributing supplies to ICA villages facing shortages owing to restrictions imposed by IDF/DFF. Throughout the period, UNI-

FIL cooperated on humanitarian matters with the Lebanese authorities, UN agencies, ICRC and other organizations and agencies operating in Lebanon. In addition, UNIFIL carried out 101 controlled explosions of unexploded ordnance in its area of operation.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in southern Lebanon remained volatile and continued to give cause for serious concern. Although UNIFIL had been prevented from implementing the mandate contained in resolution 425(1978), its contribution to stability and the protection it was able to afford the population of the area remained important. Therefore, he recommended that the Security Council accede to the request of Lebanon (see below) and extend the mandate of UNIFIL for another period of six months, until 31 July 1998.

Communications (January). By a 6 January letter [S/1998/7] to the Secretary-General, Lebanon requested the Security Council to extend the mandate of UNIFIL for a further interim period of six months, until 31 July. Lebanon emphasized that the full implementation of Security Council resolution 425(1978), which called on Israel to withdraw its forces from all Lebanese territory, remained the only way to stop the violence in southern Lebanon.

Referring to Lebanon's letter, Israel, by a 27 January letter to the Secretary-General [S/1998/75], pointed out that the fundamental cause of the volatile situation in southern Lebanon was the terrorist activities carried out by the Shiite Muslim Hizbullah and other terrorist organizations, both Lebanese and Palestinian, acting under its umbrella. Such terrorist activities were supported and encouraged by the Government of Lebanon. Consequently, Israel had been forced to exercise its right of self-defence in order to protect the lives of the civilian population in its northern towns and villages.

Israel stated that it was prepared to implement the withdrawal envisaged in resolution 425(1978), but only within a framework that would guarantee the implementation of all elements of the resolution, including UNIFIL's goals of assisting the Government of Lebanon in ensuring the return of its effective authority in the area. Such effective authority would have to include, among other things, arrangements for the protection of all residents in the area.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 30 January [meeting 3852], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1151(1998). The draft text [S/1998/80] had been prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978, 501(1982) of 25 February 1982, 508(1982) of 5 June 1982, 509(1982) of 6 June 1982 and 520(1982) of 17 September 1982, as well as all its resolutions on the situation in Lebanon,

Having studied the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 1998 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and taking note of the observations expressed and the commitments mentioned therein,

Taking note of the letter dated 6 January 1998 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon,

1. Decides to extend the present mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon for a further period of six months, that is until 31 July 1998;

2. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

3. Re-emphasizes the terms of reference and general guidelines of the Force as stated in the report of the Secretary-General of 19 March 1978, approved by resolution 426(1978), and calls upon all parties concerned to cooperate fully with the Force for the full implementation of its mandate;

4. Condemns all acts of violence committed in particular against the Force, and urges the parties to put an end to them;

5. Reiterates that the Force should fully implement its mandate as defined in resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978) and all other relevant resolutions;

6. Encourages further efficiency and savings provided they do not affect the operational capacity of the Force;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned with the implementation of the present resolution and to report to the Security Council thereon.

At the same meeting, the President made a statement on behalf of the Council [S/PRST/1998/2]:

The Security Council has noted with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 1998 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, submitted in conformity with resolution 1122(1997) of 29 July 1997.

The Council reaffirms its commitment to the full sovereignty, political independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries. In this context, the Council asserts that all States shall refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

As the Council extends the mandate of the Force for a further interim period on the basis of resolution 425(1978), the Council again stresses the urgent need for the implementation of that resolution in all its aspects. It reiterates its full support for the Taif Agreement of 22 October 1989 and for the continued efforts of the Lebanese Government to consolidate peace, national unity and security in the country, while successfully carrying out the reconstruction process. The Council commends the Lebanese Government for its successful effort to extend its authority in the south of the country in full coordination with the Force.

The Council expresses its concern over the continuing violence in southern Lebanon, regrets the loss of civilian life, and urges all parties to exercise restraint.

The Council takes this opportunity to express its appreciation for the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General and his staff in this regard. The Council notes with deep concern the high level of casualties the Force has suffered and pays a special tribute to all those who gave their lives while serving in the Force. It commends the troops of the Force and troop-contributing countries for their sacrifices and commitment to the cause of international peace and security under difficult circumstances.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In a report [S/1998/652] on developments during the period from 16 January to 15 July 1998, the Secretary-General noted that the number of operations conducted by armed elements against IDF/DFF had increased significantly. UNIFIL recorded 348 such operations, a 40 per cent increase over the previous reporting period and the highest number in many years. There were also reports of about 300 operations north of the Litani River, most of which were carried out by the Islamic Resistance. The Shiite movement Amal increased its activities, taking responsibility for about 60 operations. A number of operations were carried out by other Lebanese groups, while Palestinian groups conducted two operations. The armed elements fired more than 3,500 mortar rounds, rockets and anti-tank missiles.

IDF/DFF, in response to attacks or in operations they initiated, employed artillery, mortars, tanks, helicopter gunships, fixed-wing aircraft and explosive devices. IDF continued its practice of conducting pre-emptive artillery bombardments and long-range patrols beyond its forward positions. Close to 10,300 rounds of artillery, mortar, tanks and missiles fired by IDF/DFF were recorded by UNIFIL. IDF also conducted air raids, the majority of which were carried out against targets north of the Litani River.

Within ICA, Israel maintained a civil administration and security service and carried out search operations in several villages. A number of civilians were arrested and imprisoned in Khiyam, while others were expelled from their villages and ordered to leave ICA. On 25 and 26 June, the remains of an Israeli serviceman and those of armed elements were exchanged with the help of ICRC. In the context of the exchange, some 60 people imprisoned in Khiyam were released.

UNIFIL continued its efforts to limit the conflict and did its best to prevent the area of operation from being used for hostile activities. The Force was also deployed, as necessary, to provide a measure of protection to villages and to farmers working in the fields.

In carrying out its functions, the Force encountered hostile reactions by both armed elements and IDF/DFF. It also recorded a total of 72 firings—25 by armed elements, 42 by IDF/DFF and 5 by unidentified elements—at or close to its positions and personnel.

UNIFIL continued to assist in the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the civilian population and to cooperate on humanitarian matters with the Lebanese authorities, UN agencies, ICRC and other organizations. The disposal of unexploded ordnance also continued, with 69 explosions being carried out in UNIFIL's area of operation. The monitoring group set up in accordance with the understanding of 26 April 1996 held 16 meetings at UNIFIL headquarters to consider complaints by Israel and Lebanon.

From 17 to 26 March, the Secretary-General visited the Middle East, including Israel, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. The implementation of Security Council resolution 425(1978) was discussed in his meetings with the leaders of the three countries. The Secretary-General conducted further meetings in New York with the Prime Ministers of Israel and Lebanon and with officials of other interested countries. On 1 April, the Ministerial Committee for National Security of the Government of Israel adopted a decision on Israel's acceptance of resolution 425(1978) (see above).

The Secretary-General reported the death of four members of the Force during the period under review. Two soldiers were killed in a traffic accident and two died of natural causes.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in south Lebanon remained volatile and continued to give cause for serious concern. After visiting UNIFIL headquarters during his trip to the Middle East, the Secretary-General reaffirmed his belief that UNIFIL's contribution to stability and the protection it provided to the population of the area remained important. Therefore, he recommended that the Force's mandate be extended for another six months, until 31 January 1999, as requested by Lebanon on 26 June [S/1998/584]. Noting that there was a serious shortfall in UNIFIL funding, with unpaid assessments amounting to some $103.5 million, the Secretary-General appealed to Member States to pay their assessments promptly and in full to clear all arrears.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 30 July [meeting 3913], the Security Council adopted resolution 1188(1998) unanimously. The draft text [S/1998/682] had been prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978, 501(1982) of 25 February 1982, 508(1982) of 5 June 1982, 509(1982) of 6 June 1982 and 520(1982) of 17 September 1982, as well as all its resolutions on the situation in Lebanon,

Having studied the report of the Secretary-General of 16 July 1998 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and taking note of the observations expressed and the commitments mentioned therein,

Taking note of the letter dated 26 June 1998 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon,

1. Decides to extend the present mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon for a further period of six months, that is, until 31 January 1999;

2. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

4. Condemns all acts of violence committed in particular against the Force, and urges the parties to put an end to them;

5. Reiterates that the Force should fully implement its mandate as defined in resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978) and all other relevant resolutions;

6. Encourages further efficiency and savings provided they do not affect the operational capacity of the Force;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned with the implementation of the present resolution and to report to the Security Council thereon.

After the adoption of the resolution, the President made a statement on behalf of the Council [S/PRST/1998/23]:

The Security Council has noted with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General of 16 July 1998 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, submitted in conformity with resolution 1151(1998) of 30 January 1998.

The Council reaffirms its commitment to the full sovereignty, political independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries. In this context, the Council asserts that all States shall refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations.

The Council takes this opportunity to express its appreciation for the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General and his staff in this regard. The Council notes with deep concern the high level of casualties the Force has suffered and pays a special tribute to all those who gave their life while serving in the Force. It commends the troops of the Force and troop-contributing countries for their sacrifices and commitment to the cause of international peace and security under difficult circumstances.

Communications (October). By a letter of 16 October [S/1998/975], the Secretary-General informed the President of the Security Council that Norway had decided to withdraw its infantry battalion from UNIFIL at the end of November 1998. The Government of India had agreed to make available an infantry battalion to replace the Norwegian contingent. The Secretary-General proposed that India be added to the list of Member States providing military personnel to UNIFIL.

On 20 October [S/1998/976], the President of the Council stated that the Council agreed to the Secretary-General's proposal.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General and ACABQ (February and April). In a February report [A/52/804], the Secretary-General submitted the financial performance report of UNIFIL for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997, for which resources of $125,722,800 gross ($122,665,800 net) were provided. Corresponding expenditures amounted to $126,744,400 gross ($123,504,400 net), resulting in additional requirements of $1,021,600 gross ($838,600 net). Of the additional requirements, an amount of $639,356 related to a 1996 incident at Qana [YUN 1996, p. 429], when the headquarters of the Fijian battalion had been hit by Israeli shelling, and would be charged to the financial authorization granted under the terms of General Assembly resolution 51/233 [YUN 1997, p. 463]. The remaining additional requirements in the amount of $382,244 gross ($199,244 net) were attributable mainly to the upward revision in local staff salaries, UNIFIL's share of the financing of the United Nations Logistics Base (Brindisi, Italy) and the recording of certain expenditures pertaining to the financial period ending 30 June 1996.

Also in February [A/52/806], the Secretary-General presented the proposed budget for UNIFIL for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, in the amount of $136,719,500 gross ($132,706,000 net), reflecting an 11.9 per cent increase in gross terms compared with the previous 12-month period. The increase was mainly due to the upward revision in local staff salaries (61.8 per cent), the proposed establishment of 52 additional posts and the replacement of vehicles and communications equipment.

The budget provided for maintaining the Force, consisting of 4,513 troops (3,518 infantry and 995 logistics), supported by a civilian establishment of 528 (146 international and 382 local level) posts.

In a May addendum [A/52/806/Add.1], the Secretary-General provided information on the estimated cost to UNTSO of direct support provided to UNIFIL for the bienniums 1996-1997 ($5,012,100) and 1998-1999 ($5,589,400).

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in an April report [A/52/860/Add.6], recommended against the additional appropriation of $382,244 gross ($199,244 net) for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997. The additional requirement of $639,356, which related to the Qana incident, was to be treated in accordance with the terms of resolution 51/233.

With regard to the proposed budget for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, ACABQ recommended an appropriation of $135,831,900 gross ($131,980,500 net).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 June [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/52/932], adopted resolution 52/237 by recorded vote (109-2) [agenda item 122 (b)].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon

The General Assembly,
Reaffirming its resolution 51/233 of 13 June 1997,
Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 425(1978) of 19 March 1978, by which the Council established the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1151 (1998) of 30 January 1998,

Recalling its resolution S-8/2 of 21 April 1978 on the financing of the Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 51/233,

Reaffirming that the costs of the Force are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the Force, a different procedure is required from that applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of such operations,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Concerned that the Secretary-General continues to face difficulties in meeting the obligations of the Force on a current basis, including reimbursement to current and former troop-contributing States,

Concerned also that the surplus balances in the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon have been used to meet expenses of the Force in order to compensate for the lack of income resulting from non-payment and late payment by Member States of their contributions,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon as at 15 May 1998, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 106.2 million United States dollars, representing 3.8 per cent of the total assessed contributions from the inception of the Force to the period ending 30 June 1998, notes that some 18.3 per cent of the Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States concerned, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses concern about the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursement of troop contributors, which bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

3. Expresses its deep concern that Israel did not comply with General Assembly resolution 51/233;

4. Stresses once again that Israel should strictly abide by General Assembly resolution 51/233;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure the full implementation of paragraph 8 of General Assembly resolution 51/233, stressing that Israel shall pay the amount of 1,773,618 dollars resulting from the incident at Qana on 18 April 1996;

6. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full;

7. Urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full and on time;

8. Takes note of the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to employ locally recruited staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

11. Decides, as an ad hoc arrangement, to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon the amount of 142,984,560 dollars gross (139,133,160 dollars net) for the maintenance of the Force for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, inclusive of the amount of 7,152,660 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations, to be apportioned among Member States at the monthly rate of 11,915,380 dollars gross (11,594,430 dollars net), in accordance with the composition of groups set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of General Assembly resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolutions 44/192 B of 21 December 1989, 45/269 of 27 August 1991, 46/198 A of 20 December 1991, 47/218 A of 23 December 1992, 49/249 A of 20 July 1995, 49/249 B of 14 September 1995, 50/224 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 A to C of 18 December 1996 and 52/230 of 31 March 1998 and its decisions 48/472 A of 23 December 1993 and 50/451 B of 23 December 1995, and taking into account the scale of assessments for the years 1998 and 1999, as set out in its resolution 52/215 A of 22 December 1997, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force beyond 31 July 1998;

12. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 11 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 3,831,400 dollars approved for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999;

13. Decides further that there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 11 above, their respective share of the estimated other income of 20,000 dollars for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999;

14. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 11 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance of 3,098,190 dollars in respect of the reserve account for the third-party liability insurance of helicopters;

15. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, their share of the unencumbered balance of 3,098,190 dollars in respect of the reserve account for the third-party liability insurance of helicopters shall be set off against their outstanding obligations;

16. Decides further that the additional requirement of 639,356 dollars, which relates to the incident at Qana, for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997, will be treated in accordance with the terms of General Assembly resolution 51/233;

17. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-third session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 52/237:

In favour: Algeria, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Latvia, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Lithuania, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Slovakia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

The Assembly and the Committee adopted the first preambular paragraph and operative paragraphs 3, 4, 5 and 16 by a recorded vote of 68 to 2, with 41 abstentions, and 51 to 2, with 38 abstentions, respectively.

After the vote, the United States stated that its opposition to the resolution was based on its relationship to resolution 51/233, which had decided that costs of $1,773,618—which stemmed from the incident at Qana in 1996—should be borne by Israel. The United States believed that the use of an Assembly funding resolution to pursue claims against a Member State was not correct procedurally. In addition, it believed that the resolution politicized the work of the Fifth Committee.

Lebanon said that the resolution reaffirmed that it was up to the aggressor, in this case Israel, to fulfil its international obligations and implement all the resolutions adopted by the Security Council and the Assembly. Lebanon believed that Israel's continuing occupation of parts of Bekaa and southern Lebanon, its failure to respect Council resolution 425(1978) and its repeated acts of aggression were responsible for the cycle of violence and the problems faced by UNIFIL and the Lebanese civilians in southern Lebanon.

The Syrian Arab Republic stated that in adopting the resolution the Assembly had again affirmed Israel's responsibility for the expenses resulting from its attack on Qana. United Nations soldiers were threatened every time Lebanese civilians took refuge in the headquarters of the Force. Syria reaffirmed its position that Israel should be called on to pay not only the costs of its aggression against UNIFIL's headquarters, but that it should also be responsible for the complete financing of the Force.

By decision 53/458 of 18 December, the Assembly decided that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of UNIFIL's financing at the resumed fifty-third session in 1999.

Syrian Arab Republic

In 1998, the General Assembly continued to call for Israel's withdrawal from the Golan Heights in the Syrian Arab Republic, which it had occupied since 1967. The area was effectively annexed by Israel when it extended its laws, jurisdiction and administration to the territory towards the end of 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 309].

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the population in the Golan Heights and other occupied territories were monitored by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli Practices) and were the subject of resolutions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights (see PART TWO, Chapter III) and the Assembly.

Committee on Israeli Practices. In its annual report [A/53/661], the Committee on Israeli Practices stated that it had visited Damascus as well as Quneitra province, which bordered the occupied area, where it heard information from witnesses on the current situation in the Syrian Arab Golan. The Committee was informed that some 20,000 Syrians lived in five villages under Israeli occupation, compared with some 110,000 or more who lived in some 244 towns and villages at the time of the occupation in 1967. Witnesses described some Israeli practices in the Golan, such as the levying of heavy taxes on the inhabitants and the confiscation of land and water resources. Families were fragmented as a result of the occupation and lacked the possibility to obtain permits to visit family members residing in Syria. Families of prisoners were also subjected to reprisals. In addition, permits were denied to persons who had not paid taxes. A witness stated that Israel was trying to change the vestiges of Arab history and culture in the region by abolishing the Syrian educational curriculum and by imposing a special one for "Israeli Arabs". Job discrimination also appeared to have taken place. The Committee was provided with documentation by the Syrian Government, which was included in the report.

The Special Committee considered it extremely important that the General Assembly and other relevant UN bodies, as well as the Secretary-General, continue in their efforts to ameliorate the living conditions of the Syrian people in the occupied territory. It stated that the Israeli annexation of the occupied Golan had not been recognized by the international community and in particular the United Nations.

Reports of Secretary-General. On 12 August [A/53/260], the Secretary-General reported that no reply had been received from Israel to his May request for information on any steps it had taken or envisaged concerning implementation of resolution 52/68 [YUN 1997, p. 467], by which the Assembly had called on Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population.

By a 3 November report [A/53/550], the Secretary-General transmitted replies from 10 Member States received in response to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged with regard to implementation of Assembly resolutions 52/54, which dealt with Israeli policies in the Syrian territory occupied since 1967 [YUN 1997, p. 466], and 52/53 [ibid., p. 416] on the transfer of some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem (see above).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/38 [draft: A/53/L.53 & Corr.1 & Add.1] by recorded vote (97-2-58) [agenda item 40].

The situation in the Middle East: the Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "The situation in the Middle East",

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the fundamental principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming once more the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Deeply concerned that Israel has not withdrawn from the Syrian Golan, which has been under occupation since 1967, contrary to the relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions,

Stressing the illegality of the Israeli settlement construction and activities in the occupied Syrian Golan since 1967,

Noting with satisfaction the convening at Madrid on 30 October 1991 of the Peace Conference on the Middle East, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 and 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and the formula of land for peace,

Expressing grave concern over the halt in the peace process on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks, and expressing the hope that peace talks will soon resume from the point they had reached,

1. Declares that Israel has failed so far to comply with Security Council resolution 497(1981);

2. Declares also that the Israeli decision of 14 December 1981 to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan is null and void and has no validity whatsoever, as confirmed by the Security Council in its resolution 497(1981), and calls upon Israel to rescind it;

3. Reaffirms its determination that all relevant provisions of the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 1907, and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, continue to apply to the Syrian territory occupied by Israel since 1967, and calls upon the parties thereto to respect and ensure respect for their obligations under those instruments in all circumstances;

4. Determines once more that the continued occupation of the Syrian Golan and its de facto annexation constitute a stumbling block in the way of achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region;

5. Calls upon Israel to resume the talks on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks and to respect the commitments and undertakings reached during the previous talks;

6. Demands once more that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

7. Calls upon all the parties concerned, the co-sponsors of the peace process and the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the resumption of the peace process and its success;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 53/38:

In favour Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Cote d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Swaziland, Sweden, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Zambia.

Speaking after the vote, Israel reaffirmed its willingness to resume negotiations with Syria without any preconditions, but stated that the language of the resolution attempted to pre-determine the outcome of those negotiations. In addition, the resolution referred to the principle of land for peace. The terms of reference of the Middle East peace negotiations, as defined in the letter of invitation to the Madrid Peace Conference sent in October 1991, did not make any reference whatsoever to that principle.

The Syrian Arab Republic stated that the principle of land for peace stemmed from the text of resolution 242(1967), which referred to the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force and which also called for Israel's withdrawal. In addition, during the peace talks between Syria and Israel under United States sponsorship, Israel had promised to withdraw from the Golan up to the line of 4 June 1967 in order to implement that principle. Thus, according to Syria, Israel was reneging on that promise.

On 3 December [meeting 78], the Assembly, under the agenda item on the report of the Committee on Israeli Practices and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/53/598], adopted resolution 53/57 by recorded vote (150-1-6) [agenda item 84].

The occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories,

Deeply concerned that the Syrian Golan occupied since 1967 has been under continued Israeli military occupation,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling also its previous relevant resolutions, the last of which was resolution 52/68 of 10 December 1997,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 52/68,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions in which, inter alia, it called upon Israel to put an end to its occupation of the Arab territories,

Reaffirming once more the illegality of the decision of 14 December 1981 taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan, which has resulted in the effective annexation of that territory,

Reaffirming that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible under international law, including the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 237(1967) of 14 June 1967,

Welcoming the convening at Madrid of the Peace Conference on the Middle East on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 aimed at the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace, and expressing grave concern about the stalling of the peace process on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks,

1. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply with the relevant resolutions on the occupied Syrian Golan, in particular Security Council resolution 497(1981), in which the Council, inter alia, decided that the Israeli decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan was null and void and without international legal effect, and demanded that Israel, the occupying Power, should rescind forthwith its decision;

2. Also calls upon Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan and in particular to desist from the establishment of settlements;

3. Determines that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken or to be taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that purport to alter the character and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan are null and void, constitute a flagrant violation of international law and of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and have no legal effect;

4. Calls upon Israel to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on the Syrian citizens in the occupied Syrian Golan, and to desist from its repressive measures against the population of the occupied Syrian Golan;

5. Deplores the violations by Israel of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

6. Calls once again upon Member States not to recognize any of the legislative or administrative measures and actions referred to above;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 53/57:

UNDOF

The mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, established by Security Council resolution 350(1974) [YUN 1974, p. 205], to supervise the observance of the ceasefire between Israel and Syria in the Golan Heights area and ensuring the separation of their forces, was renewed twice in 1998, in May and November, each time for a six-month period.

UNDOF maintained an area of separation, which was some 80 kilometres long and varied in width between approximately 10 kilometres in the centre to less than 1 kilometre in the extreme south. The area of separation was inhabited and policed by Syrian authorities and no military forces other than UNDOF were permitted within it. Both the Austrian battalion deployed in the northern part of the area of separation and the Polish battalion in the south conducted mine-clearing operations.

Composition and deployment

As at October 1998, UNDOF comprised 1,046 troops from Austria, Canada, Japan, Poland and Slovakia. It was assisted by 80 UNTSO military observers. Major-General Cameron Ross (Canada) became Force Commander on 1 October, taking over from Major-General David Stapleton (Ireland), who completed his tour of duty on 31 August. The Secretary-General informed the Security Council on 14 September [S/1998/873] of his intention to appoint General Ross; the Council took note of that intention on 21 September [S/1998/874].

On 28 April [S/1998/363], the Secretary-General proposed to the Council that Slovakia be added to the list of Member States providing troops to UNDOF; the Council agreed with that proposal on 1 May [S/1998/364]. The Slovakian platoon was deployed within the Austrian battalion at the end of May, replacing an Austrian platoon.

UNDOF was entirely deployed within and close to the area of separation with two base camps, 44 permanently manned positions and 11 observation posts. The UNDOF headquarters was located at Camp Faouar and an office was maintained in Damascus.

The Canadian and Japanese logistic units, based in Camp Ziouani, with a detachment in Camp Faouar, performed second-line general transport tasks, rotation transport, control and management of goods received by the Force and maintenance of heavy equipment.

Activities

UNDOF continued in 1998 to supervise the area of separation between Israeli and Syrian troops in the Golan Heights, to ensure that no military forces of either party were deployed there, by means of fixed positions and patrols. The Force, accompanied by liaison officers from the party concerned, also carried out fortnightly inspections of armament and force levels in the areas of limitation. As in the past, both sides denied inspection teams access to some of their positions and imposed some restrictions on the Force's freedom of movement.

UNDOF assisted ICRC with facilities for mail and the passage of persons through the area of separation. Within the means available, medical treatment was provided to the local population upon request.

Reports of Secretary-General (May and November). Before the expiration of the UNDOF mandate on 31 May and again on 30 November, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on UNDOF activities that took place between 15 November 1997 and 14 May 1998 [S/1998/391] and between 15 May and 14 November 1998 [S/1998/1073]. Both reports noted that UNDOF continued to perform its functions effectively, with the cooperation of the parties. In general, the ceasefire in the Israel-Syria sector was maintained without serious incident and the UNDOF area of operation remained calm. Since November 1997, earthworks had been under way in the area of separation for a large agricultural project funded by the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD). IDF had expressed concern about the possible military implications of the work, particularly stone walls made up of rocks cleared from the fields. UNDOF discussed the matter with IFAD and the Syrian authorities, who agreed to make a number of adjustments.

The Secretary-General observed that, despite the quiet in the Israel-Syria sector, the situation in the Middle East continued to be potentially dangerous and was likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem could be reached. He hoped for determined efforts by all concerned to tackle the problem in all its aspects, with a view to arriving at a just and durable peace settlement, as called for by Security Council resolution 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213]. Stating that he considered the Force's continued presence in the area to be essential, the Secretary-General, with the agreement of both Syria and Israel, each time recommended that the UNDOF mandate be extended for a further six months, until 30 November 1998 in the first instance and 31 May 1999 in the second.

In making his recommendations, the Secretary-General drew attention to the serious shortfall in the funding of the Force, with unpaid assessments totalling $50.3 million in May and $52.9 million in November. Those amounts, representing money owed to the troop-contributing countries, were far larger than the Force's current annual budget. He therefore appealed to all Member States to pay their assessments promptly and in full and to clear all remaining arrears.

The Secretary-General, as part of his tour of the Middle East, visited UNDOF headquarters on 22 March and met with the Force Commander and his senior military and civilian staff.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 May [meeting 3885], the Security Council adopted resolution 1169(1998) unanimously. The draft [S/1998/422] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 14 May 1998 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force,

Decides:

(a) To call upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

(b) To renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for another period of six months, that is, until 30 November 1998;

(c) To request the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the development in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

On 25 November [meeting 3947], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1211(1998). The draft [S/1998/1115] was prepared during consultations.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 14 November 1998 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force,

Decides:

(a) To call upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

(b) To renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for another period of six months, that is, until 31 May 1999;

(c) To request the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the development in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

After the adoption of each resolution, the President made the following statement [S/PRST/1998/15, S/PRST/1998/33] on behalf of the Council:

As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states, in paragraph 10 [8 in the November report]: "Despite the present quiet in the Israeli-Syrian sector, the situation in the Middle East continues to be potentially dangerous and is likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached." That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General and ACABQ.

On 21 January, the Secretary-General presented a report [A/52/771] on the financial performance of UNDOF, covering the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997, for which resources of $32,254,900 gross ($31,342,900 net) were provided. Expenditures amounted to $32,393,100 gross ($31,534,500 net), resulting in additional requirements of $138,200 gross ($191,600 net), which was primarily due to UNDOF's prorated share of the cost of maintaining the UN Logistics Base in Brindisi, Italy, as well as to the recording of expenditures pertaining to the prior financial period ending 30 June 1996.

On 13 February, the Secretary-General presented the proposed budget of UNDOF [A/52/771/Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1] for the 12-month period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, totalling $33,643,900 gross ($32,750,200 net), which reflected a 3.9 per cent increase in gross terms compared with the resources approved for the preceding 12 months. The increased requirements related to replacement of vehicles and data-processing equipment. The budget provided for maintaining the Force at a level of 1,037 troops (821 infantry and 216 logistics personnel), supported by a civilian establishment of 120 (36 international and 84 local). In addition to approving the proposed appropriation, the Assembly was required to take a decision to credit Member States with the surplus balance of $2,742,000 for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995. In a May addendum [A/52/771/Add.2], the Secretary-General provided information on the estimated cost to UNTSO of direct support provided to UNDOF for the bienniums 1996-1997 ($8,159,000) and 1998-1999 ($9,074,500).

The Secretary-General noted that assessments on Member States in respect of UNDOF and the United Nations Emergency Force for the period from inception to 31 December 1997 totalled $1,145.6 million, while contributions received as at 31 December 1997 for the same period amounted to $1,096.2 million. Outstanding assessments were reduced by $4.2 million pursuant to General Assembly resolution 50/83 [YUN 1995, p. 406]. The outstanding balance of $49.4 million included an amount of $36 million transferred to a special account in accordance with Assembly resolution 36/116 A [YUN 1981, p. 1299].

In an April report [A/52/860/Add.5], ACABQ stated that there was no need to authorize an additional appropriation of $138,200 gross for UNDOF for 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997. As to the proposed programme budget for 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, it recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal that the Assembly appropriate $33,643,900 gross ($32,750,200 net), subject to the extension of the Force's mandate by the Security Council. It further recommended that Member States be credited their respective shares in the surplus balance of $2,742,000 for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 June [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/52/931], adopted resolution 52/236 without vote [agenda item 122 (a)].

Financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 350(1974) of 31 May 1974, by which the Council established the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1169(1998) of 27 May 1998,

Recalling also its resolution 3211 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974 on the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 51/232 of 13 June 1997,

Reaffirming that the costs of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the Force, a different procedure is required from that applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of such operations,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Concerned that the surplus balances in the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force have been used to meet expenses of the Force in order to compensate for the lack of income resulting from non-payment and late payment by Member States of their contributions,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force as at 15 May 1998, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 50.1 million United States dollars, representing 4.3 per cent of the total assessed contributions from the inception of the Force to the period ending 31 May 1998, notes that some 20.4 per cent of the Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States concerned, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses concern about the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursement of troop contributors, which bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full;

4. Urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full and on time;

5. Takes note of the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to employ locally recruited staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

8. Decides, as an ad hoc arrangement, to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force the amount of 35,400,100 dollars gross (34,506,400 dollars net) for the maintenance of the Force for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999, inclusive of the amount of 1,756,200 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations, to be apportioned among Member States at the monthly rate of 2,950,008 dollars gross (2,875,533 dollars net), in accordance with the composition of groups set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of General Assembly resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolutions 44/192 B of 21 December 1989, 45/269 of 27 August 1991, 46/198 A of 20 December 1991, 47/218 A of 23 December 1992, 49/249 A of 20 July 1995, 49/249 B of 14 September 1995, 50/224 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 A to C of 18 December 1996 and 52/230 of 31 March 1998 and its decisions 48/472 A of 23 December 1993 and 50/451 B of 23 December 1995, and taking into account the scale of assessments for the years 1998 and 1999, as set out in its resolution 52/215 A of 22 December 1997, subject to the decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force beyond 30 November 1998;

9. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 8 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 878,700 dollars approved for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999;

10. Decides further that there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 8 above, their respective share of the estimated other income of 15,000 dollars for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999;

11. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against the apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 8 above, their respective share of the surplus balance of 1,071,000 dollars for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995 and of the interest income of 1,671,000 dollars for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995;

12. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, their share of the surplus balance of 1,071,000 dollars for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995 and of the interest income of 1,671,000 dollars for the period from 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations;

13. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-third session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Disengagement Observer Force".

On 18 December, the Assembly decided that the Fifth Committee would continue consideration of the item on the financing of UNDOF at the resumed fifty-third session in 1999 (decision 53/458).

Chapter VII

Disarmament

During 1998, in all multilateral disarmament forums, differences persisted between a majority of non-nuclear-weapon States and nuclear-weapon States on how to address nuclear disarmament. Nuclear tests conducted by India and Pakistan in May, which influenced the deliberations on almost all nuclear issues, drew expressions of concern from the international community. The vast majority of States condemned the tests because they undermined the existing non-proliferation regime and the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT). Later in the year, India and Pakistan declared unilateral moratoriums on further tests.

The Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization and its subsidiary bodies proceeded with the task of establishing an effective global verification regime and with other activities necessary to implement the Treaty.

The Preparatory Committee for the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons held its second session. Divergence of views on substantive issues, particularly on article VI of the Treaty, as well as different interpretations of the decisions adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference prevailed, resulting in no progress in drafting substantive recommendations to the Review Conference. Thus, the Committee adopted decisions only on procedural questions. The International Atomic Energy Agency continued its efforts to strengthen and make more effective its safeguards system and the number of States that signed the Model Additional Protocol to the existing agreements on safeguards increased during the year.

At the bilateral level, the United States and the Russian Federation continued to reduce their nuclear arsenals on the basis of existing treaties, but the ratification of the 1993 Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START II) by Russia was not finalized. All nuclear-weapon States reported that they had unilaterally undertaken a number of measures, such as reducing their stocks of nuclear weapons and putting under safeguards part of their fissile materials.

At the regional level, the process of further consolidating the existing nuclear-weapon-free zones continued, and negotiations on basic elements of a Central Asia nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty began. In December, the Assembly welcomed the declaration by Mongolia of its nuclear-weapon-free status.

Efforts to strengthen the 1971 Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction through the development of a protocol to the Convention continued throughout the year. The Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW), which celebrated its first full year of operation in 1998, continued its activities under the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and the Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction. The Conference of States Parties to the Convention and the OPCW Executive Council adopted a number of decisions concerning the functioning of the Organization.

At the global level, the subjects of small arms, including illicit trafficking, and transparency in armaments were addressed in the United Nations and other multilateral forums. In December, the Assembly decided to convene an international conference on the illicit arms trade no later than 2001.

During the year two legal instruments dealing with anti-personnel mines were strengthened. The 1996 amended Protocol on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects entered into force in December, and the 1997 Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (the Ottawa Convention) received the required number of ratifications to launch its entry into force on 1 March 1999.

The Conference on Disarmament, at its three-part session in 1998, considered cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war; prevention of an arms race in outer space; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons; a comprehensive programme of disarmament; and transparency in armaments.

In April, the Disarmament Commission considered establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, a fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament, and guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament.

UN role in disarmament

UN machinery

Disarmament efforts within the United Nations continued in 1998, mainly through the General Assembly and its First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, the Disarmament Commission (a deliberative body) and the Conference on Disarmament (a multilateral negotiating forum, which met in Geneva).

In January, as recommended by the Secretary-General in his 1997 programme for reform of the United Nations [YUN 1997, p. 473], the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the UN Secretariat was re-established, headed by an Under-Secretary-General. The Department replaced the Centre for Disarmament Affairs, which had been in existence since 1992.

First Committee agenda items

In decision 52/416 B of 8 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-third (1998) session the item entitled "Rationalization of the work and reform of the agenda of the First Committee" (see also PART FIVE, Chapter IV).

The Assembly, by decision 53/423 of 4 December, took note of a November report of the First Committee [A/53/593], which stated that the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee, decided to include the item in the agenda of its current (fifty-third) session and to allocate it to the First Committee. The First Committee considered the item on 21 and 22 October.

Also on 4 December (decision 53/422), the Assembly included in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth (1999) session the item "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty" (see below, under "Nuclear disarmament").

Fourth special session devoted to disarmament

Disarmament Commission action. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 52/38 F [YUN 1997, p. 473], the Disarmament Commission considered the question of the fourth special session of the Assembly devoted to disarmament. The Assembly, by resolution 51/45 C [YUN 1996, p. 447], had decided to convene the session in 1999, subject to the emergence of a consensus on its agenda and objectives. Working Group II of the Commission, entrusted to deal with the item, in a general exchange of views held during 14 meetings between 9 and 24 April, decided that the paper presented by its Chairman, which had been annexed to its 1997 report to the Assembly [YUN 1997, p. 474], should serve as a basis for consideration of the subject. Following extensive discussion and consideration of the Chairman's non-papers, the Chairman submitted a new paper. On 24 April, the Group concluded that it had not been possible to reach a consensus on the fourth special session's objectives and agenda. The Group annexed the Chairman's paper to the Commission's 1998 report [A/53/42] for possible consideration by the Assembly, without prejudice to the positions of Member States and their right to put forward additional proposals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 AA without vote [agenda item 71 (i)].

Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 I of 15 December 1994, 50/70 F of 12 December 1995, 51/45 C of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 F of 9 December 1997,

Recalling also that, there has been a consensus to do so in each case, three special sessions of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament were held in 1978, 1982 and 1988, respectively,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, adopted by consensus at the first special session devoted to disarmament, which included the Declaration, Programme of Action and Machinery for disarmament,

Bearing in mind also the objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Welcoming the recent positive changes in the international landscape, characterized by the end of the cold war, the relaxation of tensions at the global level and the emergence of a new spirit governing relations among nations,

Taking note of paragraph 145 of the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, which supported the convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament, which would offer an opportunity to review from a perspective more in tune with the current international situation the most critical aspects of the process of disarmament and to mobilize the international community and public opinion in favour of the elimination of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and of the control and reduction of conventional weapons.

Taking note also of the report of the 1998 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission on the item entitled "Fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament",

Desiring to build upon the substantive exchange of views on the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament during the 1998 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission,

Reiterating its conviction that a special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament can set the future course of action in the field of disarmament, arms control and related international security matters,

Emphasizing the importance of multilateralism in the process of disarmament, arms control and related international security matters,

Noting that, with the recent accomplishments made by the international community in the field of weapons of mass destruction as well as conventional arms, the following years would be opportune for the international community to start the process of reviewing the state of affairs in the entire field of disarmament and arms control in the post-cold-war era,

1. Decides, subject to the emergence of a consensus on its objectives and agenda, to convene the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament;

2. Endorses the report of the Disarmament Commission on its 1998 substantive session, and recommends that an item entitled "Fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament" be included in the agenda of the Commission at its 1999 session, which should promote agreement on the agenda and timing of the special session;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament" and, subject to the outcome of the deliberations at the 1999 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission, to set an exact date for and to decide on organizational matters relating to the convening of the special session.

Disarmament Commission

The Disarmament Commission, composed of all United Nations Member States, held seven plenary meetings in 1998 (New York, 6-28 April) [A/53/42]; it also held organizational meetings on 27 March and 2 December.

At its 1998 session, the Commission considered the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned; the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament; and guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of Assembly resolution 51/45 N [YUN 1996, p. 490].

Three working groups, which met between 9 and 24 April, were established to deal with those agenda items. Working Group I, which considered the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones (see below, under "Nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament"), held 12 meetings; Working Group II, which dealt with the fourth special session of the Assembly devoted to disarmament, held 14 meetings; and Working Group III, entrusted with the mandate of dealing with guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament (see below, under "Conventional weapons and related issues"), held 11 meetings.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 September, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/52/602/Add.1], adopted decision 52/492 without vote [agenda item 73].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

At its 92nd plenary meeting, on 8 September 1998, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, recalling its resolution 52/12 B of 19 December 1997 and bearing in mind the need to enhance the efficient functioning of the Disarmament Commission, decided that:

(a) The Disarmament Commission should continue to play a unique role within the mechanism on disarmament as the only body with universal membership for in-depth deliberations on relevant disarmament issues;

(b) As of the 2000 substantive session, the substantive agenda of the Disarmament Commission should normally comprise two agenda items per year from the whole range of disarmament issues, including one on nuclear disarmament; the possibility of a third agenda item would be retained if there was a consensus to adopt such an item; parallel meetings of its subsidiary bodies should be avoided;

(c) Annual substantive sessions of the Disarmament Commission should last three weeks;

(d) Substantive agenda items should be considered in the Disarmament Commission for three years; other options for the duration of the consideration of an item, according to its specificity, could be adopted by consensus on an ad hoc basis;

(e) The regional groups should be urged to make possible the early election of the chairmen of the subsidiary bodies, preferably at the organizational session of the Commission in the autumn, so as to allow them to conduct inter-sessional consultations on the respective subjects. It is desirable that continuity of chairmanship of the subsidiary bodies be maintained throughout the consideration of a substantive item;

(f) Further optimization of the procedures of the Disarmament Commission, according to circumstances, could be a continuing consensus-based process, inter alia, in the context of the review of United Nations disarmament machinery.

On 4 December [meeting 79], the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/586], adopted resolution 53/79 A without vote [agenda item 73 (a)].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 47/54 A of 9 December 1992, 47/54 G of 8 April 1993, 48/77 A of 16 December 1993, 49/77 A of 15 December 1994, 50/72 D of 12 December 1995, 51/47 B of 10 December 1996 and 52/40 B of 9 December 1997,

Considering the role that the Disarmament Commission has been called upon to play and the contribution that it should make in examining and submitting recommendations on various problems in the field of disarmament and in the promotion of the implementation of the relevant decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session,

1. Takes note of the report of the Disarmament Commission;

2. Reaffirms the importance of further enhancing the dialogue and cooperation among the First Committee, the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament;

3. Reaffirms also the role of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized, deliberative body within the United Nations multilateral disarmament machinery that allows for in-depth deliberations on specific disarmament issues, leading to the submission of concrete recommendations on those issues;

4. Commends the Disarmament Commission for the successful conclusion of the review of its work in accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/12 B of 19 December 1997 at the resumed session of the First Committee in June 1998, resulting in the adoption of Assembly decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998;

5. Encourages the Disarmament Commission to continue to make every effort to enhance its working methods so as to enable it to give focused consideration to a limited number of priority issues in the field of disarmament, bearing in mind the decision it has taken to move its agenda towards a two-item phased approach;

6. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its work in accordance with its mandate, as set forth in paragraph 118 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and with paragraph 3 of Assembly resolution 37/78 H of 9 December 1982, and to that end to make every effort to achieve specific recommendations on the items of its agenda, taking into account the adopted "Ways and means to enhance the functioning of the Disarmament Commission";

7. Notes that the Disarmament Commission, at its 1998 organizational session, adopted the following items for consideration at its 1999 substantive session:

(a) The establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned;

(b) Guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution 51/45 N of 10 December 1996;

(c) The fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament;

8. Requests the Disarmament Commission to meet for a period not exceeding three weeks during 1999 and to submit a substantive report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Disarmament Commission the annual report of the Conference on Disarmament, together with all the official records of the fifty-third session of the General Assembly relating to disarmament matters, and to render all assistance that the Commission may require for implementing the present resolution;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure full provision to the Disarmament Commission and its subsidiary bodies of interpretation and translation facilities in the official languages and to assign, as a matter of priority, all the necessary resources and services, including verbatim records, to that end;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Report of the Disarmament Commission".

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament, a multilateral negotiating body, held a three-part session in Geneva in 1998 (19 January-27 March, 11 May-26 June and 27 July-9 September) [A/53/27]. In addition to the 60 members participating in the session, 47 other States were invited to participate at their request.

At its 1998 session, the Conference considered the cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war; prevention of an arms race in outer space; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons; a comprehensive programme of disarmament; and transparency in armaments.

In March, the Conference, under the agenda item on arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, established an ad hoc committee to negotiate an agreement on such arrangements, which could take the form of an internationally legally binding instrument. In August, the Conference, under the item on cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament, established an ad hoc committee to negotiate, on the basis of a 1995 report of the Special Coordinator [CD/1299] and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices.

The Conference appointed six Special Coordinators: the representative of Australia as Special Coordinator on anti-personnel landmines; the representative of Chile on improved and effective functioning of the Conference; the representative of Hungary on review of the agenda of the Conference; the representative of Romania on transparency in armaments; the representative of Sri Lanka on prevention of an arms race in outer space; and the representative of Switzerland on the expansion of the Conference's membership.

The Special Coordinator on anti-personnel landmines, reporting in June on the outcome of his consultations [CD/PV.799], proposed a draft mandate for an ad hoc committee and an accompanying statement of understanding, and advised the Conference that he would continue consultations on those texts with a view to seeing if a consensus could be reached that would enable the Conference to take a decision at its next (1999) session. Reporting to the Conference in August [CD/PV.805], the Special Coordinator, having requested the President to ascertain the views of regional groups on his proposals, stated that three of the regional groups (China, the Eastern Group and the Western Group) had reached a consensus in support of the proposed mandate and statement of understanding, while the Group of 21 (the non-aligned members of the Conference) still required further time for consideration.

The Special Coordinator on prevention of an arms race in outer space reported to the Conference in June [CD/PV.797] that, while there was no objection in principle to the re-establishment of an ad hoc committee on the subject, further consultations were needed on when that decision could be taken. In August [CD/PV.805], he presented a draft mandate for an ad hoc committee to continue to examine and to identify issues relevant to the item with a view to agreeing on a mandate for an ad hoc committee to negotiate measures towards the prevention of an arms race in outer space. The Special Coordinator noted that there was wide support for the draft mandate and the approach contained therein, although a complete consensus would require further consultations. He therefore recommended that the draft mandate be used as a basis for further consultations in 1999.

With regard to transparency in armaments, the Special Coordinator's initial findings indicated that many States attached importance to transparency as a means of achieving mutual confidence conducive to security and stability, both at regional and global levels [CD/PV.799]. Although nearly all delegations supported the idea of engaging in further work within the Conference, their approaches differed regarding the format of such work, its scope and purposes. Therefore, more consultations were needed. In August [CD/PV.805], the Special Coordinator reported on the merits of transparency in armaments, the scope of activity on transparency, and possible ways of dealing with it. He stated that transparency appeared to be an important ingredient in building confidence; it contributed to reducing the possibility of surprise attack and was aimed at decreasing political and military tensions. Transparency did not mean disclosing all military information, but provided for general information on national military policies and levels of critical armaments, as well as armed forces.

The Special Coordinator on improved and effective functioning reported in August that he had focused on proposals to improve and simplify the Conference's rules of procedure to facilitate its operation by having shorter procedural discussions and avoiding artificial links between issues under consideration [ibid.]. Since the differences of view prevented a consensus on his proposals, the Special Coordinator recommended that the Conference continue to study the subject in 1999.

The Special Coordinator on review of the agenda reported, also in August, that, although he had noted increased flexibility on the part of many delegations, there had been no major shift in basic positions on substantive matters or any agreement on how to redefine the disarmament agenda, which had been established during the cold war [ibid.]. Some delegations held that the existing agenda, based on the priorities established by the Final Document of the first (1978) special session of the General Assembly on disarmament [YUN 1978, p. 19], retained its relevance; they emphasized that the beginning of negotiations on nuclear disarmament remained their highest priority. Other delegations, mainly from the Western and Eastern European countries, advocated radical changes that would result in a generic agenda containing only three broad items: "Nuclear disarmament", "Conventional disarmament" and "Other items". With regard to the current agenda, the item entitled "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons" was most frequently proposed for deletion, and the relevance of the item "Prevention of nuclear war, including all related matters" was frequently questioned. A few new items had been proposed for inclusion in the agenda, particularly the regional aspects of arms control and disarmament (although some delegations were of the view that regional issues were outside the Conference's mandate) and conventional weapons. Although he was not in a position to make specific recommendations on the substance of the review of the agenda, the Special Coordinator proposed that the review should continue in 1999.

In September [CD/PV.807], the Special Coordinator on the expansion of the membership of the Conference reported that his consultations had led him to conclude that while a consensus in principle existed in favour of expansion beyond the current membership, considerable differences remained and the solutions providing for the admission of all or most of the applicant States were not yet ripe for a decision by the Conference. However, there would be a possibility of taking a decision that would lead to expanding the Conference by five members representing Latin America, Western Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States, Asia and Africa, namely, Ecuador, Ireland, Kazakhstan, Malaysia and Tunisia. In view of the fact that the work had not been completed, the Special Coordinator recommended that consultations continue in 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/586], adopted resolution 53/79 B without vote [agenda item 73 (b)].

Report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community, has the primary role in substantive negotiations on priority questions of disarmament,

Considering, in this respect, that the present international climate should give additional impetus to multilateral negotiations with the aim of reaching concrete agreements,

Recognizing that the Conference on Disarmament has a number of urgent and important issues for negotiations,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community;

2. Welcomes the determination of the Conference on Disarmament to fulfil that role in the light of the evolving international situation, with a view to making early substantive progress on priority items of its agenda;

3. Also welcomes the decisions of the Conference on Disarmament to establish an Ad Hoc Committee under item 4 of its agenda entitled "Effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons", to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, which could take the form of an internationally legally binding instrument, as well as an Ad Hoc Committee under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and takes note of the recommendations that they be re-established at the beginning of the 1999 session;

4. Further welcomes the decision of the Conference on Disarmament to entrust its successive Presidents with the task of pursuing intensive consultations and seeking the views of its members on appropriate methods and approaches for dealing with item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", and takes note of the recommendation by the last President of the 1998 session that they should resume at the start of the 1999 session;

5. Notes with satisfaction the desire of the Conference on Disarmament to promote substantive progress during its 1999 session, and expresses the hope that appropriate consultations during the inter-sessional period could lead to commencement of early work on various agenda items;

6. Encourages the Conference on Disarmament to continue its consultations on the review of its membership with a view to reaching an early agreement on its further expansion;

7. Also encourages the Conference on Disarmament to intensify further the ongoing review of its agenda and methods of work;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the provision to the Conference on Disarmament of adequate administrative, substantive and conference support services;

9. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Report of the Conference on Disarmament".

Nuclear disarmament

Conference on Disarmament

Differences of view among Member States on how to deal with the issue of nuclear disarmament persisted throughout the 1998 session of the Conference on Disarmament [A/53/27]. New proposals were submitted by South Africa [CD/1483], Canada [CD/1486], Belgium [CD/1496] and Algeria [CD/1545], aimed at exploring new ground for achieving consensus.

On 11 June, Sweden introduced a joint declaration on nuclear disarmament by the Foreign Ministers of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden [CD/1542], which called on the nuclear-weapon States and the three nuclear-weapons-capable States to commit themselves to the elimination of their nuclear weapons and nuclear weapons capability and to agree to start work immediately on the practical steps and negotiations required to achieve it.

Fissile material

The issue of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices was discussed extensively in the Conference on Disarmament within the context of the elaboration of the programme of work. Many delegations advocated an immediate commencement of negotiations on a fissile-material treaty as a separate measure, while others considered it to be part of a programme for nuclear disarmament. Views also diverged on the scope of a future treaty. New proposals for the establishment of an ad hoc committee on the subject were submitted by Canada [CD/1485] and Austria [CD/1492].

On 11 August, the Conference on Disarmament established, under the item "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", an ad hoc committee to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator [CD/1299] and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. The Ad Hoc Committee held a general exchange of views as a first step in substantive negotiations and recommended its re-establishment in 1999.

Note by Secretary-General. In a September note [A/53/415], the Secretary-General described measures to implement General Assembly resolution 52/38 L on nuclear disarmament [YUN 1997, p. 483]. Drawing the attention of Member States to the report of the Conference on Disarmament [A/53/27], he welcomed the Conference's decision to establish an ad hoc committee to negotiate a treaty banning the production of fissile material and the beginning of work thereon.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 I without vote [agenda item 71].

The Conference on Disarmament decision to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", an ad hoc committee to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator (CD/1299) and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 48/75 L of 16 December 1993,

Convinced that a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices would be a significant contribution to nuclear non-proliferation in all its aspects,

Noting the report of the Conference on Disarmament, in which, inter alia, the Conference records that in proceeding to take a decision on this matter, that decision is without prejudice to any further decisions on the establishment of further subsidiary bodies under agenda item 1 and that intensive consultations will be pursued to seek the views of the members of the Conference on Disarmament on appropriate methods and approaches for dealing with agenda item 1, taking into consideration all proposals and views in that respect,

1. Welcomes the decision by the Conference on Disarmament to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", an ad hoc committee which shall negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;

2. Notes with satisfaction that this ad hoc committee has already engaged in the first step in the substantive negotiations;

3. Encourages the Conference on Disarmament to re-establish its ad hoc committee at the beginning of its 1999 session.

Security assurances

The Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons of the Conference on Disarmament [A/53/27] discussed the nature and scope of existing negative security assurances, including Security Council resolution 984(1995) [YUN 1995, p. 192], declarations of nuclear-weapon States and protocols to the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties and their interpretative statements. The Committee also considered common and distinctive elements and those that needed clarification—invasion, aggression, attack, dependent territories, security commitment, association or alliance—and new developments.

The Ad Hoc Committee reaffirmed that, pending the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, non-nuclear-weapon States should be effectively assured by the nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons and noted the relationship between negative and positive security assurances. It recommended the re-establishment of the Committee in 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/582], adopted resolution 53/75 by recorded vote (117-0-52) [agenda item 69].

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to allay the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Welcoming the progress achieved in recent years in both nuclear and conventional disarmament,

Noting that, despite recent progress in the field of nuclear disarmament, further efforts are necessary towards the achievement of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Determined strictly to abide by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or threat of force,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures and arrangements to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures and arrangements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can contribute positively to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document,

Recalling the relevant parts of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament<sup>a</sup> submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, and of the special report of the Conference on Disarmament submitted to the Assembly at its fifteenth special session, the third special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the report of the Conference on its 1992 session,

Recalling also paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this item,

Taking note of the proposals submitted under that item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note also of the relevant decision of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998,<sup>b</sup> as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking note further of the unilateral declarations made by all nuclear-weapon States on their policies of non-use or non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against the non-nuclear-weapon States,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

Noting also the greater willingness to overcome the difficulties encountered in previous years, as manifested in the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee on the issue by the Conference on Disarmament during its 1998 session and the recommendation of the Conference to establish the Ad Hoc Committee at the beginning of its 1999 session,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 984(1995) of 11 April 1995 and the views expressed on it,

Recalling its relevant resolutions adopted in previous years, in particular resolutions 45/54 of 4 December 1990, 46/32 of 6 December 1991, 47/50 of 9 December 1992, 48/73 of 16 December 1993, 49/73 of 15 December 1994, 50/68 of 12 December 1995, 51/43 of 10 December 1996 and 52/36 of 9 December 1997,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach an early agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties as regards evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to work actively towards an early agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula that could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts should be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including, in particular, those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, should be further explored in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Recommends also that the Conference on Disarmament should actively continue intensive negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international arrangements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

START and other bilateral agreements and unilateral measures

The United States and the Russian Federation continued to implement the 1991 Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I) [YUN 1991, p. 34], which entered into force on 5 December 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 145], by reducing their nuclear-arms stockpiles. Both countries reported that by the end of 1998 they were nearly two years ahead of schedule in implementing START I limits on the number of delivery vehicles through elimination of heavy bombers, missile launchers and submarines capable of carrying nuclear missiles. They also had deactivated and dismantled more than 18,000 strategic and tactical nuclear warheads [A/C.1/53/PV.5].

The Russian Duma, however, continued to postpone ratification of the 1993 START II Treaty [YUN 1993, p. 117], due to a number of concerns regarding strategic arms reductions: Russia would have to build additional single-warhead missiles to maintain parity while destroying its multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicle intercontinental ballistic missiles (MIRVed ICBMs); the security benefits of START II would have to be ensured as soon as possible through deactivation of strategic nuclear-delivery vehicles slated for elimination by the end of 2003; and the viability of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty should be preserved. By the end of the year, there were positive signals that pointed towards improved chances of the Russian Duma's consideration of START II in the near future. Speaking in the First Committee in October [A/C.1/53/PV.5], the representative of the Russian Federation pointed out that the Chairman of the Russian Government had expressed firm determination to press for START II ratification by the State Duma of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation in the near future. He also stressed the importance of the United States ratification of all START II-related instruments. Ratification of START II would allow both sides to enter into START III negotiations as agreed in a joint statement by Russian President Boris Yeltsin and United States President William J. Clinton at their 1997 summit meeting [YUN 1997, p. 481].

On 2 September [A/53/371-S/1998/848], at a summit meeting in Moscow, Presidents Clinton and Yeltsin, reaffirming their commitment to strict compliance with their obligations under START I and the ABM Treaty, expressed their determination to collaborate in expediting the entry into force of START II and launching negotiations on lower levels within the framework of START III, as soon as Russia had ratified START U. Both countries also issued joint statements on the removal of some 50 metric tons of plutonium from their nuclear stockpiles, to be disposed of in such a way that the material could not be reused in nuclear weapons. The 50 tons represented 25 per cent of Russian stocks and 50 per cent of United States stocks. They also agreed to exchange information on missile launches and on early warning aimed at reducing the danger that ballistic missiles could be launched inadvertently, on the basis of false warning of attack. The two countries also agreed to work towards establishing a multilateral ballistic missile and space launch vehicle pre-launch notification regime, in which other States would be invited to participate, and to regularize and develop a series of inter-agency subgroups to enhance export control cooperation in the areas of missile technology, nuclear weapons and material, implementation of so-called catch-all legislation, conventional arms transfers, law enforcement, customs and licensing.

Under the 1996 "Trilateral Initiative" [YUN 1996, p. 465] among the United States, the Russian Federation and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)—established to address regulation by IAEA of fissile material removed from weapons to ensure that once withdrawn from weapons programmes, it would not be returned to the defence stockpile—the technical, financial and legal aspects of IAEA verification of such material were further considered. The United States declared that it had unilaterally removed more than 225 metric tons of fissile material from its nuclear stockpile as excess to its national security requirements. It would make that material available for IAEA safeguards as soon as practicable; 12 tons were already under IAEA safeguards. It also committed 26 metric tons for inspection by the end of 1999 and an additional 52 metric tons of excess material was being readied for international inspection.

The three other nuclear-weapon States took unilateral measures concerning their nuclear posture and nuclear weapons. Following the dismantling in 1977 of the surface-to-surface missiles deployed on the Plateau d'Albion and the de-targeting and downgrading of the state of alert, France declared that none of the nuclear components of its deterrent force was targeted [CD/PV.793]. It had also downgraded the levels of alert of the air and submarine forces in the light of the new strategic context. On 1 August, France completed the dismantling of the Pacific Test Site facilities. With regard to the production of fissile material, France announced that operations for a total close-down of its installations were to begin in 1998 at the two sites of Marcoule and Pierrelatte.

The United Kingdom and China released reports on their national defence postures on 8 July and 27 July, respectively. The United Kingdom announced plans to reduce its nuclear arsenal to fewer than 200 operationally available nuclear warheads deployed on its four Trident ballistic missile submarines. It made transparent its stocks of fissile material and had decided to restructure its conventional forces into a Joint Rapid Reaction Force to respond better to multi-lateral peace support operations.

The White Paper on China's National Defence recalled its previously announced plans to reduce the number of its military personnel by 500,000 within the next few years and to downsize the military's commercial activities and holdings. The White Paper also reaffirmed the general principle that the international community should promote fair, rational, comprehensive and balanced arms control and disarmament in order to strengthen international peace and security. China reiterated a prior commitment unconditionally to provide non-nuclear-weapon States and nuclear-weapon-free zones with negative security assurances and for the first time promised to provide them with positive security assurances.

Communications. By a 9 June letter [A/53/138], Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden transmitted the text of a joint declaration on nuclear disarmament by their Ministers for Foreign Affairs entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: the need for a new agenda". Welcoming the future promise of START as a mechanism for the practical dismantlement and destruction of nuclear armaments undertaken to eliminate nuclear weapons, the Ministers stated that the maintenance of a nuclear-weapon-free world would require the underpinnings of a universal and multilaterally negotiated legally binding instrument or a framework encompassing a mutually reinforcing set of instruments. The eight countries proposed steps for achieving a fast track to a nuclear-free world, including recommendations for the nuclear-weapon States to "abandon hair-trigger postures" by de-alerting and deactivating nuclear weapons and removing non-strategic nuclear weapons from deployed sites to a limited number of secure storage facilities. They also proposed a joint no-first-use undertaking between the nuclear-weapon States.

On 16 June [A/53/162], India, referring to the joint declaration, assured the Ministers that its commitment to taking initiatives and supporting initiatives towards a nuclear-weapon-free world remained undiluted.

On 14 October [A/C.1/53/5], Mexico transmitted a statement on the impasse in nuclear disarmament issued by the Pugwash Council (Jurica, Mexico, 29 September-4 October).

Note by Secretary-General. In September [A/53/415], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 L [YUN 1997, p. 483], noted the unilateral or bilateral efforts taken by nuclear-weapon States. He continued to believe that systematic and progressive efforts to reduce nuclear weapons, with the ultimate goal of their complete elimination, remained a priority task for the international community.

Nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 49/75 E of 15 December 1994 on a step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat, and its resolutions 50/70 P of 12 December 1995, 51/45 O of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 L of 9 December 1997 on nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1972 and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1993 have already established legal regimes on the complete prohibition of biological and chemical weapons, respectively, and determined to achieve a nuclear weapons convention on the prohibition of the development, testing, production, stockpiling, loan, transfer, use and threat of use of nuclear weapons and on their destruction, and to conclude such an international convention at an early date,

Recognizing that there now exist conditions for the establishment of a world free of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, calling for the urgent negotiation of agreements for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, and for a comprehensive and phased programme with agreed timeframes, wherever feasible, for the progressive and balanced reduction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, leading to their ultimate and complete elimination at the earliest possible time,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recognizing that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and any proposed treaty on fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices must constitute disarmament measures, and not only non-proliferation measures, and that these measures, together with an international legal instrument on the joint undertaking of no first use of nuclear weapons by the nuclear-weapon States and on adequate security assurances of non-use and non-threat of use of such weapons for non-nuclear-weapon States, respectively, and an international convention prohibiting the use of nuclear weapons, should be integral measures in a programme leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Welcoming the entry into force of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms, to which Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America are States parties,

Welcoming also the conclusion of the Treaty on Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms by the Russian Federation and the United States of America and the ratification of that Treaty by the United States of America, and looking forward to the full implementation of the START I and START II Treaties by the States parties, and to further concrete steps for nuclear disarmament by all the nuclear-weapon States,

Noting with appreciation the unilateral measures by the nuclear-weapon States for nuclear arms limitation, and encouraging them to undertake further such measures,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament, and that bilateral negotiations can never replace multilateral negotiations in this respect,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and the multilateral efforts in the Conference on Disarmament to reach agreement on such an international convention at an early date,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996, and welcoming the unanimous reaffirmation by all Judges of the Court that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Mindful of paragraph 114 and other relevant recommendations in the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, on a priority basis, an ad hoc committee to commence negotiations in 1998 on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament and for the eventual elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Bearing in mind the proposal of twenty-eight delegations to the Conference on Disarmament that are members of the Group of 21 for a programme of action for the elimination of nuclear weapons, and expressing its conviction that this proposal will be an important input and will contribute to negotiations on this question in the Conference,

Commending the initiative by twenty-six delegations to the Conference on Disarmament that are members of the Group of 21 proposing a comprehensive mandate for an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament, which includes negotiations for, as a first step, a universal and legally binding multilateral agreement committing all States to the objective of the total elimination of nuclear weapons, an agreement on further steps required in a phased programme with time-frames leading to the total elimination of these weapons and a convention on the prohibition of the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices taking into account the report of the Special Coordinator on that item and the views relating to the scope of the treaty,

Taking note of the joint declaration issued on 9 June 1998 by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Egypt, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Slovenia, South Africa and Sweden, entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: the need for a new agenda", supported and responded to by a number of States including some members of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries,

1. Recognizes that, in view of recent political developments, the time is now opportune for all the nuclear-weapon States to undertake effective disarmament measures with a view to the total elimination of these weapons with a specified framework of time;

2. Recognizes also that there is a genuine need to de-emphasize the role of nuclear weapons and to review and revise nuclear doctrines accordingly;

3. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to stop immediately the qualitative improvement, development, production and stockpiling of nuclear warheads and their delivery systems;

4. Also urges the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to de-alert and deactivate immediately their nuclear weapons;

5. Calls for the conclusion, as a first step, of a universal and legally binding multilateral agreement committing all States to the objective of the total elimination of nuclear weapons;

6. Reiterates its call upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat and to carry out effective nuclear disarmament measures with a view to the total elimination of these weapons with a specified framework of time;

7. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States, pending the achievement of a total ban on nuclear weapons through a nuclear-weapons convention, to agree on an internationally and legally binding instrument of the joint undertaking not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, and calls upon all States to conclude an internationally and legally binding instrument on security assurances of non-use and threat of use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapon States;

8. Welcomes the establishment in the Conference on Disarmament of the Ad Hoc Committee on the prohibition of the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices and urges a speedy conclusion of a universal and non-discriminatory convention thereon, and also welcomes the establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons and urges the pursuit of efforts in this regard as a matter of priority;

9. Expresses its concern at the continuing opposition by some nuclear-weapon States to the establishment of an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament in the Conference on Disarmament, as called for in General Assembly resolution 52/38 L;

10. Reiterates its call upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, on a priority basis, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament to commence negotiations early in 1999 on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament and for the eventual elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time through a nuclear-weapons convention;

11. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to take into account in this regard the proposal of the twenty-eight delegations for a programme of action for the elimination of nuclear weapons, as well as the mandate for the ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament, proposed by the twenty-six delegations;

12. Calls for the convening of an international conference on nuclear disarmament at an early date with the objective of arriving at an agreement on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament and for the eventual elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time through a nuclear-weapons convention;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Nuclear disarmament".

The Assembly adopted resolution 53/77 Z by recorded vote (166-0-8) [agenda item 71].

Bilateral nuclear arms negotiations and nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions,

Recognizing the fundamental changes that have taken place with respect to international security, which have permitted agreements on deep reductions in the nuclear armaments of the States possessing the largest inventories of such weapons,

Mindful that it is the responsibility and obligation of all States to contribute to the process of the relaxation of international tension and to the strengthening of international peace and security and, in this connection, to adopt and implement measures towards the attainment of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

Appreciating a number of positive developments in the field of nuclear disarmament, in particular the Treaty between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America on the Elimination of Their Intermediate-Range and Shorter-Range Missiles, and the treaties on the reduction and limitation of strategic arms,

Appreciating also the indefinite extension of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and acknowledging the importance of the determined pursuit by the nuclear-weapon States of systematic and progressive efforts to reduce nuclear weapons globally, with the ultimate goal of eliminating those weapons, and by all States of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

Welcoming the steps that have already been taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America to begin the process of reducing the number of nuclear weapons and removing such weapons from a deployed status, and bilateral agreements on detargeting strategic nuclear missiles,

Noting the positive climate of relations between the States of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America, which permits them to intensify their cooperative efforts to ensure the safety, security, and environmentally sound destruction of nuclear weapons,

Recalling the Moscow Summit Declaration on Nuclear Safety and Security of April 1996,

Urging early action to complete the ratification of the Treaty on Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms and further intensification of efforts to accelerate the implementation of agreements and unilateral decisions relating to nuclear arms reduction,

Appreciating the joint statement on future reductions in nuclear forces and the joint statement outlining the elements of an agreement for higher-velocity theatre missile defence systems, both issued on 21 March 1997 by the Russian Federation and the United States of America, as well as their joint statement of 10 May 1995 in connection with the Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems,

Welcoming the joint statement issued at Helsinki on 21 March 1997, in which the Presidents of the Russian Federation and the United States of America reached an understanding that, after the entry into force of START II, their two countries would immediately commence negotiations on a START III agreement, which would include the establishment, by 31 December 2007, of lower aggregate levels of 2,000 to 2,500 deployed warheads,

Noting with satisfaction the Protocol to START II, the Joint Agreed Statement, and the Letters on Early Deactivation, agreed to by the Russian Federation and the United States of America in New York on 26 September 1997, which are intended to be taken as further concrete steps to reduce the nuclear danger and strengthen international stability and nuclear safety,

Welcoming the signing on 26 September 1997 by Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America of a number of significant agreements that contribute to ensuring the viability of the Treaty on the Limitation of Anti-Ballistic Missile Systems,

Welcoming the significant reductions made by some of the other nuclear-weapon States, and encouraging all nuclear-weapon States to consider appropriate measures relating to nuclear disarmament,

1. Welcomes the entry into force of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms, signed in Moscow on 31 July 1991 by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America, including the Protocol to that Treaty signed at Lisbon on 23 May 1992 by the parties thereto, and the exchange of documents of ratification between Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America on 5 December 1994 at Budapest;

2. Also welcomes the signing of the Treaty between the Russian Federation and the United States of America on Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms in Moscow on 3 January 1993, and urges the parties to take the steps necessary to bring that Treaty into force at the earliest possible date;

3. Expresses its satisfaction at the reductions of strategic offensive arms being carried out in accordance with the 1991 Treaty as well as the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States of America to the 1993 Treaty in January 1996, and expresses its hope that it will soon be possible for the Russian Federation to take corresponding steps to ratify that Treaty and for the United States Senate and the State Duma of the Russian Federation to approve the Protocol to the 1993 Treaty and other documents signed on 26 September 1997, so that START II can enter into force;

4. Expresses further satisfaction at the continuing implementation of the Treaty between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America on the Elimination of Their Intermediate-Range and Shorter-Range Missiles, in particular at the completion by the parties of the destruction of all their declared missiles subject to elimination under the Treaty;

5. Welcomes the removal of all nuclear weapons from the territory of Kazakhstan as from 1 June 1995, from the territory of Ukraine as from 1 June 1996, and from the territory of Belarus as from 30 November 1996;

6. Encourages Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America to continue their cooperative efforts aimed at eliminating strategic offensive arms on the basis of existing agreements, and welcomes the contributions that other States are making to such cooperation as well;

7. Welcomes the participation in the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons of Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine as non-nuclear-weapon States, which thereby provided notable enhancement of the non-proliferation regime;

8. Welcomes the initiative signed by Presidents Yeltsin and Clinton on 2 September 1998, contained in the joint statement on the exchange of information on missile launches and early warning, to exchange information on ballistic missiles and space launch vehicles derived from each side's missile launch warning system, including the possible establishment of a centre for the exchange of missile launch data operated by the Russian Federation and the United States of America and separate from their respective national centres, and takes note of the initiative to examine bilaterally the possibility of establishing a multilateral ballistic missile and space launch vehicle pre-launch notification regime in which other States could voluntarily participate;

9. Welcomes the September 1998 pledge by the Russian Federation and the United States of America to remove by stages approximately fifty metric tons of plutonium from each of their nuclear weapons programmes, and to convert this material so that it can never be used in nuclear weapons;

10. Urges the Russian Federation and the United States of America to commence negotiations on a START III agreement immediately after ratification by the Russian Federation of START II, thereby fulfilling the commitments they undertook in the joint statement issued in Moscow on 2 September 1998;

11. Encourages and supports the Russian Federation and the United States of America in their efforts aimed at reducing and eliminating their nuclear weapons on the basis of existing agreements and to continue to give those efforts the highest priority in order to contribute to the ultimate goal of eliminating those weapons;

12. Invites the Russian Federation and the United States of America to keep other States Members of the United Nations duly informed of progress in their discussions and in the implementation of their strategic offensive arms agreements and unilateral decisions.

Resolution 53/77 Y was adopted by recorded vote (114-18-38) [agenda item 71].

Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world:
the need for a new agenda

The General Assembly,

Alarmed by the threat to the very survival of mankind posed by the existence of nuclear weapons,

Concerned at the prospect of the indefinite possession of nuclear weapons,

Concerned also at the continued retention of the nuclear-weapons option by those three States that are nuclear-weapons capable and that have not acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Believing that the proposition that nuclear weapons can be retained in perpetuity and never used accidentally or by decision defies credibility, and that the only complete defence is the elimination of nuclear weapons and the assurance that they will never be produced again,

Concerned that the nuclear-weapon States have not fulfilled speedily and totally their commitment to the elimination of their nuclear weapons,

Concerned also that those three States that are nuclear-weapons capable and that have not acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons have failed to renounce their nuclear-weapons option,

Bearing in mind that the overwhelming majority of States entered into legally binding commitments not to receive, manufacture or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and that these undertakings have been made in the context of the corresponding legally binding commitments by the nuclear-weapon States to the pursuit of nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice in its 1996 advisory opinion that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Stressing that the international community must not enter the third millennium with the prospect that the possession of nuclear weapons will be considered legitimate for the indefinite future, and convinced that the present juncture provides a unique opportunity to proceed to prohibit and eradicate them for all time,

Recognizing that the total elimination of nuclear weapons will require measures to be taken firstly by those nuclear-weapon States that have the largest arsenals, and stressing that these States must be joined in a seamless process by those nuclear-weapon States with lesser arsenals in the near future,

Welcoming the achievements to date and the future promise of the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks process and the possibility it offers for development as a plurilateral mechanism including all the nuclear-weapon States, for the practical dismantling and destruction of nuclear armaments undertaken in pursuit of the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Believing that there are a number of practical steps that the nuclear-weapon States can and should take immediately before the actual elimination of nuclear arsenals and the development of requisite verification regimes take place, and, in this connection, noting certain recent unilateral and other steps,

Welcoming the agreement recently reached in the Conference on Disarmament on the establishment of an Ad Hoc Committee under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and considering that such a treaty must further underpin the process towards the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Emphasizing that, for the total elimination of nuclear weapons to be achieved, effective international cooperation to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons is vital and must be enhanced through, inter alia, the extension of international controls over all fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices,

Emphasizing also the importance of existing nuclear-weapon-free zone treaties and of the signature and ratification of the relevant protocols to these treaties,

Noting the joint ministerial declaration of 9 June 1998 and its call for a new international agenda to achieve a nuclear-weapon-free world, through the pursuit, in parallel, of a series of mutually reinforcing measures at the bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral levels,

1. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to demonstrate an unequivocal commitment to the speedy and total elimination of their respective nuclear weapons and, without delay, to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to the elimination of these weapons, thereby fulfilling their obligations under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon the United States of America and the Russian Federation to bring the Treaty on Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START II) into force without further delay and immediately thereafter to proceed with negotiations on START III with a view to its early conclusion;

3. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the necessary steps towards the seamless integration of all five nuclear-weapon States into the process leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons;

4. Also calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to pursue vigorously the reduction of reliance on non-strategic nuclear weapons and negotiations on their elimination as an integral part of their overall nuclear disarmament activities;

5. Further calls upon the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to proceed to the de-alerting of their nuclear weapons and, in turn, to the removal of nuclear warheads from delivery vehicles;

6. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to examine further interim measures, including measures to enhance strategic stability and accordingly to review strategic doctrines;

7. Calls upon those three States that are nuclear-weapon capable and that have not yet acceded to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to reverse clearly and urgently the pursuit of all nuclear weapons development or deployment and to refrain from any action which could undermine regional and international peace and security and the efforts of the international community towards nuclear disarmament and the prevention of nuclear weapons proliferation;

8. Calls upon those States that have not yet done so to adhere unconditionally and without delay to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and to take all the necessary measures which flow from adherence to this instrument;

9. Also calls upon those States that have not yet done so to conclude full-scope safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency and to conclude additional protocols to their safeguards agreements on the basis of the Model Protocol approved by the Board of Governors of the Agency on 15 May 1997;

10. Further calls upon those States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify, unconditionally and without delay, the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and, pending the entry into force of the Treaty, to observe a moratorium on nuclear tests;

11. Calls upon those States that have not yet done so to adhere to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material and to work towards its further strengthening;

12. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to pursue its negotiations in the Ad Hoc Committee established under item 1 of its agenda entitled "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, of a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, taking into consideration both nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament objectives, and to conclude these negotiations without delay, and, pending the entry into force of the treaty, urges States to observe a moratorium on the production of fissile materials for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;

13. Also calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish an appropriate subsidiary body to deal with nuclear disarmament and, to that end, to pursue as a matter of priority its intensive consultations on appropriate methods and approaches with a view to reaching such a decision without delay;

14. Considers that an international conference on nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation, which would effectively complement efforts being undertaken in other settings, could facilitate the consolidation of a new agenda for a nuclear-weapon-free world;

15. Recalls the importance of the decisions and resolution adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and underlines the importance of implementing fully the decision on strengthening the review process for the Treaty;

16. Affirms that the development of verification arrangements will be necessary for the maintenance of a world free from nuclear weapons, and requests the International Atomic Energy Agency, together with any other relevant international organizations and bodies, to explore the elements of such a system;

17. Calls for the conclusion of an internationally legally binding instrument to effectively assure non-nuclear-weapon States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

18. Stresses that the pursuit, extension and establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at, especially in regions of tension, such as the Middle East and South Asia, represent a significant contribution to the goal of a nuclear-weapon-free world;

19. Affirms that a nuclear-weapon-free world will ultimately require the underpinnings of a universal and multilaterally negotiated legally binding instrument or a framework encompassing a mutually reinforcing set of instruments;

20. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to compile a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session an item entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: the need for a new agenda", and to review the implementation of the present resolution.

Resolution 53/77 F was adopted by recorded vote (108-45-17) [agenda item 71].

Reducing nuclear danger

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Reaffirming that any use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would constitute a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

Convinced that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects would seriously enhance the danger of nuclear war,

Convinced also that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Considering that until nuclear weapons cease to exist, it is imperative on the part of the nuclear-weapon States to adopt measures that assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering also that the hair-trigger alert of nuclear weapons carries unacceptable risks of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, which will have catastrophic consequences for all mankind,

Conscious that limited steps relating to detargeting have been taken by the nuclear-weapon States to address this concern and that further steps are necessary to contribute to the improvement in the international climate for negotiations leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful that reduction of tensions brought about by a change in nuclear doctrines would positively impact on international peace and security and improve the conditions for the further reduction and the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recalling that the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons states that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

1. Calls for a review of nuclear doctrines and, in this context, immediate and urgent steps to reduce the risks of unintentional and accidental use of nuclear weapons;

2. Requests the five nuclear-weapon States to undertake measures towards the implementation of paragraph 1 of the present resolution;

3. Calls upon Member States to take the necessary measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to promote nuclear disarmament, with the ultimate objective of eliminating nuclear weapons;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session an item entitled "Reducing nuclear danger".

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Status

As at 31 December 1998, 151 States had signed the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) [YUN 1996, p. 451] and 26 had ratified it. During the year, instruments of ratification were deposited by Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Canada, Denmark, El Salvador, France, Germany, Grenada, Jordan, Monaco, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and the United Kingdom.

In accordance with article XIV, the Treaty was to enter into force 180 days after the 44 States possessing nuclear reactors, listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, had deposited their instruments of ratification. By year's end, 13 of those States had ratified CTBT.

Preparatory Commission for CTBT Organization

The Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, established in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 452], continued its efforts to set up an International Monitoring System (IMS) to detect and identify nuclear explosions prohibited under article I of CTBT. IMS would comprise a network of 321 stations worldwide, including 50 primary and 120 auxiliary seismological stations equipped to detect nuclear explosions, and 80 radionuclide stations designed to identify radioactive particles released during a nuclear explosion. IMS would transmit data to the International Data Centre (IDC), located in Vienna.

In line with those activities, the Commission signed a contract with Hughes Olivetti Telecom

Ltd. in September to establish the global communications infrastructure required for verifying compliance with the Treaty's provisions. The satellite communications network would ensure the efficient and secure transmittal of data between 337 worldwide monitoring facilities, IDC and the CTBT signatories.

The Commission held its fifth (6-9 April) [CTBT/PC-5/1/Rev.1], sixth (17-19 August) [CTBT/PC-6/1/Rev.1] and seventh (9-13 November) [CTBT/PC-7/1/Rev.1] sessions, all in Vienna, to discuss organizational, budgetary and other related matters pertaining to the establishment of the global verification regime. In November, the Commission adopted its 1999 budget of $74.7 million, nearly half of which was earmarked for establishing or upgrading the global network of stations for IMS; the remainder would be used to build up IDC, establish the global communications infrastructure and develop procedures and guidelines to support on-site inspections once the Treaty entered into force.

Nuclear testing in South Asia

The underground testing of nuclear devices by India and Pakistan in May constituted a serious challenge to the international community's efforts to eliminate the threat posed by weapons of mass destruction and to maintain and strengthen the prevailing global norms of disarmament, non-proliferation and non-testing. The tests were the first since the opening for signature of CTBT in September 1996 and the de facto moratorium on nuclear testing that had been in existence since then. There was considerable concern about the effects those developments would have on the long-term viability of the non-proliferation regime and international peace and stability.

India detonated three underground nuclear explosions on 11 May and Pakistan detonated five on 28 May [A/53/427]. In both cases, only one seismic signal was recorded on Australian seismic stations, indicating that all explosions were detonated simultaneously or that only one was large enough to be recorded. In addition, India detonated two subkiloton underground explosions on 13 May. No signals from those events had been found in the records produced by Australian seismic stations. On 30 May, Pakistan detonated an additional underground explosion of less than 10 kilotons of TNT.

Communications and statements. On 11 May [CD/1504], India transmitted to the Secretary-General of the Conference on Disarmament a press release of the same date that stated that the nuclear tests proved India's capability for a weaponized nuclear programme. They also provided a database that would be useful in designing nuclear weapons of different yields for different applications and for different delivery systems. India said it would be prepared to consider being an adherent to some of the undertakings contained in CTBT and expressed its continuing commitment to a speedy process of nuclear disarmament leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons. In a 13 May press release [CD/1504/Add.1], India stated that further tests had been carried out to generate additional data for improved computer simulation of designs and for attaining the capability to carry out subcritical experiments. The planned series of underground tests had been completed.

At a Conference on Disarmament meeting in June, Pakistan said that its decision to test was based on what it claimed was the steady escalation in the provocations and threats emanating from India; the international community's weak and partial response to India's tests and threats; and Pakistan's desire to assert its capability to deter and respond devastatingly to aggression or pre-emptive strikes against its facilities [CD/PV.795]. Pakistan's tests were a reaction and had restabilized the balance of mutual deterrence in South Asia. Regarding the prevention of an open nuclear arms race in South Asia, Pakistan was willing to participate in and contribute to international endeavours to establish nuclear restraint in the region. It was not interested in an arms race with India, nor was it seeking nuclear-weapon status. Pakistan's tests were defence-oriented and meant to restore strategic balance in the region.

In a series of statements issued in May, the Secretary-General deplored the tests, called on India and Pakistan to sign CTBT and freeze their nuclear weapons development programmes, and urged them to exercise maximum restraint and to reduce the high tension between them.

The international community reacted to the tests with expressions of condemnation, profound regret or serious concern over the possibility of the emergence of any new nuclear-weapon State, as well as any non-State entity in a position to produce or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons. States and organizations that transmitted communications on the subject were: Argentina [CD/1538]; Australia [A/52/900-S/1998/394, CD/1536, A/52/950-S/1998/514, A/53/177]; Belarus [CD/1532, A/52/944-S/1998/468]; Chile [CD/1528]; China [CD/1508]; Finland [CD/1530]; the Holy See [CD/1535]; Indonesia [CD/1515, CD/1537]; Kazakhstan [A/52/903-S/1998/397, A/52/924-S/1998/442, CD/1506]; Lithuania [CD/1533]; Malaysia [CD/1521]; Mexico [CD/1509, CD/1517]; Mongolia [A/52/917-S/1998/426, CD/1531]; New Zealand [A/52/904-

S/1998/398, A/52/928-S/1998/440]; the Philippines on behalf of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) Regional Forum [A/52/943-S/1998/463]; Poland [CD/1527]; Romania [CD/1529]; the Russian Federation [CD/1540]; South Africa [CD/1541]; Sweden [CD/1539]; Ukraine [A/52/907-S/1998/402, CD/1507, A/53/132-S/1998/448, CD/1520]; the United Arab Emirates [A/52/929-S/1998/450]; the United States [CD/1505, CD/1522]; Uzbekistan [A/52/909-S/1998/412, A/52/925-S/1998/443]; Argentina, Australia, Canada, Chile, Kazakhstan, New Zealand, the Republic of Korea and Ukraine [A/52/945-S/1998/472]; the countries of the Permanent Mechanism for Consultation and Concerted Political Action, known as the Rio Group (Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela) [CD/1510]; IAEA [GC(42)/RES/19]; the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean [CD/1538]; the Central American Integrated System [A/52/923-S/1998/441]; the European Union [S/1998/458]; and the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council [A/53/164-S/1998/600].

On 2 June, New Zealand made a statement to the Conference on Disarmament on behalf of 47 member States and observers [CD/PV.795], which emphasized that the nuclear tests by India and Pakistan blatantly undermined the international regime of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons as well as the goal of eliminating them. Both countries were urged to announce immediately the cessation of all further testing, renounce their nuclear weapons programmes, sign and unconditionally ratify CTBT, accede without delay to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17] and engage in negotiations to conclude a ban on the production of fissile material.

Pakistan transmitted a 23 May letter to the Secretary-General from its Prime Minister [A/52/916-S/1998/424] describing what it termed the dangerous development of tensions in the region as a result of the nuclear tests and other provocative moves by India.

In response to the 2 June letter from the Philippines transmitting a statement by the Chairman of the ASEAN Regional Forum [A/52/943-S/1998/463], India, on 23 June [A/52/967-S/1998/561], stated that, since there was no consensus on the Chairman's draft statement, and since all decisions were taken only by consensus, the statement circulated by the Philippines did not represent the collective position of the members of the Regional Forum.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (14 May)

On 14 May [meeting 3881], the President of the Security Council made the following statement [S/PRST/1998/12] on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council strongly deplores the three underground nuclear tests that India conducted on 11 May 1998, and the two further tests conducted on 13 May 1998 despite overwhelming international concern and protests. The Council strongly urges India to refrain from any further tests. It is of the view that such testing is contrary to the de facto moratorium on the testing of nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices and to global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. The Council also expresses its concern at the effects of this development on peace and stability in the region.

The Council affirms the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty. The Council appeals to India, and all other States which have not yet done so, to become parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and to the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty without delay and without conditions. The Council also encourages India to participate, in a positive spirit, in the proposed negotiations with other States for a fissile-material cut-off treaty in Geneva with a view to reaching early agreement.

With a view to preventing an escalation in the arms race, in particular with regard to nuclear weapons and their delivery systems, and to preserving peace in the region, the Council urges States to exercise maximum restraint. The Council underlines the fact that the sources of tension in South Asia should be eliminated only through dialogue and not by military build-up.

The Council reiterates the statement by its President of 31 January 1992, in which it was stated, inter alia, that the proliferation of all weapons of mass destruction constituted a threat to international peace and security.

Communications. In a 22 May letter to the Secretary-General [A/52/915-S/1998/421], Pakistan stated that the presidential statement of 14 May failed to effectively address the security dimensions of the problem of India's provocative actions. Pakistan could not ignore the threat to its national security and the requirements of self-defence. In a 28 May letter to the Secretary-General [A/52/920-S/1998/447], the Prime Minister of Pakistan stated that the presidential statement focused mainly on global non-proliferation issues and failed to address the security situation in South Asia. Pakistan was mindful of the need for urgent steps to bring about nuclear stabilization between the two countries and therefore had offered to discuss the security situation with India. Pakistan trusted that the Secretary-General would encourage and facilitate the resumption of the Pakistan-India talks and the early conclusion of mutually acceptable restraints, accompanied by confidence-enhancing measures.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (29 May)

On 29 May [meeting 3888], following nuclear testing by Pakistan, the President of the Security Council made the following statement [S/PRST/1998/17] on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council strongly deplores the underground nuclear tests that Pakistan conducted on 28 May 1998, despite overwhelming international concern and calls for restraint. Reaffirming the statement by its President of 14 May 1998, on Indian nuclear tests of 11 and 13 May, the Council strongly urges India and Pakistan to refrain from any further tests. It is of the view that testing by India and then by Pakistan is contrary to the de facto moratorium on the testing of nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and to global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament. The Council also expresses its concern at the effects of this development on peace and stability in the region.

The Council reaffirms the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty. The Council appeals to India and Pakistan, and all other States which have not yet done so, to become parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and to the Comprehensive Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty, without delay and without conditions. The Council also encourages India and Pakistan to participate, in a positive spirit, in the proposed negotiations with other States for a fissile-material cut-off treaty in Geneva with a view to reaching early agreement.

The Council calls upon all parties to exercise maximum restraint and to take immediate steps to reduce and remove tensions between them. The Council reaffirms that the sources of tension in South Asia should be reduced and eliminated only through peaceful dialogue and not by the use of force or other military means.

The Council urges India and Pakistan to resume the dialogue between them on all outstanding issues, including all those that the parties have already discussed, especially matters concerning peace and security, in order to remove the tensions between them and to enhance their economic and political cooperation. The Council calls upon India and Pakistan to avoid any steps or statements that could lead to further instability or impede their bilateral dialogue.

The Council will remain seized of the matter.

Communications. In identical letters of 5 June to the General Assembly and the Security Council [A/52/945-S/1998/472], Argentina, Australia, Canada, Chile, Kazakhstan, New Zealand, the Republic of Korea and Ukraine called for the convening of a formal Council meeting.

The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the five permanent members of the Security Council issued a joint communique on 4 June [S/1998/473] in which they condemned the tests, called on India and Pakistan to adhere immediately and unconditionally to CTBT, to participate in negotiations on a fissile material cut-off convention in the Conference on Disarmament, and to confirm their policies not to export equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to weapons of mass destruction or missiles capable of delivering them. With regard to the non-proliferation regime, they reaffirmed the need for adherence by all countries, including India and Pakistan, to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) [YUN 1968, p. 17] as it stood, without any modification, adding that India and Pakistan did not have the status of nuclear-weapon States in accordance with NPT. The Five also pledged to encourage the two countries to find mutually acceptable solutions, through direct dialogue, to address the root causes of the tension between them, including Kashmir.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

The Security Council met on 6 June [meeting 3890] to consider developments in South Asia. At their request, Argentina, Australia, Canada, Egypt, Iran, Mexico, New Zealand, Norway, Kazakhstan, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea, Ukraine and the United Arab Emirates were invited to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. The Council unanimously adopted resolution 1172(1998), based on a draft [S/1998/476] sponsored by Costa Rica, Japan, Slovenia and Sweden.

In a 4 June letter to the Council President [S/1998/464], India raised a number of questions with regard to the proposed draft.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming the statements by its President of 14 May 1998 and of 29 May 1998,

Reiterating the statement by its President of 31 January 1992, in which it was stated, inter alia, that the proliferation of all weapons of mass destruction constituted a threat to international peace and security,

Gravely concerned at the challenge that the nuclear tests conducted by India and then by Pakistan constitute to international efforts aimed at strengthening the global regime of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, and also gravely concerned at the danger to peace and stability in the region,

Deeply concerned at the risk of a nuclear arms race in South Asia, and determined to prevent such a race,

Reaffirming the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty for global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and the successful outcome of the Conference,

Affirming the need to continue to move with determination towards the full realization and effective implementation of all the provisions of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and welcoming the determination of the five nuclear-weapon States to fulfil their commitments relating to nuclear disarmament under article VI of the Treaty,

Mindful of its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security,

1. Condemns the nuclear tests conducted by India on 11 and 13 May 1998 and by Pakistan on 28 and 30 May 1998;

2. Endorses the joint communique issued by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America at their meeting in Geneva on 4 June 1998;

3. Demands that India and Pakistan refrain from further nuclear tests, and in this context calls upon all States not to carry out any nuclear weapon test explosion or any other nuclear explosion in accordance with the provisions of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

4. Urges India and Pakistan to exercise maximum restraint and to avoid threatening military movements, cross-border violations, or other provocations in order to prevent an aggravation of the situation;

5. Also urges India and Pakistan to resume the dialogue between them on all outstanding issues, particularly on all matters pertaining to peace and security, in order to remove the tensions between them, and encourages them to find mutually acceptable solutions that address the root causes of those tensions, including Kashmir;

6. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to encourage India and Pakistan to enter into dialogue;

7. Calls upon India and Pakistan immediately to stop their nuclear weapon development programmes, to refrain from weaponization or from the deployment of nuclear weapons, to cease development of ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons and any further production of fissile material for nuclear weapons, to confirm their policies not to export equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to weapons of mass destruction or missiles capable of delivering them and to undertake appropriate commitments in that regard;

8. Encourages all States to prevent the export of equipment, materials or technology that could in any way assist programmes in India or Pakistan for nuclear weapons or for ballistic missiles capable of delivering such weapons, and welcomes national policies adopted and declared in this respect;

9. Expresses its grave concern at the negative effect of the nuclear tests conducted by India and Pakistan on peace and stability in South Asia and beyond;

10. Reaffirms its full commitment to and the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as the cornerstones of the international regime on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and as essential foundations for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament;

11. Expresses its firm conviction that the international regime on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons should be maintained and consolidated, and recalls that in accordance with the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons neither India nor Pakistan can have the status of a nuclear-weapon State;

12. Recognizes that the tests conducted by India and Pakistan constitute a serious threat to global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament;

13. Urges India and Pakistan, and all other States that have not yet done so, to become parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and to the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty without delay and without conditions;

14. Also urges India and Pakistan to participate, in a positive spirit and on the basis of the agreed mandate, in negotiations at the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva on a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, with a view to reaching early agreement;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report urgently to the Council on the steps taken by India and Pakistan to implement the present resolution;

16. Expresses its readiness to consider further how best to ensure the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Following the vote, Pakistan commented that the non-proliferation aspects of the resolution were short-sighted. The resolution was not an expression of global concern about the failure of non-proliferation and ways to deal with that issue. It was a transparent exercise in self-assurance by the five nuclear-weapon States to seek legitimacy for their possession of weapons of mass destruction. Regarding security aspects in South Asia, the resolution ignored the fact that the direct cause of the aggravation of the security situation was the unilateral altering by India of the strategic balance that had maintained peace in the region for the past two decades. The Council had abandoned its responsibility by asking the two countries to find a mutually acceptable solution.

Communications. In an 8 June statement to the Indian Parliament [S/1998/489], the Prime Minister of India contended that the resolution was not helpful. Its call to India and Pakistan to stop their nuclear programmes or missile programmes was unacceptable. Those decisions would be taken by the Government based on its own assessments and national security requirements. India remained committed to direct bilateral dialogue with Pakistan and it believed there was no place for outside involvement in that regard.

The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of eight major industrialized democracies and the representative of the European Commission, meeting in London on 12 June [S/1998/538], endorsed the steps called for in the Council's resolution.

In an 11 June press statement [A/52/951-S/1998/515], Pakistan announced a unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing. On 2 July [S/1998/605], Pakistan transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of suggestions to address the security crisis in South Asia that it had made to the Secretary-General's Personal Envoy.

By an 8 July letter [S/1998/619], the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on action taken to implement resolution 1172(1998). He informed the Council of proposals made by India and Pakistan and positions expressed by them and described his efforts to encourage a dialogue between the two countries.

India, on 18 August [A/53/273], transmitted to the Secretary-General a paper entitled "Evolution of India's nuclear policy", which its Prime Minister had presented to the Indian Parliament on 27 May.

On 25 September, the IAEA General Conference adopted a resolution [GC(42)/RES/19] in which it strongly deplored the tests conducted in South Asia and called on the States concerned to implement resolution 1172(1998).

After the May tests, both India and Pakistan announced unilateral moratoriums on further testing. India also stated its willingness to convert its moratorium into a de jure obligation [A/53/PV.13]. The two countries further agreed to participate in negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on a convention banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. They had also engaged in bilateral discussions on the issues with key interlocutors. India offered to enter into discussions on an agreement on the "no-first-use" of nuclear weapons. Pakistan for its part had indicated readiness to engage with India and other members of the international community to formalize the moratorium and to reach agreement with India on a bilateral nuclear-test ban or a wider ban involving other countries of the region.

Speaking before the General Assembly in September [A/53/PV.13], the Prime Minister of India declared India's readiness to conclude its ongoing discussions on CTBT so that the entry into force of the Treaty would not be delayed beyond September 1999. He expressed the expectation that other countries, as indicated in article XIV of the Treaty, would adhere to it without conditions. The Prime Minister of Pakistan reiterated that his country was prepared to adhere to CTBT before the Conference in September 1999, but such adherence would take place only in conditions free from coercion and pressure [A/53/PV.12).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 G by recorded vote (118-9-33) [agenda item 71].

Nuclear testing

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming that the cessation of all nuclear testing will contribute to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects, to the process of nuclear disarmament leading to the ultimate objective of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons and therefore to the further enhancement of international peace and security,

Reaffirming also its commitment to and the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty to the international regime on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and as essential foundations for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament,

Convinced that all States that have not yet done so should adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and sign and ratify the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty without delay and without conditions,

Sharing the alarm expressed internationally, regionally and nationally, at recent nuclear tests,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1172(1998), adopted unanimously on 6 June 1998,

1. Expresses grave concern over and strongly deplores the recent nuclear tests conducted in South Asia;

2. Notes that the States concerned have declared moratoriums on further testing and have said that they are willing to enter into legal commitments not to conduct any further nuclear tests, and reiterates the need for such legal commitments to be expressed in legal form by signing and ratifying the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty.

Non-Proliferation Treaty

In 1998, Brazil acceded to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], bringing the number of States parties to 187 as at 31 December. NPT entered into force on 5 March 1970.

Quinquennial review conferences, as called for under article VIII, paragraph 3, of the Treaty, were held in 1975 [YUN 1975, p. 27], 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 51], 1985 [YUN 1985, p. 56], 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 50] and 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 189].

At its second session (Geneva, 27 April-8 May) [NPT/CONF.2000/PC.II/36], the Preparatory Committee for the 2000 NPT Review Conference reviewed all aspects of the Treaty and the subject areas considered at its first session held in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 478]: security assurances, the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference and a fissile material cut-off treaty.

Work on draft recommendations to the Review Conference and to the Committee's next (1999) session continued in consultations by the Chairman with a small number of States, based on the Chairman's working paper of the first session [YUN 1997, p. 479] and on proposals made by delegations. Although some new draft recommendations were added to the working paper, divergence of views, especially over the implementation of article VI of the Treaty (relating to cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament, and on a treaty on general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control), prevented the Committee from reaching agreement on the paper. The Chairman's working paper was subsequently issued as an official document, as were the various proposals put forward by delegations [NPT/CONF.2000/PC.II/35].

In addition, differing perspectives of the States parties on the nature of the strengthening the review process and different interpretations of the decisions adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference, especially with regard to the resolution on the Middle East, were more evident than before. Furthermore, views differed among delegations on how to reflect the consideration of substantive issues in the report on the Committee's work. The Committee could not agree on a proposal by Canada to include in its report a text on substantive issues the Committee had considered, such as security assurances, the resolution on the Middle East, a fissile material cut-off treaty, non-proliferation, nuclear disarmament, CTBT and safeguards [NPT/CONF.2000/PC.II/34].

As a result, the Committee was unable to agree on the inclusion in its report of any description of the extensive discussion that took place on substantive issues. There was also no agreement on the status of the Chairman's working paper or on recommendations to the next session of the Preparatory Committee. Consequently, the report merely described the procedures of work of the Committee.

Controversy over the reference to the resolution on the Middle East adopted at the 1995 Conference prevented the Committee from taking a decision on the background documentation.

IAEA safeguards

At year's end, the Model Protocol Additional to Safeguards Agreements, approved by the IAEA Board of Governors in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 486], had been signed by 35 States including 4 nuclear-weapon States. The Model Protocol, the first major change in the IAEA safeguards system in 25 years, provided the Agency with the legal authority to detect and verify more effectively possible non-peaceful nuclear activities in a State at an early stage. As at 31 December, the Model Protocol was in force in Australia, the Holy See, Jordan, New Zealand and Uzbekistan.

In September [GC(42)/RES/17], the IAEA General Conference supported the Governing Board's decision to ask the Director General to use the Model Additional Protocol as the standard for additional protocols to be concluded by States and other parties to comprehensive safeguards agreements with the Agency and asked all concerned States and other parties to safeguards agreements that had not done so to sign additional protocols promptly.

Regarding the implementation of the agreement between IAEA and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) for the application of safeguards in connection with NPT, the Director General reported in August [GC(42)/16] that fundamental differences of view between IAEA and the DPRK regarding the current status of the agreement remained unchanged, that cooperation from the DPRK remained limited, and that a copy of the Model Additional Protocol had been provided to the DPRK during technical meetings. The General Conference, on 25 September, expressed deep concern over the continuing non-compliance of the DPRK with the IAEA-DPRK safeguards agreement and called on the DPRK to comply fully with it [GC(42)/RES/2] (see also PART ONE, Chapter IV).

Communication. By a 5 February letter [A/53/64], Ukraine informed the Secretary-General that it had ratified the agreement between Ukraine and IAEA for the application of safeguards in connection with NPT. The agreement entered into force on 22 January.

Middle East

The subject of the risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East was again taken up in 1998 by the General Assembly (see below) and the IAEA General Conference [GC(42)/RES/21]. Both bodies called on the non-party in the region to accede to NPT and to place all unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope safeguards.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/41 [YUN 1997, p. 487], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/53/457] that, apart from the IAEA resolution on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East, he had not received any additional information since his 1997 report on the subject [ibid., p. 486]. The IAEA resolution was annexed to the Secretary-General's report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/587], adopted resolution 53/80 by recorded vote (158-2-11) [agenda item 74].

The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the latest of which is GC(42)/RES/21 adopted on 25 September 1998,

Cognizant that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region of the Middle East would pose a serious threat to international peace and security,

Mindful of the immediate need for placing all nuclear facilities in the region of the Middle East under full-scope safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Recalling the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference noted with concern the continued existence in the Middle East of unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and called upon all States in the Middle East that had not yet done so, without exception, to accede to the Treaty as soon as possible and to place all their nuclear facilities under full-scope safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Recalling also the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference urged universal adherence to the Treaty as an urgent priority and called upon all States not yet party to the Treaty to accede to it at the earliest date, particularly those States that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities,

Noting that, since the adoption of General Assembly resolution 51/48 of 10 December 1996, Israel remains the only State in the Middle East that has not yet become party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Concerned about the threats posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons to the security and stability of the Middle East region,

Stressing the importance of taking confidence-building measures, in particular the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, in order to enhance peace and security in the region and to consolidate the global non-proliferation regime,

Noting the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and its signature by one hundred and eighty-seven States, including a number of States in the region,

1. Calls upon the only State in the region that is not party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to accede to the Treaty without further delay and not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons, and to renounce possession of nuclear weapons, and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards as an important confidence-building measure among all States of the region and as a step towards enhancing peace and security;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 53/80:

In favour Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Canada, Cote d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, India, Kenya, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Norway, Singapore, Trinidad and Tobago.

In the First Committee, the sixth preambular paragraph was adopted by a recorded vote of 141 to 2, with 2 abstentions. The Assembly adopted the paragraph by a recorded vote of 162 to 2, with 2 abstentions.

Nuclear safety and radioactive waste

In March, the International Advisory Committee on the Study of the Radiological Situation at the Atolls of Mururoa and Fangataufa, established by IAEA in 1996 at the request of France, approved its study of the current and future impact of the radiological situation in the atolls [GC(42)/INF/3]. The study, issued in August, was the first conducted at the request of a nuclear-weapon State and the first comprehensive study to examine not only residues from atmospheric nuclear tests but also residues from underground tests. The study concluded that there would be no radiation health effects that could be diagnosed or discerned attributable to exposure to the radiation from residual radioactive materials remaining at the two atolls; the expected radiation dose rates and modes of exposure at the atolls were such that no effects on biota population groups could arise; no remedial action at the atolls was needed on radiological protection grounds, either currently or in the future; and no further environmental monitoring was needed for purposes of radiological protection. The study recommended that an environmental monitoring programme might be useful in assuring the public about the continuing radiological safety of the atolls. The study was reviewed and confirmed at an international scientific conference (Vienna, 30 June–3 July), hosted by IAEA. On 25 September, the IAEA General Conference adopted a resolution [GC(42)/RES/14] emphasizing that the conclusions of the study should not be used to justify the development and testing of nuclear weapons.

On 4 February, the member States of the Council of the Organization for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean adopted a declaration on the transport of radioactive waste, which called on the international community to strengthen the strict regulation of such waste so as to entail guarantees on security measures, non-contamination, contingency plans in the case of accidents and the exchange of information with interested States. It also called on France, Japan and the United Kingdom to observe fully international legal requirements on those matters.

The South Pacific Forum (Pohnpei, Micronesia, 24–25 August) [A/53/416] called on France to continue ongoing radiological monitoring on Mururoa and Fangataufa and called on all nuclear States that had conducted nuclear tests in the region to accept full responsibility and liability for past testing.

As at 31 December, five States (Canada, Germany, Hungary, Norway, Slovakia) had ratified and 37 States had signed the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management, which opened for signature in 1997 [YUN 1997, p.487].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 C without vote [agenda item 71 (1)].

Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind resolutions CM/Res.1153(XLVIII) of 1988 and CM/Res.1225(L) of 1989, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, concerning the dumping of nuclear and industrial wastes in Africa,

Welcoming resolution GC(XXXIV)/RES/530 establishing a Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste, adopted on 21 September 1990 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its thirty-fourth regular session,

Welcoming also resolution GC(XXXVIII)/RES/6, adopted on 23 September 1994 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its thirty-eighth regular session, inviting the Board of Governors and the Director General of the Agency to commence preparations for a convention on the safety of radioactive waste management, and noting the progress that has been made in that regard,

Taking note of the commitment by the participants at the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 April 1996, to ban the dumping at sea of radioactive wastes,

Considering its resolution 2602 C (XXIV) of 16 December 1969, in which it requested the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament, inter alia, to consider effective methods of control against the use of radiological methods of warfare,

Recalling resolution CM/Res.1356(LIV) of 1991, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, on the Bamako Convention on the Ban on the Import of Hazardous Wastes into Africa and on the Control of Their Transboundary Movements within Africa,

Aware of the potential hazards underlying any use of radioactive wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and its implications for regional and international security, in particular for the security of developing countries,

Recalling all its resolutions on the matter since its forty-third session in 1988, including its resolution 51/45 J of 10 December 1996,

Desirous of promoting the implementation of paragraph 76 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

1. Takes note of the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to a future convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons;

2. Expresses grave concern regarding any use of nuclear wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and have grave implications for the national security of all States;

3. Calls upon all States to take appropriate measures with a view to preventing any dumping of nuclear or radioactive wastes that would infringe upon the sovereignty of States;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to take into account, in the negotiations for a convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons, radioactive wastes as part of the scope of such a convention;

5. Also requests the Conference on Disarmament to intensify efforts towards an early conclusion of such a convention and to include in its report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session the progress recorded in the negotiations on this subject;

6. Takes note of resolution CM/Res.1356(LIV) of 1991, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, on the Bamako Convention on the Ban on the Import of Hazardous Wastes into Africa and on the Control of Their Transboundary Movements within Africa;

7. Expresses the hope that the effective implementation of the International Atomic Energy Agency Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste will enhance the protection of all States from the dumping of radioactive wastes on their territories;

8. Welcomes the adoption at Vienna on 5 September 1997 of the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management, as recommended by the participants in the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 April 1996, and the signing of the Joint Convention by a number of States beginning on 29 September 1997, and appeals to all States to sign and subsequently ratify, accept or approve the Convention, so that it may enter into force as soon as possible;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes".

Prohibition of use of nuclear weapons

In 1998, the Conference on Disarmament was unable to carry out negotiations on a convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, as requested in General Assembly resolution 52/39 C [YUN 1997, p. 489].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/585], adopted resolution 53/78 D by recorded vote (111-39-22) [agenda item 72 (e)].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 8 July 1996 on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons,

Convinced that a multilateral, universal and binding agreement prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would contribute to the elimination of the nuclear threat and to the climate for negotiations leading to the ultimate elimination of nuclear weapons, thereby strengthening international peace and security,

Conscious that some steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards a reduction of their nuclear weapons and the improvement in the international climate can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and that would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 D of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Determined to achieve a universal nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons, leading to their ultimate destruction,

Stressing that an international convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons would be an important step in a phased programme towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, with a specified framework of time,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its 1998 session, was unable to undertake negotiations on this subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 52/39 C of 9 December 1997,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations, in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly on the results of those negotiations.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 52/38 O [YUN 1997, p. 492], the Secretary-General presented information received from three States (Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand) on measures they had taken to implement the resolution and nuclear disarmament [A/53/208 & Add.1].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 W by recorded vote (123-25-25) [agenda item 71 (p)].

Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the ##### Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 K of 15 December 1994, 51/45 M of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 O of 9 December 1997,

Convinced that the continuing existence of nuclear weapons poses a threat to all humanity and that their use would have catastrophic consequences for all life on Earth, and recognizing that the only defence against a nuclear catastrophe is the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the certainty that they will never be produced again,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Mindful of the solemn obligations of States parties, undertaken in article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and in particular the objective of determined pursuit by the nuclear-weapon States of systematic and progressive efforts to reduce nuclear weapons globally, with the ultimate goal of eliminating those weapons,

Recalling also the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, and expressing its satisfaction at the increasing number of States that have signed and ratified the Treaty,

Noting the efforts by the States possessing the largest inventories of nuclear weapons to reduce their stockpiles of such weapons through bilateral and unilateral agreements or arrangements, and calling for the intensification of such efforts to accelerate the significant reduction of nuclear-weapon arsenals,

Recognizing the need for a multilaterally negotiated and legally binding instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the threat or use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming the central role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, and regretting the lack of progress in disarmament negotiations, particularly nuclear disarmament, in the Conference on Disarmament during its 1998 session,

Emphasizing the need for the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Desiring to achieve the objective of a legally binding prohibition of the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, threat or use of nuclear weapons and their destruction under effective international control,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996,

Taking note of the relevant portions of the note by the Secretary-General relating to the implementation of resolution 52/38 O,

1. Underlines once again the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control;

2. Calls once again upon all States to fulfil immediately that obligation by commencing multilateral negotiations in 1999 leading to an early conclusion of a nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, transfer, threat or use of nuclear weapons and providing for their elimination;

3. Requests all States to inform the Secretary-General of the efforts and measures they have taken on the implementation of the present resolution and nuclear disarmament, and requests the Secretary-

General to apprise the General Assembly of that information at its fifty-fourth session;

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

As decided at the 1997 organizational session of the Disarmament Commission [YUN 1997, p. 474] and welcomed by the General Assembly in resolution 52/40 B [ibid.], the Disarmament Commission continued to consider the agenda item "Establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned" in Working Group I [A/53/42].

On the basis of the general discussion and of comments of delegations, the Chairman presented a revised version of his working paper, which was structured among four broad areas: general overview, purposes and objectives, principles and guidelines and the way ahead. It was agreed that some progress had been achieved during the session, although differences continued on the question of whether the Commission should attempt to produce general guidelines and principles or offer concrete recommendations for specific new zones. It was decided that at its next session the Commission would base its deliberations on all working papers, including those presented by the Chairman of the Working Group; the Chairman's revised paper was annexed to the report of the Working Group [ibid.].

Africa

By year's end, 10 States had ratified the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) [YUN 1995, p. 203], which was opened for signature in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 468]. China and France had ratified Protocols I and II thereto and France had also ratified Protocol III. The Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States had signed Protocols I and II. The Treaty had 55 signatories.

Asia

Central Asia

In compliance with General Assembly resolution 52/38 S [YUN 1997, p. 494], which called on States to support the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia, a group of experts was established to prepare an agreement on such a zone. The Expert Group on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, consisting of experts from the five States in the region that had launched the initiative for a zone in 1997 [ibid.] (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan), held three meetings (Geneva, 24 April; Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, 9-10 July [A/53/183]; Geneva, 7-9 October). As the basis for its work in October, the experts used a text entitled "Basic elements of the treaty on a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia", which was prepared by Kyrgyzstan and reflected comments and suggestions presented at the previous meetings. At the end of the meeting, nearly 80 per cent of the articles were agreed upon and it was expected that the treaty text would be finalized in 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 A without vote [agenda item 71 (s)].

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998,<sup>a</sup> in which the Conference welcomed and supported Mongolia's policy to institutionalize its single State nuclear-weapon-free status,

South Asia

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/35 [YUN1997,p.495], the Secretary-General communicated with States of the region and other concerned States in order to ascertain their views on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia. In an August report [A/53/209], the Secretary-General stated that he had not received any replies to his request. In October [A/53/209/Add.1], he presented a reply from one State (United States).

By decision 53/421 of 4 December, the Assembly took note of the report of the First Committee [A/53/581] on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia.

South-East Asia

Consultations between the members of ASEAN and various nuclear-weapon States continued regarding the adherence of the latter to the Protocol of the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty), but no further progress was made. The Treaty opened for signature in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 207] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 495]. With no new ratifications in 1998, the number of States that had ratified the Treaty remained at nine.

The nuclear tests in South Asia further complicated the security situation in the region (see above, under "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty"). The ASEAN Foreign Ministers, meeting in Manila, Philippines, on 24 and 25 July, issued a joint communique in which they reiterated that the signing of the Protocol by the nuclear-weapon States would constitute a manifestation of their support for nuclear disarmament and nuclear-weapon-free zones, and expressed the view that the recent nuclear tests in South Asia were not conducive to the full realization of the Treaty.

Latin America and the Caribbean

The States parties to the 1967 Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean, known as the Treaty of Tlatelolco [YUN 1967, p. 13], continued their cooperation within the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean, as well as through arrangements between some of its members. On 25 May, a cooperation agreement between the Brazilian-Argentine Agency for Accounting and Control of Nuclear Materials and IAEA entered into force, which called for the two agencies to harmonize their efforts, maintain close cooperation and regular consultations, exchange information and provide each other with scientific, technical and research assistance.

On 24 July, in an effort to strengthen their cooperation further, especially in the area of security and defence, the Governments of Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay, at the fourteenth meeting of the Common Market Council in Ushuaia, Argentina, signed the Political Declaration of the Southern Cone Common Market (MERCOSUR), Bolivia and Chile as a Zone of Peace [CD/1552], by which they declared those areas a zone of peace, free from weapons of mass destruction. The Rio Group (the Permanent Mechanism for Consultation and Concerted Political Action), in declarations adopted at the twelfth summit of heads of State and Government of the Group (Panama City, 4-5 September) [A/53/489], stressed the importance of that initiative.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/590], adopted resolution 53/83 without vote [agenda item 77].

Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)

The General Assembly,

Recalling that in its resolution 1911 (XVIII) of 27 November 1963 it expressed the hope that the States of Latin America would take appropriate measures to conclude a treaty that would prohibit nuclear weapons in Latin America,

Recalling also that in the same resolution it voiced its confidence that, once such a treaty was concluded, all States, and in particular the nuclear-weapon States, would lend it their full cooperation for the effective realization of its peaceful aims,

Considering that in its resolution 2028(XX) of 19 November 1965 it established the principle of an acceptable balance of mutual responsibilities and obligations between nuclear-weapon States and those which do not possess such weapons,

Recalling that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) was opened for signature at Mexico City on 14 February 1967,

Noting with satisfaction the holding on 14 February 1997 of the eleventh special session of the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in commemoration of the thirtieth anniversary of the opening for signature of the Treaty of Tlatelolco,

Recalling that in its preamble the Treaty of Tlatelolco states that military denuclearized zones are not an end in themselves but rather a means for achieving general and complete disarmament at a later stage,

Recalling also that in its resolution 2286(XXII) of 5 December 1967 it welcomed with special satisfaction the Treaty of Tlatelolco as an event of historic significance in the efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to promote international peace and security,

Recalling further that in 1990, 1991 and 1992 the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean approved and opened for signature a set of amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, with the aim of enabling the full entry into force of that instrument,

Recalling resolution C/E/RES.27 of the Council of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean, in which the Council called for the promotion of cooperation and consultations with other nuclear-weapon-free zones,

Noting with satisfaction that the Treaty of Tlatelolco is now in force for thirty-two sovereign States of the region,

Also noting with satisfaction that on 27 March 1998 the Dominican Republic deposited its instrument of ratification of the amendment to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in its resolution 290(E-VII) of 26 August 1992,

Further noting with satisfaction that on 21 August 1998 Guatemala deposited its instrument of ratification of the amendment to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in its resolution 267(E-V) of 3 July 1990,

Noting with satisfaction that the amended Treaty of Tlatelolco is fully in force for Argentina, Barbados, Brazil, Chile, Guyana, Jamaica, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay and Venezuela,

1. Welcomes the concrete steps taken by some countries of the region during the past year for the consolidation of the regime of military denuclearization established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco);

2. Urges the countries of the region that have not yet done so to deposit their instruments of ratification of the amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in its resolutions 267(E-V) of 3 July 1990, 268(XII) of 10 May 1991 and 290(E-VII) of 26 August 1992;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)".

Middle East

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/34 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East [YUN 1997, p. 497], the Secretary-General reported in September on the implementation of that resolution [A/53/379]. He regretted that no positive developments had occurred and urged all concerned parties to review the situation to determine possible new approaches and to resume discussions.

No information was received from States regarding measures to move towards the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East as outlined in a 1990 study [YUN 1990, p. 63].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/580], adopted resolution 53/74 without vote [agenda item 67].

Recalling also the recommendations for the establishment of such a zone in the Middle East consistent with paragraphs 60 to 63, and in particular paragraph 63 (d), of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the basic provisions of the above-mentioned resolutions, which call upon all parties directly concerned to consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East and, pending and during the establishment of such a zone, to declare solemnly that they will refrain, on a reciprocal basis, from producing, acquiring or in any other way possessing nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive devices and from permitting the stationing of nuclear weapons on their territory by any third party, to agree to place their nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and to declare their support for the establishment of the zone and to deposit such declarations with the Security Council for consideration, as appropriate,

Bearing in mind the consensus reached by the General Assembly since its thirty-fifth session that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East would greatly enhance international peace and security,

Desirous of building on that consensus so that substantial progress can be made towards establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East,

Welcoming all initiatives leading to general and complete disarmament, including in the region of the Middle East, and in particular on the establishment therein of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Recognizing the importance of credible regional security, including the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Emphasizing the essential role of the United Nations in the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 52/34,

1. Urges all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and, as a means of promoting this objective, invites the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon all countries of the region that have not done so, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Takes note of resolution GC(42)/RES/21, adopted on 25 September 1998 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-second regular session, concerning the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East;

4. Notes the importance of the ongoing bilateral Middle East peace negotiations and the activities of the multilateral Working Group on Arms Control and Regional Security in promoting mutual confidence and security in the Middle East, including the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone;

5. Invites all countries of the region, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East, to declare their support for establishing such a zone, consistent with paragraph 63 (d) of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to deposit those declarations with the Security Council;

6. Also invites those countries, pending the establishment of the zone, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or permit the stationing on their territories, or territories under their control, of nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices;

7. Invites the nuclear-weapon States and all other States to render their assistance in the establishment of the zone and at the same time to refrain from any action that runs counter to both the letter and the spirit of the present resolution;

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Invites all parties to consider the appropriate means that may contribute towards the goal of general and complete disarmament and the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the region of the Middle East;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to pursue consultations with the States of the region and other concerned States, in accordance with paragraph 7 of resolution 46/30 and taking into account the evolving situation in the region, and to seek from those States their views on the measures outlined in chapters III and IV of the study annexed to his report or other relevant measures, in order to move towards the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East".

South Pacific

In 1998, the number of parties to the 1985 South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Rarotonga) [YUN 1985, p. 58] remained at 16. The total included nuclear-weapon States: China and the Russian Federation had ratified Protocols 2 and 3, and France and the United Kingdom had ratified all three Protocols.

Under Protocol 1, the States internationally responsible for territories situated within the zone would undertake to apply the relevant prohibitions of the Treaty to those territories; under Protocol 2, the five nuclear-weapon States would provide security assurances to parties or to territories within the zone; and under Protocol 3, the five would not carry out nuclear tests in the zone.

Southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 Q by recorded vote (154-3-10) [agenda item 71 (o)].

Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 B of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 N of 9 December 1997,

Determined to continue to contribute to the prevention of the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to the process of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control, in particular in the field of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction, with a view to strengthening international peace and security, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the provisions on nuclear-weapon-free zones of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, as well as of the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Stressing the importance of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba, establishing nuclear-weapon-free zones, as well as the Antarctic Treaty, to, inter alia, the ultimate objective of achieving a world entirely free of nuclear weapons, and underlining also the value of enhancing cooperation among the nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty members by means of mechanisms such as joint meetings of States parties, signatories and observers to those treaties,

Recalling the applicable principles and rules of international law relating to the freedom of the high seas and the rights of passage through maritime space, including those of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,

1. Welcomes the continuing contribution that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are making towards freeing the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons;

2. Calls for the ratification of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba by all regional States, and calls upon all concerned States to continue to work together in order to facilitate adherence to the protocols to nuclear-weapon-free zone treaties by all relevant States that have not yet done so;

3. Welcomes the steps taken to conclude further nuclear-weapon-free zone treaties on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, and calls upon all States to consider all relevant proposals, including those reflected in the resolutions of the General Assembly on the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in the Middle East and South Asia;

4. Reiterates the important role of nuclear-weapon-free zones in strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime and in extending the areas of the world that are nuclear-weapon-free, and, with particular reference to the responsibilities of the nuclear-weapon States, calls upon all States to support the process of nuclear disarmament, with the ultimate goal of eliminating all nuclear weapons;

5. Calls upon the States parties and signatories to the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba, in order to pursue the common goals envisaged in those treaties and to promote the nuclear-weapon-free status of the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas, to explore and implement further ways and means of cooperation among themselves and their treaty agencies;

6. Encourages the competent authorities of nuclear-weapon-free zone treaties to provide assistance to the States parties and signatories to such treaties so as to facilitate the accomplishment of these goals;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas".

Bacteriological (biological) and chemical weapons

Bacteriological (biological) weapons

Efforts continued in 1998 to strengthen the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction (BWC), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2826(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 19]. The Ad Hoc Group of the States parties to the Convention attempted to achieve that goal through the development of verification and confidence-building measures.

Ad Hoc Group

The Ad Hoc Group of the States Parties to BWC held its ninth (5-23 January) [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/39], tenth (9-13 March) [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/40], eleventh (22 June-10 July) [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/41] and twelfth (14 September-9 October) [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/43 (Part I & Part I/Corr.1 & Part II)] sessions, all in Geneva.

The Group, as in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 501], considered definitions of terms and objective criteria; measures to promote compliance; confidentiality issues; national implementation and assistance; measures related to article X (scientific exchange and technological cooperation); investigations annex; and legal issues. The discussions on each topic were led by a Friend of the Chair. At the twelfth session, two additional Friends of the Chair were appointed to assist in the discussions on the seat of the future BWC organization and the preamble to the protocol. The results of the discussions were incorporated into the rolling text, with brackets reflecting sections of the text on which agreement was not yet possible [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/43 (Part I) & Corr.1]. Also at that session, in a further effort to move the negotiations forward, the Chairman and some of the Friends of the Chair prepared textual proposals on various areas of the rolling text for future consideration. Although those proposals were annexed to the rolling text, it was reaffirmed that the rolling text was the only basis for negotiations in the Ad Hoc Group.

By year's end, the rolling text contained a preamble, 23 articles, 7 annexes and 4 appendices. The main articles, additional to the standard ones on authentic text, entry into force and others, were: I. General provisions; II. [Definitions]; III. Compliance measures; IV. Confidentiality provisions; V. Measures to redress a situation and to ensure compliance; VI. Assistance and protection against biological and toxin weapons; VII. [Scientific and technological exchange for peaceful purposes] [implementation assistance] and technical cooperation; VIII. Confidence-building measures; IX. [The Organization] [and implementational arrangements]; X. National implementation measures; XI. Relationship of the protocol to BWC and other international agreements; XII. Settlement of disputes; XIII. Review of the protocol; XIV. Amendments; XV. Duration and withdrawal; XVI. Status of the annexes and appendices.

At the end of the twelfth session, it was decided that five sessions would be devoted to the work of the Group in 1999; a three-week period in November/December was set aside for the seventeenth session, without prejudice to the actual length of the session, reflecting the recognition by delegations that work on the protocol would need to be intensified.

In addition to their efforts to develop a verification mechanism, States parties continued their information exchange in the framework of agreed politically binding confidence-building measures. The issues on which information was to be exchanged included relevant research centres and laboratories; national biological defence research and development programmes; outbreaks of infectious diseases and similar occurrences caused by toxins; relevant legislation, regulations and other measures; past activities in offensive and/or defensive biological research and development programmes; and vaccine production facilities. In 1998, 40 States parties and one State signatory submitted reports to the United Nations, bringing the number of States that had submitted at least one report since 1987 to 82.

Ministerial meeting

On 23 September, an informal Ministerial Meeting on the Negotiation Towards Conclusion of the Protocol to Strengthen the Biological Weapons Convention, convened by Australia, was held in New York to reaffirm participants' support for strengthening the implementation of BWC through the negotiation of a verification protocol and to demonstrate high-level political support for the negotiations. The meeting, chaired by the Foreign Minister of New Zealand, issued a declaration, adopted by 57 States [BWC/AD HOC GROUP/WP.324], which underlined the political and security imperatives of concluding the protocol as a matter of priority and recognized the gravity of the work of the Ad Hoc Group and the pressing need for the Group to make further progress. A further high-level meeting was planned for 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/591], adopted resolution 53/84 without vote [agenda item 78].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete and effective prohibition of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and to their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that there are one hundred and forty-one States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, including all the permanent members of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review Conferences, including the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, and to provide such information and data in conformity with standardized procedure to the Secretary-General on an annual basis and no later than 15 April,

Recalling its resolution 46/35 A, adopted without a vote on 6 December 1991, in which it welcomed, inter alia, the establishment, proceeding from the recommendations of the Third Review Conference, of an ad hoc group of governmental experts open to the participation of all States parties to identify and examine potential verification measures from a scientific and technical standpoint,

Recalling also its resolution 48/65, adopted without a vote on 16 December 1993, in which it commended the final report of the Ad Hoc Group of Governmental Experts to Identify and Examine Potential Verification Measures from a Scientific and Technical Standpoint, agreed to by consensus at the last meeting of the Ad Hoc Group at Geneva on 24 September 1993,

Recalling further its resolution 49/86, adopted without a vote on 15 December 1994, in which it welcomed the final report of the Special Conference of the States Parties to the Convention, adopted by consensus on 30 September 1994, in which the States parties agreed to establish an ad hoc group, open to the participation of all States parties, whose objective should be to consider appropriate measures, including possible verification measures, and draft proposals to strengthen the Convention, to be included, as appropriate, in a legally binding instrument to be submitted for the consideration of the States parties,

Recalling the provisions of the Convention related to scientific and technological cooperation and the related provisions of the final report of the Ad Hoc Group of Governmental Experts, the final report of the Special Conference of the States Parties to the Convention, held from 19 to 30 September 1994, and the final documents of the Review Conferences,

Recalling also the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, in which the heads of State or Government noted the progress achieved so far in the negotiation of a protocol, stressed the importance of achieving further substantive progress for the conclusion of a universally acceptable and legally binding instrument designed to strengthen the Convention and reaffirmed the decision of the Fourth Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention urging the conclusion of the negotiations by the Ad Hoc Group as soon as possible before the commencement of the Fifth Review Conference,

Welcoming the reaffirmation made in the Final Declaration of the Fourth Review Conference that under all circumstances the use of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and their development, production and stockpiling are effectively prohibited under article I of the Convention,

Recalling the Declaration of the informal Ministerial Meeting, held in New York on 23 September 1998, in which the participants and the co-sponsors affirmed their strong support for the Convention and for strengthening the effectiveness and improving the implementation of the Convention,

1. Welcomes the information and data provided to date, and reiterates its call upon all States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction to participate in the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

2. Also welcomes the progress achieved so far in the negotiation of a protocol to strengthen the Convention, and reaffirms the decision of the Fourth Review

Conference urging the conclusion of the negotiations by the Ad Hoc Group as soon as possible before the commencement of the Fifth Review Conference and urging it to submit its report, which shall be adopted by consensus, to the States parties to be considered at a special conference;

3. Calls upon all States parties, in this context, to accelerate the negotiations and to redouble their efforts within the Ad Hoc Group to formulate an efficient, cost-effective and practical regime and seek early resolution of the outstanding issues through renewed flexibility in order to complete the protocol on the basis of consensus at the earliest possible date;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render the necessary assistance to the depositary Governments of the Convention and to provide such services as may be required for the implementation of the decisions and recommendations of the Review Conferences, as well as the decisions contained in the final report of the Special Conference, including all necessary assistance to the Ad Hoc Group;

5. Calls upon all signatory States that have not yet ratified the Convention to do so without delay, and also calls upon those States that have not signed the Convention to become parties thereto at an early date, thus contributing to the achievement of universal adherence to the Convention;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction".

1925 Geneva Protocol

In response to General Assembly resolution 51/45 P [YUN 1996, p. 479], the Secretary-General reported in August [A/53/303] on the status of additional withdrawal of reservations by States parties to the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (the 1925 Geneva Protocol). He stated that the depositary of the Protocol (France) had not received notice of any withdrawals since the adoption of the Assembly's 1996 resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

1. Renews its previous call to all States to observe strictly the principles and objectives of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17 June 1925, and reaffirms the vital necessity of upholding its provisions;

Chemical weapons

Chemical weapons convention

In 1998, Benin, Bolivia, Burundi, Cyprus, the Gambia, Indonesia, Lithuania, Malawi, Mauritania, Panama, Senegal, Ukraine, the United Republic of Tanzania and Viet Nam ratified the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction and Botswana acceded to it, bringing the total number of States parties to 121. The number of signatories stood at 165. The Convention was adopted by the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 65] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499].

At the third session of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention (see below), the Director-General of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) noted that, as at 2 November, 34 of the 121 States parties had not submitted their initial declarations, which was a cause for concern. (According to article III of the Convention, a State party was obligated to declare, 30 days after entry into force, whether or not chemical weapons or facilities existed on its territory, and to report on plans to destroy or convert existing chemical weapons and related facilities and on related laboratories and equipment that could be used to make chemical weapons. A State party was also obligated to declare all riot control agents.) The Director-General reminded States parties that all 8 million chemical munitions that had been declared, along with the 25,000 bulk containers filled with chemical agents, would have to be destroyed by the year 2007. The Conference adopted a decision stressing the importance of achieving universality of the Convention.

Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

In 1998, the third session of the Conference of States Parties (The Hague, Netherlands, 16-21 November) [OPCW, C-III/4 & Corr.1] adopted the 1999 programme and budget of OPCW, endorsed a decision on the costs of verification and approved the 1999 scale of assessments for member States to fund OPCW.

The OPCW Executive Council deliberated on a number of technical issues at its eighth (27-30 January), ninth (21-24 April), tenth (16-19 June), eleventh (1-4 September), twelfth (6-9 October) and thirteenth (8-11 December) sessions, all held in The Hague. It considered a Schedule 1 facility agreement and discussed transfers of Schedules 2 and 3 chemicals to non-parties. It also supported the Director-General's proposal to include detailed information in OPCW reports on verification activities, and decided on facility agreements, combined destruction plans and end-user certificates for scheduled chemicals. In addition, the Council mandated a group to draft guidelines for the use of the resources in the Voluntary Fund for Assistance, as provided under article X of the Convention.

At the September session, major breakthroughs were reported in two areas. Issues concerning costs of verification, which under the Convention were charged to "possessor" States parties, were resolved when the Council agreed on a formula that would allow States parties to calculate the amounts to be reimbursed to the Organization. Members also agreed on a model facility agreement for Schedule 2 plant sites, providing a framework for the conduct of inspections of those facilities. The Executive Council also discussed declarations and notifications, inspections, facility agreements, implementation problems and the budget.

Speaking in the First Committee on 19 October [A/C.1/53/PV.9], the Director-General gave an overview of activities that OPCW had carried out thus far in 1998. Regarding inspection activities in the Russian Federation, the total number of chemical weapons production facilities inspected stood at 59, 10 of which were certified as completely destroyed. He stated that the United States was the only State party to have launched and sustained a programme to eliminate its stockpile of chemical weapons, adding that OPCW inspectors spent the equivalent of more than 13,000 days monitoring the destruction of 200,000 chemical munitions and some 2,000 tonnes of chemical agents in the United States. The Director-General described progress made to implement article X of the Convention regarding assistance in the event of the threat or actual use of chemical weapons. As of October, contributions to the voluntary fund set up for that purpose totalled some $500,000; several workshops had been sponsored under article X to address various aspects of assistance coordination, such as logistics, transportation and protection against chemical weapons.

At a conference on Russian chemical weapons destruction (The Hague, 18 May), a plan for the elimination of all Russian chemical weapons within the Convention's time-frame was presented, and the need for international assistance in meeting the deadline for chemical weapons destruction was addressed. On 22 December, the Netherlands and the Russian Federation signed an agreement on the destruction of chemical weapons in Russia, which provided for the Netherlands to assist in the destruction of chemical weapons located at Kambarka, Udmurt Republic.

The Government of Japan notified OPCW on 3 December of the destruction of the facilities that manufactured sarin nerve gas, used in a March 1995 Tokyo subway attack. The plan to destroy the facilities was approved by the Executive Council earlier in the year; an OPCW team inspected the site from 9 to 15 December and confirmed that the facilities, equipment and buildings were completely destroyed.

The new OPCW headquarters in The Hague was inaugurated in May.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 R without vote [agenda item 71 (t)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject of chemical and bacteriological (biological) weapons, in particular resolution 52/38 T of 9 December 1997, adopted without a vote, in which it welcomed the entry into force of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction,

Determined to achieve the effective prohibition of the development, production, acquisition, transfer, stockpiling and use of chemical weapons and their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that since the adoption of resolution 52/38 T, fourteen additional States have ratified the Convention, bringing the total number of States parties to the Convention to one hundred and twenty,

1. Notes with appreciation the ongoing work of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, to ensure the full implementation of its provisions, including those for international verification of compliance with it, and to provide a forum for consultation and cooperation among States parties;

2. Stresses the importance of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in verifying compliance with the provisions of the Convention as well as in promoting the timely and efficient accomplishment of all its objectives;

3. Stresses also the vital importance of full and effective implementation of, and compliance with, all provisions of the Convention;

4. Urges all States parties to the Convention to meet in full and on time their obligations under the Convention and to support the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in its implementation activities;

5. Emphasizes the necessity of universal adherence to the Convention, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become States parties to the Convention without delay;

6. Stresses the importance to the Convention that all possessors of chemical weapons, chemical weapons production facilities or chemical weapons development facilities, including previously declared possessor States, should be among the States parties to the Convention, and welcomes progress to that end;

7. Welcomes the emerging cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and efforts towards the prompt conclusion of a relationship agreement between the United Nations and the Organization, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Conventional weapons

During 1998, a number of unparalleled developments occurred in the area of small arms and light weapons and the related subject of practical disarmament measures. An exceptionally high number of resolutions dealing with small arms—four in total—were adopted by the General Assembly; three were adopted by consensus and all focused, in varying degrees, on the issue of the illicit arms trade.

In addition, a group of States interested in practical disarmament measures, known as the "group of interested States", was established in March and met regularly during the year to consider projects dealing primarily with small arms proliferation. In part through a mechanism established by the Secretary-General to coordinate all action on small arms in the UN system, the Organization took on a pronounced role in promoting further awareness of the problem among Member States and civil society, convening meetings at Headquarters and cooperating with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in meetings on small arms held outside the United Nations.

Efforts continued towards strengthening the two global mechanisms for promoting transparency: the Register of Conventional Arms and the standardized reporting instrument for military expenditures. Since that instrument had experienced declining participation in recent years, the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) hosted a meeting in April with organizations, such as the World Bank, that compiled reports on military expenditures to find ways and means to adjust the standardized instrument and to encourage wider participation.

Major progress was made in strengthening the two legal instruments dealing with anti-personnel mines. Amended Protocol II to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects [YUN 1980, p. 76] entered into force in December, while the requisite number of ratifications of the 1997 Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel

Mines and on Their Destruction [YUN 1997, p. 503] was attained in September, paving the way for its entry into force in March 1999.

Regarding regional approaches, two trends that transcended specific regions were discernible: the examination by regional organizations of the causes of conflict to prevent their outbreak or recurrence and the extensive role played by confidence-building measures.

Small arms

Group of Governmental Experts. In April, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 52/38 J [YUN 1997, p. 507], the Secretary-General appointed a group of governmental experts to prepare a report on progress made in implementing the recommendations on reduction and prevention measures identified in his 1997 report on small arms [ibid., p. 506]. The Group of Governmental Experts on Small Arms comprised representatives of 23 countries, including, for the first time, the permanent members of the Security Council. The Group, which met twice in 1998, had before it the views of 21 Member States [A/53/169 & Add.1-3] on the Secretary-General's 1997 report, submitted pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/38 J.

The main focus of the former Panel of Governmental Experts on Small Arms, appointed in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 488], was small arms and light weapons manufactured to military specifications, which were used in conflicts dealt with by the United Nations. By maintaining that approach, the Group aimed to avoid overlap with the ongoing negotiations of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, which had as one of its tasks the development, within the context of a UN convention against transnational organized crime, an international instrument to combat the illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition (see PART THREE, Chapter IX).

During one session (New York, 26-29 May) and at a workshop convened by the Government of Japan (Tokyo, 7-9 September), the Group reviewed progress made in implementing the recommendations contained in the Secretary-General's 1997 report, particularly the recommendation to hold an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects. In December, the Assembly decided to convene the conference no later than 2001 (see below). The Group also noted the efforts of the United Nations, other international forums, regional and subregional organizations and Member States.

Other action. Within the United Nations, the Security Council became closely engaged in reduction and prevention activities, in particular within the context of the implementation of the Secretary-General's April report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa [A/52/871-S/1998/318]. On 16 September, the Council, in resolution 1196(1998), expressed its willingness to consider measures to assist the effective implementation of UN arms embargoes and noted that measures such as inquiries into arms trafficking routes might be relevant. In resolution 1209(1998) of 19 November, the Council encouraged the Secretary-General to explore means for collection, sharing and dissemination of information on illicit small arms flows and their destabilizing effects. (See PART ONE, Chapter II.)

Under the auspices of Norway, representatives of 21 States met (Oslo, 13-14 July) to discuss the problem of small arms and to examine action that might be taken by concerned Governments [CD/1556]. The participants issued a document entitled "An international agenda on small arms and light weapons: elements of a common understanding". Belgium hosted the International Conference on Sustainable Disarmament for Sustainable Development (Brussels, 12-13 October), which adopted "The Brussels Call for Action", calling for an international programme of action on practical disarmament and peace-building [A/53/681].

At the regional and subregional levels, the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials, adopted by the Organization of American States (OAS) in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 509, & A/53/78], entered into force. In June, the European Union (EU) Code of Conduct on Arms Exports was adopted, which elaborated criteria for licensing transfers of all types of arms and military equipment and established mechanisms for the exchange of information and consultation among EU members. The Organization of African Unity (OAU) (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, 4-7 June) adopted a decision on the proliferation of small arms and light weapons [A/53/179]. Building on initiatives by Mali [YUN 1997, p. 508] and countries of the Sahara and the Sahel, the heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) (Abuja, Nigeria, 31 October) adopted the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa [A/53/763-S/1998/1194]. The Ministerial Meeting of the Southern African Development Community and the EU endorsed a southern African regional action programme to tackle light arms proliferation and illicit arms trafficking, developed at a workshop of southern African and EU officials and experts held near Pretoria in May. The EU Council, on 17 December, adopted the legally binding Joint Action [A/54/374], as the EU contribution to combating the destabilizing accumulation and spread of small arms and light weapons.

A number of individual States acted to strengthen legal or regulatory controls, including Algeria, Belarus, Bulgaria, China, France, the Russian Federation and the United States.

Within the UN Secretariat, the Secretary-General's Senior Management Group (SMG), in June, designated DDA as the focal point to coordinate all action on small arms in the UN system. The Department subsequently established the Coordinating Action on Small Arms (CASA) mechanism to implement SMG decisions. The objectives of CASA were to retain the UN lead in putting the issue on the global agenda; channel growing international concern towards realizing some realistic and attainable goals; strengthen the ability of the United Nations to respond speedily and effectively to requests for assistance by subregions and countries severely affected by the excessive accumulation, proliferation and use of small arms, including illicit traffic; and ensure that those objectives were pursued within the framework of UN overall priorities in disarmament. Focal point meetings were held to discuss the initiative of a group of like-minded States led by Canada and Norway, which developed an agenda on small arms, and a lessons-learned workshop on "Weapons collection and reintegration of former combatants into civil society—the experience of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Colombia" (Guatemala City, November).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 E by recorded vote (169-0-1) [agenda item 71 (m)].

Small arms

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/38 J of 9 December 1997,

Convinced of the need for a comprehensive approach to promote, at the global and regional levels, the control and reduction of small arms and light weapons in a balanced and non-discriminatory manner as a contribution to international peace and security,

Reaffirming the inherent right to individual or collective self-defence recognized in Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations, which implies that States also have the right to acquire arms with which to defend themselves,

Reaffirming also the right of self-determination of all peoples, in particular peoples under colonial or other forms of alien domination or foreign occupation, and the importance of the effective realization of this right, as enunciated, inter alia, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Reaffirming further the urgent need for practical disarmament in the context of the conflicts the United Nations is actually dealing with and of the weapons that are actually killing people in the hundreds of thousands,

Reiterating its call upon Member States to implement the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on small arms, which was prepared with the assistance of the Panel of Governmental Experts on Small Arms, to the extent possible and where necessary in cooperation with appropriate international and regional organizations and/or through international and regional cooperation among police, intelligence, customs and border control services,

Reiterating its request to the Secretary-General to implement the relevant recommendations as soon as possible within available financial resources and in cooperation with appropriate international and regional organizations where necessary, as well as its encouragement to Member States and the Secretary-General to carry out recommendations for post-conflict situations, including demobilization of former combatants and disposal and destruction of weapons,

Noting that the Secretary-General is, with the assistance of a group of governmental experts nominated by him on the basis of equitable geographical representation, preparing, for submission to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session, a report on (a) the progress made in the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on small arms endorsed by the Assembly in its resolution 52/38 J and (b) further actions recommended to be taken,

Noting also that the group of technical experts appointed by the Secretary-General to study the problems of ammunition and explosives in all their aspects has held its first meeting,

Noting further the replies to date to the request of the Secretary-General to Member States for their views on his report on small arms and on the steps that they have taken to implement its recommendations, in particular, on the recommendation concerning the convening of an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects,

Taking note with interest of the work in progress for the elaboration of an international convention against organized transnational crime, including a protocol to combat illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, in the framework of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and of other related efforts by the Commission and the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the Secretariat,

Underlining the importance of increasing coordination regarding the issue of small arms and light weapons, including illicit manufacturing and trafficking therein, both among the relevant bodies of the United Nations and within the Secretariat, and welcoming in this context the decision of the Secretary-General to establish the mechanism for Coordinating Action on Small Arms,

1. Decides to convene an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects no later than 2001;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report containing his recommendations to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session, with a view to a decision by the Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the objective, scope, agenda, dates, venue of and preparatory committee for an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, in preparing his report in accordance with paragraph 2 of the present resolution:

(a) To seek the views of all Member States on the objective, scope, agenda, dates and venue of and preparatory work for an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects and to take into account these views as well as the views already expressed by them in their replies to the request of the Secretary-General for their views in accordance with paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 52/38 J;

(b) To take into account his report on small arms, as well as relevant recommendations to be made in his report prepared with the assistance of the Group of Governmental Experts on Small Arms, which will be submitted to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 5 of Assembly resolution 52/38 J;

4. Welcomes the offer by the Government of Switzerland to host in Geneva, no later than 2001, an international conference on the illicit arms trade in all its aspects;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to assist in preventing the illicit trafficking in and illicit circulation of small arms and light weapons, to initiate a study as soon as possible, within available financial resources and with any other assistance provided by Member States in a position to do so, on the feasibility of restricting the manufacture and trade of such weapons to the manufacturers and dealers authorized by States;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Small arms".

Ammunition and explosives

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/38 J [YUN 1997, p. 507], the Secretary-General, in April, appointed an eight-member Group of Experts to carry out a study on the problem of ammunition and explosives. The Group's aim was to assess whether and how enhanced controls of ammunition and explosives could contribute to preventing and reducing the excessive and destabilizing accumulation and proliferation, as well as the abuse of, small arms.

At its first session (New York, 27 April-1 May) [A/54/155], the Group prepared a questionnaire on matters related to ammunition for small arms (revolvers and self-loading pistols; rifles and carbines; sub-machine-guns; assault rifles; light machine-guns) and light weapons (heavy machine-guns; hand-held under-barrel and mounted grenade launchers; portable anti-aircraft guns; portable anti-tank guns, recoilless rifles; portable launchers of anti-tank missile and rocket systems; portable launchers of anti-aircraft missile systems; mortars of calibres of less than 100 millimetres) and to explosives (military high explosives, particularly plastic explosives; industrial explosives, as used in the mining industry; improvised or home-made explosives; and, particularly, explosive initiators, namely detonators). The questionnaire, which was transmitted in July to Member States, producers, trade associations and other actors involved in the production or traffic of ammunition and explosives, included inquiries related to capacity of production, exports and imports, illegal trafficking, transfers of technology, destruction of stocks and surpluses, transport legislation and international exchange of information. A major impediment to the Group's work was the insufficiency and unavailability of existing information on matters related to ammunition for small arms and light weapons and explosives in all their aspects. Replies to the Group's questionnaire were too few and insufficient in content to compensate for the shortcomings of existing sources of information.

The Group highlighted the need to integrate the ammunition dimension into current and future initiatives on small arms and on control strategies; encourage harmonization of national and international legislation; and provide technical measures in support of the harmonized legislative measures and implementation of the control proposals. One of the Group's initial assessments was that any efforts to control small arms would not be complete if the ammunition and explosives aspect were not dealt with and that the control of ammunition would be a good way to deal with arms that were already in circulation.

Illicit traffic

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 C [YUN 1997, p. 508], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/53/207], again examined the issue of assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them.

Regarding the declaration of a proposed moratorium on the manufacture, import and export of light weapons in West Africa, the subject of ministerial consultations held in Bamako, Mali, in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 508], the ECOWAS ministerial meeting (Yamoussoukro, Cote d'Ivoire, 12 March 1998) gave the ECOWAS secretariat the task of preparing a draft text for such a declaration. Under the auspices of the Norwegian Initiative on Small Arms Transfers and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), representatives of 13 ECOWAS countries met (Oslo, 1-2 April) with those of arms-exporting States, DDA and other UN bodies and observer Governments and NGOs. At that meeting, the President of Mali elaborated on the proposal for a moratorium, which would initially be a declaratory measure of a duration to be determined by the participating States, with the prospect of being extended.

The Secretary-General referred to his April report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa [A/52/871-S/1998/318] (see above) and Security Council resolution 1170(1998) by which the Council established an ad hoc Working Group to review the recommendations contained in the Secretary-General's report as they related to the maintenance of international peace and security (see PART ONE, Chapter II).

Since the adoption of Assembly resolution 52/38 C, the Secretary-General had received requests from Albania and the Niger for assistance to curb the illicit circulation of small arms and to collect the arms in those States. A mission visited Albania from 11 to 14 June to make a preliminary evaluation of the situation and to assist the Government in developing a programme for retrieving and collecting weapons from civilians. The mission recommended, among other measures, the development of a pilot project for voluntary weapons collection in central Albania (Gramshi district), which was estimated to account for some 8 to 10 per cent of the weapons and ammunition possessed by civilians following the crisis in the country in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 348]. In the Niger, the National Commission for the Collection and Control of Illicit Arms, since its establishment in 1994, had collected more than 3,500 weapons, and wished to collect some 2,000 more. The Secretariat would consult with the Niger on its request.

A meeting on small arms (Oslo, 13-14 July) recognized that a sizeable portion of all transfers of small arms and light weapons was illicit and increasingly linked to other transnational criminal activities. Immediate action could focus on the prevention of illicit transfers and tighter control of legal transfers.

The Secretary-General stated that he had sought the views of Member States on the convening of an international conference on the illicit arms trade. Replies received expressed general support for convening the conference, with Switzerland offering to host it under United Nations auspices.

A total of 32 OAS members had signed the 1997 Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials [YUN 1997, p. 509] and Belize and Mexico had ratified it, said the Secretary-General. In addition, on 18 April, the Presidents of the economic trade organization MERCOSUR countries (Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay), together with the Presidents of Bolivia and Chile, adopted a presidential statement on the combat against the production and the illicit trafficking of firearms, munitions, explosives and related materials [CD/1552].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 T without vote [agenda item 71].

Illicit traffic in small arms

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its resolution 52/38 J of 9 December 1997 on small arms,

Expressing its appreciation for the reports of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 51/45 F and resolution 52/38 C,

Also expressing its appreciation for the report of the Secretary-General of 13 April 1998 on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa, and in this context takes note of the ongoing consideration by the Security Council of the issue of illicit arms flows to and in Africa,

Welcoming the initiatives by States members of the Economic Community of West African States to conclude their agreement on a moratorium on the importing, exporting and manufacture of light weapons,

Welcoming also the entry into force of the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and Other Related Materials,

Welcoming the adoption of the European Union programme for preventing and combating illicit trafficking in conventional arms and the initiatives undertaken in its implementation,

Stressing the importance of ongoing efforts to elaborate an international convention against transnational organized crime, including a protocol to combat the illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, in the framework of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Welcoming the announcement of the Secretary-General on 14 August 1998 designating the Department for Disarmament Affairs as the focal point to co-ordinate all action on small arms within the United Nations system,

Underlining the importance of increased cooperation and coordination both among the relevant inter-governmental bodies of the United Nations, and within the Secretariat, in particular with regard to the activities of the Centre for International Crime Prevention, the Department for Disarmament Affairs and the mechanism for Coordinating Action on Small Arms in ongoing initiatives related to illicit trafficking in small arms,

Recognizing the human suffering caused by illicit trafficking in small arms and that Governments bear the responsibility to intensify their efforts by developing an understanding of the issues and practical ways of addressing the problem,

Bearing in mind the interface between violence, criminality, drug trafficking, terrorism and illicit trafficking in small arms,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to hold broad-based consultations, within available financial resources and with any other assistance provided by Member States in a position to do so, taking into account the ongoing work of the Group of Governmental Experts on Small Arms, with all Member States, interested regional and subregional organizations, international agencies, and experts in the field on:

(a) The magnitude and scope of the phenomenon of illicit trafficking in small arms;

(b) Possible measures to combat illicit trafficking in and illicit circulation of small arms, including those suited to indigenous regional approaches;

Also on 4 December [meeting 79], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 B without vote [agenda item 71 (f)].

Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 46/36 H of 6 December 1991, 47/52 G and J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 H and J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 G of 15 December 1994, 50/70 H of 12 December 1995, 51/45 L of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 C of 9 December 1997,

Considering that the illicit circulation of massive quantities of small arms throughout the world impedes development and is a source of increased insecurity,

Considering also that the illicit international transfer of small arms and their accumulation in many countries constitute a threat to their populations and to national and regional security and are a factor contributing to the destabilization of States,

Basing itself on the statement of the Secretary-General relating to the request of Mali for United Nations assistance for the collection of small arms,

Gravely concerned at the extent of the insecurity and banditry linked to the illicit circulation of small arms in Mali and the other affected States of the Saharo-Saharan subregion,

Taking note of the first conclusions of the United Nations advisory missions sent to the affected countries of the subregion by the Secretary-General to study the best way of curbing the illicit circulation of small arms and ensuring their collection,

Taking note also of the interest shown by the other States of the region in receiving a United Nations advisory mission,

Noting the actions taken and those recommended at the meetings of the States of the subregion held at Banjul, Algiers, Bamako, Yamoussoukro and Niamey to establish close regional cooperation with a view to strengthening security,

Bearing in mind the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Welcoming the initiative taken by the Economic Community of West African States concerning the declaration of a moratorium on the importing, exporting and manufacture of light weapons in West Africa,

Welcoming also the decision of the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its sixty-eighth ordinary session, held at Ouagadougou from 4 to 7 June 1998, concerning the proliferation of small arms and light weapons,

Taking note with interest of the work of the Panel of Governmental Experts on Small Arms, in particular the recommendations contained in paragraphs 79 (a) and (g) of its report,

Emphasizing the need to advance efforts towards wider cooperation and better coordination in the struggle against the accumulation, proliferation and widespread use of small arms through the common understanding of the meeting on small arms, held at Oslo on 13 and 14 July 1998, and the Brussels Call for Action adopted by the International Conference on Sustainable Disarmament for Sustainable Development, held at Brussels on 12 and 13 October 1998,

1. Welcomes the initiative taken by Mali concerning the question of the illicit circulation of small arms and their collection in the affected States of the Saharo-Saharan subregion;

2. Also welcomes the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa, adopted by the heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of West African States at Abuja on 31 October 1998, and urges the international community to give its support to the implementation of the moratorium;

3. Further welcomes the action taken by the Secretary-General in implementation of this initiative in the context of General Assembly resolution 40/151 H of 16 December 1985;

4. Thanks the Governments concerned in the subregion for the substantial support that they have given to the United Nations advisory missions, and welcomes the declared readiness of other States to receive the United Nations Advisory Mission;

5. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue his efforts, in the context of the implementation of resolution 49/75 G and of the recommendations of the United Nations advisory missions, to curb the illicit circulation of small arms and to collect such arms in the affected States that so request, with the support of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa and in close cooperation with the Organization of African Unity;

6. Notes that, as part of its efforts to halt the flow of small arms into Mali and the Saharo-Saharan subregion, the Government of Mali oversaw the destruction, at the "Flame of Peace" ceremony held at Timbuktu, Mali, on 27 March 1996, of thousands of small arms handed over by ex-combatants of the armed movements of northern Mali;

7. Encourages the setting up in the countries of the Saharo-Saharan subregion of national commissions against the proliferation of small arms, and invites the international community to support as far as possible the smooth functioning of the national commissions where they have been set up;

8. Takes note of the conclusions of the ministerial consultation on the proposal for a moratorium on the importing, exporting and manufacture of light weapons in the region, held at Bamako on 26 March 1997, and encourages the States concerned to pursue their consultations on the matter;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to examine the issue and to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them".

Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and Protocols

As requested in General Assembly resolution 52/42 [YUN 1997, p. 509], the Secretary-General reported on the status, as at 15 June 1998 [A/53/159], of the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects [YUN 1980, p. 76] and two of its four Protocols: the 1995 Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV) [YUN 1995, p. 221] and the 1996 amended Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (amended Protocol II) [YUN 1996, p. 484]. He stated that 19 of the 20 notifications of consent required for entry into force of amended Protocol II had been deposited. In accordance with the provisions of article 5 of the Convention, Protocol IV would enter into force on 30 July, six months after the date on which 20 States gave notification of their consent to be bound by it.

The accession of Costa Rica and Lithuania in 1998 brought the number of States parties to the Convention as at 31 December to 73.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/588], adopted resolution 53/81 without vote [agenda item 75].

Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/42 of 9 December 1997 and previous resolutions referring to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects,

Recalling that the States parties at the Review Conference declared their commitment to keeping the provisions of Protocol II under review in order to ensure that the concerns regarding the weapons it covers are addressed, and that they would encourage efforts of the United Nations and other organizations to address all problems of landmines,

Also recalling the role played by the International Committee of the Red Cross in the elaboration of the Convention and the Protocols thereto,

Welcoming the additional ratifications and acceptances of or accessions to the Convention, as well as the ratifications and acceptances of or accessions to the amended Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) and the Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV),

Noting that, in conformity with article 8 of the Convention, conferences may be convened to examine amendments to the Convention or to any of the Protocols thereto, to examine additional protocols concerning other categories of conventional weapons not covered by existing Protocols or to review the scope and application of the Convention and the Protocols annexed thereto and to examine any proposed amendments or additional protocols,

Welcoming the decision adopted by the Review Conference in its Final Declaration on 3 May 1996 to convene a Review Conference no later than 2001,

4. Calls upon all States parties to amended Protocol II to attend the first annual conference, and notes that the parties, under provisions to be adopted in accordance with article 13, paragraph 2, may decide to invite representatives of States not parties to the Protocol, and of the International Committee of the Red Cross;

5. Urgently calls upon all States that have not yet done so to take all measures to become parties, as soon as possible, to the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and particularly to amended Protocol II, with a view to achieving the widest possible adherence to this instrument at an early date, and calls upon successor States to take appropriate measures so that ultimately adherence to these instruments will be universal;

6. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in his capacity as depositary of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, to continue to inform it periodically of ratifications and acceptances of and accessions to the Convention and the Protocols, and decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects".

Practical disarmament

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 G [YUN 1997, p. 510], the group of interested States was formed in March 1998 to facilitate action by the international community to assist affected States in implementing practical disarmament measures. Such measures aimed to assist Member States that faced concrete problems arising out of post-conflict situations, such as demobilization, reintegration of former combatants into civil society, weapons collection programmes and exchange of information.

The initial objective of the group was to examine and, wherever possible, support concrete projects of practical disarmament, particularly as designed and initiated by affected countries. The group also functioned as a forum for the exchange of information about lessons learned in practical disarmament and its dissemination to interested countries.

The group's priority was to match resources and urgent requirements of affected countries with flexibility of approach, since the measures were often a matter of life and death for the affected country. It emphasized practical and attainable objectives; voluntary financial commitments as a means to achieve that objective; and focus on Africa and Central America as areas for immediate action.

Recognizing that the group's activities would be dependent on voluntary contributions from Member States, governmental and non-governmental organizations and others, the Secretary-General, in August, created the Trust Fund for the Consolidation of Peace through Practical Disarmament Measures; DDA was designated as the Fund's implementing office.

During the year, the group supported a number of projects proposed by affected Member States, including a subregional seminar on the training of trainers in practical disarmament measures (Yaounde, Cameroon, July) and a workshop on weapons collection and reintegration of former combatants into civil society—the experience of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Colombia (Guatemala City, November).

A project to assist Albania to collect weapons from the civilian population (see above, under "Illicit traffic") was developed throughout 1998 by DDA and UNDP. Members of the group of interested States provided financial assistance for the recommended pilot project.

In December, the Assembly encouraged the group to support the Secretary-General's efforts to respond to requests by Member States for practical disarmament measures (see below).

Disarmament Commission action. In 1998 [A/53/42], the Disarmament Commission allocated to Working Group III the item entitled "Guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution 51/45 N", using the Chairman's 1997 paper [YUN 1997, p. 510] as a basis for the deliberations. The Working Group defined the core of its work as establishing guidelines for post-conflict practical disarmament measures with a view to the consolidation of peace. Some delegations, however, also emphasized elaborating guidelines on other types of conventional disarmament measures, such as regional arms moratoriums and registers and codes of conduct for weapons transfers. The Working Group devoted six meetings to reviewing the Chairman's 1997 paper, together with new elements introduced by delegations and the 1998 Chairman. The guidelines followed the same framework as in 1997: introduction; general framework; principles; practical disarmament measures; and other conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament measures for the consolidation of peace. Taking into account working papers submitted and the discussions held, the Chairman presented a revised version of the guidelines. Although there was insufficient time to discuss the paper, the Working Group agreed to annex it to its report to the Commission, at the Chairman's discretion and without prejudice to the position of any delegation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 M without vote [agenda item 71 (j)].

Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 N of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 G of 9 December 1997,

Convinced that a comprehensive and integrated approach towards certain practical disarmament measures, such as, inter alia, arms control, particularly with regard to small arms and light weapons, confidence-building measures, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants, demining and conversion, often is a prerequisite to maintaining and consolidating peace and security and thus provides a basis for effective rehabilitation and social and economic development in areas that have suffered from conflict,

Noting with satisfaction that the international community is more than ever aware of the importance of such practical disarmament measures, especially with regard to the growing problems arising from the excessive and destabilizing accumulation and proliferation of small arms and light weapons, which pose a threat to peace and security and reduce the prospects for economic development in many regions, particularly in post-conflict situations,

Stressing that further efforts are needed in order to develop and effectively implement programmes of practical disarmament in affected areas,

Recalling the deliberations on guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution 51/45 N, in the Disarmament Commission and the report of the Panel of Governmental Experts on Small Arms and its relevance in the context of the present resolution and of the ongoing work in the Disarmament Commission,

1. Stresses the particular relevance of the deliberations in the 1998 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission on guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution 51/45 N, as a useful basis for further deliberations, and encourages the Disarmament Commission to continue its efforts aimed at the adoption of such guidelines in 1999;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures, submitted pursuant to resolution 51/45 N, and once again encourages Member States, as well as regional arrangements and agencies, to lend their support to the implementation of recommendations contained therein;

3. Invites the group of interested States that was formed in New York in March 1998 to continue to analyse lessons learned from previous disarmament and peace-building projects, as well as to promote new practical disarmament measures to consolidate peace, especially as undertaken or designed by affected States themselves;

4. Encourages Member States, including the group of interested States, to lend their support to the Secretary-General in responding to requests by Member States to collect and destroy small arms and light weapons in post-conflict situations;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures".

Transparency

On 26 March [A/53/27], the Conference on Disarmament appointed a Special Coordinator to seek the views of its members on the most appropriate way to deal with questions related to transparency in armaments.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 R [YUN 1997, p. 512], the Secretary-General submitted the sixth annual report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms [A/53/334 & Corr.1,2 & Add.1,2], which was established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 75] to promote enhanced levels of transparency regarding arms transfers.

The report presented information provided by 97 Governments on imports and exports during the 1997 calendar year in the seven categories of conventional arms (battle tanks, armoured combat vehicles, large-calibre artillery systems, attack helicopters, combat aircraft, warships, and missiles and missile launchers). A composite table for 1997 listed the replies received by the Secretary-General from States and indicated whether each reply contained data on imports or exports or both, and whether relevant explanations and background information were included.

The report included for the first time additional information provided by Governments on procurement from national production and military holdings, with the understanding that States providing the data might request that they not be published. In previous years, the report had included a table listing the Governments that had provided information, but not the data and information itself. Another innovation was the nomination by some Member States of national points of contact for matters connected with the Register. The information was held by the Secretariat and provided on request to Governments only.

In April, DDA produced an information booklet entitled "Register of Conventional Arms: Information Booklet" in English, French and Spanish.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 S by recorded vote (104-46-17) [agenda item 71 (e)].

Transparency in armaments

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, Member States have undertaken to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources,

Considering the urgent need to accelerate efforts towards general and complete disarmament with a view to maintaining regional and international peace and security in a world free from the scourge of war and the burden of all types of armaments,

Considering also that openness and transparency relating to all types of armaments would contribute greatly to confidence-building and security among States,

Recognizing that an enhanced level of transparency relating to both conventional weapons and weapons of mass destruction and transfers of equipment and technologies directly related to the development and manufacture of such weapons, as well as to high technology with military applications, would promote stability, strengthen regional and international peace and security, and accelerate efforts towards general and complete disarmament,

Recognizing also that the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, in its current form, constitutes an important first step towards the promotion of transparency in military matters,

Convinced that the principle of transparency should also apply to all weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to transfers of equipment and technology directly related to the development and manufacture of such weapons, as well as to high technology with military applications,

Aware of the need to foster international efforts in this direction through, inter alia, the constant review of the operation of the Register with a view to its further development,

Stressing the need to achieve universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, with a view to realizing the goal of the total elimination of all weapons of mass destruction,

Recalling its earlier resolutions on transparency in armaments,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on transparency in armaments;

2. Recalls the reports of the Group of Governmental Experts on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, which convened in 1994 and 1997 to consider the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, and the views expressed and proposals presented therein;

3. Recognizes the importance of achieving greater progress in the further development of the Register in order that it may truly enhance confidence-building and security among States and accelerate efforts towards attainment of the goal of general and complete disarmament, and to that end urges Member States to submit their views to the Secretary-General concerning the following matters with a view to their consideration by the Group of Governmental Experts, which is to be convened in 2000:

(a) The early expansion of the scope of the Register;

(b) The elaboration of practical means for the further development of the Register in order to increase transparency related to weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to transfers of equipment and technology directly related to the development and manufacture of such weapons;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Transparency in armaments".

Transparency of military expenditures

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/32 [YUN 1997, p. 514], the Secretary-General, in August [A/53/218], presented reports from 27 Member States on military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data were available. The reporting instrument used was that recommended by the Assembly in resolution 35/142 B [YUN 1980, p. 88].

Also pursuant to resolution 52/32, the Under-Secretary-General for Disarmament Affairs held consultations with international and regional organizations that received data on military expenditures from Member Governments to ascertain the requirements for adjusting the current instrument to encourage wider participation. On 23 April, representatives of DDA, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), the Overseas Development Council and the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency discussed potential constraints on the participation of Member States in the reporting system on military expenditures:

the structure of the reporting instrument; the capacity of Governments to provide the information requested; the process for overseeing the reporting system; and incentives for Governments to participate. Recommendations that emerged from the consultations included: raising the profile of the UN system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures; eliciting the views of Member States regarding obstacles to their participation; providing incentives to Member States to participate; eliminating technical impediments to participation; and enhancing the complementarity of and cooperation among the different international and regional reporting instruments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/578], adopted resolution 53/72 without vote [agenda item 65].

Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/32 of 9 December 1997 on objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures,

Also recalling its resolution 35/142 B of 12 December 1980, which introduced the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, and its resolutions 48/62 of 16 December 1993, 49/66 of 15 December 1994 and 51/38 of 10 December 1996, calling upon all Member States to participate in it, and its resolution 47/54 B of 9 December 1992, endorsing the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters and inviting Member States to provide relevant information to the Secretary-General regarding their implementation,

Noting that since then national reports on military expenditures and on the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters have been submitted by a number of Member States belonging to different geographic regions,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on ways and means to implement the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters, including, in particular, how to strengthen and broaden participation in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing Member States with the reports on military expenditures in standardized form reported by States and on the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters,

Welcoming the decision of many Member States to exchange and to publish information annually on their military budgets and to implement the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters, as appropriate,

Noting the decision taken by the Conference on Disarmament to reappoint a Special Coordinator on transparency in armaments to seek the views of the members of the Conference on the most appropriate way to deal with the questions related to this item,

Noting also the efforts of several regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures, including standardized annual exchanges of relevant information among their member States,

Reaffirming its firm conviction that a better flow of objective information on military matters can help to relieve international tension and contribute to the building of confidence among States and to the conclusion of concrete disarmament agreements,

Convinced that the improvement of international relations forms a sound basis for promoting further openness and transparency in all military matters,

Recalling that the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters recommended certain areas for further consideration, such as the improvement of the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures,

1. Recommends the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters to all Member States for implementation, fully taking into account specific political, military and other conditions prevailing in a region, on the basis of initiatives and with the agreement of the States of the region concerned;

2. Welcomes the resumption on 23 April 1998 by the Secretary-General of consultations with relevant international bodies with a view to ascertaining the requirements for adjusting the present instrument to encourage wider participation;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing Member States with a report on the outcome of those consultations containing, inter alia, recommendations on ways and means to enhance the participation in the standardized reporting instrument;

4. Calls upon all Member States to report annually, by 30 April, to the Secretary-General their military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data are available, using, preferably and to the extent possible, the reporting instrument as recommended in its resolution 35/142 B or, as appropriate, any other format developed in conjunction with similar reporting on military expenditures to other international or regional organizations;

5. Encourages relevant international bodies and regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures and to enhance complementarity among reporting systems, taking into account the particular characteristics of each region;

6. Requests the Secretary-General:

- (b) To promote international and regional symposia and training seminars to explain the purpose of the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures and to give relevant technical instructions;

- (c) To circulate annually the reports on military expenditures as received from Member States;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with relevant international bodies, within existing resources, with a view to ascertaining the requirements for adjusting the present instrument to encourage wider participation, with emphasis on examining possibilities for enhancing complementarity among international and regional reporting systems and to exchange related information with those bodies;

8. Further requests the Secretary-General to make recommendations, based on the outcome of those consultations and taking into account the views of Member States, on necessary changes to the content and structure of the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures in order to strengthen and broaden participation, and to submit a report on the subject to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

9. Calls upon all Member States, in time for the deliberation by the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session, to provide the Secretary-General with their views on the analysis and the recommendations contained in his report and with further suggestions to strengthen and broaden participation in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, including necessary changes to its content and structure;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures".

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/38 A of 9 December 1997,

Reaffirming its determination to put an end to the suffering and casualties caused by anti-personnel mines, which kill or maim hundreds of people every week, mostly innocent and defenceless civilians and especially children, obstruct economic development and reconstruction, inhibit the repatriation of refugees and internally displaced persons, and have other severe consequences for years after emplacement,

Conference on Disarmament

In the Conference on Disarmament, a number of States submitted documents on anti-personnel mines (APMs): Belarus, in January, on the extension until the end of 1999 of its moratorium on the export of APMs [CD/1480]; the United States, also in January, in support of banning APMs [CD/1490]; Egypt, transmitting a resolution adopted by the World Health Organization (WHO) in January on concerted public health action on APMs [CD/1493]; Argentina, Australia, Belarus, Belgium, Bulgaria, Chile, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Poland, Romania, the Russian Federation, Slovakia, Spain, Turkey, Ukraine, the United Kingdom, the United States and Venezuela, as sponsors of a draft to reappoint a Special Coordinator (see above, under "UN role in disarmament") [CD/1495]; South Africa on its assistance in demining in Mozambique [CD/1498]; Egypt, transmitting a resolution adopted by WHO in May on concerted public health action on APMs [CD/1514]; South Africa on its ratification of the Ottawa Convention [CD/1546]; and Egypt, transmitting a resolution adopted by the Subcommission on the Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities on the injurious effects of APMs [CD/1553] (see PART TWO, Chapter II).

Women and armed conflict

In resolution 1998/12 of 28 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women with respect to four critical areas of concern identified in the Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170], one of which addressed women and armed conflict. The conclusions proposed that Governments alleviate the suffering of women and children by working towards eliminating APMs and developing policies to prohibit illicit traffic, trade and transfer of small arms, and to control their excessive production. Governments should provide landmine awareness campaigns or classes, making them accessible to women in afflicted areas, and provide resources for landmine clearance; support programmes to rehabilitate women victims of APMs; encourage the role of women in the peace movement; and prevent and put an end to aggression and all forms of armed conflict.

Regional and other approaches to disarmament

Africa

The OAU Council of Ministers (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, 4-7 June) [A/53/179] adopted a decision urging the OAU Secretary-General to gather from member States information on the scope of the proliferation of small arms and steps taken to deal with the problem.

OAU, in cooperation with the United Nations, the EU, the League of Arab States and a number of subregional organizations, such as the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and the International Consultative Group, continued to be actively involved in efforts to bring peace and stability to conflict situations in the region, such as those in Angola, Burundi, the Comoros, Ethiopia and Eritrea, Sierra Leone and Somalia (see PARTONE, Chapter II).

On 31 October in Abuja, Nigeria, the ECOWAS heads of State and Government adopted the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa [A/53/763-S/1998/1194]. The moratorium was essentially a confidence-building measure, which covered weapons such as handguns, rifles, machine-guns, landmines, grenades and portable rocket launchers, as well as their ammunition. It came into effect on 1 November and was renewable for a three-year period. An operational framework—known as the Programme for Coordination and Assistance for Security and Development—which was developed with UNDP assistance and would be financed by it, was expected to begin in early 1999. In addition, ECOWAS, through its Military Observer Group and together with UN monitors, provided assistance to Sierra Leone in implementing its programme for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants, including disarming Liberian fighters involved in the fighting in Sierra Leone (see PART ONE, Chapter II).

Standing Advisory Committee

The United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa met for the first time at the level of ministers of defence and of the interior (Libreville, Gabon, 28-30 April) [A/53/258-S/1998/763] to discuss security questions facing their respective countries and to adopt common strategies to combat the illicit traffic in arms and drugs. The Committee organized the Subregional Conference on Democratic Institutions and Peace in Central Africa (Bata, Equatorial Guinea, 18-21 May) aimed at strengthening and promoting democracy in the region. The Conference adopted the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa, and issued a special declaration by members of the opposition of countries of the Central African subregion.

The tenth meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of States members of the Committee (Yaounde, Cameroon, 26-30 October) [A/53/638-S/1998/1035] adopted the Yaounde Declaration on Peace, Security and Development in Central Africa. The Ministers appealed to the United Nations for assistance in organizing a subregional conference on ways to halt the proliferation and illicit marketing of arms and drugs in Central Africa.

In September, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a report on the Committee's activities [A/53/369].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/585], adopted resolution 53/78 A without vote [agenda item 72 (d)].

Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 43/78 H and 43/85 of 7 December 1988, 44/21 of 15 November 1989, 45/58 M of 4 December 1990, 46/37 B of 6 December 1991, 47/53 F of 15 December 1992, 48/76 A of 16 December 1993, 49/76 C of 15 December 1994, 50/71 B of 12 December 1995, 51/46 C of 10 December 1996 and 52/39 B of 9 December 1997,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability and to international security,

Convinced that the resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recalling the guidelines for general and complete disarmament adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Convinced that development can be achieved only in a climate of peace, security and mutual confidence both within and among States,

Bearing in mind the establishment by the Secretary-General on 28 May 1992 of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the purpose of which is to encourage arms limitation, disarmament, non-proliferation and development in the subregion,

Recalling the Brazzaville Declaration on Cooperation for Peace and Security in Central Africa and the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa,

Bearing in mind resolutions 1196(1998) and 1197(1998), adopted by the Security Council on 16 and 18 September 1998 respectively, following its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacity for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa,

Recalling the decision of the fourth meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee in favour of establishing, under the auspices of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, a subregional centre for human rights and democracy in Central Africa,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on regional confidence-building measures, which deals with the activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in the period since the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 52/39 B;

2. Reaffirms its support for efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at regional and subregional levels in order to ease tensions and conflicts in the subregion and to further peace, stability and sustainable development in Central Africa;

3. Also reaffirms its support for the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee adopted at the organizational meeting of the Committee, held at Yaounde from 27 to 31 July 1992;

4. Notes with satisfaction the progress made by the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee in implementing the programme of activities for the period 1998-1999, in particular by:

(a) Holding a joint meeting of ministers of defence and of the interior at Libreville from 28 to 30 April 1998 on questions of security in Central Africa;

(b) Organizing the Subregional Conference on Democratic Institutions and Peace in Central Africa, at Bata, Equatorial Guinea, from 18 to 21 May 1998;

(c) Holding a Seminar on the Training of Trainers in Practical Disarmament Measures for the Consolidation of Peace for Senior Military and Civilian Officials at Yaounde, from 27 to 31 July 1998;

5. Emphasizes the importance of providing the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the essential support they need to carry out the full programme of activities which they adopted at the ninth and tenth ministerial meetings, in particular the organization of joint military exercises to simulate peacekeeping operations;

6. Welcomes the decision of the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee to convene as soon as possible a summit meeting of heads of State and Government with a view to establishing a higher council for the promotion of peace, the prevention, management and settlement of political crises and armed conflicts in Central Africa and a subregional parliament in Central Africa;

7. Welcomes with satisfaction the establishment of an early warning mechanism in Central Africa which will serve, on the one hand, as an instrument for analysing and monitoring political situations in the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with a view to preventing the outbreak of future armed conflicts and, on the other hand, as a technical body through which the member States will carry out the work programme of the Committee, adopted at its organizational meeting held at Yaounde in 1992;

8. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to lend their support to the establishment of a subregional centre for human rights and democracy in Central Africa;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1197(1998), to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the necessary support in making operational the early warning mechanism that they have just established;

10. Thanks the Secretary-General for having established the Trust Fund for the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa;

11. Appeals to Member States and to governmental and non-governmental organizations to make additional voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund for the implementation of the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee, in particular the activities referred to in paragraphs 5 and 7 above;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide assistance to the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee to ensure that they are able to carry on with their efforts;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

The Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN), the ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF) and the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific (CSCAP) continued to play important roles in maintaining regional security and stability, including through the promotion of confidence-building measures. The United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific also sought to reinforce the process through its activities (see below, under "Other disarmament issues").

The Sixth ASEAN Summit (Hanoi, Viet Nam, 15-16 December) adopted the Hanoi Plan of Action, by which ASEAN members pledged to promote efforts to secure acceptance by nuclear-weapon States of the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty), which opened for signature in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 207], including their early accession to its Protocol; convene the Commission for the Treaty to oversee its implementation and ensure compliance with its provisions; support and participate actively in all efforts to achieve the objectives of general and complete disarmament, especially the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction; continue efforts to promote confidence-building measures in the South China Sea between and among the parties concerned; and intensify intra-ASEAN security cooperation through existing mechanisms. The Plan covered the period from 1999 to 2004.

The issue of South Asian nuclear testing dominated the discussions on regional and security issues at the Fifth Ministerial Meeting of ARF (Manila, Philippines, 26-27 July). Participants acknowledged the importance of moving the agenda for confidence-building measures forward and endorsed the implementation, in the near future and in the medium term, of the list of new measures, which had been tabled by the Inter-sessional Support Group on Confidence-building Measures.

In an effort to enhance transparency in strategic perceptions, defence planning and force structure, ARF held a seminar (Canberra, Australia, 31 August-4 September) for regional defence planners to discuss the underlying considerations and the steps in developing a range of defence policy documents; encouraging and enabling ARF defence planners to develop defence policy documents that suited their needs; and further enhancing confidence, understanding and transparency among its members.

The CSCAP International Working Group on Confidence- and Security-building Measures met (Washington, D.C., 7-9 May) to identify, define and promote regional confidence- and security-building measures associated with the peaceful use of nuclear energy, and agreed that greater transparency in existing facilities and operations was needed. At the meeting of the CSCAP Working Group on Comprehensive and Cooperative Security (Wellington, New Zealand, 14-15 July), two alternatives to an alliance-based security system were suggested: to freeze the existing structures of alliances; and to adapt the model of security of the Five Powers Defence Arrangement (FPDA) (Australia, Malaysia, New Zealand, Singapore, United Kingdom). However, not all participants were convinced of the relevance of the FPDA model.

Europe

During the year, developments that had an impact on European security included the expansion of NATO; the crisis in Kosovo (see PART ONE, Chapter V); Albania; negotiations on the adaptation of the 1990 Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE Treaty) [YUN 1990, p. 79] to the newly created security environment in the region; and the EU Code of Conduct for Arms Export.

NATO continued its activities through various bodies and through the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 519]. With regard to the 1997 Protocols of Accession of the New Members to NATO [ibid.], all member States had deposited their instruments of ratification by the end of the year. Of the three States invited to join (Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland), only the Czech Republic had ratified them.

In accordance with the 1995 General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina (the Dayton-Paris Peace Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 544] and under the auspices of OSCE, the States parties to the 1996 Agreement on Sub-regional Arms Control [YUN 1996, p. 493], signed by Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Republika Srpska, continued to destroy surplus weapons (see PART ONE, Chapter V). Several data exchanges took place during the year and OSCE carried out inspections in connection with the destruction of weapons. At the first conference to review the Agreement (Vienna, 15-19 June), the parties supported a variety of instructions designed to solve technical issues for implementing the Agreement. Under the Agreement, more than 6,600 pieces of heavy equipment had been destroyed and it was reported that no major discrepancy had emerged during any inspection. The participants decided that OSCE/Stabilization Force inspections and monitoring would continue.

In implementing the 1997 "Decision concerning certain basic elements for Treaty adaptation" [YUN 1997, p. 518], the States parties to CFE continued their negotiations, which were further complicated by the NATO expansion. In the Oslo Ministerial Declaration of 2 December 1998, the OSCE Foreign Ministers welcomed the increased attention given by the Forum for Security Cooperation (FSC) to the regional dimension of security and confidence-building measures. NATO Foreign Ministers (Brussels, 8-9 December) stated that they would accept considerably greater restrictions and lower ceilings compared to the current CFE Treaty.

FSC of OSCE held its eighth annual implementation meeting (Vienna, 2-4 March) to assess the implementation of confidence- and security-building measures. In December, FSC decided on a regular information exchange on the implementation of the 1994 Code of Conduct on Politico-Military Aspects of Security, adopted at a meeting of the Special Committee of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (the forerunner of OSCE) Forum for Security Cooperation, by which participating States would provide each other and the OSCE Conflict Prevention Centre with relevant information annually.

The Western European Union (WEU) continued to play an active role in promoting and strengthening peace in Europe, working closely with NATO and the EU and striving to develop relations with the Russian Federation and Ukraine. It also played an important role in promoting the process of Euro-Mediterranean partnership (the Barcelona process). At a WEU Council of Ministers meeting (Rome, 16-17 November), the Defence Ministers of the 13 nations of the Western European Armaments Group (WEAG), the European forum for armaments cooperation, together with their colleagues from Austria, Finland and Sweden, reviewed the evolving situation in armaments and the specific armaments cooperation activities carried out within WEAG, in particular progress made towards the establishment of the European Armaments Agency (EAA) and the status of the implementation of the European Armaments Partnership. The Ministers reaffirmed WEAG as the single European forum for armaments cooperation and reiterated their intention to create EAA.

On 8 June, the EU Council adopted the European Code of Conduct for Arms Export, which called for restraint in conventional arms transfers by EU members and the promotion of conversions in the area of conventional arms exports. On 17 December, the EU Council adopted a Joint Action [A/54/374], delineating its own contribution to combating the destabilizing accumulation and spread of small arms and light weapons.

A Ministerial Conference on Albania (Tirana, 30 October) supported the process of stabilization and democratic reform in Albania and welcomed the ongoing UN pilot project for Albania's "weapons for development" (see above, under "Conventional weapons").

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 H by recorded vote (63-44-47) [agenda item 71 (q)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the establishment of internationally recognized nuclear-weapon-free zones, with due regard to the specific characteristics of each region and on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at by the States of the region concerned, can play an important role in promoting regional and global peace and security,

Welcoming the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba, as well as the Almaty Declaration, on the creation of nuclear-weapon-free zones and similar initiatives in the respective regions, in accordance with established principles,

Noting the sovereign resolve of the States of Central and Eastern Europe to contribute to, and benefit from, the new European security architecture based, inter alia, upon the principles of good-neighbourly relations, as well as cooperation with and accession to the Euro-Atlantic structures,

Welcoming that, as a result of the historic events of the past few years leading to enhancement of the atmosphere of trust, mutual respect and partnership among European States, the nuclear weapons were withdrawn from the territories of Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine and that currently there are no nuclear weapons stationed in the territories of the Central and Eastern European States,

Taking note of the statement of the Ministerial North Atlantic Council Meeting, of 10 December 1996, and confirmed by the heads of State or Government of the countries members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in the Founding Act on Mutual Relations, Cooperation and Security between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Russian Federation, signed in Paris on 27 May 1997, that countries members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have no intention, no plan and no reason to deploy nuclear weapons on the territory of new members,

Welcoming efforts to enhance stability and security in Central and Eastern Europe through building a new regional security architecture based on cooperation and shared values and without creating new dividing lines,

1. Urges all concerned States to exert efforts to continue making it possible to have no intention, no plan and no reason to deploy nuclear weapons on the territory of the non-nuclear States of the region of Central and Eastern Europe;

2. Calls upon all States of Central and Eastern Europe and other States concerned to continue to abide by their nuclear non-proliferation obligations under existing multilateral and bilateral agreements;

3. Decides to consider the implementation of the present resolution at its fifty-fifth session under the item entitled "General and complete disarmament".

Latin America

The Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials, signed by OAS member States in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 509, & A/53/78], entered into force on 1 July 1998. A total of 32 States had signed the Convention and three had ratified it.

The OAS Conference on Confidence- and Security-building Measures (San Salvador, El Salvador, 25-27 February) adopted the Declaration of San Salvador under which OAS member States agreed to develop a cooperation programme to address the concerns raised by maritime transport of nuclear and other waste; continue to support the efforts of small island States to address their special security concerns; improve and broaden the information submitted by member States to the UN Register of Conventional Arms; and continue consultations and the exchange of ideas within the hemisphere to advance the limitation and control of conventional weapons in the region.

The OAS General Assembly (Caracas, Venezuela, June) endorsed the San Salvador recommendations and adopted resolutions aimed at strengthening peace and security in the region. They dealt with cooperation for hemispheric security; consolidation of the regime established in the 1967 Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) [YUN 1967, p. 13]; the western hemisphere as an anti-personnel-landmine-free zone; support for the mine-clearing programme in Central America; and special security concerns of small island States.

Following a previous mandate by the OAS General Assembly for greater transparency in weapons procurement in the hemisphere, the United States and Brazil presented a joint proposal to other OAS member States on a convention for transparency in arms acquisitions. On 6 October, the OAS Committee on Hemispheric Security established a working group to negotiate the convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 O without vote [agenda item 71 (q)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/58 P of 4 December 1990, 46/36 I of 6 December 1991, 47/52 J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 I of 16 December 1993, 49/75 N of 15 December 1994, 50/70 K of 12 December 1995, 51/45 K of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 P of 9 December 1997 on regional disarmament,

Believing that the efforts of the international community to move towards the ideal of general and complete disarmament are guided by the inherent human desire for genuine peace and security, the elimination of the danger of war and the release of economic, intellectual and other resources for peaceful pursuits,

Affirming the abiding commitment of all States to the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations in the conduct of their international relations,

Noting that essential guidelines for progress towards general and complete disarmament were adopted at the tenth special session of the General Assembly,

Taking note of the guidelines and recommendations for regional approaches to disarmament within the context of global security adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its 1993 substantive session,

Welcoming the prospects of genuine progress in the field of disarmament engendered in recent years as a result of negotiations between the two super-Powers,

Taking note of the recent proposals for disarmament at the regional and subregional levels,

Recognizing the importance of confidence-building measures for regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that endeavours by countries to promote regional disarmament, taking into account the specific characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and would thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts,

1. Stresses that sustained efforts are needed, within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament and under the umbrella of the United Nations, to make progress on the entire range of disarmament issues;

2. Affirms that global and regional approaches to disarmament complement each other and should therefore be pursued simultaneously to promote regional and international peace and security;

3. Calls upon States to conclude agreements, wherever possible, for nuclear non-proliferation, disarmament and confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels;

4. Welcomes the initiatives towards disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and security undertaken by some countries at the regional and subregional levels;

5. Supports and encourages efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels in order to ease regional tensions and to further disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation measures at the regional and subregional levels;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Regional disarmament".

Also on 4 December [meeting 79], on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], the Assembly adopted resolution 53/77 P by recorded vote (164-1-2) [agenda item 71 (r)].

Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 O of 15 December 1994, 50/70 L of 12 December 1995, 51/45 Q of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 Q of 9 December 1997,

Recognizing the crucial role of conventional arms control in promoting regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that conventional arms control needs to be pursued primarily in the regional and subregional contexts since most threats to peace and security in the post-cold-war era arise mainly among States located in the same region or subregion,

Aware that the preservation of a balance in the defence capabilities of States at the lowest level of armaments would contribute to peace and stability and should be a prime objective of conventional arms control,

Desirous of promoting agreements to strengthen regional peace and security at the lowest possible level of armaments and military forces,

Noting with particular interest the initiatives taken in this regard in different regions of the world, in particular the commencement of consultations among a number of Latin American countries and the proposals for conventional arms control made in the context of South Asia, and recognizing, in the context of this subject, the relevance and value of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, which is a cornerstone of European security,

Believing that militarily significant States and States with larger military capabilities have a special responsibility in promoting such agreements for regional security,

Believing also that an important objective of conventional arms control in regions of tension should be to prevent the possibility of military attack launched by surprise and to avoid aggression,

1. Decides to give urgent consideration to the issues involved in conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament, as a first step, to consider the formulation of principles that can serve as a framework for regional agreements on conventional arms control, and looks forward to a report of the Conference on this subject;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels".

Other disarmament issues

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

In 1998, the Conference on Disarmament did not establish an ad hoc committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space. However, it appointed a Special Coordinator under the item who reported that there was general recognition of the importance and urgency of the issue. He presented a draft mandate for the re-establishment of an ad hoc committee on the subject, noting that there was wide support for the draft but not complete consensus. He recommended that the draft be used as a basis for further consultations in 1999.

(See next chapter for information on the peaceful uses of outer space.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/583], adopted resolution 53/76 by recorded vote (165-0-4) [agenda item 70].

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes and shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development,

Reaffirming also the provisions of articles III and IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recalling the obligation of all States to observe the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the use or threat of use of force in their international relations, including in their space activities,

Reaffirming paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that in order to prevent an arms race in outer space further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this issue, and taking note of the proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions, and of the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Recognizing that prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security,

Emphasizing the paramount importance of strict compliance with existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements relevant to outer space, including bilateral agreements, and with the existing legal regime concerning the use of outer space,

Considering that wide participation in the legal regime applicable to outer space could contribute to enhancing its effectiveness,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, taking into account its previous efforts since its establishment in 1985 and seeking to enhance its functioning in qualitative terms, continued the examination and identification of various issues, existing agreements and existing proposals, as well as future initiatives relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and that this contributed to a better understanding of a number of problems and to a clearer perception of the various positions,

Noting also that there were no objections in principle in the Conference on Disarmament during its 1997 session to the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee, subject to re-examination of the mandate contained in the decision of the Conference on Disarmament of 13 February 1992,

Emphasizing the mutually complementary nature of bilateral and multilateral efforts in the field of preventing an arms race in outer space, and hoping that concrete results will emerge from those efforts as soon as possible,

Convinced that further measures should be examined in the search for effective and verifiable bilateral and multilateral agreements in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Stressing that the growing use of outer space increases the need for greater transparency and better information on the part of the international community,

Recalling in this context its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 45/55 B of 4 December 1990, 47/51 of 9 December 1992 and 48/74 A of 16 December 1993, in which, inter alia, it reaffirmed the importance of confidence-building measures as means conducive to ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Conscious of the benefits of confidence- and security-building measures in the military field,

Recognizing that negotiations for the conclusion of an international agreement or agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space remain a priority task of the Ad Hoc Committee and that the concrete proposals on confidence-building measures could form an integral part of such agreements,

1. Reaffirms the importance and urgency of preventing an arms race in outer space, and the readiness of all States to contribute to that common objective, in conformity with the provisions of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies;

2. Reaffirms its recognition, as stated in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, that the legal regime applicable to outer space by itself does not guarantee the prevention of an arms race in outer space, that this legal regime plays a significant role in the prevention of an arms race in that environment, that there is a need to consolidate and reinforce that regime and enhance its effectiveness, and that it is important strictly to comply with existing agreements, both bilateral and multilateral;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and of the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to refrain from actions contrary to that objective and to the relevant existing treaties in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation;

5. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to finalize the examination of the mandate contained in its decision of 13 February 1992, with a view to updating it as appropriate, thus providing for the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee during the 1999 session of the Conference on Disarmament;

7. Recognizes, in this respect, the growing convergence of views on the elaboration of measures designed to strengthen transparency, confidence and security in the peaceful uses of outer space;

8. Urges States conducting activities in outer space, as well as States interested in conducting such activities, to keep the Conference on Disarmament informed of the progress of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on the matter, if any, so as to facilitate its work;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

Seabed treaty

In response to General Assembly resolution 44/116 O [YUN 1989, p. 81], the Secretary-General, in a June report with later addendum [A/53/160 & Add.1], presented the replies of five Governments to his request for information on technological developments relevant to the Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Seabed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2660 (XXV) [YUN 1970, p. 18], and to the verification of compliance with the Treaty.

Disarmament and development

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 D [YUN 1997, p. 523], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/53/206], noted that he had received no information from Member States regarding their views and proposals to implement the action programme adopted at the 1987 International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development [YUN 1987, p. 831.

The Secretary-General stated that, with regard to the action programme recommendation that the ongoing work of the United Nations for a systematic examination of problems of defining, reporting and comparing military budget data should be intensified, efforts were being carried out in accordance with the standardized instrument of reporting of military expenditures developed in 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 79]. However, not more than 35 States were participating. The Secretary-General proposed, bearing in mind the restructuring of the political and economic sectors of the Secretariat, the following composition for a high-level steering group on disarmament and development: the Under-Secretary-General for Disarmament Affairs, the Under-Secretary-General for Economic and Social Affairs and the UNDP Administrator. The Department for Disarmament Affairs would be responsible for coordination and substantive servicing of the steering group and would act as the focal point for disarmament and development in the Secretariat.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/584], adopted resolution 53/77 K without vote [agenda item 71 (g)].

Relationship between disarmament and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling the provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly concerning the relationship between disarmament and development,

Recalling also the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

Recalling further its resolutions 49/75 J of 15 December 1994, 50/70 G of 12 December 1995, 51/45 D of 10 December 1996 and 52/38 D of 9 December 1997,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998,

Stressing the growing importance of the symbiotic relationship between disarmament and development in current international relations,

1. Acknowledges the report of the Secretary-General and actions taken in accordance with the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development;

2. Urges the international community to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development, with a view to reducing the ever-widening gap between developed and developing countries;

3. Invites all Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General, by 15 April 1999, their views and proposals for the implementation of the action programme adopted at the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, as well as any other views and proposals with a view to achieving the goals of the action programme, within the framework of current international relations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take action, through appropriate organs and within available resources, for the implementation of the action programme adopted at the International Conference;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Relationship between disarmament and development".

Science and technology

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/33 [YUN 1997, p. 523], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/53/202], updated and further developed his 1990 report on scientific and technological developments and their impact on international security [YUN 1990, p. 83]. The experts who had prepared the 1990 report provided a brief overview of broad new trends and developments in nuclear technology, space technology, materials technology, information technology and biotechnology.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/579], adopted resolution 53/73 by recorded vote (99-45-23) [agenda item 66].

Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that scientific and technological developments can have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needs to be maintained and encouraged,

Concerned that military applications of scientific and technological developments can contribute significantly to the improvement and upgrading of advanced weapon systems and in particular weapons of mass destruction,

Aware of the need to follow closely the scientific and technological developments that may have a negative impact on international security and disarmament, and to channel scientific and technological developments for beneficial purposes,

Cognizant that the international transfers of dual-use as well as high-technology products, services and know-how for peaceful purposes are important for the economic and social development of States,

Also cognizant of the need to regulate such transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications through multilaterally negotiated, universally applicable, non-discriminatory guidelines,

Expressing concern over the growing proliferation of ad hoc and exclusive export control regimes and arrangements for dual-use goods and technologies, which tend to impede the economic and social development of developing countries,

Recalling that the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, noted with concern that undue restrictions on exports to developing countries of material, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes persist,

Emphasizing that internationally negotiated guidelines for the transfer of high technology with military applications should take into account the legitimate defence requirements of all States and the requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, while ensuring that access to high-technology products and services and know-how for peaceful purposes is not denied,

1. Affirms that scientific and technological progress should be used for the benefit of all mankind to promote the sustainable economic and social development of all States and to safeguard international security, and that international cooperation in the use of science and technology through the transfer and exchange of technological know-how for peaceful purposes should be promoted;

2. Invites Member States to undertake additional efforts to apply science and technology for disarmament-related purposes and to make disarmament-related technologies available to interested States;

3. Urges Member States to undertake multilateral negotiations with the participation of all interested States in order to establish universally acceptable, non-discriminatory guidelines for international transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament, and requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of the Member States on that report and to make recommendations on the possible approaches to multilaterally negotiated, universally acceptable, non-discriminatory guidelines for international transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technologies with military applications, in a report to be submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly no later than at its fifty-fourth session;

5. Encourages United Nations bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament".

Arms limitation and disarmament agreements

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/38 E [YUN 1997, p. 525], the Secretary-General submitted a June report with later addenda [A/53/158 & Add.1,2] containing information from three Member States on measures they had taken to ensure the application of scientific and technological progress in the context of international security, disarmament and related areas, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development.

Emphasizing the importance of the observance of environmental norms in the preparation and implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements,

Recognizing that it is necessary to take duly into account the agreements adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as prior relevant agreements, in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms limitation,

Mindful of the detrimental environmental effects of the use of nuclear weapons,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 52/38 E in all its aspects;

2. Also reaffirms that international disarmament forums should take fully into account the relevant environmental norms in negotiating treaties and agreements on disarmament and arms limitation and that all States, through their actions, should fully contribute to ensuring compliance with the aforementioned norms in the implementation of treaties and conventions to which they are parties;

3. Calls upon States to adopt unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures so as to contribute to ensuring the application of scientific and technological progress in the framework of international security, disarmament and other related spheres, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development;

initiated a study on the problems of ammunition and explosives in all its aspects in cooperation with relevant international and regional organizations. (See above, under "Conventional weapons".)

In 1998, the General Assembly, in resolution 53/77 E, requested the Secretary-General to initiate a study on the feasibility of restricting the manufacture and trade of small arms and light weapons to the manufacturers and dealers authorized by States.

Disarmament Information Programme

In response to General Assembly resolution 51/46A [YUN 1996, p. 502], the Secretary-General, in June, reported on the performance of the UN Disarmament Information Programme [A/53/161 & Corr.1] from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1998 and on activities planned for the next two years. The report described the activities of the UN Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) and the efforts of the Department of Public Information (DPI) to publicize arms limitation and disarmament. Information activities concentrated on the priority concerns of DDA: weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons; and the destabilizing effects and destructive power of conventional weapons, with a focus on efforts to curb the proliferation of small arms and promote confidence-building measures, openness and transparency at the global, regional and sub-regional levels. DDA established a Home Page within the UN Web site (<http://www.un.org>, link to "Peace and security: Disarmament") and continued to make available electronically the composite table of the UN Register of Conventional Arms. Owing to staffing constraints, its traditional publications programme was reduced in type of publication and frequency of issuance. The report listed publications produced during the reporting period.

DDA staff participated in panels organized by the diplomatic and academic communities on illicit trade in small arms, light weapons and building societal resistance to violence. The Department participated in meetings of the International Association of University Presidents/Commission on Disarmament Education, Conflict Resolution and Peace and was represented at the annual international seminar on arms control and disarmament for scholars and educators, held at Juniata College (Pennsylvania, United States). In addition, at the request of the public inquiries unit of DPI, DDA staff presented briefings for visiting students and other groups.

As part of its outreach programme, DDA maintained active liaison with the public and with NGOs. In collaboration with DDA and DPI, NGOs

Studies, information and training

Disarmament studies programme

Work proceeded in two groups of experts on studies arising from the 1997 report on small arms prepared by the Panel of Governmental Experts [YUN 1997, p. 506]. The Secretary-General also organized during the April session of the Disarmament Commission and during Disarmament Week in October events such as panel discussions on the process to review the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) (see above, under "Nuclear disarmament"); implementation of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) (see also above, under "Nuclear disarmament"); a proposal for increasing the UN role in preventing conflict and reducing conventional weapons; small arms proliferation; prevention of the weaponization of outer space; and reducing tensions in South Asia. DDA cooperated with the NGO Committee on Disarmament in publishing material arising from their joint events.

In an October addendum [A/53/161/Add.1], the Secretary-General reported on the status of the Voluntary Trust Fund for the Disarmament Information Programme, which supported DDA information and outreach activities. The provisional available balance that remained in the Fund as at 30 June 1998 totalled $364,608 in convertible and $14,132 in non-convertible currencies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/585], adopted resolution 53/78E without vote [agenda item 72(a)].

United Nations Disarmament Information Programme

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, by which the World Disarmament Campaign was launched,

Bearing in mind its various resolutions on the subject, including resolution 47/53 D of 9 December 1992, in which it decided, inter alia, that the World Disarmament Campaign should be known thereafter as the "United Nations Disarmament Information Programme" and the World Disarmament Campaign Voluntary Trust Fund as the "Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme",

Recalling its resolution 51/46 A of 10 December 1996,

Welcoming the re-establishment of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat, and expressing the hope that this action will lead to a reinvigoration of the United Nations information and outreach activities in the field of disarmament,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme and welcoming the greater emphasis on products for the general public and the expansion of electronic means to disseminate information to major constituents,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme;

2. Commends the Secretary-General for his efforts to make effective use of the limited resources available to him in disseminating as widely as possible information on arms limitation and disarmament to Governments, the media, non-governmental organizations, educational communities and research institutes, and in carrying out a seminar and conference programme;

3. Stresses the importance of the Programme, as a significant instrument in enabling all Member States to participate fully in the deliberations and negotiations on disarmament in the various United Nations bodies, and in assisting them in complying with treaties, as required, and in contributing to agreed mechanisms for transparency;

4. Notes with appreciation the contributions to the efforts of the Programme by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and the information centres;

5. Recommends that the Programme focus its efforts:

(a) To inform, to educate and to generate public understanding of the importance of multilateral action and support for it, including action by the United Nations and the Conference on Disarmament, in the field of arms limitation and disarmament, in a factual, balanced and objective manner, particularly through the publication in all official languages of The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook and updates of the Status of Multilateral Arms Regulation and Disarmament Agreements, and ad hoc publications, and through the Home Page on the Internet of the Department for Disarmament Affairs and other outreach activities, such as the film entitled Messenger of Peace;

(b) To facilitate unimpeded access to and an exchange of information on ideas between the public sector and public interest groups and organizations, and to provide an independent source of balanced and factual information that takes into account a range of views to help further an informed debate on arms limitation, disarmament and security;

(c) To organize meetings to facilitate exchange of views and information between governmental and non-governmental sectors and between governmental and other experts in order to facilitate the search for common ground;

6. Emphasizes the importance of contributions to the Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme to sustain a strong outreach programme, and invites all Member States to make contributions to the Fund;

7. Commends the Secretary-General for supporting the efforts of universities, other academic institutions and non-governmental organizations active in the education field in widening the worldwide availability of disarmament education, and invites him to continue to support and cooperate with educational institutions and non-governmental organizations engaged in such efforts, without cost to the regular budget of the United Nations;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session a report covering both the implementation of the activities of the Programme by the United Nations system during the previous two years and the activities of the Programme contemplated by the system for the following two years;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fifth session the item entitled "United Nations Disarmament Information Programme".

Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters

The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, which advised the Secretary-General on the disarmament studies programme and implementation of the Disarmament Information Programme and served as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), held its thirtieth and thirty-first sessions (Geneva, 16-18 March; New York, 29 June-1 July) [A/53/222].

In the wake of the nuclear tests carried out by India and Pakistan in May, the Board, with the exception of one member who stressed that the issue of the tests in South Asia should be dealt with in the context of international nuclear disarmament, suggested that the Secretary-General continue to promote dialogue in South Asia and that he urge the two countries to adhere to CTBT.

The Board discussed the NPT Review Conference to be held in 2000, a fourth special session of the General Assembly on disarmament (see above, under "UN role in disarmament"), practical disarmament measures and control of the proliferation of small arms (see above, under "Conventional weapons"). It continued its examination from previous sessions of the new disarmament agenda in order to advise the Secretary-General on future weapons-related threats and action that could be taken to prevent them. The Board also considered the costs of disarmament, particularly in connection with the implementation of obligations incurred through agreements, conventions and treaties.

The Board continued the practice of meeting with representatives of the NGO Committees in Geneva and New York to discuss their concerns.

In July [A/53/187], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly for approval the recommendation of the UNIDIR Board of Trustees for a subvention from the UN regular budget of $213,000 for 1999, which the Assembly approved in resolution 53/214, section I.

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the UNIDIR Director covering the period from July 1997 to June 1998 [A/53/187]. The Institute's research programme continued to focus on collective security, regional security and non-proliferation. The report described UNIDIR's cooperation with and among research institutes and contained a list of publications issued during the reporting period.

Disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

In response to General Assembly resolution 51/46 F [YUN 1996, p. 503], the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/53/426] in which he stated that 24 fellows participated in the UN disarmament fellowship programme in 1998. The programme, which began in Geneva on 7 September and ended in New York on 29 October, included lectures and briefings, meetings, research projects, and study visits to IAEA in Vienna, the Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization also in Vienna, and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in The Hague, as well as to Nagasaki and Hiroshima in Japan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/585], adopted resolution 53/78 G without vote [agenda item 72 (b)].

United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme,

Recalling its decision, contained in paragraph 108 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, to establish a programme of fellowships on disarmament, as well as its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, in which it decided, inter alia, to continue the programme,

Noting with satisfaction that the programme has already trained an appreciable number of public officials selected from geographical regions represented in the United Nations system, most of whom are now in positions of responsibility in the field of disarmament affairs in their respective countries or Governments,

Recalling all the annual resolutions on the matter since the thirty-seventh session of the General Assembly, in 1982, including resolution 50/71 A of 12 December 1995,

Noting with satisfaction that the programme is observing in 1998 its twentieth anniversary and, as designed, continues to enable an increased number of public officials, in particular from the developing countries, to acquire more expertise in the sphere of disarmament,

Believing that the forms of assistance available to Member States, in particular to developing countries, under the programme will enhance the capabilities of their officials to follow ongoing deliberations and negotiations on disarmament, both bilateral and multilateral,

1. Reaffirms its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly and the report of the Secretary-General approved by the Assembly in its resolution 33/71 E of 14 December 1978;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Governments of Germany and Japan for inviting the 1997 and 1998 fellows to study selected activities in the field of disarmament, thereby contributing to the fulfilment of the overall objectives of the programme;

3. Commends the Secretary-General for the diligence with which the programme has continued to be carried out;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to implement annually the Geneva-based programme within existing resources and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fifth session the item entitled "United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory serv-

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/53/585], adopted resolution 53/78 F without vote [agenda item 72].

United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/220 of 22 December 1997 as it relates to the maintenance and revitalization of the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament, and welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to appoint Directors for the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa and the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean,

Bearing in mind its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989 on the regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

Recognizing that the changes that have taken place in the world have created new opportunities as well as posed new challenges for the pursuit of disarmament and, in this regard, bearing in mind that the regional centres for peace and disarmament can contribute substantially to the understanding and cooperation among the States in each particular region in the areas of peace, disarmament and development,

Noting that in paragraph 146 of the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, the heads of State or Government welcomed the decision adopted by the General Assembly on maintaining and revitalizing the three regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

2. Reaffirms that, in order to achieve positive results, it is useful for the three regional centres to carry out dissemination and educational programmes that promote regional peace and security aimed at changing basic attitudes with respect to peace and security and disarmament so as to support the achievement of the principles and purposes of the United Nations;

3. Appeals to Member States in each region and those that are able to do so, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions to the regional centres in their respective regions to strengthen their programmes of activities and implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary support, within existing resources, to the regional centres in carrying out their programmes of activities;

Africa

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/46 E [YUN 1996, p. 504], the Secretary-General described the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa [A/53/348], covering the period from July 1996 to June 1998. The Centre was established in Lome, Togo, in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 85].

Despite severe financial constraints, the Centre continued to fulfil its mandate insofar as possible by contributing to efforts to promote wider understanding and cooperation in Africa in the areas of peace, disarmament and security. It expanded its contacts and cooperation with governmental and non-governmental organizations, research and academic institutions and other UN bodies and continued to publish its quarterly bilingual publication, the African Peace Bulletin/Bulletin africain de la paix. On 1 October 1997, the Centre organized a brainstorming session on peace and disarmament issues with participants from 28 countries attending the Fourth Pan-African Conference on United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Associations and Clubs. The Centre continued to disseminate relevant materials, brief visitors and enhance its documentation/reference library. The Officer-in-Charge of the Centre attended a number of seminars.

The Secretary-General supported the appeals made by the Assembly to Member States, governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals to provide voluntary contributions to the Centre.

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Asia and the Pacific

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 52/39 A [YUN 1997, p. 527], the Secretary-General, in August, reported on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific [A/53/323] from August 1997 to July 1998. The Centre was inaugurated in Kathmandu, Nepal, in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 88].

During the reporting period, the Centre organized three major meetings. The United Nations Regional Meeting in South-East Asia (Jakarta, 16-18 February), organized in cooperation with the Government of Indonesia, reviewed current disarmament issues and explored a common ground for possible joint efforts by the international community to address those issues. In-depth discussions were held on nuclear-weapon-free zones, regional cooperation and confidence-building measures, and the search for a common approach to the convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament. The tenth regional disarmament meeting in the Asia-Pacific region (Kathmandu, 22-24 February) was held in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the Centre. The meeting reviewed the Centre's achievements and examined its future role in further promoting and utilizing the regional and subregional security and disarmament dialogue provided through the "Kathmandu process". The third meeting (Nagasaki, 24-27 November) dealt with new challenges to nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament; how to prevent the spread of nuclear-weapon capability; practical nuclear disarmament steps; and the development of a favourable environment for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament. The meeting, marking the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Conference on Disarmament Issues, adopted a resolution encouraging the international community to move forward towards a world free from nuclear weapons. In addition, the Centre provided, at a request of the five Central Asian States, substantive assistance in the elaboration of a treaty on the Central Asia nuclear-weapon-free zone, and helped the UN Association of Japan to organize the annual Kanazawa Symposium on North-East Asia Dialogue (Kanazawa, 2-5 June).

The Secretary-General appealed to Member States to continue to contribute to the Centre in order to ensure its viability and enhance its effective functioning.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean, which had been suspended for a number of years because of a lack of funds, were expected to be re-invigorated as a result of the appointment of a director for the Centre at the end of 1998.

Chapter VIII

Other political and security questions

The United Nations continued in 1998 to consider a number of political and security issues relating to the prevention of the disintegration of States, support for new and restored democracies, and the promotion of self-determination of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, as well as the peaceful uses of outer space. The work of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, the continued reform of UN information policies, the Secretary-General's proposals on the future of the Trusteeship Council and the convening in 2000 of a special Millennium Assembly of the United Nations were also discussed.

The General Assembly affirmed the need for the United Nations to help prevent the violent disintegration of States, thereby enhancing the maintenance of international peace and security and economic and social development of all peoples. UN support of government efforts to promote new or restored democracies continued through the activities of the follow-up mechanism to the 1997 Third International Conference of New or Restored Democracies on Democracy and Development. The Assembly encouraged the Secretary-General to continue to improve the Organization's capacity to provide coherent and adequate support for Member States' efforts to achieve good governance and democratization. It acted on regional security issues concerning the South Atlantic, based on reports of UN activities in that area.

The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples continued in 1998 to review progress in implementing that 1960 Declaration, in particular the exercise of self-determination by the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories. The Assembly requested the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the Declaration's immediate and full implementation and to carry out actions approved by the Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000).

The United Nations continued the reform of its information policies, initiated in 1997, underscoring the important role of communications as an integral part of the Organization's substantive programme and ensuring its integration into the work of all departments and organizations of the UN system.

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space and its two subcommittees discussed ways to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes and to promote the spin-off benefits of space technology. It continued preparations to convene the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) as a special session of the Committee in 1999.

The Assembly endorsed the recommendation of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation that its current functions and independent role in assessing the levels of exposure and effects of radiation, including reporting arrangements, be maintained. It deferred to 1999 consideration of the Secretary-General's proposal for the future role of the Trusteeship Council, inactive since 1994. It designated the Assembly's fifty-fifth (2000) session as the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations and decided to convene as an integral part of it a Millennium Summit of the United Nations.

General aspects of international security

Maintenance of international security—prevention of the violent disintegration of States

The Secretary-General reported in September [A/53/333] that he had received one reply, from the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM), pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/55 [YUN 1996, p. 507], by which Member States were requested to communicate their views to him on the maintenance of international security—prevention of the violent disintegration of States.

In that reply, dated 10 July [A/53/176], FYROM said the United Nations had a duty continuously to undertake adequate political, economic and social measures to prevent such instabilities as were plaguing many parts of the world and facilitate a solution to open questions among States, thereby preventing unsatisfactory economic and social situations from developing into violent conflicts. In cooperation with regional organizations, it should be more involved in solving ongoing conflicts endangering international security and the territorial integrity of States by a thorough understanding of developments and by addressing their root causes. FYROM suggested that the Assembly should request the Secretary-General to prepare, for its fifty-fifth (2000) session, a report on situations that could endanger the territorial integrity of States, including recommendations aimed at preventing their violent disintegration.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 December [meeting 79], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/53/577], adopted resolution 53/71 by recorded vote (156-0-6) [agenda item 64].

Considering that the violent disintegration of States can pose a threat to international peace and security,

Affirming the need for United Nations measures to help prevent the violent disintegration of States, thereby enhancing the maintenance of international peace and security and economic and social advancement of all peoples,

Support for democracies

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/18 [YUN 1997, p.532], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/53/554 & Corr.1] on UN support for efforts by Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies. The report described the activities of the follow-up mechanism to the Third International Conference of New or Restored Democracies on Democracy and Development [YUN 1997, p. 530], as well as of the UN system in democratization and governance.

The follow-up mechanism, comprising participants from interested countries, the UN system, academia and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and chaired by Romania, held several meetings in 1998. Its main proposals included the creation of web sites to spread information about the work of the UN system and civil society in democratization and good governance, in accordance with which the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) established a site in October within its existing home page. The Secretariat's Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and Department of Political Affairs (DPA) offered to do the same. Also proposed were a Democracy Forum for the discussion of democratic processes and experiences in democratization efforts, and a project of self-assessment by Governments regarding assistance received in democratization and governance to help them articulate their own needs and improve current projects and activities.

A Ministerial Meeting of New or Restored Democracies (New York, 22 September) endorsed the proposals of the follow-up mechanism. Guyana offered to host a seminar to maintain the momentum and move the follow-up process forward, while Romania proposed a meeting of the follow-up mechanism at the expert level in April 1999 to discuss the development of indicators and a code of conduct for democratization.

The Secretary-General took the follow-up mechanism as a sign of progress in improving co-ordination between government representatives, the UN system and civil society. Within the United Nations itself, the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) (Geneva, 27-28 March) [ACC/1998/4] discussed a proposed system-wide agenda for democratization and governance, and most ACC members designated focal points within their organizations for the co-ordination of activities.

Activities of the UN system focused on: building a political culture through human rights observance and monitoring; mobilization of civil society; electoral assistance; free and independent media; enhancing the rule of law; and improving accountability, transparency and quality of public-sector management and democratic structures of government.

The Secretary-General concluded that the foregoing UN projects and programmes testified to the Organization's increasing range of work in promoting democratization and good governance. He welcomed the Assembly's support for the decision of the Third International Conference of New or Restored Democracies to convene a Fourth International Conference in Africa and Benin's offer to host it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/31 [draft: A/53/L.38 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 33].

Noting that a considerable number of societies have recently undertaken significant efforts to achieve their social, political and economic goals through democratization and the reform of their economies, pursuits that are deserving of the support and recognition of the international community,

Noting with satisfaction that the Fourth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies will be held at Cotonou, Benin, in the year 2000,

Stressing the importance of support by Member States, the United Nations system, the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations for the holding of the Fourth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies,

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session the item entitled "Support by the United Nations system of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies".

Regional aspects of international peace and security

South Atlantic

As requested in General Assembly resolution 52/14 [YUN 1997, p. 533], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/53/488] on the zone of peace and cooperation in the South Atlantic, so declared in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 369] to promote cooperation among States of the region in political, economic, scientific, technical, cultural and other fields. The Secretary-General stated that, as at 30 September 1998, five Governments and six UN organizations and bodies had responded to his request for views on the implementation of the declaration's objectives.

The Fifth Meeting of the States of the Zone of Peace and Cooperation of the South Atlantic (Buenos Aires, Argentina, 21-22 October) adopted a Final Declaration and Plan of Action, which Argentina transmitted to the Secretary-General in November [A/53/650].

In related developments, Mexico transmitted to the Secretary-General in March [A/53/78] a copy of the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives and Other Related Materials, adopted at the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly of the Organization of American States (Washington, D.C., 13-14 November 1997). #### GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 25 November [meeting 70], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/34 [draft: A/53/L.41 & Corr.1] by recorded vote (126-0-1) [agenda item 32].

Aware of the importance that the States of the zone attach to the environment of the region, and recognizing the threat that pollution from any source poses to the marine and coastal environment, its ecological balance and its resources,

1. Reaffirms the importance of the purposes and objectives of the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic as a basis for the promotion of cooperation among the countries of the region;

2. ## Decolonization

The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization) held its annual session in New York in two parts—on 6 February, 30 April and 22 May, for the first part, and from 29 June to 13 July and 10 to 12 August, for the second. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/78 [YUN 1997, p. 536], the Special Committee transmitted to the Assembly its report on its 1998 activities [A/53/23]. It considered various aspects of the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, adopted by Assembly resolution 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49], including both general decolonization issues and the situations of individual Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs).

With respect to the stand-alone Decolonization Unit, established in DPA by a 1997 decision of the Secretary-General [YUN 1997, p. 536], the Chairman of the Special Committee (Papua New Guinea), on 23 January [A/53/59], asked the Secretary-General to assign the Special Committee Secretary and his Assistant to the Unit.

On 14 August [A/AC.109/2133], Trinidad and Tobago informed the Special Committee of its intention to withdraw from it as of that date, in line with its decision to focus greater attention on other major issues confronting the United Nations and the international community.

Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

Pacific regional seminar

As part of its efforts to implement the 1991 plan of action [YUN 1991, p. 777] for the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000), declared by the General Assembly in resolution 43/47 [YUN 1988, p. 734], the Special Committee on decolonization organized a Pacific regional seminar (Nadi, Fiji, 16-18 June) to review the political, economic and social conditions in the small island NSGTs [A/AC.109/2121].

The purpose of the seminar was to assess the situation in NSGTs, particularly their constitutional evolution towards self-determination by the year 2000; to identify areas in which the international community could increase and enhance its participation in assistance programmes; and to adopt a comprehensive and integrated approach to ensure the political and sustainable development of the Territories concerned.

The seminar concluded that the implementation of the 1960 Declaration was still not complete as long as there remained NSGTs that had yet to exercise their right to self-determination, a process in which the United Nations had a valid ongoing role. The mandate of the Special Committee was a major UN political programme and Member States needed to remain vigilant against attempts to limit, jeopardize or eliminate its activities on financial or administrative grounds. There was a need to identify and implement innovative approaches in the search for a specific solution to each of the remaining NSGTs, whose particular characteristics should not prevent them from exercising their inalienable right to self-determination. The devolution of power to the elected Governments of the Territories was a key element in the transition from dependency to full self-government, and UNDP and other relevant UN bodies should be requested to include those issues in their governance since many NSGTs were eligible for UNDP assistance.

The seminar recommended that the Special Committee take note of the seminar's report and transmit it to the Assembly's Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee for consideration and that the United Nations prepare a report on the implementation of decolonization resolutions adopted since the declaration of the International Decade. The seminar also concluded that the decolonization period was not over: unique remedies were still required to protect the inalienable rights of the people of NSGTs, in particular the small island Territories, which needed special consideration because of their vulnerabilities. Member States, when presenting draft resolutions on decolonization to the Assembly, should consider the views of the Territories concerned. The United Nations, in cooperation with regional organizations, should facilitate completion of the several studies and analyses called for in the 1991 plan of action of the International Decade and other relevant studies on economic, social and political development in NSGTs. The Secretariat, in particular the Department of Public Information (DPI), should disseminate information on UN decolonization activities, including through the Internet, UN information centres and the administering Powers.

The Assembly and the Special Committee should examine the possibility of convening a UN world conference on decolonization and the right to self-determination before the end of the Decade. The Special Committee was urged to consider the issue of self-determination broadly, including matters relating to cultural identity, language and tradition. The United Nations Special Rapporteur on violence against women (see PART TWO, Chapter II) should be invited to visit all NSGTs to examine the main gender-specific violations perpetrated in those Territories. The United Nations and the Special Committee should continue to function in the capacity of an independent broker on behalf of all NSGTs until their status dictated that history's decolonization chapter be closed.

Special Committee consideration. On 10 July, during its annual session [A/53/23], the Special Committee on decolonization took note of the report of the Pacific regional seminar. It also decided to organize a seminar in the Caribbean region in 1999 and to invite UN organs, agencies and institutions to apprise the Secretary-General of actions taken to implement Assembly resolution 46/181 [YUN 1991, p. 777] relating to the action plan of the International Decade, which would form the basis of a report to the Assembly at its fifty-fourth (1999) session.

The Special Committee further took note of the report's recommendations on organizational matters, including that on updating the guidelines and rules of procedure to reflect the experience gained in the past few years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/68 [draft: A/53/L.58] by recorded vote (144-2-18) [agenda item 18].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all its subsequent resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, most recently resolution 52/78 of 10 December 1997, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Recognizing that the eradication of colonialism is one of the priorities of the Organization for the decade that began in 1990,

Deeply conscious of the need to take, speedily, measures to eliminate the last vestiges of colonialism by the year 2000, as called for in its resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988,

Reiterating its conviction of the need for the elimination of colonialism, as well as of the need for the total eradication of racial discrimination and violations of basic human rights,

Noting with satisfaction the achievements of the Special Committee in contributing to the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Stressing the importance of the participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting with satisfaction the cooperation and active participation of some administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee, as well as their continued readiness to receive United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under their administration,

Noting with concern the negative impact that the non-participation of certain administering Powers has had on the work of the Special Committee, depriving it of an important source of information on the Territories under their administration,

Aware of the pressing need of newly independent and emerging States for assistance from the United Nations and its system of organizations in the economic, social and other fields,

Aware also of the pressing need of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, in particular the small island Territories, for economic, social and other assistance from the United Nations and the organizations within its system,

Taking special note of the fact that the Special Committee held a Pacific regional seminar to review the situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories, particularly their political evolution towards self-determination by the year 2000, at Nadi, Fiji, from 16 to 18 June 1998,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions on decolonization, including its resolution 43/47, in which it declared the decade that began in 1990 as the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the peoples of the Territories concerned to exercise fully as soon as possible their right to self-determination, including independence;

2. Affirms once again that the continuation of colonialism in any form or manifestation, including economic exploitation, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

3. Reaffirms its determination to continue to take all steps necessary to bring about the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and the faithful observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its support for the aspirations of the peoples under colonial rule to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 1998, including the programme of work envisaged for 1999;

6. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to give effect within their respective spheres of competence to the recommendations of the Special Committee for the implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

7. Calls upon the administering Powers to ensure that foreign economic activities in the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration are directed to assist the peoples of those Territories in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

8. Takes note of the decision of some of the administering Powers to close or reduce some of the military bases in the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

9. Calls upon the administering Powers to eliminate the remaining military bases in the Non-Self-Governing Territories in compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and urges them not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States;

10. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories, and requests that the administering Powers, in consultation with the Governments of the Territories under their administration, take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out those actions approved by the General Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism in all Territories that have not yet exercised their right to self-determination, including independence, and in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

(b) To continue to examine the implementation by Member States of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(c) To continue to pay special attention to the small Territories, in particular through the dispatch of regular visiting missions, and to recommend to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

(d) To take all necessary steps to enlist worldwide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

12. Calls upon the administering Powers to continue to cooperate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to receive visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and to ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants;

13. Also calls upon the administering Powers that have not participated in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its 1999 session;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide economic, social and other assistance to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to continue to do so, as appropriate, after they exercise their right to self-determination, including independence;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the other resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

Implementation by international organizations

As requested in General Assembly resolution 52/73 [YUN 1997, p. 540], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [A/53/130] on implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization by specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations. The report contained information on implementation measures undertaken by 28 such entities since the Secretary-General's 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 538] on the subject.

A June report [E/1998/76] by the President of the Economic and Social Council stated that a number of specialized agencies and organizations continued to extend assistance to NSGTs from their own budgetary resources, in addition to their respective contributions as executing agencies of projects funded by UNDP, the primary assistance provider. Continuing resource constraints faced by UNDP during its fifth (1992-1996) and current (1997-1999) programming cycles seriously restricted its ability to respond more fully to the technical cooperation needs of the Caribbean NSGTs. The resource limitations influenced the need to prioritize the allocation of assistance. Thus, as of the start of the current programming cycle, all Caribbean NSGTs that maintained technical cooperation programmes with UNDP attained the status of net contributor countries. Anguilla, the Cayman Islands, Montserrat and the Turks and Caicos Islands benefited from resources allocated on a fully reimbursable basis under the target for resource assignment from the core (TRAC) programme. In addition, some Territories benefited from the Caribbean component of UNDP's Regional Programme for Latin America and the Caribbean and other programmes, such as the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States. Assistance to Caribbean NSGTs under the current programming cycle continued to emphasize support for human resource development, capacity-building and institutional strengthening, and environmental and natural-resources management.

Assistance provided by the International Labour Organization (ILO) pertained to standards-related activities and technical cooperation, while that extended by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) related to food security, agriculture, forest and fisheries development. FAO's contributions to the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development on behalf of small island developing States were also relevant.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1998/38 [draft: E/1998/L.22] by recorded vote (24-0-19) [agenda item 9].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council on consultations held with the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having heard the statement by the representative of the Special Committee,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration, and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, the resolutions of the Special Committee and other relevant resolutions and decisions, in particular Economic and Social Council resolution 1997/66 of 25 July 1997,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration,

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Stressing that, because the development options of small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continued cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing necessary resources for funding expanded assistance programmes for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandates of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the Organization of African Unity, the South Pacific Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling other relevant General Assembly resolutions,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 52/73 of 10 December 1997 entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

1. 4. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

5. Also reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

6. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

7. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-

Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active cooperation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

10. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review at the regular meetings of their governing bodies the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

11. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and in providing assistance to the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

12. Encourages Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

15. Draws the attention of the Special Committee to the present resolution and to the discussion held on the subject at the substantive session of 1998 of the Economic and Social Council;

16. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to continue to maintain close contact on these matters with the Chairman of the Special Committee and to report thereon to the Council;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to follow up the implementation of the present resolution, paying particular attention to cooperation and integration arrangements for maximizing the efficiency of the assistance activities undertaken by various organizations of the United Nations system, and to report thereon to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 1999;

18. Decides to keep these questions under continuous review.

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Stressing that, because the development options of small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continued cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the necessary resources for funding expanded assistance programmes for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandates of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the Organization of African Unity, the South Pacific Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the Non-Self-Governing small island Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling its relevant resolutions,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 52/73 of 10 December 1997 on the implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

6. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and to formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system concerned to provide information on:

(a) Environmental problems facing the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) The impact of natural disasters, such as hurricanes and volcanoes, and other environmental problems, such as beach and coastal erosion and droughts, on those Territories;

(c) Ways and means to assist the Territories in fighting drug trafficking, money laundering and other illegal and criminal activities;

(d) The illegal exploitation of the marine resources of the Territories and the need to utilize those resources for the benefit of the peoples of the Territories;

Military activities and arrangements in colonial countries

The Special Committee on decolonization considered military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration. For that purpose, it had before it working papers containing, among other things, information on military activities and arrangements in Bermuda and Guam [A/AC.109/2109, A/AC.109/2113].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/602], adopted decision 53/419 by recorded vote (99-54-1) [agenda items 88 & 18].

Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration

At its 78th plenary meeting, on 3 December 1998, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee), adopted the following text:

"1. The General Assembly, having considered the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item on the agenda of the Special Committee entitled 'Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration', and recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and all other relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military activities in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, reaffirms its strong conviction that military bases and installations in the Territories concerned could constitute an obstacle to the exercise by the people of those Territories of their right to self-determination, and reiterates its strong views that existing bases and installations, which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, should be withdrawn.

"2. Aware of the presence of such bases and installations in some of those Territories, the General Assembly urges the administering Powers concerned to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States.

"3. The General Assembly reiterates its concern that military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration might run counter to the rights and interests of the colonial peoples concerned, especially their right to self-determination and independence. The Assembly once again calls upon the administering Powers concerned to terminate such activities and to eliminate such military bases in compliance with its relevant resolutions.

"4. The General Assembly reiterates that the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories and areas adjacent thereto should not be used for nuclear testing, dumping of nuclear wastes or deployment of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction.

"5. The General Assembly deplores the continued alienation of land in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, particularly in the small island Territories of the Pacific and Caribbean regions, for military installations. The large-scale utilization of the local resources for this purpose could adversely affect the economic development of the Territories concerned.

"6. The General Assembly takes note of the decision of some of the administering Powers to close or downsize some of the military bases in the Non-Self-Governing Territories.

"7. The General Assembly requests the Secretary-General to continue to inform world public opinion of those military activities and arrangements in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories which constitute an obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

"8. The General Assembly requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fifty-fourth session."

Foreign interests impeding implementation of Declaration

The Special Committee on decolonization, as in previous years, considered activities of foreign and other interests impeding implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization. The Special Committee had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat containing information on economic conditions, with particular reference to foreign economic activities, in the Territories of Anguilla, Bermuda, the Cayman Islands, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2102, A/AC.109/2106, A/AC.109/2107, A/AC.109/2109, A/AC.109/2117].

Committee [A/53/602], adopted resolution 53/61 by recorded vote (154-2-5) [agenda items 88 & 18].

Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories

Reaffirming further that the natural resources are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location, size and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the need to promote the economic stability, diversification and strengthening of the economy of each Territory,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Conscious also that foreign economic investment, when done in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes, could make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories and could also make a valid contribution to the exercise of their right to self-determination,

Concerned about any activities aimed at exploiting the natural and human resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories,

5. Affirms the need to avoid any economic and other activities which adversely affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

6. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 262(XXV) of 12 October 1970, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises;

7. Reiterates that the damaging exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, is a threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

8. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system to take all possible measures to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

9. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to ensure that no discriminatory working conditions prevail in the Territories under their administration and to promote in each Territory a fair system of wages applicable to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

11. #### Dissemination of information

In June [A/53/23], the Special Committee held consultations with DPI and DPA representatives on the dissemination of information on decolonization. Following consideration of DPI's report on its publicity activities on decolonization from May 1997 to June 1998 [A/AC.109/2119], the Special Committee approved a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

Earlier, on 22 May, the Special Committee observed the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of All Colonial Territories Fighting for Freedom, Independence and Human Rights, as had been done annually since 1972.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Committee [A/53/23], adopted resolution 53/69 by recorded vote (156-3-3) [agenda item 18].

Dissemination of information on decolonization

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular its resolution 52/79 of 10 December 1997,

Recognizing the need for flexible, practical and innovative approaches towards reviewing the options of self-determination for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories with a view to achieving complete decolonization by the year 2000,

Reiterating the importance of dissemination of information as an instrument for furthering the aims of the Declaration, and mindful of the role of world public opinion in effectively assisting the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to achieve self-determination,

Recognizing the role played by the administering Powers in transmitting information to the Secretary-General in accordance with the terms of Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Aware of the role of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization,

1. Approves the activities in the field of dissemination of information on decolonization undertaken by the Department of Public Information and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat;

2. Considers it important to continue its efforts to ensure the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with particular emphasis on the options of self-determination available for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Requests the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information to take into account the suggestions of the Special Committee to continue their efforts to take measures through all the media available, including publications, radio and television, as well as the Internet, to give publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and, inter alia:

(a) To continue to collect, prepare and disseminate, particularly to the Territories, basic material on the issue of self-determination of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) To seek the full cooperation of the administering Powers in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To maintain a working relationship with the appropriate regional and intergovernmental organizations, particularly in the Pacific and Caribbean regions, by holding periodic consultations and exchanging information;

(d) To encourage the involvement of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization;

(e) To report to the Special Committee on measures taken in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, including the administering Powers, to continue to extend their cooperation in the dissemination of information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 53/69:

In favour Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cote d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Libya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syria, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: France, Micronesia, Russian Federation.

The United Kingdom stated that its vote against resolutions 53/58 and 53/69 was based on its belief that the continuing financial crisis of the Organization meant that the obligation placed on DPA and DPI to publicize decolonization issues was a serious waste of scarce resources. The United Nations had more pressing goals, affecting vastly greater numbers of the world's population and more relevant to current needs. The two resolutions neither reflected nor advanced the wishes and interests of the peoples of the remaining United Kingdom overseas Territories.

Information on Territories

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/71 [YUN 1997, p. 562], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/53/263] on information on economic, social and educational conditions in NSGTs, under Article 73 e of the UN Charter. The information covered the years 1996/97 and 1997/98.

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/74 [YUN 1997, p. 563], the Secretary-General reported in August [A/53/262 & Add.1] on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of NSGTs during the period from 1 October 1997 to 6 October 1998. During the reporting period, Australia, Barbados, the Czech Republic, New Zealand, Singapore, the United Kingdom and the United States informed the Secretary-General of their offers.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/604], adopted resolution 53/63 without vote [agenda item 90].

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/74 of 10 December 1997,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to its resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;
3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;
4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the present resolution;
6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Visiting missions

Pursuant to a 1997 request [YUN 1997, p. 562] by the Special Committee on decolonization, the Acting Chairman reported in August 1998 [A/AC.109/L.1882 & Add.1] that, in his consultations with the administering Powers—France, New Zealand, Portugal, the United Kingdom and the United States—on the dispatch of visiting missions to NSGTs, he drew their attention to the continued importance attached by the United Nations to such missions as a means of securing first-hand information on the Territories. He appealed to the administering Powers to receive the missions in the Territories under their administration, to which France, New Zealand and Portugal responded. He also expressed appreciation for the administering Powers' cooperation in facilitating the participation of NSGT representatives in the seminars organized in the context of the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (see above).

On 11 August [A/53/23], the Special Committee, besides calling for the continued cooperation of the administering Powers, asked them to consider new approaches in the Committee's work. It also asked the Acting Chairman to enter into consultations with the administering Power of Guam (United States) to facilitate a mission there.

Puerto Rico

The Special Committee on decolonization considered its resolution of 15 August 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 790], by which it had deplored the fact that the United States Congress had not adopted a legal framework for holding a referendum to enable the people of Puerto Rico to determine their political future. On the basis of its usual practice, the Special Committee acceded to requests for hearings from 29 representatives of organizations, who presented their views on 10 and 11 August. At the conclusion of the hearings, the Committee, by a roll-call vote (10-0-6), adopted a resolution that reaffirmed the inalienable right of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence, expressed hope that the United States would assume its responsibility to expedite a process to allow the full exercise of that right, and requested the Rapporteur to report in 1999 on the resolution's implementation.

Territories under review

East Timor

The Special Committee on decolonization continued in 1998 to consider the question of the political status of the Territory of East Timor [A/53/23]. The General Assembly, in resolution 32/34 [YUN 1977, p. 890], had rejected the claim, reaffirmed by Indonesia in 1977 [ibid., p. 868], that East Timor had been integrated into Indonesia, as the people of the Territory had not been able to exercise freely their right to self-determination and independence. In resolution 37/30 [YUN 1982, p. 1349], the Assembly had requested the Secretary-General to initiate consultations with all parties directly concerned to explore ways to achieve a compromise settlement of the question. The Secretary-General, through his good offices, had since conducted tripartite talks involving Indonesia, Portugal (the administering Power) and East Timorese representatives.

The Special Committee had before it a Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2111] on the political developments, human rights situation, and economic, social and educational conditions in the Territory, which described a visit by the Personal Representative of the Secretary-General for East Timor, Jamsheed Marker (Pakistan), to Portugal in January, where he met with President Jorge Sampaio, Prime Minister Antonio Guterres and Foreign Minister Jaime Gama, as well as with a number of East Timorese. In May, the All-inclusive Intra-East Timorese Dialogue, initiated in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 547], held another working-level senior-officials meeting. The paper drew attention to the 24 April 1998 statement by the Chairman of the Commission on Human Rights welcoming Indonesia's intentions to cooperate with the Commission and its mechanisms, to invite the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention to visit East Timor in advance of the Commission's 1999 session, to launch a national human rights action plan in 1998 and, in that context, to ratify the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly by resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813].

A June addendum [A/AC.109/2111/Add.1] to the working paper reported that the change in Indonesia's leadership on 21 May, when President B. J. Habibie took over the reins of Government, was followed by renewed calls for an early solution to the East Timor issue. The National Council of Timorese Resistance demanded the immediate and unconditional release of the East Timorese resistance and pro-independence leader, Xanana Gusmao, and for its effective participation in ongoing UN-sponsored talks between Indonesia and Portugal. On 27 May, the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Rights of the United States House of Representatives said he had given President Habibie a letter signed by 15 members of Congress pressing for the freeing of political prisoners and a dialogue on the political status of East Timor. On 20 June, Portugal's Foreign Ministry said it was indispensable that representatives of the people of the Territory take part in negotiations with the United Nations and in an internationally supervised, democratic referendum. The European Union summit (Cardiff, United Kingdom, 15-16 June) also called on Indonesia to respect human rights and fundamental freedoms and for the release of all political prisoners, including those from East Timor, and continued to press for Mr. Gusmao's early release.

On 10 June, the Secretary-General's spokesman said that the Secretary-General was encouraged by the start of a more determined dialogue towards a resolution of the East Timor question, welcomed the decree for the release of 15 East Timorese political prisoners and hoped it would lead to the release of all other such prisoners. On 18 June, Indonesia's Foreign Minister met with the Secretary-General in New York and proposed that East Timor be given a special status with wide autonomy—excluding foreign affairs, finances, defence and security—as part of an internationally acceptable solution to the East Timor question. Press reports indicated that President Habibie had rejected a referendum on independence, which, government officials argued, would only sharpen the conflict between both sides of the independence issue. Amid those political developments, protests and violence continued.

As noted in a later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/1999/10 & Corr.1], Mr. Gusmao, on 20 June, rejected President Habibie's proposal that, in return for international recognition of Indonesia's sovereignty over East Timor, he would be released, the Indonesian troop presence in East Timor would be reduced and the Territory would be granted a special status. Mr. Gusmao, imprisoned since 1992, reiterated his demand for a referendum on independence.

The Special Committee on decolonization also heard statements by petitioners. It decided on 2 July to continue consideration of the East Timor question in 1999, subject to any directives that the General Assembly might issue at its forthcoming fifty-third (1998) session.

General Assembly consideration. Portugal reported on 2 June [A/53/135] that, since it continued to be de facto deprived from exercising its responsibilities for the administration of East Timor owing to Indonesia's illegal occupation of that Territory, thus preventing its people from freely exercising their right of self-determination, it remained unable to provide the information required under Article 73 e of the UN Charter. It also drew attention to reports, including from Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch and the United States State Department, on the serious human rights situation in East Timor. Indonesia responded on 20 August [A/53/278] that, as a matter of historical record, Portugal abdicated its responsibility when its colonial authorities in Dili simply packed up and left East Timor in August 1975, after allowing the Territory to deteriorate into civil war. Indonesian West Timor was forced to shoulder the burden of that war. The chaos and strife led the majority of East Timorese to petition Indonesia for integration. They assumed their inherent right to decolonize themselves and, no longer bound to any decolonization covenant with Portugal, chose independence through integration with Indonesia.

In a 10 September progress report [A/53/349], the Secretary-General said that negotiations had moved in a positive direction, bringing new promise for an early settlement of the East Timor problem. In London on 3 April, he had met separately with the Vice-President of Indonesia and the Prime Minister of Portugal and, in New York on 8 June, with the latter country's President. The Secretary-General noted that the era of reform embarked upon by Indonesia's new leadership had opened possibilities for resolution of the dispute. He welcomed the proposal to give East Timor a wide degree of autonomy as a positive shift in Indonesia's position, but emphasized the need to involve the East Timorese directly in the negotiating process.

The Secretary-General stated that his Personal Representative conveyed Indonesia's proposal to Portugal during his visit there (25-28 June), to which the Government responded positively; he also held meetings with a number of East Timorese representatives. During his 16-23 July visit to Indonesia, he discussed all aspects of the issue with the President and other government officials, leading opposition politicians, other political figures and members of the armed forces. He also met with Mr. Gusmao in Cipinang Prison, Jakarta; Monsignor Carlos Ximenes Belo and Bishop Basilio do Nascimento, Apostolic Administrators of Dili and Baucau, respectively; local Indonesian government authorities; and a broad spectrum of East Timorese representatives. On the basis of those discussions, the Secretary-General invited the Foreign Ministers of Indonesia and Portugal to New York for high-level talks on 4 and 5 August aimed at giving the negotiations a new thrust and breaking the deadlock. The two sides agreed to: hold in-depth discussions on Indonesia's proposed special autonomous status for East Timor, without prejudice to their basic positions of principle; involve the East Timorese more closely in the search for a solution; move towards an eventual normalization of relations between Indonesia and Portugal; and establish interest sections in friendly embassies in each other's capital by year's end. It was hoped that that step, coupled with the reduction of Indonesia's military forces in East Timor and the release of all East Timorese political prisoners, would foster confidence and assist in achieving a viable political solution to the East Timor question.

The Secretary-General reported that, in October [A/54/654], the United Nations presented to Indonesia and Portugal a draft constitutional framework for the autonomy of East Timor within Indonesia, which did not prejudice the shape of a final settlement. It defined the various areas of authority and competence between an autonomous East Timorese administration and the Government of Indonesia. Negotiations between the two sides took place on all aspects of the framework, through the tripartite senior-officials meeting process. At the same time, the United Nations intensified its consultations with East Timorese leaders, including Mr. Gusmao, to whom it was allowed unimpeded access at his place of detention.

The Secretariat reported that, in his 13 October statement [A/AC.109/1999/10] regarding reports of armed clashes in East Timor, the Secretary-General urged all parties concerned to avoid taking steps that could jeopardize or complicate the delicate efforts to find a just settlement. The fourth round of the All-inclusive Intra-East Timorese Dialogue (Krumbach, Austria, 31 October-3 November) brought together 40 East Timorese of diverse political backgrounds. The Secretary-General's Personal Representative met separately on 24 November with Portuguese and Indonesian officials to restart talks, suspended on 20 November by Portugal because of reports of an army massacre of 50 civilians in East Timor. That incident was never verified or confirmed and the talks subsequently resumed.

According to press reports, some 1,000 East Timorese protesters demonstrated outside the legislature in Dili on 18 December to demand independence. The next day, following his meeting in Bali, Indonesia, with the Regional Military Commander, whose area of command included East Timor, the Secretary-General's Personal Representative flew to East Timor to meet with local authorities, public figures and religious leaders. He was airlifted out of East Timor on 20 December after hundreds of pro-independence demonstrators stormed the airport demanding to speak with him. The Prime Minister of Australia, one of the few countries to have recognized Indonesian sovereignty over East Timor, reportedly informed President Habibie that Australia was in favour of a self-determination referendum for the Territory.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Committee of the General Assembly, in its first report [A/53/250], recommended that the item on East Timor be deferred to the fifty-fourth (1999) Assembly session and included in its provisional agenda.

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

In July [A/53/23], during its consideration of the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), the Special Committee on decolonization examined a Secretariat working paper on constitutional and political developments and economic, social and educational conditions in the Territory [A/AC.109/2105]. The paper stated that, in his New Year message to the Territory, Prime Minister Anthony Blair of the United Kingdom, the administering Power, declared his commitment to protect the Territory's right to self-determination and to ensure its security. He promised that his pursuit of a constructive relationship with Argentina, which he believed would benefit the Territory, Argentina and the United Kingdom, would not be at the Territory's expense. Argentina issued a press release on 10 June, the Day of Affirmation of Argentine Rights to the Malvinas Islands and the Antarctic Sector, reiterating its readiness to resume talks with the United Kingdom on their sovereignty dispute over the Malvinas.

Earlier, on 30 April [A/53/121], Argentina rejected the United Kingdom's "right" to authorize oil drilling in the Argentine continental shelf north of the Malvinas. It reiterated that it neither recognized nor accepted the call for tenders for the exploration and exploitation of resources in the maritime zones over which it had sovereignty. It further reiterated its inalienable rights over the Malvinas, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands and the surrounding maritime zones. The United Kingdom rejected that assertion on 12 May [A/53/126], saying it had no doubt as to its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, its sovereign rights and jurisdiction over the surrounding continental shelf, and its consequential right to administer the Territory and the shelf in accordance with international law.

In a 6 July resolution, the Special Committee reiterated that a peaceful and negotiated settlement of the sovereignty dispute between Argentina and the United Kingdom would put an end to the colonial situation of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) and accordingly requested them to resume negotiations.

By decision 53/414 of 2 November, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the item "Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)" and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth (1999) session.

Gibraltar

The question of Gibraltar was taken up on 29 June by the Special Committee on decolonization. It had before it a Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2112] updating the overall situation in the Territory and setting forth the positions of the United Kingdom (the administering Power), Gibraltar and Spain concerning Gibraltar's future status. The Committee heard statements by Spain and the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, following which it decided to continue consideration of the question in 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/594], adopted decision 53/420 without vote [agenda item 18].

Question of Gibraltar

At its 78th plenary meeting, on 3 December 1998, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee), adopted the following text:

"The General Assembly, recalling its decision 52/419 of 10 December 1997, and recalling at the same time that the statement agreed to by the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at Brussels on 27 November 1984, stipulates, inter alia, the following:

"The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution', takes note of the fact that, as part of this process, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Spain and of the United Kingdom hold annual meetings alternately in each capital, the most recent of which was held in London on 10 December 1997, and urges both Governments to continue their negotiations with the object of reaching a definitive solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations."

Guam

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Guam as a separate item in 1998 [A/53/23]. It had before it a Secretariat working paper on the Territory [A/AC.109/2113], describing political developments, economic and social conditions, and the status of the closure of military bases of the United States, the administering Power, and of the return of surplus federal lands. On 11 August, the Special Committee adopted a resolution calling on the United States to cooperate with Guam's Commission on Decolonization for the Implementation and Exercise of Chamorro Self-Determination so as to facilitate Guam's decolonization, and to take into consideration the expressed will of the Chamorro people as endorsed by the people of Guam; it encouraged the administering Power and the territorial Government to continue negotiations on the matter and to inform the Secretary-General of progress made.

New Caledonia

The question of New Caledonia was considered by the Special Committee on decolonization from 7 to 13 July [A/53/23]. It had before it a working paper [A/AC.109/2114], prepared by the Secretariat, describing developments in the Territory, particularly the implementation of the 1988 Matignon Accords [YUN 1988, p. 742], which provided for a 10-year period of economic and social development, leading to a self-determination referendum to be held in 1998. The signatories to the Accords were France (the administering Power) and the two main Caledonian political groupings—the Rassemblement pour la Calédonie dans la République (RPCR) and the Front de libération nationale kanake socialiste (FLNKS). After a two-year hiatus, talks on the future political status of New Caledonia resumed in Paris on 16 February, paving the way for which was a 1 February agreement permitting an exchange of nickel reserves between the French State-owned Eramet and the Kanak-controlled Société minière du Sud Pacifique. That agreement also led to the dismantling of barricades and roadblocks erected throughout the Territory by FLNKS, which had set 31 January as the deadline for the agreement under threat of a mass mobilization of its supporters.

Following two months of negotiations, an agreement on the Territory's future status emerged; it was formally signed on 5 May by RPCR, FLNKS and the Government of France. Referred to as the Noumea Accord, the agreement affirmed the determination to embark on a new stage characterized by a full recognition of the Kanak identity, prior to the reformulation of a social contract between all communities in New Caledonia and by a sharing of sovereignty with France, on the way to full sovereignty. A policy document was also approved setting out the arrangements for taking the Kanak identity more broadly into account in the political and social organization of New Caledonia. A new Government would be appointed by the Congress on the basis of proportional representation. The electorate for the elections to the provincial assemblies and the Congress would be limited, as agreed in the Matignon Accords. There would be a considerable transfer of powers from the State to the New Caledonian institutions, once they were brought into operation in the case of some, and during a second stage in the case of others. A plan to promote New Caledonia's economic and social development would be defined in special agreements. Before the end of 1998, the whole plan would be submitted to the New Caledonians in a referendum, as provided for in the 1988 Referendum Act. Another referendum would be held in 20 years' time, or in 15 years if the Congress so decided, on the transfer of sovereign powers to New Caledonia and related issues.

New Caledonia was to hold consultations on the Noumea Accord among its political, economic and social organizations; the territorial Government would prepare the legislation necessary for its implementation and, among other things, propose a draft constitutional act to France.

On 13 July, the Special Committee approved a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/594], adopted resolution 53/65 without vote [agenda item 18].

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Reaffirming the right of peoples to self-determination as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Noting the importance of the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in cooperation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, including measures in the area of environmental protection and action with respect to drug abuse and trafficking, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

Noting also, in this context, the importance of equitable economic and social development, as well as continued dialogue among the parties involved in New Caledonia in the preparation of the act of self-determination of New Caledonia,

Welcoming the strengthening of the process of review of the Matignon Accords through the increased frequency of coordination meetings,

Noting with satisfaction the intensification of contacts between New Caledonia and neighbouring countries of the South Pacific region,

1. Welcomes the significant developments that have taken place in New Caledonia as exemplified by the signing of the Noumea Accord of 5 May 1998 between the representatives of New Caledonia and the Government of France;

2. Notes the relevant provisions of the Noumea Accord aimed at taking more broadly into account the Kanak identity in the political and social organization of New Caledonia, and also those provisions of the Accord relating to control of immigration and protection of local employment;

3. Also notes the relevant provisions of the Noumea Accord to the effect that New Caledonia may become a member or associate member of certain international organizations, such as international organizations in the Pacific region, the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Labour Organization, according to their regulations;

4. Further notes the agreement between the signatories to the Noumea Accord that the progress made in the emancipation process shall be brought to the attention of the United Nations;

5. Invites the administering Power to consider inviting to New Caledonia, at the time the new institutions are established, a mission of information which could comprise representatives of countries of the Pacific region;

6. Calls upon the administering Power to transmit information regarding the political, economic and social situation of New Caledonia to the Secretary-General;

7. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia and building on the positive outcome of the review of the Matignon and Noumea Accords, to maintain their dialogue in a spirit of harmony;

8. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights of all New Caledonians according to the letter and spirit of the Matignon and Noumea Accords, which are based on the principle that it is for the populations of New Caledonia to choose how to control their destiny;

9. Welcomes measures that have been taken to strengthen and diversify the New Caledonian economy in all fields, and encourages further such measures in accordance with the spirit of the Matignon and Noumea Accords;

10. Also welcomes the importance attached by the parties to the Matignon and Noumea Accords to greater progress in housing, employment, training, education and health care in New Caledonia;

11. Acknowledges the contribution of the Melanesian Cultural Centre to the protection of the indigenous culture of New Caledonia;

12. Notes the positive initiatives aimed at protecting the natural environment of New Caledonia, notably the "Zonéco" operation designed to map and evaluate marine resources within the economic zone of New Caledonia;

13. Acknowledges the close links between New Caledonia and the peoples of the South Pacific and the positive actions being taken by the French and territorial authorities to facilitate the further development of those links, including the development of closer relations with the countries members of the South Pacific Forum;

14. Welcomes, in particular, in this regard, continuing high-level visits to New Caledonia by delegations from countries of the Pacific region and high-level visits by delegations from New Caledonia to countries members of the South Pacific Forum;

15. Decides to keep under continuous review the process unfolding in New Caledonia as a result of the signing of the Noumea Accord;

16. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue the examination of this question at its next session and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session.

Tokelau

In July, the Special Committee discussed the question of Tokelau as a separate item, based on a Secretariat working paper detailing that Territory's continuing constitutional development, economic and social conditions, and the positions of New Zealand, the administering Power, and of Tokelau concerning its future status [A/AC.109/2116]. A first draft of Tokelau's Constitution, presented to the National Assembly in 1997, was referred back to the villages and subcommittees of the Special Constitutional Committee for refinement preparatory to a second presentation. Discussions on the constitutional development agenda were held (Wellington, November/December) between New Zealand and Tokelauan officials, including the Ulu-o-Tokelau (the highest authority of Tokelau).

A later working paper [A/AC.109/1999/17] indicated that, according to information provided by New Zealand, the General Fono (the national representative body of Tokelau), on 3 August, endorsed a comprehensive report entitled "Modern House of Tokelau", which addressed the core issue for Tokelau of how to construct a self-governing nation based on the village.

In a 23 November message to the General Fono, New Zealand's Minister of Foreign Affairs and Trade said that transitional action was under way to bring into effect on 1 July 1999 the new governance arrangements in Tokelau. Those arrangements struck a good balance between Tokelau's wish to be economically self-reliant and the fact that it was too small an economic unit in current circumstances to be able to call on all the resources, skills and advice it needed. More detailed arrangements would be required to cover a self-governing Tokelau than were devised for the Cook Islands and Niue, as would a tighter definition of partnership, including the obligations accepted on both sides, and of the continuing support New Zealand was prepared to provide. The central thought was that, after self-determination, Tokelau would not be cut adrift and that New Zealand and its partners would see it as part of their function to help Tokelau succeed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/594], adopted resolution 53/66 without vote [agenda item 18].

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the question of Tokelau,

Recalling the solemn declaration on the future status of Tokelau, delivered by the Ulu-o-Tokelau (the highest authority on Tokelau) on 30 July 1994, that an act of self-determination in Tokelau is now under active consideration, together with the constitution of a self-governing Tokelau, and that the present preference of Tokelau is for a status of free association with New Zealand,

Recalling also its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, General Assembly resolution 52/77 of 10 December 1997,

Recalling further the emphasis placed in the solemn declaration on the terms of Tokelau's intended free association relationship with New Zealand, including the expectation that the form of help Tokelau could continue to expect from New Zealand in promoting the well-being of its people, besides its external interests, would be clearly established in the framework of that relationship,

Noting with appreciation the continuing exemplary co-operation of New Zealand as the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Tokelau and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Noting also with appreciation the collaborative contribution to the development of Tokelau by New Zealand and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme and the International Telecommunication Union,

Recalling the dispatch in 1994 of a United Nations visiting mission to Tokelau,

Noting that, as a small island Territory, Tokelau exemplifies the situation of most remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Noting also that, as a case study pointing to successful decolonization, Tokelau has wider significance for the United Nations as it seeks to complete its work in decolonization,

1. Notes that Tokelau remains firmly committed to the development of self-government and to an act of self-determination that would result in Tokelau assuming a status in accordance with the options on future status for Non-Self-Governing Territories contained in principle VI of the annex to General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960;

2. Also notes Tokelau's desire to move at its own pace towards an act of self-determination;

3. Commends Tokelau's ongoing work in charting a distinctive constitutional course, reflecting its unique traditions and environment;

4. Also commends Tokelau for current initiatives and endeavours, based on wide consultation with its people, to construct a true "house of Tokelau", acknowledging the role of the village as the foundation of Tokelau, as well as the need to continue the process of strengthening the basis of national self-government;

5. Acknowledges the attention being given to broader matters of governance, including Tokelau's efforts to establish clear local channels of responsibility and accountability in national and village government;

6. Notes the desire of Tokelau, in consultation with the Government of New Zealand, to take over responsibility for the Tokelau public service and the willingness of the Government of New Zealand to make the necessary legislative changes, reflecting its already well-advanced policy of devolving that part of government which deals with the interests of all of Tokelau;

7. Acknowledges Tokelau's need for reassurance, given that local resources cannot adequately cover the material side of self-determination, and the ongoing responsibility of Tokelau's external partners to assist Tokelau in balancing its desire to be self-reliant to the greatest extent possible with its need for external assistance;

8. Welcomes the assurances of the Government of New Zealand that it will meet its obligations to the United Nations with respect to Tokelau and abide by the freely expressed wishes of the people of Tokelau with regard to their future status;

9. Invites the administering Power and United Nations agencies to continue their assistance to the social and economic development of Tokelau;

10. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session.

Western Sahara

The question of Western Sahara was considered by the Special Committee on decolonization in June [A/53/23]. The Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2118] before it provided detailed information on action taken since 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 145] by the Secretary-General in the exercise of his good offices and by the Security Council and General Assembly (see also PART ONE, Chapter II). On 30 June, the Special Committee transmitted the relevant documentation to the Assembly at its fifty-third (1998) session to facilitate the Fourth Committee's consideration of the question.

Island Territories

In July, the Special Committee on decolonization considered working papers prepared by the Secretariat on American Samoa [A/AC.109/2104], Anguilla [A/AC.109/2106], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2109], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2110], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2102], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2108], Pitcairn [A/AC.109/2103], St. Helena [A/AC.109/2115], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2107] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2117], describing political developments and economic and social conditions in each of those Territories. On 13 July, the Special Committee approved a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

Also in July, the Special Committee considered the Territory of Guam as a separate item (see above). The Special Committee's draft resolution on the Territory, approved on 11 August, was subsequently incorporated in the Assembly resolution below.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/594], adopted resolutions 53/67 A and B without vote [agenda item 18].

Questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands

A

General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands, hereinafter referred to as "the Territories",

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its fifty-second session on the individual Territories covered by the present resolution,

Recognizing that the specific characteristics and the sentiments of the peoples of the Territories require flexible, practical and innovative approaches to the options of self-determination, without any prejudice to territorial size, geographical location, size of population or natural resources,

Recalling its resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, containing the principles that should guide Member States in determining whether or not an obligation exists to transmit the information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing its concern that even thirty-eight years after the adoption of the Declaration there still remain a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Acknowledging the significant achievements by the international community towards the eradication of colonialism in accordance with the Declaration, and conscious of the importance of continuing effective implementation of the Declaration, taking into account the target set by the United Nations to eradicate colonialism by the year 2000,

Noting the positive constitutional developments in some Non-Self-Governing Territories about which the Special Committee has received information, while also acknowledging the need for recognition to be given to expressions of self-determination by the peoples of the Territories consistent with practice under the Charter,

Recognizing that in the decolonization process there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination as enunciated by the General Assembly in its resolutions 1514(XV), 1541(XV) and other resolutions,

Welcoming the stated position of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland that it continues to take seriously its obligations under the Charter to develop self-government in the dependent Territories and, in cooperation with the locally elected Governments, to ensure that their constitutional frameworks continue to meet the wishes of the people, and the emphasis that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories to decide their future status,

Welcoming also the stated position of the Government of the United States of America that it supports fully the principles of decolonization and takes seriously its obligations under the Charter to promote to the utmost the well-being of the inhabitants of the Territories under United States administration,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the necessity of promoting economic stability and diversifying and strengthening further the economies of the respective Territories as a matter of priority,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Aware of the usefulness both to the Territories and to the Special Committee of the participation of appointed and elected representatives of the Territories in the work of the Special Committee,

Convinced that the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories should continue to guide the development of their future political status and that referendums, free and fair elections and other forms of popular consultation play an important role in ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the people,

Convinced also that any negotiations to determine the status of a Territory must not take place without the active involvement and participation of the people of that Territory,

Recognizing that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in resolutions 1514(XV), 1541(XV) and other resolutions of the General Assembly,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, and considering that the possibility of sending further visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers should be kept under review,

Noting that the Special Committee held a Pacific regional seminar at Nadi, Fiji, from 16 to 18 June 1998, to hear the views of the representatives of the Territories, as well as Governments and organizations in the region, in order to review the political, economic and social conditions in the Territories,

Mindful that in order for the Special Committee to enhance its understanding of the political status of the peoples of the Territories and to fulfil its mandate effectively, it is important for the Committee to be apprised by the administering Powers and to receive information from other appropriate sources, including the representatives of the Territories, concerning the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories,

Mindful also in this connection that the Special Committee regards the holding of regional seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions and at Headquarters and other venues, with the active participation of representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, as a helpful means to fulfil its mandate, while recognizing the need for reviewing the role of those seminars in the context of a United Nations programme for ascertaining the political status of the Territories,

Mindful further that some Territories have not had any United Nations visiting mission for a long period of time and that no such visiting missions have been sent to some of the Territories,

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, and regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the Territories to self-determination, including, if they so wish, independence, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Reaffirms also that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and in that connection calls upon the administering Powers, in cooperation with the territorial Governments, to facilitate programmes of political education in the Territories in order to foster an awareness among the people of their right to self-determination in conformity with legitimate political status options, including those defined in resolution 1541 (XV);

3. Requests the administering Powers to transmit to the Secretary-General information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter and other updated information and reports, including reports on the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories regarding their future political status as expressed in fair and free referendums and other forms of popular consultation, as well as the results of any informed and democratic processes consistent with practice under the Charter that indicate the clear and freely expressed wish of the people to change the existing status of the Territories;

4. Stresses the importance for the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to be apprised of the views and wishes of the peoples of the Territories and to enhance its understanding of their conditions;

5. Reaffirms that United Nations visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers are an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, and requests the administering Powers and the elected representatives of the peoples of the Territories to assist the Special Committee in this regard;

6. Reaffirms also the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the economic and social development and to preserve the cultural identity of the Territories, and recommends that priority continue to be given, in consultation with the territorial Governments concerned, to the strengthening and diversification of their respective economies;

7. Requests the administering Powers, in consultation with the peoples of the Territories, to take all necessary measures to protect and conserve the environment of the Territories under their administration against any environmental degradation, and requests the specialized agencies concerned to continue to monitor environmental conditions in those Territories;

8. Calls upon the administering Powers, in cooperation with the respective territorial Governments, to continue to take all necessary measures to counter problems related to drug trafficking, money laundering and other offences;

9. Stresses that the eradication of colonialism by the year 2000 requires the full and constructive cooperation of all parties concerned;

10. Noting the particular circumstances that prevail in the Territories concerned, and encourages the political evolution in them towards self-determination;

11. Urges Member States to contribute to the efforts of the United Nations to usher in the twenty-first century in a world free of colonialism, and calls upon them to continue to give their full support to the Special Committee in its endeavours towards that noble goal;

12. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to initiate or to continue to take all necessary measures to accelerate progress in the social and economic life of the Territories;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of the question of the small Territories and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session with recommendations on appropriate ways to assist the peoples of the Territories in exercising their right to self-determination.

New concept of trusteeship

In a 31 March note [A/52/849], the Secretary-General recalled his 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 1390] entitled "Renewing the United Nations: a programme for reform", which included a proposal that the Trusteeship Council be reconstituted as a forum through which Member States could exercise their collective trusteeship for the integrity of the global environment and common areas, such as oceans, atmosphere and outer space, and that the Council serve to link the United Nations and civil society in addressing areas of global concern requiring the active contribution of public, private and voluntary sectors. The Task Force set up by the Secretary-General to prepare proposals on the environment would elaborate further on the proposed new concept of trusteeship for his consideration and submission to the General Assembly (see also PART FIVE, Chapter I).

On 6 May, the Assembly, by decision 52/477 C, deferred to its fifty-third (1998) session consideration of the Secretary-General's note. By resolution 53/106 of 8 December, the Assembly requested the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization to continue to consider proposals concerning the Trusteeship Council in accordance with resolution 50/55 [YUN 1995, p. 266], the Secretary-General's 1997 report and the views expressed by Member States in response to the same resolution.

Information

UN public information

The 90-member Committee on Information of the General Assembly, at its twentieth session (New York, 4-15 May (first part), 27 and 30 October (resumed)) [A/53/21/Rev.1], continued its examination of UN information policies and activities, and its evaluation and follow-up of efforts made and progress achieved by the UN system in information and communications. Before the Committee were reports by the Secretary-General on the implementation of Assembly-approved information and communications measures, on the activities of the Joint United Nations Information Committee (JUNIC) and on the development of a UN international radio broadcasting capacity. It also considered the reports submitted in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 569] on the review of major publications of the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI), including those in the sphere of development; on the evaluation of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and of the UN information centres (UNICs); and on the integration of UNICs into the field offices of UNDP.

The Committee recommended to the Assembly for adoption two draft resolutions—one on information in the service of humanity and the other on UN public information policies and activities—and a decision on the increase of its membership, which were adopted by the Assembly in December (see below).

Implementation of information and communications measures

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/70 B [YUN 1997, p. 571], the Secretary-General submitted to the Committee on Information an April report [A/AC.198/1998/2] on the implementation of the measures regarding information and communications. Referring to the recommendations of the Task Force on the Reorientation of United Nations Public Information Activities [YUN 1997, p. 567], the Secretary-General said that, in appointing an Under-Secretary-General to lead DPI, he was underscoring the importance of the role of communications as an integral part of the substantive programme of the United Nations. His objective was to ensure that a communications dimension was integrated into the work of all departments of the Organization, turning the United Nations into an effective modern communications-oriented organization.

The report elaborated the conceptual framework for policies of the new orientation and identified its major strategic objectives and functional priorities, including the need to: develop a culture of communications throughout the Organization; continue to strengthen its capacity to use the latest information technologies to reach audiences around the globe; project the Organization's unique role in meeting the peace, development and human rights objectives of the international community; strengthen further DPI's capacity to work closely with other parts of the Organization on communications and information policies for the promotion of substantive and thematic programmes; and strengthen the Organization's capacity to communicate at the country and regional levels. A Strategic Communications Planning Group would be established in DPI to advise its Under-Secretary-General on critical issues that had a direct bearing on the image of the Organization.

DPI, the department responsible for coordinating and managing the UN home page and its public information content, fully recognized the importance of the new electronic medium, the Internet; the Under-Secretary-General was thus giving careful consideration to the most appropriate organizational arrangements to underscore the Internet's central role in DPI's communications activities and would take direct charge of the Information Technology Section.

The recommendations of a recently completed feasibility study on technical, financial, programming and managerial implications of the development of a UN international radio broadcasting capacity were under consideration by DPI (see below). The production of authoritative, relevant and timely publications—whose continued relevance to redisseminators throughout the world had been confirmed by a 1997 readership survey—would remain at the centre of DPI's outreach effort. DPI would continue the revitalization of its more demand-driven publication programme to ensure the production of high-quality, attractive material that demonstrated the relevance and centrality of the UN system to people's everyday lives.

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library was taking steps to become a library without walls based on technical innovation. It was designing and implementing a virtual library, providing the UN community with access to a wealth of on-line information. Building partnerships with important redisseminators of information—the media, NGOs, business organizations and educational institutions—would be a key feature of the new orientation of communications policies.

UNICs were to be made more effective. Experience showed that their integration with offices of UNDP resident representatives/coordinators had, in some cases, resulted in substantial problems. The Task Force recommendations on the matter were being considered with a view to developing proposals.

UN international radio broadcasting capacity

The Committee on Information considered an October report of the Secretary-General [A/AC.198/1998/4] on the development of a UN direct radio broadcasting capacity. Prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 49/38 B [YUN 1994, p. 237], which had originally encouraged the Secretary-General to improve UN radio access to airwaves worldwide, the report assessed the findings of a study on the subject by Deutsche Welle, commissioned by DPI at the request of the Office of Internal Oversight Services in 1996.

Based on its conclusion that radio broadcasting remained the most direct and cost-effective medium of communication with target audiences worldwide, particularly in developing countries, the study made a series of recommendations. They called for: a dissemination system combining short-wave radio rebroadcasting and live broadcasting at least 30 minutes daily in English and French, gradually to include the other UN official languages; the integration of peacekeeping radio into the larger UN radio network; programming based on defined target regions and audience interest; restructuring and reorienting DPI's radio service towards direct/live daily broadcasting, with upgraded technical infrastructure, increased production and operational resources and the appointment of a controller to ensure the efficient use of resources; strategic partnerships with other international broadcasters; leasing a short-wave transmission service combined with programme distribution (the most recommendable of four transmission options listed); and keeping abreast of technological developments, such as direct satellite broadcasting, that could substitute for short wave, taking into account the feasibility and cost to audiences in developing communities.

The Secretary-General observed that the dissemination system recommended, such as that offered by the Merlin Corporation, had financial implications of $5,948,000 in recurrent costs per biennium, $1,860,800 for a two-year period to enhance field news-gathering and production capacity at Headquarters, and a $100,000 non-recurrent sum for capital equipment upgrade. Since those amounts could not be absorbed within existing resources, the Secretary-General proposed inviting interested Member States with powerful medium- and short-wave transmission facilities covering different regions to form a transmission consortium for the development of a UN international radio broadcasting capacity and make their facilities available to the United Nations for a limited number of hours on a pro bono or nominal-fee basis. Under such an arrangement, the additional resources required would be $3,804,400 for the first year and $3,704,400 for the following year, but could be lower if the transmission technology was also provided pro bono or for a nominal fee. The Secretary-General further proposed the creation of a trust fund for the development and expansion of the infrastructure necessary for an enhanced UN international broadcasting capacity.

To offset part of the additional production costs of $1,860,800 for the 2000-2001 biennium,

DPI proposed to streamline and reduce weekly tape programme production and distribution by 40 per cent once the proposed daily short-wave broadcasting was operational, thereby generating savings from reduced tape dubbing, pouch cost and contractual engineering services. It would also enhance programme productivity to meet daily broadcast needs, leaving a budgetary requirement of $1,560,800 for field news-gathering and production costs, to be covered by voluntary contributions to the proposed trust fund. The estimated, non-recurrent cost of technological upgrade would be submitted as part of capital equipment costs in the regular budget for the biennium.

A plan was under way to launch a pilot project of daily broadcasts to selected regions in Africa and Europe before year's end. The results would guide DPI's efforts to respond to the demand for the development of a UN international radio broadcasting capacity, which DPI would proceed to develop subject to the availability of extra-budgetary support.

DPI activities

As noted in the Secretary-General's October report on questions relating to information [A/53/509], DPI activities in elaborating, coordinating and harmonizing UN information policies and activities continued to be strengthened and improved. With respect to public information, the Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General broadened the scope of the daily briefing for correspondents to include the work of all organizations in the UN system. As part of its new orientation, DPI was putting hard news at the core of its radio, television and print operations. Radio production and dissemination operations had embarked on a new course of modernization and programme restructuring designed to expand the focus of thematic production to incorporate new and pressing issues, integrate programme output into the daily news cycle and enhance programme delivery. Daily radio news bulletins in English, French, Spanish and Portuguese were relayed via telephone lines and the Internet to Africa and Latin America. News bulletins were posted regularly and updated on the UN home page. The Daily Highlights bulletin was being modified with a news service format, using the Internet. A direct radio broadcasting pilot project (see above) in selected regions would be introduced by the end of the year.

As to television, DPI was expanding its cooperation with outside broadcasters; with a number of them it had organized television news feature coverage trips to several UN peacekeeping and humanitarian missions. It also increased cooperation with such UN bodies and agencies as ILO, UNDP, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). The trial plan to provide no-cost television production facilities to resident correspondents, having proved a success, was made permanent. A feasibility study on the integration of DPI's media archives was completed. DPI continued to strengthen links with a growing number of national and international NGOs and held its fifty-first annual conference for NGOs (New York, 14-16 September). It increased attention to outreach activities for students and educators through workshops, or through general interest and reference publications for school use, and continued to help plan and coordinate a number of special events and programmes.

With respect to specific information programmes, DPI continued to develop thematically integrated information programmes on priority issues, focusing on implementing information strategies, promotional activities and public services highlighting the Organization's role in furthering, among others, sustainable development, peace and security, democracy, human rights, humanitarian assistance and social and economic development. Among recent innovations was a systematic global effort to place, in the major international and national media, articles by the Secretary-General on UN priority issues. DPI also expanded its circle of media outlets that regularly reported the UN viewpoint on economic issues to include the major financial and business wire services.

Library services

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library significantly expanded three of its major activities in 1998: the electronic "UN in the News" service; its training programme in electronic information retrieval; and electronic dissemination of time-critical information via electronic mail to permanent missions to the United Nations and to staff at Headquarters and abroad. The Library set up a consortium to access electronic information, of which it was the coordinating agency; participating organizations shared the cost of site licences for electronic services delivered through the Internet. That enabled the Library to provide permanent missions with cost-free access to electronic information previously available only to Secretariat staff. The Library also expanded its Internet site to include "Maps", a site containing up-to-date maps of current peacekeeping operations, and a complete listing of electronic resources available in the Library and its branches, and held training workshops and seminars for UN depository librarians.

UN information centres

UNICs took strategic steps in 1998 to enhance their effectiveness in communicating information about the work of the Organization and in presenting a unified message at the local level. They continued to forge dynamic partnerships with the private sector, established coalitions of NGOs, organized teams of student lecturers and formed local coordinating committees on information, involving all UN system partners in the field. Upgraded computer equipment and staff training provided to UNICs advanced their efforts to broaden their information outreach to local constituents, particularly schools and educational institutions. Overall, UNICs translated and disseminated more than 150 UN publications, documents and DPI information products. Several applied desktop publishing capabilities to the production of locally relevant information materials. Many produced their own radio and television programmes on UN issues for broadcast free of charge by local stations. They also supported the work of UN programmes, funds and specialized agencies by publicizing their in-country projects and major reports.

JUNIC

The Joint United Nations Information Committee (JUNIC), the inter-agency Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) body on information activities within the UN system, held its twenty-fourth session in Rome, Italy, from 8 to 10 July 1998 [ACC/1998/11]. Issues discussed included specific ways and means to promote a better public understanding of the role and achievements of the United Nations.

In keeping with the new approach of developing a communications culture within the UN system so as to project more effectively the relevance of the United Nations to the concerns of people everywhere, JUNIC recommended that the strengthening of the system's information and communications capacity be raised in the executive bodies of all member organizations and discussed in ACC. JUNIC examined ways of improving its own effectiveness and agreed on the need to reinvigorate the Committee, especially between sessions, and to strengthen ongoing communications among members through Intranet connection, teleconferencing, ad hoc visits and other means in order to better use the existing machinery for the coordination of system-wide public information and communications initiatives. It also agreed that its annual sessions be used for broad-based discussions of joint communications strategies and that its agenda be revitalized to meet the system's evolving concerns.

JUNIC emphasized the importance of strategic communications to generate broader support for the objectives of the Organization. It agreed that communications training should be provided at all levels in member organizations as a means to create an internal constituency for a broad-based communications outreach. It stressed the need to provide a public information and communications budget for all major UN initiatives, including observances and General Assembly special sessions, as well as the importance of a rapid response capacity within the system's organizations to respond to inaccuracies and distortions about their work, preferably within the same news cycle. As from its 1999 session, JUNIC would concentrate on one or two broad themes of system-wide interest. It decided to initiate a campaign strategy to make public information and communications part of the strategic management of the system's organizations and formed a group to develop a proposal for action.

JUNIC also discussed issues pertaining to its Non-Governmental Liaison Service and decided to bring its continuing precarious financial situation to ACC's attention for urgent consideration. JUNIC endorsed the proposal that through UNICEF, its then lead agency, the Service should seek financial support for its information outreach and communications programme from the United Nations Foundation.

During the session, an information technology presentation entitled "Being digital in the developing world" was made by the Technical Advisory Group. It was proposed that the Group convene in November to discuss issues relating to the use of computer technology in public information, to which representatives of technology and information units were to be invited. Noting that compatibility of computer software within the UN system was essential for its broader use as a communications tool, JUNIC suggested that a questionnaire be circulated on the modes of operation and technology used by all member organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/600], adopted resolutions 53/59 A and B without vote [agenda item 86].

In resolution 53/78 E of 4 December, it stressed the importance of the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme as a significant instrument in enabling Member States to participate fully in UN deliberations and negotiations on disarmament.

Peaceful uses of outer space

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on Outer Space) held its forty-first session in Geneva from 3 to 12 June [A/53/20], during which it continued to consider ways to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes. It also discussed preparations for the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), to be held in 1999. It reviewed the 1998 session reports of its Scientific and Technical and Legal Subcommittees on the issues assigned to them by General Assembly resolution 52/56 [YUN 1997, p. 579], endorsed their recommendations on those items, including on the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee's agenda for 1999, and outlined the agenda of the Legal Subcommittee.

In addition, the Committee continued to review the status of the spin-off benefits of space technology and recommended postponing further consideration until 2000.

The Committee's recommendations were endorsed by the Assembly on 3 December (see p. 593).

Scientific and Technical Subcommittee

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its thirty-fifth session (Vienna, 9-20 February) [A/AC.105/697 & Corr.1], reviewed the United Nations Programme on Space Applications, the coordination of space activities within the UN system, and preparations for UNISPACE III, for which it was the Advisory Committee. It also considered matters relating to remote sensing of Earth by satellites; the use of nuclear power sources in outer space; space debris; progress in national and international space activities related to Earth's environment; and matters relating to space transportation systems, the geostationary orbit, life sciences, including space medicine, planetary exploration and astronomy. The theme chosen for special attention was "Scientific and technical aspects and applications of space-based meteorology".

UNISPACE-82 recommendations

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group of the Whole to Evaluate the Implementation of the Recommendations of the Second United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE-82) [YUN 1982, p. 162] for its twelfth session (10-19 February) to conclude its evaluation of the recommendations of UNISPACE-82.

The Working Group stated that it had made several of those recommendations more specific to facilitate their implementation. Good progress had thus been achieved in the following: arrangements for a fellowship programme of training courses and workshops, enhancement of international and regional cooperation, preparation of technical studies, promotion of a greater exchange of experiences and cooperation in space science technology, setting up of regional centres for space science technology education, and arrangements for UN budget allocations and voluntary contributions for expanded activities of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications. The Working Group reported that some recommendations not involving substantial financial implications had been fully implemented; those partially implemented might require further consideration within the context of UNISPACE III (see below).

The Working Group's report was adopted by the Subcommittee and annexed to its own report to the Committee on Outer Space.

In August [A/53/265], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his report on the implementation of the UNISPACE-82 recommendations.

UNISPACE III (1999)

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, through its Working Group of the Whole, considered the organization of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), to be held in Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999 as a special session of the Committee on Outer Space. The Working Group examined, section by section, the executive secretariat's first full draft report of UNISPACE III and commented on its structure and content. It made recommendations on the organizational aspects of UNISPACE III, including the composition of its main committees and bureau, agenda, provisional rules of procedure, participation of international organizations and industry, space exhibition, public lectures and regional preparatory meetings.

The Committee on Outer Space, acting as the Preparatory Committee for UNISPACE III, endorsed the Working Group's recommendations as a basis for its preparatory work. Accordingly, the Preparatory Committee established its Working Group of the Whole, which prepared an executive summary of the first full draft report and revised the text of "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development". On the basis of the Group's comments and those of Member States to which the texts were to be circulated in September 1998, the secretariat was to revise the texts and prepare a second full draft for the Advisory Committee's consideration in 1999, together with a compilation of the recommendations from regional preparatory conferences and additional comments from Member States.

The Working Group amended the provisional rules of procedure and recommended their endorsement by the Assembly. It agreed that the international organizations identified by the secretariat should be invited to the Conference, as well as those space-related industries and national organizations recommended by their Governments. The Preparatory Committee agreed that the Advisory Committee, in 1999, should reach agreement on the remaining Conference posts and on the allocation of agenda items. It also endorsed the Legal Subcommittee's recommendations concerning its contributions on issues relating to the promotion of international cooperation in space-related activities and the development of space law, as well as its recommendation that it report to UNISPACE III on its work, past and current, and on the new challenges in space law development.

In addition, the Preparatory Committee took note of a Pacific regional preparatory conference (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 18-22 May) and planned conferences in Chile (12-16 October), Morocco (26-30 October) and Romania (25-29 January 1999). In October, Chile transmitted the Concepcion Declaration [A/C.4/53/8], issued by the regional preparatory conference of Latin America and the Caribbean (Concepcion, Chile, 12-16 October).

UN Programme on Space Applications

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 37/90 [YUN 1982, p. 163], the United Nations Programme on Space Applications continued to focus on: developing indigenous capability at the local level in space science and technology through long-range training fellowships, technical advisory services, regional and international training courses and conferences; acquiring and disseminating space-related information; and promoting cooperation between developed and developing countries.

As indicated by the UN Expert on Space Applications in his report [A/AC.105/7693 & Corr.1 & Add.1] to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, the Programme had scheduled 11 workshops, training courses, symposia and conferences in 1998, including three preparatory meetings for UNISPACE III. It received five fellowship offers from the European Space Agency (ESA) for 1997-1998 and two from China for 1998-1999. Various technical advisory services in support of regional space applications projects were made available under the Programme's auspices. To foster greater cooperation, the Programme planned to co-sponsor the participation of scientists from developing countries in the United Nations/International Astronautical Federation Workshop on Expanding the User Community of Space Technology in Developing Countries (Melbourne, Australia, 24-27 September) and in the thirty-second Scientific Assembly of the Committee on Space Research (Nagoya, Japan, 12-19 July).

The Programme continued to lead international efforts, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 45/72 [YUN 1990, p. 99], to establish regional centres for space science and technology education in developing countries. In addition to the centre in Asia and the Pacific, which was to begin its fourth nine-month course on satellite meteorology and global climate (Ahmedabad, India, March), two centres were to be inaugurated in Africa: one in Nigeria (July) and another in Morocco (October) for English-speaking and French-speaking African countries, respectively. Brazil and Mexico had formally agreed to establish a centre for Latin America and the Caribbean. Discussions on a centre in western Asia were under way between the Office for Outer Space Affairs and three potential host countries: Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the Syrian Arab Republic. Bulgaria, Greece, Poland, Romania, Slovakia and Turkey, later joined by Hungary, had agreed to set up a network of space science and technology education and research institutions for central eastern and south-eastern Europe.

The Subcommittee, noting that the Programme was a priority activity of the Office for Outer Space Affairs, expressed concern over its limited financial resources and appealed for voluntary contributions from Member States.

The General Assembly, in resolution 53/45 (see below), endorsed the 1999 UN Programme on Space Applications, as proposed by the Expert on Space Applications.

Cooperation

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, at its nineteenth session (Vienna, 2-3 June) [A/AC.105/701], discussed coordination of plans and programmes in the practical application of space technology and inter-agency coordination of matters related to UNISPACE III. It reviewed cooperation in remote sensing and related geographic information systems (GIS) activities; progress on the proposed inter-agency space applications project for disaster prevention; the enhancement of coordination of outer space activities within the UN system; and its future programme of work.

The Meeting agreed that space technology provided tools to assist in advancing the objectives of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change [YUN 1992, p. 681], the International Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, particularly in Africa [YUN 1994, p. 944], and the Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683], as well as food security and agricultural development. The Meeting concluded that the focus should continue to be on the identification of areas where the agencies' interests coincided and where coordination could be undertaken. It stressed the importance of continued cooperation and coordination among the system's organizations engaged in outer space activities, and agreed that UNISPACE III provided a unique opportunity for further coordination, particularly of inputs for the action plan to be adopted by the Conference. It further stressed the importance of the principle of free access to space science and environmental data and called for the continued review of system-wide cooperation in remote sensing and related GIS activities. As to progress in the proposed inter-agency space applications project for disaster prevention, mitigation and relief, the Meeting was informed by the Expert on Space Applications that the implementation proposal was being reformulated as part of technical advisory services by the Office for Outer Space Affairs to the Asia and Pacific and the Caribbean regions.

The Committee on Outer Space, in taking note of the nineteenth Inter-Agency Meeting, pointed to the need to hold the twentieth (1999) Meeting prior to UNISPACE III to allow for consideration of the UN system's additional contributions to the Conference. It also noted that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee had stressed the necessity of ensuring continuous consultations and coordination and of avoiding duplication.

Scientific and technical issues

At its 1998 session, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, in its review of national and cooperative programmes in remote sensing of Earth by satellites, reiterated that activities should take account of the need to provide appropriate and non-discriminatory access to developing countries. It underscored the importance of making remote sensing data and analysed information available to all countries at reasonable cost and in a timely manner, and encouraged international cooperation in the use of remote sensing satellites through the coordination of ground-station operations and regular meetings between satellite operators and users. It noted the importance, particularly for developing countries, of sharing experiences and technologies, as well as the value of remote sensing systems for environmental monitoring and, in that context, stressed the need to utilize remote sensing data to implement fully the recommendations of Agenda 21 of the 1992 United Nations Conference on Environment and Development [YUN 1992, p. 672].

Concerning the use of nuclear power sources in outer space, the Subcommittee decided that revision of the Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space, called for by the Principles no later than two years after their adoption by General Assembly resolution 47/68 [YUN 1992, p. 116], was currently not warranted. Pending such revision, Member States should continue to be invited to report regularly to the Secretary-General regarding national and international research on the safety of space objects with nuclear power sources. Further studies should be conducted on the collision of such space objects with space debris. The Subcommittee endorsed the recommendation of its working group to adopt a four-year work plan for developing a framework for safety assurance processes and standards for nuclear power sources in outer space.

On the question of space debris, the Subcommittee agreed on the need for international cooperation to expand affordable strategies to minimize the potential impact of space debris on space missions. It noted the Secretariat's annual report [A/AC.105/681] on steps taken by space agencies to reduce the growth or damage potential of space debris and to encourage acceptance by the international community to do likewise on a voluntary basis. It also noted the various programmes by Member States and organizations on the acquisition and understanding of data on the characteristics of the space debris environment and on measuring, modelling and mitigating the orbital debris environment.

The Subcommittee, in its discussion of national and international programmes in space transportation systems, including expendable launchers, reusable space shuttles and space stations, noted developments in the commercial launch industry and progress achieved in the various programmes, in operation or being planned, by Brazil, China, India, Japan, the Russian Federation, Spain, Ukraine, the United Kingdom and the United States and by ESA. It stressed the importance of international cooperation in space transportation to provide all countries with access to the benefits of space science and technology.

The Committee on Outer Space noted with concern the emerging commercial activity of burials of cremated remains in space, currently provided by a commercial company that had at least two scheduled flights a year. The claim that such activity had no adverse impact on the space environment had not been scientifically proved.

Regarding the geostationary orbit, the Subcommittee reviewed national and international cooperative programmes in satellite communications, including progress in the technology to make such communications more accessible and affordable and to increase the communications capacity of the geostationary orbit and the electromagnetic spectrum. The Subcommittee noted that, by gradually introducing low- and medium-orbit mobile communication systems, new orbital resources were being exploited, thus reducing demand on geostationary orbital slots. It further noted the implementation by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) of the regulations adopted by the 1997 World Radiocommunication Conference [YUN 1997, p. 576], in particular the reduction of the regulatory period for bringing a proposed satellite network into use from six years to five, which would lead to a more efficient and equitable use of the geostationary orbital positions and frequencies.

The Subcommittee noted the latest developments relating to life sciences, including space medicine: a diagnostic facility for cardiovascular research in space, a new generation of medical measuring equipment, and biotechnical experiments consisting of growing many types of protein crystals under microgravity conditions in order to develop new drugs for the control of infectious diseases. It also noted the progress made through international cooperation in the International Geosphere-Biosphere (Global Change)

Programme, and discussed matters relating to planetary exploration and astronomy.

Legal Subcommittee

The Legal Subcommittee, at its thirty-seventh session (Vienna, 23-31 March) [A/AC.105/698], had on its agenda the question of the review and possible revision of the 1992 Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space [YUN 1992, p. 116]. The Legal Subcommittee concurred with the view of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee (see above) that revision of the Principles was not necessary at the current stage. It therefore recommended suspending its working group on the item for two years, pending the results of deliberations in the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee.

The Legal Subcommittee, through its working group, continued to exchange views on the definition and delimitation of outer space and the character and utilization of the geostationary orbit, including ways to ensure its rational and equitable use without prejudice to ITU's role. Five working papers on the subject, submitted at previous sessions and at the current one, were referred to in the course of discussions.

The Subcommittee began its review of the status of the five international legal instruments governing outer space: the 1966 Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2222(XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 41]; the 1967 Agreement on the Rescue of Astronauts, the Return of Astronauts and the Return of Objects Launched into Outer Space, adopted in resolution 2345(XXII) [YUN 1967, p. 33]; the 1971 Convention on International Liability for Damage Caused by Space Objects, contained in resolution 2777(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 52]; the 1974 Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, contained in resolution 3235(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 63]; and the 1979 Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, contained in resolution 34/68 [YUN 1979, p. ill]. The Subcommittee agreed that the Secretariat should be asked to prepare a list of international agreements and other legal documents relevant to space-related activities as a working document for Member States, including those relating to environmental law relevant to space-related activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth

Effects of atomic radiation

The United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its forty-seventh session in Vienna from 25 to 29 May [A/53/46]. The Committee, responding to General Assembly resolution 52/55 [YUN 1997, p. 582], presented its views on its role and functions, as well as on its programme and working methods. It stated that, in accordance with its mandate, outlined in Assembly resolution 913(X) [YUN 1955, p. 21] and renewed annually, it submitted annual progress reports on its work to the Assembly and, at intervals of several years, comprehensive scientific reports of its findings, which represented definitive scientific assessments, based on the Committee's independent review and evaluation, of the levels of exposures and the effects of radiation. It collaborated closely with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the World Health Organization (WHO) in the development of its reports and when particular issues needed to be addressed.

The Committee was currently the primary international scientific body reviewing the exposure of the world's population to all sources of radiation and assessing the health risks of exposure to ionizing radiation, with its estimates being used by major international bodies. Most national authorities cited the Committee as the definitive authority in its field, giving a balanced view on exposure levels and related health effects. In addition, its documents served to guide the direction of research in radiological protection.

The Committee reported that a major component of its 2000 report would be a review of all the information available on the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear reactor accident [YUN 1986, p. 584] in the light of questions on the resultant local and regional exposures and the reported high incidence of thyroid cancer in children. It would continue to assess data on cancer incidence and mortality and to validate the risk estimates derived with those from studies of medically or occupationally exposed groups. The Committee was examining all available data to establish the degree of hereditary risk and was studying mechanisms of cellular change that determined heritable genetic defects by reviewing developments from experiments applying the techniques of molecular biology. Other tasks included the compilation of information to assess the levels of exposure from radon gas and the associated risks; continuing evaluation of the transfer of radionuclides through the environment to the world population; and commenting on the global trend in diagnostic X-ray examinations and the use of radio-pharmaceuticals, assessing global practices in radiotherapy and drawing attention to accidents from medical sources.

The Committee recommended that its current role and functions, including reporting arrangements, be maintained by the Assembly. That recommendation was supported by IAEA and WHO, in their reports of 9 October [A/53/478] and 12 October [A/53/483], respectively, prepared in response to the Assembly's request in resolution 52/55 for their views on the Committee's functions and role. Were the Assembly to consider alternative arrangements, however, IAEA proposed attaching the Committee to IAEA, since it benefited most from the Committee's expertise and contributions. WHO suggested that other institutional arrangements be considered, such as a joint WHO/IAEA scientific committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 78], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/53/595], adopted resolution 53/44 without vote [agenda item 81].

Effects of atomic radiation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 913(X) of 3 December 1955, by which it established the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, and its subsequent resolutions on the subject, including resolution 52/55 of 10 December 1997, in which, inter alia, it requested the Scientific Committee to continue its work,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation,

Reaffirming the desirability of the Scientific Committee continuing its work,

Concerned about the potentially harmful effects on present and future generations resulting from the levels of radiation to which mankind and the environment are exposed,

Noting the views expressed by Member States at its fifty-third session with regard to the work of the Scientific Committee,

Also noting the provisions contained in section XII, paragraph 38, of the annex to its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system,

Recalling its invitation to the International Atomic Energy Agency and the World Health Organization, in its resolution 52/55, to consider the functions and role of the Scientific Committee and to submit a recommendation to the General Assembly at its fifty-third session,

Taking note of the recommendation of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the World Health Organization that the General Assembly maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee, including the present reporting arrangements,

Conscious of the continuing need to examine and compile information about atomic and ionizing radiation and to analyse its effects on mankind and the environment,

1. Commends the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation for the valuable contribution it has been making in the course of the past forty-three years, since its inception, to wider knowledge and understanding of the levels, effects and risks of atomic radiation, and for fulfilling its original mandate with scientific authority and independence of judgement;

2. Decides to maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee, including the present reporting arrangements;

3. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue its work, including its important activities to increase knowledge of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation from all sources;

4. Endorses the intentions and plans of the Scientific Committee for its future activities of scientific review and assessment on behalf of the General Assembly;

5. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue at its next session the review of the important problems in the field of radiation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

6. Requests the United Nations Environment Programme to continue providing support for the effective conduct of the work of the Scientific Committee and for the dissemination of its findings to the General Assembly, the scientific community and the public;

7. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance rendered to the Scientific Committee by Member States, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and non-governmental organizations, and invites them to increase their cooperation in this field;

8. Welcomes, in this context, the readiness of Member States to provide the Scientific Committee with relevant information on the effects of atomic radiation in affected areas, and invites the Scientific Committee to analyse and give due consideration to such information, particularly in the light of its own findings;

9. Invites Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations concerned to provide further relevant data about doses, effects and risks from various sources of radiation, which would greatly help in the preparation of future reports of the Scientific Committee to the General Assembly.

Millennium Assembly

In a 31 March note [A/52/850], the Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392], elaborated on the proposal, contained in his 1997 report on a programme for UN reform [ibid., p. 1390], for a Millennium Assembly and a Millennium Forum in the year 2000.

The Secretary-General recommended that the fifty-fifth (2000) session of the Assembly be designated the Millennium Assembly and that a high-level segment, which could be called the Millennium Summit, be devoted to in-depth consideration of the theme "The United Nations in the twenty-first century". Integration of the Summit into the regular session of the Assembly would facilitate the participation of heads of State and Government while maximizing continuity in the Assembly's normal work programme. The Summit would be asked to provide guidance to the Organization for meeting the challenges of the new century. To facilitate focused discussions and concrete decisions at the Summit, the Secretary-General would prepare a report on the Millennium Assembly's theme, drawing on three main sources: a series of informal events, to be organized in cooperation with Member States and convened in various regional centres to serve as a source of innovative ideas regarding specific objectives that the United Nations should strive to achieve in the five core areas of its work (peace and security, economic and social affairs, development cooperation, humanitarian affairs and human rights); specialized events within the United Nations, taking stock of progress achieved in the wake of world conferences, whose results would be considered comprehensively and their implications for the overall structure and functioning of the UN system spelled out systematically; and the results of ACC consultations on how to take maximum advantage of existing complementarities and synergies within the system.

The Secretary-General also recommended that the Millennium Assembly assess, in the light of the process of consultations in ACC, the extent to which a clearer division of labour within the system was emerging through a sharpening of the mandates, competencies and comparative advantages of its component parts to help determine whether the current constitutional framework governing the agencies and their relationships with the United Nations was sufficiently flexible to adapt and respond to the challenges ahead. He suggested that the Millennium Assembly might wish to establish a Special Commission to examine that constitutional framework.

The Secretary-General also proposed that NGOs and other civil society actors organize a Millennium Forum, perhaps immediately preceding the Millennium Assembly. As consultations for that purpose had begun, it might be desirable to establish liaison mechanisms with those preparatory processes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 May, the General Assembly, by decision 52/477 D, welcomed the proposal of the Secretary-General to designate its fifty-fifth session in the year 2000 as the Millennium Assembly and decided to continue consideration of his March note at its fifty-third (1998) session.

On 17 December [meeting 92], the Assembly adopted resolution 53/202 [draft: A/53/L.73] without vote [agenda item 30].

The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/12 B of 19 December 1997 and decision 52/477 D of 6 May 1998,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on renewing the United Nations: a programme for reform, and the note by the Secretary-General on a Millennium Assembly, the United Nations system (Special Commission) and a Millennium Forum,

Convinced that the year 2000 constitutes a unique and symbolically compelling moment to articulate and affirm an animating vision for the United Nations in the new era,

Also convinced that a Millennium Assembly would provide an opportunity to strengthen the role of the United Nations in meeting the challenges of the twenty-first century,

1. Decides to designate the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations";

2. Also decides to convene, as an integral part of the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations, a Millennium Summit of the United Nations for a limited number of days on dates to be decided by the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-third session;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States, members of the specialized agencies and observers and to propose, after a process of inter-governmental consultation, a number of forward-looking and widely relevant topics that could help to focus the Millennium Summit within the context of an overall theme, for consideration by the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-third session;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to consult with non-governmental organizations, as appropriate, before the submission of his proposals;

5. Decides to continue its consideration of the item entitled "United Nations reform: measures and proposals", and agrees that a decision on the intergovernmental preparatory process, in particular its format and terms of reference, ensuring the full and effective participation of all Member States, members of the specialized agencies and observers in preparing for the Millennium Assembly, should be taken at the earliest opportunity by the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-third session;

6. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-fourth session a sub-item entitled "The Millennium Assembly of the United Nations" under the item entitled "United Nations reform: measures and proposals".

Chapter I

Promotion of human rights

In 1998, the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was commemorated under the theme "All human rights for all". Activities focused on enhancing the implementation of human rights and preventing violations, reaching people with the human rights message and strengthening partnerships for human rights within and outside the UN system. The five-year review of the implementation of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action also took place.

Human rights instruments and their monitoring bodies continued to promote civil and political rights and economic, social and cultural rights, and to address racial discrimination, discrimination against women, the protection of children, and torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

In November, the General Assembly proclaimed the period 2001-2010 as the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-violence for the Children of the World. In December, it adopted the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

UN machinery

Commission on Human Rights

The Commission on Human Rights held its fifty-fourth session in Geneva from 16 March to 24 April [E/1998/23], during which it adopted 84 resolutions and 12 decisions. The Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption three draft resolutions and 42 draft decisions.

On 17 March [ibid. (dec. 1998/101)], the Commission invited special representatives, special rapporteurs, chairmen/rapporteurs of various working groups and experts to participate in the discussion of their reports. On 24 April [dec. 1998/112], it appointed the Bureau to undertake a review of its mechanisms with a view to enhancing their effectiveness.

A note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/1998/109] contained statistical data regarding the Commission's 1997 session, which included information on the participants, meeting and parallel activities, time use, interventions and time distribution, documentation, costs and voting. The note was intended to assist the organization and rationalization of the Commission's work at its 1998 session.

Organization of work in 1999

On 22 April [dec. 1998/111], the Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council authorize 30 fully serviced additional meetings, to be utilized only if necessary, for the Commission's 1999 session, and requested its Chairman to make every effort to organize the work of the session within the times normally allotted. The Council, by decision 1998/281 of 30 July, authorized the additional meetings and approved the Commission's request to its Chairman.

Also on 22 April [dec. 1998/110], the Commission recommended that its fifty-fifth session take place from 15 March to 23 April 1999. By decision 1998/280 of 30 July, the Council approved that recommendation but, by decision 1998/295 of 31 July, it revised the dates to 22 March to 30 April.

On 24 April [res. 1998/84], the Commission adopted the Chairman's proposal to restructure its agenda, which was annexed to the resolution.

Thematic procedures

Pursuant to a 1997 Commission request [YUN 1997, p. 588], the Secretariat issued, in February, a note [E/CN.4/1998/46] containing documentary references to the conclusions and recommendations of thematic special rapporteurs and working groups. The note stated that, regarding the Commission's request that the Secretary-General consider holding further periodic meetings of all the thematic special rapporteurs and chairmen of working groups to exchange views, cooperate more closely and make recommendations, a meeting was held in 1997, the report of which [E/CN.4/1998/45] was considered by the Commission in 1998.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/74], the Commission encouraged Governments to cooperate more closely with it through the thematic procedures by responding without undue delay to requests for information made through the thematic procedures; considering inviting thematic special rapporteurs, representatives, experts and working groups to visit their countries; and considering follow-up visits with a view to the effective implementation of recommendations by the thematic procedure concerned. Non-governmental organizations (NGOs) were invited to continue to cooperate with thematic procedures. The Commission asked the thematic special rapporteurs and working groups to make recommendations to prevent human rights violations; follow progress made by Governments; continue close cooperation with relevant treaty bodies and country rapporteurs; include in their reports information provided by Governments on follow-up action, as well as their own observations thereon; and include in their reports gender-disaggregated data and address human rights violations that were directed against women, or to which women were particularly vulnerable. They were also requested to include in their reports comments on problems of responsiveness, the result of analyses, and suggestions as to areas where Governments might request assistance through the programme of advisory services administered by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. The Secretary-General was asked to take note of the recommendations of the meetings of the special rapporteurs, representatives, experts and chairmen of working groups, and to convene further meetings to enable them to cooperate and coordinate more closely and make recommendations. He was also asked to issue annually their conclusions and recommendations; to present annually a list of persons constituting the thematic and country procedures; and to ensure the availability of resources to implement all thematic mandates. The Commission's request for resources was approved by the Economic and Social Council by decision 1998/270 of 30 July.

Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities

1998 session

The Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, at its fiftieth session (Geneva, 3-28 August) [E/CN.4/1999/4], adopted 30 resolutions and 15 decisions, and recommended one draft resolution and eight draft decisions for adoption by the Commission.

The Subcommission adopted decisions on voting by secret ballot whenever a vote was requested on proposals pertaining to human rights violations in countries [ibid. (dec. 1998/102)] and on the composition of its pre-session working groups [dec. 1998/109].

In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1986/35 [YUN 1986, p. 731], the Commission elected by secret ballot 13 members (half of the membership) of the Subcommission and their corresponding alternates, if any, for a four-year period [E/CN.4/1998/108 & Add.1,2].

Review of Subcommission work

Report of Subcommission Chairman. The Commission on Human Rights had before it a report [E/CN.4/1998/88], submitted in response to its 1997 request [YUN 1997, p. 588] and prepared by the Subcommission's 1997 Chairman, Jose Bengoa (Chile), describing progress made to reform and improve the Subcommission's methods of work.

Commission action. On 17 April [E/1998/23 res. 1998/28], the Commission, welcoming further steps taken by the Subcommission to reform and improve its methods of work, requested the Subcommission to improve its efficiency taking into account the views of Member States. It called on the Subcommission to discuss at its 1998 session its working methods and to prepare recommendations thereon for consideration by the Commission; authorized the Subcommission to organize its four-week session so that it held no more than 30 public meetings; decided that, for the balance of the session, the Subcommission should meet in private session to consider the implementation of the present resolution; and asked the Subcommission to report on the results of that method of organization. The Chairman of the Commission was invited to address the Subcommission about the debate under the item. The Secretary-General was asked to ensure that Subcommission documents were available in all UN official languages prior to each session, and, in responding to requests from the Subcommission to solicit information from Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to agree to the requests only after they were approved by the Commission. The Subcommission Chairman was asked to report in 1999.

Subcommission consideration. The Subcommission had before it a June note by the Secretariat on the organization of its work [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/28], which described aspects of the Commission's 1998 agenda with a view to avoiding duplication of work between the two bodies, and an August paper that addressed enhancing the effectiveness of the Subcommission [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/38].

The Subcommission also considered a revised working paper on rules of procedure, guidelines, decisions and practices applicable to the Subcommission [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/3], prepared by Ribot Hatano (Japan), subsequent to the submission of a 1997 working paper [YUN 1997, p. 588]. On 26 August [dec. 1998/108], the Subcommission asked him to prepare a further revision for consideration in 1999. In the light of the Commission's decision [dec. 1998/112] to review its mechanisms, the Subcommission Chairman submitted an August note on enhancing the effectiveness of the Subcommission [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/38].

Areas of Subcommission work

Note by Secretary-General. In a June note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/20], the Secretary-General reviewed developments between 1 June 1997 and 1 June 1998 in areas with which the Subcommission had been concerned. They related to the status and monitoring bodies of the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (xx)], the 1966 International Covenants on Human Rights [YUN 1966, pp. 419 & 423, GA res. 2200 A (xxi)], the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46], the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] and the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594, GA res. 45/158].

ILO report. In July, the International Labour Organization (ILO) submitted a memorandum [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/21] concerning ratifications of ILO conventions relating to the concerns of the Subcommission. The conventions dealt with forced labour, discrimination, freedom of association, migrant workers, indigenous and tribal peoples, minimum age and vocational rehabilitation. ILO activities were described regarding the situation of Arab workers of the occupied Arab territories, women workers, migrant workers, indigenous and tribal peoples and child labour.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

Reports of High Commissioner. In a February report [E/CN.4/1998/122], the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Mary Robinson (Ireland), summarized her activities since taking office in September 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 589]. She had studied the human rights programme and met with heads of State or Government, Foreign Ministers and other senior government officials, permanent representatives, delegates, members of commissions and committees, experts, NGOs and individuals, as well as with heads of UN departments and programmes. She had visited field offices in Rwanda and Cambodia and had paid official visits to other countries in Africa, Asia and Europe.

The High Commissioner stated that 1998 was Human Rights Year, during which the proclamation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights would be commemorated (see below, under "Human rights instruments"). The activities for the Year focused on enhancing the implementation of human rights and preventing violations, reaching people everywhere with the human rights message, especially at the community or grass-roots level, and strengthening partnerships for human rights within and outside the UN system. Information kits were being published suggesting activities to commemorate the Declaration, of which the first three dealt with the commemoration in general, with activities relating to women's human rights and with human rights education. A special project, entitled "Assisting Communities Together", which was supported by voluntary funds, had been developed to provide small grants to grass-roots and local organizations to carry out practical educational, information or community-building activities in connection with the Declaration.

The five-year implementation review of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action [YUN 1993, p. 908] adopted at the World Conference on Human Rights would take place during the year (see below, under "Other activities"), wherein Governments, the various sectors of the UN system and NGOs would review and report to the General Assembly on progress made in implementing the Vienna Declaration.

According to the High Commissioner, although respect for human rights had increased significantly in many countries, the 50-year investment in human rights and the large sums of development aid had not had the impact that was hoped for. Large-scale massacres, genocide, widespread discrimination based on gender, ethnicity and religion and other human rights violations continued to be reported. The increase in the number of States and globalization had added to the problems of drug trafficking and trafficking in women and the girl child.

The High Commissioner discussed the human rights aspects of the 1998-2001 medium-term plan for the Organization, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 51/219 [YUN 1996, p. 1306], which were aimed at greater protection at the national level, achieved by improving international cooperation, and adapting UN machinery to human rights protection.

The Secretary-General's reform proposals set as a major task for the United Nations the enhancement of its human rights programme and its full integration into the broad range of the Organization's activities. He also implemented the merging of the Office of the High Commissioner and the Centre for Human Rights into a single office, as the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). On 1 February, OHCHR became operational, forming a solid basis for increased efficiency, transparency and accountability.

The High Commissioner discussed the promotion and protection of human rights, including the right to development; economic, social and cultural rights and the elimination of poverty; strengthening national protection of human rights; technical cooperation; equality, tolerance, racism and racial discrimination; gender and the human rights of women; protecting vulnerable groups—indigenous populations, minorities, migrant workers and children; human rights education; responding to human rights violations; field activities; the importance of civil society and NGOs; and promotion and protection of human rights in Africa. She also discussed human rights in conflict prevention, peacemaking and post-conflict society building.

In response to Commission resolution 1997/76 [YUN 1997, p. 591], the High Commissioner, in a March report [E/CN.4/1998/527/Add.I], stated that the Secretary-General in his reform proposals had stressed the importance of human rights as an integral part of the promotion of peace and security, economic prosperity and social equity. Thus, the High Commissioner was a member of the four relevant Executive Committees—on Peace and Security, Economic and Social Affairs, Development Cooperation and Humanitarian Affairs—and of the Senior Management Group which advised the Secretary-General on important management and policy issues. The High Commissioner also took part in the relevant meetings of the Administrative Committee on Coordination. In addition, the Secretary-General had asked her to participate in every stage of the Organization's activities in relation to actual or potential conflicts or post-conflict situations that had a human rights dimension. The High Commissioner was also asked to undertake an analysis of the technical assistance provided by UN entities in areas relating to human rights and to formulate proposals for improving complementarity of action. One of the objectives of the reform was to enable OHCHR to provide advice for the design of technical assistance projects and to participate in needs assessment missions. The effectiveness of field operations conducted by OHCHR was currently the subject of a review and evaluation process. Information on voluntary contributions and their allocation were annexed to the report.

In a July report [E/1998/84], the High Commissioner provided an overview of developments since the submission of her February report. She described activities to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration (see below, under "Human rights instruments") and highlights of the 1998 session of the Commission, which held a special interactive dialogue on gender and the human rights of women (see next chapter). She discussed technical cooperation activities (see below, under "Other activities") and mainstreaming human rights throughout the UN system. By decision 1998/294 of 31 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's report.

In a later report to the General Assembly [A/53/36], the High Commissioner, while discussing the challenge of protecting human rights, stated that over the past 12 months large-scale violations of economic, social and cultural rights had escalated to new heights. The United Nations had implemented a rights-based approach to development which helped States and international agencies redirect their thinking and thus begin to impact favourably on the enjoyment of human rights.

The defining characteristic of the human rights programme was outreach—carrying out human rights activities in the places where people lived—which formed the focus of the human rights technical cooperation programme. In 1998, there were more human rights technical assistance personnel in the field than ever before.

Regarding drug trafficking, OHCHR was seeking to play a catalytic role in order to bring together the ongoing activities of others and to give a higher moral profile to the fight against trafficking.

The High Commissioner's activities in 1998 included a visit to China in September, where she discussed with the authorities a broad range of human rights issues. A memorandum of intent for the development of technical cooperation activities between OHCHR and the Government was signed. Meetings were organized in Tibet with representatives of civil society, as well as local government and religious authorities and groups, and in Shanghai with representatives of the local government and of civil society.

The High Commissioner discussed the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration and the review of the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (see below, under "Human rights instruments" and "Other activities", respectively).

Human rights was an issue that cut across the work of the United Nations and was increasingly integrated in the work of the UN system. In particular, a memorandum of understanding signed by OHCHR and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) on 4 March contained specific and comprehensive areas of close cooperation between OHCHR and UNDP at all levels of their respective activities: the right to development; international human rights treaties; mechanisms and procedures of the Commission on Human Rights; programme development, technical cooperation and advisory services; international human rights decades; country-level and country mission support; and briefings, training and other support. A joint OHCHR/UNDP task force on the implementation of the memorandum had been set up and was working on its concrete and step-by-step implementation. A project document on human rights strengthening was under discussion.

The High Commissioner summarized activities taken by OHCHR related to the right to development, combating trafficking in women and children, the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (see next chapter) and technical cooperation, national institutions and education (see below).

In view of the increased workload of the human rights secretariat and the expansion of existing forms of action, the High Commissioner called on Member States to put the activities of the human rights programme on a sound financial basis through the UN regular budget.

The Assembly, by decision 53/433 of 9 December, took note of the High Commissioner's report.

Commission action. On 24 April [res. 1998/83], the Commission on Human Rights, in view of the measures it had taken regarding the establishment or expansion of OHCHR mandates, expressed concern that the current UN regular budget resources would not permit the High Commissioner to fulfil the full range of established and new mandates. Therefore, it appealed to the Secretary General, the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly to secure for OHCHR and for other relevant components of the Organization regular budget resources for the current and future bienniums sufficient to permit the effective fulfilment of the responsibilities and mandates established by Member States and commensurate with the importance assigned by the UN Charter to the promotion and protection of human rights. The Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's appeal in decision 1998/275 of 30 July.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/53/625/Add.5], adopted resolution 53/167 without vote [agenda item 110 (e)].

Question of resources for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the human rights activities of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/83 of 24 April 1998 on the question of resources for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the human rights activities of the United Nations, in which the Commission expressed its concern that, with the resources currently available from the United Nations regular budget, the High Commissioner would not be in a position to fulfil the full range of established and new mandates, and therefore appealed to the Secretary-General, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly to take all necessary steps, without delay, to secure for the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant components of the Organization regular budget resources for the current and future bienniums that would be sufficient to permit the effective fulfilment of the responsibilities and mandates established by Member States and commensurate with the importance assigned in the Charter of the United Nations to the promotion and protection of human rights,

Taking note also of Economic and Social Council decision 1998/275 of 30 July 1998, in which the Council, taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/83, approved the appeal made by the Commission to the Council, the Secretary-General and the General Assembly,

Taking note further of other relevant resolutions and decisions of the Commission on Human Rights, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly containing requests and proposals concerning the regular budget for the human rights programme,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary steps, without delay, to follow up Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/83 and Economic and Social Council decision 1998/275, in particular in the preparation of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001, without diverting resources from United Nations development programmes and activities;

2. Decides to continue its consideration of this question at its fifty-fourth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Composition of staff

Report of High Commissioner. In response to Commission on Human Rights resolution

1997/76 [YUN 1997, p. 591], the High Commissioner submitted a March report [E/CN.4/1998/52] on OHCHR staff members, reflecting grade, nationality and gender, as at 1 February 1998.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/46], by a roll-call vote of 36 to 16, with 1 abstention, the Commission requested the Secretary-General to pay particular attention to the recruitment of personnel from developing countries for the existing vacancies and other additional OHCHR posts so as to ensure equitable geographical distribution, giving priority to high-level and Professional posts and the recruitment of women. It asked the High Commissioner to report in 1999.

Strengthening UN action

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/149 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that among the purposes of the United Nations are those of developing friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and taking other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace, as well as achieving international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Desirous of achieving further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Considering that such international cooperation should be based on the principles embodied in international law, especially the Charter of the United Nations, as well as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other relevant instruments,

Deeply convinced that United Nations action in this field should be based not only on a profound understanding of the broad range of problems existing in all societies but also on full respect for the political, economic and social realities of each of them, in strict compliance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and for the basic purpose of promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through international cooperation,

Recalling its previous resolutions in this regard,

Reaffirming the importance of ensuring the universality, objectivity and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues, as affirmed in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Affirming the importance of the objectivity, independence and discretion of the special rapporteurs and representatives on thematic issues and countries, as well as of the members of the working groups, in carrying out their mandates,

Underlining the obligation that Governments have to promote and protect human rights and to carry out the responsibilities that they have undertaken under international law, especially the Charter, as well as various international instruments in the field of human rights,

1. Reiterates that, by virtue of the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, all peoples have the right freely to determine, without external interference, their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect that right within the provisions of the Charter, including respect for territorial integrity;

2. Reaffirms that it is a purpose of the United Nations and the task of all Member States, in cooperation with the Organization, to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and to remain vigilant with regard to violations of human rights wherever they occur;

3. Calls upon all Member States to base their activities for the protection and promotion of human rights, including the development of further international cooperation in this field, on the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and other relevant international instruments and to refrain from activities that are inconsistent with that international framework;

4. Considers that international cooperation in this field should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and to the strengthening of international peace and security;

5. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection, and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, as a legitimate concern of the world community, should be guided by the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity and should not be used for political ends;

6. Requests all human rights bodies within the United Nations system, as well as the special rapporteurs and representatives, independent experts and working groups, to take duly into account the contents of the present resolution in carrying out their mandates;

7. Expresses its conviction that an unbiased and fair approach to human rights issues contributes to the promotion of international cooperation as well as to the effective promotion, protection and realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Stresses, in this context, the continuing need for impartial and objective information on the political, economic and social situations and events of all countries;

9. Invites Member States to consider adopting, as appropriate, within the framework of their respective legal systems and in accordance with their obligations under international law, especially the Charter, and international human rights instruments, the measures that they may deem appropriate to achieve further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

10. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to take duly into account the present resolution and to consider further proposals for the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to consult Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations on ways and means for the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights, including the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity, and to submit a comprehensive report on this issue to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

12. Decides to consider this matter at its fifty-fourth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Promotion of dialogue on human rights issues

Commission action. On 24 April [E/1998/23 des. 1998/81)], the Commission on Human Rights called on States, intergovernmental organizations and specialized agencies to continue to carry out constructive dialogue and consultations to enhance the understanding and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encouraged NGOs to contribute to the endeavour. States and relevant UN human rights mechanisms and procedures were invited to pay continued attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring human rights promotion and protection.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [E/CN.4/1999/4 (res. 1998/28)], the Subcommission, reiterating its commitment to international cooperation in the field of human rights, invited governmental and non-governmental observers of the Subcommission to carry out constructive dialogue and consultations on human rights issues and to facilitate the formulation and adoption of resolutions and decisions. It endorsed a cooperative approach in search of common understanding of divergent views, particularly in the discussion of its effectiveness.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], as amended [A/53/L.70], adopted resolution 53/154 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Reaffirming the importance of ensuring the universality, objectivity and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues, and underlining the importance of the promotion of dialogue on human rights issues,

ANNEX

Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming also the importance of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights as basic elements of international efforts to promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms and the importance of other human rights instruments adopted within the United Nations system, as well as those at the regional level,

Stressing that all members of the international community shall fulfil, jointly and separately, their solemn obligation to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction of any kind, including distinctions based on race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, and reaffirming the particular importance of achieving international cooperation to fulfil this obligation according to the Charter,

Acknowledging the important role of international cooperation for, and the valuable work of individuals, groups and associations in contributing to, the effective elimination of all violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms of peoples and individuals, including in relation to mass, flagrant or systematic violations such as those resulting from apartheid, all forms of racial discrimination, colonialism, foreign domination or occupation, aggression or threats to national sovereignty, national unity or territorial integrity and from the refusal to recognize the right of peoples to self-determination and the right of every people to exercise full sovereignty over its wealth and natural resources,

Recognizing the relationship between international peace and security and the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and mindful that the absence of international peace and security does not excuse non-compliance,

Reiterating that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and should be promoted and implemented in a fair and equitable manner, without prejudice to the implementation of each of those rights and freedoms,

Stressing that the prime responsibility and duty to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms lie with the State,

Human rights instruments

General aspects

In 1998, seven UN human rights instruments were in force that required monitoring of their implementation by expert bodies. The instruments and their treaty bodies were: the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (XX)] (Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination); the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights [YUN 1966, p. 423, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] (Human Rights Committee); the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [ibid., p. 419, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] (Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights); the 1973 International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid [YUN 1973, p. 103, GA res. 3068 (XXVIII)] (Group of Three, suspended in 1995) [YUN 1995, p. 693]; the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 895, GA res. 34/180] (Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women); the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46] (Committee against Torture); and the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] (Committee on the Rights of the Child).

Commission action. On 17 April [E/1998/23 (res. 1998/27)], the Commission on Human Rights, emphasizing the need to ensure financing and resources for human rights treaty bodies, asked the Secretary-General to provide adequate resources, administrative support and better access to technical expertise in respect of each treaty body. It encouraged the High Commissioner for Human Rights to prepare a draft plan of action to enhance the resources available to all treaty bodies. The Secretary-General and the chairmen of the treaty bodies were urged to reduce duplication of reporting required without impairing the quality of reporting. Welcoming the publication of the revised Manual on Human Rights Reporting [Sales No. E.GV.97.0.16], the Commission requested the High Commissioner to ensure its translation into all UN official languages by 31 December 2000. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to report in 2000 on measures taken to implement the present resolution and ensure financing, adequate staff and information resources for the effective operation of the human rights treaty bodies. On 30 July, by decision 1998/252, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's requests to the Secretary-General and its request to the High Commissioner.

The Secretary-General was asked to continue to solicit the views of Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and interested persons on the report of the independent expert on enhancing the long-term effectiveness of the UN human rights treaty system [YUN 1997, p. 593] and to submit a report thereon in 2000, including his own views on the legal, administrative and other implications of the report's recommendations.

The Commission welcomed a request of the persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies that the UN Division for the Advancement of Women should prepare a study, for use by the High Commissioner and the treaty bodies, analysing what each treaty body had done to incorporate gender perspectives in its work and suggesting what each could do to further incorporate gender perspectives.

Reports of Secretary-General. In a February report with a March addendum [E/CN.4/1998/85 & Corr.1 & Add.1], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Commission decision 1997/105 [YUN 1997, p. 593], summarized comments received, and gave his own views, on the report of the independent expert.

In May and September, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the reports of persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies on their ninth (Geneva, 25-27 February) [A/53/125] and tenth (Geneva, 14-18 September) [A/53/432] meetings, respectively, in response to Assembly resolution 52/118 [YUN 1997, p. 594].

In response to resolution 52/118 and Commission resolution 1998/27, the Secretary-General, in a September report to the tenth meeting of those persons [HRI/MC/1998/6], reviewed developments within the UN system to increase attention to the human rights of women and analysed the gender dimensions of human rights. Conceptual aspects of the protection and promotion of human rights from a gender perspective were also examined. In addition, the report summarized steps taken by human rights treaty bodies to increase gender aspects in their work. The report concluded that attention to the situation of women was being broadly achieved in areas such as discrimination in education or employment, or women's rights in marriage and the family. There was also growing attention to violence against women. However, there was not a clear acknowledgement or understanding that gender was an important dimension in defining the substantive nature of rights. There was also a need to clarify States parties' obligations to prevent and redress violations of women's rights by private persons and to strengthen the understanding of women's enjoyment of rights in the context and within the scope of particular treaties. The report made recommendations to the treaty bodies.

The Secretary-General in an October report [A/53/469] summarized measures taken to implement resolution 52/118, which dealt with the effective implementation of international instruments.

Reservations to human rights treaties

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Subcommission resolution 1997/41 [YUN 1997, p. 598], the Secretary-General, in a June report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/25], presented the views of the human rights treaty bodies on the preliminary conclusions of the International Law Commission on reservations to normative multilateral treaties, including human rights treaties [YUN 1997, p. 1353].

The Human Rights Committee discussed the preliminary conclusions and would formulate comments at a later stage. The other human rights treaty bodies drew attention to the emphasis attached in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action [YUN 1993, p. 908] to the importance of limiting the number and extent of reservations to human rights treaties, and welcomed the recognition in the text that treaty monitoring bodies had an important competence in relation to reservations. They considered, however, that the preliminary conclusions were unduly restrictive in other respects and did not accord sufficient attention to the fact that human rights treaties could not be placed on the same footing as other treaties with different characteristics. The chairmen believed that the capacity of a monitoring body to perform its function of determining the scope of the provisions of the relevant convention could not be performed effectively if it was precluded from exercising a similar function in relation to reservations.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [E/CNA/1994/4 (dec. 1998/113)], the Subcommission requested

Françoise Jane Hampson (United Kingdom) to prepare a working paper on reservations to human rights treaties for submission in 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.1], adopted resolution 53/138 without vote [agenda item 110 (a)].

Effective implementation of international instruments on human rights, including reporting obligations under international instruments on human rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/118 of 12 December 1997, as well as other relevant resolutions, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/27 of 17 April 1998,

Recalling also the relevant paragraphs of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Reaffirming that the full and effective implementation of United Nations human rights instruments is of major importance to the efforts of the Organization, pursuant to the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, to promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Considering that the effective functioning of the human rights treaty bodies established pursuant to United Nations human rights instruments is indispensable for the full and effective implementation of such instruments,

Conscious of the importance of coordination of the human rights promotion and protection activities of the United Nations bodies active in the field of human rights,

Recalling that the effectiveness of the human rights treaty bodies in encouraging the realization by States parties of their obligations under United Nations human rights instruments requires constructive dialogue, which should be based on the reporting process supplemented by information from all relevant sources and aimed at assisting States parties in identifying solutions to human rights problems,

Recalling also the initiatives taken by a number of human rights treaty bodies to elaborate early warning measures and urgent procedures, within their mandates, with a view to preventing the occurrence or recurrence of serious human rights violations,

Reaffirming its responsibility for the effective functioning of human rights treaty bodies, and reaffirming also the importance of:

(a) Promoting the effective functioning of the periodic reporting by States parties to those instruments,

(b) Securing sufficient financial, human and information resources to overcome the under-resourcing of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, which impedes the ability of the human rights treaty bodies to carry out their mandates effectively,

(c) Promoting greater efficiency and effectiveness through better coordination of the activities of the United Nations bodies active in the field of human rights, taking into account the need to avoid unnecessary duplication and overlapping of their mandates and tasks,

(d) Addressing questions of both reporting obligations and financial implications when elaborating any further instruments on human rights,

Concerned that the lack of adequate resources should not impede the effective functioning of the human rights treaty bodies, including in regard to their ability to work in the applicable working languages,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the effective implementation of international instruments on human rights, including reporting obligations under international instruments on human rights,

1. Welcomes the submission of the reports of the persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies on their ninth and tenth meetings, held at Geneva from 25 to 27 February and 14 to 18 September 1998, respectively, and takes note of their conclusions and recommendations;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to continue to solicit the views of Governments, United Nations bodies, the specialized agencies, non-governmental organizations and interested persons on the final report of the independent expert and to submit a further report thereon, including his own views on the legal, administrative and other implications of the recommendations made in the report, taking into account further developments;

(c) Also calls upon the Secretary-General to seek, in the next biennium, the resources within the United Nations regular budget necessary to give the human rights treaty bodies adequate administrative support and better access to technical expertise and relevant information without diverting resources from the development programmes and activities of the United Nations;

7. Takes note with appreciation of the revised plan of action to strengthen the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the plan of action to strengthen the implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, recalls the importance of administering those plans in accordance with established United Nations procedures, welcomes the information provided by the Secretary-General on the implementation of those plans, and requests him to include in his report prepared pursuant to the present resolution further information in this regard;

8. Notes with interest the work being done by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on a plan of action to enhance the resources available to all human rights treaty bodies;

10. Welcomes the continuing efforts by the human rights treaty bodies and the Secretary-General aimed at streamlining, rationalizing, rendering more transparent and otherwise improving reporting procedures, and urges the Secretary-General, the treaty bodies and the meetings of persons chairing the treaty bodies to continue to examine ways of reducing the duplication of reporting required under the different instruments, without impairing the quality of reporting, and of generally reducing the reporting burden on States parties;

11. Takes note with appreciation, in this regard, of the efforts of the persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies, at their ninth and tenth meetings, to propose appropriate reforms of the reporting system with a view to, inter alia, reducing the reporting burden on States parties while maintaining the quality of reporting, and encourages them to continue these efforts, including through the continued examination of the benefits of reports focused on a limited range of issues and of opportunities for harmonizing the general guidelines regarding the form and content of reports, the timing of consideration of reports and the methods of work of the treaty bodies;

12. Invites the Chairperson of the periodic meetings of the persons chairing the human rights treaty bodies to submit the reports of the meetings to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session;

nation of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which is being prepared with a view to identifying duplication of reporting required under those instruments;

15. Urges States parties to contribute, individually and through meetings of States parties, to identifying and implementing ways of further streamlining, rationalizing, avoiding duplication in and otherwise improving reporting procedures;

16. Welcomes the publication of the revised Manual on Human Rights Reporting;

17. Underlines the importance of providing technical assistance to a State, upon its request, in the process of ratifying human rights instruments and in the preparation of its initial reports;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to compile in a single volume all the general guidelines regarding the form and content of reports to be submitted by States parties that have been issued by the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Committee on the Rights of the Child and the Committee against Torture;

19. Reiterates its concern about the increasing backlog of reports on the implementation by States parties of certain United Nations instruments on human rights and about delays in consideration of reports by the treaty bodies;

20. Also reiterates its concern about the large number of overdue reports under the United Nations instruments on human rights, and again urges States parties to make every effort to meet their reporting obligations;

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Subcommission action. On 26 August [dec. 1998/115], the Subcommission requested Vladimir Kartashkin (Russian Federation) to prepare a working paper on ways in which it could examine the observance of the human rights and fundamental freedoms contained in the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535], by States which were not parties to the human rights conventions for submission in 1999. It decided to add an annual sub-item to its agenda "Encouragement of universal acceptance of human rights instruments and observance of the human rights and fundamental freedoms contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by States which are not parties to United Nations human rights conventions".

Fiftieth anniversary

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/56], the Commission on Human Rights, expressing concern that human rights and fundamental freedoms were not respected and continued to be violated, declared its commitment to the fulfilment of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

On the same date [res. 1998/33], the Commission, by a vote of 52 to 1, stressing the importance of the realization of economic, social and cultural rights in the context of the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration, welcomed reports of the High Commissioner on economic, social and cultural rights; the relevant activities of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations; and the work carried out in follow-up to relevant UN conferences. (For other aspects of the Commission's resolution, see below, under "Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights" and next chapter.)

Subcommission consideration. On 26 August, the Subcommission held a special meeting to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration.

Report of High Commissioner. In a July report [E/1998/84], the High Commissioner for Human Rights stated that the motto of the fiftieth anniversary, "All human rights for all", not only reinforced the vision of the Declaration, but also highlighted the need for a reinvigorated commitment to working for a better balance between the protection and promotion of the whole range of human rights—civil, political, economic, social and cultural—and advancing the right to development. On 16 March, the High Commissioner organized, in cooperation with UN agencies and programmes, a forum moderated by the Secretary-General entitled "Dialogue on Mainstreaming Human Rights in the United Nations", which focused on steps taken, and those envisaged, to place human rights on the agenda of the United Nations system-wide.

To disseminate the message of the Declaration, OHCHR had implemented an education campaign in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and the Department of Public Information (DPI). Special publications, posters and information kits were distributed. A major public information project, carried out with the assistance of the International Telecommunication Union, made accessible on the OHCHR web site (www.unhchr.ch) language versions of the Declaration. The web site also featured a comprehensive survey of fiftieth anniversary activities carried out by Governments, UN agencies and programmes, and civil society.

Report of Secretary-General. In a report describing activities under the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights (see below, under "Other activities") [E/CN.4/1999/86], the Secretary-General stated that OHCHR activities related to the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration included the publication and distribution of a series of basic information kits in English, French and Spanish to agencies, NGOs, national institutions and individuals; exhibitions and human rights observances, including a video link with New York to broadcast live the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary by the General Assembly; and lessons to the public by OHCHR staff on the Declaration. DPI held an interactive event involving students and teachers; designed and displayed a photographic exhibit; held workshops for teachers; and reissued the Declaration with a parallel read-easy version and classroom exercises. The annual DPI/NGO conference (New York, 14-16 September) focused on the Declaration's impact on societies around the world.

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 2217 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 457], six human rights prizes were awarded [A/53/PV.86].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 and 11 December, the General Assembly held plenary sessions devoted to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights [A/53/PV.86-90].

On 10 December [meeting 86], it adopted resolution 53/168 [draft: A/53/L.67] without vote [agenda item 46 (a)].

Fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Charter of the United Nations reaffirms the faith of the United Nations in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small,

Recognizing the Universal Declaration of Human Rights as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations as well as the source of inspiration and a basis of subsequent progress in the field of human rights,

Concerned that human rights and fundamental freedoms are not fully and universally respected and continue to be violated in all parts of the world, and that people still suffer misery and are deprived of the full enjoyment of their civil, cultural, economic, political and social rights and that some peoples still lack the full enjoyment of their right of self-determination,

Stressing the necessity for further national efforts as well as enhanced international cooperation, with a view to fully realizing all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the need to promote greater awareness of the rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in other international human rights instruments,

Reaffirming that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated, and that the international community must treat them globally in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing and with the same emphasis,

Reaffirming also the need to ensure full observance of the human rights of women and the girl child as an inalienable, integral and indivisible part of all human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Reaffirming further the need for the international community to continue to review and assess the progress made in the field of human rights since the adoption of the Declaration and to identify obstacles and ways in which they can be overcome,

Mindful that everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights can be fully realized,

Declares solemnly its commitment to the fulfilment of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations and as a source of inspiration for the further promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms—political, economic, social, civil and cultural—including the right to development.

On 11 December, acting on a proposal of its President [A/53/L.71], the Assembly, by decision 53/436, decided to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-eighth (2003) session the item "Fifty-fifth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights".

Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Optional Protocols

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 1998, parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423], totalled 142 and 93 States, respectively. During the year, Liechtenstein and South Africa became parties to the Covenant, and Liechtenstein acceded to the Optional Protocol. On 26 August, Trinidad and Tobago notified the Secretary-General of its denunciation of the Protocol. On the same date, it re-acceded to the Protocol.

In 1998, Belgium and Costa Rica ratified and Liechtenstein and Nepal acceded to the Second Optional Protocol, aimed at the abolition of the death penalty—adopted by the Assembly in resolution 44/128 [YUN 1989, p. 484] and in force since 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 544]—bringing the total number of States parties to 35 at year's end.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Covenant and its Optional Protocols as at 1 January [E/CN.4/1998/83] and 15 December [F7CN.4/1999/91]. The Commission asked him to report on the status in 1999 and 2000 [res. 1998/9].

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Human Rights Committee, established under article 28 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, held three sessions in 1998: its sixty-second session from 23 March to 9 April in New York, and its sixty-third session from 13 to 31 July [A/53/40, vol. I] and sixty-fourth from 19 October to 6 November [A/54/40, vol. I], both in Geneva. By decision 53/433 of 9 December, the General Assembly took note of the report of the Committee on the first two of those sessions.

In 1998, the Committee considered reports from 16 States—Algeria, Armenia, Austria, Belgium, Cyprus, Ecuador, Finland, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Zimbabwe—under article 40 of the Covenant. It adopted views on communications from individuals claiming that their rights under the Covenant had been violated, and decided that other such communications were inadmissible. Those views and decisions were annexed to the Committee's reports [A/53/40, vol. II; A/54/40, vol. II].

On 4 November, the Committee, in a decision concerning the execution of persons in Sierra Leone, deplored the State party's failure to clarify the circumstances surrounding the executions and decided to continue to consider communications on the situation under the Optional Protocol.

By a June note [E/1998/74], the Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council the text of general comment No. 26, adopted by the Committee in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 598].

Commission action. On 3 April [res. 1998/9], the Commission on Human Rights asked the Secretary-General to assist States parties in preparing their reports and to ensure that OHCHR assisted the Committee in implementing its mandate.

Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 1998, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 419], had 139 States parties. Bangladesh and Liechtenstein acceded to the Covenant during the year.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Covenant as at 1 January [E/CN.4/1998/83] and 15 December [E/CN.4/1999/91]. The Commission asked him to report on the status in 1999 and 2000 [res. 1998/9].

Draft optional protocol

Pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1997/17 [YUN 1997, p. 599], the Commission considered a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/25] containing the views of Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on a draft optional protocol for the consideration of communications concerning non-compliance with the Covenant. The replies highlighted the need for a speedy procedure, the option to allow complaints in respect of any economic, social and cultural rights contained in the Covenant, the option of retroactive action and the possibility of an inter-State complaints procedure.

In a January report with later addendum [E/CN.4/1998/84 & Add.1], the Secretary-General, in response to Commission decision 1997/104 [YUN 1997, p. 599], presented the views of Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on the draft optional protocol.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights held its eighteenth (27 April-15 May) and nineteenth (16 November-4 December) sessions, both in Geneva [E/1999/22]. The Committee's pre-sessional, five-member working group, met in Geneva for five days prior to each of the Committee's sessions to identify issues that might most usefully be discussed with representatives of reporting States.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/294 of 31 July, took note of the Committee's report on its 1997 sessions [YUN 1997, p. 599].

In 1998, the Committee examined reports covering articles 1 to 15 of the Covenant submitted by Canada, Cyprus, Germany, Israel, the Netherlands on its own behalf and on behalf of the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba, Nigeria, Poland, Sri Lanka and Switzerland.

The day of general discussion on 11 May was devoted to globalization and its impact on the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights, and on 30 November to the right to education (see below, under "Other activities").

The Committee adopted general comment No. 9 on domestic application of the Covenant, and general comment No. 10 on the role of national human rights institutions in the protection of economic, social and cultural rights.

By decision 1998/210 A of 6 February, the Economic and Social Council postponed consideration of the Committee's 1997 recommendations and of the statement of the administrative and programme budget implications of those recommendations [E/1998/L.4]. On 7 May, the Council, by decision 1998/210 B, postponed consideration of three of the recommendations and of the statement and took no action on a fourth recommendation.

On 31 July, the Council, by decision 1998/293, invited the Committee to provide updated information on its requests related to draft decisions recommended in 1997. It took note of General Assembly decision 52/463 of 31 March, by which the Assembly would consider in 1998 the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on the question of honoraria payable to members of organs and subsidiary organs of the United Nations (see PART FIVE, Chapter III).

By decision 1998/303 of 16 December, the Council, in the absence of any additional information from the Committee, decided that the existing arrangements for the Committee should continue.

Convention against racial discrimination

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 1998, there were 153 parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440]. Lithuania and South Africa ratified the Convention and Kazakhstan acceded to it during 1998.

On 17 April [res. 1998/26], the Commission on Human Rights appealed to States that had not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention and to consider making the declaration provided for in its article 14 (see below).

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 31 July [A/53/256].

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), set up under article 8 of the Convention, held its fifty-second (2-20 March) and fifty-third (3-21 August) sessions in 1998, both in Geneva [A/53/18].

The Committee devoted its sessions mainly to examining reports submitted by States parties on measures taken to implement the Convention. It considered reports, comments and information submitted by 23 States parties and summarized its members' views on each country report and the statements made by the States parties concerned.

Under the item dealing with the prevention of racial discrimination, including early warning and urgent procedures, the Committee adopted decisions concerning situations in Australia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Czech Republic, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro).

In conformity with article 14 of the Convention, CERD considered communications from individuals or groups of individuals claiming violation of their rights under the Convention by a State party recognizing CERD's competence to receive and consider such communications. Twenty-five States parties (Algeria, Australia, Bulgaria, Chile, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Senegal, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden, Ukraine, Uruguay) had declared such recognition.

Under article 15, the Committee was empowered to consider copies of petitions, reports and other information relating to Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories. CERD observed that it found it impossible to fulfil its functions under article 15 as the documents did not include copies of petitions. The Committee asked that the appropriate information be furnished.

The Committee discussed a joint working paper on article 7 of the Convention prepared by two of its members and two Subcommission members [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/4J]. Article 7 dealt with measures, particularly in the areas of teaching, education, culture and information, to combat racial discrimination and to promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among nations and racial or ethnic groups.

In August [A/53/255], the Secretary-General stated that, as at 30 July, 24 States parties had accepted a 1992 amendment to the Convention regarding the financing of CERD [YUN 1992, p. 714]. The amendment was to enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties. The Secretary-General noted that, as at 31 August, outstanding assessments for CERD financing totalled $180,092.

Mindful of the importance of the contributions of the Committee to the effective implementation of the Convention and to the efforts of the United Nations to combat racism and all other forms of discrimination based on race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin,

Calling upon States that have not yet become parties to the Convention to ratify it or accede thereto,

Emphasizing the obligation of all States parties to the Convention to take legislative, judicial and other measures in order to secure full implementation of the provisions of the Convention,

Recalling its resolution 47/111 of 16 December 1992, in which it welcomed the decision, taken on 15 January 1992 by the Fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, to amend paragraph 6 of article 8 of the Convention and to add a new paragraph, as paragraph 7 of article 8, with a view to providing for the financing of the Committee from the regular budget of the United Nations, and reiterating its deep concern that the amendment to the Convention has not yet entered into force,

Stressing the importance of enabling the Committee to function smoothly and to have all necessary facilities for the effective performance of its functions under the Convention,

Convention against torture

As at 31 December 1998, 111 States were parties to the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]. During the year, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Kazakhstan, the Niger, South Africa and Zambia became parties. Thirty-nine parties had made the required declarations under articles 21 and 22 (under which a party recognizes the competence of the Committee against Torture to receive and consider communications to the effect that a party claims that another is not fulfilling its obligations under the Convention, and to receive communications from or on behalf of individuals claiming to be victims of a violation of the Convention by a State party) and two had made the declaration under article 21 only.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 15 July [A/53/253]. The General Assembly took note of the report by decision 53/433 of 9 December.

On 17 April [res. 1998/38], the Commission on Human Rights urged all States to become parties to the Convention and invited States parties that had not done so to make the declaration provided for in articles 21 and 22.

Draft optional protocol

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/34], the Commission asked the working group on the draft optional protocol to the Convention (intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention) to meet prior to the Commission's 1999 session. The Secretary-General was asked to transmit the group's report to Governments, specialized agencies, the chairmen of the human rights treaty bodies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs concerned, and to invite them to submit their comments to the group. He was also asked to invite them, as well as the Chairman of the Committee against Torture and the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, to participate in working group activities.

Working group activities. The working group on the draft optional protocol held its seventh session in Geneva from 28 September to 9 October [E/CN.4/1999/59]. Annexed to its report were the texts of the articles that constituted the outcome of the second reading in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 580], 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 604] and at the current session, and of those that constituted the basis for future work.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/1998/23], adopted resolution 1998/35 without vote [agenda item 14 (g)].

Question of a draft optional protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/34 of 17 April 1998,

1. Authorizes an open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights to meet for a period of two weeks, with a possibility of extending it to three weeks, within existing resources, prior to the fifty-fifth session of the Commission in order to continue or conclude the elaboration of a draft optional protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to extend to the working group all necessary facilities for its meetings and to transmit the report of the working group to Governments, the specialized agencies, the chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies and the intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee against Torture, established as a monitoring body under the Convention, held its twentieth session in Geneva from 4 to 22 May [A/53/44 & Corr.1]. Under article 19, it considered the reports of France, Germany, Guatemala, Israel, Kuwait, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Peru and Sri Lanka.

The Committee held five closed meetings during which, in accordance with article 20, it studied confidential information that appeared to contain well-founded indications that torture was systematically practised in a State party to the Convention. Under article 22, the Committee considered communications submitted by individuals who claimed that their rights, as enumerated in the Convention, had been violated by a State party and who had exhausted all available domestic remedies.

The text of a general comment adopted by the Committee on the implementation of article 3 in context of article 22 was annexed to the Committee's report.

The Committee held its twenty-first session, also in Geneva, from 9 to 20 November [A/54/44], during which it reviewed reports submitted by Croatia, Hungary, Iceland, Tunisia, the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia under article 19. The Committee examined communications from individuals claiming to be victims of violations by States parties to the Convention in three closed meetings, and considered communications under article 22.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.1], adopted resolution 53/139 without vote [agenda item 110 (a)].

Torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

The General Assembly,

Recalling article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Being Subjected to Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, and its resolution 39/46 of 10 December 1984, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, and all its subsequent relevant resolutions,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna in 1993, firmly declared that efforts to eradicate torture should, first and foremost, be concentrated on prevention and called for the early adoption of an optional protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which is intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention,

Urging all Governments to promote the speedy and full implementation of the Vienna Declaration and

Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, in particular, the section relating to freedom from torture, in which it is stated that States should abrogate legislation leading to impunity for those responsible for grave violations of human rights, such as torture, and prosecute such violations, thereby providing a firm basis for the rule of law,

Recalling its resolution 36/151 of 16 December 1981, in which it noted with deep concern that acts of torture took place in various countries, recognized the need to provide assistance to the victims in a purely humanitarian spirit and established the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture,

Recalling also the recommendation in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action that high priority should be given to providing the necessary resources to assist victims of torture and effective remedies for their physical, psychological and social rehabilitation, inter alia, through additional contributions to the Fund,

Noting with satisfaction the existence of a considerable international network of centres for the rehabilitation of torture victims, which plays an important role in providing assistance to victims of torture, and the collaboration of the Fund with the centres,

Mindful of the proclamation by the General Assembly in its resolution 52/149 of 12 December 1997 of 26 June as United Nations International Day in Support of Victims of Torture,

1. Welcomes the report of the Committee against Torture, submitted in accordance with article 24 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, and authorizes the Secretary-General to extend the spring sessions of the Committee by one additional week;

2. Notes with appreciation that one hundred and six States have become parties to the Convention;

3. Urges all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention as a matter of priority;

4. Invites all States ratifying or acceding to the Convention and those States that are parties to the Convention and that have not yet done so to consider joining the States parties that have already made the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 of the Convention and to consider the possibility of withdrawing their reservations to article 20;

5. Urges all States parties to notify the Secretary-General of their acceptance of the amendments to articles 17 and 18 of the Convention as soon as possible;

6. Urges States parties to comply strictly with their obligations under the Convention, including their obligation to submit reports in accordance with article 19 of the Convention, in view of the high number of reports not submitted, and invites States parties to incorporate a gender perspective when submitting reports to the Committee;

7. Commends the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights for the support given to States in the preparation of national reports for submission to the Committee;

8. Urges States parties to take fully into account the conclusions and recommendations made by the Committee after its consideration of their reports;

9. Takes note of the efforts made by the inter-sessional open-ended working group of the Commission on Human Rights on the elaboration of a draft optional protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which is intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention, and urges the Commission to complete as soon as possible a final text for submission to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, for consideration and adoption;

10. Takes note with appreciation of the interim report presented orally by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the question of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, describing the overall trends and developments with regard to his mandate;

Calls upon all Governments to cooperate with and to assist the Special Rapporteur in the performance of his task, in particular by supplying all necessary information requested by him, to react appropriately and expeditiously to his urgent appeals and to give serious consideration to his requests to visit their countries and to the follow-up to his recommendations;

12. Approves the methods of work employed by the Special Rapporteur, in particular as regards urgent appeals, reiterates his need to be able to respond effectively to credible and reliable information that comes before him, invites him to continue to seek the views and comments of all concerned, in particular Member States, in the elaboration of his report, and expresses its appreciation for the discreet and independent way in which he continues to carry out his work;

13. Stresses the need for regular exchanges of views between the Committee, the Special Rapporteur and other relevant United Nations mechanisms and bodies, as well as for the pursuance of cooperation with relevant United Nations programmes, notably the programme on crime prevention and criminal justice, with a view to enhancing further their effectiveness and cooperation on issues relating to torture, inter alia, by improving their coordination;

14. Expresses its gratitude and appreciation to the Governments, organizations and individuals that have already contributed to the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture;

15. Appeals to all Governments, organizations and individuals to respond favourably to requests for contributions to the Fund, if possible on a regular basis and annually before the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Fund, preferably by the end of February, and if possible also with a substantial increase in the level of contributions, so that consideration may be given to the increasing demand for assistance;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to all Governments the appeals of the General Assembly for contributions to the Fund;

21. ### Convention on elimination of discrimination against women

On 9 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 53/118, urged States that had not ratified or acceded to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895], to do so as soon as possible, so that universal ratification of the Convention could be achieved by the year 2000. It encouraged the strengthening of coordination between the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the other human rights treaty bodies in monitoring the implementation of human rights instruments for the full enjoyment by women of their human rights.

On 21 August [E/CN.4/1999/4 (res. 1998/19)], the Subcommission decided to follow closely work on a proposed optional protocol to the Convention.

(For details on the status of the Convention and the optional protocol, see PART THREE, Chapter X.)

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 1998, there continued to be 191 States parties to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560].

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 1 August [A/53/281] and 30 November [E/CN.4/1999/70]. By decision 53/431 of 9 December, the General Assembly took note of the first report.

Regarding an amendment to the Convention that would expand the membership of the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) from 10 to 18, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 50/155 [YUN 1995, p. 706], the Secretary-General reported that, as at 5 November, 47 instruments of acceptance had been deposited [CRC/SP/25]. The amendment required acceptance of a two-thirds majority of States parties to enter into force.

Implementation

Monitoring body. In 1998, CRC held its seventeenth (5-23 January) [CRC/C/73], eighteenth (18 May-5 June) [CRC/C/79] and nineteenth (21 September-9 October) [CRC/C/80] sessions, all in Geneva. Each session was preceded by a pre-session working group which facilitated the Committee's work by reviewing State party reports and identifying in advance the main questions that would need to be discussed with the representatives of the reporting States. It also provided an opportunity to consider technical assistance and international cooperation.

Under article 44 of the Convention, CRC considered initial reports from 14 States parties: Bolivia, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Ecuador, Fiji, Hungary, Iraq, Ireland, Japan, Kuwait, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Maldives, Micronesia, Thailand.

The Committee's working group on the child and the media (London, 6-7 March) discussed an international workshop on the issue scheduled to take place in 1999.

On 5 October, the Committee devoted its day of general discussion to the rights of children living with HIV/AIDS.

As an outcome of the day of general discussion in 1997 on the rights of children with disabilities [YUN 1997, p. 605], the Committee was setting up a working group to promote the implementation of the recommendations arising from the day. It was scheduled to meet in 1999.

In resolution 53/128, the General Assembly took note of CRC's fourth biennial report [A/53/41], covering its activities at the twelfth to seventeenth sessions [YUN 1996, p. 581; YUN 1997, p. 605].

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission on Human Rights urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention. It called on States parties to implement the Convention, cooperate with CRC and comply with their reporting obligations; withdraw reservations incompatible with the Convention's purpose and consider reviewing others; and accept the amendment that would increase the CRC membership. The Commission asked States parties, UN organs and bodies, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs, the media and the community at large to make the Convention widely known and to encourage training on the rights of the child for those involved in activities concerning children. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to ensure the provision of staff and facilities for CRC's effective performance, and OHCHR to brief Governments regularly on its plan of action to strengthen the implementation of the Convention. Those requests were endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in decision 1998/271 of 30 July.

Children in armed conflict

Working group activities. At its fourth session (Geneva, 2-10 February, 19 March and 24 April) [E/CN.4/1998/102 & Add.I], the working group on a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on involvement of children in armed conflicts held a general discussion on the draft and considered proposals relating to the preamble and operative part. Annexed to the group's report were a draft text of the optional protocol and a revised version of an informal paper by the Chairman/Rapporteur containing his perception of the draft optional protocol.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission asked the Secretary-General to transmit the working group's report to Governments, relevant UN bodies and specialized agencies, CRC, the Special Representative on the impact of armed conflict on children (see next chapter), intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, and to invite their comments thereon and on the Chairman's perception in time for circulation prior to the group's next session. The Chairman of the working group was asked to hold informal consultations to promote an early agreement on the optional protocol and to report by year's end. The working group was asked to meet in early 1999 to consider the report on the status of the informal consultations and to report in 1999. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to support the group and reaffirmed the aim of finalizing the draft optional protocol by the tenth anniversary of the Convention on the Rights of the Child in 1999. The Economic and Social Council, on 30 July, by decision 1998/271, endorsed the holding of the group's meeting and the informal consultations.

Sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography

Working group activities. At its fourth session (Geneva, 19-30 January and 19 March) [E/CN.4/1998/103], the working group for the elaboration of a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography held a general discussion pertaining to the content of the protocol. Annexed to the report were texts resulting from the group's discussions.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission asked the Secretary-General to transmit the working group's report to Governments, relevant specialized agencies, CRC, the relevant Special Rapporteur, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, and to invite their comments on the scope of the optional protocol in time for circulation prior to the working group's next session. The working group was requested to meet for a two-week period with a view to finalizing the draft optional protocol by the tenth anniversary of the Convention. The Chairman was encouraged to hold informal consultations. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/271 of 30 July, endorsed those requests.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/19], the Subcommission decided to follow closely the work being done on the proposed optional protocol.

(For further information on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, see next chapter.)

Convention on migrant workers

Status of Convention

As at 31 December 1998, the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594], had been ratified or acceded to by Bosnia and Herzegovina, Cape Verde, Colombia, Egypt, Morocco, the Philippines, Seychelles, Sri Lanka and Uganda, and signed by Bangladesh, Chile and Mexico.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 31 August [A/53/230] and 7 December [E/CN.4/1999/77].

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/15], the Commission on Human Rights called on all Member States to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention. It asked the Secretary-General to provide all assistance necessary to promote the Convention through the World Public Information Campaign for Human Rights and the human rights programme of advisory services, and to report in 1999 on the status of the Convention and on the Secretariat's efforts to promote it and the protection of the rights of migrant workers.

(For further information on migrant workers, see next chapter.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.1], adopted resolution 53/137 without vote [agenda item 110 (a)].

International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming once more the permanent validity of the principles and norms set forth in the basic instruments regarding the international protection of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Bearing in mind the principles and norms established within the framework of the International Labour Organization and the importance of the work done in connection with migrant workers and members of their families in other specialized agencies and in various organs of the United Nations,

Reiterating that, despite the existence of an already established body of principles and norms, there is a need to make further efforts to improve the situation and to guarantee respect for the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers and members of their families,

Aware of the situation of migrant workers and members of their families and the marked increase in migratory movements that has occurred, especially in certain parts of the world,

Considering that, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, all States are urged to guarantee the protection of the human rights of all migrant workers and members of their families,

Underlining the importance of the creation and promotion of conditions to foster greater harmony and tolerance between migrant workers and the rest of the society of the State in which they reside, with the aim of eliminating the growing manifestations of racism and xenophobia perpetrated in segments of many societies by individuals or groups against migrant workers.

Recalling its resolution 45/158 of 18 December 1990, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Bearing in mind that, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, States are invited to consider the possibility of signing and ratifying the Convention at the earliest possible time,

Recalling that, in its resolution 52/115 of 12 December 1997, it requested the Secretary-General to submit to it at its fifty-third session a report on the status of the Convention,

1. Expresses its deep concern at the growing manifestations of racism, xenophobia and other forms of discrimination and inhuman or degrading treatment directed against migrant workers in different parts of the world;
2. Welcomes the signature or ratification of or accession to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families by some Member States;
3. Calls upon all Member States to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Convention as a matter of priority, and expresses the hope that it will enter into force at an early date;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all the facilities and assistance necessary for the promotion of the Convention through the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights and the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights;
5. Welcomes the launching of the global campaign for the entry into force of the Convention, and invites the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to intensify their efforts with a view to disseminating information on and promoting understanding of the Convention;
6. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests him to submit an updated report on the status of the Convention to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;
7. Decides to consider the report of the Secretary-General at its fifty-fourth session under the sub-item entitled "Implementation of human rights instruments".

Convention on genocide

As at 31 December 1998, 128 States were parties to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. In 1998, Bangladesh, Belize, Kazakhstan and South Africa acceded to the Convention.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 31 October [A/53/565].

Fiftieth anniversary

Commission action. On 3 April [res. 1998/10], the Commission, considering that the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention provided a new opportunity for the international community to draw attention to the Convention, invited States that had not ratified or acceded to it to consider doing so. It asked States to intensify their activities aimed at implementing the Convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 77], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/43 [draft: A/53/L.47 & Add.I] without vote [agenda item 46 (b)].

Fiftieth anniversary of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide

The General Assembly,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/10 of 3 April 1998 on the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide,

Recalling also that, in adopting the Universal Declaration of Human Rights on 10 December 1948, it recognized the inherent dignity and the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family as the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Recalling further the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in particular chapter VII thereof, entitled "1998—Human Rights Year", in which proposals to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary are made, and welcoming the efforts of the High Commissioner to facilitate cooperation between various commemorative initiatives,

Guided by the principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, as well as other relevant international instruments of human rights,

Recalling its resolution 96(I) of 11 December 1946, in which it declared genocide to be a crime under international law, contrary to the spirit and aims of the United Nations,

Recalling also that, in adopting the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide on 9 December 1948, it recognized the crime of genocide as an odious scourge which had inflicted great losses on humanity and was convinced that international cooperation was required to facilitate the speedy prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide,

Noting that, fifty years after inclusion of a proposal to that effect, concrete steps have been taken to create international penal tribunals with jurisdiction over persons charged with genocide,

Concerned that, despite the efforts of the international community, many thousands of innocent human beings continue to be victims of genocide,

Taking into consideration the Convention on the Non-Applicability of Statutory Limitations to War Crimes and Crimes against Humanity of 26 November 1968,

Considering that the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide provides a new opportunity for the international community to draw the attention of all States to the significance of the Convention and to invite them to redouble their efforts for the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide,

1. Reaffirms the significance of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide as an effective international instrument for the punishment of the crime of genocide;

2. Expresses its appreciation to all States that have ratified or acceded to the Convention;

3. Invites States that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention to consider doing so;

4. Calls upon all States to increase and intensify their activities aimed at the full implementation of the provisions of the Convention;

5. Invites Governments and the international community to continue to review and assess the progress made in the implementation of the Convention since its adoption, and to identify obstacles and the way in which they can be overcome, both through measures on the national level and through enhanced international cooperation;

6. Invites Governments, the Secretariat, relevant organs and agencies of the United Nations system within their respective mandates, other international organizations and non-governmental organizations to disseminate the Convention widely together with other international instruments in the field of human rights, with a view to ensuring its universality and full and comprehensive implementation.

Convention against apartheid

As at 31 December 1998, there were 101 States parties to the 1973 International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 3068(XXVIII) [YUN 1973, p. 103].

The Commission on Human Rights had suspended both consideration of the item on implementation of the Convention in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 790] and meetings of the Group of Three [ibid., p. 693], the monitoring body of the Convention.

Other activities

Follow-up to 1993 World Conference

By decision 1998/208 of 6 February, the Economic and Social Council decided to devote the coordination segment of its 1998 substantive session to the coordinated follow-up to and implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (VDPA), adopted by the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights [YUN 1993, p. 908], as part of the VDPA five-year review.

On 28 July, the Council, in agreed conclusions 1998/2, called for increased system-wide coordinated follow-up to and implementation of VDPA; consistent affirmation throughout the UN system of the interrelationship and interdependence between democracy, development and respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms; strengthening of efforts by the UN system to eradicate racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance; cooperation and coordination regarding technical cooperation, human rights education and information; and the implementation of international human rights instruments and national plans of action relating to human rights.

Commission action. On 22 April [E/1998/23 res. 1998/78], the Commission on Human Rights asked the High Commissioner, the General Assembly and other UN organs and bodies related to human rights to take further action towards the full implementation of all recommendations of the 1993 World Conference. It asked the High Commissioner to continue to coordinate human rights promotion and protection activities throughout the UN system, as set out in Assembly resolution 48/141 [YUN 1993, p. 906]. States and the UN system were urged to give widespread publicity to VDPA.

Reports of High Commissioner. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/148 [YUN 1997, p. 608], the High Commissioner presented an interim report in February [E/CN.4/1998/104 & Corr.1,2] on progress made in implementing VDPA. She described information received from Governments and the UN system; the impact of the World Conference on the promotion and protection of human rights; and human rights treaties and protocols. The High Commissioner concluded that the progress achieved did not merit self-satisfaction on the part of the international community because there were too many cases of serious human rights violations.

In September [A/53/372], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the High Commissioner's final report on the implementation of VDPA, which emphasized measures taken at the national level. She noted that the international community could justifiably point to significant steps taken over the past five years both nationally and internationally to implement the recommendations of the World Conference. However, she stated that the international community had to conclude that five years after Vienna a wide gap continued to exist between the promise of human rights and their reality in the lives of people throughout the world. She concluded that the VDPA should continue to chart the course of human rights activities.

Report of Secretary-General. In a June report [E/1998/60], the Secretary-General provided an overview of the contribution made by the UN system to implement the VDPA recommendations. It focused on efforts to assist Governments and civil society, as well as to further enhance cooperation and coordination within the UN system. It also addressed specific themes covered by VDPA, referred to by entities of the UN system. The Secretary-General made recommendations to the Economic and Social Council regarding cooperation by the UN system in the following areas: mainstreaming human rights, including gender-related aspects; the interrelationship and interdependence between democracy, sustainable development and human rights; strengthening efforts to eradicate racism, racial discrimination and intolerance; mainstreaming the gender perspective into all aspects of UN work; the promotion and protection of the rights of groups requiring special protection, including children, indigenous populations, minorities, migrant workers, trafficked migrants and internally displaced persons; technical cooperation, human rights education and information; implementation of human rights treaties; and the interaction between the implementation of VDPA and the outcome of other UN conferences and summits.

The Secretary General concluded that, five years after the World Conference, the ability of the United Nations to assist Governments and societies in their efforts to ensure human rights for all people had been enhanced. However, present-day realities were more than adequate proof that the international community and the Organization had not been able to utilize the entire potential of the Conference. Therefore, the work of the UN system should build on the progress achieved to date and new steps should be taken to promote and protect human rights.

By decision 1998/287 of 31 July, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Note by High Commissioner. By a July note with later addenda [E/CN.4/1999/3 & Corr.1 & Add.1 & Add.1/Con.2 & Add.2], the High Commissioner transmitted to the Commission the report of a meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairmen of working groups of the Commission's special procedures and of its advisory services programme (Geneva, 26-29 May), as called for in VDPA. Participants discussed cooperation with the Commission and the High Commissioner; assessment of progress made in achieving the mandated objectives; a revised manual for special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and working groups of the Commission; coordination between the special procedures system and treaty bodies; cooperation with the Secretary-General; and the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.4], adopted resolution 53/166 without vote [agenda item 110 (d)].

Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 48/121 of 20 December 1993, in which it endorsed the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, as well as its subsequent resolutions on this matter, in particular resolution 52/148 of 12 December 1997,

Recalling also paragraph 100 of section II of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action concerning the five-year review of progress made in the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, including the need to pay special attention to assessing the progress towards the goal of universal ratification of international human rights treaties and protocols adopted within the framework of the United Nations system,

Recognizing that the five-year implementation review of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, carried out on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, has provided an opportunity to strengthen the promotion and protection of human rights,

Reaffirming that human rights and fundamental freedoms are the birthright of all human beings, that their promotion and protection is the first responsibility of Governments, and that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Convinced that the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action has to be translated into effective action by States, the competent United Nations organs and organizations and other organizations concerned, including non-governmental organizations,

Welcoming the significant steps taken over the past five years at both national and international levels to implement the recommendations made by the World Conference on Human Rights,

Deeply concerned, however, about the wide gap that continues to exist between the promise of human rights and their promotion and protection worldwide, and deeply concerned also about denials and violations of human rights—civil, cultural, economic, political and social—including the right to development,

Reaffirming the important role of non-governmental organizations in the promotion of all human rights and in humanitarian activities at the national, regional and international levels, and appreciating their contribution to increasing public awareness of human rights issues, to the conduct of education, training and research in this field, and to the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Noting that the Economic and Social Council devoted the coordination segment of its substantive session of 1998 to the question of the coordinated follow-up to and implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action by the United Nations system,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action and the conclusions contained therein;

2. Solemnly declares its commitment to the fulfilment of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action;

3. Welcomes agreed conclusions 1998/2 of the Economic and Social Council on the coordinated follow-up to and implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, and calls for their full implementation;

4. Reaffirms that the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action continues to constitute a solid foundation for further action and initiatives by States, the United Nations and other relevant intergovernmental bodies and organizations, as well as concerned national institutions and non-governmental organizations;

5. Calls upon all States to take further action with a view to the full realization of all human rights for all in the light of the recommendations of the World Conference on Human Rights;

6. Decides to continue its consideration of this question at its fifty-fourth session under the sub-item entitled "Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action".

Advisory services and technical cooperation

In 1998 [E/CN.4/1999/99 & Corr.1], the UN technical cooperation programme in the field of human rights continued to assist Governments, at their request, in promoting and protecting human rights. Available assistance included expert advisory services, training courses, workshops and seminars, fellowships, grants and the provision of information and documentation. Under the leadership of OHCHR, assistance was provided for incorporating international human rights standards in national laws, policies and practices, and building national capacity and regional structures for the promotion and protection of all human rights, supporting national institutions, democracy and the rule of law. Priority was given to strengthening national capacity or infrastructures aimed at long-term results. Activities were funded partly by the UN regular budget but mainly by the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights. During 1998, 49 projects were carried out, of which 10 were at the global level, 8 at the regional level and 31 at the national level. In addition to developing and managing those projects, needs assessment and/or project formulation missions to Cameroon, Chad, the Congo, Ecuador, the Niger, the Philippines, Yemen and other countries were undertaken and substantive support was provided to OHCHR field presences and UN field operations.

Technical cooperation budgetary allocation by region was: Africa, 37.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 31.2 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 11.9 per cent; global, 9.5 per cent; Central and Eastern Europe, 7.1 per cent; and interregional, 2.9 per cent. Global activities concerned a wide range of issues, including women's rights, training for peacekeepers and human rights monitors, training for the military, strengthening national human rights institutions and human rights education. Regional activities took place in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Central and Eastern Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, and Arab States. During 1998, there were a large number of countries, particularly in Africa, Asia and Eastern Europe, where assistance was given to establish or strengthen national human rights institutions. Those countries included Armenia, Bangladesh, Cambodia, Ecuador, Fiji, Georgia, Jordan, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritius, Mongolia, Nepal, Papua New Guinea, the Republic of Korea, the Republic of Moldova, Rwanda and Thailand. In 1998, country projects focused on training (30.4 per cent); human rights education (20.3 per cent); legislation (19 per cent); support to NGOs and civil society (15.2 per cent); national institutions (8.9 per cent); and national plans of action (6.3 per cent). A significant number of technical cooperation activities were carried out within the framework of field presences of OHCHR in Abkhazia (Georgia), Angola, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Cambodia, the Central African Republic, Colombia, Croatia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, El Salvador, Gaza, Guatemala, Liberia, Malawi, Mongolia, Sierra Leone, South Africa, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Fellowship activities included two comprehensive 10-day training programmes where the participants received intensive specialized training on the preparation and presentation of State reports to the main human rights treaty-monitoring bodies. A first global training programme was conducted in English at the United Nations Staff College (Turin, Italy, 26 October-6 November) with participants from 13 countries. A second regional training course for Spanish-speaking States was organized in close cooperation with the Government of El Salvador (San Salvador, 9-19 November) with 24 international participants.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/57], the Commission on Human Rights welcomed the increasing number of requests for advisory services and technical cooperation and emphasized the need for an increase in the allocation of resources from within the regular UN budget. It welcomed the Secretary-General's request to the High Commissioner to analyse the human rights technical assistance provided by UN entities and to make proposals for complementarity of action. The Secretary-General was asked to ensure efficient management of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights, strict and transparent project-management rules, periodic evaluations of its programme and projects, and dissemination of evaluation results, including programme implementation and financial accounting reports, as well as to arrange for information meetings open to all Member States and organizations directly involved. The Commission further requested that administrative assistance be provided for the Fund's Board of Trustees, that the Board's conclusions be reflected in the annual report to the Commission on technical cooperation and that the Secretary-General should report to the Commission in 2000. The Board was asked to continue to assist the High Commissioner in monitoring, reviewing and improving implementation of technical cooperation projects; the Chairman of the Board was invited to address the Commission.

Voluntary Fund Board

In 1998, the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights held its ninth and tenth sessions (Geneva, 6-8 July, 30 November-3 December) [E/CN.4/1999/99 & Corr.1].

The Board considered 18 new project proposals and one project addendum; reviewed two recently completed and evaluated projects; examined the implementation status of 10 current projects and activities; discussed project priorities, formats and procedures; reviewed criteria for project identification, formulation and evaluation; and examined financial and administrative matters. In 1998, technical cooperation projects were developed and/or approved for Azerbaijan, Chad, Croatia, Gabon, Georgia, Guatemala (addendum), Indonesia, Madagascar, Morocco, Nicaragua, the Philippines, the Latin American region and the Asian and Pacific region, as well as global projects.

Contributions received by the Fund in 1998 totalled $7.2 million.

Cambodia

Reports of Secretary-General. In three reports, the Secretary-General described the seventh (18-30 January) [E/CN.4/1998/95], eighth (17-24 April and 2-13 May), ninth (31 May-5 June) and tenth (15-30 July) [A/53/400] and eleventh (23-30 October) [E/CN.4/1999/101] missions of his Special Representative for human rights in Cambodia, Thomas Hammarberg (Sweden).

During his seventh mission, the Special Representative examined progress on the investigations of politically motivated crimes. Issues discussed focused on the problem of impunity, the organization of elections scheduled for July, the exploitation of prostitution of women and children, the problem of trafficking in persons and labour rights. The Special Representative observed that limited personnel and economic resources had contributed to serious problems in the court system related to impunity. The UN Judicial Mentors Programme had been constructive, as had bilateral cooperation with Australia and Japan. He appealed for more assistance for judicial reform. Serious politically motivated crimes had not been clarified. The commission set up to investigate the 30 March 1997 grenade attack [YUN 1997, p. 612] against a peaceful demonstration had not issued a report and no one had been arrested or charged. Prison conditions continued to be poor. The Labour Code was not respected in a number of factories and there was a lack of progress in advancing women's rights. The Special Representative welcomed the Ministry of Justice's assurance that it had paid the highest attention to the problem of torture. However, he continued to receive information that the practice occurred in police stations. The Government had reacted positively to the Special Representative's proposal for international assistance to help Cambodia respond to past serious violations of Cambodian and international laws. He was preparing a proposal on the issue.

The eighth mission focused on the problem of impunity, the upcoming elections and the accountability of the Khmer Rouge for past human rights violations. The Special Representative submitted to the Government the report of two experts who had visited Cambodia to assess progress made in the investigation of the 30 March 1997 attack, along with a new memorandum documenting further cases of killings and disappearances since July 1997. The experts noted that no serious investigation had begun. They cited a culture of impunity as one of the most serious obstacles to the establishment of the rule of law.

Those documents were the focus of the Special Representative's ninth mission. After the Government had received the experts' recommendations and the memorandum, it decided to establish a Cambodian human rights committee to initiate investigations into individual cases. The committee was asked to draft legislation for the establishment of a national human rights commission. On 8 June, a provisional committee was formally established.

The tenth mission focused on the human rights aspects of the electoral process. The Special Rep-representative issued regular reports on human rights in the electoral process, which were prepared by the Cambodia office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (COHCHR) on his behalf. During the period 20 May-25 July, COHCHR received over 400 allegations of intimidation and violence related to the electoral process. Of those, 174 were actively investigated and, as of 25 July, 82 of them had been confirmed or assessed credible to the extent that they required further inquiry. Several dozen others were proved groundless. Among the most significant instances investigated by the office were 29 killings, 2 attempted killings, 1 abduction attempt, 10 illegal arrests and detentions, and 12 instances of physical assault. In at least 5 killings and 2 attempted killings the motive appeared to be political. A dozen others were found not to be political and available information on the rest indicated that there might have been mixed motives. The Special Representative called on the political leadership of the country to refrain from retribution and called on the new Government to investigate the cases of extrajudicial killings, to ensure freedom of expression and to combat discrimination against minorities. He outlined priority areas for the new Government's human rights programme. The Special Representative reiterated his observations regarding torture, impunity, judicial reform, prison conditions, workers' rights, women's rights and the rights of the child.

During the eleventh mission, the Special Representative's meetings with government officials covered the question of bringing Khmer Rouge leaders to justice. He provided information about the Secretary-General's appointment of a group of experts to evaluate the evidence and listen to the views of the Cambodian leaders and people. He also raised the issue of investigations in the cases reported to the Government, including the 30 March 1997 grenade attack and July 1997 killings [YUN 1997, p. 612]. It was agreed that he would meet with the Cambodian Human Rights Committee during his next visit to review progress. He was also asked to provide international expertise in reviewing the Cambodian system of justice and in improving criminal investigation. He expressed concern about the strong sentiment of racial hatred against ethnic Vietnamese.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/60], the Commission expressed grave concern about violations of human rights and called on the Government to investigate urgently and prosecute those who had perpetrated them. It also expressed grave concern at the situation of impunity in Cambodia.

The Commission asked the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative, to assist the Government in ensuring the protection of human rights and to ensure adequate resources for the enhanced functioning of COHCHR and to enable the Special Representative to continue to fulfil his tasks. He was asked to examine the request by the Cambodian authorities for assistance regarding past serious violations of Cambodian and international law, including his possible appointment of a group of experts to evaluate the existing evidence and propose measures, as a means of bringing about national reconciliation, strengthened democracy and individual accountability. Those requests to the Secretary-General were approved by the Economic and Social Council in decision 1998/259 of 30 July. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 1999.

Role of OHCHR

In a report [E/CN.A/1999/100] on the 1998 activities and programmes of the Cambodia office of the High Commissioner, the Secretary-General provided an overview of assistance being provided for legislative reform, the administration of justice, national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, treaty reporting and international obligations, human rights NGOs, education and training programmes and curriculum development, information and documentation, monitoring and protection activities and the network of provincial offices.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/145 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Recognizing that the tragic history of Cambodia requires special measures to assure the promotion and protection of the human rights of all people in Cambodia and the non-return to the policies and practices of the past, as stipulated in the Agreement signed in Paris on 23 October 1991,

Desiring that the United Nations respond positively to assist efforts to investigate the tragic history of Cambodia, including responsibility for past international crimes, such as acts of genocide and crimes against humanity, server group regarding the polling and counting processes of the elections;

8. Encourages the Government of Cambodia to continue to work with non-governmental organizations in efforts to strengthen and uphold human rights in Cambodia, in recognition of the vital and valuable role played by non-governmental organizations in the development of civil society in Cambodia;

9. 17. Welcomes the appointment by the Secretary-General, in response to the request by the Cambodian authorities for assistance in responding to past serious violations of Cambodian and international law by the Khmer Rouge, of a group of experts to evaluate the existing evidence and propose further measures as a means of bringing about national reconciliation, strengthening democracy and addressing the issue of individual accountability;

18. Welcomes the development by the Government of Cambodia, working with the office in Cambodia of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Children's Fund and non-governmental organizations, of an action plan to combat child prostitution and trafficking, encourages the National Assembly to approve the plan as a matter of priority, and urges the Government of Cambodia to take concrete action to ensure its speedy and effective implementation;

21. Urges the Government of Cambodia to take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women, including in the political and public life of the country, to combat violence against women in all its forms and to take all steps to meet its obligations as a party to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, including by seeking technical assistance;

25. Decides to continue its consideration of the situation of human rights in Cambodia at its fifty-fourth session.

Guatemala

Commission action. On 14 April [res. 1998/22], the Commission commended the work of the members of the mission appointed by the Secretary-General [YUN 1997, p. 615] and requested the Government of Guatemala and other actors to take into account their recommendations. It recommended the extension of the mandate of the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala until the completion of the established timetable. The Commission recommended that the Government ratify all international standards for the protection of human rights and establish all necessary mechanisms for active participation in their application and to facilitate the full integration of all demobilized persons into the country's civilian and productive life. OHCHR was asked to renew the agreement on the provision of advisory services, particularly to the Office of the Ombudsman, to governmental bodies and to NGOs for the protection of human rights, of women and of indigenous populations. It decided to conclude its consideration of the human rights situation in Guatemala.

Haiti

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/58], the Commission called on the Haitian authorities to mobilize political will for the pursuit of reform and for the strengthening of the judicial system and improvement of the country's prisons. It also drew attention to the need for the Haitian National Police to continue receiving technical training to enable it to perform its functions efficiently, within the context of respect for human rights.

The Secretary-General was asked to report on the implementation of the programme of technical cooperation in Haiti. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women was invited to consider the invitation by Haiti to visit the country. The Commission asked the independent expert on Haiti to report to the General Assembly in 1998 and to the Commission in 1999.

Report of independent expert. In September, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the independent expert, Adama Dieng (Senegal) [A/53/355], who had visited the country (26 February-2 March and 9-15 August), where he met with high-level government officials, including the President.

Despite threats that existed to the stability of Haiti, the human rights situation had improved, the expert observed. In his view, justice remained the most important area for the international community to increase its support. He regretted the decision of OHCHR to transfer its cooperation activities to the International Civilian Mission in Haiti (MICIVIH). He invited OHCHR to consider the consequences of its decision because its visible presence was needed in view of the shortage of human resources, and MICIVIH's mandate was limited in length, making it impossible for it to undertake follow-up projects.

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the Commission, the Secretary-General, in October, reported to the General Assembly on the implementation of the human rights technical cooperation programme in Haiti [A/53/530]. He stated that a number of UN bodies were involved in technical cooperation projects for the promotion of human rights in Haiti, including MICIVIH, which carried out training in and monitoring observance of human rights. UNDP was concerned with strengthening national capacities, particularly in the prison and judicial systems, and was promoting coordinated efforts on the part of the UN system as a whole. The High Commissioner had supported the National Commission of Truth and Justice and, in cooperation with UNDP and MICIVIH, was providing human rights training at the grass-roots level. The High Commissioner's programme complemented the activities of various UN agencies and formed part of overall UN action in support of government efforts aimed at restoration of the rule of law, reconstruction and development. UNDP and MICIVIH were involved in those areas and the renewal of the MICIVIH mandate had provided continuity to its programme and enhanced further possibilities for cooperation within the UN system. For those reasons, the High Commissioner found that, in order to ensure cost-effectiveness, complementarity and coordination, it was more appropriate to transfer the implementation of the technical cooperation programme to MICIVIH.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.3], adopted resolution 53/159 without vote [agenda item 110 (c)].

Situation of human rights in Haiti

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling its resolution 52/138 of 12 December 1997, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/58 of 17 April 1998,

Recognizing the interdependence and mutual reinforcement between democracy, development and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and the commitment of the international community to supporting, strengthening and promoting this principle,

Taking note of the report of the independent expert of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Haiti, Adama Dieng, who was appointed to assist the Government of Haiti to consider the development of the situation of human rights in Haiti and to verify its compliance with its obligations in that field, and the recommendations contained therein,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the programme of technical cooperation aimed at strengthening the institutional capacity of Haiti in the field of human rights,

Recognizing the important contributions of the International Civilian Mission in Haiti, the United Nations Civilian Police Mission in Haiti and the National Commission of Truth and Justice to the task of restoring and strengthening democracy in Haiti and of establishing a climate of freedom and tolerance conducive to respect for human rights in that country,

Noting with satisfaction that, in its resolution 52/174 of 18 December 1997, the General Assembly renewed the mandate of the United Nations component of the International Civilian Mission in Haiti of the Organization of American States and the United Nations,

Welcoming the technical assistance for the institutional development of the Haitian National Police given by the United Nations Development Programme and other members of the international community,

Noting that, despite the efforts of the Government to improve the situation of human rights in Haiti, in respect of which some progress has been reported, serious problems still persist, relating mainly to the system for the administration of justice,

Noting with concern that the prolonged absence of a Prime Minister has had adverse consequences for the situation of human rights, as stated in the report of the independent expert,

Reiterating the hope that the Haitian people will, at the earliest possible date, be able to fully express their will through free, fair and transparent elections,

Welcoming the decision of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences to travel to Haiti on mission in November 1998,

1. Expresses its thanks to the Secretary-General, his Special Representative for Haiti and the independent expert of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Haiti for their continuing efforts in favour of the consolidation of democratic institutions in Haiti and the respect for human rights in that country;

2. Welcomes the decision of the Government of Haiti to distribute throughout the country, with the support of the International Civilian Mission in Haiti, the report of the National Commission of Truth and Justice of February 1996 and to initiate legal action in serious cases;

3. Encourages the Government of Haiti to continue its work on the reform of the judicial system, underlining the priority of that reform in the framework of the bilateral and multilateral assistance provided by the international community, including the United Nations Development Programme, and in this connection calls upon all sectors of Haitian society concerned to adopt coordinated measures with a view to the enhancement of the system for the administration of justice, which is essential to ensure respect for human rights;

4. Calls upon the Haitian authorities to mobilize the political will for the pursuit of reform and for the strengthening of the judicial system and the improvement of the country's prisons;

5. Expresses its deep concern at the prolonged political stalemate, which presents considerable risks for democracy, economic and social development and respect for human rights, and in this regard urges the authorities and political leaders to continue their efforts to resolve the crisis so that the appointment of a Prime Minister may be ratified by the Parliament without further delay;

6. Notes with satisfaction the putting into operation by the Government of Haiti of the Office of the Ombudsman, and invites the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to contribute to its strengthening through a programme of technical cooperation, so that it may develop into a national institution for the promotion of human rights, open to wide participation by civil society;

7. Invites the international community, including the Bretton Woods institutions, to continue their involvement in the reconstruction and development of Haiti, having regard for the fragility of the political, social and economic situation of the country;

8. Encourages the Government of Haiti to ratify the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;

9. Decides to continue its consideration of the situation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in Haiti at its fifty-fourth session.

(See also PART ONE, Chapter II.)

Somalia

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/59], the Commission expressed deep concern at reports of arbitrary and summary executions, torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and violence and at the absence of an effective judicial system in Somalia. It strongly urged all parties in Somalia to respect human rights and international humanitarian law, to apply internationally accepted criminal justice standards and to protect UN personnel, humanitarian relief workers, and NGO and international media representatives. It asked the independent expert to report and welcomed the decision of the High Commissioner to appoint a human rights officer within the Office of the United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator for Somalia. The Secretary-General was asked to provide adequate resources to fund the activities of the independent expert and the High Commissioner for the implementation of advisory services and technical cooperation. Governments and organizations in a position to do so were asked to respond positively to requests for assistance in implementing the present resolution.

Report of independent expert. Independent expert Mona Rishmawi (Jordan) assessed the situation of human rights in Somalia following her visit to the region (31 October-13 November) [E/CN.4/1999/103].

The expert described the political situation and examined violations of the right to life, incidents of hostage-taking, looting, attacks on civilians, conscription of children below the age of 15, the irregular judiciary, rape and other sexual violence, discrimination against minorities and population displacement. Regarding the mass graves in Hargeisa [YUN 1997, p. 617], she said the Technical Committee for the Investigation of War Crimes had identified the graves, including in Berbera, but lack of resources had hampered the Committee's work.

A human rights officer had been selected but had not been placed in Nairobi, Kenya, like other UN agency staff dealing with Somalia. The project for the placement of the officer would be implemented under the Memorandum of Understanding between UNDP and the High Commissioner of 4 March 1998. He would monitor the human rights situation in Somalia, mainstream and integrate a human rights perspective into the work of all the UN agencies regarding Somalia, provide technical assistance, support human rights NGOs, raise awareness in the area of the administration of justice and assist the independent expert. She said that the Commission on Human Rights should express its wish that human rights issues be integrated in the peace negotiations, especially those sponsored by the United Nations, its regional partners or its Member States.

In the area of technical cooperation programmes, UNDP was developing a civil protection programme. The United Nations Development Fund for Women focused on female genital mutilation and on building capacities and gender balance in local NGOs. The United Nations Children's Fund rehabilitated the water system in most of the country, carried out vaccination campaings and supported the educational system. UNESCO produced a peace education kit. Amnesty International held two human rights workshops, and local human rights groups were operating in Mogadishu.

An addendum to the expert's report [E/CN.4/1999/103/Add.1] contained information on a mission, carried out by Physicians for Human Rights under OHCHR auspices, to conduct an on-site assessment of the alleged mass graves in the vicinity of Hargeisa. The forensic team examined a minimum of 92, and possibly as many as 116, alleged graves. The team suggested that training and assistance be provided to the Somaliland Administration to set up its own forensic team to perform controlled excavations of mass graves and the subsequent osteological analysis of recovered human remains. The team concluded that human rights violations had been committed and recommended that the United Nations assist the Technical Committee; provide support to investigate mass grave sites and human rights violations from 1988 to date; and authorize and assemble an international team of forensic experts to investigate selected mass graves.

Public information

The Secretary-General described public information activities in the area of human rights [E/CNA/1999/86], including the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights, launched by the General Assembly in resolution 43/128 [YUN 1988, p. 539] and carried out by OHCHR and the UN Department of Public Information (DPI). He provided details of the OHCHR publications programme; the use of electronic means to maximize the impact of information; external relations, including briefings, exhibitions and human rights observances, fellowships, internships and training courses; and coordination and cooperation with other UN bodies, NGOs and academic and research institutions. DPI's human rights activities from January 1997 to December 1998 included the production and distribution of brochures, pamphlets, back-grounders, booklets, fact sheets, feature articles, posters and information kits. Press conferences were organized and press releases were issued. Films and radio and television programmes were produced and disseminated, and training programmes for journalists and broadcasters were held. The Secretary-General described how DPI launched and celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights at Headquarters (see above, under "Human rights instruments"). He also described the main activities conducted by the UN Information Service in Geneva and by other UN information centres in 1997 and 1998.

Human rights education

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/45], the Commission asked Governments to contribute further to the implementation of the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004), proclaimed by General Assembly resolution 49/184 [YUN 1994, p. 1039]. The High Commissioner was asked to accelerate the implementation of the Plan and to consider establishing a voluntary fund to support human rights education activities, including those undertaken by NGOs. Human rights treaty-monitoring bodies were asked to consider adopting a general comment on human rights education and to emphasize the obligations of States parties on the subject.

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General summarized activities undertaken to implement the Plan of Action for the Decade from September 1997 to August 1998 [A/53/313].

OHCHR was carrying out a survey of existing programmes, materials and organizations. It continued to disseminate information on the Decade and on human rights education, and had intensified its technical cooperation activities to strengthen national capacities in human rights, including human rights education and public information. The Office, in cooperation with UNDP, launched the pilot phase of the ACT (Assisting Communities Together) project, which was intended to empower organizations and individuals at the local level to undertake activities aimed at strengthening the promotion and protection of human rights. The first round of grants for the project was awarded in 1998. An expert meeting (Geneva, March) reviewed the draft human rights training package for prison officials. The Office was working on a training package for journalists to increase the incorporation by the media of human rights information and public education into their work. The report described the activities of OHCHR in the global dissemination of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Within the UN system, action to promote human rights education was being taken by the specialized agencies and human rights treaty bodies. Collaboration was ongoing with human rights institutes and NGOs. Work continued on the six training packages to support training activities addressed to professional and other target groups.

In December [E/CN.4/1999/87], the Secretary-General described activities carried out between September and mid-December. Within the ACT project, 69 individual grants totalling $130,000 were awarded to human rights initiatives in 24 countries. OHCHR continued to produce human rights publications and disseminate them among Governments and NGOs. International NGOs in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and a number of Governments had informed OHCHR of their contribution to the implementation of the Plan of Action.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/153 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and public information activities in the field of human rights

The General Assembly,

Guided by the fundamental and universal principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 26 of which states that "education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms", and the provisions of other international human rights instruments, such as those of article 13 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, article 10 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, article 7 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, article 29 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, article 10 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and paragraphs 78 to 82 of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, which reflect the aims of the aforementioned article,

Recalling the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights concerning the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, public information activities in the field of human rights, including the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights, the project of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization entitled "Towards a culture of peace", the implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action and the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Believing that the World Public Information Campaign is a valuable complement to the activities of the United Nations aimed at the further promotion and protection of human rights, and recalling the importance attached by the World Conference on Human Rights to human rights education and information,

Convinced that every woman, man, youth and child, in order to realize their full human potential, must be made aware of all their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Convinced also that human rights education should involve more than the provision of information and should constitute a comprehensive, lifelong process by which people at all levels of development and in all societies learn respect for the dignity of others and the means and methods of ensuring that respect,

Recognizing that human rights education and information are essential to the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms and that carefully designed training, dissemination and information programmes can have a catalytic effect on national, regional and international initiatives to promote and protect human rights and prevent human rights violations,

Convinced that human rights education and information contribute to a holistic concept of development consistent with the dignity of women and men of all ages, which takes into account particularly vulnerable segments of society such as children, young persons, older persons, indigenous people, minorities, the rural and urban poor, migrant workers, refugees, persons with the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome and disabled persons,

Taking into account the efforts to promote human rights education made by educators and non-governmental organizations in all parts of the world, as well as by intergovernmental organizations, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Labour Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Development Programme,

Recognizing the invaluable and creative role that non-governmental and community-based organizations can play in disseminating public information and engaging in human rights education, especially at the grass-roots level and in remote and rural communities,

Aware of the potential supportive role of the private sector in implementing at all levels of society the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and the World Public Information Campaign, through creative initiatives and financial support for governmental and non-governmental activities,

Convinced that the effectiveness of existing human rights education and public information activities would be enhanced by better coordination and cooperation at the national, regional and international levels,

Recalling that it is within the responsibility of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to coordinate relevant United Nations education and public information programmes in the field of human rights,

Considering that the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1998 constituted an invaluable opportunity for all members of the international community to enhance human rights education and information activities throughout the world,

Welcoming the decision of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights to place the question of the right to education, and in particular human rights education, on its agenda for the duration of the Decade,

Taking note with appreciation of the increased efforts undertaken so far by the Office of the High Commissioner to disseminate human rights information through its web site and its publications and external relations programmes,

Welcoming the initiative of the Office of the High Commissioner to develop the project entitled "Assisting Communities Together", supported by voluntary funds and designed to provide small grants to grassroots and local organizations carrying out practical human rights activities,

Welcoming also the initiative of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to disseminate human rights information through the United Nations project CyberSchoolBus, an Internet-based educational service that provides an interactive Website for secondary schools,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and public information activities in the field of human rights, including the World Public Information Campaign on Human Rights;

2. Welcomes the steps taken by Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to implement the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and to develop public information activities in the field of human rights, as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Urges all Governments to contribute further to the implementation of the Plan of Action, in particular by establishing, in accordance with national conditions, broadly representative national committees for human rights education responsible for the development of comprehensive, effective and sustainable national plans of action for human rights education and information, taking into consideration the guidelines for national plans of action for human rights education developed by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights within the framework of the Decade;

4. Urges Governments to encourage, support and involve national and local non-governmental and community-based organizations in the implementation of their national plans of action;

5. Calls upon Governments, in accordance with their national conditions, to accord priority to the dissemination in their relevant national and local languages of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other human rights instruments, human rights materials and training manuals, as well as reports of States parties under international human rights treaties, and to provide information and education in those languages on the practical ways in which national and international institutions and procedures may be utilized to ensure the effective implementation of those instruments;

6. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to coordinate and harmonize human rights education and information strategies within the United Nations system, including the implementation of the Plan of Action, and to ensure maximum effectiveness and efficiency in the use, processing, management and distribution of human rights information and educational materials, including through electronic means;

7. Encourages Governments to contribute to the further development of the Website of the Office of the High Commissioner, in particular with respect to the dissemination of human rights education materials and tools, and to continue and expand the publications and external relations programmes of the Office;

8. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to support national capacities for human rights education and information through its technical cooperation programme in the field of human rights, including the organization of training courses and the development of targeted training materials for professional audiences, as well as the dissemination of human rights information materials as components of technical cooperation projects;

9. Urges the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to continue to utilize United Nations information centres for the timely dissemination, within their designated areas of activity, of basic information, reference and audio-visual materials on human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the reports of States parties under international human rights instruments, and, to this end, to ensure that the information centres are supplied with adequate quantities of those materials;

10. Stresses the need for close collaboration between the Office of the High Commissioner and the Department of Public Information in the implementation of the Plan of Action and the World Public Information Campaign, and the need to harmonize their activities with those of other international organizations such as the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization with regard to its project entitled "Towards a culture of peace" and the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations with regard to the dissemination of information on international humanitarian law;

11. Invites the specialized agencies and relevant United Nations programmes and funds to contribute, within their respective spheres of competence, to the implementation of the Plan of Action and the World Public Information Campaign and to cooperate closely with the Office of the High Commissioner in that regard;

12. Encourages the human rights treaty bodies, when examining reports of States parties, to place emphasis on obligations of the States parties in the area of human rights education and information and to reflect this emphasis in their concluding observations;

13. Calls upon international, regional and national non-governmental organizations and intergovernmental organizations, in particular those concerned with women, labour, development, food, housing, education, health care and the environment, as well as all other social justice groups, human rights advocates, educators, religious organizations and the media, to undertake specific activities of formal, non-formal and informal education, including cultural events, alone and in cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner, in implementing the Plan of Action;

14. Urges Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to continue beyond

10 December 1998 the human rights education and public information work undertaken in the context of the commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, such as the development of materials, the elaboration of programmes and the establishment of networks, as called for by the Commission on Human Rights in paragraph 11 of its resolution 1998/45 of 17 April 1998;

15. Encourages the Commission on Human Rights to consider jointly, for the duration of the Decade, the question of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and public information activities in the field of human rights, including the World Public Information Campaign;

16. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue considering ways and means to support human rights education activities, including those undertaken by non-governmental organizations;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, through the High Commissioner for Human Rights, to bring the present resolution to the attention of all members of the international community and of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned with human rights education and public information, and to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session a comprehensive report on its implementation of the present resolution for consideration under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Culture of peace

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/54], the Commission urged States to promote a culture of peace based on the principles established in the UN Charter, respect for human rights, democracy, education for peace, promotion of sustainable development and the wider participation of women as an integral approach to preventing violence in its diverse manifestations.

Report of UNESCO Director-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/13 [YUN 1997, p. 621], the Secretary-General in September [A/53/370] transmitted a consolidated report of the Director-General of UNESCO containing a draft declaration and programme of action on a culture of peace for adoption by the Assembly. The report also described actions taken under the UNESCO transdisciplinary project, "Towards a culture of peace".

A series of addenda contained: a decision of the UNESCO Executive Board recommending that the UNESCO programme for 2000-2001 be entitled "Towards a culture of peace" [A/53/370/Add.1]; a note on a meeting of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) [A/53/370/Add.2]; information relating to a culture of peace received from intergovernmental organizations not members of the UN system [A/53/370/Add.3]; and a summary of a debate on the consolidated report by the UNESCO Executive Board [A/53/370/Add.4].

International Year

In May [E/1998/52], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the UNESCO Director-General on the state of preparations for the International Year for the Culture of Peace, 2000, proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 52/15 [YUN 1997, p. 622]. The main objectives of the programme of activities for the Year were to strengthen respect for cultural diversity and to promote tolerance, solidarity, cooperation, dialogue and reconciliation, based on activities at the national and international levels. UNESCO had been designated the focal point for the Year.

ACC action. In October [ACC/1998/20], ACC asked its Organizational Committee to ensure the preparation of a system-wide media and public information strategy for the Year and the continuous exchange of information on activities. It also agreed that the Year should be launched on International Day of Peace 1999.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1998/37 [draft: E/1998/L.38] without vote [agenda item 7 (f)].

International Year for the Culture of Peace, 2000

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 52/15 of 20 November 1997, by which the Assembly proclaimed the year 2000 as the International Year for the Culture of Peace,

Recalling also that the General Assembly, in its resolution 52/13 of 20 November 1997, requested the Secretary-General, in coordination with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to submit a consolidated report containing a draft declaration and programme of action on a culture of peace to the Assembly at its fifty-third session,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the state of preparations for the International Year for the Culture of Peace, 2000, for which the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has been designated the focal point;

2. Requests the General Assembly to adopt a programme of action for the year 2000;

3. Stresses that an international year for the culture of peace at the turn of the millennium would provide the opportunity to boost the efforts of the international community to establish and promote an everlasting culture of peace;

4. Recognizes, therefore, that the promotion of a culture of peace should be a high-profile theme in the mobilizing events and evaluations being planned through the year 2000, at the national, regional and international levels:

(a) The Year affords the opportunity to make national actions broad-based, providing a special opportunity to promote peace, non-violence, reconciliation and national unity and to prevent violent conflicts;

(b) At the regional and international levels, the Year will underline the priorities of peace, all human rights development and democracy and the central role that concerted action by different entities of the United Nations system can play in promoting a culture of peace;

(c) The programme of activities for the International Year should take into account, as appropriate, the proposed Millennium Assembly during the fifty-fifth session of the General Assembly in the year 2000;

(d) The programme of action for the promotion of the Year should take into account the agreements adopted at recent major global conferences and summits.

Children and a culture of peace

On 29 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1998/31 [draft: E/1998/L.14/Rev.I] without Vote [agenda item 7 (f)].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly adopted resolution 53/25 [draft: A/53/L.25] without Vote [agenda item 31].

International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/15 of 20 November 1997 and Economic and Social Council resolution 1997/47 of 22 July 1997 proclaiming the year 2000 as the International Year for the Culture of Peace, as well as its resolution 52/13 of 20 November 1997 on a culture of peace,

Taking into account Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/54 of 17 April 1998 entitled "Towards a culture of peace",

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights concerning the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004),

Taking into account the project of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization entitled "Towards a culture of peace",

Aware that the task of the United Nations to save future generations from the scourge of war requires transformation towards a culture of peace, which consists of values, attitudes and behaviours that reflect and inspire social interaction and sharing based on the principles of freedom, justice and democracy, all human rights, tolerance and solidarity, that reject violence and endeavour to prevent conflicts by tackling their root causes to solve problems through dialogue and negotiation and that guarantee the full exercise of all rights and the means to participate fully in the development process of their society,

Recognizing that enormous harm and suffering are caused to children through different forms of violence at every level of society throughout the world and that a culture of peace and non-violence promotes respect for the life and dignity of every human being without prejudice or discrimination of any kind,

Recognizing also the role of education in constructing a culture of peace and non-violence, in particular the teaching of the practice of peace and non-violence to children, which will promote the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations,

Emphasizing that the promotion of a culture of peace and non-violence, by which children learn to live together in peace and harmony that will contribute to the strengthening of international peace and cooperation, should emanate from adults and be instilled in children,

Underlining that the proposed international decade for a culture of peace and non-violence for the children of the world will contribute to the promotion of a culture of peace based on the principles embodied in the Charter and on respect for human rights, democracy and tolerance, the promotion of development, education for peace, the free flow of information and the wider participation of women as an integral approach to preventing violence and conflicts, and efforts aimed at the creation of conditions for peace and its consolidation,

Convinced that such a decade, at the beginning of the new millennium, would greatly assist the efforts of the international community to foster peace, harmony, all human rights, democracy and development throughout the world,

1. Proclaims the period 2001-2010 as the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World;

2. Invites the Secretary-General to submit, in consultation with Member States, relevant United Nations bodies and non-governmental organizations, a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session and a draft programme of action to promote the implementation of the Decade at local, national, regional and international levels, and to coordinate the activities of the Decade;

3. Invites Member States to take the necessary steps to ensure that the practice of peace and non-violence is taught at all levels in their respective societies, including in educational institutions;

4. Calls upon the relevant United Nations bodies, in particular the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, and invites non-governmental organizations, religious bodies and groups, educational institutions, artists and the media actively to support the Decade for the benefit of every child of the world;

5. Decides to consider, at its fifty-fifth session, the question of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010), under the agenda item entitled "Culture of peace".

National institutions and regional arrangements

National institutions for human rights promotion and protection

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General provided information on activities undertaken by OHCHR to establish and strengthen national institutions, and on measures taken by national institutions themselves [E/CN.4/1999/95]. The Special Adviser to the High Commissioner on National Institutions, Regional Arrangements and Preventive Strategies provided advice or assistance to Governments in the process of establishing national human rights institutions or contemplating their establishment in Armenia, Bangladesh, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Ireland, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, Liberia, Mauritius, Mongolia, Nepal, Papua New Guinea, the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Uzbekistan. The Special Adviser also provided support to recently established national institutions, including the South African Human Rights Commission, the Zambian Human Rights Commission, the Human Rights Commission of Malawi, the Ugandan Human Rights Commission, the Latvian Human Rights Office and the Moldovan Human Rights Centre. Mainstreaming activities relating to the establishment or strengthening of national institutions into the OHCHR programme was also a priority in technical cooperation. Three regional projects in Asia and the Pacific were approved by the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation at its tenth session (30 November-3 December). Many of the projects had been conducted in close cooperation with UNDP, within the framework of a memorandum of understanding concluded with UNDP in 1998.

The Second Conference of African National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (Durban, South Africa, 30 June-3 July) adopted the Durban Declaration which, among other things, reaffirmed the important role that national institutions should play to promote human rights and provide effective redress when those rights were violated.

The third annual meeting of the Asia-Pacific Forum of National Human Rights Institutions (Jakarta, Indonesia, 7-9 September), meeting under the theme of human rights and the economic crisis in Asia-Pacific, expressed deep concern at the effect of the crisis on economic, social and cultural rights, and that the crisis should not be used to further restrict civil and political rights in the region.

The first meeting of the Mediterranean National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (Marrakesh, Morocco, 27-29 April) focused on presentation by national institutions of their activities, achievements and prospects; international and regional cooperation; and free movement of people and human rights in the northern and southern parts of the Mediterranean basin. Participants adopted the Marrakesh Declaration, in which they underlined the need to extend and enhance cooperation among countries of the Mediterranean basin, with a view to strengthening and developing existing national institutions.

The Coordinating Committee of National Institutions, which constituted an international network promoting the establishment and strengthening of national human rights institutions, met (Geneva, 2-3 and 6 April) to consider administrative questions.

The Commission considered a report by the Secretary-General on participation by national institutions in meetings of the Commission and its subsidiary bodies [E/CN.4/1998/47]. National institutions had the option of: being part of the delegation of their Government and being granted part of the delegation's speaking time; being part of the delegation and being granted separate speaking time; or participating in meetings in their own right with separate speaking time.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/55], the Commission on Human Rights asked the Secretary-General to continue to provide assistance for meetings of the Coordinating Committee during the sessions of the Commission and in cooperation with the OHCHR; and to provide, from within existing resources and the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights, the necessary assistance for regional meetings of national institutions. The Commission's requests to the Secretary-General were approved by the Economic and Social Council on 30 July by decision 1998/258.

Taking note of the Secretary-General's report concerning participation by national institutions in UN meetings, the Commission asked him to submit in 1999 a report, including an analysis of the implications of the possible forms of participation and practical steps to take the matter forward. He was also asked to report in 1999 on the implementation of the present resolution.

Regional arrangements

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/102 [YUN 1996, p. 598], the Secretary-General reported in September on regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights [A/53/324]. The report focused on the sixth Asia-Pacific Workshop on Regional Arrangements for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (see below); the Second Conference of African National Institutions (see above); and the conclusion of a Memorandum of Understanding for cooperation in the promotion and protection of human rights between the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Government of Indonesia on 13 August.

In a later report [E/CNA/1999/93], the Secretary-General described cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations in human rights promotion and protection in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Europe and Latin America. He concluded that there was great potential to further the cooperation. The High Commissioner had indicated that she would emphasize the issue of trafficking in women and the strengthening of national human rights institutions. Priority would be given to increasing cooperation in those areas between the United Nations and regional human rights bodies.

Asia and the Pacific

In March [E/CN.4/1998/50], the Secretary-General described regional arrangements for human rights promotion and protection in the Asian and Pacific region. The sixth Asia-Pacific Workshop on Regional Arrangements for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (Tehran, Iran, 28 February-2 March) adopted the framework for a regional technical cooperation programme in the region, which identified the following areas of activity: national plans of action for the promotion and protection of human rights and the strengthening of national capacities; human rights education; national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights; and strategies for the realization of the right to development and economic, social and cultural rights. The framework document was annexed to the report, as were the workshop's conclusions.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/44], the Commission endorsed the conclusions of the sixth Workshop, including the framework. It encouraged Governments in the region to make use of the advisory services and technical cooperation programme for the promotion and protection of human rights in order to strengthen further national human rights capacities, and called on the High Commissioner to give adequate attention to the programme. States in the region were encouraged to hold workshops, seminars and information exchanges to strengthen regional cooperation with OHCHR assistance. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to report in 1999 on progress made in implementing the present resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/148 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 32/127 of 16 December 1977 and all its subsequent resolutions concerning regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/51 of 9 March 1993 and its subsequent resolutions in this regard,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Commission concerning advisory services and technical cooperation in the field of human rights, including its most recent resolution on that subject, resolution 1998/57 of 17 April 1998,

Bearing in mind also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, which reiterates the need to consider the possibility of establishing regional and subregional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights where they do not already exist,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights recommended that more resources be made available for the strengthening of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights under the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Reaffirming that regional arrangements play a fundamental role in promoting and protecting human rights and should reinforce universal human rights standards, as contained in international human rights instruments, and their protection,

Noting the progress achieved so far in the promotion and protection of human rights at the regional level under the auspices of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the regional intergovernmental organizations,

Noting also the expansion, since 1993, of the technical cooperation programme of the Office of the High Commissioner upon the request of the Member States concerned, and the crucial importance of sharing information and experience and developing and strengthening national capacities for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Noting further that national institutions can make an important contribution to the ongoing process of developing regional human rights arrangements, including in areas such as human rights education, mutual cooperation and information sharing,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the continuing cooperation and assistance of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in the further strengthening of the existing regional arrangements and regional machinery for the promotion and protection of human rights, in particular through technical cooperation which is aimed at national capacity-building, public information and education, with a view to exchanging information and experience in the field of human rights;

3. Also welcomes, in that respect, the close cooperation of the Office of the High Commissioner in the organization of regional and subregional training courses and workshops in the field of human rights, high-level government expert meetings and regional conferences of national human rights institutions, aimed at creating greater understanding of the promotion and protection of human rights issues in the regions, improving procedures and examining the various systems for the promotion and protection of universally accepted human rights standards and at identifying obstacles to ratification of the principal international human rights treaties and strategies to overcome them;

4. Stresses the importance of the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights, renews its appeal to all Governments to consider making use of the possibilities offered by the United Nations, under this programme, of organizing information or training courses at the national level for government personnel on the application of international human rights standards and the experience of relevant international bodies, and notes with satisfaction, in that respect, the establishment of technical cooperation projects with Governments of all regions;

5. Invites all Governments to continue to support the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner in the field of technical cooperation, with a view to further strengthening regional cooperation and regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights;

6. Reiterates the recommendation of the World Conference on Human Rights that human rights officers be assigned if and when necessary to regional offices of the United Nations for the purpose of disseminating information and offering training and other technical assistance in the field of human rights upon the request of the Member States concerned, and in this regard calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner also to disseminate information regarding regional arrangements which exist in different parts of the world;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, as foreseen in programme 19 (Human rights) of the medium-term plan for the period 1998-2001, to continue to strengthen exchanges between the United Nations and regional intergovernmental organizations dealing with human rights;

8. Welcomes the growing exchanges between the Office of the High Commissioner and regional intergovernmental organizations, as well as the growing exchanges between the bodies created by the United Nations in accordance with the treaties dealing with human rights and relevant regional organizations and bodies such as the Council of Europe and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights;

9. Also welcomes the recent adoption by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity of the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the establishment of the African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights;

10. Invites States in areas where regional arrangements in the field of human rights do not yet exist to consider concluding agreements with a view to the establishment within their respective regions of suitable regional machinery for the promotion and protection of human rights, and recognizes in this context that the annual intergovernmental workshop for the Asia-

Pacific region, as stated during the sixth Workshop on Regional Arrangements for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asia and Pacific Region, held at Tehran from 28 February to 2 March 1998, is an important forum for the discussion of initiatives for regional cooperation;

11. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue to pay special attention to the most appropriate ways of assisting, at their request, countries of the different regions under the programme of technical cooperation and to make, where necessary, relevant recommendations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session a report on the state of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights and to include therein the results of action taken in pursuance of the present resolution;

13. Decides to consider this question further at its fifty-fifth session.

Cooperation with UN human rights bodies

In accordance with a 1997 Commission request [YUN 1997, p. 625], the Secretary-General, in a March report [E/CN.4/1998/57], summarized information covering situations in which persons had been intimidated or had suffered reprisals for having cooperated with UN human rights bodies; availed themselves of international procedures; provided legal assistance for that purpose; and/or had been relatives of victims of human rights violations.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 1998/66], the Commission urged Governments to refrain from acts of intimidation or reprisal against persons who sought to cooperate or had cooperated with representatives of UN human rights bodies, or who had provided testimony or information to them; individuals who availed themselves of UN procedures and those who had provided legal assistance to them for that purpose; those who submitted communications under procedures established by human rights instruments; and relatives of victims of human rights violations. It asked representatives of UN human rights bodies and treaty bodies monitoring the observance of human rights to help prevent the hampering of access to UN human rights procedures and to continue to take urgent steps to prevent the occurrence of intimidation or reprisal. It also asked them to include in their reports references to allegations of intimidation or reprisal, as well as an account of action taken. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to draw the present resolution to the attention of UN human rights and treaty bodies and to report in 1999.

Chapter II

Protection of human rights

The protection of the human rights of all citizens of the world continued in 1998 to be central to the work of the United Nations, which carried out activities covering almost all aspects of the relationship between the individual and the State. During the year, UN bodies monitored the implementation of legal instruments that proscribed racism, racial discrimination and religious and other forms of intolerance; and spelled out the duties of Governments in respect of ensuring civil and political and economic, social and cultural rights, and protecting minorities and vulnerable groups.

The General Assembly, in December, proclaimed the year 2001 as the International Year of Mobilization against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, aimed at drawing attention to the objectives of the World Conference on the subject, scheduled to convene not later than 2001.

Special Rapporteurs, special representatives and independent experts of the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, examined, among other questions, the impunity of perpetrators of human rights violations; independence of the judicial system; conditions during states of emergency; allegations of torture; extra-legal executions; forced evictions; housing; environmental issues; violence against women; practices affecting the health of women and children; sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography; migrant workers; protection of indigenous heritage; and indigenous land rights. In April, the Commission asked its Chairman to appoint an expert to revise the 1997 draft basic principles and guidelines on the right to reparation for victims of [gross] violations of human rights and international law, for submission in 1999, with a view to adoption by the Assembly. In July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's recommendations to appoint special rapporteurs on the right to education and on the effects of foreign debt on the full enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights, and an independent expert on the question of human rights and extreme poverty.

Working groups considered arbitrary detention, enforced or involuntary disappearances, the administration of justice, the right to development, contemporary forms of slavery and indigenous populations. The working group on the administration of justice, in August, approved an amended draft international convention on the protection of all persons from forced disappearance and asked the Subcommission to transmit the draft to the Commission.

Racism and racial discrimination

Third Decade against racism

The Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2003) was proclaimed by the General Assembly in 1993 by resolution 48/91 [YUN 1993, p. 8531. At that time, the Assembly also adopted the Decade's Programme of Action. The Third Decade's goals and objectives were the same as those of the first Decade, which the Assembly had adopted in resolution 3057(XXVIII) [YUN 1973, p. 523]. The revised Programme of Action for the Third Decade was adopted by the Assembly in resolution 49/146 [YUN 1994, p. 988].

Implementation of Decade

Reports of Secretary-General. In January [E/CN.4/1998/78 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General described activities planned for 1998 to implement the Programme of Action for the Decade. He noted that the focal point for coordinating activities and backstopping of related activities at the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) would require additional resources, which were not currently available. He stated that the Decade did not command sufficient interest to lead to far-reaching activities and that resources were still lacking.

In March [E/CN.4/1998/77], the Secretary-General summarized information received from Governments, an intergovernmental organization, a national institution for the promotion and protection of human rights, the UN system and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) on measures taken to combat racism and racial discrimination and to improve coordination of the activities of the Decade's Programme of Action.

OHCHR activities. In March [A/54/299], OHCHR established a racism project team to promote liaison with other UN departments and institutions and to exchange information with Member States and other organizations.

Commission action. On 17 April [E/1998/23 des. 1998/26], the Commission on Human Rights, expressing its profound concern and condemnation of all forms of racism and racial discrimination, called on States to strengthen their national legislation and institutions for the promotion of racial harmony.

The Commission regretted the lack of interest, support and financial resources for the Decade and the Programme of Action, and that very few of the activities planned for 1994-1997 were carried out. Also regretting that a report on the financial and personnel resources required to implement the Programme of Action was not presented to the General Assembly in 1997, the Commission urged the Secretary-General to do so in 1998. The Commission was of the view that financial contributions made to the Trust Fund for the Programme for the Decade had proved to be inadequate and that the Assembly should consider ways to finance the Programme of Action, including through the UN regular budget. It reiterated its request to the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights to establish a focal point to coordinate the activities of the Third Decade before the United Nations carried them out.

The Economic and Social Council, in decision 1998/251 of 30 July, approved the Commission's requests (see below).

Further reports of Secretary-General. In response to Assembly resolution 52/111 [YUN 1997, p. 629], the Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council in May a report describing activities undertaken or planned by Governments, the UN system and an intergovernmental organization to implement the Programme of Action [E/1998/51]. Regarding the Trust Fund, the Secretary-General stated that contributions remained below the levels hoped for. He concluded that to implement the Programme's activities, concrete proposals on how to ensure the resources required, including through the UN regular budget and extrabudgetary resources, should be considered by the Assembly. Annexed to the report was the statement of income and expenditure for 1996-1997 and a statement of assets and liabilities for the Fund as at 31 December 1997, as well as a list of contributions received from Governments as at May 1998. The Council, by decision 1998/294 of 31 July, took note of the Secretary-General's report.

In August [A/53/305], the Secretary-General supplemented information contained in his May report. He described activities taken to implement the Programme of Action by the UN system, those planned in the future and those not carried out because of low levels of contribution to the Trust Fund.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [E/CN.4/1999/4 des. 1998/6], the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, regretting the continued lack of interest, support and resources for the Decade and the Programme of Action, called on Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies and interested NGOs to contribute fully to the implementation of the Programme. It invited States that had not done so to ratify or accede to international instruments to combat racism and racial discrimination.

The Subcommission also considered a June report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/22] submitted by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), describing action it had taken to implement international human rights instruments related to discrimination.

World Conference

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/111 [YUN 1997, p. 629], the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance was scheduled to convene not later than 2001. One of the main objectives of the Conference, as set by the Assembly, was to review the political, historical, economic, social, cultural and other factors leading to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. It was decided that the Commission on Human Rights should act as the Preparatory Committee for the Conference.

Report of Secretary-General. In January [E/CN.4/1998/78 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General presented recommendations regarding the Conference and the preparations therefor received from Governments, the UN system, an intergovernmental organization and NGOs.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/26], the Commission on Human Rights decided to create an open-ended working group to meet in 1999 to review and develop proposals for the Commission's consideration and possible forwarding to the Preparatory Committee. It recommended that the Assembly ask the Secretary-General to designate the High Commissioner for Human Rights as the Secretary-General of the Conference, who would assume main responsibility for the Conference preparations. The Conference Secretary-General was asked to consult with States to determine the date and venue for the Conference and to report to the Committee thereon. The High Commissioner was asked to: devise and implement, with the UN Department of Public Information, a world information campaign, to publish in all UN official languages an information pamphlet for NGOs, the media and the general public, and to inform the Committee of developments; help States and regional organizations to convene national and regional meetings or undertake other initiatives; inform the Committee of steps taken to prepare the Conference; submit in 1999 a preliminary analytical study on the objectives of the Conference as identified by the Assembly; and submit to the Commission in 1999 and to the Preparatory Committee at its first session a compendium of references to publications and other works by experts and UN, regional and other bodies on the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

States and regional organizations were asked to set up a coordination structure to launch and promote preparations for the Conference; NGOs were invited to participate in the preparations and to submit recommendations on action aimed at fighting racism to the Committee; the Subcommission was asked to carry out studies in accordance with the objectives laid out in resolution 52/111 and to submit its recommendations to the Commission in 1999 and to the Committee; the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) (see preceding chapter) was invited to present to the Commission in 1999 and to the Committee its contribution to the objectives of the Conference, including undertaking a series of studies, and to participate in the preparations for and in the Conference; and UN bodies and regional and international organizations were asked to contribute to the preparations and to forward their recommendations to the Committee. The Commission asked the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, beginning in 1999, to draw on his experience to contribute to the work of the Committee, including by identifying major issues to be considered within the objectives of the Conference.

The Commission recommended that: the Assembly declare 2001 a year of mobilization against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance to draw attention to the objectives of the Conference and to give new momentum to the political commitment; the activities of the Decade's Programme of Action be focused towards the preparatory process for the Conference and, in that regard, that the High Commissioner organize symposia, seminars and worldwide consultations in 1998, 1999, 2000 and 2001; and the Conference adopt a declaration and programme of action to combat the phenomena.

The Secretary-General was asked to report in 1999 on the implementation of the Commission's resolution.

CERD action. Welcoming the Commission's invitation, CERD, on 21 August [A/53/18], indicated that the Conference agenda could include current realities in the aftermath of slavery and colonialism; impact of economic globalization and racial equality; treatment of migrants, refugees, asylum-seekers and displaced persons; prevention of racial discrimination, including early warning and urgent procedures; prevention of racial discrimination through education; remedies, redress mechanisms and reparations for racial discrimination; international mechanisms for the implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and their progressive development; combating hate speech and promoting tolerance in the digital age; and the implications of multiple identities.

(For General Assembly action regarding the above, see preceding chapter.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/1998/23], adopted decision 1998/251 without vote [agenda item 14 (g)].

Racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 30 July 1998, the Economic and Social Council, taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/26 of 17 April 1998:

- (a) Approved the requests of the Commission:
  - (i) To the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its fifty-third session, a detailed report on the financial and personnel resources required for the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, and to the General Assembly to consider the possibility of providing the resources required for the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade;
  - (ii) To the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to take duly into account the repeated appeals of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for the establishment of a mechanism within the Office of the High Commissioner as a focal point for coordinating all the activities of the Third Decade before they are carried out by the United Nations;

(b) Endorsed the decision of the Commission to create an open-ended working group of the Commission to meet during the fifty-fifth session in order to review and formulate proposals for consideration by the Commission and for possible forwarding to the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance at its first session;

(c) Endorsed also the recommendations of the Commission to the General Assembly:

- (i) To request the Secretary-General to designate as Secretary-General of the World Conference the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, who, in that capacity, would assume the main responsibility for the preparations for the Conference;

- (d) Also approved the recommendations of the Commission:
  - (i) That the activities of the Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination be focused towards the preparatory process for the World Conference, and in that regard that the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights organize symposia, seminars and worldwide consultations in 1998, 1999, 2000 and 2001 on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;
  - (ii) That the World Conference result in a declaration and a programme of action to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;
- (e) Further approved the requests of the Commission:
  - (i) To the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to help States and regional organizations to convene national and regional meetings or undertake other initiatives, including at the expert level, to prepare for the World Conference, and to the regional preparatory meetings to submit to the Preparatory Committee, through the High Commissioner, reports on the results of their deliberations, with concrete and pragmatic recommendations aimed at combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, which will be duly reflected in the draft final documents to be prepared by the Preparatory Committee;
  - (ii) To the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to inform the Preparatory Committee of the steps taken to prepare the World Conference.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/6], the Subcommission recommended that the Preparatory Committee emphasize the themes of equality and diversity in an effort to combat racism and racial discrimination and that the Conference prepare a declaration and a programme of action to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related forms of intolerance. It also recommended that the topics for studies undertaken in response to the suggestions made by CERD (see above) be considered using the materials developed by the Subcommission in the preparatory process and at the Conference. Paulo Sergio Pinheiro (Brazil) was asked to prepare proposals for the Conference's work. The Subcommission decided to carry out studies within the context of the objectives in Assembly resolution 52/111 and to transmit recommendations to the Commission in 1999. Member States were called on to decide on a date and place for the Conference.

On the same date [dec. 1998/104], the Subcommission asked Joseph Oloka-Onyango (Uganda) to prepare a working paper on globalization in the context of the increase in incidents of racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia for consideration in 1999 as a contribution to the Conference preparations, and to explore cooperation on the issue with CERD.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/53/623], adopted resolution 53/132 without vote [agenda item 108].

Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination and the convening of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its objectives as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations of achieving international cooperation in solving problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Reaffirming also its firm determination and its commitment to eradicate totally and unconditionally racism, in all its forms, and racial discrimination and its conviction that racism and racial discrimination constitute a total negation of the purposes and principles of the Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the Convention against Discrimination in Education, adopted by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 14 December 1960,

Noting the efforts of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination since its establishment in 1970 to promote the implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination,

Recalling the outcome of the two World Conferences to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, held at Geneva in 1978 and in 1983,

Recalling also the outcome of the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, and, in particular, the attention given in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action to the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and other forms of intolerance,

Stressing the importance and sensitivity of the activities of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Recalling its resolutions 48/91 of 20 December 1993 and 49/146 of 23 December 1994, by which, respectively, it proclaimed the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination and adopted the revised Programme of Action for the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination,

Noting with grave concern that, despite the efforts of the international community, the principal objectives of the two previous Decades for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination have not been attained and that millions of human beings continue to this day to be the victims of varied forms of racism and racial discrimination,

Noting with great concern that, despite the efforts undertaken by the international community at various levels, racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related forms of intolerance, ethnic antagonism and acts of violence are showing signs of increase,

Recognizing both the challenges and the opportunities in combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in an increasingly globalized world,

Noting with concern that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance may be aggravated by, inter alia, inequitable distribution of wealth, marginalization and social exclusion,

Noting with concern also that the dissemination of racist and xenophobic propaganda is also being channelled through new communication technologies, including such computer networks as the Internet,

Having considered the report submitted by the Secretary-General within the framework of the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Firmly convinced of the need to take more effective and sustained measures at the national and international levels for the elimination of all forms of racism and racial discrimination,

Recognizing the importance of strengthening national legislation and institutions for the promotion of racial harmony and for the effective enforcement of such legislation,

Deeply concerned about the fact that the phenomenon of racism and racial discrimination against migrant workers continues to increase despite efforts undertaken by the international community to improve the protection of the human rights of migrant workers and members of their families,

Recalling the adoption at its forty-fifth session of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Acknowledging that indigenous people are at times victims of particular forms of racism and racial discrimination,

Contemporary forms of racism

Reports of Special Rapporteur. A January report of the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, Maurice Glele-Ahanhanzo (Benin), described information that had come to his attention regarding anti-Semitism, discrimination against blacks, Arabs and Muslims, Roma, Gypsies or travellers and migrant workers, and discrimination and incitement to racial hatred on the Internet [E/CN.4/1998/79]. The report contained five replies to allegations of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and anti-Semitism transmitted to 16 Governments in 1996 and 1997, and his observations thereon. In accordance with Commission resolution 1997/73 [YUN 1997, p. 632], the Special Rapporteur requested information from Governments and NGOs on measures they had taken to curb racism and other similar practices. The report contained the replies of 13 Governments. The Special Rapporteur concluded that the use of new communication technologies, particularly the Internet, had led to new forms of racism and racial discrimination. Governments needed to adopt a more proactive approach. He advocated the convening of a world conference on racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia; initiating studies, research and consultations on the use of the Internet for purposes of incitement to hatred, racist propaganda and xenophobia, and drawing up a programme of human rights education and exchanges over the Internet on experience in the struggle against the phenomena; requesting States that had not done so to ratify the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, as contained in General Assembly resolutions 2106A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440] and 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594], respectively; requesting States to establish human rights committees; and asking countries he had visited to inform him of steps they had taken as follow-up to his field mission.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/109 [YUN 1997, p. 633], the Secretary-General in August [A/53/269] transmitted a report of the Special Rapporteur updating his activities, including his mission to South Africa (see below). The report also included the Special Rapporteur's observations on the alarming resurgence of neo-fascism and neo-Nazism; discrimination against immigrants and migrant workers; anti-Semitism; the exploitation and manipulation of ethnicity for political purposes; and the use of the Internet to disseminate racist ideology and the exacerbation of ethno-nationalism. His report included submissions by Governments on action they had taken to curb racism. He recommended that the Assembly pay particular attention to those phenomena; regional and subregional expert meetings should be encouraged, as part of the preparations for the World Conference with the assistance of the UN specialized agencies, OHCHR, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); and a body on neo-fascism, neo-Nazism and ethno-nationalism should be established, to which States Members would be invited to communicate information.

The Special Rapporteur visited South Africa [E/CN.4/1999/15/Add.1] (24 February-5 March) in response to allegations concerning a rise in xenophobia and mistreatment of migrants. He also examined the progress of post-apartheid reforms and obstacles confronting the rapid transformation of South African society into one that was democratic and non-racist. The Special Rapporteur visited Pretoria, Cape Town, Johannesburg and Durban where he met representatives of the Government, the Constitutional Court, the Human Rights Commission, municipal councils, academic institutions, NGOs and various UN organizations. The report presented information on the socio-economic and political situation in the country and examined the rise in xenophobia, resulting from migrants entering the country for economic reasons. Measures taken by the Government and civil society were described.

The Special Rapporteur concluded that the socio-economic situation was characterized on the one hand by opposition to the changes from many among the white minority who held economic power, and on the other by a rising tide of xenophobia, particularly towards blacks from other regions of Africa. He recommended encouraging the commitment of those on the margins who refused to take part; teaching the Constitution and human rights in schools; conducting a parallel campaign of civic education; instructing immigration officials in human rights; adopting new immigration law; broadening South Africa's definition of the term "refugee" to include those immigrants from the member States of the Southern African Development Community (Angola, Botswana, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Lesotho, Malawi, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Seychelles, South Africa, Swaziland, United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia, Zimbabwe) who were fleeing from economic instability in their countries caused in part by the South African Government's destabilization policy in the 1970s and 1980s; entrusting the task of formulating an immigration policy to a special department; ratifying the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and adopting a law against racism and racial discrimination; integrating into the armed forces different ethnic and racial groups, and strengthening civic education in the armed forces; extending the teaching of civic education to all stages of school, university and professional training; reviving the civil society that played an active role in the struggle against apartheid and currently saw itself as abandoned; and expanding information on African countries, civilizations and cultures through television, research and publications.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/26], the Commission on Human Rights asked the Special Rapporteur to continue his exchange of views with Member States and relevant UN mechanisms and treaty bodies. It asked Governments visited by him to implement his recommendations and requested him to include in his 1999 report information on measures taken to implement those recommendations, and, if necessary, to make follow-up visits. The High Commissioner for Human Rights was asked to undertake research and consultations on the use of the Internet for incitement to racial hatred, racist propaganda and xenophobia and to draw up a programme of human rights education and exchanges over the Internet on experience in the struggle against racism, xenophobia and anti-Semitism. The Commission urged the High Commissioner to provide those countries that the Special Rapporteur had visited with advisory services and technical assistance, at their request, to enable them to implement his recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/623], adopted resolution 53/133 without vote [agenda item 108].

Measures to combat contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/109 of 12 December 1997, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/26 of 17 April 1998,

Bearing in mind the outcome of the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, in particular the attention given in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action to the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and other forms of intolerance,

Aware that racism, as one of the exclusionist phenomena plaguing many societies, requires resolute action and cooperation for its eradication,

Having examined the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including its conclusions and recommendations,

Deeply concerned that, despite continued efforts, racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, as well as acts of violence, persist and even grow in magnitude, incessantly adopting new forms, including tendencies to establish policies based on racial, religious, ethnic, cultural and national superiority or exclusivity,

Deeply concerned also that those advocating racism and racial discrimination misuse new communication technologies, including the Internet, to disseminate their repugnant views,

Noting that the use of such technologies can also contribute to combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Conscious of the fundamental difference between, on the one hand, racism and racial discrimination as governmental policy or resulting from official doctrines of racial superiority or exclusivity and, on the other hand, other manifestations of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance that are increasingly visible in segments of many societies and are perpetrated by individuals or groups, some of which manifestations are directed against migrant workers and members of their families,

Reaffirming, in this regard, the responsibility of Governments for safeguarding and protecting the rights of individuals residing in their territory against racist or xenophobic crimes perpetrated by individuals or groups,

Noting that the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, in its general recommendation

XV(42) of 17 March 1993 on article 4 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, holds that the prohibition of the dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or racial hatred is compatible with the right to freedom of opinion and expression as outlined in article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in article 5 of the Convention,

Noting also that the reports that the States parties submit under the Convention contain, inter alia, information about the causes of, as well as measures to combat, contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Conscious that impunity for crimes motivated by racist and xenophobic attitudes plays a role in weakening the rule of law and tends to encourage the recurrence of such crimes,

Particularly alarmed at the rise of racist and xenophobic ideas in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large,

Noting that the Special Rapporteur will continue to pay attention to the rise of racist and xenophobic ideas in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large,

Emphasizing the importance of creating conditions that foster greater harmony and tolerance within societies,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and expresses its support for the continuation of his work;

2. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue his exchange of views with Member States, relevant mechanisms, related United Nations organs and the specialized agencies in order to further their effectiveness and mutual cooperation;

3. Commends the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination for its contribution to the effective implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, which contributes to the fight against contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

4. Affirms that acts of racist violence against others stemming from racism do not constitute expressions of opinion but rather offences;

5. Declares that racism and racial discrimination are among the most serious violations of human rights in the contemporary world and must be combated by all available means;

6. Expresses its profound concern about and unequivocal condemnation of all forms of racism and racial discrimination, in particular all racist violence, and related acts of random and indiscriminate violence;

7. Also expresses its profound concern about and unequivocal condemnation of all forms of racism and racial discrimination, including propaganda, activities and organizations based on doctrines of superiority of one race or group of persons that attempt to justify or promote racism and racial discrimination in any form;

8. Expresses its profound concern about and condemnation of manifestations of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrant workers and members of their families, persons belonging to minorities and members of vulnerable groups in many societies;

9. Encourages all States to include in their educational curricula and social programmes at all levels, as appropriate, knowledge of and tolerance and respect for foreign cultures, peoples and countries;

10. Recognizes that the increasing gravity of different manifestations of racism, racial discrimination and xenophobia in various parts of the world requires a more integrated and effective approach on the part of the relevant mechanisms of United Nations human rights machinery;

11. Encourages Governments to take appropriate measures to eradicate all forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

12. Calls upon all States to review and, where necessary, revise their immigration policies with a view to eliminating all discriminatory policies and practices against migrants which are inconsistent with relevant international human rights instruments;

13. Categorically deplores the misuse of print, audio-visual and electronic media and new communication technologies, including the Internet, to incite violence motivated by racial hatred;

14. Recognizes that Governments should implement and enforce appropriate and effective legislation to prevent acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

15. Calls upon all Governments and intergovernmental organizations, with the assistance of non-governmental organizations, as appropriate, to supply relevant information to the Special Rapporteur to enable him to fulfil his mandate;

16. Commends non-governmental organizations for the action that they have taken against racism and racial discrimination and for the continuous support and assistance that they have provided to the victims of racism and racial discrimination;

17. Urges all Governments to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur with a view to enabling him to fulfil his mandate, including the examination of incidents of contemporary forms of racism and racial discrimination, inter alia, against blacks, Arabs and Muslims, xenophobia, Negrophobia, anti-Semitism and related intolerance;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Rapporteur with all the necessary human and financial assistance to carry out his mandate efficiently, effectively and expeditiously and to enable him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session.

Right to nationality

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the Commission in resolution 1997/36 [YUN 1997, p. 634] on arbitrary deprivation of nationality, the Secretary-General presented the views thereon of one Government, UN bodies and specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs [E/CN.4/1998/118].

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/48], the Commission on Human Rights called on States to refrain from taking measures and enacting legislation that discriminated against persons or groups of persons on grounds of race, colour, gender, religion or national or ethnic origin by nullifying or impairing the exercise of their right to nationality, and to repeal such legislation if it already existed. It asked the Secretary-General to report in 1999.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [dec. 1998/103], the Subcommission entrusted David Weissbrodt (United States) with preparing a working paper on the rights of persons who were not citizens of the country in which they lived, to assist it in deciding in 1999 on the feasibility of a study.

Affirmative action

The Subcommission considered a working paper prepared by Marc Bossuyt (Belgium) on the concept of affirmative action [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/5]. He provided an overview of the main international rules governing affirmative action and the prohibition of discrimination. With respect to affirmative action in jurisprudence, there had been situations where specific groups of individuals had been subjected to systematic discrimination; in that regard, affirmative action in the jurisprudence of the United States Supreme Court and of the Court of Justice of the European Communities were presented. The report concluded that an inventory should be drawn up of constitutional and legislative national rules concerning affirmative action, as well as of national jurisprudence arising therefrom. It was suggested that a Special Rapporteur be appointed and authorized to request the High Commissioner for Human Rights to send a questionnaire to member States, international organizations and NGOs asking them to send relevant national documentation. Other questions to be considered were the relationship between the ban on discrimination and affirmative action; limitations, in terms of time and scope, of affirmative action; and differences arising in affirmative action according to various criteria, including race, sex, language and other factors, which differentiated between groups benefiting from the action.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/5], the Subcommission appointed Mr. Bossuyt as Special Rapporteur to prepare a study on the concept and practice of affirmative action, and asked him to submit a preliminary report in 1999. The Subcommission was of the view that the preparatory report should take into account the information and experiences generated from CERD and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (see PART THREE, Chapter X).

Other forms of intolerance

On 9 April [E/1998/23 des. 1998/21], the Commission on Human Rights reiterated the obligation of all States and the international community to promote universal respect for and observance of all human rights and fundamental freedoms; protect the human rights of those belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities; oppose discrimination based on race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status; counter manifestations of hatred, intolerance and acts of violence; promote and enhance tolerance and pluralism; and promote a culture conducive to promoting and protecting human rights, fundamental freedoms and tolerance. It called on the High Commissioner for Human Rights to include the promotion of tolerance in the work programmes of her Office through workshops and seminars and through its programme of advisory services and technical co-operation to assist countries in their national programmes; undertake educational initiatives and public-awareness programmes; and include information on activities carried out by the Office to implement the Commission's resolution in the report of the High Commissioner in 2000. Mechanisms of the Commission were called on to give high priority to the effective promotion of the values of democracy, pluralism and tolerance; study situations and conditions that promoted intolerance; and continue efforts to identify commonly accepted principles and best practices to promote tolerance and pluralism.

Follow-up to UN Year for Tolerance

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 51/95 [YUN 1996, p. 609], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Director-General of UNESCO [A/53/284] on the implementation of the Declaration of Principles on Tolerance and the Follow-up Plan of Action for the United Nations Year for Tolerance, adopted by UNESCO and observed in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1126]. The Assembly had proclaimed the Year in resolution 48/126 [YUN 1993, p. 1002].

The Director-General described activities carried out to observe the International Day for Tolerance in 1996 and 1997. UNESCO produced educational tolerance posters, a tolerance teaching kit and press kits. Several projects focused on children and screen violence. Other activities emphasized non-violence in educational institutions, religious tolerance in South-East Asia and literacy and training for women. The report described the work of four regional networks that were established to strengthen tolerance and non-violence (Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Latin America, Mediterranean/Black Sea Basin). Meetings and discussions were held and publications issued.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/151 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Follow-up to the United Nations Year for Tolerance

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/124 of 18 December 1992, 48/126 of 20 December 1993, 49/213 of 23 December 1994 and 51/95 of 12 December 1996,

Recalling also that the Charter of the United Nations affirms in its Preamble that to practise tolerance is one of the principles to be applied to attain the ends pursued by the United Nations of preventing war and maintaining peace,

Stressing that one of the purposes of the United Nations, as set forth in the Charter, is the achievement of international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Bearing in mind the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Reconfirming that tolerance is the sound foundation of any civil society and of peace,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the implementation of the Declaration of Principles on Tolerance and the Follow-up Plan of Action for the United Nations Year for Tolerance, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/95,

3. Invites the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to consider extending the material and moral support necessary for the functioning and enlargement of the existing regional networks of tolerance, non-violence and solidarity in the Mediterranean and Black Sea Basin, Asia and the Pacific, Africa and Latin America;

4. Also invites the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to consider the possibility of creating institutional networks of tolerance, non-violence and solidarity in other regions and subregions;

5. Welcomes the translation and dissemination of the Declaration of Principles on Tolerance in many languages;

6. Welcomes equally the experience gained during the celebration in 1996 and 1997 of the International Day for Tolerance, and invites Member States and competent intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to contribute to the celebration of the International Day by means of educational activities and public information campaigns aimed at the realization of more tolerant societies;

7. Invites Member States to continue their efforts to achieve a wider application of the Declaration;

8. Requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue to be the lead United Nations agency in the promotion of tolerance and non-violence;

9. Also requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to include in its report on a culture of peace, to be submitted to the Millennium Assembly, information on the progress made in the implementation of the Follow-up Plan of Action for the United Nations Year for Tolerance.

Discrimination against minorities

Declaration

Report of Secretary-General. The Commission on Human Rights had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/90] providing an overview of the concluding observations of human rights treaty bodies relating to the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities; the 1997 report on the visit to Australia by the Special Rapporteur on religious intolerance [YUN 1997, p. 636]; the activities of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the territory of the former Yugoslavia related to the situation in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia [ibid., p. 744]; and the work of the Working Group on Minorities in 1997 [ibid., p. 634].

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/19], the Commission on Human Rights urged States and the international community to promote and protect the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities, as set out in the 1992 Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 47/135 [YUN 1992, p. 723]. It called on the Secretary-General to make available, at the request of Governments, qualified experts on minority issues. The High Commissioner for Human Rights was asked to continue to improve the coordination and cooperation of UN programmes and agencies dealing with minority issues, to promote the implementation of the Declaration and to continue to engage in a dialogue with Governments to that end. The Commission decided to extend the mandate of the Working Group on Minorities with a view to its holding one five-day session annually, and asked the Secretary-General to assist the Group. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's action by decision 1998/246 of 30 July. States, UN bodies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs were called on to participate in the Working Group's activities. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 1999 on the implementation of the Commission's resolution.

Working Group activities. At its fourth session (Geneva, 25-29 May) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/i8], the five-member Working Group on Minorities reviewed the promotion and practical realization of the 1992 Declaration, examined possible solutions to problems involving minorities, including the promotion of mutual understanding between and among minorities and Governments, and recommended further measures to promote and protect the rights of minorities.

The Working Group recommended that its members prepare working papers on thematic issues, including conflict prevention in situations involving minorities, existence and recognition of minorities, multicultural and inter-cultural education, citizenship and rights of non-citizens and regional and universal mechanisms for minority protection, and visit countries at the invitation of Governments. It also decided that it would make available to Governments information on situations that had been brought to its attention and recommendations made; submit the working paper containing the Commentary to the Declaration, prepared by its Chairman, to Governments, agencies and NGOs for comments and suggestions in order to initiate a practice of developing interpretative comments on individual articles; call on the specialized agencies to provide information on their activities in advance of the session; ask NGOs to send questions on the role and activities of the agencies in advance of a session; contact research institutes and NGOs to review information on minority rights submitted by States to treaty bodies; call on NGOs to prepare a feasibility study on the establishment of a database on minority issues; prepare a pocket edition of the Declaration in national as well as minority languages; simplify its agenda; ensure more active State participation in its sessions; establish a voluntary fund to enable greater participation of minority representatives at its sessions; and encourage expert seminars between its sessions. Annexed to the Working Group's report was a list of recommendations presented at an expert seminar on the role of the media in protecting minorities, which met concurrently with the Working Group.

A note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/1998/91] listed the working papers before the Working Group at its second [YUN 1996, p. 610] and third [YUN 1997, p. 634] sessions.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [E/CN.4/1999/4 des. 1998/24], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to invite States, specialized agencies, other UN bodies, NGOs and scholars to provide comments to the Working Group on the Commentary to the Declaration. The Secretary-General was also asked to invite UN bodies and specialized agencies to provide information to the Group on their activities and programmes relating to minority protection. The Subcommission urged the Working Group to include an item on issues relating to the legacies of the slave trade on black communities in the Americas and to consider the recommendations of the seminar on the role of the media in protecting minorities. It recommended that the Commission on Human Rights consider establishing a voluntary fund to enable members of minorities to participate in the Working Group. It also recommended that the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) be strengthened to support the Working Group's activities.

Religious intolerance

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In a January report [E/CN.4/1998/6], the Special Rapporteur on religious intolerance, Abdelfattah Amor (Tunisia), provided an analysis of legislation relating to tolerance and non-discrimination concerning religion or belief. He also analysed information in the context of a status report on the 51 States that had been sent communications since the Commission's 1997 session. Because of drastic budgetary savings, the Special Rapporteur had been unable to publish his communications and the replies of States. The analysis gave rise to a general classification of the communities that had allegedly been the victims of violations of freedom of religion and belief, as follows: Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism and other groups, including Ahmadis, Baha'is, Jehovah's Witnesses, Hare Krishna and Scientology.

The Special Rapporteur visited the United States (22 January-6 February) [E/CN.4/1999/58/Add.1] where he met with representatives of the State Department, the Departments of Justice, the Interior and Education, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Equal Employment Opportunity Council. He also met with two Justices of the Supreme Court and human rights NGOs.

The report focused on the legal situation in the United States regarding religion or belief and on tolerance and non-discrimination. The Special Rapporteur analysed the religious and the non-religious areas and the relationship between religions, between beliefs and between society and the State. As to the legal situation, there was a well-developed Constitution and legislation. The two constitutional clauses relating to "non-establishment" and free exercise of religion constituted fundamental guarantees for the protection of religion and belief. Yet, the interpretation of those two clauses by the Supreme Court created problems, as they were seen by some people as prejudicing the freedom of religion and belief, especially of religious minorities. Concerning the free exercise clause, some religious communities felt that they were governed by a conception of the separation of religion and the State that required everyone to comply with the same rules and regulations. Regarding the "non-establishment" clause, the Supreme Court's interpretation appeared to be vague and confused. Federal legislation was fragmentary, only dealing with certain aspects of the freedom of religion and belief and certain infringements of that freedom.

The Special Rapporteur considered that the situation in the United States was satisfactory, but there were some exceptions, particularly as regards the situation of Native Americans. The Jewish community was satisfied as a whole and enjoyed a degree of liberty that it considered to be without equal. The situation of Muslims was distinctly less favourable, although in general it was not negative. The situation of Asian religions and "marginal religions" was generally satisfactory, although there were cases of discrimination at the workplace and obstacles relating to places of worship and attacks on them. Native Americans, however, had been exposed to a policy of assimilation, which many of them described as genocide. The Special Rapporteur identified weaknesses and gaps that diminished the effectiveness and hindered the application of several legal safeguards. He recommended that, in the legal sphere, the Native Americans' system of values should be fully recognized, ensuring that there was no incompatibility between the different federal, state and local laws and guaranteeing access to sacred sites. He also made proposals regarding the religious rights of Native American prisoners.

The Special Rapporteur recommended a campaign for greater sensitivity in the media so that they would refrain from putting out a biased and harmful message regarding religion and beliefs. Lastly, he emphasized the value of interdenominational dialogue in certain places he had visited.

The Special Rapporteur visited Viet Nam (19-28 October) [E/CN.4/1999/587Add.2] where he met with government officials, representatives of the Buddhist Association of Viet Nam, the Catholic Church and the Administrative Council of the Cao Dai Holy See. He also visited places of worship, religious training establishments and re-education camps where religious prisoners were held. The report focused on legislation and State policy on tolerance and non-discrimination based on religion and belief and on the situation of religious communities.

The Constitution guaranteed the right to freedom of religion or belief. However, an article that protected the freedom to believe or not to believe also addressed the limitations on freedom of belief, such as respect for the law and the policies of the State. In addition, a Directive of 2 July recognized religious belief as fulfilling a spiritual need and established guidelines for its control; it explicitly made religion an instrument of propaganda and mobilization of the people by the Communist Party and the authorities. Several provisions of the Directive, other Decrees and the Penal Code raised serious problems of compatibility with international law to the extent that they allowed the authorities to interfere with and exercise control over religious matters. The Special Rapporteur recommended revising those provisions.

As to the situation of the religious communities, limitations and prohibitions appeared to be valid for all religious denominations. The limitations related to the inability to establish and maintain religious communities freely and independently; subjecting religious communities to interference from the authorities; subjecting the training of the religious communities' clergy to a numerus clausus, requiring approval from the authorities for appointments of clergy and inaugurations of the highest religious dignitaries; restricting movement by the clergy; the need for approval for building and renovating places of worship; State interference in the publication of religious and cultural works; and restricting religious communities from extending their religious activities into social, health or educational matters. The Unified Buddhist Church of Viet Nam and the unofficial Khmer Krom, Cao Dai and Hoa Hao organizations were not permitted to carry out any religious activities, subject to penalties from the authorities. The Protestant denominations of ethnic minorities were also subject to penalties for the same reason, and there had been destruction of places of worship and ill-treatment. Religious prisoners were deprived of their religious freedom. Amnesties granted by the authorities to prisoners of different denominations held promise for positive changes.

Viet Nam submitted a detailed response to the Special Rapporteur's report, in which it discussed its Constitution, legislation and policies on religions and beliefs and current developments of free religious practice in the country [E/CN.4/1999/156].

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/18], the Commission on Human Rights, condemning all forms of intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, urged States to: provide adequate constitutional and legal guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief to all without discrimination; ensure that no one, because of religion or belief, was deprived of the right to life or the right to liberty and security of person, or was subjected to torture or arbitrary arrest or detention; combat hatred, intolerance and acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance; recognize the right of all persons to worship or assemble in connection with a religion or belief and to establish and maintain places for those purposes; ensure that members of law enforcement bodies, civil servants, educators and other public officials respected different religions and beliefs; ensure that religious places, sites and shrines were respected and protected; and promote and encourage tolerance through education and other means. The Commission extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for three years to examine incidents and governmental actions that were incompatible with the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, contained in General Assembly resolution 36/55 [YUN 1981, p. 881], and to recommend remedial measures. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's action on 30 July by decision 1998/245. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the Special Rapporteur, to submit an interim report to the Assembly in 1998 and to report to the Commission in 1999.

Interim report of Special Rapporteur. In August [A/53/279], the Secretary-General transmitted the Special Rapporteur's interim report, prepared in accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/122 [YUN 1997, p. 638]. The Special Rapporteur described his initiatives regarding the identification of legislation in the area of tolerance and non-discrimination concerning religion or belief and the development of a culture of tolerance. Information was provided on missions he had carried out since 1994 and the status of communications sent since the Commission's 1998 session, which ended on 24 April. He had sent 50 communications to 42 States and three urgent appeals to two countries. The deadline for receiving replies had not expired for 18 States, and of the 29 States for which it had expired 5 had replied. An analysis of the communications in the light of the principles, rights and freedoms contained in the 1981 Declaration gave rise to the following categories: violations of the principles of non-discrimination in matters of religion and belief; violations of the principle of tolerance in matters of religion and belief; violations of freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief; violations of freedom to manifest one's religion or belief; violations of the freedom to dispose of religious property; violations of the right to life, physical integrity and health of individuals (clergy and believers); and violations of women's rights.

Through the categories of violations, the Special Rapporteur noted the development of certain trends. State policies against religion and policies designed to control religious matters in the name of a political ideology had declined; State policies against minorities, especially against non-recognized communities such as sects or new religious movements, were on the rise; more and more policies and practices of intolerance and discrimination were being implemented by non-State entities; and policies and practices that discriminated against women, because of their status, which was determined by men's interpretation of religion and religious tradition, had increased.

The Special Rapporteur, among other things, recommended conducting a study on religious extremism and that a minimum set of standard rules and principles of conduct and behaviour in respect of religious extremism be defined and adopted by the international community; holding international intergovernmental meetings to consider and adopt a common approach in the area of human rights; launching studies on freedom of religion and belief and economic, social and cultural rights; and adopting the title Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion and Belief.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/6257Add.2], adopted resolution 53/140 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Elimination of all forms of religious intolerance

The General Assembly,

Recalling that all States have pledged themselves, under the Charter of the United Nations, to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Reaffirming that discrimination against human beings on the grounds of religion or belief constitutes an affront to human dignity and a disavowal of the principles of the Charter,

Recalling, in this fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 18 of the Declaration,

Reaffirming its resolution 36/55 of 25 November 1981, by which it proclaimed the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Recalling article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Emphasizing that the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief is far-reaching and profound and that it encompasses freedom of thought on all matters, personal conviction and the commitment to religion or belief, whether manifested individually or in community with others,

Reaffirming the call of the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, for all Governments to take all appropriate measures in compliance with their international obligations and with due regard to their respective legal systems to counter intolerance and related violence based on religion or belief, including practices of discrimination against women and the desecration of religious sites, recognizing that every individual has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, expression and religion,

Calling upon all Governments to cooperate with the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief to enable him to carry out his mandate fully,

Alarmed that serious instances of intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance, occur in many parts of the world and threaten the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Deeply concerned that, as reported by the Special Rapporteur, the rights violated on religious grounds include the right to life, the right to physical integrity and to liberty and security of person, the right to freedom of expression, the right not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and the right not to be arbitrarily arrested or detained,

Believing that further efforts are therefore required to promote and protect the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief and to eliminate all forms of hatred, intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief,

1. Reaffirms that freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief is a human right derived from the inherent dignity of the human person and guaranteed to all without discrimination;

2. Urges States to ensure that their constitutional and legal systems provide effective guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief, including the provision of effective remedies in cases where the right to freedom of religion or belief is violated;

3. Also urges States to ensure, in particular, that no one within their jurisdiction is, because of his or her religion or belief, deprived of the right to life or the right to liberty and security of person or subjected to torture or arbitrary arrest or detention;

4. Further urges States, in conformity with international standards of human rights, to take all necessary action to prevent such instances, to take all appropriate measures to combat hatred, intolerance and acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance and to encourage, through the educational system and by other means, understanding, tolerance and respect in matters relating to freedom of religion or belief;

5. Recognizes that legislation alone is not enough to prevent violations of human rights, including the right to freedom of religion or belief;

6. Emphasizes that, as underlined by the Human Rights Committee, restrictions on the freedom to manifest religion or belief are permitted only if limitations are prescribed by law, are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others and are applied in a manner that does not vitiate the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

7. Urges States to ensure that, in the course of their official duties, members of law enforcement bodies, civil servants, educators and other public officials respect different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate against persons professing other religions or beliefs;

8. Calls upon all States to recognize, as provided for in the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, the right of all persons to worship or assemble in connection with a religion or belief and to establish and maintain places for those purposes;

9. Expresses its grave concern at any attack upon religious places, sites and shrines, and calls upon all States, in accordance with their national legislation and in conformity with international human rights standards, to exert the utmost efforts to ensure that such places, sites and shrines are fully respected and protected;

10. Recognizes that the exercise of tolerance and non-discrimination by persons and groups is necessary for the full realization of the aims of the Declaration;

11. Encourages the continued efforts on the part of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief appointed to examine incidents and governmental actions in all parts of the world that are incompatible with the provisions of the Declaration and to recommend remedial measures as appropriate;

12. Encourages Governments to give serious consideration to inviting the Special Rapporteur to visit their countries so as to enable him to fulfil his mandate even more effectively;

13. Also encourages Governments, when seeking the assistance of the United Nations Programme of Advisory Services and Technical Assistance in the Field of Human Rights, to consider, where appropriate, including requests for assistance in the field of the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

14. Welcomes and encourages the efforts of non-governmental organizations and religious bodies and groups to promote the implementation of the Declaration, and invites them to consider what further contribution they could make to its implementation and dissemination in all parts of the world;

15. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue its consideration of measures to implement the Declaration;

16. Requests the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Special Rapporteur receives the necessary staffing, financial and material resources to enable him to discharge his mandate in full and on time;

18. Decides to consider the question of the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance at its fifty-fourth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Civil and political rights

Right to self-determination

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/113 [YUN 1997, p. 640], the Secretary-General, in August [A/53/280], summarized action taken by the Commission on Human Rights on the right of peoples to self-determination. He also summarized the replies of two Governments in response to his request for information relating to the right.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/624], adopted resolution 53/134 without vote [agenda item 109].

Universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and embodied in the International Covenants on Human Rights, as well as in the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Welcoming the progressive exercise of the right to self-determination by peoples under colonial, foreign or alien occupation and their emergence into sovereign statehood and independence,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of acts or threats of foreign military intervention and occupation that are threatening to suppress, or have already suppressed, the right to self-determination of an increasing number of sovereign peoples and nations,

Expressing grave concern that, as a consequence of the persistence of such actions, millions of people have been and are being uprooted from their homes as refugees and displaced persons, and emphasizing the urgent need for concerted international action to alleviate their condition,

Recalling the relevant resolutions regarding the violation of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights as a result of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation adopted by the Commission on Human Rights at its thirty-sixth, thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth, thirty-ninth, fortieth, forty-first, forty-second, forty-third, forty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-sixth, forty-seventh, forty-eighth, forty-ninth, fiftieth, fifty-first, fifty-second, fifty-third and fifty-fourth sessions,

Reaffirming its resolutions 35/35 B of 14 November 1980, 36/10 of 28 October 1981, 37/42 of 3 December 1982, 38/16 of 22 November 1983, 39/18 of 23 November 1984, 40/24 of 29 November 1985, 41/100 of 4 December 1986, 42/94 of 7 December 1987, 43/105 of 8 December 1988, 44/80 of 8 December 1989, 45/131 of 14 December 1990, 46/88 of 16 December 1991, 47/83 of 16 December 1992, 48/93 of 20 December 1993, 49/148 of 23 December 1994, 50/139 of 21 December 1995, 51/84 of 12 December 1996 and 52/113 of 12 December 1997,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the right of peoples to self-determination,

1. Reaffirms that the universal realization of the right of all peoples, including those under colonial, foreign and alien domination, to self-determination is a fundamental condition for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights and for the preservation and promotion of such rights;

2. Declares its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, since these have resulted in the suppression of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights in certain parts of the world;

3. Calls upon those States responsible to cease immediately their military intervention in and occupation of foreign countries and territories and all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment, particularly the brutal and inhuman methods reportedly employed for the execution of those acts against the peoples concerned;

4. Deplores the plight of the millions of refugees and displaced persons who have been uprooted as a result of the aforementioned acts, and reaffirms their right to return to their homes voluntarily in safety and honour;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give special attention to the violation of human rights, especially the right to self-determination, resulting from foreign military intervention, aggression or occupation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on this question to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Rights of Palestinians

On 27 March [res. 1998/4], the Commission on Human Rights, by a roll-call vote of 34 to 1, with 18 abstentions, reaffirmed the inalienable right of the Palestinian people to self-determination without external interference. It called on Israel to comply with its obligations under the United Nations Charter and the principles of international law, and to withdraw from the occupied Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and the other Arab territories, in accordance with UN resolutions. It asked the Secretary-General to transmit its resolution to Israel and all other Governments, to distribute it as widely as possible, and to make available to the Commission, prior to its 1999 session, information pertaining to its implementation by the Government of Israel.

The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/30] indicating that he had received no reply to his request to Israel for information on implementation of Commission resolution 1997/4 [YUN 1997, p. 640] on the situation in occupied Palestine.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/624], adopted resolution 53/136 by recorded Vote (162-2-6) [agenda item 109].

The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Aware that the development of friendly relations among nations, based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, is among the purposes and principles of the United Nations, as defined in the Charter,

Recalling the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Recalling also the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Expressing deep concern about the difficulties facing the Middle East peace process, and expressing the hope for rapid progress in the peace process and the achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides within the agreed time,

Affirming the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

1. Reaffirms the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, without excluding the option of a State;

2. Expresses the hope that the Palestinian people will soon be exercising their right to self-determination in the current peace process;

3. Urges all States and the specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system to continue to support and assist the Palestinian people in their quest for self-determination.

Mercenaries

Commission action. On 27 March [res. 1998/6], the Commission on Human Rights, by a roll-call vote of 35 to 9, with 8 abstentions, urged States to take legislative measures to ensure that their territories and others under their control were not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries. The Commission extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further three years and asked the Secretary-General to assist him. The Secretary-General was also asked to invite Governments to make proposals towards a clearer legal definition of mercenaries. OHCHR was asked to publicize the adverse ef-

The use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

(b) Approved the request of the Commission to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as a matter of priority, to publicize the adverse effects of mercenary activities on the right of peoples to self-determination and, when requested and where necessary, to render advisory services to States affected by the activities of mercenaries.

Abstaining: Belarus, Czech Republic, France, Latvia, New Zealand, Republic of Korea, Romania.

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/112 [YUN 1997, p. 642], the Secretary-General, in September [A/53/338], transmitted a report by the Special Rapporteur on the question of the use of mercenaries, Enrique Bernales Ballesteros (Peru). The Special Rapporteur described his activities and presented an analysis of the persistence and evolution of mercenary activities.

The information gathered by the Special Rapporteur confirmed that mercenary activity had not abated. On the contrary, it had diversified and its operating methods had been modernized. In recent years, there had been a proliferation of companies providing military advice and training and security, in exchange for money and a share in the exploitation of natural resources, the operation of services and other activities. Those companies hired mercenaries to take charge of military aspects. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Assembly reiterate its condemnation of mercenary activities and ask Member States to include in their domestic legislation express provisions characterizing mercenary activities as a criminal offence; appeal to States to ratify or accede to the 1989 Convention; recommend that they investigate the possibility of mercenary involvement whenever criminal acts of a terrorist nature occurred; provide for increased scrutiny, monitoring and evaluation of private companies offering security and military advice and assistance services; and authorize studies and the drafting of proposals for strengthening international prevention, action and response mechanisms.

In a later report [E/CNA/1999/11], the Special Rapporteur discussed his 1998 activities, the current situation regarding the use of mercenaries, the evolution of mercenary activities, and private security companies and mercenary activities. He concluded that, since the nature of the act and the classification of a mercenary had not changed, although the forms and operational methods had, the condemnation of mercenary activities and the use of mercenaries by the Commission on Human Rights and other UN bodies was still valid. He observed that the current situation was marked by the inadequacy of international rules dealing with and punishing mercenarism. The increase in companies providing security services and military assistance and advice on the international market, and their recruitment and hiring of mercenaries, raised serious questions about responsibility for human rights violations and encouraged impunity. The Special Rapporteur made a series of recommendations to the Commission.

An addendum [E/CN.4/1998/31/Add.i] to the Special Rapporteur's report on his 1997 activities [YUN 1997, p. 642] contained a reply from the United States in response to his request for information about investigations being carried out to determine to what extent groups opposed to the Cuban Government might be responsible for illegal acts against Cuba.

International Convention

As at 31 December, the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries had been ratified or acceded to by 16 States and had a total of 16 signatories. The Convention was to enter into force on the thirtieth day following the date of deposit with the Secretary-General of the twenty-second instrument of ratification or accession.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/624], adopted resolution 53/135 by recorded vote (115-18-35) [agenda item 109].

Use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/112 of 12 December 1997,

Recalling also all of its relevant resolutions, in which, inter alia, it condemned any State that permitted or tolerated the recruitment, financing, training, assembly, transit and use of mercenaries with the objective of overthrowing the Governments of States Members of the United Nations, especially those of developing countries, and recalling further the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Organization of African Unity, cern to all States and violate the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Urges all States to take the necessary steps and to exercise the utmost vigilance against the menace posed by the activities of mercenaries and to take the necessary legislative measures to ensure that their territories and other territories under their control, as well as their nationals, are not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries for the planning of activities designed to destabilize or overthrow the Government of any State, threaten the territorial integrity and political unity of sovereign States, promote secession or fight the national liberation movements struggling against colonial or other forms of alien domination or occupation;

7. Invites States to investigate the possibility of mercenary involvement whenever criminal acts of a terrorist nature occur on their territories;

8. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the fulfilment of his mandate;

9. Requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as a matter of priority, to publicize the adverse effects of the activities of mercenaries on the right to self-determination and, when requested and where necessary, to render advisory services to States that are affected by the activities of mercenaries;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to invite Governments to make proposals towards a clearer legal definition of mercenaries;

11. Requests the Special Rapporteur to report his findings on the use of mercenaries to undermine the right of peoples to self-determination, with specific recommendations, to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

12. Decides to consider at its fifty-fourth session the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Administration of justice

Working group activities. The five-member sessional working group on the administration of justice held meetings on 4, 7, 11, 12 and 17 August in Geneva [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/19] to consider follow-up measures to the 1992 Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 47/133 [YUN 1992, p. 744]; deprivation of the right to life, especially the imposition of the death penalty on persons under 18 years of age and on the mentally and physically disabled; summary, arbitrary and extrajudicial executions; habeas corpus as a non-derogable right; measures to be taken to give full effect to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]; juvenile justice; privatization of prisons; and recognition of gross and massive human rights violations perpetrated on the orders of Governments or sanctioned by them as an international crime. The Subcommission had established the group on 4 August [dec. 1998/101].

The working group approved an amended draft international convention on the protection of all persons from forced disappearance (annexed to the group's report) and asked the Subcommission to transmit it to the Commission. Following consideration of a report on the evolution of the death penalty prepared by El Hadji Guisse (Senegal), the Chairman-Rapporteur proposed that he submit an updated report at the next session. The working group approved the Chairman-Rapporteur's suggestion that Miguel Alfonso Martinez (Cuba) prepare annually an updated working paper on the privatization of prisons. The group agreed that Hector Fix Zamudio (Mexico) should prepare a study on the improvement and efficiency of the judicial instruments for human rights protection at the national level and their impact at the international level.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [res. 1998/25], the Subcommission transmitted the draft international convention to the Commission, together with its comments and those of the working group. It asked the Commission to invite Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to provide comments on the draft text.

On the same date [dec. 1998/110], the Subcommission endorsed the group's decisions to transmit the draft convention to the Commission; to ask Mr. Guissé to prepare an annual report on capital punishment; to ask Mr. Alfonso Martinez to submit an annual update on the privatization of prisons, taking into account information provided by Françoise Jane Hampson (United Kingdom); and to ask Mr. Fix Zamudio to submit a working paper on a possible study regarding judicial instruments for human rights protection. In order to avoid duplication with the work of other bodies, the Subcommission deleted from the group's agenda the items on juvenile justice and recognition of gross and massive violations of human rights perpetrated on the orders of Governments or sanctioned by them as an international crime.

Compensation for victims

Report of Secretary-General. The Commission on Human Rights had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/34] containing the views of States on the 1997 revised draft basic principles and guidelines on the right to reparation for victims of [gross] violations of human rights and international humanitarian law [YUN 1997, p. 649]. Annexed to the report was the full text of the draft principles.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/43], the Commission called on the international community to give due attention to the right to restitution, compensation and rehabilitation for victims of grave violations of human rights. It asked its Chairman to appoint an expert to prepare a revised version of the basic principles and guidelines, taking into account the views and comments provided by States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, and to submit it in 1999, with a view to its adoption by the General Assembly. The Economic and Social Council approved that request in decision 1998/256 of 30 July. The Secretary-General was asked to invite States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs that had not done so to submit their views as soon as possible, and no later than 31 October, and to make that information available to the expert.

Rule of law

The Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/53/309] on implementation of General Assembly resolution 52/125 on strengthening the rule of law [YUN 1997, p. 650].

The OHCHR technical cooperation programme assisted States in fortifying and consolidating the rule of law. In 1998, the trend of dramatic programme growth, which had characterized the decade, continued. Demand by governmental and non-governmental institutions of Member States remained high. However, neither the allocation under the regular budget nor voluntary contributions had proved sufficient to satisfy assistance requirements.

(See PART THREE, Chapter I, for further information on OHCHR technical cooperation.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/142 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Strengthening of the rule of law

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, by adopting the Universal Declaration of Human Rights fifty years ago, Member States pledged themselves to achieve, in cooperation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Firmly convinced that the rule of law is an essential factor in the protection of human rights, as stressed in the Declaration, and should continue to attract the attention of the international community,

Convinced that, through their own national legal and judicial systems, States must provide appropriate civil, criminal and administrative remedies for violations of human rights,

Recognizing the importance of the role that can be played by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in supporting national efforts to strengthen the institutions of the rule of law,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993, the General Assembly entrusted the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights with, inter alia, providing advisory services and technical and financial assistance in the field of human rights, enhancing international cooperation for the promotion and protection of all human rights and coordinating human rights activities throughout the United Nations system,

Recalling the recommendation of the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, that a comprehensive programme should be established within the United Nations with a view to helping States in the task of building and strengthening adequate national structures that have a direct impact on the overall observance of human rights and the maintenance of the rule of law,

Bearing in mind that the Office of the High Commissioner remains the focal point for coordinating system-wide attention to human rights, democracy and the rule of law,

Recalling its resolution 52/125 of 12 December 1997 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 1997/48 of 11 April 1997,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with appreciation the increasing number of Member States seeking assistance in strengthening and consolidating the rule of law;

3. Praises the efforts made by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to accomplish its ever-increasing tasks with the limited financial and personnel resources at its disposal;

4. Expresses its deep concern at the scarcity of means at the disposal of the Office of the High Commissioner for the fulfilment of its tasks;

5. Notes that the United Nations Programme of Advisory Services and Technical Assistance in the Field of Human Rights does not have sufficient funds to provide any substantial financial assistance to national projects that have a direct impact on the realization of human rights and the maintenance of the rule of law in countries that are committed to those ends but are facing economic hardship;

6. Welcomes the deepening of the ongoing cooperation between the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant bodies and programmes of the United Nations system, with a view to enhancing system-wide coordination of assistance in human rights, democracy and the rule of law, and, in this context, takes note of the cooperation between the United Nations Development Programme and the Office of the High Commissioner in providing technical assistance, at the request of States, in the promotion of the rule of law;

7. Encourages the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue the dialogue between her Office and other organs and agencies of the United Nations system, taking into account the need to explore new synergies with a view to obtaining increased financial assistance for human rights and the rule of law;

8. Also encourages the High Commissioner to continue to explore the possibility of further contact with and support of financial institutions, acting within their mandates, with a view to obtaining the technical and financial means to strengthen the capacity of the Office of the High Commissioner to provide assistance to national projects aiming at the realization of human rights and the maintenance of the rule of law;

9. Requests the High Commissioner to continue to accord high priority to the technical cooperation activities undertaken by her Office with regard to the rule of law;

10. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the High Commissioner to undertake an analysis of the technical cooperation provided by the United Nations in the field of human rights with the aim of formulating recommendations for inter-agency coordination, funding and allocation of responsibilities in order to improve efficiency and complementarity of action concerning, inter alia, assistance to States in strengthening the rule of law;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on the results of the contacts established in accordance with the present resolution, as well as on any other developments pertaining to the implementation of the above-mentioned recommendation of the World Conference on Human Rights.

State of siege or emergency

The Commission on Human Rights considered a note by the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/41] stating that the Special Rapporteur on human rights and states of emergency, Leandro Despouy (Argentina), had reserved the option of providing additional information on States or territories that, since 1 January 1985, had proclaimed, extended or terminated a state of emergency. Information updated to 28 February 1998 was provided by the Special Rapporteur [E/CN.4/1998/41/Add.1], who also clarified procedures for the publication of his final report [YUN 1997, p. 651], which contained a study on the protection of human rights during states of emergency.

Commission action. On 21 April [dec. 1998/108], the Commission, taking note of a 1997 Subcommission resolution [YUN 1997, p. 652] and the Special Rapporteurs's final report, requested OHCHR to submit to the Subcommission in 1999, and every second year thereafter, the list of States in which a state of emergency was proclaimed or continued. By decision 1998/279 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request.

Humanitarian standards

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Commission resolution 1997/21 [YUN 1997, p. 652], the Secretary-General, in January [E/CN.4/1998/87], presented an analytical report on fundamental standards of humanity. The need to identify such standards arose from the observation that it was often situations of internal violence that posed the greatest threat to human dignity and freedom. The report concluded that the development of fundamental standards of humanity was an initiative that deserved serious attention and outlined issues for further study. It suggested developing a profile of the most serious and frequent human rights abuses in such situations.

Also in January [E/CN.4/1998/87/Add.1], the Secretary-General presented the views of States and UN bodies regarding the preparation of the analytical report.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/29], the Commission, welcoming the analytical report, asked Governments, UN bodies, the human rights treaty bodies, mechanisms of the Commission, intergovernmental and regional organizations and NGOs to comment on the issues raised in it. The Secretary-General, in coordination with the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and within existing resources, was asked to continue to study and consult on the issues identified for further study and to report in 1999.

Privatization of prisons

On 17 April [res. 1998/32], the Commission on Human Rights, taking note of Subcommission resolution 1997/26 [YUN 1997, p. 648], asked the Subcommission to reconsider its request to appoint a special rapporteur on the privatization of prisons.

Detention

Arbitrary detention

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/41], the Commission on Human Rights encouraged the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention to continue its work regarding the situation of immigrants and asylum seekers. Governments were asked to remedy the situation of persons arbitrarily deprived of their liberty, to inform the Group of steps taken and to give attention to "urgent appeals" addressed to them by the Group. The Secretary-General was asked to assist Governments, special rapporteurs and working groups, with a view to ensuring promotion and observance of the guarantees relating to states of emergency embodied in international instruments, and to ensure that the Group received the assistance it needed. The Commission asked the Group to report in 1999.

Working Group activities. In 1998, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention held its twenty-first (11-15 May), twenty-second (14-18 September) and twenty-third (25 November-4 December) sessions in Geneva [E/CN.4/1999/63]. It transmitted 32 communications concerning 135 new cases of alleged arbitrary detention to 20 Governments, of which 12 provided information. The alleged cases were based on information submitted to the Group by detained persons or their families, NGOs and UNDP. In May and September, the Group adopted 21 opinions regarding 92 persons in 15 countries. A description of the cases transmitted and the contents of the Governments' replies, as well as the complete text of the 21 opinions of the Group were contained in a separate report [E/CN.4/1999/63/Add.1]. Cuba presented its comments on the Group's opinion concerning the deprivation of liberty of persons in that country [E/CN.4/1999/128]. The Group transmitted 83 urgent appeals concerning 763 individuals to 37 Governments and the Palestinian Authority. Of those appeals, 31 were issued by the Group jointly with special rapporteurs. Replies to the appeals were received from 13 Governments.

The Working Group visited Peru (26 January-6 February) [E/CN.4/1999/63/Add.2], at the invitation of the Government, to obtain information on laws and practices used to combat terrorism. Cases of imprisonment reported to the Group since 1991 all related to criminal charges of terrorism or treason. The Group concluded that the lack of independence of judges and prosecutors, especially military ones, changes to the rules of due process and the inappropriate description of criminal acts had led to persons being arbitrarily deprived of their liberty. On the positive side, it noted that progress had been made regarding the right to justice, and paid tribute to the Office of the Ombudsman and the Committee on Pardons. The Group recommended that: the Government re-establish tenure for judges and prosecutors, without discrimination for political or other reasons; the Committee on Pardons hand down its recommendations more speedily; and judges exercise more strictly their powers relating to the pre-trial release of detainees. The Group proposed that a joint study be carried out by regional and universal international organizations, relevant UN bodies and human rights and lawyers' and judges' organizations that would lead to an inter-governmental conference aimed at eradicating injustices committed by military courts. It outlined rules to observe if some form of military justice was to continue, including incompetence to try civilians; incompetence to try military personnel if the victims included civilians; incompetence to try civilians and military personnel in the event of rebellion, sedition or any offence that jeopardized or involved the risk of jeopardizing a democratic regime; and prohibition of the death penalty.

Regarding the situation of immigrants and asylum seekers who were allegedly being held in prolonged administrative detention, the Working Group visited the United Kingdom (21-25 September) [E/CN.4/1999/63/Add.3], at the invitation of the Government. The Group observed that the Government wished to help genuine asylum seekers by making it easier for them to seek entry into the country, but it sought to make the legal regime tighter for those seeking asylum on unfounded grounds. A person was allowed to stay in the country only if the procedures were not completed within 14 years, a period of time that the Group considered too long. There were also instances where persons who were awaiting deportation had been detained for long periods. The Group noted that the condition of the prisons and detention centres it had visited were humane and consistent with international legal standards. Among other measures, the Group recommended that the Government: detain people for the shortest possible time; provide detainees with the reasons for detention in a language they understood, and with a written explanation of their rights; review each decision to detain; hold detainees in special detention centres separate from those criminally charged; give detainees adequate access to legal representatives, relatives and officials of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR); specify in national law the maximum duration of detention; refrain from detaining unaccompanied minors; grant access to places of detention to specialized NGOs, UNHCR and legal representatives; and train staff in the special situation and needs of asylum seekers in detention.

The Working Group visited Romania (27 September-2 October) [E/CN.4/1999/7637/Add.4], at the invitation of the Government, to examine the situation of immigrants and asylum seekers who were allegedly held in prolonged administrative custody. The Group believed that illegal immigrants who might not have filed a motivated written application for asylum should be granted the same treatment as those who formally sought asylum as prescribed by the law. Otherwise, illegal immigrants were subjected to detention and removal or expulsion without any legal safeguards and without their expulsion having been ruled upon by a tribunal. The Group asked the Government to ensure that the criminal offence of crossing the border was not the basis for rejecting an application for asylum. It recommended that the Government sensitize border police personnel to the problems arising from the influx of illegal immigrants into Romania; apply protection against refoulement to all asylum seekers instead of recognized asylum seekers only; provide detainees with the reasons for their detention in a language they understood and with a written explanation of their rights and how to exercise them; train staff in the special situation and the needs of asylum seekers in detention; give detainees adequate access to legal representatives, relatives and UNHCR officials; and grant access to places of detention to specialized NGOs, UNHCR and legal representatives.

Juvenile detention

Report of Secretary-General. In a January report [E/CN.4/1998/35], submitted in response to Commission on Human Rights decision 1997/106 [YUN 1997, p. 654], the Secretary-General provided the replies of Governments, a UN body, an intergovernmental organization and an NGO on measures they had taken regarding human rights in the administration of justice, in particular of children and juveniles in detention.

The Secretary-General stated that poor economic conditions were the main obstacles to the establishment of an effective juvenile justice system. Where investments of economic and human resources could not be made, multilateral cooperation should intervene. The "abnormal situation doctrine", which allowed the incarceration of minors on the ground that they were at risk because of their social habits, was still popular. The risks and consequences of arrest and detention pending trial appeared to be underestimated, and concern was expressed at the various deficiencies of institutional treatment. In some countries, juveniles were incarcerated in the same premises as adults. The age for criminal responsibility remained one of the most controversial issues.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/39], the Commission welcomed the establishment of a Coordination Panel on technical advice and assistance in juvenile justice, which aimed to coordinate juvenile justice activities carried out by the UN system, as well as by NGOs, professional groups and academic societies involved in providing technical advice and assistance. It asked the High Commissioner to continue to give special attention to juvenile justice and called on its special rapporteurs, special representatives and working groups to give special attention to the effective protection of human rights in the administration of justice, and to make recommendations in that regard. The Secretary-General was asked to report in 2000 on practical measures to implement international standards relating to the administration of justice, particularly juvenile justice, including the role of UN technical assistance.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [dec. 1998/110], the Subcommission took note of the decision of its sessional working group on the administration of justice to delete from its agenda the item on juvenile justice in order to avoid duplication with the work undertaken by other bodies.

Detained UN staff members

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/126 [YUN 1997, p. 1475], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [E/CN.4/1998/33] on the security of UN personnel, based on views and comments provided by specialized agencies and related organizations. Regarding the Assembly's request for an independent study, from within existing resources, to shed further light on the safety and security problems faced by UN and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a UN operation, the Secretary-General stated that the study had not been carried out due to a lack of resources. Annexed to the report were the final conclusions and recommendations of the Special Rapporteur on the protection of the human rights of UN staff members, experts and their families issued in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 739], a consolidated list of staff members under arrest and detention or missing, and a list of staff members who had lost their lives since 1 July 1996. The report also contained a list of the status of signatures and ratifications as at November 1996 of the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 49/59 [YUN 1994, p. 1289] (see PART FIVE, Chapter III).

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/37], the Commission on Human Rights called on States to consider becoming parties to the 1994 Convention. It also called on States and others concerned to: respect and ensure respect for the rights of UN and other personnel acting in fulfilment of the mandate of a UN operation and to ensure their safety and security, as well as the inviolability of UN premises; provide adequate and prompt information concerning their arrest or detention; grant immediate access to such personnel by representatives of international organizations; allow independent medical teams to investigate their health and afford them medical assistance; allow representatives of international organizations to attend hearings; ensure the speedy release of arrested or detained UN and other personnel; and ensure that the perpetrators against them were held accountable for their actions.

The Commission asked the Secretary-General to: ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of UN and other personnel acting to fulfil the mandate of a UN operation and, when violations occurred, to ensure that such personnel were restored to their organization and to seek redress and compensation for damage caused to them; implement the Special Rapporteur's 1992 recommendations; seek, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning UN and associated personnel, the inclusion of relevant principles on protection contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 22 A (I) [YUN 1946-47, p. 100], the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, adopted in Assembly resolution 179 C (II) [YUN 1947-48, p. 190], and the 1994 Convention; to report to the Commission in 2000; and to submit, also in 2000, the study requested.

Forensic science

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the Commission in resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 638], the Secretary-General, in a January report with later addendum [E/CN.4/1998/32 & Add.1], presented government recommendations for experts to be included in the list of forensic experts and experts in related fields established by the Secretary-General, as well as their comments relating to training and employment of forensic experts. Information was also provided by the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (see PART FOUR, Chapter II) and the Victoria Institute of Forensic Medicine (Australia). The Secretary-General stated that an updated and supplemented list was available to the pertinent working groups, special rapporteurs and experts of the UN human rights mechanisms. He had not received any suggestions concerning the possible revision of the Manual on the Effective Prevention and Investigation of Extra-legal, Arbitrary and Summary Executions. Annexed to the report was a revised cooperation service agreement regulating the use of the forensic experts for Commission consideration and a list of recommended experts and institutions.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/36], the Commission on Human Rights asked OHCHR to consult with Governments, relevant UN bodies and the professional organizations of forensic and related experts mentioned in the Secretary-General's report, with a view to updating the list of experts. It also asked OHCHR to encourage the forensic and other experts to abide by the Principles on the Effective Prevention and Investigation of Extra-legal, Arbitrary and Summary Executions, adopted by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1989/65 [YUN 1989, p. 627]. OHCHR and the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Division of the Secretariat were asked to consider revising the Manual. In addition, OHCHR was asked to consider the possibility of forensic experts coordinating and producing additional manuals regarding clinical forensic examinations, conducted in a gender-sensitive manner, to document injuries that might have been caused by torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment; and examinations to identify children of persons who had disappeared or children who had been subjected to enforced disappearance. The Commission recommended that OHCHR encourage the dissemination and use of the manuals and organize courses to provide training in forensic activities relating to victims of human rights violations; establish procedures to evaluate the use of forensic expertise and the results of those efforts; and report in 2000 on progress made, including on the availability of a comprehensive and up-to-date list of forensic experts and on a revised standardized service agreement. The Secretary-General was asked to provide existing UN resources to fund the activities of OHCHR in implementing the Commission's resolution.

Impunity

In a January note [E/CN.4/1998/1111], the Secretary-General stated that he would make available to the Commission, pursuant to Subcommission resolution 1997/28 [YUN 1997, p. 655], the revised set of principles for the protection of human rights through action to combat impunity [ibid.], prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the question of the impunity of perpetrators of violations of human rights (civil and political), Louis Joinet (France).

On 17 April [res. 1998/53], the Commission asked the Secretary-General to invite States, international organizations and NGOs to provide him with their views on the set of principles; to ask States to provide information on steps they had taken to combat impunity for human rights violations and on remedies available to victims; and to report thereon in 1999.

Also in January [E/CN.4/1998/110], the Secretary-General stated that, pursuant to Subcommission resolution 1997/20 [YUN 1997, p. 655], he would make available to the Commission the final report prepared by El Hadji Guissé (Senegal), the Special Rapporteur on the question of the impunity of perpetrators of human rights violations (economic, social and cultural) [ibid.].

On 20 August [res. 1998/13], the Subcommission recommended that the Commission establish follow-up machinery on the question of the impunity of perpetrators of violations of economic, social and cultural rights.

Independence of the judicial system

Report of Special Rapporteur. In February, the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, Param Cumaraswamy (Malaysia), submitted his fourth annual report [E/CN.4/1998/39], covering his activities in 1997.

The Special Rapporteur transmitted 26 communications to 18 Governments and 18 urgent appeals to 12 States. Replies to communications were received from 12 countries and to urgent appeals from 8 countries. To avoid duplication, the Special Rapporteur joined other special rapporteurs and working groups to send seven urgent appeals to seven countries. He also joined with other special rapporteurs to send three communications to three countries. The report briefly summarized the communications and urgent appeals, as well as replies received from Governments. The Special Rapporteur expressed concern at the increased number of complaints regarding Governments' identification of lawyers with their clients' causes, which could be construed as intimidating and harassing the lawyers concerned. There had also been an increase in complaints of Governments' non-compliance with internationally accepted standards of due process, particularly in terrorist-related crimes, raising questions regarding the integrity, independence and impartiality of the courts. In addition, the Special Rapporteur expressed concern over the number of countries where judges were appointed on a provisional basis without security of tenure, in breach of the Basic Principles on the Independence of the Judiciary, adopted by the Seventh United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders in 1985 [YUN 1985, p. 757]. The problems faced by countries in transition in providing an independent and impartial justice system due to lack of resources and of infrastructure were cause for concern. The Special Rapporteur asked Member States to respond to the questionnaire on the Basic Principles.

The Special Rapporteur visited Belgium (23-27 November) [E/CN.4/1999/60] as a follow-up to his 1997 mission to the country [YUN 1997, p. 656].

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/35], the Commission on Human Rights asked the High Commissioner to continue to provide technical assistance to train judges and lawyers and to associate the Special Rapporteur in developing a manual on the training of judges and lawyers in human rights matters. The Special Rapporteur was asked to report in 1999.

Privileges and immunities of Special Rapporteur

In March [E/CN.4/1998/39/Add.5], the Special Rapporteur reported on the outcome of a hearing regarding four lawsuits against him in Malaysian courts for defamation stemming from an article entitled "Malaysian Justice on Trial". The hearing involved the application for leave to admit an appeal. The application was summarily disposed of; the Special Rapporteur had exhausted all his legal remedies on the issue of immunity before the domestic courts of Malaysia.

In a July note [E/1998/94 & Add.1], the Secretary-General reported on developments regarding the situation of the Special Rapporteur. He had appointed a Special Envoy, Maître Yves Fortier of Canada, who visited Malaysia in February to reach an agreement with the Government on a joint submission to the International Court of Justice (ICJ). In March, the Government informed the Special Envoy that it wished to reach an out-of-court settlement. The Special Envoy visited Malaysia in July and concluded that the Government was not going to participate either in settling the matter or in preparing a joint submission to the Economic and Social Council. He advised that the matter should be referred to the Council to request an advisory opinion from ICJ (see PART FOUR, Chapter I).

Capital punishment

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Commission resolution 1997/12 [YUN 1997, p. 657], the Secretary-General presented, in January, information received from States on changes in law and practice concerning the death penalty and similar information from specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs [E/CN.4/1998/82 & Corr.1]. Ninety countries had retained the death penalty for ordinary crimes; 61 were totally abolitionist; 14 were abolitionist for ordinary crimes only; and 27 were abolitionist de facto, in that they retained the death penalty for ordinary crimes but had not executed anyone in the last 10 years or more. The trend towards the abolition of the death penalty continued, with the number of totally abolitionist countries increasing from 58 to 61. There was also an increase in the number of countries ratifying international instruments that provided for the abolition of the death penalty. While no abolitionist country made legal changes to reintroduce the death penalty, four abolitionist de facto countries resumed executions. One retentionist country was reclassified as abolitionist de facto.

Commission action. By a roll-call vote of 26 to 13, with 12 abstentions, the Commission on Human Rights, on 3 April [res. 1998/8], called on States parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423], that had not done so to consider acceding to or ratifying the Second Optional Protocol thereto, contained in Assembly resolution 44/128 [YUN 1989, p. 484]. States that still maintained the death penalty were urged to: comply with their obligations under the Covenant and the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 44/25 [ibid., p. 561], notably not to impose the death penalty for any but the most serious crimes, not to impose it for crimes committed by persons under the age of 18, to exclude pregnant women from capital punishment and to ensure the right to seek pardon or commutation of sentence; observe the safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty, annexed to Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/50 [YUN 1984, p. 710]; restrict the number of offences for which the death penalty might be imposed; establish a moratorium on executions, with a view to abolishing the death penalty; and make available to the public information regarding the imposition of the death penalty. The Secretary-General was asked to submit a yearly supplement, on changes in law and practice concerning the death penalty worldwide, to his quinquennial report [YUN 1996, p. 630] on capital punishment and implementation of the 1984 safeguards.

Communication. On 29 July [E/1998/95], Singapore, on behalf of 51 States, transmitted to the President of the Economic and Social Council a joint statement on the question of the death penalty. The States placed on record their dissociation from the Commission's resolution, claiming that there was no international consensus that capital punishment should be abolished; the rights of the victims and the right of the community to live in peace and security had to be considered; and each State should study the issue. It was inappropriate to make a universal decision on the question in the forum of an international organization. In September [E/1998/95/Add.1], three additional States became signatories to the joint statement.

Other issues

Terrorism

Note of Secretary-General. The Commission on Human Rights had before it a note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/48] transmitting views regarding human rights and terrorism submitted by one Government, three UN bodies, one intergovernmental organization and three NGOs.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/47], the Commission on Human Rights, by a roll-call vote of 33 to none, with 20 abstentions, condemned violations of the right to live free from fear and of the right to life, liberty and security. It also condemned all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all their forms and manifestations, as well as incitement to ethnic hatred, violence and terrorism. The Secretary-General was asked to continue to collect information on terrorism and to make it available to the concerned special rapporteurs and working groups of the Commission.

On the same date [dec. 1998/107], the Commission, taking note of Subcommission resolution 1997/39 [YUN 1997, p. 658], decided, by a roll-call vote of 37 to none, with 16 abstentions, to approve the appointment of Kalliopi K. Koufa (Greece) as Special Rapporteur to conduct a comprehensive study on terrorism and human rights based on her working paper [ibid.] and to ask her to submit to the Subcommission a preliminary report in 1998, a progress report in 1999 and a final report in 2000. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her. By decision 1998/278 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision and its request to the Secretary-General.

A June note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/24] stated that the Special Rapporteur had informed the Secretariat that, owing to insufficient time between the confirmation of her appointment by the Commission and the deadline for submitting Subcommission documents, she was unable to prepare the preliminary report in 1998.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [res. 1998/29], the Subcommission asked the Special Rapporteur to submit a preliminary report in 1999, a progress report in 2000 and a final report in 2001. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

Hostage-taking

On 22 April [res. 1998/73], the Commission on Human Rights, condemning hostage-taking, demanded that all hostages be released immediately and without preconditions. It called on States to take measures to prevent, combat and punish acts of hostage-taking, and urged thematic special rapporteurs and working groups to continue to address the consequences of hostage-taking in their forthcoming reports to the Commission.

Extra-legal executions

Reports of Special Rapporteur. The Commission on Human Rights considered a report [E/CN.4/1998/68 & Corr.1 & Add.1] submitted by the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions (Bacre Waly Ndiaye (Senegal)), updating his activities since the submission of his previous report [YUN 1997, p. 659] and covering communications sent and received between 2 November 1996 and 31 October 1997. It included urgent appeals to prevent imminent loss of life and other communications alleging violations of the right to life that had been transmitted to Governments, together with replies or observations received from them. Issues of special concern to the Special Rapporteur related to violations of the right to life of women, minors, individuals carrying out peaceful activities in defence of human rights and fundamental freedoms, persons exercising their right to freedom of opinion and expression, persons belonging to national, ethnic, religious or linguistic minorities, and individuals who had cooperated with representatives of UN human rights bodies, the right to life and mass exoduses, the right to life and the administration of justice and the right to life and terrorism.

The Special Rapporteur concluded that there was no indication that extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions had decreased. During the reporting period, he had transmitted 960 alleged cases of violations of the right to life, as well as 122 urgent appeals on behalf of 3,720 persons, in addition to allegations concerning groups of persons for which no number of individuals was known. One of the most prevalent targets continued to be persons involved in struggles such as those to prevent or combat racial, ethnic or religious discrimination and to ensure respect for economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights, including rights to ancestral lands. Owing to scarce resources, the Special Rapporteur noted that the effectiveness of his mandate was hampered and his methods of work needed to be adapted accordingly. He made recommendations to Governments regarding capital punishment; death threats; death in custody; excessive use of force by law enforcement officials; violations of the right to life during armed conflict; genocide; impunity; and victims' rights.

The Special Rapporteur visited Sri Lanka (24 August-5 September 1997) [E/CN.4/1998/68/Add.2] to assess the situation of the right to life, investigate allegations of extrajudicial executions and check the implementation of certain measures introduced by the Government to safeguard the right to life, as well as its efforts to investigate, prosecute and prevent such occurrences. He concluded that abuses against the right to life had taken root within the internal armed conflict between the Sinhalese and the Tamils, with the armed forces and police acting as perpetrators who killed suspected insurgents and civilians perceived as supporting them. The Special Rapporteur expressed particular concern about the massacres and extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, especially of women and children, which had become a feature of daily life. In addition, certain laws and regulations allowed impunity to persist and, in some cases, granted security officers immunity from prosecution. Of particular concern were emergency regulations governing arrest and detention procedures and those governing post-mortems and inquests when deaths occurred in custody or as a result of official action of the security forces. The practices of the armed forces often failed to respect human rights. The Special Rapporteur welcomed measures taken by the Government to strengthen the protection of human rights, through the establishment of the Human Rights Commission and three commissions of inquiry into past disappearances, but he felt that more needed to be done to ensure that they could operate effectively.

Recommendations included seeking a peaceful solution to the armed conflict; creating a mechanism to encourage confidence-building between the Sinhalese and the Tamils; reforming the security forces; enhancing the cultural sensitivity of the soldiers; excluding from the police force those who had been involved in summary executions, massacres or other grave human rights violations; disarming and dismantling armed groups or placing them under strict control of security forces; disarming civilians; eliminating impunity; ensuring victims access to the mechanisms of justice; developing a system of compensation for victims' families; prohibiting the use of heavy weapons against civilians; ensuring the availability of forensic experts and ballistic analyses to obtain maximum evidence in an investigation; strengthening the justice system; revising emergency regulations; abolishing the death penalty; developing a policy to improve security; and establishing a national institution to find ways for national reconciliation.

The Special Rapporteur visited the United States (21 September-8 October 1997) [E/CN.4/1998/687Add.3] to review the application of the death penalty and to examine reports of deaths in custody and deaths due to excessive use of force by law enforcement officials. The Special Rapporteur believed that the practice of imposing death sentences and executions of juveniles in the United States violated international law, as did the execution of mentally retarded and insane persons. He noted with concern that guarantees and safeguards, as well as restrictions on capital punishment, were not being fully respected. Lack of adequate counsel and legal representation was disturbing. The imposition of death sentences continued to be marked by arbitrary factors, including race, ethnic origin and economic status. In addition, politics behind the death penalty raised doubts as to the objectivity of its imposition, as did the process of jury selection, which might be tainted by racial factors and unfairness. The Special Rapporteur expressed concern at reports of violations of the right to life as a result of excessive use of force by law enforcement officials. He recommended that the Government establish a moratorium on executions; discontinue imposing death sentences on juvenile offenders and mentally retarded persons, and amend legislation to bring it into conformity with international standards; not resume executions of women; restrict the number of offences punishable by death; encourage the development of public defender systems; include a human rights component in training programmes for members of the judiciary; consider asking the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers to visit the country; investigate alleged violations of the right to life and bring to justice police officials responsible; investigate patterns of use of lethal force; include training on international standards on law enforcement and human rights in police academies; and appoint special prosecutors to investigate allegations of violations of the right to life and to identify perpetrators and bring them to justice.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 1998/68], the Commission on Human Rights, strongly condemning all extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, demanded that Governments end those practices. It asked the Special Rapporteur to continue his mandate and report annually; respond to information he received; enhance his dialogue with Governments and follow up on his recommendations after country visits; continue to pay special attention to extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions of children and to allegations concerning the right to life pertaining to violence against participants in demonstrations and other peaceful public manifestations or against persons belonging to minorities; pay special attention to executions where the victims were carrying out peaceful activities in defence of human rights and fundamental freedoms; continue monitoring the implementation of international standards on safeguards and restrictions relating to the imposition of capital punishment; and apply a gender perspective in his work. Governments were urged to take measures to prevent loss of life during situations of public demonstrations, internal and communal violence, disturbances, tension and public emergency or armed conflicts and to ensure that police and security forces received training in human rights matters. They were also urged to assist the Special Rapporteur and to respond to communications he transmitted to them. The Commission extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for an additional three years. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's action and approved its request to the Secretary-General by decision 1998/265 of 30 July. The Secretary-General was also asked to continue to ensure that personnel specialized in human rights and humanitarian law issues formed part of UN missions, where appropriate, in order to deal with serious human rights violations, such as extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and to continue to use his best endeavours in cases where the minimum standard of legal safeguards provided for in articles 6, 9, 14 and 15 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights appeared not to be respected.

Other action. A September note by the Secretary-General [A/53/337] stated that in August Asma Jahangir (Pakistan) was appointed Special Rapporteur, following the resignation of Mr. Ndiaye. In view of the fact that she had just been appointed, the Assembly would not have before it an interim report as it had requested in resolution 51/92 [YUN 1996, p. 631].

On 4 November [A/C.3/53/SR.34], the Special Rapporteur, speaking before the Third Committee, stated that in the short time since her appointment she had transmitted to the Governments concerned over 450 complaints of violations of the right to life. In 1998, a total of 61 urgent appeals had been addressed to the Governments concerned; those whose lives had been threatened included 130 women and children, human rights defenders, humanitarian aid workers and members of the judiciary.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/147 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which guarantees the right to life, liberty and security of person, and the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Recalling also its resolutions 47/136 of 18 December 1992 and 51/92 of 12 December 1996, as well as Commission on Human Rights resolution 1992/72 of 5 March 1992, and taking note of Commission resolution 1998/68 of 21 April 1998,

Recalling further Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/50 of 25 May 1984 and the safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty annexed thereto and Council resolution 1989/64 of 24 May 1989 on their implementation, as well as the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 40/34 of 29 November 1985,

Deeply alarmed at the persistence, on a large scale, of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions in all parts of the world,

Dismayed that in a number of countries impunity, the negation of justice, continues to prevail and often remains the main cause of the continuing occurrence of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions in those countries,

Recalling, in this fiftieth anniversary of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, article 6 of the Convention, and acknowledging in this context the historic significance of the adoption by the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court,

Acknowledging the contribution of the Conference with regard to ensuring effective prosecution concerning executions in serious violation of article 3 common to the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, without previous judgement pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording all judicial guarantees that are generally recognized as indispensable,

Convinced of the need for effective action to combat and to eliminate the abhorrent practice of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, which represent a flagrant violation of the fundamental right to life,

1. Strongly condemns once again all the extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions that continue to take place throughout the world;

2. Demands that all Governments ensure that the practice of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions be brought to an end and that they take effective action to combat and eliminate the phenomenon in all its forms;

3. Reiterates the obligation of all Governments to conduct exhaustive and impartial investigations into all suspected cases of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, to identify and bring to justice those responsible, to grant adequate compensation to the victims or their families and to adopt all necessary measures to prevent the recurrence of such executions;

4. Notes the encouragement given to the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions to continue, within the framework of her mandate, to collect information from all concerned and to seek the views and comments of Governments so as to be able to respond effectively to reliable information that comes before her and to follow up communications and country visits;

5. Reaffirms Economic and Social Council decision 1998/265 of 30 July 1998, in which the Council endorsed the decision of the Commission on Human Rights, in its resolution 1998/68, to extend the mandate of the Special Rapporteur for three years;

6. Takes note of the statement made by the Special Rapporteur before the General Assembly on 4 November 1998;

7. Notes the important role the Special Rapporteur has played towards the elimination of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions;

8. Notes that the Commission, in its resolution 1998/68, requested the Special Rapporteur, in carrying out her mandate:

(a) To continue to examine situations of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and to submit her findings on an annual basis, together with conclusions and recommendations, to the Commission, as well as such other reports as the Special Rapporteur deems necessary to keep the Commission informed about serious situations of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions that warrant its immediate attention;

(b) To respond effectively to information that comes before her, in particular when an extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary execution is imminent or threatened or when such an execution has occurred;

(c) To enhance further her dialogue with Governments, as well as to follow up recommendations made in reports after visits to particular countries;

(d) To continue to pay special attention to extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions of children and women and to allegations concerning violations of the right to life in the context of violence against participants in demonstrations and other peaceful public manifestations or against persons belonging to minorities;

(e) To pay special attention to extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions where the victims are individuals carrying out peaceful activities in the defence of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(f) To continue to monitor the implementation of existing international standards on safeguards and restrictions relating to the imposition of capital punishment, bearing in mind the comments made by the Human Rights Committee in its interpretation of article 6 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as the Second Optional Protocol thereto;

(g) To apply a gender perspective in her work;

9. Strongly urges all Governments to respond to the communications transmitted to them by the Special Rapporteur, and urges them and all others concerned to cooperate with and assist the Special Rapporteur so that she may carry out her mandate effectively, including, where appropriate, by issuing invitations to the Special Rapporteur when she so requests;

10. Encourages Governments, international organizations and non-governmental organizations to organize training programmes and to support projects with a view to training or educating military forces, law enforcement officers and government officials, as well as members of United Nations peacekeeping or observer missions, in human rights and humanitarian law issues connected with their work, and appeals to the international community to support endeavours to that end;

11. Urges the Special Rapporteur to continue to draw to the attention of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights such situations of extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions as are of particularly serious concern to her or where early action might prevent further deterioration;

12. Welcomes the cooperation established between the Special Rapporteur and other United Nations mechanisms and procedures relating to human rights, as well as with medical and forensic experts, and encourages the Special Rapporteur to continue efforts in this regard;

13. Calls upon the Governments of all States in which the death penalty has not been abolished to comply with their obligations under relevant provisions of international human rights instruments, keeping in mind the safeguards and guarantees referred to in Economic and Social Council resolutions 1984/50 and 1989/64;

14. Again requests the Secretary-General to continue to use his best endeavours in cases where the minimum standard of legal safeguards provided for in articles 6, 9, 14 and 15 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights appears not to have been respected;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Rapporteur with an adequate and stable level of human, financial and material resources to enable her to carry out her mandate effectively, including through country visits;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue, in close collaboration with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in conformity with the High Commissioner's mandate established by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/141 of 20 December 1993, to ensure that personnel specialized in human rights and humanitarian law issues form part of United Nations missions, where appropriate, in order to deal with serious violations of human rights, such as extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions;

17. Requests the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on the situation worldwide in regard to extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and her recommendations for more effective action to combat that phenomenon.

Freedom of movement

On 17 April [dec. 1998/105], the Commission on Human Rights, taking note of Subcommission resolution 1997/30 and the working paper submitted by Volodymyr Boutkevitch (Ukraine) on the right to freedom of movement and related issues [YUN 1997, p. 660], decided to return, in 1999, to the question of the appointment of Mr. Boutkevitch as Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to leave and return to any country, including his own, on the basis of a further and extended working paper.

Mass exoduses

Report of High Commissioner. In a January report [E/CN.4/1998/51], the High Commissioner for Human Rights summarized information received from Governments, specialized agencies, special rapporteurs, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs regarding the main causes of mass exoduses, their effects on the persons concerned and impediments to a voluntary return home. In addition, the report presented measures taken to detect, prevent, mitigate or resolve situations of mass exoduses, as well as recommendations thereon, and data on numbers of State parties to selected human rights instruments. Most of the information related to cross-border movements. The responses revealed that mass displacement was caused predominantly by violations of human rights and humanitarian law. It frequently occurred in the context of armed conflict and regularly resulted from deliberate acts and policies, often associated with clear patterns of discrimination. The displaced received inadequate humanitarian assistance. Progress had been made through early warning activities, although those activities remained at an early stage of development and required sustained support to become truly effective.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/49], the Commission on Human Rights asked the High Commissioner to give attention to human rights situations that caused or threatened to cause mass exoduses or displacements and to contribute to efforts to address such situations effectively through promotion and protection measures, emergency preparedness and response mechanisms, early warning and information sharing, technical advice and expertise and cooperation in countries of origin, as well as host countries. The High Commissioner was also asked to invite Governments, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to provide information and to report in 2000. All UN bodies, the specialized agencies, governmental and intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and special rapporteurs, special representatives and working groups of the Commission were asked to provide the High Commissioner with information on human rights situations creating or affecting refugees and displaced persons (see also PART THREE, Chapter XII).

Report of Secretary-General's representative. The Secretary-General's representative, Francis M. Deng (Sudan), visited Azerbaijan (21 May-1 June) [E/CN.4/1999/797Add.I], at the invitation of the Government, to examine the problems posed by the protracted nature of the situation of internal displacement and to contribute to efforts to address them effectively. Azerbaijan, where most of the displacement was caused by the conflict over the territory of Nagorny Karabakh (see PART ONE, Chapter V), had one of the largest displaced populations in the world. Nearly one out of every eight persons in the country was internally displaced or a refugee. The situation was characterized by conflict-induced flight of large numbers of people along ethnic lines. The internally displaced were found in camps and public buildings, often in conditions of deprivation. A less common characteristic of internal displacement in the country was the strong sense of solidarity, due to ethnic kinship, between the Government and the majority of the displaced. The displaced, therefore, were not associated by the authorities with the "enemy" and targeted for abuses and attacks. That sense of solidarity extended to the search for durable solutions. While return was a possibility for some, the vast majority remained in an economic, legal and social limbo between the eventual goal of return and the need, in the interim, for a decent and dignified way of life. The basic needs of food and potable water, shelter, and medical and sanitation services were not being adequately met.

The representative recommended finding a solution to the conflict; ensuring basic needs; improving education services and economic opportunities; improving coordination between national and local authorities, reforming legislation governing NGO activity, safeguarding the right to freedom of movement and choice of residence, and ensuring that internally displaced persons were not discriminated against; conducting a new needs assessment, including one in the occupied areas; establishing a mine-assessment survey and mine-clearance programme in areas where return was possible; strengthening conflict resolution and reconciliation; assuring the voluntariness of return; and supporting alternative durable solutions, such as resettlement and reintegration.

Internally displaced persons

Reports of Secretary-General's representative. In February [E/CN.4/1998/53], the Secretary-General's representative reviewed progress made regarding the development of a legal framework for addressing the needs of the internally displaced, the promotion of effective institutional arrangements for meeting the challenges of protecting and assisting the internally displaced and attention to specific situations of internal displacement.

The number of those affected by internal displacement owing to internal conflicts, civil strife, human rights violations and other human-made or natural disasters was estimated at some 25 million in 35 to 40 countries. Although the international community had increased its capacity to respond effectively, the response had been ad hoc and large numbers of internally displaced persons remained with inadequate or no protection and assistance.

Also in February, the representative presented the second part of a compilation and analysis of legal norms relevant to the protection against arbitrary displacement [E/CN.4/1998/53/Add.I]. The first part was submitted in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 634]. The compilation and analysis (second part) examined the general international legal context in which States had obligations under international law not to displace arbitrarily persons under their jurisdiction. It examined the legal provisions relating to forced displacement found in international human rights and humanitarian law, including the grounds justifying displacement and the conditions under which it could be lawfully carried out, as well as protection of indigenous peoples in cases of displacement.

The study concluded that the prohibition of arbitrary displacement was contained only in international humanitarian law and in law relating to indigenous peoples. In general human rights law, that prohibition was only implicit in various provisions, particularly the right to freedom of movement and choice of residence, freedom from arbitrary interference with one's home and the right to housing. Those rights did not indicate the circumstances under which displacement was permissible and were subject to restrictions and derogation. Nevertheless, an analysis of international law demonstrated that displacement should not be discriminatory and might be undertaken exceptionally and in the specific circumstances provided for in international law. Prior to displacing people, authorities should ensure that all feasible alternatives were explored. Efforts should be made to obtain the free and informed consent of those to be displaced. Special protection should be given to indigenous peoples, minorities, peasants, pastoralists and other groups with a dependency on and attachment to their lands.

The representative developed a set of Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement [E/CN.4/1998/53/Add.2], which addressed the specific needs of internally displaced persons by identifying rights and guarantees relevant to their protection. The Principles were consistent with international human rights law and humanitarian law and applied to the different phases of displacement, providing protection against arbitrary displacement, access to protection and assistance during displacement and guarantees during return or alternative settlement and reintegration. They were intended to provide guidance to the representative in carrying out his mandate; to States when faced with the phenomenon of displacement; to other authorities, groups and persons in their relations to internally displaced persons; and to intergovernmental organizations and NGOs.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/50], the Commission on Human Rights extended the representative's mandate for a further three years and asked the Secretary-General to assist him. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's action by decision 1998/257 of 30 July. The High Commissioner was asked to develop projects, in cooperation with Governments, relevant international organizations and the Secretary-General's representative, to promote the human rights of internally displaced persons, as part of the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation. Rapporteurs, working groups, experts and treaty bodies were called on to seek information on situations that had already created or could create internal displacement and to include information and recommendations thereon in their reports and to make them available to the representative.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [res. 1998/26], the Subcommission urged States to ensure the exercise of the right to return to one's home and place of residence by all refugees and internally displaced persons and to develop legal, administrative and other procedures to ensure the free and fair exercise of that right. The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, in consultation with the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, within her mandate, was asked to facilitate the implementation of the current resolution. The High Commissioner for Refugees was asked, in consultation with the High Commissioner for Human Rights, to develop policy guidelines to promote and facilitate the right of all refugees and, if appropriate to her mandate, internally displaced persons, to return freely, safely and voluntarily to their homes and places of habitual residence.

Workshop. The Workshop on Internal Displacement in Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 19-20 October) [E/CN.4/1999/79/Add.2], organized by the Brookings Institution (Washington, D.C.), UNHCR and the Organization of African Unity (OAU), was held to promote the dissemination and application of the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement [E/CN.4/1998/53/Add.2] throughout Africa; to explore the role of Africa's regional and subregional organizations in addressing the problem of internal displacement; and to formulate concrete conclusions and recommendations in relation to the issue of internal displacement.

Population transfer

Commission action. On 17 April [dec. 1998/106], the Commission on Human Rights, taking note of Subcommission resolution 1997/29 [YUN 1997, p. 665], recommended to the Economic and Social Council that the final report of the Special Rapporteur on human rights and population transfer, Awn Shawkat Al-Khasawneh (Jordan) [ibid., p. 664], be published and disseminated widely. The Council approved the recommendation by decision 1998/292 of 31 July.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [res. 1998/27], the Subcommission decided to convene an expert seminar to assist in and to make practical recommendations for its further work on the right to freedom of movement, in particular with respect to a study on legal standards applicable to different types of forced displacement, for submission in 2000.

Freedom of speech

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/1998/40], the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression, Abid Hussain (India), described his activities and reviewed issues, including the right to seek and receive information, the media in countries in transition and their role in elections, the impact of new information technologies, national security and the right to freedom of expression as it related to violence against women. He summarized the texts of communications he had sent to 12 States and their replies thereto.

The Special Rapporteur concluded that there had been no change in the evolution of overall respect for the right to freedom of opinion and expression since the submission of his last report [YUN 1997, p. 647], except that in several countries democratic transformations and consolidations had brought about new liberties and freedoms. He observed that in some countries the authorities maintained firm control over the media and individuals' free speech. The Special Rapporteur encouraged States that had not ratified the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, pp. 423 & 419], to do so. Governments were urged to assure the full realization of the right to access to information. He recommended that reasonable steps be taken to promote access to the Internet. Governments were urged to remove formal and cultural obstacles to the exercise by women of their right to freedom of expression. The Special Rapporteur invited Governments, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and specialized agencies to present submissions on the relationship between freedom of expression and violence against women, as he hoped to prepare a report with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women.

In later reports, the Special Rapporteur described his visits to Malaysia (20-24 October) [E/CN.4/1999/64/Add.1] and Hungary (9-13 November) [E/CN.4/1999/64/Add.2].

The Special Rapporteur expressed concern at the extent of the limitations on the right to freedom of opinion and expression in Malaysia's national legislation. Certain wording in laws to protect the security and the integrity of the State failed to protect adequately the right as provided for by international human rights law. Freedom of the media was hindered by political and legal pressure on journalists, which had led to widespread self-censorship. The Special Rapporteur noted alleged obstacles to the free exercise of foreign media, particularly the prosecution of foreign journalists and governmental measures to restrict the broadcast of foreign electronic media.

Recommendations to the Government included taking steps to guarantee the protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression; reviewing cases of persons held for having exercised the right with a view to releasing them; repealing regulations on the annual licensing of newspapers; ensuring independence of the media; respecting the right of citizens to hold peaceful demonstrations and assemblies and adhering to international standards on the use of force against demonstrators; aligning its national law with the provisions of international law relating to freedom of opinion and expression; taking steps to sign and ratify the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and its Optional Protocols; and establishing an ombudsman's office and a human rights commission or a separate ministry for human rights.

Following his visit to Hungary, the Special Rapporteur welcomed the Government's commitment to democracy, the rule of law and human rights, particularly the right to freedom of opinion and expression. Although freedom of opinion and expression was widely apparent, freedom of the media had been hindered, and he recommended that the media be made less dependent on the patronage of the State, political parties and financiers. He was concerned at the use and implementation of certain laws to restrict that right, and observed that it was indispensable for journalists to have access to information held by public authorities. Concern was also expressed about allegations of political influence in television, which was attributed to a lack of independence of the National Radio and Television Commission (ORTT). Additional efforts should be taken to make Hungarian journalists sensitive to the needs of minorities, particularly the Roma. The Special Rapporteur recommended that, in addition to the establishment of three ombudsman institutions, a National Institution on Human Rights be set up. Recommendations to the Government included ensuring that the protection provided for in the Constitution and the Media Law was the rule and that any restrictions on the right remained the exception; considering measures to limit financial pressure on the media by providing temporary funding facilities to newspapers in financial difficulty; ensuring the independence of ORTT, strengthening efforts to disseminate human rights texts to NGOs, the mass media and the public; and providing adequate training to Roma journalists and using the media to improve the group's image.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/42], the Commission on Human Rights expressed concern at the detention and extrajudicial killing, persecution and harassment of, as well as threats and acts of violence and discrimination directed at, persons who exercised the right to freedom of opinion and expression and the rights to freedom of thought, conscience and religion, of peaceful assembly and freedom of association and the right to take part in the conduct of public affairs. It called for progress towards the release of persons detained for exercising those rights. The Commission appealed to States to ensure respect and support for the rights of all persons who exercised those rights; to ensure non-discrimination against them; and to cooperate with and assist the Special Rapporteur.

The Special Rapporteur was asked to draw the attention of the High Commissioner for Human Rights to those situations that were of serious concern; in cooperation with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, pay particular attention to the situation of women and the relationship between the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression and incidents of discrimination based on sex; continue to cooperate with other human rights special rapporteurs, special representatives, independent experts, working groups and other UN mechanisms and procedures; develop further his commentary on the right to seek and receive information and expand his observations and recommendations arising from communications; continue to seek the views and comments of the Governments and others concerned; and assess the advantages and challenges of new telecommunications technology. The Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to report in 1999.

Conscientious objection

On 22 April [res. 1998/77], the Commission drew attention to the right of everyone to have conscientious objections to military service as a legitimate exercise of the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion and called on States that did not provide such a system to establish independent and impartial decision-making bodies. It asked the Secretary-General to transmit its resolution to Governments, specialized agencies and relevant intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, to collect information from them, to include the right in UN public information activities and to report in 2000.

Disappearance of persons

Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/40], the Commission on Human Rights renewed for an additional three years the mandate of the five-member Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances. The Secretary-General was asked to ensure that the Working Group received assistance and resources, especially a database on cases of enforced disappearance. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/255 of 30 July, endorsed the Commission's action and approved its request to the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General was also asked to keep the Working Group and the Commission informed of action he had taken to disseminate and promote the 1992 Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 47/133 [YUN 1992, p. 744]. The Commission encouraged the Working Group to continue to promote communication between families of disappeared persons and the Governments concerned, while observing UN standards and practices regarding the handling of communications and the consideration of government replies. It was asked to continue consideration of the question of impunity, with particular attention to cases of children subjected to enforced disappearance and children of disappeared persons. In addition, it was asked to pay particular attention to cases that referred to ill-treatment, serious threats or intimidation of witnesses or relatives of disappeared persons, apply a gender perspective in its reporting process, provide assistance to States in implementing the 1992 Declaration, and continue deliberations on its working methods. The Commission asked the Group to report in 1999.

Deploing the fact that some Governments had never provided substantive replies concerning cases of enforced disappearances or acted on the recommendations by the Working Group, the Commission urged Governments to cooperate with the Group; protect witnesses and the lawyers and families of disappeared persons against intimidation or ill-treatment; shed light on unresolved cases and set up settlement mechanisms for families of those missing; and provide reparation for victims or their families. States were asked to take legislative, administrative, legal and other steps, including when a state of emergency had been declared, and to provide the Group with information on the measures taken and obstacles encountered in preventing enforced, involuntary or arbitrary disappearances and in giving effect to the Declaration.

Working Group activities. The Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances held three sessions: its fifty-fourth in New York (13-17 July) and its fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth in Geneva (28 September-2 October, 25 November-4 December) [E/CN.4/1999/62]. In addition to its original mandate, which was to act as a channel of communication between families of disappeared persons and Governments, with a view to ensuring that sufficiently documented and clearly identified individual cases were investigated and the whereabouts of the disappeared persons clarified, the Working Group monitored States' compliance with the 1992 Declaration.

The number of cases under active consideration stood at 45,825 and the number of countries with outstanding cases of alleged disappearance was 69. During the period under review—up to 4 December, the last day of the Group's third annual session—the Group had received some 1,015 new cases of disappearance in 31 countries. The Group regretted that out of the 69 countries with unclarified cases, the Governments of 32 countries did not communicate with it. It sent urgent action appeals to 23 Governments regarding 209 cases.

Owing to budgetary constraints, the Group did not include in its report comments on the draft international convention on the prevention and punishment of enforced disappearances (see above, under "Administration of justice") and on the implementation of the Declaration.

The Group concluded that full implementation of the Declaration was crucial. It emphasized the importance of cooperation with NGOs concerned with the problem of disappearances, and called on Governments to guarantee protection to them. It noted that, since its establishment in 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 843], it had transmitted a total of 48,770 cases to 79 Governments, of which 2,926 cases had been clarified. The Group stressed that impunity was one of the main causes of enforced disappearance and one of the major obstacles to clarifying past cases. In some cases, the Group was hindered because of the lack of cooperation on the part of the Government; it asked that the Commission take whatever steps were appropriate in relation to those countries. It appealed to the Commission to meet its need for resources. Annexed to the report was a table of decisions on individual cases taken by the Group during 1998.

Two members of the Working Group visited Yemen (17-21 August) [E/CN.4/1999/62/Add.1 & Corr.1], at the invitation of the Government, to study pending cases of enforced disappearances that had occurred as a result of a civil war in January 1986 in the former People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. They also considered other information concerning enforced disappearances.

Prior to the mission, most of the 102 cases of enforced or involuntary disappearances that were transmitted to the Government referred to persons who allegedly disappeared between January and April 1986 in the context of the fighting that took place between the two factions of the Yemeni Socialist Party. Government officials told the members of the Group that the current Government could not be held responsible for acts committed prior to unification by the Government of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. The Group concluded that those missing were probably executed immediately after their arrest, as affirmed by the relatives of the missing persons and human rights organizations. It noted that there was no strong interest on the part of the families and civil society for further investigations. The Group expressed concern that the Government had never acknowledged publicly the human rights violations in general and the disappearances; that the Government did not carry out further investigations and did not take legal steps to settle and clarify the cases transmitted in the past; and that enforced disappearances allegedly occurred in the past and continued to occur.

Recommendations to the Government included recognizing and regretting the events that led to the disappearances; establishing a special task force of the Supreme National Committee on Human Rights to settle the remaining legal issues with the families concerned; and submitting to the Group a report on the implementation of its recommendations not later than 28 February 1999. In accordance with the 1992 Declaration, the Group outlined legislative, administrative, judicial and other measures to prevent and terminate acts of enforced disappearance. Under the human rights programme of technical assistance, a UN expert would be sent to Yemen, initially for a one-year period, to assist the Government in establishing a database on disappearances, drafting a law on enforced disappearances, establishing a centralized register of persons deprived of their liberty, reducing the numbers and powers of law enforcement bodies, establishing an independent national human rights institution and carrying out other relevant tasks.

At the invitation of the Government, two members of the Working Group visited Turkey (20-26 September) [E/CN.4/1999/62/Add.2], where most of the disappearances concerned persons of Kurdish ethnic origin and occurred in south-east Anatolia, where the armed and security forces were combating the Worker's Party of Kurdistan (PKK). The Kurdish population numbered some 15 million, mainly living in the south-east and east of the country, a region that had been governed under a state-of-emergency regime since 1987.

The Working Group concluded that without a solution to the conflict between the Government and PKK, there would be no lasting improvement in the human rights situation in Turkey. In the past two years, the Government had taken measures to comply with its human rights obligations and to prevent or limit human rights violations, including preventing the practice of disappearances, speedy clarification of allegations concerning disappearances, reducing the number of disappearances and eliminating impunity. The Group recommended: amending regulations concerning pre-trial and incommunicado detention in cases referred to the State security courts in order to guarantee the right of detainees to have prompt access to their families and lawyers; making acts of enforced disappearance a crime; establishing rules about the conditions under which officials were authorized to detain persons; and strengthening government cooperation with NGOs and giving them sufficient guarantees to carry out their activities.

1992 Declaration

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 51/94 [YUN 1996, p. 636], the Secretary-General, in August [A/53/304], described action taken to disseminate and promote the 1992 Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance [YUN 1992, p. 744].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/150 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Question of enforced or involuntary disappearances

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and the other relevant international human rights instruments,

Recalling its resolution 33/173 of 20 December 1978 concerning disappeared persons and its resolutions 46/125 of 17 December 1991, 49/193 of 23 December 1994 and 51/94 of 12 December 1996 on the question of enforced or involuntary disappearances,

Recalling also its resolution 47/133 of 18 December 1992 proclaiming the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance as a body of principles for all States,

Expressing concern that, according to the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances of the Commission on Human Rights, the practice of a number of States can run counter to the Declaration,

Deeply concerned, in particular, by the intensification of enforced disappearances in various regions of the world and by the growing number of reports concerning the harassment, ill-treatment and intimidation of witnesses of disappearances or relatives of persons who have disappeared,

Convinced that further efforts are needed to promote wider awareness of and respect for the Declaration, and taking note in this regard of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/40 of 17 April 1998,

1. Reaffirms that any act of enforced disappearance is an offence to human dignity and a grave and flagrant violation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and reaffirmed and developed in other international instruments in this field, as well as a violation of the rules of international law;

2. Reiterates its invitation to all Governments to take appropriate legislative or other steps to prevent and suppress the practice of enforced disappearances, in keeping with the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, and to take action to that end at the national and regional levels and in cooperation with the United Nations, including through technical assistance;

3. Calls upon Governments to take steps to ensure that, when a state of emergency is introduced, the protection of human rights is ensured, in particular as regards the prevention of enforced disappearances;

4. Reminds Governments of the need to ensure that their competent authorities conduct prompt and impartial inquiries in all circumstances, whenever there is a reason to believe that an enforced disappearance has occurred in territory under their jurisdiction, and that, if allegations are confirmed, perpetrators should be prosecuted;

5. Once again urges the Governments concerned to take steps to protect the families of disappeared persons against any intimidation or ill-treatment to which they might be subjected;

6. Encourages States, as some have already done, to provide concrete information on measures taken to give effect to the Declaration, as well as obstacles encountered;

7. Requests all States to consider the possibility of disseminating the text of the Declaration in their respective national languages and to facilitate its dissemination in local languages;

8. Notes the action taken by non-governmental organizations to encourage implementation of the Declaration, and invites them to continue to facilitate its dissemination and to contribute to the work of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights;

9. Expresses its appreciation to the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances of the Commission on Human Rights for its humanitarian work;

10. Requests the Working Group, in the continued exercise of its mandate, to take into account the provisions of the Declaration and to modify its working methods, if necessary;

11. Recalls the importance of the Working Group, the primary role of which is, as described in its reports, to act as a channel of communication between the families of disappeared persons and the Governments concerned, with a view to ensuring that sufficiently documented and clearly identified individual cases are investigated, and to ascertain whether such information falls under its mandate and contains the required elements, and invites the Group to continue to seek the views and comments of all concerned, including Member States, in preparing its report;

12. Invites the Working Group to identify obstacles to the realization of the provisions of the Declaration, to recommend ways of overcoming those obstacles and, in this regard, to continue a dialogue with Governments and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations;

13. Encourages the Working Group to continue to consider the question of impunity, in close collaboration with the rapporteur appointed by the Subcommission and with due regard for the relevant provisions of the Declaration;

14. Requests the Working Group to pay the utmost attention to cases of children subjected to enforced disappearance and children of disappeared persons and to cooperate closely with the Governments concerned to search for and identify those children;

15. Appeals to the Governments concerned, in particular those which have not yet replied to the communications transmitted by the Working Group, to cooperate fully with it and, in particular, to reply promptly to its requests for information so that, while respecting its working methods based on discretion, it may perform its strictly humanitarian role;

16. Encourages the Governments concerned to give serious consideration to inviting the Working Group to visit their countries so as to enable the Group to fulfil its mandate even more effectively;

17. Expresses its profound thanks to the many Governments that have cooperated with the Working Group and replied to its requests for information and to the Governments that have invited the Group to visit their countries, asks them to give all necessary attention to the recommendations of the Group, and invites them to inform the Group of any action they take on those recommendations;

18. Calls upon the Commission on Human Rights to continue to study this question as a matter of priority and to take any steps it may deem necessary to the pursuit of the task of the Working Group and to the follow-up of its recommendations when it considers the report to be submitted by the Group to the Commission at its fifty-fifth session;

19. Renews its requests to the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Working Group with all the facilities it requires to perform its functions, especially for carrying out missions and following them up;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to keep it informed of the steps he takes to secure the widespread dissemination and promotion of the Declaration;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to it at its fifty-fifth session a report on the steps taken to implement the present resolution;

22. Decides to consider the question of enforced disappearances, and in particular the implementation of the Declaration, at its fifty-fifth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

Missing persons in the former Yugoslavia

Commission action. By a roll-call vote of 41 to none, with 12 abstentions, the Commission on Human Rights, on 22 April [res. 1998/79], endorsing the efforts of the International Commission on Missing Persons in the Former Yugoslavia [YUN 1996, p. 638], asked it to continue to provide supplies for the Bosnian exhumation process and resources and support for families and family associations of the missing, support the forensic experts of NGOs and bring the concerns of families to the attention of the political leadership of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) (FRY). The Commission commended Serb, Croat and Bosniac leaders for restarting the exhumation process chaired by the Office of the High Representative (see PART ONE, Chapter V) and the International Commission for securing the release of 16 prisoners of war held by Croatia and for obtaining from FRY 1,200 Vukovar death protocols for Croatia. The parties were called on to release individuals held as a result of conflict, provide information on lists of detainees unaccounted for as presented to the relevant authorities by ICRC, and allow unannounced visits to places of detention; resume and expand the joint exhumation process in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and refrain from compromising mass grave sites or destroying forensic evidence; and comply with their obligations to investigate enforced disappearances. Croatia was asked to turn over all relevant material on missing persons. The Bosnian Serb authorities were asked to support the reconciliation process by reaching out to family associations from all ethnic groups and to allow burial of remains in the Srebrenica area. The international community was called on to provide resources to the International Commission and to the Office of the High Representative to support the exhumation and identification process, provide support to family associations in all three countries and enable those bodies to resolve the question of missing persons; and to ensure the excavations of mortal remains were undertaken in conformity with internationally accepted practice. (See PART TWO, Chapter III.)

Torture and cruel treatment

Reports of Special Rapporteur. The Commission on Human Rights considered the annual report of the Special Rapporteur on torture [E/CNA/1998/38], Nigel S. Rodley (United Kingdom), summarizing his 1997 activities. He had sent 48 letters to 45 Governments on behalf of 380 individuals and 24 groups involving some 655 persons, and also transmitted 119 urgent appeals to 45 countries on behalf of some 563 individuals (9 known to be minors), as well as 22 groups of persons (one involving some 780 children) with regard to whom fears had been expressed that they might be subjected to torture. The Special Rapporteur also transmitted to Governments allegations of a more general nature regarding torture practices, whenever those allegations were brought to his attention. In addition, 28 countries provided him with replies on some 345 cases and 19 did so regarding some 290 cases submitted in previous years. The Special Rapporteur provided brief summaries of general allegations and numerical statistics of individual cases transmitted and responses received, as well as his observations where applicable. More complete summaries were contained in an addendum to his report [E/CN. A/1998/38/Add.1].

The Special Rapporteur expressed disappointment at the high incidence of torture in many countries, while noting that it had substantially diminished in those where UN field operations were in place, pursuant to a peace agreement. He presented recommendations concerning international and universal jurisdiction that could be taken by the international community to help end impunity of the perpetrators, which, he stated, was at the core of the problem. He urged States to review their legislation to ensure that they could exercise criminal jurisdiction over any person suspected of torture or of any crime falling within the notions of war crimes or crimes against humanity.

The Special Rapporteur visited Turkey (9-19 November) [E/CN.4/1999/61/Add.1], at the invitation of the Government, in order better to assess the situation of torture there. He did not view the practice of approved torture as systematic. While there had been a substantial reduction in the brutality of methods used, the worst of them still occurred in some places. New periods of incommunicado detention were being respected, thus restricting the amount of time available for the infliction of ill-treatment and of time for visible signs of ill-treatment to heal. The strengthening of medical checks of detainees on arrival in and departure from police custody, as well as on arrival in remand prisons, had an impact on the nature and quality of allegations of torture.

The Special Rapporteur recommended ensuring prompt access to a lawyer; ensuring that extensions of police custody not to exceed four days from arrest were ordered by a judge; expanding automatic audio- and videotaping of police and jandarma questioning; ensuring the independence of medical personnel; suspending from duty any public official indicted for infliction or complicity in torture or ill-treatment; establishing procedures for internal monitoring and disciplining of the behaviour of police and jandarma agents; removing from police service and prosecuting those involved in obtaining confessions under torture; inviting ICRC to establish a presence; and extending invitations to the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers and to the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention to visit the country. Prosecutors and judges should investigate allegations of torture made by detainees and speed up trials and appeals of public officials indicted for torture or ill-treatment.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/38], the Commission on Human Rights called on Governments to prohibit torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and reminded them that corporal punishment could amount to inhuman or degrading punishment or even torture. It also reminded them that prolonged incommunicado detention might facilitate the perpetration of torture and could constitute a form of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. Governments, the High Commissioner for Human Rights and UN bodies and agencies, as well as relevant intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, were called on to commemorate 26 June as the UN International Day in Support of Victims of Torture, as proclaimed in General Assembly resolution 52/149 [YUN 1997, p. 667]. States were urged to become parties to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which was adopted by the Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813] (see preceding chapter).

The Commission renewed the Special Rapporteur's mandate for an additional three years and invited him to present an oral interim report to the Assembly on the overall trends and developments regarding his mandate. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/254 of 30 July, endorsed the Commission's action.

Oral report of Special Rapporteur. On 5 November [A/C.3/53/SR.35], the Special Rapporteur informed the General Assembly's Third Committee that cases of torture and similar cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment involved between 60 and 80 countries annually. Increasingly, reports suggested that victims were no longer only persons with perceived or real political affiliations as in the past, but also persons involved in ordinary criminal activity. Torture was a crime in most, if not all, national legal systems, as well as under international law. Perpetrators of torture evaded the ordinary courts and were often protected by the military justice system. The elimination of torture could not become a reality unless the obstacle of impunity was removed. On the positive side, Governments were more responsive to his communications. Among his many recommendations, three stood out: States should not tolerate solitary confinement for periods of more than 24 to 48 hours; all States should ratify the Statute of the International Criminal Court as soon as possible; and all States should adopt legislation enabling them to prosecute the perpetrators of crimes against human rights.

Voluntary Fund for torture victims

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/38], the Commission on Human Rights called on the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture to present in 1999 an updated assessment of the global need for international funding for rehabilitation services for torture victims. It expressed appreciation for contributions to the Fund and appealed to all Governments, organizations and individuals in a position to do so to contribute annually. The Secretary-General was asked to continue to include the Fund among the programmes receiving donations at the annual UN Pledging Conference for Development Activities; transmit the Commission's appeals for contributions to Governments; ensure adequate staffing and technical facilities for UN bodies and mechanisms dealing with torture; and continue to keep the Commission informed annually of the Fund's operations. By decision 1998/254 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's requests to the Secretary-General.

Report of Secretary-General. In his annual report on the status of the Fund [A/53/283], submitted in August, the Secretary-General stated that contributions from 37 countries received between 25 September 1997 and 31 July 1998 totalled $4,523,791. Contributions from two NGOs and a private individual totalled $5,210.

The Board of Trustees held its seventeenth session in Geneva (11-22 May). The total amount then available for grants came to $4,210,000, of which $100,000 was earmarked for urgent grants falling between the Board's annual sessions. In 1998, $6.8 million was requested for 118 projects in 54 countries. On 5 June, the High Commissioner for Human Rights, on behalf of the Secretary-General, approved the Board's recommendations on grants to 114 projects presented by 105 humanitarian organizations in 53 countries. Grants totalling $4,110,000 were distributed as follows: Europe (40 projects, 18 countries, $1,440,000); Latin America and the Caribbean (21 projects, 11 countries, $735,000); North America (21 projects, 2 countries, $657,000); Asia, Pacific and the Middle East (15 projects, 9 countries, $647,000); and Africa (17 projects, 13 countries, $631,000). The report noted that grants awarded to organizations in North America and in Western Europe were used to treat victims of torture from many countries in other regions of the world, mainly applicants for asylum and refugee torture victims. Annexed to the report was the joint declaration on the International Day in Support of Victims of Torture (26 June), issued by the Committee against Torture, the Fund's Board of Trustees, the Special Rapporteur and the High Commissioner for Human Rights, and the Secretary-General's message on that occasion.

A later report of the Secretary-General stated that an additional $714,275 had been received after 22 May 1998 for allocation at the eighteenth session of the Board in May 1999 [E/CN.4/1999/55]. Annexed to the report was the text of the United States Torture Victims Relief Act of 1998, which authorized the President to allocate $3 million to the Fund in 1999 and in 2000 as multilateral assistance for victims of torture. The Act also provided for $5 million in 1999 and $7.5 million in 2000 for rehabilitation centres for victims of torture located in the United States. An identical amount was earmarked for treatment centres abroad. The Act was signed into law in October.

Peace and security

Weapons of mass destruction

A July note by the Secretariat [E/CN.47 Sub.S/1998/23] stated that Clemencia Forero Ucos (Colombia), authorized by the Subcommission in resolutions 1997/36 and 1997/37 [YUN 1997, p. 668] to prepare a working paper on a study on weapons of mass destruction or with indiscriminate effect, or of a nature to cause superfluous injury or unnecessary suffering, was unable to do so in 1998.

On 26 August [dec. 1998/111], the Subcommission asked Ms. Forero Ucos to submit the working paper in 1999.

Anti-personnel landmines

On 26 August [res. 1998/30], the Subcommission urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects [YUN 1980, p. 76], including the 1996 amended Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) [YUN 1996, p. 484], as well as the 1997 Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling,

Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction [YUN 1997, p. 503]. The Secretary-General was asked to reiterate to Governments, particularly those that had laid anti-personnel landmines in or sold them to other States, the Subcommittee's appeal for contributions to the mine-clearance programme and the Voluntary Trust Fund for Assistance in Mine Clearance established in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 823]. (See also PART ONE, Chapter VII.)

Economic, social and cultural rights

Right to development

Commission action. On 22 April [E/1998/723 (res. 1998/72)], the Commission on Human Rights, reaffirming the importance of the right to economic and social advancement for everyone, particularly in developing countries, urged States to eliminate obstacles to development by pursuing the promotion and protection of economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights and by implementing development programmes and promoting international cooperation.

In view of the urgent need to make further progress towards the right to development, as set out in the Declaration on the Right to Development, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 41/128 [YUN 1986, p. 717], the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the establishment, initially for a three-year period, of a follow-up mechanism consisting of an open-ended working group. The Commission recommended the terms of the group's mandate and the appointment of an independent expert to present to the working group, at each of its sessions, a study on the current state of progress in implementing the right to development. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the working group and the expert.

The Commission asked the High Commissioner for Human Rights to report each year for the duration of the mechanism, to provide interim reports to the working group and to make the reports available to the independent expert. It urged the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to continue to implement its resolution 1997/72 [YUN 1997, p. 669]. The Secretary-General was asked to report to the Assembly in 1998 and to the Commission in 1999 on the implementation of the current resolution.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/1998/23], adopted decision 1998/269 without vote [agenda item 14 (g)].

The right to development

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 30 July 1998, the Economic and Social Council, taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/72 of 22 April 1998, endorsed the recommendation of the Commission, in view of the urgent need to make further progress towards the realization of the right to development as elaborated in the Declaration on the Right to Development, to establish a follow-up mechanism, initially for a period of three years, consisting of:

- (a) The establishment of an open-ended working group to meet for a period of five working days each year, after the fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth sessions of the Commission on Human Rights, with a mandate:
  - (i) To monitor and review progress made in the promotion and implementation of the right to development as elaborated in the Declaration on the Right to Development, at the national and international levels, providing recommendations thereon and further analysing obstacles to its full enjoyment, focusing each year on specific commitments in the Declaration;
  - (ii) To review reports and any other information submitted by States, United Nations agencies, other relevant international organizations and non-governmental organizations on the relationship between their activities and the right to development;
  - (iii) To submit to the Commission on Human Rights for consideration a sessional report on its deliberations, including advice to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights with regard to the implementation of the right to development, and suggesting possible programmes of technical assistance at the request of interested countries with the aim of promoting the implementation of the right to development;
- (b) The appointment by the Chairman of the Commission on Human Rights of an independent expert with high competence in the field of the right to development, with a mandate to submit to the working group at each of its sessions a study on the current state of progress in the implementation of the right to development as a basis for a focused discussion, taking into account, inter alia, the deliberations and suggestions of the working group.

Following the Council's action, Arjun Sen Gupta (India) was appointed as independent expert.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [E/CN.4/1999/4 (dec. 1998/105)], recalling its resolution 1996/22 [YUN 1996, p. 643] requesting the Secretary-General to invite all relevant UN bodies and agencies to step up their activities aimed at international cooperation for the realization of the right to development in the context of the UN Decade for the Elimination of Poverty (1997-2006) (see PART THREE, Chapter I) and to provide him with information thereon, and requesting him to transmit annually the information received, the Subcommission asked the Commission to transmit resolution 1996/22 again to the Secretary-General.

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Commission resolution 1997/17 [YUN 1997, p. 599], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.4/1998/25] containing the views of Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies, an inter-governmental organization and NGOs on the appointment of a special rapporteur to encourage economic, social and cultural rights. The Secretary-General noted that the most common opinion on the appointment was that his/her work would overlap the activities of other organizations. Other replies saw the appointment as a way to overcome obstacles to the realization of the rights and to protect vulnerable groups.

In a February report with later addendum [E/CN.4/1998/28 & Add.1], the Secretary-General presented the views of Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies and NGOs relevant to the implementation of the 1986 Declaration. The report briefly described the activities of the High Commissioner to promote the right to development and various activities planned for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights pertaining to the rights (see preceding chapter).

In response to General Assembly resolution 52/136 [YUN 1997, p. 669], the Secretary-General, in August [A/53/268], updated developments since the end of the Commission's 1998 session (24 April). He presented additional views submitted by Governments, UN bodies and specialized agencies, and described the activities of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Right to Development, established within the UN Development Group (UNDG) of the Secretariat and chaired by the High Commissioner. At the Ad Hoc Group's first session (New York, 27 February), it was decided that it would focus on the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF), and that by September it would incorporate the right to development in the Framework's basic document. It planned to address the incorporation of the right to development in the training of country teams. On 21 November, the Group decided that its priorities for 1999 would be to continue to cooperate with the UNDP subgroup on programme policies for the insertion of human rights in all parts of the common country assessment and UNDAF guidelines; develop for UNDG staff a global support system and training module on human rights; develop a common UNDG approach for enhancing the right-to-development dimension in development operations; and develop a matrix outlining specific right-to-development goals for UNDG as a whole, as well as for individual UNDG organizations. On 4 March, UNDP and OHCHR signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), which provided for greater exposure of UNDP staff to human rights issues and approaches through seminars, workshops or briefings. A task force established to monitor its implementation met monthly to consider a permanent exchange of views on the right to development; preparation of relevant documents for better exposure of resident representatives to the human rights treaty system, as well as to the procedures and mechanisms of the Commission (see preceding chapter); and joint action on human rights technical cooperation, emphasizing the provision of UNDP administrative and logistical support to OHCHR in the field. An additional MOU had been concluded with the United Nations Population Fund. Moreover, an ongoing programme of activities was being pursued with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the Joint and Co-sponsored United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/155 by recorded vote (125-1-42) [agenda item 110(b)].

Right to development

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions and those of the Commission on Human Rights relating to the right to development,

Emphasizing that the promotion, protection and realization of the right to development are an integral part of the promotion and protection of all human rights at the national and international levels,

Noting that the human person is the central subject of development and that development policy should therefore make the human being the main participant in and beneficiary of development,

Stressing the importance of creating an economic, political, social, cultural and legal environment that will enable people to achieve social development at the national and international levels,

Recalling that, in order to promote development, equal attention and urgent consideration should be given to the implementation, promotion and protection of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and recognizing that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the universality, objectivity, impartiality and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues must be ensured,

Expressing its concern that, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the unacceptable situation of absolute poverty, hunger, disease, lack of adequate shelter, illiteracy and hopelessness remains the lot of over one billion people,

Reaffirming the commitment contained in the Charter of the United Nations to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Mindful that the Commission on Human Rights continues to consider this matter and, by its resolution 1998/72 of 22 April 1998, established a follow-up mechanism, initially for a period of three years,

Noting the need for coordination and cooperation throughout the United Nations system for the more effective promotion and realization of the right to development,

Recognizing that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights has an important role to play in the promotion, protection and realization of the right to development, including through enhanced cooperation with the relevant bodies of the United Nations system for this purpose,

Reaffirming that lasting progress towards the implementation of the right to development requires effective development policies at the national level, as well as equitable economic relations and a favourable economic environment at the international level,

Recognizing that the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development requires effective development policies and support at the international level through the effective contribution of States, organs and organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations active in this field,

Emphasizing that full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms is necessary for lasting progress towards the realization of the right to development,

Reaffirming the need for action by all States at the national and international levels for the realization of all human rights and the need for relevant evaluation mechanisms to ensure the promotion of the Declaration on the Right to Development,

Expressing its concern that, more than ten years after the adoption of the Declaration on the Right to Development, and while noting that new challenges and opportunities for development have emerged in an increasingly globalized world, obstacles to the realization of the right to development still persist at both the national and the international levels, that new obstacles to the rights stated therein have emerged and that the progress made in removing these obstacles remains precarious,

Also expressing its concern that the Declaration on the Right to Development is insufficiently disseminated and should be taken into account, as appropriate, in bilateral and multilateral cooperation programmes, national development strategies and policies and activities of international organizations,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the right to development, prepared pursuant to

General Assembly resolution 52/136 of 12 December 1997,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms the importance of the right to development, as established in the Declaration on the Right to Development, and reaffirmed in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, for every human person and for all peoples in all countries, in particular the developing countries, as an integral part of fundamental human rights, as well as the potential contribution its realization could make to the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

3. Recognizes that the Declaration on the Right to Development constitutes an integral link between the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, through its elaboration of a holistic vision integrating economic, social and cultural rights with civil and political rights;

4. Reiterates the importance of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action which reaffirms the right to development, as established by the Declaration on the Right to Development, as a universal and inalienable right and an integral part of fundamental human rights and also reaffirms that the human person is the central subject of development;

5. Reaffirms that democracy, development and respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development, are interdependent and mutually reinforcing, and in this context affirms that:

(a) Development experiences of countries reflect differences with regard to both progress and setbacks, and that the development spectrum has a wide range, not only between countries but also within countries;

(b) A number of developing countries have experienced rapid economic growth and remain dynamic partners in the international community;

(c) At the same time, the gap between developed and developing countries remains unacceptably wide and developing countries continue to face difficulties in participating in the globalization process and may risk being marginalized and effectively excluded from its benefits;

(d) Democracy, which is spreading everywhere, has raised development expectations everywhere that the non-fulfilment of those expectations risks rekindling non-democratic forces, and that structural reforms which do not take social realities into account could destabilize the processes of democratization;

(e) Effective popular participation is an essential component of successful and lasting development;

(f) Democracy, respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development, transparent and accountable governance and administration in all sectors of society, and effective participation by civil society, are an essential part of the foundations necessary for the realization of social and people-centred sustainable development;

(g) The participation of developing countries in the international economic decision-making process needs to be broadened and strengthened;

6. Also reaffirms that democracy, development and respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms would be strengthened by enhanced international cooperation, in particular, for development;

7. Urges all States to eliminate all obstacles to development at all levels by pursuing the promotion and protection of economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights, implementing comprehensive development programmes at the national level, integrating these rights into development activities and promoting effective international cooperation;

8. Reiterates that the existence of widespread absolute poverty inhibits the full and effective enjoyment of human rights and renders democracy and popular participation fragile;

9. Invites the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, within her mandate, to give due regard to the impact of the problem of the external debt burden of developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, on the full enjoyment of the right to development in those countries;

10. Expresses deep concern about the overall decline in official development assistance flows, and calls upon the developed countries, in a spirit of partnership, to mobilize further resources for development assistance to support the efforts of States towards the realization of the right to development, with a view to fulfilling as soon as possible the commitments undertaken to meet the agreed United Nations targets;

11. Affirms the need to apply a gender perspective in the implementation of the right to development, inter alia, by ensuring that women play an active role in the development process, and emphasizes that the empowerment of women and their full participation on a basis of equality in all spheres of society is fundamental for development;

12. Expresses concern about the adverse impact of the current financial crisis on the realization of the right to development and the full enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights in affected countries, especially on the right to food, health, education and work;

13. Affirms that international cooperation is acknowledged more than ever as a necessity deriving from recognized mutual interest and, therefore, that such cooperation should be strengthened in order to support the efforts of developing countries to solve their social and economic problems and to fulfil their obligations to promote and protect all human rights;

14. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to give high priority to the right to development, and urges all States to promote further the right to development as a vital element in a balanced human rights programme;

15. Also welcomes the efforts made by the High Commissioner towards the promotion and realization of the right to development, and invites her to explore further ways and means to achieve this objective;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to inform the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly of the activities of the organizations, funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system for the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development, as well as obstacles identified by them to the realization of the right to development;

17. Welcomes the establishment of a follow-up mechanism, initially for a three-year period, in accordance with Commission on Human Rights resolution

1998/72, consisting of an open-ended working group of the Commission and an independent expert, in order to make further progress towards the realization of the right to development;

18. Calls upon the Commission on Human Rights to continue to make proposals to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council, on the future course of action on the question, in particular on practical measures for the implementation and enhancement of the Declaration on the Right to Development, including comprehensive and effective measures to eliminate obstacles to its implementation;

19. Recognizes that the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights provides an important opportunity to place all human rights, and the right to development in particular, at the top of the global agenda;

20. Calls upon the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner for Human Rights, as appropriate:

(a) To examine ways and means to provide the Declaration on the Right to Development with a profile commensurate with its importance;

(b) To continue to accord priority to the right to development and provide commensurate support in terms of staff, services and resources for its programmatic follow-up;

(c) To ensure widespread dissemination and promotion of the Declaration on the Right to Development, in close cooperation with States and intergovernmental organizations, national institutions, academia and interested non-governmental organizations worldwide by making booklets and publications freely available, in a similar way as for the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and through workshops and seminars;

(d) To project the role and importance of the right to development, as part of the overall promotion and protection of human rights;

(e) To consult regularly on a formal and informal basis with all States on the follow-up to the Declaration on the Right to Development;

(f) To continue the welcome initiative to organize regional seminars which should focus on all aspects of the realization of the right to development;

(g) To undertake a dialogue with the World Bank with regard to the right to development, including initiatives, policies, programmes and activities that can promote the right to development, and to inform Member States on a regular basis of the progress made in such a dialogue;

(h) To involve relevant entities of the United Nations, such as those participating in the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs, to promote and advocate the right to development and its realization, especially at the international level;

21. Requests the Commission on Human Rights:

(a) To invite the independent expert appointed by the Chairman of the Commission to include in his study on the current state of progress in the implementation of the right to development proposals for measures that could be taken for the more effective realization of the right to development at the national and international levels, and to submit his studies to the General Assembly;

(b) To invite the follow-up mechanism, inter alia, to consider the question of elaborating a convention on the right to development;

22. Encourages all States to address, within the declarations and programmes of action adopted by the relevant international conferences convened by the United Nations, elements for the promotion and protection of the right to development;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

24. Decides to consider this question at its fifty-fourth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

Effects of debt

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Commission resolution 1997/10 [YUN 1997, p. 672], the Secretary-General submitted a January report containing the views of Governments, specialized agencies and NGOs on the international debt strategy and its effects on the human rights of people in developing countries, particularly the most vulnerable and low-income groups [E/CN.4/1998/24]. The report contained a synthesis of comments and proposals made by the Intergovernmental Group of Experts on the Right to Development in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 669].

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/24], the Commission, by 27 votes to 16, with 9 abstentions, stressing the importance of continuing to implement immediate, effective and durable actions for alleviating the debt and debt-service burdens of developing countries with debt problems, decided to appoint for a three-year period a special rapporteur on the effects of foreign debt on the full enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights. It asked him to present annually, beginning in 1999, an analytical report on the implementation of the current resolution, paying particular attention to the negative effects of foreign debt and policies adopted to deal with it on economic, social and cultural rights and measures taken by Governments, the private sector and financial institutions to alleviate such effects. It asked the Secretary-General to assist the Special Rapporteur and the High Commissioner to pay particular attention to the problem of the debt burden of developing countries.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/1998/23], adopted decision 1998/249 by recorded vote (22-19-7) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Effects on the full enjoyment of human rights of the economic adjustment policies arising from foreign debt and, in particular, on the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development

On 12 August, the Chairman of the Commission appointed Reinaldo Figueredo (Venezuela) as Special Rapporteur [E/CN.4/1999/47]. The Secretariat invited him to submit his report by 15 December 1998 but, due to the lateness of his appointment, he indicated that he would not submit an analytical report to the Commission but would orally present an outline of the direction he intended to follow in his two next reports.

Structural adjustment policies

Secretariat notes. A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/1998/26] stated that, pursuant to Commission decision 1997/103 [YUN 1997, p. 672], the Chairman of the Commission appointed Ismail-Sabri Abdalla (Egypt) as independent expert to study the effects of structural adjustment policies on economic, social and cultural rights in cooperation with the Centre for Human Rights. The expert was asked to submit his study by 15 December 1997, to ensure its circulation before the second session of the working group on the topic, scheduled for 16 to 20 February 1998. Due to unforeseen circumstances, the expert was unable to submit the report. He subsequently resigned and Fantu Cheru (United States) was appointed independent expert on 9 December.

Also in March [E/CN.4/1998/27], the Secretariat stated that the Bureau of the Commission decided that the working group's second session should be rescheduled to take place following the Commission's 1998 session.

Commission action. On 9 April [dec. 1998/102], by a roll-call vote of 36 to 14, with 3 abstentions, the Commission decided to authorize the working group to meet for one week, at least four weeks before its 1999 session, to consider the report of the independent expert and the comments received thereon and to report in 1999; to ask the independent expert to submit his report for circulation and comment as envisioned in its decision 1997/103 [YUN 1997, p. 672] and for consideration by the working group; and to ask the Secretary-General to provide assistance to the group and the expert.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/1998/23], adopted decision 1998/276 by recorded vote (28-18-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Effects of structural adjustment policies on the full enjoyment of human rights

At its 46th plenary meeting, on 30 July 1998, the Economic and Social Council, taking note of Commission on Human Rights decision 1998/102 of 9 April 1998:

(b) Decided, in order that the working group might carry out its mandate:

- (i) To request the Secretary-General to circulate the report of the independent expert to Governments, United Nations bodies (in particular the regional commissions), the specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations (in particular those involved in development), and academic institutions and organizations representing disadvantaged and vulnerable groups, and to invite them to submit their comments thereon to the working group at its next session;

- (ii) To request the Secretary-General to invite and encourage non-governmental organizations involved in development and working in the field to participate actively in the sessions of the working group;

- (iii) To request the Secretary-General to provide all the necessary assistance and resources to enable the working group to complete its task and provide the independent expert with all the necessary assistance and resources to carry out his mandate.

Income distribution

In June, Special Rapporteur Jose Bengoa (Chile) submitted a supplementary report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/8] to his final report on the relationship between the enjoyment of human rights, in particular economic, social and cultural rights, and income distribution [YUN 1997, p. 673], as requested by the Subcommission in decision 1997/107 [ibid., p. 674]. The main recommendation of the study on income distribution and human rights was to establish a social forum with the participation of States, international financial institutions, international development and cooperation agencies, NGOs devoted to development and action, and banks and international private corporations. He summarized parts of his 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 761], 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 647] and 1997 (final) reports and supplemented recommendations contained in his final report, particularly on the proposed social forum.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/14], the Subcommission, endorsing the recommendation to establish a social forum, asked the High Commissioner to publish, in a joint publication in UN official languages, the preparatory document on the relationship between the enjoyment of human rights and income distribution prepared by Asbjorn Eide (Norway) [YUN 1994, p. 1035] and the subsequent reports of Mr. Bengoa, under the title Income Distribution and Human Rights.

Transnational corporations

In June, El Hadji Guissé (Senegal) presented a working document on the impact of the activities of transnational corporations (TNCs) on the realization of economic, social and cultural rights [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/6], prepared pursuant to Subcommission resolution 1997/11 [YUN 1997, p. 674]. He stated that States should draw up legislation criminalizing activities by TNCs that violated economic, social and cultural rights. TNCs that polluted the environment should have taxes levied on their turnover so that they contributed to efforts to treat industrial waste, and should be held accountable for damage caused to populations and States. The problems surrounding the activities of TNCs and the realization of economic, social and cultural rights should be further examined.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/8], the Subcommission established, for a three-year period, a five-member sessional working group to identify and examine the effects of the working methods and activities of TNCs on economic, social and cultural rights and the right to development, as well as civil and political rights; gather information on the issue; analyse the compatibility of human rights instruments with investment agreements; make recommendations regarding the methods of work and activities of TNCs; annually prepare a list of countries and TNCs, indicating their gross national product and financial turnover, respectively; and consider the scope of the obligation of States to regulate the activities of TNCs, where their activities had or were likely to have a significant impact on the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights and the right to development, as well as of civil and political rights of all persons within their jurisdiction. The working group was asked to report in 1999.

Coercive economic measures

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/11], by a roll-call vote of 37 to 7, with 8 abstentions, the Commission on Human Rights called on States to refrain from adopting or implementing unilateral measures not in accordance with international law and the UN Charter, particularly those of a coercive nature with extraterritorial effects, that created obstacles to trade relations among States. It rejected the application of such measures as tools for political or economic pressure against any country, particularly against developing countries, and decided to give due consideration to the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures in its work on the implementation of the right to development. The Commission asked the High Commissioner to give urgent consideration to its resolution. The Secretary-General was asked to bring the resolution to the attention of Member States, to seek their views and information on the implications and negative effects of unilateral coercive measures on their populations and to report thereon in 1999.

Subcommission action. On 26 August [dec. 1998/112], the Subcommission decided to continue to consider in 1999 the adverse consequences of economic sanctions on human rights.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 52/120 [YUN 1997, p. 674], the Secretary-General, in an August report with later addendum [A/53/293 & Add.1], provided views and information received from Member States on the implications and negative effects of unilateral coercive measures on their populations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/141 by recorded vote (110-45-10) [agenda item 110 (b)].

Human rights and unilateral coercive measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/103 of 12 December 1996 and 52/120 of 12 December 1997, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/11 of 9 April 1998,

Reaffirming the pertinent principles and provisions contained in the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 3281 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974, in particular article 32 thereof, in which it declared that no State may use or encourage the use of economic, political or any other type of measures to coerce another State in order to obtain from it the subordination of the exercise of its sovereign rights,

Taking note of the report submitted by the Secretary-General, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1995/45 of 3 March 1995, and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of Assembly resolution 52/120,

Recognizing the universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated character of all human rights, and, in this regard, reaffirming the right to development as an integral part of all human rights,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, called upon States to refrain from any unilateral coercive measure not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations that creates obstacles to trade relations among States and impedes the full realization of all human rights,

Bearing in mind all the references to this question in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development, adopted by the World Summit for Social Development on 12 March 1995, the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for Action, adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women on 15 September 1995, and the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements and the Habitat Agenda, adopted by the second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) on 14 June 1996,

Deeply concerned that, despite the recommendations adopted on this issue by the General Assembly and recent major United Nations conferences and contrary to general international law and the Charter of the United Nations, unilateral coercive measures continue to be promulgated and implemented with all their extraterritorial effects, inter alia, on the economic and social development of targeted countries and peoples and individuals under the jurisdiction of other States,

Noting the continuing efforts of the Working Group on the Right to Development of the Commission on Human Rights, and reaffirming in particular its criteria, according to which unilateral coercive measures are one of the obstacles to the implementation of the Declaration on the Right to Development,

1. Urges all States to refrain from adopting or implementing any unilateral measures not in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, in particular those of a coercive nature with all their extraterritorial effects, which create obstacles to trade relations among States, thus impeding the full realization of the rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international human rights instruments, in particular the right of individuals and peoples to development;

2. Rejects unilateral coercive measures with all their extraterritorial effects as tools for political or economic pressure against any country, in particular against developing countries, because of their negative effects on the realization of all the human rights of vast sectors of their populations, in particular children, women and the elderly;

3. Calls upon Member States that have initiated such measures to commit themselves to their obligations and responsibilities arising from the international human rights instruments to which they are party by revoking such measures at the earliest time possible;

4. Reaffirms, in this context, the right of all peoples to self-determination, by virtue of which they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development;

5. Urges the Commission on Human Rights to take fully into account the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures, including the enactment of national laws and their extraterritorial application, in its task concerning the implementation of the right to development;

6. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in discharging her functions relating to the promotion, realization and protection of the right to development, to give urgent consideration to the present resolution in her annual report to the General Assembly;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Member States, to seek their views and information on the implications and negative effects of unilateral coercive measures on their populations and to submit accordingly a report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth session;

8. Decides to examine this question on a priority basis at its fifty-fourth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

* Later advised the Secretariat it had intended to abstain.

Trade and investment

On 20 August [res. 1998/12], the Subcommission expressed concern about the possible human rights implications of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment, which sought to liberalize investment among the members of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), particularly about the extent to which the Agreement might limit the capacity of States to ensure the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights by all people, creating benefits for a small privileged minority at the expense of an increasingly disenfranchised majority. It urged UN agencies, including the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, to respect the human rights obligations of the countries with which they worked. OHCHR was asked to develop expertise to address the human rights implications of international and regional trade, investment and financial policies, agreements and practices.

The Subcommission decided to entrust Joseph Oloka-Onyango (Uganda) and Deepika Udagama (Sri Lanka) with preparing a working paper on ways by which the primacy of human rights standards could be better reflected in, and could better inform, international and regional trade, investment and financial policies, agreements and practices, and how UN human rights bodies and mechanisms could play a central role. They were asked to include in the paper an analysis of the text of the Agreement from a human rights perspective, and to consider ways to ensure that future negotiations on the Agreement or analogous agreements or measures took place within a human rights context. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and other treaty bodies were asked to include consideration of the human rights impacts of international and regional trade, investment and financial measures in their State reporting procedures.

In December [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1999/II], OECD terminated negotiations relating to the Agreement.

Extreme poverty

Report of High Commissioner. In January, pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1997/11 [YUN 1997, p. 675], the High Commissioner submitted a report on the creation of microcredit programmes [E/CN.4/1998/23]. OHCHR continued its efforts to establish closer ties and develop concrete projects with the World Bank but no joint programmes had been undertaken. The High Commissioner drew attention to the World Bank programme "Sustainable banking for the poor", an effort of the Bank, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Norway, the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation and the Ford Foundation (United States) that aimed at improving the ability of donors, Governments and practitioners to design and implement policies and programmes to build sustainable financing institutions effective in reaching the poor. The project was multidisciplinary, drawing on economics, finance and anthropology, and used quantitative and qualitative approaches to analyse why some programmes had successfully delivered financial services to the poor while others had fallen short. Success was defined by financial sustainability, access and outreach. The project had also established a seminar series as a means to disseminate best practice in the World Bank and as a forum for discussion of problems and emerging issues.

Commission action. By a roll-call vote of 51 to 1, the Commission, on 17 April [res. 1998/25], reaffirming that extreme poverty and exclusion from society constituted a violation of human dignity, called on the General Assembly, specialized agencies, UN bodies and intergovernmental organizations to take into account the contradiction between the existence of situations of extreme poverty and exclusion from society and the duty to guarantee full enjoyment of human rights. States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs were called on to take into account, in activities carried out under the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) (see PART THREE, Chapter I), the links between extreme poverty and human rights, as well as the efforts to empower people living in poverty to participate in decision-making processes that affected them. The High Commissioner was asked to include in the mid-term evaluation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights in 1993 (see preceding chapter), progress made on the full enjoyment of all human rights and the alleviation of extreme poverty in accordance with the Declaration.

The Commission appointed, for a two-year period, an independent expert to evaluate the relationship between the promotion of human rights and extreme poverty; take into account the obstacles encountered and progress made by women living in extreme poverty regarding the enjoyment of their fundamental rights; report to the Commission in 1999 and 2000 and make those reports available to the Commission for Social Development and the Commission on the Status of Women; contribute to the Assembly's evaluation in 2000 of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development (see PART THREE, Chapter IX); and make suggestions to the Commission in 1999 on the main elements of a draft declaration on human rights and extreme poverty to enable it to consider initiating the Subcommission's drafting of a text for its review and possible adoption by the Assembly. Regarding the draft declaration, the expert was asked to take into account the International Covenants on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and Civil and Political Rights, both adopted by the Assembly in resolution 2200A(XXI) [YUN 1966, pp. 419 & 423], the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action [YUN 1993, p. 908], the Copenhagen Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1113], the Agenda for Development, adopted by the Assembly by resolution 51/240 [YUN 1997, p. 756], and the final report of the Special Rapporteur on human rights and extreme poverty [YUN 1996, p. 649]. The Economic and Social Council approved the appointment of the independent expert by decision 1998/250 of 30 July.

On 12 August, the Commission Chairman appointed Anne-Marie Lizin (Belgium) as independent expert.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/146 without Vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

Human rights and extreme poverty

The General Assembly,
Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and other human rights instruments adopted by the United Nations,

Considering the relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, and of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development, adopted by the World Summit on 12 March 1995,

Recalling its resolutions 47/196 of 22 December 1992, by which it declared 17 October International Day for the Eradication of Poverty, 48/183 of 21 December 1993, by which it proclaimed 1996 International Year for the Eradication of Poverty, 50/107 of 20 December 1995, by which it proclaimed the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006), 51/97 of 12 December 1996 on human rights and extreme poverty and 52/193 of 18 December 1997, in which it emphasized the follow-up of the Decade,

Recalling also its resolution 52/134 of 12 December 1997, in which it recognized that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights was essential for the understanding, promotion and protection of all human rights,

Bearing in mind Commission on Human Rights resolutions 1992/11 of 21 February 1992, 1993/13 of 26 February 1993, 1994/12 of 25 February 1994, 1995/16 of 24 February 1995, 1996/10 of 11 April 1996, 1997/11 of 3 April 1997 and 1998/25 of 17 April 1998, as well as resolution 1996/23 of 29 August 1996 of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling its resolution 47/134 of 18 December 1992, in which it reaffirmed that extreme poverty and exclusion from society constituted a violation of human dignity and stressed the need for a complete and in-depth study of extreme poverty, based on the experience and the thoughts of the poorest people,

Recognizing that the eradication of extreme poverty is a major challenge within the process of globalization and requires coordinated and continued policies,

Recognizing also that, as the existence of widespread extreme poverty inhibits the full and effective enjoyment of human rights and might, in some situations, constitute a threat to the right to life, its immediate alleviation and eventual elimination must remain a high priority for the international community,

Welcoming the appointment, for a period of two years, of an independent expert on the question of human rights and extreme poverty, whose mandate includes, in particular, a contribution to the evaluation in the year 2000 of the World Summit for Social Development and whose work should continue to take into account the efforts of the poorest people themselves and the conditions in which they can convey their experiences,

1. Reaffirms that extreme poverty and exclusion from society constitute a violation of human dignity and that urgent national and international action is therefore required to eliminate them;

2. Also reaffirms that, in accordance with the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, it is essential for States to foster participation by the poorest people in the decision-making process in the communities in which they live, in the promotion of human rights and in efforts to combat extreme poverty;

3. Recognizes that surmounting extreme poverty constitutes an essential means to the full enjoyment of political, civil, economic, social and cultural rights, and reaffirms the interrelationship between these goals;

4. Emphasizes that extreme poverty is a major issue to be addressed by Governments, civil society and the United Nations system, including international financial institutions;

5. Invites the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, within the framework of the implementation of the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty, to continue to give appropriate attention to the question of human rights and extreme poverty;

6. Notes with appreciation the specific action taken by the United Nations Children's Fund to mitigate the effects of extreme poverty on children and the efforts of the United Nations Development Programme to give priority to the search for some means of alleviating poverty within the framework of the relevant resolutions, and urges them to continue this work;

7. Invites States, United Nations bodies, in particular the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations Development Programme, and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to give appropriate attention to the links between human rights and extreme poverty;

8. Decides to consider this question further at its fifty-fifth session under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms".

Women and extreme poverty

In February [E/CN.4/1998/22-E/CN.6./1998/11], the Secretary-General examined the impact of women's unequal enjoyment of rights on their socio-economic status. He assessed how the denial of rights, particularly those relating to economic development and economic resources, created obstacles to women's equality and thus their enjoyment of human rights. He focused on gender factors that perpetuated women's unequal access and treatment regarding economic and social rights and opportunities. Progress made in intergovernmental and expert bodies was assessed.

The Secretary-General concluded that international human rights instruments, the Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action provided a solid basis for promoting women's human rights, including those related to economic development and resources, and the alleviation of women's poverty.

(For other issues concerning women and human rights, see below, under "Right to adequate housing" and under "Vulnerable groups".)

Right to adequate housing

Forced evictions

On 20 August [res. 1998/9], the Subcommission urged Governments to eliminate the practice of forced evictions and protect those who were threatened by it. It recommended that Governments provide immediate restitution, compensation and/or appropriate and sufficient alternative accommodation or land to persons and communities that had been forcibly evicted. It asked the High Commissioner to give attention to the practice and take measures to persuade Governments to comply with relevant international standards, repeal planned forced evictions and ensure the provision of adequate compensation. The Commission was urged to invite States to consider the human rights guidelines on development-based displacement [YUN 1997, p. 676], with a view to approving them in 2000.

Women and housing

On 21 August [res. 1998/15], the Subcommission asked the High Commissioner for Human Rights to take initiatives to promote the right of women to adequate housing and to land and property. Governments, UNDP, OHCHR, UNHCR, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements and the United Nations Development Fund for Women were asked to allocate resources for further documentation of the impact of internal displacement as a result of armed conflict situations and development projects on women, particularly with respect to women's access to land, property and housing. The Subcommission recommended that Governments, international financial institutions, local lending agents, housing finance institutions and other credit facilities eliminate policies that discriminated against women.

Right to food

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1997/8 [YUN 1997, p. 676], the High Commissioner, in January [E/CN.4/1998/21], reported that, in the aftermath of the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129], she had taken several initiatives. OHCHR hosted a consultation on the right to adequate food (1-2 December 1997) as a follow-up to objective 7.4 of the Summit. The participants concluded that the right, although firmly established in international law, remained scarcely implemented because its content and means of application were not fully understood. They recommended that the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights draft and adopt a general comment on the right to adequate food; inclusion of the right in the mandates of special rapporteurs, where appropriate; and a follow-up meeting to discuss the implementation of the right. In addition, they proposed that the Commission explore ways to advance, at the political level, the right to adequate food among its members, as well as in the UN system. The High Commissioner might wish to strengthen her Office regarding substantive issues of the right to food, including appointing an external adviser on the right, and consider a coordinated approach to the right throughout the UN system.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/23], the Commission, reaffirming that hunger constituted a violation of human dignity and therefore required the adoption of urgent measures to eliminate it, considered it intolerable that some 800 million people did not have enough food to meet their basic nutritional needs. It stressed the need to mobilize and optimize technical and financial resources to reinforce national actions to implement sustainable food security policies. The Commission endorsed the proposal to have a follow-up meeting in 1998 (see below). By decision 1998/248 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council approved that endorsement. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights was asked to draft and adopt a general comment as a contribution to the clarification of the content of the rights related to food in article 11 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. The High Commissioner was asked to report in 1999.

Further report of High Commissioner. In a later report [E/CN.4/1999/45], the High Commissioner presented details of the follow-up consultation (Rome, 18-19 November 1998). The participants underlined the need to approach all aspects of development, including food and nutrition issues, from a human rights perspective. They expressed support for the definition of the right to food in the International Code of Conduct on the Human Right to Adequate Food adopted by three NGOs. The main responsibility for the realization of the right to food and nutrition rested on the State. States should allocate the maximum available resources to ensure the rights to food and nutrition. International agencies should support and promote the rights-based approach to development and ensure that their programmes did not have a negative effect on State implementation of the rights to food and nutrition.

Recommendations included a continued leadership role by the High Commissioner in advancing the definition of the right to food and nutrition as a human right and to develop a strategy for that purpose; clarifying the right to food, taking into account the right to food in emergency situations; adoption of a general comment on the right to food by the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; establishing cooperation between human rights treaty bodies and the specialized agencies; developing indicators and benchmarks on the achievements and shortcomings in the realization of food and nutrition rights; adoption by States of a framework law, with FAO assistance; undertaking a study to clarify the joint and separate responsibility of States; tailoring human rights training materials to incorporate issues of concern to individual food agencies; increasing interaction between human rights and development organizations; initiation of a study on the impact of globalization on the food and nutrition situation of vulnerable groups and on remedies that could reverse the impact; and the organization of a seminar with international financial and trade institutions.

Study on the right to food. In response to Subcommission decision 1997/108 [YUN 1997, p. 676] requesting Asbjørn Eide (Norway) to update his 1987 study on the right to food [YUN 1987, p. 773], Mr. Eide submitted a report thereon [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/9] in June. He stated that he found it necessary to present a progress report, with the final update presented in 1999.

Examining major trends in the situation worldwide, Mr. Eide stated that some 840 million people in developing countries subsisted on deficient diets, compared with 730 million cited in 1987. In the developing countries, South Asia had the highest prevalence of stunting. Of the 61 countries from which trend data on stunting were available, only 16 met the World Health Organization (WHO) target, which aimed at a prevalence rate of some 20 per cent or less for all countries by the year 2020. The pattern of child nutrition was paralleled by patterns of underweight in adults. Thus, Asia had the highest prevalence of adult underweight. Mr. Eide described events since his last report that had served to promote the right to food and nutrition. The report contained an outline for the final updated report.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [dec. 1998/106], the Subcommission, recalling its decision 1997/108, requested Mr. Eide to submit the final version of the updated study in 1999.

Right to education

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/33], by 52 votes to 1, the Commission on Human Rights decided, as part of its efforts to impart a higher visibility to economic, social and cultural rights, to appoint, for a three-year period, a special rapporteur on the right to education, as contained in article 26 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535] and in the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, who would report on the worldwide status of the realization of the right to education; promote assistance to Governments in adopting urgent plans of action to secure the implementation of the principle of compulsory free primary education for all; take into account gender considerations and promote the elimination of discrimination in education; make reports available to the Commission on the Status of Women when they concerned the situation of women; develop a dialogue and discuss areas of collaboration with UN bodies, specialized agencies and educational organizations; identify sources of financing for advisory services and technical cooperation in the access to primary education; ensure coordination and complementarity with the work carried out under Subcommission resolution 1997/7 [YUN 1997, p. 618]; and submit a report in 1999. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the special rapporteur. The Commission asked UNICEF and UNESCO to submit information on their activities in promoting primary education, with special reference to women and girls.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/253 of 30 July, authorized the Commission to appoint a special rapporteur for a three-year period and asked the Secretary-General to assist the Special Rapporteur.

Working paper. In response to Subcommission resolution 1997/7, Mustapha Mehedi (Algeria) submitted a June working paper on the realization of the right of education, including education in human rights [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/10]. He reviewed legislation relating to the right to education; the duties of the State regarding education; the cultural aspect of the right to education; and its economic dimension. Two priorities in a study on the right to education were the right of minorities and the right of indigenous peoples. He also discussed the promotion of human rights education (see preceding chapter). Mr. Mehedi concluded that a more detailed analysis of the subject was worth undertaking.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/11], the Subcommission endorsed the conclusions of the working paper and asked Mr. Mehedi to prepare a more detailed paper on the right to education, including human rights education and ways to promote it.

Scientific concerns

Human rights and the environment

Toxic wastes

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/1998/10], the Special Rapporteur on the adverse effects of the illicit movement and dumping of toxic and dangerous products and wastes on the enjoyment of human rights, Fatma-Zohra Ksentini (Algeria), described her activities in 1997 and summarized general comments she had received from 13 countries, as well as information submitted by intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. She reviewed five incidents of the illicit movement and dumping of toxic wastes and presented replies from the Governments concerned.

The Special Rapporteur stated that the differences in legal and regulatory standards between the developed and the developing countries had made it more difficult and more expensive to treat and dispose of wastes in the country of origin, thus triggering the proliferation of transboundary movements of toxic and dangerous wastes. Wastes were sent to regions lacking the political and economic power to refuse it. Despite conventions and accords and regional directives aimed at controlling and monitoring international shipments of wastes, the volume of transboundary movements of toxic wastes had not diminished. Information submitted indicated that incidents relating to illicit movement and clandestine dumping, generally in developing countries, were underpinned by fraudulent practices and accompanied by human rights violations.

The Special Rapporteur recommended preventive measures to halt illicit dumping; international cooperation to combat organized trafficking networks; strengthening the secretariats of the 1989 Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal [YUN 1989, p. 420] and of the 1991 Bamako Convention on the Ban of the Import into Africa and the Control of Transboundary Movement of Hazardous Wastes within Africa [YUN 1991, p. 299] and States' ratification of the Conventions; strengthening the capability of developing countries to detect the nature of products entering their territory; governmental legislation to avert the practice; holding TNCs accountable for their actions and practices under the law of the country of origin; instituting an independent national commission of inquiry in cases of alleged illicit movement or attempted dumping of toxic wastes or dangerous products; raising the level of environmental understanding; and strengthening environmental defence organizations, local associations and NGOs.

An addendum to her report [E/CN.4/1998/10/Add.1] provided the views of Governments on the topic.

The Special Rapporteur visited South Africa and Ethiopia in August 1997 [E/CN.4/1998/10/Add.2]. She also visited Kenya but was unable to hold consultations with government authorities. The main problems remained the lack of reliable information on the movements of toxic wastes within countries and across borders; the lack of a database; the absence of adequate legislation; and the need for infrastructure, laboratories and testing facilities to determine the nature of the wastes. The Special Rapporteur noted that significant steps were being taken in Ethiopia and South Africa. In Ethiopia, the New Environmental Policy, adopted by Parliament in April, dealt with the issue of toxic wastes. In addition, the Government intended to sign the Basel and Bamako Conventions. In South Africa, steps had been taken to face the major incidents that had occurred there through the creation of independent commissions of inquiry. The Special Rapporteur encouraged the development of projects that could be formulated jointly by OHCHR, the secretariat of the Basel Convention, OAU, the United Nations Environment Programme and interested Governments. She encouraged States that had not done so to ratify the Basel Convention and its 1995 amendment regarding the ban on exports [YUN 1995, p. 1333]. She attached great importance to the entry into force of the Bamako Convention, and stressed the importance of a continuous exchange of information aimed at creating a regional database. A regional approach was crucial for a coordinated response to the problem.

In 1998, following visits to Paraguay (14-19 June), Brazil (20-28 June), Costa Rica (17-20 November) and Mexico (21-30 November) [E/CN.4/1999/46/Add.1], the Special Rapporteur concluded that the Latin America and the Caribbean region was becoming a favourite target area for illegal traffic. Although most of the countries had well-developed environmental protection legislation, as well as laws to combat and punish illicit trafficking, they were not completely sheltered from illicit trafficking. Customs officials and other administrative services responsible for supervision were not sufficiently aware of the problem. Moreover, many Latin American countries did not have the facilities to check the goods and analyse the nature of products entering the country. The main problems were lack of reliable information about internal and transboundary movements of toxic wastes and dangerous products; absence of legislative harmonization among the countries; and lack of means to ensure supervision and effective implementation of bilateral agreements, international conventions and national laws, and, in some cases, the inadequacy of infrastructure, laboratories and testing equipment. The most serious concerns were the excessive or uncontrolled use of chemicals and toxic agricultural products and the harmful effects on the environment and health of the activities of foreign transplants and TNCs.

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/12], by a roll-call vote of 33 to 14, with 6 abstentions, the Commission, condemning the increasing rate of dumping of toxic and dangerous products and wastes in developing countries, urged Governments to take legislative and other measures to prevent the illegal trafficking. It noted a decision by the Fourth Meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Basel Convention (see PART THREE, Chapter VII), which emphasized the need for the parties to cooperate with each other and with the secretariat on alleged cases of illegal traffic, and welcomed negotiations towards the adoption of a convention on international trade in hazardous chemicals and pesticides.

The Commission renewed the Special Rapporteur's mandate for three years and urged the Secretary-General to assist her. By decision 1998/242 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's action. The Special Rapporteur was asked to continue to consult with relevant UN bodies, organizations and secretariats and to take into account the progress made in other forums. She was also asked to include in her next report information on persons killed, maimed or otherwise injured in the developing countries through the illicit movement and dumping of toxic and dangerous products and wastes.

Water and sanitation services

Report of Special Rapporteur. In June, Special Rapporteur El Hadji Guissé (Senegal) presented a working paper on the right of access of everyone to drinking water supply and sanitation services [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/7], as requested by the Subcommission in resolution 1997/18 [YUN 1997, p. 677]. More than 1 billion people were without access to drinking water and sanitation, largely owing to bad management of fresh water, including groundwater; the lack of planning and the unequal distribution of drinking water and sanitation services; the problem of external debt; structural adjustment programmes; privatization of State enterprises, particularly those linked to water services; and the regular increase in the cost of drinking water supplies. The Special Rapporteur proposed that a preliminary report be submitted to the Subcommission in 1999, a progress report in 2000 and a final report in 2001.

Subcommission action. On 20 August [res. 1998/7], the Subcommission appointed Mr. Guissé as Special Rapporteur to conduct a study on the relationship between the enjoyment of economic, social and cultural rights and the promotion of the realization of the right to drinking water supply and sanitation in order to determine the most effective means to reinforce activities in that area. It asked him to submit a preliminary report in 1999, a progress report in 2000 and a final report in 2001. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the Special Rapporteur, and to invite Governments, UN bodies, the specialized agencies and NGOs to provide the Special Rapporteur with information.

Bioethics

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/625/Add.2], adopted resolution 53/152 without vote [agenda item 110 (b)].

The human genome and human rights

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and the other relevant international human rights instruments,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolutions 1993/91 of 10 March 1993 and 1997/71 of 16 April 1997, on the question of human rights and bioethics,

Recalling also that, in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Aware of the rapid development of the life sciences and of ethical concerns raised by certain of their applications with regard to the dignity of the human race and the rights and freedoms of the individual,

Seeking to promote scientific and technical progress in the fields of biology and genetics in a manner respectful of fundamental rights and for the benefit of all,

Emphasizing, in this regard, the importance of international cooperation in order to ensure that mankind as a whole benefits from the life sciences, while seeking to prevent them from being used for any purpose other than the good of mankind,

Recalling the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights and the accompanying resolution on its implementation, both adopted on 11 November 1997 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization at its twenty-ninth session,

Recognizing the importance of the process of follow-up to the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights within the framework of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization,

Convinced of the need to develop a life-sciences ethic at the national and international levels,

Endorses the Universal Declaration on the Human Genome and Human Rights adopted by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 11 November 1997.

Scientific progress and human rights

On 17 April [dec. 1998/104], the Commission, taking note of Subcommission resolution 1997/42 [YUN 1997, p. 678], asked the Subcommission to reconsider its recommendation to appoint a special rapporteur on human rights and scientific and technological developments.

Slavery and related issues

Working Group activities. The five-member Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery, at its twenty-third session (Geneva, 18-28 May) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/14], reviewed developments in the area of contemporary forms of slavery and measures to prevent and repress all its forms, including economic exploitation of domestic and migrant workers (see below, under "Vulnerable groups"), bonded labour, child labour, suppression of the traffic in persons and of the exploitation of the prostitution of others, sexual exploitation of children, illegal and pseudo-legal adoptions aimed at exploiting children, illegal activities of certain religious and other sects, and traffic in human organs and tissues. It discussed the activities of the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and of the Special Rapporteur on violence against women. The Group had before it the Secretary-General's May report containing information from Governments, UN bodies and agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on developments in the area of contemporary slavery and measures to prevent and repress it [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.2/1998/4].

The Group concluded that, despite progress in human rights protection, various forms of slavery still existed and new insidious forms were emerging. The Group made a series of recommendations on the issues it considered.

Subcommission action. In a 21 August resolution [res. 1998/19], the Subcommission addressed prevention of traffic in persons and exploitation of the prostitution of others; prevention of trans-border traffic in women and girls; the role of corruption in perpetuating slavery and slavery-like practices; misuse of the Internet for sexual exploitation; implementation of the slavery conventions (1926 Slavery Convention; 1956 Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery [YUN 1956, p. 228]; the 1949 Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 317(IV) [YUN 1948-49, p. 613]); child domestic workers; child labour; debt bondage and bonded labour; and the Commission's 1992 Programme of Action for the Prevention of the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography [YUN 1992, p. 814].

The Subcommission decided that the Group should examine in 1999, as a matter of priority, the issue of traffic in persons and exploitation of the prostitution of others, and welcomed the initiative of NGOs to organize a seminar on the subject. It recommended that the Special Rapporteurs on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on violence against women address the problem of the trans-border traffic of women and girls for sexual exploitation and make recommendations for its prevention and eradication. The Secretary-General was asked to invite States to inform the Group of measures taken to implement the 1992 Programme of Action and to report thereon to the Commission and the Subcommission in 2000. He was also asked to seek the views of Member States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on proposals for the Group's future action. He was further asked to designate OHCHR as the focal point for coordinating activities and disseminating information within the UN system for the suppression of contemporary forms of slavery.

1992 Programme of Action

In November [E/CN.4/1998/100], the Secretary-General drew the attention of the Commission to his 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 685] on the state of implementation of the Programme of Action for the Prevention of the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography [YUN 1992, p. 814].

Fund on slavery

Reports of Secretary-General. The Commission on Human Rights considered a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/89] describing actions by human rights mechanisms regarding appeals for contributions to the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery, established by the General Assembly in resolution 46/122 [YUN 1991, p. 563]. The Secretary-General stated that as at 31 October 1997, $8,500 was available under the Fund.

In August [A/53/339], the Secretary-General stated that, as at 1 July, contributions paid to the Fund were not sufficient to allocate travel and project grants or to organize the fourth (1998) session of the Board of Trustees, which had to be postponed.

In a later report [E/CN.4/1999/85], the Secretary-General stated that, as at 18 December, the amount available in the Fund for travel and project grants in 1999 was some $100,000.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/20], the Subcommission urged Governments, NGOs and individuals to contribute annually to the Fund.

Sexual exploitation during periods of armed conflict

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of systematic rape, sexual slavery and slavery-like practices during periods of armed conflict, Gay J. McDougall (United States), in her final report in June [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/13], examined the legal system for prosecuting sexual slavery and sexual violence, including crimes against humanity, slavery, genocide, torture and war crimes, and discussed the legal responsibility of those who committed such acts. She concluded that international law had to better reflect the experiences of women and the true nature of the harm done to them, particularly during armed conflict situations. Individual perpetrators had to be held responsible for their crimes. Recommendations to States included criminalizing slavery and acts of sexual violence and bringing to justice perpetrators of breaches of the 1949 Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War; removing gender bias in municipal law and procedure; providing adequate protection for victims and witnesses; providing support services for victims; and implementing a gender-sensitive response. OHCHR should take the lead in documenting sexual violence in conflict situations with a view to eventual prosecution. The Special Rapporteur proposed that the Subcommission convene an expert meeting to prepare and disseminate guidelines for the effective prosecution of international crimes of sexual violence, with the participation of UN human rights bodies, experts, governmental organizations and NGOs. (See also below, under "Violence against women".)

An appendix of the Special Rapporteur's report presented an analysis of the legal liability of the Government of Japan for "comfort women stations" established during the Second World War. It concluded that the Government remained liable for grave violations of human rights and humanitarian law. Japan claimed that the actions of the Japanese military were not prohibited during the time period in which the offences were committed because the international crimes of rape and enslavement were not clearly prohibited as customary norms during the Second World War. In addition, it had already settled all claims from the War through peace treaties and reparation agreements. It was recommended that the High Commissioner should work for the prosecution of those responsible for atrocities linked to the actions of the Japanese military in establishing rape camps. The High Commissioner should also appoint, together with the Government, a panel of national and international leaders with decision-making authority to set up an adequate compensation scheme. The Government should be required to report twice yearly to the Secretary-General on progress made in identifying and compensating the "comfort women" and in bringing perpetrators to justice.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/18], the Subcommission, welcoming the organization of an expert meeting to adopt guidelines for the effective prosecution of international crimes of sexual violence, asked the Secretary-General to transmit the Special Rapporteur's final report to Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations, the International Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (see PART FOUR, Chapter II), and the Assembly of States Parties of the International Criminal Court (see PART FOUR, Chapter III). It recommended that the final report be published in all UN official languages and distributed widely. The Subcommission asked that the Special Rapporteur's mandate be extended for an additional year and that she submit an update on developments in 1999.

Violence against women

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/1998/54], the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, Radhika Coomaraswamy (Sri Lanka), presented cases of various forms of violence against women as perpetrated and/or condoned by the State, particularly during times of armed conflict, in custody and when accorded the status of refugee and internally displaced. She also provided information on measures to protect women from such violence.

Recommendations regarding sexual violence during armed conflict included evaluating and revising humanitarian legal instruments; training peacekeepers in gender issues; provision by the international community to post-conflict societies of economic reconstruction, psychological counselling and social rehabilitation, including human rights training and democratic governance; ensuring that violations by non-State actors did not enjoy impunity; and the incorporation of provisions on violence against women into the statute of the International Criminal Court, as well as a gender perspective. She proposed that States end impunity; ratify relevant instruments of human rights and humanitarian law; cooperate with international agencies to apprehend perpetrators; amend penal laws, codes of military conduct and other specialized procedures to conform with human rights and humanitarian law; ensure that evidentiary procedure did not discriminate against women; provide gender-sensitive training to military and law enforcement personnel and others in the criminal justice system; and adopt the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, contained in General Assembly resolution 34/169 [YUN 1979, p. 779]. All non-State actors were urged to act within the context of international humanitarian and human rights laws, and NGOs were asked to work with Governments to prevent, punish and prosecute violations of those laws. They were also encouraged to increase awareness of the situation of women during times of armed conflict through education and training, monitor armed conflict situations, expose cases of violence against women, provide support services for women and ensure that their work incorporated a gender perspective.

As to custodial violence against women, States should implement the 1955 Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners [YUN 1955, p. 209]; abolish "protective custody"; abolish laws and emergency regulations that curtailed the rights of suspects and granted State authorities discretionary powers of detention and interrogation; establish mechanisms of redress for custodial violence and hold perpetrators accountable; provide gender-sensitization training for police and prison personnel; provide legal literacy training for women; and provide attorneys or advocates for women upon their arrest. Traditional human rights mechanisms should investigate violence against women in custody. Recommendations regarding refugee and displaced women included providing them with legal assistance and legal literacy training; revising asylum procedures to address the needs of women victims of violence; removal of legal and administrative barriers to women seeking asylum on the basis of gender-based persecution; provision of confidential medical, legal and psycho-social support for victims; increasing the number of female doctors to meet gynaecological and related care needs; and provision of secure quarters in refugee camps.

The Special Rapporteur visited Liechtenstein on 7 April [E/CN.4/1999/68], where the question of violence against women had been raised mainly by NGOs. They had started a campaign in 1997 to address the problems of sexual harassment in the workplace and domestic violence. The Special Rapporteur expressed concern that no study on sexual harassment in the workplace had been made and no statistics on rape were available.

At the invitation of the Government, the Special Rapporteur visited the United States (31 May-18 June) to study violence against women in the state and federal prisons in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Georgia, California, Michigan and Minnesota [E/CN.4/1999/68/Add.2]. The Special Rapporteur noted an extraordinary diversity of conditions in United States prisons and stated the need to develop minimum standards with regard to state practices in women's prisons. She expressed concern about the use of restraining instruments; sexual misconduct by male correction officers; impunity among corrections officers and officials; grievance procedures; and sub-standard wages for inmates who worked for private industry. On the positive side, she noted recent court cases and awareness-raising campaigns that had resulted in some encouraging changes. The Special Rapporteur also investigated the conditions of women kept in detention centres by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).

At the federal level, the Special Rapporteur recommended that the United States ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895], and remove its reservations to important international treaties. Key policy areas for study included the impact of drug laws on women; a national mental health policy on the imprisonment of women with mental health problems; race policy in the light of the intersection of race, poverty and gender; and domestic violence and women in prisons. She presented a series of minimum conditions for state correctional facilities. The Special Rapporteur recommended that INS establish a gender policy and enforce a uniform policy to avoid arbitrariness in dealing with detainees. Detainees should not be mixed with the criminal population and should not be subjected to restraining measures. She advocated granting detainees access to lawyers and translators and family visitation rights; training for staff regarding sexual misconduct; avoiding separation of family units; and dealing with those seeking asylum through mechanisms other than detention.

States should criminalize sexual misconduct; ensure due process regarding grievance procedures; carefully screen corrections officers prior to hiring; protect inmates who expressed grievances from retaliation; grant inmates limited privacy; institute minimum standards regarding health care; allocate more resources to parenting programmes in women's prisons; provide state assistance to NGOs to set up halfway houses for women about to be released; and explore alternative justice programmes for women.

The Special Rapporteur visited Indonesia and East Timor (20 November-4 December) [E/CN.4/1999/68/Add.3], at the invitation of Indonesia, to study the issue of violence against women as perpetrated or condoned by the State. She noted that, since May, Indonesia had been under a transition Government, which was faced with unrest. A financial crisis accentuated civil unrest. During the events of May and the riots in Jakarta, there was mass rape of ethnic Chinese women, but the numbers were difficult to determine due to the reluctance of victims to come forward. Victims and witnesses of violence, along with human rights defenders, continued to receive death threats. As a whole, the criminal justice system was gender insensitive, and there was inadequate human rights training for army and police officials. The Special Rapporteur expressed concern that no attempt was being made to deal with the psychological trauma caused by violence against women. Rape by soldiers in Aceh, Irian Jaya and East Timor was tried in military tribunals and not before an ordinary court of law. Children born as a result of rape, situations that resembled sexual slavery or consensual sex were often either abandoned or treated badly.

The Special Rapporteur recommended that OHCHR cooperate with the Government of Indonesia regarding the national action plan for human rights, as well as the further promotion and protection of human rights in Indonesia and East Timor. She proposed that the Government ratify all human rights instruments; acknowledge abuses that took place in the country; set up a truth and reconciliation process for victims of State violence before May 1998; accelerate law reform and introduce amendments to the Penal Code; improve public confidence in the criminal justice system; inaugurate a national campaign against death threats and other forms of terror against civil society; provide psychological counselling for women victims of violence; repeal regulations that discriminated against the Chinese minority; encourage a culture of human rights; set up crisis centres; allow unrestricted access to all parts of the country by independent human rights monitors; and develop confidence-building measures for victims of violence. NGOs were encouraged to sensitize women victims to the need to speak out; lobby for "one-stop crisis centres"; and carry out research, data collection and comparative analysis regarding violence against women.

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/52], the Commission condemned all acts of gender-based violence against women and all violations of the human rights of women in situations of armed conflict, and called for an effective response to them, particularly murder, systematic rape, sexual slavery and forced pregnancy. Stressing the Special Rapporteur's conclusions and recommendations that States had a duty to promote and protect women's human rights, the Commission called on them to ratify and implement relevant international human rights instruments; include in reports information pertaining to violence against women and measures taken to implement the 1993 Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 48/104 [YUN 1993, p. 1046], and the 1995 Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170]; condemn violence against women and not invoke custom, tradition or practices in the name of religion to avoid obligations to eliminate such violence; enact or reinforce penal, civil, labour and administrative sanctions in domestic legislation to punish and redress the wrongs done to women and girls subjected to violence; adopt laws and reinforce existing ones that punished police, security forces or other State agents who engaged in violence against women while on duty; cooperate with the International Tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia; protect children, especially the girl child, in situations of armed conflict; create, improve or develop and fund training programmes for judicial, legal, medical, social, educational, police, military, peacekeeping and immigration personnel; mainstream a gender perspective into national immigration and asylum policies, regulations and practices; modify legal definitions and standards to ensure that they protected the human rights of all women and girls affected by armed conflict, and reaffirm that rape in armed conflict constituted war crimes and, under certain circumstances, crimes against humanity; and take account of the impact of armed conflict on the health of all women and address women's health needs. The Commission asked Governments to support initiatives of women's organizations and NGOs to raise awareness of violence against women and to contribute to its elimination. The Secretary-General was asked to continue to assist the Special Rapporteur and to ensure that her reports were brought to the attention of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

Women migrant workers

Reports of Secretary-General. The Commission on Human Rights considered a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/1998/74] containing information received from Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations on measures they had taken to implement General Assembly resolution 51/65 [YUN 1996, p. 1071] and Commission resolution 1997/13 [YUN 1997, p. 682] regarding violence against women migrant workers. An addendum to the report presented comments submitted by two NGOs [E/CN.4/1998/74/Add.I].

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/17], the Commission asked Governments to carry out further research on the causes and consequences of violence against women migrant workers and called on them to establish penal sanctions to punish perpetrators and to assist victims. States were encouraged to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594], as well as the 1926 Slavery Convention.

The working group of intergovernmental experts on the human rights of migrants was asked to draw up recommendations to strengthen the promotion, protection and implementation of the human rights of women migrant workers. The Secretary-General was asked to submit in 2000 a follow-up report on the issue, including information received from States, UN bodies, intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and other sources.

Traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls

Report of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to Subcommission resolution 1997/8 [YUN 1997, p. 682], the Special Rapporteur on traditional practices affecting the health of women and the girl child, Halima Embarek Warzazi (Morocco), submitted her second (June) report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/11] containing information from Governments regarding the elimination of such practices within the context of the 1994 Plan of Action thereon [YUN 1994, p. 1123].

The Special Rapporteur regretted the lack of replies from Governments, which, she stated, reflected the limited importance attached to the problem. In addition, she was given extremely limited assistance. She appealed for political determination and generosity to provide for more effective assistance and support.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/16], the Subcommission appealed to States to intensify efforts to develop public awareness of the harmful effects of female genital mutilation and to the international community to provide support to NGOs and groups working to eliminate the practice. It recommended that the Special Rapporteur's mandate be extended; adequate administrative services be given to her; resources be made available to allow her to follow up progress relating to the 1994 Plan of Action; and the issue of traditional practices be recognized by the High Commissioner as a matter for research and programme activities. The Special Rapporteur was asked to report in 1999.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 52/99 [YUN 1997, p. 1197], which addressed traditional or customary practices affecting the health of women and girls, the Secretary-General, in September, presented an overview of action taken by the UN system and at the national and regional levels to implement the resolution [A/53/354].

The Secretary-General stated that measures had been taken to address practices affecting the health of women and girls, but greater efforts were needed to eliminate them. Government mechanisms were needed to enforce legal measures and to organize broad-based coordinated public education and awareness-raising programmes. Relevant human rights treaties should be ratified by Governments. Effective measures to eliminate those practices also included education and public awareness-raising campaigns; government consultations with communities and religious and cultural groups; support for NGOs; support by UN and regional bodies through collaboration with Governments and NGOs; strengthened collaboration and coordination among human rights organizations and women's groups; and assistance to disadvantaged communities.

Traffic in women and girls

Commission action. On 17 April [res. 1998/30], the Commission on Human Rights called on Governments to criminalize trafficking in women and girls and to condemn and penalize offenders. It called on Governments of origin, transit and destination, and regional and international organizations, to implement the Platform for Action of the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1170] by: ratifying and enforcing international conventions on trafficking in persons and on slavery; addressing the root factors of trafficking in women and girls; increasing cooperation and concerted action by relevant law enforcement authorities and institutions; allocating resources to provide programmes to heal and rehabilitate into society victims of trafficking; and developing educational and training programmes and policies and considering enacting legislation aimed at preventing sex tourism and trafficking. It invited Governments, with UN support, to develop training manuals for personnel who received and/or held in temporary custody victims of gender-based violence, including trafficking, and encouraged UN bodies and organizations to contribute to the preparation of the guidelines, in cooperation with intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. OHCHR was encouraged to continue to include the issue of traffic in women and girls in its advisory, training and information activities. The Secretary-General was asked to provide the Commission in 1999 with his report to the Assembly in 1998 (see below).

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report on trafficking in women and girls [A/53/409], the Secretary-General described steps taken by the UN system and regional organizations to implement Assembly resolution 52/98 [YUN 1997, p. 1195]. He concluded that trafficking was perceived to be a growing problem since its causes (poverty, scarce resources, lack of opportunities for and low status of women, and political and economic instability, as well as the growth of networks of trans-border organized crime)

continued to be global factors. He proposed support by the United Nations and its Member States; strategies to address the causes; according the highest priority to relevant crime prevention and law enforcement policies by Member States; exploring measures to encourage victims to identify traffickers and act as witnesses in criminal prosecutions; establishing measures to guarantee the voluntary and safe return of trafficked women; strengthening training and public awareness of civil servants dealing with migration and of law enforcement officials; introducing broad-based educational and awareness-raising campaigns to combat domestic and international trafficking; and collaboration between Governments and NGOs in programmes of prevention, victim support and reintegration of victims, and coordinated and centralized data related to trafficking.

Invites the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences, the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and the Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to continue to address, within their respective mandates, the problem of trafficking in women and girls as a priority concern and to recommend, in their reports, measures to combat such phenomena;

20. Reiterates its call upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in addressing the obstacles to the realization of the human rights of women, in particular through her contacts with the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, to include the traffic in women and girls among her priority concerns;

21. Welcomes the initiatives and activities of United Nations bodies and organizations and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to combat trafficking in women and girls, and invites them to strengthen their activities in this context;

22. Encourages the Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality to continue to address the issue as part of the integrated follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to compile, as reference and guidance, successful interventions and strategies in addressing the various dimensions of the problem of trafficking in women and girls based on reports, research and other materials within and outside the United Nations and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its fifty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Mainstreaming women's rights

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Commission on Human Rights resolution 1997/43 [YUN 1997, p. 684], the Secretary-General, in a January report to the Commission on the Status of Women [E/CN.6/1998/2/Add.I], presented the 1998 joint work plan for OHCHR and the UN Division for the Advancement of Women, which would help facilitate the mainstreaming of women's human rights. The Office and the Division would enhance cooperation regarding the work of treaty bodies and the preparation of optional protocols and would discuss a possible follow-up meeting to the 1995 expert group meeting on the integration of gender perspectives into UN human rights activities and programmes [YUN 1995, p. 767]. The Division would provide input for general comments prepared or revised by treaty bodies; contribute information for OHCHR reports on human rights issues; provide targeted input for non-conventional human rights mechanisms; and prepare an analysis of the practice of various treaty bodies in integrating a gender perspective into their work. OHCHR would contribute to reports on gender and women's rights issues and on traditional or customary practices affecting the health of women and girls, and participate in the review of the four critical areas of concern of the Beijing Platform for Action (see PART THREE, Chapter X); invite the Division to participate in organizing training courses on reporting under human rights treaties, as well as other activities; and strengthen the integration of a gender perspective into technical cooperation practices. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women would establish closer relations with the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Commission on the Status of Women and would participate in the work of the two bodies. The Office had formed a cross-branch gender and human rights of women team, which would work closely with the Division. The Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women would cooperate with the High Commissioner on Human Rights in her efforts to mainstream a gender perspective.

A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/1998/49/Add.I] drew the Commission's attention to the report on the joint work plan.

Also in March [E/CN.4/1998/49], the Secretary-General, pursuant to Commission resolution 1997/43, summarized steps taken to integrate gender perspectives into the UN human rights system by OHCHR, human rights treaty bodies, human rights mechanisms and the Commission on Human Rights.

The Secretary-General concluded that all UN entities were participating in activities to implement the Beijing Platform for Action. He recommended that treaty bodies continue to develop a gender analysis of each article in each treaty, cross-referenced to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895]. A gender dimension should be incorporated into future revision of general comments/recommendations and guidelines previously adopted by the treaty bodies. OHCHR should facilitate the organization of a seminar similar to the 1995 expert group meeting. The recommendations of the expert group were reproduced in the report.

(For information on steps taken by human rights treaty bodies to increase gender aspects in their work, see preceding chapter.)

Commission action. In 1998, the Commission on Human Rights held a special interactive dialogue on gender and the human rights of women, with the participation of the Chairman of the Commission on the Status of Women, the High Commissioner for Human Rights, the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, Governments and NGOs. The dialogue was aimed at bringing closer together the work of the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on the Status of Women. It was felt that the results of the discussions held by the latter Commission could strengthen the work of the former in the areas of gender and the human rights of women and in relation to crucial economic and social rights aspects of the right to development. In addition, the Commission on Human Rights would have its own substantive perspective to contribute to the work of the Commission on the Status of Women.

The wide ranging discussion covered such issues as female genital mutilation; violence against women; women's economic, social and cultural rights; and ways and means of improving UN actions protecting the human rights of women. The question of the inclusion of violence against women in the statute of the proposed International Criminal Court was raised. The objective of improving the representation of women in the Secretariat and in UN bodies was also discussed.

On 17 April [res. 1998/51], the Commission on Human Rights called for further strengthening of cooperation between it and the Commission on the Status of Women and between OHCHR and the UN Division for the Advancement of Women through collaborative writing of reports, information sharing and capacity-building to implement the agreed conclusions of the Economic and Social Council on mainstreaming a gender perspective [YUN 1997, p. 1186]. Drawing attention to the need to develop strategies to implement the recommendations of the 1995 expert group, it recommended that OHCHR, together with other relevant UN agencies and secretariats, consider organizing a similar meeting. Treaty bodies were encouraged to monitor more effectively women's human rights. It drew attention to the need to give due consideration to the human rights of women and the girl child in the five-year review of the 1993 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action [YUN 1993, p. 908] and the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (see preceding chapter). The Secretary-General was asked to report in 1999 on the implementation of the current resolution.

By resolution 1998/12 of 28 July, the Economic and Social Council outlined actions for Governments, NGOs, employers, trade unions, the private sector and other members of civil society to create and develop an environment conducive to women's enjoyment of their human rights and awareness-raising (see PART THREE, Chapter X).

The girl child

On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission on Human Rights called on States to institute legal reforms to ensure the enjoyment by girls of all human rights and fundamental freedoms; to eliminate discrimination against girls and the causes of son preference; and to intensify efforts to raise awareness of and to mobilize public opinion concerning the harmful effects of female genital mutilation and other traditional or customary practices affecting the health of women and girls. States, international organizations and NGOs were asked to set goals and to develop and implement gender-sensitive strategies to address the rights and needs of children.

Women in Afghanistan

On 21 August [res. 1998/17], the Subcommission, expressing deep concern at the suffering of Afghan women under prohibitions placed on them by the Taliban, which included restrictions on their freedom of movement, the denial of the right to work, denial of education and limitations on access to medical care, called on Muslim religious leaders and scholars to give attention to their plight with a view to bringing Taliban policies and practices in line with Islam and human rights law. It appealed to States not to encourage the Taliban by extending diplomatic recognition to them, and appealed to commercial enterprises to refrain from entering into financial agreements with the regime. The Secretary-General was asked to provide information on the issue.

On 28 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1998/9, condemned the human rights violations of women and girls in Afghanistan (see also next chapter and PART THREE, Chapter X).

Children

Sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/1998/101], the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, Ofelia Calcetas-Santos (Philippines), analysed the roles played by the media and education relative to the commercial sexual exploitation of children. She outlined those human rights intended to protect the child from falling victim to commercial sexual exploitation, including the right to receive information and education, and examined the role of the media, including the Internet, as well as the importance of education. The Special Rapporteur made recommendations to Governments, NGOs and civil society related to the media and to education in the areas of prevention and advocacy. She proposed providing response mechanisms to children victims, as well as intervention; recovery and reintegration measures; and networking between governmental organizations and NGOs.

In February [E/CN.4/1998/101/Add.2], the Special Rapporteur described her visit to Mexico (10-21 November 1997), made at the invitation of the Government, to study the commercial sexual exploitation of children from four different angles: in a large metropolis such as Mexico City; in the industrialized port region of Puerto de Veracruz and Xalapa; in the coastal resort of Cancún; and in the border zones between Mexico and the United States, particularly Ciudad Juárez and Tijuana. She concluded that the magnitude and diversity of conditions in Mexico made it difficult to institute comprehensive measures to protect children. There was a lack of statistics and data on the magnitude of the phenomenon, which the Special Rapporteur stated should not be an excuse for non-implementation of preventive and remedial measures. She recommended that the Government review legislation affecting children and harmonize it with the Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 561], and also review legislation on abuses against children with a view to making them a crime. Recommendations to states in the border areas included cooperative efforts between officials on both sides of the border; training of border police, customs and immigration officers; training of Mexican consular officials in the United States for treating and interviewing migrant minors; and supervision of the areas to prevent exploiters from having access to children to subject them to abuse. Other recommendations to the Government included enforcing compulsory education for children; constant monitoring of places where children were a risk and implementation of rescue and protection programmes; enhancing the role of the National System for the Integral Development of the Family in the protection of children; according high priority to child drug and substance abuse; cooperating and coordinating with NGOs; and involving the private sector in protecting and reintegrating children victims. NGOs were urged to conduct awareness programmes; participate in monitoring places where children were at risk; monitor government response mechanisms; encourage networking; protect children in their care from further victimization; encourage children to seek assistance and report abuses voluntarily; sensitize the business community in training children for alternative sources of income other than commercial sex; cooperate with the Government in seeking alternatives to formal schooling for working children; give attention to curtailing drug or substance abuse among children; and provide "help lines" to children.

The Special Rapporteur visited the Lao People's Democratic Republic (21-25 September 1998) [E/CN.4/1999/71/Add.1] to study the issue of commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children. She wished to explore ways in which the country could protect itself and its children from being exploited as it began to open its borders to trade and tourism. She also assessed the implications of cross-border traffic between Laos and Thailand. Although child involvement in commercial sex was not very apparent, there were reports of clandestine operations and of children having been used in pornographic films. The Special Rapporteur expressed grave concern that the country could increasingly become exposed to the phenomenon as it went from a centrally planned to a market economy. Regarding trafficking, mostly into Thailand, the north and north-eastern regions of Laos were mountainous and heavily forested, with little access by road. The flow of movement was also limited in some parts of southern and eastern areas by the extensive presence of unexploded ordnance, which was estimated to amount to 3 tonnes per head of the total population. There were reports of the presence of recruiters in some villages, especially in Savannakhet province.

The Special Rapporteur expressed concern that the growth of industry in Laos would increase the demand for commercial sex as migrant workers would be away from their spouses for long periods; the influx of people into isolated communities would have a negative influence; the new infrastructure would facilitate trafficking of children through and out of the country to all surrounding countries; tourism would negatively impact development; and Laos might be perceived as a new alternative to the more traditional destinations for sex tourism. The Special Rapporteur concluded that Laos was in a position to focus on preventive measures to protect children from exploitation and abuse. Recommendations included establishing accessible schools; launching an information campaign on the risks of trafficking, targeted to reach parents, children, policy makers, business sectors, immigrant workers and the remotest parts of the country; compiling an inventory of legislation affecting children's rights; achieving bilateral or multilateral cooperation with countries sharing borders; reviewing government programmes aimed at economic development; paying particular attention to ethnic minorities; instituting livelihood programmes for out-of-school youth; prosecuting perpetrators of trafficking; and enacting legislation for cooperation with NGOs.

The Special Rapporteur visited Belgium and the Netherlands (30 November-4 December) to study the issue of commercial sexual exploitation [E/CN.4/2000/73/Add.1]. She observed that children in the two countries entered prostitution as an escape from violence, abuse and neglect in their homes. She was particularly concerned at the extent to which the system of protection for refugees was being abused, with the result that children were being trafficked into both countries for prostitution and other purposes. It was difficult to monitor children involved in prostitution and/or pornography since those activities were usually conducted behind closed doors. In addition, children were unlikely to seek help or make complaints to the authorities.

The Special Rapporteur recommended establishing response mechanisms for children entering either of the two countries as refugees or as victims of traffickers; setting up a reception centre for unaccompanied minors; establishing bilateral or multilateral collaborative arrangements with neighbouring countries regarding trafficking; rapidly determining the status of unaccompanied children; awareness-raising programmes and initiatives on the rights contained in the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child; instituting training programmes for professionals in the criminal justice system; addressing the proliferation of child pornography; eliminating discrimination, particularly against children; banning children from gambling, a cause of prostitution, especially in boys; examining non-commercial abuse, such as incest and other types of domestic violence, abuse and neglect; and curtailing substance abuse by children. The Special Rapporteur commended Belgium and the Netherlands for legislative changes made in the past few years, which needed to be accompanied by practical and administrative measures to ensure the protection of children.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission on Human Rights renewed the Special Rapporteur's mandate for an additional three years and asked the Secretary-General to assist her. Relevant entities of the UN system were urged to provide her with comprehensive reporting to enable her to submit an interim report to the Assembly in 1998 and to the Commission in 1999. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/271 of 30 July, approved the Commission's action.

(See also PART THREE, Chapter XI, for information on measures to prevent trafficking in children.)

Interim report of Special Rapporteur. In August, the Secretary-General transmitted the Special Rapporteur's interim report [A/53/311], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 52/107 [YUN 1997, p. 687] and Commission resolution 1998/76. She described her 1998 activities, provided information on regional and country developments relating to the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and discussed the sale and trafficking of children for commercial sexual exploitation, adoption, labour, criminal activities, mendicancy, armed conflict, sports, marriage and trafficking in organs. She concluded that there was not a clear definition of the term trafficking, which resulted in confusion, difficulty in drafting legislation and weak enforcement mechanisms. Problems were exacerbated by constantly changing and innovative forms of recruitment strategies and varying modes of deception, coercion and force used in the process. Most countries did not have response mechanisms set up to remove children from exploitative situations. In addition, there was no comprehensive gathering of data on the extent of sale and/or trafficking.

Recommendations regarding trafficking included condemning the practice; setting international standards; monitoring hospitals, clinics and care institutions; establishing regional registers for children adopted internationally and for missing children; establishing programmes and initiatives to address the stigmatization of single mothers; bilateral and multilateral cooperation; training for law enforcement agents, border police, customs and immigration officials, governmental ministers and the judiciary in the countries affected; guaranteeing victims freedom from persecution by those in authority and access to free legal assistance and qualified interpreters; prosecuting perpetrators; ratifying and enforcing human rights conventions and instruments; reviewing legislation; setting up effective response mechanisms; and developing procedures to distinguish between victims of trafficking and illegal immigrants. The Special Rapporteur supported the joint actions agreed upon by the Working Group on Trafficking in Women and Children (Rome, 14 April), established by Italy and the United States, covering the promotion of the protection of the rights of victims; the need for training law enforcement, immigration and border officials in source countries; and the development of witness protection procedures and victim services.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General drew the attention of the Commission [E/CN.4/1998/100] to his 1997 report [YUN 1997, p. 685] on the state of implementation of the 1992 Programme of Action for the Prevention of the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography [YUN 1992, p. 814].

(For details of a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, see preceding chapter.)

Child labour

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission called on States to ratify the conventions of the International Labour Organization (ILO) relating to child labour; eliminate all forms of child labour contrary to accepted international standards; make primary education compulsory; assess and examine the nature and causes of the exploitation of child labour and develop strategies for combating such practices; and strengthen international coordination and cooperation.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Subcommission resolution 1997/22 [YUN 1997, p. 679], the Secretary-General provided information from Governments on measures taken to implement the 1993 Programme of Action for the Elimination of the Exploitation of Child Labour [YUN 1993, p. 965].

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/19], the Subcommission asked the international community to cooperate in developing alternatives to child labour, particularly for young girls, and called on States to enforce laws and regulations ensuring that no girl of primary-school age was employed as a domestic. It recommended that ILO continue to focus on the issue of child domestic workers and that the subject be more explicitly addressed in the future convention on intolerable forms of child labour. It also recommended that ILO establish additional country programmes within its International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour.

Children and armed conflict

Interim report of Special Representative. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 52/107 [YUN 1997, p. 687], Special Representative Olara A. Otunnu (Cote d'Ivoire) submitted, in March, his first report on children and armed conflict [E/CN.4/1998/119]. The Special Representative, who was appointed in September 1997 for a three-year period in accordance with Assembly resolution 51/77 [YUN 1996, p. 665], outlined steps he had taken to lay the groundwork for his activities, and noted that a trust fund had been established in the Secretariat for voluntary contributions.

Commission action. On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission called on States and other parties to armed conflict to respect international humanitarian law and to end the use of child soldiers. The Commission asked the Secretary-General to ensure support for the Special Representative and to call on institutions and States to provide voluntary contributions. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1998/271 of 30 July, endorsed the Commission's request to the Secretary-General.

(For information on a draft optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflicts, see preceding chapter.)

Report of Special Rapporteur. In October, the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Special Representative [A/53/482], as requested in Assembly resolution 51/77. The Special Representative was developing activities in the areas of protecting children through public advocacy; promoting initiatives during ongoing conflicts; and mobilizing concerted response to post-conflict needs. Efforts would be concentrated on selected themes, including children's participation in armed conflict; emphasizing the application of international instruments and standards; rape and sexual abuse in the context of armed conflict; mine awareness and rehabilitating child victims; displaced children; the impact of small arms on children; the impact of sanctions on children; and incorporating standards into UN operations. It was estimated that some 300,000 children under the age of 18 were serving as combatants in government armed forces or armed opposition groups in ongoing conflicts.

Some 50 countries were in the midst of conflict or in post-conflict recovery. The Special Representative had visited Kosovo in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY), Liberia, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka and the Sudan. His office had conducted two assessment missions to Afghanistan and Pakistan (January and March), where the main problems affecting children were severe poverty; lack of access to education and health services; discrimination against girls; physical disabilities caused by mines and non-existent or poor health-care facilities; and psychological trauma. The Special Representative identified initiatives to guide future efforts and initiated contacts with key actors in the international assistance community in Afghanistan and with local NGOs in Pakistan to support those efforts. He visited Liberia (11-13 March) following a period of protracted civil war (see PART ONE, Chapter II), to assess its devastating effect on children. Ex-combatant youth, refugee and internally displaced children, sexually abused girls and unaccompanied and street children had special protection needs. The Special Representative described key challenges requiring initiatives.

He visited Sierra Leone (10-11 March and 26-29 May), where there were many serious manifestations of the impact of the prolonged conflict on children, such as street children, child combatants, displaced children, unaccompanied children and victims of atrocities, as well as the collapse of health and education services and the erosion of local value systems. Urgent action was required by the international community to demobilize and reintegrate child combatants; resettle internally displaced persons; trace families of unaccompanied children; rehabilitate and support victims without limbs; and provide and rehabilitate medical and educational services. In addition, immediate relief supplies of food, medicine and clothing were needed to meet the basic needs of children hiding in the bush.

In discussions with the Government of Sri Lanka and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (3-9 May), the Special Representative raised issues related to children's rights, protection and welfare and obtained commitments regarding the provision and distribution of humanitarian supplies; the free movement of displaced populations; recruitment and participation of children in hostilities; observance of the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child; and targeting civilians. Regrettably, it had not been possible to obtain a commitment to refrain from using landmines.

In the Sudan (14-17 June), the Special Representative assessed the impact on children of the protracted conflict and sought government support in locating and facilitating the release of children abducted from northern Uganda. Regarding the latter, three Ugandan children who had been abducted by Ugandan rebel groups were released during the Special Representative's visit. The Government pledged further assistance in that regard. As to the former, discussions with the Government resulted in commitments on access for a UN humanitarian assessment mission to the Nuba mountains; cessation of recruitment and participation of children in hostilities; avoidance of landmines; collaboration with the Southern States Coordinating Council to set up a contact group between it and relevant UN agencies; and observance of the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child.

In Kosovo (10-12 September), the Special Representative assessed the impact of the ongoing violence on children; observed the situation of Serbian refugee children in FRY, most of whose families had fled earlier from Bosnia and Herzegovina and from Croatia; and evaluated the effect of the ongoing sanctions on children in FRY. He recommended condemnation of all atrocities and violence against civilians; implementation of the 1996 Education Agreement providing for ethnic Albanian students and teachers to return to educational premises; elimination of the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict; discontinuance of the use of landmines; assistance to Serbian refugees in FRY; monitoring of the impact of sanctions on children; and observance of the 1989 Convention.

The Special Representative outlined priorities for the period ahead and made recommendations regarding political support for his agenda.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 June [meetings 3896 & 3897], the Security Council discussed children and armed conflict and heard a statement by the Special Representative. At the conclusion of its deliberations, the President made the following statement on behalf of the Council members [S/PRST/1998/18].

The Security Council expresses its grave concern at the harmful impact of armed conflict on children.

The Council strongly condemns the targeting of children in armed conflicts, including their humiliation, brutalization, sexual abuse, abduction and forced displacement, as well as their recruitment and use in hostilities in violation of international law, and calls upon all parties concerned to put an end to such activities.

The Council calls upon all parties concerned to comply strictly with their obligations under international law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 1949, the Additional Protocols thereto of 1977 and the Convention on the Rights of the Child of 1989. The Council stresses the obligation of all States to prosecute those responsible for grave breaches of international humanitarian law.

The Council recognizes the importance of the mandate of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, supports his activities and welcomes his cooperation with all relevant programmes, funds and agencies of the United Nations system, which he deems appropriate.

The Council expresses its intention to pay serious attention to the situation of children affected by armed conflicts and, to this end, to maintain contact, as appropriate, with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and with the relevant programmes, funds and agencies of the United Nations system.

The Council, while dealing with situations of armed conflict, expresses its readiness to consider, when appropriate, means to assist with the effective provision and protection of humanitarian aid and assistance to civilian populations in distress, in particular women and children; to consider appropriate responses whenever buildings or sites that usually have a significant presence of children, such as schools, playgrounds and hospitals, are specifically targeted; to support efforts aimed at obtaining commitments to put to an end the recruitment and use of children in armed conflicts in violation of international law; to give special consideration to the disarmament and demobilization of child soldiers and to the reintegration into society of children maimed or otherwise traumatized as a result of an armed conflict; and to support or promote child-focused mine-clearance and mine-awareness programmes, as well as child-centred physical and social rehabilitation programmes.

The Council recognizes the importance of special training of personnel involved in peacemaking, peacekeeping and peace-building activities in respect of the needs, interests and rights of children, as well as on their treatment and protection.

The Council further recognizes that, whenever measures are adopted under Article 41 of the Charter of the United Nations, consideration should be given to their impact on the civilian population, bearing in mind the needs of children, in order to consider appropriate humanitarian exemptions.

Abduction of children from northern Uganda

Commission action. By a roll-call vote of 24 to 1, with 27 abstentions, the Commission on Human Rights, on 22 April [res. 1998/75], condemning all parties involved in the abduction, torture, killing, rape, enslavement and forceful recruitment of children in northern Uganda, particularly the Lord's Resistance Army, called for their release and safe return. It asked the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture to assist victims and their families, and demanded that parties external to the conflict in northern Uganda supporting the continuing abduction and detention of children by the Lord's Resistance Army cease all such collaboration. The Special Representative, UNICEF, UNHCR, OHCHR and relevant UN system entities were asked to address the situation as a matter of priority. The Secretary-General was asked to report to the Commission and the Assembly in 1999.

Street children

On 22 April [res. 1998/76], the Commission called on States to seek solutions to problems of children working and/or living on the street; ensure their reintegration into society and provide adequate nutrition, shelter, health care and education; and take urgent measures to prevent the killing of street children and combat torture and violence against them. The international community was called on to support the efforts of States to improve the situation of children needing special protection measures.

Children with disabilities

Regarding children with disabilities, the Commission, on 22 April [res. 1998/76], called on States to adopt measures to ensure their full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, especially access to education and health services, to develop and implement anti-discriminatory legislation and to include those measures in their reports to the Committee on the Rights of the Child. (See preceding chapter regarding the Committee's decision to set up a working group to develop a plan of action for its work on behalf of children with disabilities.)

Refugee and internally displaced children

The Commission, on 22 April [res. 1998/76], called on States to protect refugee and internally displaced children. UN bodies and agencies were asked to ensure the early identification and registration of unaccompanied refugee and internally displaced children, to continue monitoring their care arrangements and to give priority to programmes for family tracing and reunification. While calling on other parties to armed conflicts to recognize the risks to which refugee and internally displaced children were exposed, the Commission asked Government and UN bodies and organizations to give those situations urgent attention.

In resolution 53/128, the General Assembly asked the Secretary-General's Representative on internally displaced persons to pay attention to the situation of internally displaced children.

Rights of the child

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, following consideration of a broad range of issues relating to children's rights (see also preceding chapter and PART THREE, Chapters X and XI) and acting on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/621], adopted resolution 53/128 without vote [agenda item 106].

The rights of the child

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/106 and 52/107 of 12 December 1997 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/76 of 22 April 1998,

Reaffirming that the best interest of the child shall be the primary consideration in all actions concerning children,

Reaffirming the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990, notably the solemn commitment to give high priority to the rights of children, to their survival and to their protection and development, and reaffirming also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, held at Vienna from 14 to 25 June 1993, which, inter alia, states that national and international mechanisms and programmes for the defence and protection of children, in particular those in especially difficult circumstances, should be strengthened, including through effective measures to combat exploitation and abuse of children, such as female infanticide, harmful child labour, sale of children and organs, child prostitution and child pornography, and which reaffirms that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are universal,

Underlining the need for mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes relating to children,

Welcoming the fact that the special situation of children has been taken into account in the conclusion of the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court, guided by the principles and provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Profoundly concerned that the situation of children in many parts of the world remains critical as a result of poverty, inadequate social and economic conditions aggravated by the current international financial crisis in an increasingly globalized world economy, pandemics, natural disasters, armed conflicts, displacement, exploitation, illiteracy, hunger, intolerance and disability and inadequate legal protection, and convinced that urgent and effective national and international action is called for,

Recognizing that legislation alone is not enough to prevent violations of the rights of the child, that stronger political commitment is needed and that Governments should implement their laws and complement legislative measures with effective action,

Recommending that, within their mandates, all relevant human rights mechanisms and all other relevant organs and mechanisms of the United Nations system and the supervisory bodies of the specialized agencies pay attention to particular situations in which children are in danger and where their rights are violated and that they take into account the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child, and welcoming the rights-based approach adopted by the United Nations Children's Fund and the steps taken further to increase system-wide coordination and inter-agency cooperation for the promotion and protection of the rights of the child,

Recalling the important open debate and the statement made by the President of the Security Council on behalf of the Council on 29 June 1998 on the item entitled "Children and armed conflict",

Stressing the need to strengthen partnerships between Governments, international organizations and all sectors of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations,

I

Implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child

1. Welcomes the unprecedented number of one hundred and ninety-one States that have ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Rights of the Child as a universal commitment to the rights of the child;

2. Once again urges all States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention as a matter of priority, with a view to reaching the goal of universal adherence by the tenth anniversary of the World Summit for Children and of the entry into force of the Convention;

3. Takes note of the report of the Committee on the Rights of the Child, and recognizes its important role in creating awareness of the principles and provisions of the Convention and in providing recommendations to States parties on its implementation;

4. Invites the Committee to enhance further the constructive dialogue with the States parties to the Convention and the transparent and effective functioning of the Committee;

Indigenous populations

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/13], the Commission on Human Rights, urging the Working Group on Indigenous Populations of the Subcommission to continue its comprehensive review of developments and of the diverse situations and aspirations of the world's indigenous people, recommended that the Economic and Social Council authorize the Group to meet for five working days prior to the Subcommission's 1998 session. It welcomed the Group's proposal to highlight at its future sessions specific themes of the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People (1994-2004), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 48/163 [YUN 1993, p. 865], including giving priority in 1998 to the theme of education and language, as recommended by the Subcommission in resolution 1997/14 [YUN 1997, p. 692]. The High Commissioner was asked to consider organizing a workshop for research and higher education institutions focusing on indigenous issues in education, to improve exchange of information between the institutions and to encourage future cooperation, in consultation with indigenous people and in collaboration with UNESCO and other relevant UN bodies. The Commission invited the Group to continue to consider ways in which the expertise of indigenous people could contribute to its work. The Secretary-General was asked to assist the Group and to transmit its reports to Governments, organizations of indigenous people, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs for specific comments and suggestions.

By decision 1998/243 of 30 July, the Council authorized the Working Group to meet for five days prior to the Subcommission's 1998 session and approved the Commission's requests to the Secretary-General and to the High Commissioner.

Working Group activities. The Working Group on Indigenous Populations held its sixteenth session (Geneva, 27-31 July) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/16] to review developments pertaining to the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to give attention to the evolution of standards concerning the rights of indigenous populations. Pursuant to the Group's 1997 decision to highlight indigenous education and language [YUN 1997, p. 692], it considered information submitted thereon by intergovernmental organizations and indigenous peoples [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/1998/2 & Add.1], as well as a note by the secretariat [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/1998/3], which proposed possible themes for improving educational opportunity; strengthening indigenous educational establishments and languages; and conducting a workshop for research and higher education institutions focusing on indigenous issues, to be held in accordance with General Assembly resolution 52/108 [YUN 1997, p. 694]. In addition, the Group considered a note by the secretariat on human genome diversity research and indigenous peoples [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/1998/4 & Add.I] and a compilation of general recommendations from human rights treaty bodies referring to indigenous peoples [E/CN.4/Sub.2/ACA/1998/5].

The Group decided to highlight in 1999 the themes indigenous peoples and their relationship to land and indigenous peoples and health. It recommended that the Subcommission ask the High Commissioner, in her capacity as Coordinator of the Decade, to continue to seek ways to cooperate with UNESCO. Regarding standard-setting activities, it asked Miguel Alfonso Martinez (Cuba) to submit in 1999 a preliminary working paper on possible principles and guidelines for private-sector energy and mining concerns that might affect indigenous lands.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/23], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to transmit the Working Group's report on its 1998 session to the High Commissioner, indigenous organizations, Governments and intergovernmental organizations and NGOs concerned, as well as to thematic rapporteurs, special representatives, independent experts and working groups, and asked that it be made available to the Commission in 1999. Welcoming the UNESCO Director-General's invitation to host the Group's 1999 session in Paris, the Subcommission endorsed the Group's decision, in view of the concerns expressed by a number of indigenous organizations, not to take a final decision until it received information in 1999 on the results of consultations with their communities. It recommended that the Group adopt for its 1999 session the theme indigenous peoples and their relationship to land. The Chairman/Rapporteur of the Group was asked to inform the Board of Trustees of the UN Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations of the Group's theme for 1999. The Subcommission asked the Commission to invite Governments, intergovernmental organizations, indigenous organizations and NGOs to provide information, particularly on the theme, to the Group in 1999, and to ask the Council to authorize the Group to meet for five working days prior to the Subcommission's 1999 session. The Secretary-General was asked to prepare an annotated agenda for that session of the Group.

International Decade of the World's Indigenous People

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/13], the Commission on Human Rights asked the Working Group to continue its review of activities undertaken during the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People. The High Commissioner for Human Rights, in her capacity as Coordinator for the Decade, was asked to update in 1999 her annual report on activities within the UN system under the programme of activities for the Decade. The Commission recommended that the High Commissioner give due regard to the development of human rights training for indigenous people, and encouraged her to cooperate with the UN Department of Public Information in preparing and disseminating information on the Decade.

UN financial and development institutions, operational programmes and specialized agencies were asked to: give increased priority and resources to improve the conditions of indigenous peoples; launch special projects to strengthen their community-level initiatives and to facilitate the exchange of information and expertise among indigenous people and other relevant experts; and designate focal points or other mechanisms to coordinate with OHCHR activities relating to the Decade.

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/53/310], the Secretary-General discussed action taken to implement the programme of activities for the Decade, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/157 [YUN 1995, p. 772]. He also described the observance of the International Day of the World's Indigenous People (9 August) in New York and Geneva.

Under OHCHR, an indigenous project team was established. The Office organized the annual Inter-Agency Consultation on Indigenous People (Geneva, 24 July). A workshop of indigenous journalists (Madrid, Spain, 26-28 January) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/1998/6], funded by the Voluntary Fund for the Decade, adopted a programme to strengthen the indigenous media during the Decade. The Advisory Group for the Voluntary Fund, composed of the members of the Board of Trustees of the Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations and the Chairman/Rapporteur of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations, at its third session (Geneva, 2-8 April), examined 43 applications for project grants and recommended that 13 project grants be awarded totalling $139,016. The Group approved the principle of organizing a workshop of research institutes and institutions of higher education focusing on indigenous issues in education for a total of some $60,000, for which funds had to be raised. The six-month OHCHR Indigenous Fellowship Programme (Geneva, 1 June-30 November), which offered training at OHCHR and other agencies, was awarded to four participants from Mali, New Zealand, Panama and the United States.

Within the UN system, programmes were implemented by the World Intellectual Property

Organization, UNDP, WHO, ILO, UNESCO and the World Bank. Regarding activities of regional organizations, the Directorate General for Development of the European Commission organized a workshop on indigenous people and development cooperation (Brussels, Belgium, 12-13 March).

The report also described actions taken by Member States and indigenous organizations to implement the programme for the Decade. Annexed to it was a list of contributions made to the Voluntary Fund for the International Decade from 1 January 1996 to 31 July 1998.

The Secretary-General observed that the first five years of the Decade was important in making the rest of the Decade a success. He recommended that the existing programme of activities for the Decade be examined and adjusted on the basis of the experiences of the first five years.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/22], the Subcommission recommended that the International Day of the World's Indigenous People be held on the first day of the Working Group's 1999 session in order to ensure as great a participation of indigenous peoples as possible. It also recommended that the Coordinator for the Decade consider holding a fund-raising meeting to encourage financial contributions to the Voluntary Fund for the Decade and the UN Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations, as well as the appointment of qualified staff, including indigenous persons, to assist OHCHR in work relating to the indigenous programme. Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs were urged to contribute to the Voluntary Fund for the Decade, as were indigenous organizations.

Expressing its appreciation to the Government of Spain for hosting the workshop of indigenous journalists, the Subcommission encouraged the High Commissioner to consider organizing a follow-up workshop.

Report of High Commissioner. In December [E/CN.4/1999/81], the High Commissioner described activities undertaken to implement the programme of activities for the Decade. OHCHR had implemented the Indigenous Fellowship Programme. The Advisory Group for the Voluntary Fund for the Decade held an inter-sessional meeting from 1 to 3 December. The contributions received as at 10 December, amounting to some $30,000, were insufficient to carry out the activities planned for 1999, which included the Fellowship Programme, grants to projects for indigenous communities and organizations and the organization of seminars and workshops, representing some $540,000.

Mid-point review

The Working Group on Indigenous Populations considered a June note by the Secretariat regarding the mid-point review of the Decade [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.4/1998/7]. The note stated that the General Assembly, in resolution 50/157 [YUN 1995, p. 772], decided that the Decade's programme of activities might be reviewed and updated and that, at the mid-point of the Decade in 1999, the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly should review the results of the activities to identify obstacles and recommend solutions for overcoming them. In resolution 52/108 [YUN 1997, p. 694], the Assembly had noted the need for a mid-point review.

On 21 August [res. 1998/22], the Subcommission recommended that the Commission ask the Council to authorize OHCHR to organize a three-day technical meeting prior to the Working Group's 1999 session in order to undertake the mid-point review of the Decade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/622], adopted resolution 53/129 without vote [agenda item 107].

Draft declaration

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/14], the Commission on Human Rights recommended that the working group to elaborate a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples meet for 10 working days prior to the Commission's 1999 session, and asked the group to submit a progress report. It encouraged indigenous people's organizations to participate in the group.

By resolution 1998/34 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council authorized the working group to meet prior to the Commission's 1999 session and asked the Secretary-General to assist it.

Working group activities. The working group established to consider a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples, at its fourth session (Geneva, 30 November-11 December) [E/CN.4/1999/82], discussed articles 15 to 18, which related to the right to education, the right of indigenous peoples to establish their own media and rights established under international and national labour law. Annexed to the report were the proposals by some States on those articles, as was the current wording of the articles supported by indigenous representatives and some governmental delegations.

By decision 1998/233 of 29 July, the Economic and Social Council had approved the participation of eight indigenous peoples' organizations not in consultative status with the Council to participate in the Group.

Voluntary Fund

In August, the Secretary-General reported on the status of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations [A/53/282]. The Board of Trustees, at its eleventh session (Geneva, 30 March-1 April) [A/53/310], awarded 50 travel grants valued at $144,250 to indigenous representatives to enable them to attend the 1998 session of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations. It also awarded three travel grants amounting to $11,126 to indigenous representatives attending the working group on the draft declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples (see above).

Owing to the few applications received from indigenous organizations to participate in the working group on the draft declaration, the Board of Trustees recommended that it and the Fund secretariat send applications to organizations authorized by the Committee on NGOs to participate in the working group [E/CN.4/1999/81]. During inter-sessional consultations, the Board recommended that grants totalling some $50,000 be awarded to 12 representatives of indigenous communities and organizations to attend the group's 1998 session.

The General Assembly, by decision 53/432 of 9 December, took note of the Secretary-General's report covering the 1997 activities of the Fund [YUN 1997, p. 696], as well as those in 1998.

Subcommission action. On 21 August [res. 1998/23], the Subcommission asked the Chairman/Rapporteur of the Working Group on Indigenous Populations to inform the Fund's Board of Trustees that the Working Group would highlight in 1999 indigenous peoples and their relationship to land, so that the Board could bear that in mind when it met.

Also on 21 August [res. 1998/22], the Subcommission recommended the holding of a fund-raising meeting to encourage financial contributions to the Fund (see also above).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/53/622], adopted resolution 53/130 without vote [agenda item 107].

United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 40/131 of 13 December 1985, establishing the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations, and 50/156 of 21 December 1995, in which it decided that the Fund should also be used to assist representatives of indigenous communities and organizations to participate in the deliberations of the open-ended inter-sessional working group of the Commission on Human Rights established pursuant to Commission resolution 1995/32 of 3 March 1995 with the sole purpose of elaborating a draft declaration on the rights of indigenous people, taking into consideration the draft declaration annexed to resolution 1994/45 of 26 August 1994 of the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities of the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling also that one of the objectives of the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People is to consider the establishment of a permanent forum for indigenous people in the United Nations system,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 1998/20 of 9 April 1998, as endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in its decision 1998/247 of 30 July 1998, in which the Commission decided to establish an open-ended inter-sessional ad hoc working group, from within existing overall United Nations resources, to meet for five working days prior to the fifty-fifth session of the Commission to elaborate and consider further proposals for the possible establishment of a permanent forum for indigenous people in the United Nations system,

Taking note also of the provisions in Commission resolution 1998/20 regarding the participation of organizations of indigenous people in the ad hoc working group,

Recognizing the desirability of assisting organizations of indigenous people in participating in the ad hoc working group,

1. Decides that the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations should also be used to assist representatives of indigenous communities and organizations to participate in the deliberations of the open-ended inter-sessional ad hoc working group established by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 1998/20, as endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in its decision 1998/247;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of Member States and to invite them to consider contributing to the Fund.

Permanent forum for indigenous people

Commission action. On 9 April [res. 1998/20], the Commission on Human Rights, taking note of General Assembly resolution 52/108 [YUN 1997, p. 694], decided to establish an open-ended inter-sessional ad hoc working group to develop and consider further proposals for the possible establishment of a permanent forum for indigenous people in the UN system. It asked the ad hoc group to take into account the reports of two workshops on the subject, held in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 779] and 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 696]; to meet for five days prior to its 1999 session; and to submit its report to that session.

By decision 1998/247 of 30 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the decision to establish the group and approved the request that it meet for five working days in 1999.

Follow-up to workshop. Pursuant to its resolution 1997/30 [YUN 1997, p. 696], the Commission considered a March report [E/CN.4/1998/II/Add.3] containing comments received from one Government and one indigenous organization on the report of the 1997 workshop.

Study on treaties, agreements and other constructive arrangements

A note of 10 August by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/Sub.2/1998/17] stated that the final report
