ANNEX

Preliminary figures for operations on the various fronts during the first two weeks of September 1979

According to incomplete returns, about 4,000 Vietnamese soldiers were killed during the first two weeks of September.

1. On the Rattanakiri-Stung Trèng front, where Viet Nam fielded four regiments and three divisions to clear the region, our guerrillas killed about 350 of the enemy and injured more than 300.
2. On the Mondulkiri and Kratié fronts, about 500 of the enemy were wiped out.
3. In the central zone, on the Kampong Cham-Kampong Thom front, 400 of the enemy, including a Vietnamese divisional commander and a battalion commander, were wiped out.
4. On the south-west front, the enemy sustained losses of 185 killed and 124 injured during the first two weeks of September, and on the west and Pursat fronts more than 400 of the enemy were killed.
5. In the north-west, on the Battambang front, our guerrillas killed or injured 900 of the Vietnamese aggressors, and on the Koh Kong front, they put almost 400 out of action (killed, injured and captured).
6. In the north, during the attacks against Angkor Wat on 2 and 3 September, 34 Soviet advisers and 35 Vietnamese soldiers were killed or injured.
7. Koh Maheul district: the guerrillas of this district brought the clearing operation launched at the beginning of the month to a halt, after killing 36 of the enemy and injuring 25. They also seized three B-40's, some AK rifles and ammunition.
