I. Introduction

En application de l'article 7 de la Convention, chaque État partie est appelé à présenter au Secrétaire général de l'Organisation des Nations Unies, aussitôt que possible et de toute manière au plus tard 180 jours après l'entrée en vigueur de la Convention à son égard, un rapport sur les questions visées aux alinéas a) à i) du paragraphe 1. En outre, les États parties doivent mettre à jour annuellement les renseignements ainsi fournis, en couvrant la dernière année civile, et communiquer ceux-ci au Secrétaire général de l'ONU au plus tard le 30 avril de chaque année (art. 7, par. 2). Pour faciliter cette opération ainsi que la comparaison et l'évaluation des données, la première Assemblée des États parties, tenue en mai 1999, a adopté des formules standard pour les rapports à présenter en application de l'article 7, formules qui ont été élaborées en consultation avec les États parties. En septembre 2000, à la deuxième Assemblée des États parties tenue à Genève, il a été décidé d'ajouter une nouvelle formule intitulée « Formule J : Autres questions pertinentes ». Celle-ci permet aux États parties de présenter à leur gré des rapports sur des questions concernant le respect et l'application de la Convention autres que celles que doivent couvrir les rapports prévus à l'article 7, et notamment de rendre compte des activités menées en application de l'article 6 et concernant l'assistance fournie pour les soins aux victimes des mines, leur réadaptation et leur réintégration sociale et économique¹.

Le présent document donne un aperçu des réponses fournies selon ces formules par les États parties, au 15 août 2001. Le texte intégral des réponses est disponible sur l'Internet².
