Introduction

1. The Commission on Human Rights, in its resolution 2001/44, took note of the report of the ninth session of the open-ended working group on a draft optional protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (the Convention) (E/CN.4/2001/67), and requested the working group, in order to continue its work, to meet prior to the fifty-eighth session of the Commission for a period of two weeks, with a view to completing expeditiously a final and substantive text, and to report to the Commission at its fifty-eighth session. The Economic and Social Council, in its decision 2001/265, endorsed that request.

I. ORGANIZATION OF THE SESSION

A. Opening of the session and election of officers

2. The working group held its tenth session from 14 to 25 January 2002. A representative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights opened the session and made an introductory statement in which he recalled that, in accordance with Commission resolution 2001/44, the Secretary-General had transmitted the report of the ninth session of the working group to all Governments, specialized agencies, chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and invited them to submit their comments to the working group. By 15 December 2001, substantive replies had been received from the Governments of Belgium, on behalf of the European Union, Georgia and Japan, as well as from several non-governmental organizations. Document E/CN.4/2002/WG.11/WP.1 contained a summary of those replies and was made available to the working group. Replies had been received as well from the Governments of Azerbaijan and Colombia after 15 December 2001, copies of which were also made available to the working group.

3. At its 1st meeting, on 14 January 2002, the working group re-elected Ms. Elizabeth Odio Benito (Costa Rica) as Chairperson-Rapporteur.

B. Attendance

4. Representatives of the following States members of the Commission on Human Rights attended the meetings of the working group, which were open to all members of the Commission: Algeria, Argentina, Austria, Bahrain, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Czech Republic, Ecuador, France, Germany, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mexico, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay, Venezuela and Viet Nam.

5. The following States non-members of the Commission on Human Rights were represented by observers at the meetings of the working group: Azerbaijan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Brunei Darussalam, Colombia, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Egypt, El Salvador, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Ireland, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Philippines, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, Tunisia, Turkey, United States of America and Yugoslavia.

6. The Holy See and Switzerland were also represented by observers.

7. The Council of the European Union, the International Committee of the Red Cross, the League of Arab States and the following non-governmental organizations were represented by observers at the meetings of the working group: Amnesty International, Association for the Prevention of Torture, Human Rights Watch, International Commission of Jurists, International Federation of ACAT (Action by Christians for the Abolition of Torture), International Rehabilitation Council for Torture Victims, International Service for Human Rights and the World Organization against Torture.

8. On 22 January 2002, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights as well as Mr. Theodor C. van Boven, Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, addressed the working group. Mr. Andreas Mavrommatis, member of the Committee against Torture, also addressed the working group on 24 January 2002.

Under-Secretary-General for Human Rights

D. Organization of work

10. At the 1st meeting, on 14 January 2002, the Chairperson-Rapporteur expressed the hope that the working group would reach agreement on a final text of the optional protocol for adoption by the Commission on Human Rights at its fifty-eighth session. She regretted that, for reasons linked to the events of 11 September 2001 as well as her professional commitments, she had been unable to hold pre-session informal consultations. She reminded participants, however, that in July 2001 she had sent to all Member States a summary of the different proposals that were on the table at that time, i.e. the original Costa Rican draft and the drafts presented by, respectively, Mexico with the support of GRULAC and the European Union, and solicited their views on them. In her view, the drafts should be considered sufficient to pursue the work and agree on a final text. She had also sent to all Member States, in December 2001, a working paper proposing a plan of work for the tenth session and summarizing the issues that needed to be further discussed.

11. Following informal consultations with the various regional groups (Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean (GRULAC), and Western Europe and other States) held on 11 January 2002, the Chairperson distributed at the 2nd meeting a work plan for the first week. The Chairperson advised the working group that she would present her proposal for an optional protocol by the end of the first week. She indicated that she intended to propose a system for the prevention of torture based on two pillars, i.e. an international mechanism combined with national mechanisms, based on the original Costa Rican proposal and the proposals presented by the GRULAC and the European Union, as she had been mandated to do. Delegations were therefore encouraged to make their comments in the course of a general debate that would be held during the first three days of the session. At the same time, the Chairperson would hold informal bilateral consultations with interested delegations. The Chairperson further indicated that she did not intend to impose her own ideas but rather to conciliate the different positions in order to comply with the mandate of the Commission, which was the establishment of a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention. In her view, sufficient ideas and proposals had been put on the table over the past 10 years.

12. At the 6th meeting, on 17 January 2002, the Chairperson presented her proposal for an optional protocol and invited delegations to submit their comments thereto. Those comments were made at the 7th and 8th meetings on 22 January 2002.

II. GENERAL DEBATE

A. The two-pillar system

13. At the 1st and 2nd meetings, on 14 January 2002, a debate was held on the concept of the two-pillar system, which would involve combining an international visiting mechanism with national ones and constituted the thrust of both the GRULAC and European Union (EU) drafts presented during the ninth session of the working group.² The need to develop mechanisms that would assist States to comply with their obligation to prevent torture, in accordance with articles 2 and 16 of the Convention against Torture, was very much emphasized.

14. The representative of Spain, on behalf of the European Union (EU), the Central and Eastern European States, including Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, and Slovenia, in association with Cyprus, Malta and Turkey, presented a common position. While recalling that the main purpose of the working group was to create a strong, well-functioning international visiting mechanism for the prevention of torture, these delegations welcomed the initiative to establish a two-pillar system. Some of the above-mentioned delegations also made individual interventions in favour of such a system and emphasized the need for a strong international mechanism which would not only provide technical assistance to the national mechanisms but also have very extensive visiting functions in connection with any place where people were deprived of liberty.

15. Similar views were expressed by the delegations of Argentina, Canada, Ecuador, Georgia, Guatemala, Mexico, Norway, New Zealand, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation, South Africa and Switzerland. The delegation of Mexico stated that it would not insist on its proposal, presented at the ninth session of the working group, and supported the creation of a strong international visiting mechanism for the prevention of torture. The delegation of South Africa expressed concern that national mechanisms might shift the focus away from the efforts envisaged to achieve strong international standards of prevention against torture.

16. The delegations of China, Cuba, Egypt and the Syrian Arab Republic also spoke in favour of the two-pillar system and put particular emphasis on establishing strong national mechanisms with visiting functions and an international mechanism which would mainly provide technical assistance.

17. The delegation of the United States of America supported a three-pillar system. The delegation was of the view that at the national level, States should be encouraged to create national visiting mechanisms to prevent torture. The delegation did not, however, support provisions in an optional protocol that would eliminate the flexibility provided to States under articles 2 and 16 of the Convention concerning the measures that might be taken to prevent torture. At the regional level, the delegation believed that States should be encouraged to consider adopting mechanisms that would provide for mandatory visits to places of detention like those contained in the European Convention for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and its Protocol I.³ At the international level, the delegation supported measures that would strengthen the existing Committee against Torture by ensuring that any new subcommittee reported directly to the Committee and assisted the Committee in its work, including voluntary visits to places of detention, and by providing technical assistance to States. The delegation did not support the creation of a new committee that would operate independently of the existing Committee against Torture.

18. The Association for the Prevention of Torture presented a joint statement on behalf of the following NGOs: Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, International Commission of Jurists, International Federation of ACAT, International Rehabilitation Council for Torture

Victims (IRCT) and World Organization against Torture (OMCT), with the support of the Redress Trust for Torture Survivors. The NGOs stressed that the focus of the optional protocol should be on the prevention of torture and the implementation of international standards at the national level. While supporting the proposal for a two-pillar system, the NGOs reiterated that a strong international visiting mechanism, linked to the Committee against Torture, should lie at the heart of the optional protocol. With respect to the issue of duplication, the NGOs stated that the international mechanism would not be duplicating the work of existing mechanisms and would not be concerned with issues already being considered elsewhere in the United Nations system. The new mechanism would instead bring added value to existing mechanisms on torture.

B. The international mechanism and its relationship with the Committee against Torture and the national mechanisms

19. At its 3rd and 5th meetings, the debate in the working group focused mainly on the international mechanism and its relationship with the Committee against Torture and the national mechanisms. The compulsory nature of both kinds of mechanism was also discussed.

20. The delegation of Spain, on behalf of the European Union, reiterated the common position expressed at the 1st meeting regarding their strong preference for an international visiting mechanism for the prevention of torture which would not only provide technical assistance to the national mechanisms but also have very extensive visiting functions in connection with any place where people were deprived of liberty. The delegations of Argentina, the Czech Republic, Guatemala, Mexico, Canada, Sweden, Slovenia, New Zealand, Denmark, El Salvador, the Netherlands, Georgia, Germany, the United Kingdom, Norway, Latvia, France, Ecuador, Portugal, the Republic of Korea, Switzerland, Poland, Austria and South Africa also made interventions during the debate in favour of this approach. The delegations of Denmark and Finland suggested that the visiting powers should be exercised on the basis of an open invitation in order to make the mechanism as efficient as possible. The delegation of Italy proposed that the protocol could include transitory provisions allowing States Parties to take the necessary measures before starting to receive the visits of the international mechanism.

21. For the delegations of China, Cuba, Egypt and the Syria Arab Republic, the main function of the international mechanism should be to provide technical and financial support to the national mechanisms. The visiting functions should mainly be entrusted to the national mechanisms. In this regard, the delegation of Cuba stressed the importance of having an international instrument that would create an obligation on States Parties to set up national mechanisms and the need for that instrument to be flexible. The delegation of Japan questioned the appropriateness of an international body with unlimited powers to inspect places of detention in the territory of States Parties.

22. The delegation of Egypt suggested that the functions of the international mechanism should be the following: to support the Committee against Torture in all its functions under the Convention; to assist States to set up national mechanisms; to provide advice and technical assistance to the national mechanisms, especially with regard to the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee; to administer the voluntary fund proposed in the Costa Rican, GRULAC and EU drafts to help finance the implementation of such recommendations; and to visit places of detention if requested to do so by the State concerned. Moreover, the delegation of Egypt strongly opposed the idea of an international mechanism with unlimited authority to visit any detention facility within a State at any time, and indicated that such unlimited authority would encounter constitutional obstacles. The delegation of China suggested that the international mechanism could participate in the visits to places of detention carried out by the national mechanisms but should not have the leading role.

23. The delegations of Cuba and Egypt also suggested that States should have the possibility of refusing access to places of detention for reasons linked to national security. They also emphasized the need for the international mechanism to respect the confidentiality of the procedure.

24. The delegations of the Russian Federation and the Syrian Arab Republic said that the international mechanism should comply with the principles of independence and impartiality.

25. The delegation of the United States reiterated that should an international mechanism be established by the optional protocol, its main focus should be to reinforce the Committee against Torture. This new international mechanism should function as a subcommittee of the Committee against Torture and assist it, particularly with respect to its inquiry procedure under article 20 of the Convention. The delegation viewed its proposal as inherently preventive in nature, in part because it would allow for the possibility of voluntary visits to places of detention.

26. The views expressed by the United States delegation were included in an “alternative draft optional protocol” that the delegation circulated among the participants at the 5th meeting of the working group. It is contained in annex II to the present report.

27. The Chairperson recalled that the mandate of the working group was the establishment of a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention on a universal level and that article 20 had a clear monitoring and sanctioning function, not a preventive one. Regarding the reference to the regional mechanisms made by the United States delegation on several occasions, she pointed out that it was outside the working group’s mandate to consider the relevance of a regional mechanism. The Chairperson took note of the constructive efforts of the United States delegation and said that she would keep its proposal in mind when preparing her own draft.

28. The delegation of Guatemala stated that the question of applying the European Convention to States which were not members of the Council of Europe, referred to by some delegations, was outside the mandate of the working group. It also expressed doubts about the efficacy of replacing a proposed universal mechanism by one that would allow States to be invited to participate in a mechanism set up by a regional group to which that State did not belong and in whose political organs it was not represented. Furthermore, the delegation recalled that the scope of article 20 of the Convention was limited to the investigation of situations of the systematic practice of torture and, therefore, was not an appropriate mechanism to deal with prevention.

29. The delegation of the Netherlands indicated that the proposal of the United States raised both procedural and substantive problems. The procedural problem was its late submission. After the ninth session of the working group States had been given the opportunity to react to the three drafts on the table. It was therefore regrettable that the United States had presented its draft only one day before the presentation of the Chair's proposal. This situation did not contribute to the work of the working group. With regard to the substance, the United States proposal did not offer anything new. It was a repetition of ideas that had been presented earlier. The main problem was that it contained no provision for an international visiting mechanism.

30. The importance of avoiding duplication and ensuring added value to the existing system was emphasized by all delegations. In this context, it was generally felt that the work of the Committee against Torture should not be duplicated and that any mechanism established under the optional protocol should function as a subcommittee of the Committee against Torture, with different and additional functions in the field of prevention. The Committee against Torture should continue to serve as the parent body in the fight against torture. The delegation of Spain and others stressed that a distinction must be made between, on the one hand, the monitoring role of the Committee against Torture which, according to article 20 of the Convention, is reactive and requires previous and well-founded indications that "torture is being systematically practised" and, on the other hand, the preventive and advisory roles to be played by a strong subcommittee empowered to visit at any time all places of detention. The delegation of Egypt suggested that the Committee against Torture, as the parent body, would continue functioning as a monitoring body, whereas the subcommittee would act as an advisory body and the national mechanisms as visiting bodies. The delegations of Italy and Ecuador emphasized that the subcommittee and the Committee should coordinate their activities from the legal and technical perspectives.

31. The delegation of Cuba stressed the need to ensure a pro rata geographic and gender balance in the composition of the subcommittee. The need to observe the principle of equitable geographic distribution was also stressed by the delegation of Ecuador.

32. The delegation of the United States suggested that it would not be appropriate to fund the international visiting mechanism from the regular budget of the United Nations, as that would mean that every Member of the United Nations would contribute to the mechanism whether or not they were party to the optional protocol; the costs should be borne by the States Parties. The delegation of Japan agreed. Furthermore, the delegations of the United States and Saudi Arabia expressed concern regarding the financial implications of creating an international mechanism and the budgetary consequences of such a mechanism on other human rights mechanisms. The delegation of the United States reiterated its request, made during the ninth session of the working group, for information concerning the projected costs of the proposed visiting mechanism.

33. The delegations of Sweden, Denmark and Finland were of the view that the international mechanism should be funded under the regular budget and recalled the provision to that effect contained in the draft presented by the European Union in 2001. Such a solution would, in particular, guarantee the independence and neutrality of the mechanism. The delegation of Denmark expressed concern about any attempt to impose cost-benefit thinking on the prevention of torture, since prevention of torture was an obligation under articles 2 and 16 of the Convention. A protocol with a strong visiting mechanism funded from the regular budget would make an effective tool available to all States Parties in fulfilling their obligation under articles 2 and 16. The delegation of Cuba stated a preference for a regular-budget funding in order to avoid a shortage of resources and the danger of earmarking, but said that it was prepared to be flexible.

34. The delegation of the Netherlands underlined the importance of financing through the regular budget. It questioned the argument that States should only contribute to treaties to which they were a party. The United Nations treaty system was part of the United Nations and as such all Member States contributed (per ratio) to the system, irrespective of the treaties they had signed or ratified. It would also be unfair for States Parties to put a price tag on a human rights treaty. That would mean that only rich States would be in a position to become parties to such treaties. Many people would be denied human rights because their Governments could not afford to become a party.

35. The delegation of the Netherlands pointed at the added value of a protocol for the United Nations system. With regard to cost, it emphasized that the optional protocol had a preventive character and it was better to prevent than to cure. The United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture, thanks to a growing number of contributions, had been able to help an ever-growing number of victims. The international community should, however, concentrate its efforts on preventing torture. Prevention through inspections by international and national mechanisms was precisely the purpose of the optional protocol.

36. Regarding the constitutional obstacles referred to by some delegations, the delegation of the Netherlands stated that this should not be a problem because the protocol was optional. A State would decide whether it wished to become a party after careful consideration by its Government and, often, by its parliament. Possible constitutional and legal constraints would be examined in that context. Throughout the extensive procedures of signing and ratifying a treaty, both the international and national legal systems had a whole range of opportunities to verify the relationship between international and national legal systems.

C. The national mechanisms

37. The 4th meeting of the working group focused mainly on the functions of and other issues related to the national mechanisms, although many delegations had already expressed their views on the matter at previous meetings.

38. Many delegations in favour of a strong international mechanism with visiting functions, among them Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, Italy, Mexico, the Republic of Korea, Sweden and Switzerland, reiterated that national mechanisms should be encouraged but should not replace the international one. The delegation of Sweden suggested that national mechanisms should be required to report to the international mechanism. The delegations of Switzerland, Denmark, Germany and Canada stated that the establishment of such mechanisms should not be mandatory, whereas the delegations of Guatemala, Argentina and Mexico were of the opposite view. The delegation of Cuba suggested that States should be given the option to accept the competence of the national mechanism, or the international one, or both.

39. The delegations of China, the United States of America and Egypt proposed that national and regional mechanisms should take the leading role in visiting places of detention. The delegation of Egypt stated that the majority of countries where the use of torture was a problem either did not have national mechanisms or they were inefficient. Therefore, there was a strong need for an international instrument that would assist and encourage States to set up strong mechanisms at the national level on the basis of certain common principles.

40. The delegation of the United States strongly opposed the concept of establishing, either at the national or the international level, mandatory visiting mechanisms that would have unrestricted authority to visit places of detention. The delegation expressed concern about the potential for abuse by any such unrestricted authority and suggested instead a system of limited authority that would provide checks and balances and ensure accountability.

41. Many delegations, including those of Spain (on behalf of the European Union), Argentina, Egypt, Georgia, El Salvador, the Republic of Korea, Poland and South Africa, made statements regarding the ways and means of ensuring the independence of the national mechanisms. It was generally felt that these mechanisms should be established on the basis of the Principles relating to the status and functioning of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the "Paris Principles"), that they should be independent from any other national authority, able to issue recommendations to the concerned authorities and adequately funded. They should also have, inter alia, unrestricted access to all places where persons were deprived of their liberty as well as full freedom to interview persons held in those places, without witnesses. States should also ensure that no one would be subjected to reprisals for having been in contact with the national mechanism. In support of this proposal, the delegation of Argentina further suggested that NGOs and civil society should have a place in any national mechanisms under the optional protocol. The delegations of Switzerland and Cuba suggested that the universal standards for persons deprived of their liberty should be included in the terms of reference of the national mechanisms.

42. The delegations of China and Cuba opposed the idea of a uniform approach for national mechanisms and suggested that, in establishing such mechanisms, consideration should be given to the cultural and other circumstances of each State. The delegation of Japan also opposed the idea of a unified or mandatory approach with respect to the national mechanisms.

43. The delegation of Sweden indicated that some countries already had national mechanisms for the prevention of torture; the protocol should therefore leave open the possibility of designating existing mechanisms to carry out the functions described in it, on the understanding that such mechanisms should comply with certain requirements.

III. PROPOSAL PRESENTED BY THE CHAIRPERSON-RAPPORTEUR

A. Contents of the proposal

44. At the 6th meeting of the working group, on 17 January 2002, the Chairperson presented her proposal for an optional protocol,⁴ the text of which is included in annex I to the present report.

45. In introducing her draft the Chairperson recalled that negotiations on the original draft submitted by Costa Rica had been going on for 10 years. During that time, as well as in the course of the current session, delegations had shown creativity and flexibility and expressed the wish to reach consensus and conclude the negotiations as soon as possible. In drafting her proposal she had been inspired by all the ideas expressed, the initial Costa Rican draft (part of which had been approved at second reading), the drafts submitted at the ninth session of the working group by the GRULAC (which put emphasis on the national mechanisms) and the European Union (which focused mainly on the international mechanism), as well as the new alternative draft put forward by the United States delegation. She had also taken into consideration relevant United Nations instruments. She added that she looked forward to receiving comments on the proposal from all delegations but did not intend to initiate negotiations on its contents, except with regard to article 24 (see below). She further stressed that the draft was certainly not a perfect one but constituted a serious attempt to build bridges and reach the best compromise achievable.

46. Regarding the preamble, the Chairperson emphasized in particular the reference to the obligation to prevent torture contained in articles 2 and 16 of the Convention, as well as in resolution 2001/44 of the Commission on Human Rights which recalled that the World Conference on Human Rights had firmly declared that efforts to eradicate torture should, first and foremost, be concentrated on prevention, and called for the early adoption of an optional protocol to the Convention intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention.

47. Part I (General Principles) set out the objective of the protocol, i.e. to establish a system of regular visits by independent international and national mechanisms (art. 1). Article 2 provided for the establishment of a subcommittee of the Committee against Torture. Taking into consideration the concerns expressed regarding the different realities prevailing in States, article 3 contained the obligation to set up, designate or maintain national visiting bodies. Article 4 contained the general principle regarding visits.

48. Part II referred to the composition of the subcommittee and the election of its members and followed very closely the procedures contained in other United Nations human rights instruments.

49. Part III described the mandate of the subcommittee which included three main areas: visits to places of detention, technical assistance, and cooperation for the prevention of torture with relevant United Nations organs as well as international, regional and national institutions. Article 12 set out the obligations of States vis-à-vis the subcommittee. Article 13 established the different types of visits that the subcommittee would undertake. Article 14 listed the obligations of States regarding visits and referred to the situations in which visits could be objected to. The relationship between the subcommittee and the Committee was the subject of article 15.

50. Part IV of the proposal focused on national mechanisms and stated that States would be required to maintain, designate or establish national mechanisms to work in close cooperation with the subcommittee. Those mechanisms should be based on the Paris Principles.

51. The Chairperson referred to the declaration contained in article 24 (Part V) which would give States the possibility of postponing their obligations either under Part III or under Part IV. The purpose of this provision was to facilitate the adoption of measures by States that would enable them to comply with their obligations under the protocol. This article, however, was open to negotiation, since it dealt with an issue that had not been discussed at the working group.

52. Concerning Part VI, the Chairperson drew the attention of the delegations to article 25, according to which the subcommittee would be financed from the regular budget of the United Nations. She was aware that certain delegations, including that of the United States, had very strong feelings about this issue. She recalled, however, that this point had been discussed and negotiated by the working group at its sixth session.⁵ Furthermore, she stressed that for many developing countries the financial onus might be too heavy. Regarding article 26 she pointed out that, building on her own experience, she had taken the liberty of including the educational activities proposed by national preventive mechanisms within the scope of the Special Fund.

53. Finally, the Chairperson stated that article 30, which excluded the possibility of making reservations, had been discussed at length at previous sessions. Despite relevant provisions of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, she could not sanction reservations to a mechanism which was supposed to be universal and non-selective.

B. Debate on the proposal

54. At the 7th and 8th meetings, on 22 January 2002, a debate was held on the Chairperson's proposal. During the debate the High Commissioner for Human Rights addressed the working group. She expressed appreciation for the personal commitment and enormous efforts of the Chairperson in trying to reach consensus without losing sight of the objectives that had led to the establishment of the working group. Among the strong points of the proposal the High Commissioner noted the two-pillar system on which the mechanism of prevention would be based; the principles that should guide the functioning of the national mechanisms, including the reference to the Paris Principles; and the establishment of a subcommittee of the Committee against Torture that would provide assistance to the national mechanisms as well as be able to visit places where people were deprived of liberty and interview in private the persons held in them.

55. The Special Rapporteur on the question of torture also addressed the working group at the 7th meeting. He expressed appreciation for the proposal presented by the Chairperson, which he considered to be a very balanced one, and highlighted the following main points: (a) the proposed new international mechanism would complement the existing Charter-based and treaty monitoring mechanisms dealing with torture; (b) the proposal focused on prevention which, in his view, was even more important than redress; (c) it stressed the need for cooperation at all levels; (d) it put emphasis on the importance of interaction between national and international mechanisms.

56. All the delegations that intervened in the debate thanked the Chairperson and expressed appreciation for the effort she had made to tackle a very difficult task.

57. The delegation of the United States stated that the Chairperson's proposal was, in its view, unfortunately not a basis for consensus. The proposal would create an international subcommittee on torture that would have virtually unrestricted authority to visit and inspect any place where persons were or might be detained in any State Party to the optional protocol. Such unrestricted authority was incompatible with the principle of accountability and the need for reasonable checks and balances on any grant of power. Furthermore, the global reach of the subcommittee, as proposed in the draft of the Chairperson, was impractical; a regional framework would provide an important political context and local credibility to such a mechanism and was therefore more appropriate.

58. The delegation also indicated that the proposed subcommittee would not operate under the existing Committee against Torture. On the contrary, it would be essentially independent of the Committee and would erode the latter's authority by competing for resources.

59. The Chairperson's proposal that the international mechanism be funded from the regular budget of the United Nations rather than by the States which would avail themselves of the mechanism was considered objectionable by the delegation of the United States. It was unfair to States that chose not to join the regime, and was particularly inappropriate in a mechanism that was optional. The delegation renewed its request for an examination of funding alternatives in order to understand the budgetary implications of the various proposals and to make informed choices about budgetary priorities. The delegation also questioned the financial consequences for other human rights priorities of establishing a new mandatory visiting mechanism.

60. The delegation of the United States also expressed legal objections to the Chairperson's proposal. It noted that constitutional considerations such as appropriate restrictions on grants of authority for access to persons and places had not been accommodated. The reference to federated States was particularly inappropriate in an instrument that concerned itself with national measures and their encouragement. The delegation also suggested that efforts should be made to avoid re-opening the treaty law debate on prohibiting reservations. These two last elements of the Chairperson's proposal were considered unwise departures from current standard-setting trends. It was further noted that there were many additional questions and concerns which could be raised, in terms of both their legal and practical implications, in particular articles 3, 4, 26, and 31 as well as Parts III and IV.

61. Noting that the proposal did not command or provide a basis for consensus, the delegation of the United States questioned the Chairperson's intention to present it to the Commission on Human Rights. Highlighting the significant amount of time that had already been invested in this process, the delegation suggested that there was still time to work to try to reach consensus. Moreover, it stated that it was better to continue the work of the working group than to put forward an optional protocol that would not command consensus on the substance to the Commission.

62. The delegation recalled that in 1999 the United States, along with other States, had supported the development of draft language to ensure a balanced approach to the question of visiting mechanisms. The progress made on this approach had been indicated in the report of the seventh session of the working group (E/CN.4/1999/59 and Add.1, annex II, art. 12). Regrettably, that approach was not accommodated in the Chairperson's proposal. The delegation also recalled that in 2000, the United States and others had suggested steps to improve the operation of the Committee against Torture in ways that would reinforce its preventive work and encourage partnership with national mechanisms to prevent torture. The delegation referred to its alternative draft optional protocol, submitted during the 5th meeting,⁶ which further elaborated ideas presented by it during previous sessions of the working group. The delegation requested that its alternative draft be included in the report of the session.

63. The delegation stated that its alternative draft optional protocol would strengthen international efforts to prevent torture. It was further noted that the alternative draft would recognize the valuable role visiting mechanisms, such as the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture, could play at the regional level; it would reinforce the Committee against Torture by establishing a subcommittee on prevention of torture that would work under the direction of the Committee; and would encourage strong national regimes aimed at the prevention of torture.

64. In summarizing its concerns regarding the proposal of the Chairperson, the delegation of the United States noted the following points: (a) the unrestricted authority proposed for both the subcommittee and the national mechanisms was incompatible with the principle of accountability and the need for reasonable checks and balances on any grant of power; (b) the proposal was not supported by many States and was unlikely to be widely accepted; and (c) the proposal undermined the Committee against Torture.

65. With reference to its alternative draft, the delegation pointed out that it was designed to strengthen existing mechanisms and to reinforce the credibility of the Committee against Torture. Additionally, the alternative draft could command broader support because it focused on improving the existing structure. The delegation further described its alternative draft as a balanced proposal, which recognized the role of regional mechanisms, encouraged strong national mechanisms and fostered partnership between the Committee against Torture and national mechanisms.

66. The delegation of Egypt stated that the Chairperson's text was not a basis for consensus. It agreed with comments made by the delegation of the United States and suggested that the working group should continue its work on the basis of the alternative draft optional protocol submitted by the United States of America. The delegation of Egypt noted, however, that it would be willing to go further than the American text.

67. Referring to the comments made by the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, the delegation of Egypt noted the importance of the principle of complementing the existing Charter-based and treaty monitoring mechanisms. Additionally, the delegation highlighted the need for cooperation and interaction to avoid overlapping and stated that the optional protocol should provide for functions different from those currently undertaken by the Committee against Torture or the Special Rapporteur. The delegation expressed concern that the Chairperson's text appeared to be an alternative Convention against Torture.

68. Concerning the issue of prevention, the delegation of Egypt pointed out that in trying to prevent torture in advance or by dissuasion, some fundamental differences emerged. Pressure and monitoring by international mechanisms was not the best way to fight torture. The delegation reiterated its preference for strong national mechanisms, and stated that prevention should also mean empowering States to learn how to better protect rights at the national level. The delegation was of the view that the proposal of the Chairperson took an extremely dangerous institutional approach. He expressed concern that with the establishment of the subcommittee, there would be five different international approaches to addressing the issue of torture. It also expressed concern that the interaction between the subcommittee, the Committee against Torture and the national mechanisms reflected in the proposal was inadequate.

69. The delegation of the Russian Federation stated that several paragraphs in the proposal evoked serious concern. The coordination regime between national and international mechanisms was insufficient. Furthermore, it expressed concern about the unlimited powers of the subcommittee and the national mechanisms and noted that this could entail serious legal consequences, including with respect to the international recognition of the protocol. The delegation regretted that there was no satisfactory solution to the financial issues raised in the protocol. The prohibition of reservations was also a matter of grave concern for the Russian Federation. Noting that the Chairperson's proposal was not a basis for consensus, the delegation proposed that the working group should continue to work on the text in the format presented by the Chairperson.

70. The delegation of Saudi Arabia indicated that the proposal did not take into consideration the concerns raised by some delegations, in particular his own as well as those of Egypt and the United States of America, which had submitted a clear proposal of which no account had been taken. In that connection, the delegation of Saudi Arabia recalled that States were not bound by the decisions of regional groups and non-governmental organizations.

71. The delegation of Saudi Arabia also stated that the proposal of the Chairperson could not be the basis for consensus. The delegation further stated that it would be difficult for it to accept the system of mandatory visits. The text gave the impression that there was a process to establish a subsidiary body with greater powers than those of the body to which it was to be subordinate. Article 15 was another source of concern, as it opened the possibility that the subcommittee could act on the basis of false information. This implied that the subcommittee would be able to damage the reputation of States and officials on the basis of erroneous information. The delegation questioned the expenditure of millions of dollars to investigate false information.

72. With reference to article 24 of the proposal, the delegation of Saudi Arabia recalled that all the rules governing international instruments permitted reservations and that the Vienna regime on reservations was clear on this point. It therefore questioned the legal basis for the inadmissibility of reservations.

73. Finally, it reiterated that it would be wrong to affirm that only a small number of States had reservations concerning the proposal and emphasized that many States shared his position, as would clearly be shown should a vote be held; however, it would be a pity for such an important protocol to be adopted by a vote.

74. The delegation of China noted that the Chairperson's draft reflected 10 years of hard work and marked a step forward for the working group. It welcomed the detailed provisions on national mechanisms as well as the information contained in the preamble, which explicitly provided that States had the primary responsibility in the prevention of torture. It noted, however, that States still held differing views, such as on the mandate of the subcommittee. There had been little change with regard to the role of national legislations; the differences had not been reconciled. The delegation suggested that the Chairperson should seek compromises on the issues with which some States still had difficulties.

75. The delegation of China noted that the international mechanism envisaged in the proposal was modelled on the European Convention on the Prevention of Torture and noted that the international mechanism of the optional protocol would have very little relevance for the States Parties to the European Convention. Additionally, Protocol No. 1 to the European Convention gave other States the opportunity to become parties to it by simply asking to be invited to do so. The delegation questioned the necessity of setting up a global mechanism modelled on the European Convention when that Convention could potentially be transformed into a global mechanism.

76. The delegation reiterated its support for an effective mechanism to prevent torture and noted that acceptance by a large number of countries was one of the essential elements to ensuring the effectiveness of the protocol. Noting its willingness to cooperate with the Chairperson and other delegations, the delegation of China called for further consultations. The delegation noted that the delegations of Egypt, Russia, Saudi Arabia and the United States of America had to some extent reflected the views of China.

77. The delegation of Japan stated that the Chairperson's proposal was not a basis for consensus and that more discussion was required in order to build the consensus, which had been the aim of the working group for 10 years.

78. The delegation of Japan stated that the prevention of torture was a universal aim and that the mechanism built into the protocol should be sufficiently strong and effective to prevent torture in all States. To attain this universal aim, it was essential for the optional protocol to be adopted by consensus. If the optional protocol did not reflect the concerns expressed by many States and could not expect significant participation, it would be neither a strong nor an effective mechanism. Recalling that the delegation had carefully studied the Chairperson's proposal and the opinions expressed by other delegations, Japan believed that efforts should continue in order to build consensus.

79. The delegation of Japan recalled that many points in the Chairperson's proposal still needed to be developed. With regard to the national mechanisms, the text formulated by the Chairperson was the first that had clearly identified a model for a national mechanism. However, it would be premature to make any comments on it. It was reiterated that Japan was opposed to the mandatory establishment of national visiting mechanisms, and it would be difficult for the delegation to accept the idea of a national visiting mechanism as provided in articles 3 and 17 of the proposal.

80. The delegation indicated that Japan did not object in principle to an independent body as a national visiting mechanism. It also accepted in principle the idea of support by the international community in the establishment of the national visiting mechanisms in States that desired to establish them and needed the support of the international community. That was different, however, from the obligatory establishment of a national mechanism under the optional protocol. The national visiting mechanism described in the proposal was only one of the options for national preventive measures. There were no reasonable grounds for the establishment of a mandatory national visiting mechanism that would have basically the same mandate as an international visiting mechanism, and from that point of view Japan shared the concerns about duplication expressed by many other delegations.

81. The delegation of Japan recalled that many States had pointed to the usefulness of a national visiting mechanism. However, many of those States had also remarked that a flexible approach should be taken and that national mechanisms should be encouraged, but not mandatory. The proposal therefore required further discussion.

82. The delegation of Japan expressed the hope that a strong and effective international mechanism would be established; to do so would require not only ratification by many States, but also the cooperation of State parties in implementing the optional protocol. The interaction and dialogue between the subcommittee and the States Parties was also important. There had been concrete and detailed discussions at previous sessions of the working group on how to implement the international mechanism effectively. The importance of balancing the authority of the subcommittee and other legitimate interests, including the administration of justice, had been emphasized. The delegation expressed regret that important observations made by delegations in that regard were not reflected in the proposal. The delegation questioned why only the article regarding so-called “unrestricted access” had been kept in the proposal whereas the other important issues that had been discussed at prior sessions were not included.

83. The delegation reiterated that agreement could be reached by more concrete discussions based on a concrete text. For that purpose, it suggested that further discussion on the Chairperson’s proposal take place in the working group; it would be premature to submit a final text to the Commission on Human Rights without making further efforts to achieve consensus. The delegation concluded that the alternative draft submitted by the United States should be included in the report of the working group in order to indicate clearly that there still existed differences of opinion and that there was a need for further discussion in the working group.

84. The delegation of Spain, on behalf of the European Union, the Central European and Eastern European States including the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia, and the associated States of Cyprus, Malta and Turkey, indicated their support of the draft optional protocol presented by the Chairperson. They regretted that several important aspects of the draft presented by the European Union at the ninth session of the working group were not reflected in the draft of the Chairperson. While accepting the principle of a national mechanism, they expressed concern regarding its mandatory nature, specially taking into account the existence of a regional mechanism to which all member States of the European Union were parties. The draft seemed a fair compromise that could lead the group out of the impasse. Their support, however, was limited strictly to the present text. Any weakening of the part relating to the international mechanism would lead the European Union to reconsider the issue.

85. The delegation of Switzerland noted that the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture supported the draft and that the proposal constituted a balance between an effective international mechanism and the need to have national mechanisms. It noted that article 24 placed the national and international mechanisms on an equal footing and made reference to a dual obligation combined with the possibility of postponing one or the other. The five-year period was acceptable to Switzerland as long as the Committee against Torture would be the authority for granting the extension and not the State Party itself. The delegation noted that this would be the only compromise politically and legally acceptable to Switzerland, even though it would be problematic for a federal State like Switzerland to accept the obligation to institute one or several national mechanisms for the prevention of torture. He noted that it would be difficult to foresee the reaction of the cantons, but that consultations would have to be undertaken. It concluded that, after 10 years of discussions, the Chairperson's proposal was a valid basis for negotiations.

86. The delegation of Guatemala stated that the proposal was balanced and flexible and hoped that it would reach the Commission on Human Rights as the draft of the working group. The time to consider new drafts was over. Some of the objections raised by delegations were the result of misinterpretation and could be overcome through further dialogue. The delegation would favour the removal of article 24 from the proposal, but was ready to accept it as a compromise.

87. The delegation of Canada expressed the hope that an optional protocol would be adopted in the near future. It further stated that the time allotted did not allow for the necessary consultations to be carried out in Canada regarding the Chair's proposal, in particular the provisions relating to the mandate and mandatory nature of domestic mechanisms. Such consultations could not be finalized before the end of the current session of the working group.

88. The delegation of Cuba stated that the proposal did not provide a satisfactory solution to many issues on which the group had been unable to reach consensus in the past. For instance, the draft was vague as to the places of detention to be visited and the persons to be interviewed; article 5 did not stipulate regional quotas in the membership of the subcommittee; the criteria for carrying out "short visits" were not clearly stated; the confidentiality of the procedure was not fully ensured; and article 24 did not resolve many of the concerns expressed by delegations. The draft neither safeguarded the legitimate interests of States nor guaranteed the principles of impartiality, objectivity and non-selectivity. The delegation was ready to continue the negotiations on a draft optional protocol. The final text should only be adopted by consensus.

89. The delegation of India indicated that it had listened to statements concerning the proposal and noted the absence of consensus. It recalled that the two optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child had recently been adopted by consensus and reiterated the importance of ensuring a consensual approach in the adoption of the optional protocol to the Convention against Torture. While noting that it was not always possible to achieve consensus, the delegation of India pointed out that it would be a dangerous precedent for this optional protocol to be voted on and stressed that every effort should be made to avoid a vote. It was in favour of the United States alternative draft and underlined that the new mechanisms should seek to avoid duplicating existing ones. It concluded that additional time was needed to examine the Chairperson's proposal further.

90. The delegation of Latvia supported the statement made by the delegation of Spain on behalf of the European Union and other countries. While noting that the Chairperson's proposal had contributed to bringing the working group closer to its goal, further discussion was still necessary. It was noted that Part III was balanced and provided a good starting point for the subcommittee. It was also noted that more emphasis should be placed on the issue of independence and prevention. While noting that it would have preferred stronger links between the national and international mechanisms, the delegation supported the proposal and indicated that it should constitute the basis for future discussions.

91. The delegation of the Syrian Arab Republic indicated that it had hoped that the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture would have responded to some of the concerns raised by the delegation of Egypt. It acknowledged that torture was a flagrant violation of human rights, but suggested that the necessary changes and the preventive work should come from within States and not be imposed from the outside. The delegation believed that the Chairperson's proposal was not a balanced one, since it gave great power to the international mechanism and insufficient power to the national mechanisms. In order to ensure wide acceptance and ratification of the optional protocol, greater efforts must be made to ensure a more equitable balance between the national and international mechanisms. The delegation expressed concern regarding the issue of funding and suggested that funds should be allocated for technical assistance and support to national mechanisms and humanitarian organizations working against torture. In its view, the provisions in the proposal concerning sanctions, reservations and the visiting authority of the international mechanism were too broad. It finally expressed support for the proposals made by Egypt and the United States.

92. The delegation of Kuwait, referring to the statements made by the delegations of Saudi Arabia and the Syrian Arab Republic, stated that its country similarly supported the proposal submitted by the United States of America and should like to see it as the basis for discussion. It further stated that, in order to reach consensus, due consideration should be given to the positions expressed by all parties. It further suggested that additional efforts should be made to promote the existing mechanisms.

93. The delegation of New Zealand commended the Chair's efforts to reach a compromise by drawing upon the various proposals that had been made. It therefore expressed support for the Chairperson's text as a sign of New Zealand's long-standing support for a strong international mechanism for the prevention of torture and protection of those deprived of their liberty. It expressed appreciation for the dual system proposed and envisaged that a robust international mechanism working hand-in-hand with a well-resourced, independent national mechanism or mechanisms would provide a comprehensive system for the prevention of torture. It was important that the Chairperson's proposal should receive the widest possible support.

94. The delegation of Norway associated itself with the statement made by the representative of Spain on behalf of the European Union and others, and stressed that it would have wished to see an optional protocol with an even stronger international mechanism. However, in light of the diverging views expressed in the working group and the need for compromise, the Chairperson's proposal would have Norway's support, as it tried to strike a balance between these diverging views and to meet the concerns of all delegations.

95. The delegation of Hungary associated itself with the statement made by the representative of Spain on behalf of the European Union and others and noted that it was unrealistic to hope that any draft would please all Governments entirely. The delegation welcomed the fact that the Chair's proposal focused on prevention and ensured the establishment of an effective international mechanism. Torture was often anonymous and regular visits would help to eliminate such anonymity. While recognizing that national mechanisms could be complementary to an international mechanism, the delegation was not convinced that their establishment, especially on a mandatory basis, should take place within the framework of the optional protocol. It considered the Chair's proposal as the best compromise achievable.

96. The delegation of Argentina said that the proposal constituted a solid basis for reaching a compromise. This was particularly relevant in the wording of articles 13, 17 and 19. Furthermore, the draft excluded visits by the international mechanism at "any time", which many delegations opposed. The Government of Argentina favoured consensus and negotiations should continue in order to adopt a final text.

97. The delegation of Israel noted that despite the constructive dialogue, substantial differences remained and it would be undesirable to use the Chairperson's proposal as a basis for negotiation. It therefore expressed support for the views of the United States in that respect.

98. The delegation of Algeria considered that more time and effort would be necessary and that the draft still needed to be improved.

99. The delegation of Slovenia reiterated its support for the proposal, as indicated in the statement made by the representative of Spain on behalf of the European Union and a number of other countries. With regard to article 24, it stressed that the declaration could be made concerning one or the other mechanism, but not both.

100. The delegation of Mexico expressed support for the proposal, which it considered to be very balanced. The idea of an international visiting mechanism was not new and was contained, for example, in the Chemical Weapons Convention. It would have liked to see a reference in the preamble to articles 55 and 56 of the Charter. It would also have liked to see article 13 of the proposal include some of the elements contained in paragraphs 1 (a), 2 and 3 of article 9 of the European Union draft, such as the reiteration of the principle of transparency. Despite its opposition to article 24, the delegation was prepared to accept it in order to reach consensus. The postponement referred to in that provision should, however, be strictly limited to three years.

101. The delegation of Ecuador supported the proposal, which it considered to be comprehensive and balanced on key issues. Recognizing that the question of visits by an international mechanism was very controversial, it welcomed the provision contained in article 24. It added that, in order to reach consensus, the group might consider the possibility of allowing States Parties to postpone their obligations under Part III of the proposal for an unlimited period of time. The delegation also expressed the view that negotiations should continue in order to reach consensus.

102. The International Commission of Jurists made a statement on behalf of Amnesty International, the Association for the Prevention of Torture, Human Rights Watch, the International Federation of Action by Christians for the Abolition of Torture, the International Rehabilitation Council for Torture Victims, the International Federation of Human Rights Leagues, Redress and the World Organization against Torture. While the draft did not contain all of the elements that NGOs would have included in a preventive instrument, it did contain essential elements that would assist States Parties in implementing their obligations under the Convention against Torture and add value to existing efforts to prevent torture. The NGOs pointed out that the alternative draft submitted by the delegation of the United States ignored the mandate of the working group as it did not envisage visits as a central purpose of the optional protocol. It was imperative that all States commit themselves fully and in equal measure to the international visiting regime, as elaborated in Part III of the Chairperson's proposal, and to the establishment or maintenance of national visiting mechanisms, as per Part IV of the proposal. Without such a commitment, the entire two-pillar foundation of the protocol would topple.

103. With respect to article 24 of the Chairperson's draft, the NGOs stated that where a State made a declaration of postponement because of its inability to comply with the full range of its obligations, it should be required immediately to begin undertaking measures towards eventual implementation.

104. The delegation of Turkey stated that the working group had reached a new phase with the proposal presented by the Chairperson and called for a successful conclusion of the work leading to the adoption of a text. However, it noted that there was still no consensus and considered that a flexible approach would be necessary. It also stated that it was important to reach consensus on a draft in the working group.

105. The delegation of Georgia expressed support for the position of the European Union and recognized the difficulty in reaching consensus at this stage. The Chairperson's proposal could be improved but constituted a solid basis for reaching a compromise.

106. The delegation of Uruguay supported the proposal and considered that the visiting system was fundamental for the protection of torture victims. The negotiations should therefore continue.

107. The delegation of Poland reiterated its support for the position of the European Union and stated that after many years of negotiations it was obvious that a protocol was needed. It recalled that Poland had supported the Costa Rican draft from the very beginning. While expressing concern about article 24 of the Chairperson's proposal, the delegation was ready to support the proposal as currently presented.

108. The delegation of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya made a statement on behalf of Algeria, Bahrain, Comoros, Djibouti, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates, Yemen and Palestine. It said that those delegations supported every international endeavour that was being made to combat torture throughout the world. Such endeavours could not be made at random; they must be made in the light of constant factors, the most important of which was the need to strengthen, rather than weaken, the existing international mechanisms and ensure complementarity. For the Arab Group, the starting point was the need for the Convention against Torture and the Committee against Torture to remain the principal convention and the principal committee. The establishment of independent national mechanisms was a fundamental requirement in order to improve conditions in penal institutions. The role of the international mechanism should be of an ancillary nature, consisting of the provision of technical advice and financial assistance. Accordingly, the Arab Group was not in favour of a subcommittee endowed with mandatory authority to visit States without their consent.

109. Moreover, the Arab Group believed that the introduction of a technically and financially supportive international dimension could strengthen the role of the national mechanisms and should take place under the supervision of the Committee against Torture. The achievement of this goal required a collective political will and joint commitment to dialogue in good faith and on an equal footing. Therefore, the Arab Group could not agree to any group imposing its own view, nor could it agree to renounce the principle of consensus as the most appropriate means of ensuring the universality of the international standards and rules which were in the process of being negotiated.

110. While considering that the proposal could be improved with the addition of ideas contained in other drafts or expressed during the debate, the delegation of El Salvador considered that the proposal could constitute a basis for compromise. It encouraged delegations to continue working in that direction.

111. The delegation of Peru also expressed support for the proposal and underlined the importance of combining the international and national visiting mechanisms. It expressed the hope that consensus would be reached.

112. The delegation of Costa Rica emphasized the efforts to reach a compromise reflected in the proposal and stressed the main points contained in it. Those delegations which were not in favour of an efficient prevention mechanism, many of which were not even parties to the Convention against Torture, should not be allowed to impose their views by prolonging the debate unnecessarily.

113. The delegation of the Czech Republic expressed support for a strong international mechanism and indicated that any weakening of the Chairperson's proposal would render that proposal unacceptable to the delegation.

114. Finally, the delegation of Chile supported the two-pillar system and called on the delegations to try to reach a compromise.

IV. CLOSING MEETING

115. At the 9th meeting, Mr. Andreas Mavrommatis, member of the Committee against Torture, addressed the working group. Mr. Mavrommatis congratulated the Chairperson for the work she had carried out and encouraged her to pursue her efforts in order to find a compromise. He stated that, in the Committee's view, the provisions of the Convention dealing with prevention were insufficient and that the Committee was in favour of a new legally binding instrument which would set up an international mechanism dealing specifically with prevention. Regarding the procedure under article 20 of the Convention, he indicated that the Committee could initiate an inquiry only when it received well-founded indications that torture was being practised systematically in a country; hence, it was not a procedure intended to focus on prevention, although it could help to prevent inasmuch as it deterred. He did not believe that there would be duplication between the visits of the Committee under article 20 and the preventive visits of the subcommittee. Mr. Mavrommatis further indicated that the optional protocol should contain basic principles regarding the relationship between the Committee and the subcommittee, so as to avoid duplication and ensure consistency and harmonization. These basic principles could subsequently be developed in the respective rules of procedure.

116. Also at the 9th meeting, some delegations made comments on the draft report of the session that had been distributed earlier.

V. ADOPTION OF THE REPORT

117. The report of the working group was adopted ad referendum at the 9th meeting on 24 January 2002.

Notes

ANNEXES

Annex I

DRAFT OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE AND OTHER CRUEL, INHUMAN OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT

Proposal by the Chairperson-Rapporteur

PREAMBLE

The States Parties to the present Protocol,

Reaffirming that torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are prohibited and constitute serious violations of human rights,

Convinced that further measures are necessary to achieve the purposes of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (hereinafter referred to as the Convention) and to strengthen the protection of persons deprived of their liberty from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Recalling that articles 2 and 16 of the Convention oblige each State Party to take effective measures to prevent acts of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in any territory under its jurisdiction,

Recognizing that States have the primary responsibility for implementing these articles, that strengthening the protection of people deprived of their liberty and the full respect for their human rights is a common responsibility shared by all, and that international implementing bodies complement and strengthen national measures,

Recalling that the effective prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment requires education and a combination of various legislative, administrative, judicial or other measures,

Recalling also that the World Conference on Human Rights firmly declared that efforts to eradicate torture should first and foremost be concentrated on prevention and called for the adoption of an optional protocol to the Convention which is intended to establish a preventive system of regular visits to places of detention,

Convinced that the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment can be strengthened by non-judicial means of a preventive nature, based on regular visits to places of detention,

Have agreed as follows:

PART I
GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The objective of this Protocol is to establish a system of regular visits undertaken by independent international and national bodies to places where people are deprived of their liberty, in order to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 2

1. A Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment of the Committee against Torture (hereinafter referred to as the Subcommittee on Prevention) shall be established and shall carry out the functions laid down in the present Protocol.
2. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall carry out its work within the framework of the Charter of the United Nations and will be guided by the purposes and principles thereof, as well as the norms of the United Nations concerning the treatment of people deprived of their liberty.
3. Equally, the Subcommittee on Prevention shall be guided by the principles of confidentiality, impartiality, non-selectivity, universality and objectivity.
4. The Subcommittee on Prevention and the States Parties shall cooperate in the implementation of the present Protocol.

Article 3

Each State Party shall set up, designate or maintain at the domestic level one or several visiting bodies for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (hereinafter referred to as the national preventive mechanism).

Article 4

1. Each State Party shall allow visits, in accordance with the present Protocol, by the mechanisms referred to in articles 2 and 3 to any place under its jurisdiction and control where persons are or may be deprived of their liberty, either by virtue of an order given by a public authority or at its instigation or with its consent or acquiescence (hereinafter referred to as places of detention). These visits shall be undertaken with a view to strengthening, if necessary, the protection of these persons against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

2. For the purposes of the present Protocol deprivation of liberty means any form of detention or imprisonment or the placement of a person in a public or private custodial setting, from which this person is not permitted to leave at will by order of any judicial, administrative or other authority.

PART II

THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON PREVENTION

Article 5

1. The Subcommittee on Prevention shall consist of 10 members. After the fiftieth ratification or accession to the present Protocol, the number of the members of the Subcommittee on Prevention shall increase to 25.
2. The members of the Subcommittee shall be chosen from among persons of high moral character, having proven professional experience in the field of the administration of justice, in particular criminal law, prison or police administration, or in the various fields relevant to the treatment of persons deprived of their liberty.
3. In the composition of the Subcommittee due consideration shall be given to the equitable geographic distribution and to the representation of different forms of civilization and legal systems of the States Parties.
4. In this composition consideration shall also be given to the balanced gender representation on the basis of the principles of equality and non-discrimination.
5. No two members of the Subcommittee may be nationals of the same State.

D. PROPOSAL OF NEW AND REVISED ARTICLES TO BE INCLUDED IN THE ORIGINAL DRAFT OPTIONAL PROTOCOL TO THE CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE AND OTHER CRUEL, INHUMAN OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT, SUBMITTED BY THE DELEGATION OF SWEDEN ON BEHALF OF THE EUROPEAN UNION AT THE NINTH SESSION OF THE WORKING GROUP IN 2001

PREAMBLE

The States Parties to the present Protocol,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and the obligation of States under the Charter, in particular articles 55 and 56,

Reaffirming that torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are prohibited,

Recalling articles 2 and 16 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, which obliges each State Party to take effective measures to prevent acts of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in any territory under its jurisdiction,

Convinced that further measures are necessary to achieve the purpose of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and of the need to strengthen the protection of persons deprived of their liberty from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Convinced also that combating impunity constitutes an important element in the prevention of torture and recalling in this regard article 12 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment as well as the Manual on Effective Investigation and Documentation of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (the Istanbul Protocol),

Welcoming the positive impact an independent regional and national mechanism could have on the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment,

Considering that the protection of persons deprived of their liberty against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment could be strengthened by non-judicial means of a preventive character based on visits,

Bearing in mind also the principles of cooperation and confidentiality as basic principles of the present Protocol,

Article 1 (new)

For the purpose of this Protocol:

2. Each State Party agrees to permit missions by the Subcommittee to its territory and visits to any place under its jurisdiction and control where persons are or may be deprived of their liberty.
3. Objection to a visit may only be made on urgent and compelling grounds of national defence, public safety, natural disaster or serious disorder in the place to be visited, which temporarily prevent the carrying out of such a visit. The existence of a state of emergency cannot as such be invoked by a State Party as a reason to object to a visit.

* See E/CN.4/2002/58.

4. Following objections under paragraph 3, the State Party and the Subcommittee shall immediately enter into consultations in order to clarify the situation and seek agreement to enable the Subcommittee to exercise its functions expeditiously.
