In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the United Kingdom supported publicity to promote awareness of the right to self-determination, but questioned the necessity of a separate resolution on the topic when the United Nations had adequate machinery to deal with information, much of the proposed work was contentious and unnecessary, and information should be decreased as colonialism diminished.

A number of States expressed reservations on elements contained in the report of the Committee on colonial countries. Italy said the draft resolution implied approval of that report which contained unjustified criticism of countries and groups of countries and references to questions not included in the Committee's mandate. The Netherlands, speaking in similar vein, regretted that some of the recommendations sought to make the interests of the peoples of the dependent Territories subservient to a defamation campaign against one group of countries.

Japan also had reservations on the draft's endorsement of the Committee's report, as did Sweden, speaking for the Nordic States, which said their votes should not be seen as approving references to the study on Puerto Rico which was not on the list of NSGTs approved by the Assembly. Australia shared that view. Canada said that the Committee should not involve itself in domestic matters or matters concerning strategic Trust Territories, citing Palau as an example of the latter; it also rejected the notion of restricting freedom of the press for foreign correspondents in South Africa, did not accept that there was a campaign to depict national liberation movements as terrorists and said there was no link between Western Governments and the mass media. Ireland also had reservations on some Committee recommendations.

Week of Solidarity with peoples of Namibia and all other colonial Territories

The Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Namibia and All Other Colonial Territories, as well as those in South Africa, Fighting for Freedom, Independence and Human Rights was observed by a series of United Nations activities from 25 to 31 May 1984.

The activities proposed by the Committee on colonial countries<sup>(2)</sup> were undertaken by DPI at Headquarters and United Nations information centres. These events included an exhibition of photographs and publications, screening of films, distribution of audio-visual materials, briefing of NGOs, press releases, and a UN Chronicle report on the activities.

As proposed by the Committee, on 25 May at Bangkok, Thailand, the Committee, the Special Committee against Apartheid and the United Nations Council for Namibia held a joint special meeting in observance of Africa Liberation Day and the Week of Solidarity. The Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries appealed to all States and organizations of the United Nations system to mobilize maximum support for the peoples of southern Africa struggling for freedom.

Role of NGOs

The Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance of the Committee on colonial countries noted in 1984 that a considerable number of NGOs played an important role by disseminating information on decolonization, monitoring the activities of foreign interests, and providing assistance to the colonial people and their national liberation movements.<sup>(2)</sup>

Adopting the recommendations of the Sub-Committee, the Committee on colonial countries urged NGOs to distribute accurate information and disseminate basic documentation such as the Constitution of SWAPO and the Freedom Charter of ANC to counteract campaigns depicting national liberation movements as terrorist organizations; urged DPI and the United Nations information centres to provide clear information to NGOs and the public at large; and expressed support for events arranged by NGOs such as the conference organized by the Non-Governmental Organizations Sub-Committee on Racism, Racial Discrimination, Apartheid and Decolonization to mark the one hundredth year of the colonization of Namibia (Geneva, 2-5 July 1984) and the conference for peace in southern Africa initiated by the International Committee against Apartheid, Racism and Colonialism in Southern Africa and organized by the Anti-Apartheid Movement of the Federal Republic of Germany (Bonn, 12-14 October). It decided to strengthen its links with NGOs and co-operate with them to consider methods to bring about the embodiment of the principles of decolonization in all levels of educational systems, particularly those of the colonial Powers and Territories, and to request the Secretariat to establish regional lists of NGOs active in decolonization.

Puerto Rico

During 1984, the Committee on colonial countries reviewed the list of Territories to which the 1960 Declaration<sup>(1)</sup> applied and considered a separate item based on its August 1982 decision<sup>(22)</sup> concerning Puerto Rico.

At meetings held on 22 and 23 August, the Committee heard the representatives of 32 organizations, mainly from Puerto Rico. By a resolution of 24 August,<sup>(23)</sup> adopted by 11 votes to 2, with 9 abstentions, the Committee reaffirmed the inalienable right of peoples to self-determination and the applicability of the principles of the 1960 Declaration to Puerto Rico, expressed hope that its people might exercise without hindrance that right and requested the Rapporteur to report to the Committee on the implementation of its resolutions on Puerto Rico. That same day, the resolution was transmitted to the United States.

On 30 April, Cuba addressed a letter<sup>(24)</sup> to the Chairman of the Committee asking him to hold consultations with the United States as the administering Power of Puerto Rico so that an observer mission could visit the Territory to observe military manoeuvres on the island of Vieques, which it said might constitute an obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration.

Other general questions concerning NSGTs

Fellowships and scholarships

In a report to the General Assembly covering 1 October 1983 to 30 September 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that the following 35 States had offered to make scholarships and fellowships available to persons from NSGTs for secondary, vocational and post-graduate studies: Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, German Democratic Republic, Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iran, Israel, Italy, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malta, Mexico, New Zealand, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sri Lanka, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United States, Yugoslavia. Information about these offers was included in the twenty-fourth edition of the handbook Study Abroad (1983/84, 1984/85, 1985/86), published by UNESCO.

During the period, 91 students requested information and application forms from the Secretariat; those from Namibian students were forwarded to the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia and those from students in other NSGTs were transmitted to the offering States for consideration and to the administering Powers for information. A number of offering States also received requests directly, and applicants wishing to study in Ghana, Poland, the USSR and the United States applied directly to those Governments.

Several offering States informed the Secretary-General of new developments in their facilities: Austria had a new training project for students from Namibia; Czechoslovakia offered 20 scholarships to students from NSGTs, but none had been used during the 1983/84 and 1984/85 academic years; Greece no longer provided undergraduate scholarships; Italy would provide 10 scholarships for professional training to students from southern Africa with the selection and course priorities to be decided in consultation with the United Nations Secretariat; New Zealand provided budgetary support for 121 Tokelauans to study in New Zealand; Poland granted five scholarships for Trust Territory candidates for the 1984/85 year; and 135 students from NSGTs studied in higher and specialized secondary educational institutions in the USSR, the Ukrainian SSR and the Byelorussian SSR during 1984.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Following the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/45 on 5 December.

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/53 of 7 December 1983, Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Considering that more scholarships should be made available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories in all parts of the world and that steps should be taken to encourage applications from students in those Territories,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;

4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 39/45

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/678) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); 36-nation draft (A/C.4/39/L.6); agenda item 107.

Sponsors: Angola, Australia, Bangladesh, Barbados, Bulgaria, Colombia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Fiji, Guyana, India, Israel, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Madagascar, New Zealand, Nigeria, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Samoa, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

Information to the United Nations

States responsible for the administration of Territories which had not attained full self-government continued to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General information on their economic, social and educational conditions under the terms of Article 73 e in Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations and in accordance with several General Assembly resolutions. In the most recent such resolution of December 1983,<sup>(2)</sup> the Assembly requested the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments. In a September 1984 report to the Assembly,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he had received information with respect to the following NSGTs:

Australia: Cocos (Keeling) Islands

New Zealand: Tokelau

United Kingdom: Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, Turks and Caicos Islands

United States: American Samoa, Guam, United States Virgin Islands

On 12 March,<sup>(4)</sup> Portugal informed the Secretary-General that it had nothing to add to the information provided in a 1979 note which stated that conditions in East Timor had prevented it from assuming its responsibilities for the Territory's administration.<sup>(5)</sup>

With respect to Western Sahara, the Secretary-General noted in his report<sup>(3)</sup> that Spain had informed him in 1976 that, with the termination of its presence in the Territory, it considered itself exempt from any international responsibility in connection with the Territory's administration.<sup>(6)</sup>

On 5 December, the General Assembly adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/41 on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee.

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

*Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and the action taken by the Committee in respect of that information,*

Having also examined the report of the Secretary-General on the question,

*Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,*

Recalling also its resolution 38/49 of 7 December 1983, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Im- plementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government under the terms of Chapter XI of the Charter, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

3. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit, or continue to transmit, to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

4. Requests the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/41

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 142-0-3 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/676) by recorded vote (130-0-3), 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 103.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, São Tomé and Príncipe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: France, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, the United Kingdom said the draft resolution implied that it was for the Assembly to decide when an NSGT had attained a full measure of self-government, whereas it thought such decisions were best left to the administering Power and the local Government.

Visiting missions

In August, the Committee on colonial countries adopted a resolution on the question of sending visiting missions to Territories,<sup>(7)</sup> stressing the need to continue to dispatch periodic missions to facilitate the full implementation of the 1960 Declaration,<sup>(8)</sup> calling on the administering Powers concerned to continue to co-operate with the United Nations by permitting visiting missions access to Territories under their administration and requesting its Chairman to continue consultations with those Powers regarding such missions.

In resolution 39/91 of 14 December (see above), the General Assembly called on the administering Powers to continue to co-operate with the Committee in the discharge of its mandate and, in particular, to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes of their inhabitants.

The question of sending visiting missions to other Territories was also dealt with by the Assembly in individual resolutions on these Territories (see Chapter IV of this section).

Chapter II

International Trusteeship System

On behalf of the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council continued during 1984 to supervise the one Trust Territory remaining under the International Trusteeship System—the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, a strategic territory administered by the United States.

The Trusteeship Council considered the Administering Authority's annual report, heard 12 petitioners and examined 15 written petitions and 12 communications regarding the Territory.

The Council held its fifty-first session at United Nations Headquarters from 14 May to 18 July; of its five members (China, France, USSR, United Kingdom, United States), China did not participate.

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

Conditions in the Territory

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, designated as a strategic area and administered by the United States under an Agreement approved by the Security Council in 1947,<sup>(1)</sup> comprised three archipelagos of more than 2,100 islands and atolls scattered over an area of some 7.8 million square kilometres of the western Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator. The Territory, known collectively as Micronesia, had a population of some 133,000.<sup>(2)</sup>

There were four administrative entities within the Territory—the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands and Palau. As a result of referendums, each had its own constitution and popularly elected legislature and executive head.

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council at its 1984 session adopted its report<sup>(3)</sup> to the Security Council after considering the annual report for the year ending 30 September 1983, submitted by the United States as Administering Authority for the Trust Territory. The Trusteeship Council's report, covering the period 29 November 1983–18 July 1984, contained conclusions and recommendations on such questions as war-related damage claims; political, economic, social and educational advancement; and the plebiscites and constitutional development and progress towards self-government and independence.

The conclusions and recommendations, based on the Council's discussions, were annexed to a report on conditions in the Trust Territory,<sup>(4)</sup> prepared by a Drafting Committee (France and the United Kingdom); on 14 June, the Council adopted them before adopting its own report<sup>(5)</sup> by 3 votes to 1.

In explanation of its negative vote, the USSR felt that the conclusions and recommendations were inconsistent with the interests of the people of the Territory and reflected solely the views of the three Western members, all of which were colonial Powers; they omitted the paramount conclusion—the Micronesians remained politically fragmented and had not been prepared for genuine independence but for annexation to the United States, which was transforming the Territory into a military-strategic base. The USSR had expressed similar views in a 27 March note verbale to the Secretary-General.<sup>(6)</sup>

The United Kingdom pointed out that the conclusions and recommendations were critical of the United States and therefore the idea that they reflected the view of the Western Powers was not true. It would be unreasonable to call on the Administering Authority to preserve the unity of the Territory when the people themselves did not wish to remain a single entity.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries) considered the Trust Territory at meetings held between 7 and 24 August<sup>(6)</sup> and adopted conclusions and recommendations on the Territory made by its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee recommended to the Assembly a draft resolution to have it, inter alia, call on the United States to ensure its representation at Committee meetings and affirm its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to implementing the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(7)</sup> The Assembly would have recognized that it was ultimately for the people of the Territory to decide their political destiny and called on the Administering Authority not to impede the Territory's unity or the rights of the people in accordance with the Declaration. (See also below.)

General Assembly consideration. Consideration of the topic was referred to the Fourth Committee. On 12 November, its Chairman suggested, based on consultations with his counterpart of the Committee on colonial countries and concerned delegations, that no action be taken on the draft resolution. That suggestion was adopted without objection.<sup>(8)</sup>

Self-determination and independence

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> reaffirmed the inalienable rights of the people of Micronesia to self-determination, including the right to independence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the Trusteeship Agreement. It reiterated that free association was an option that was not incompatible with that Agreement, provided that the populations concerned had freely accepted it. The Council hoped that in the near future the Administering Authority would take up the matter of termination of the Agreement both with the Trusteeship Council and the Security Council, in accordance with Article 83 of the Charter.

The Trusteeship Council took note of the reports of the 1983 visiting missions which had observed the plebiscites in the Federated States of Micronesia and the Marshall Islands<sup>(9)</sup> (see below). It endorsed the missions' conclusions that, despite some administrative shortcomings, both plebiscites were run by the constitutional Governments so as to ensure the free and fair expression of the wishes of the people.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries<sup>(6)</sup> reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of the Trust Territory to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Charter and the 1960 Declaration. It reaffirmed the importance of ensuring that the people freely exercised that right and that the obligations of the Administering Authority were duly discharged.

The Committee reiterated that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy implementation of the Declaration. It regretted the repeated refusal of the Authority to co-operate with the Committee by declining to participate in its meetings. It reiterated that it was an obligation of the Authority to create such conditions in the Territory as would enable its people to exercise freely, with full knowledge of the possible options and without interference, their right to self-determination. The Committee regretted that there was no co-operation between it and the Trusteeship Council in relation to the Territory and reiterated its readiness to engage in such co-operation.

Recalling previous appeals to the Authority that the people of Micronesia be given the fullest opportunity to educate themselves about the options open to them in exercise of their right to self-determination, the Committee felt that such programmes should be extended and reinforced. It recognized that it was ultimately for the people to decide their political destiny and called on the Authority not to impede the unity of the Territory or the people's rights until those rights were implemented. It urged the Authority to ensure that the early termination of the Trusteeship Agreement was done in strict conformity with the Charter.

The Committee reaffirmed that military installations in the Territory should not hinder the population from exercising its rights. It also regretted that the High Commissioner maintained the power to suspend certain legislation.

Politics and government

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> considered the political advancement of the Territory in conjunction with its self-determination and independence (see above). The Council also noted with satisfaction that the Territory had continued to expand its international relations. It urged that priority continue to be given to promoting closer contact with countries of the region, not only in the economic field, but also at the political, educational and cultural level.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. Noting that reports on the Territory were a matter of which the Security Council was currently seized, the Committee invited the attention of the relevant organs of the United Nations to Article 83 of the Charter, under which the Security Council was to exercise all United Nations functions relating to strategic areas, including approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment and, inter alia, was to avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions under the Trusteeship System relating to political, economic, social and educational matters in the strategic areas. The Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries drew particular attention to the above when he transmitted the Committee's conclusions and recommendations to the President of the Security Council on 24 August.<sup>(10)</sup>

Economic conditions

Trusteeship Council action. While noting that responsibility for development lay primarily with the four constitutional Governments, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> regretted that the concept of drawing up an overall development programme for the Territory as a whole had not made more headway. In particular it regretted the disparities in levels of development between different areas and instances of duplication, which were likely to discourage potential investors. It urged the Administering Authority to play a constructive role by promoting procedures for consultation among the various authorities concerned.

Noting that the economic section of the Authority's report too often favoured mere compilation of information, the Council called for future reports to indicate guiding principles applied in economic policy, the objectives envisaged, the criteria of choice and the order of priorities. It also noted the inadequacy of statistical information submitted and requested that the next report contain such information.

In regard to public finance, the Council noted that the constitutional Governments' budgetary allocation for operations had increased by 7.5 per cent and that the grant for infrastructural improvement had almost doubled. It reiterated concern that certain federal programmes had been reduced or discontinued by the United States. It hoped Palau's request for rescheduling of funds would be reconsidered and approved in the near future.

Concerning international trade, the Council noted with satisfaction that duty-free entry into the United States would be allowed for products exported by the Territory. Noting that the Territory remained largely dependent on the outside world, even for basic necessities, the Council hoped plans for reduction of that dependence would be drawn up. It also hoped for the establishment of a customs union.

Regarding agriculture, the Council recommended that a study be undertaken to determine the types of production and farming that would enable Micronesians to use comparative advantages with a view to increasing exports and reducing dependence on imports. Development of marine resources should also be a priority goal.

The Council welcomed the establishment of new companies in the Territory but reiterated concern at the inadequate industrial development, reaffirming that priority should be given to establishing small-scale local industry. It regarded the construction industry as a key to Micronesia's economic development.

Another key to development was the telecommunication system. It hoped the system would be operational throughout the Territory as soon as possible. It also hoped that the Territory would soon have a road network serving main urban areas and a minimum network in the outer islands, and that air services between Micronesia and the outside world would be increased.

Emphasizing the importance of tourism in the development of the Territory's economy, the Council said it should however be gradual so that small and fragile economies, social structures, environment and cultural conditions were not overwhelmed.

The Council expressed satisfaction that in many cases land leased in the Northern Mariana Islands for contingency military purposes had been leased back to its original owners for a nominal fee for continued civilian use.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries<sup>(6)</sup> noted that the Territory was still, to a large extent, economically and financially dependent on the Administering Authority and that structural imbalances in the economy appeared not to have been reduced. It said the Authority should increase its economic assistance so that the people could achieve economic independence to the greatest extent possible and reduce the structural imbalances. It noted that the budgetary allocation for operations of the local authorities and the grant for infrastructural improvement had increased and recalled the Authority's obligation relating to economic development.

It urged the Authority to continue safeguarding, in co-operation with the local authorities, the right of the people of Micronesia to own and dispose freely of the natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development. It reaffirmed that the rights of the people over a 200-mile exclusive maritime zone should be respected and that they should receive all benefits deriving from it.

Social conditions

Noting that responsibility for health care had been devolved to the constitutional Governments, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> urged the Administering Authority to establish a co-ordinating mechanism to continue the work of the Office of Health Services after termination of the Trusteeship Agreement. It noted with satisfaction that the Authority continued to give priority to developing hospital services throughout the Territory, while expressing concern over the reported inadequacy of health care in some regions.

The Council expressed concern at the continued incidence of cholera. It appreciated the efforts made to eradicate the disease, urged increased attention to improving sanitation facilities and disinfecting water supplies and noted with satisfaction that although 165 cases had been reported since 1983 there had been no deaths.

The Council stressed the importance of continuing efforts in family planning. It noted with concern that severe budget cut-backs in federal programmes for training of health care professionals was likely to have a negative impact in Micronesia and said every effort should be made to find funding. It urged the Authority to give urgent attention to the financial problems of the Marshall Islands regarding the cost of medical referrals.

While noting the Authority's view that employment policies were best left to the local Governments, the Council considered it the Authority's responsibility to assist in and contribute to the reduction of employment. It urged priority for a co-ordinated employment policy and facilitation of free movement of labour. The Council noted that community development projects continued to prove successful and applauded work in promoting self-reliance in the local population.

Education

Regarding education, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> recognized that a shortage of skilled teachers was still a major problem and hoped the Territorial Teacher Training Program would be extended at least until termination of the Trusteeship Agreement. It was concerned at set-backs faced by the Marshall Islands in education and urged the Authority to respond positively to requests for assistance. It noted with concern that many elementary school facilities remained inadequate.

Since termination of the Agreement was near, the Council urged that more resources be devoted to teaching English and asked that steps be taken to enable learning of other languages. It noted with pleasure the establishment of the Northern Marianas College, aimed at providing the skills essential to development in Micronesia. It urged the Authority and Governments of the Territory to see that those receiving vocational training or higher education at government expense were obliged for a specific period after graduation to offer their services to the State or a government agency. It welcomed the wide range of vocational training provided by federal agencies.

Claims

The Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> noted that payment of $24.3 million in war claims was subject to the provisions of a United States Public Law being met. It hoped that disbursement of these funds would not be delayed based on legal technicalities and that the United States Administration and the Congress would ensure that the money was released before termination of the Agreement.

Radioactive waste management

Despite the absence of any evidence that nuclear wastes had been dumped in the waters of the Territory, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> nevertheless recognized that the matter could be one of serious concern to the inhabitants, who looked to the Authority to defend their interests in the matter. It noted that studies on the environmental impact of any dumping were under way and that if plans were to be made to continue a nuclear-waste storage facility there would be opportunities to conduct scientific studies and consult with all interested parties.

Compensation for Bikini and Enewetak populations

The Trusteeship Council<sup>(3)</sup> took note of the substantial sums of money the Administering Authority had paid to Bikini Islanders for damages inflicted on their atoll by nuclear tests. While recognizing that no amount of financial assistance could adequately compensate for loss of their homeland, the Council nevertheless recognized that the Authority had accepted liability and had been generous. It also noted the financial provisions made under the compact of free association in regard to the Marshall Islands.

The Council reiterated its concern that the people of Bikini and Enewetak and their dependants, who had suffered as a result of the nuclear tests, should continue to receive adequate medical care, even after the Agreement's termination. The Council welcomed the Authority's undertaking to keep it informed of the results of radiological tests on Bikini and asked the Authority to continue to eliminate the radiation risks to which the inhabitants of the Marshall Islands might be exposed.

Visiting missions

In 1983, visiting missions had been sent by the Trusteeship Council to the Federated States of Micronesia and Marshall Islands to observe plebiscites there.<sup>(9)</sup> The aim was to see that the voting public understood the issues involved in the plebiscites and that they had been carried out in accordance with the regulations which ensured the secrecy of the vote and the accuracy of the counting. Both missions had concluded that the voters had approved the compact of free association in plebiscites that had been run so as to ensure the free and fair expression of the wishes of the people.

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council on 29 May 1984 adopted resolutions 2177(LI) and 2178(LI), both by vote.

Having examined at its fifty-first session the report of the United Nations Visiting Mission, dispatched at the invitation of the Administering Authority and pursuant to its resolution 2174(S-XV) of 20 December 1982, to observe the plebiscite in the Marshall Islands, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands,

29 May 1984 Meeting 1576 3-1

Draft by France and United Kingdom (TL.1242 and Corr.1); agenda item 8.

The USSR, which voted negatively, said that United States actions regarding Micronesia, which were aimed at dividing the Territory and imposing on its various parts a commonwealth and free association, were illegal and contrary to the Charter, the Trusteeship Agreement and the 1960 Declaration on colonial countries. Changes in the status of a strategic Trust Territory could be made only by the Security Council. The USSR rejected the conclusions of the missions as a smoke-screen for the political show organized by the Administering Authority to seize the Territory illegally.

Hearings

Between 16 and 22 May 1984, the Trusteeship Council heard 12 petitioners who were concerned mainly with the future status of the Trust Territory, its political, economic and social conditions, the question of compensation to victims of atomic tests and radiation and the scale of payments for land leased on Kwajalein Atoll by the Administering Authority for missile tests. The petitioners were: Mayor Tomaki Juda and Jonathan M. Weisgall, on behalf of the people of Bikini; Julian Riklon from Rongelap Atoll, Marshall Islands; Senator Carl Heine from Jaluit Atoll, Marshall Islands; Senator Ataji Balos of Kwajalein Atoll Corporation; David Anderson, a lawyer appearing on behalf of the people of Enewetak; Father William Wood, Focus on Micronesia Coalition; Glenn Alcalay for the United States Pacific Network; Susanne R. Roff, Minority Rights Group (New York), Inc.; Harold Matthew, Mayor of Utirik Atoll, Marshall Islands; and Edward Temengil and Roman Bedor of Palau.

Meeting numbers. TC 1566-1569, 1571.

On 30 October and 2 November, the General Assembly's Fourth Committee heard statements by Elizabeth Bounds, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States; Vincent McGee, Minority Rights Group; Susanne R. Roff and Jonathan M. Weisgall.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12, 13.

In the Fourth Committee, the United States said the question of Micronesia was expressly reserved to the Security Council and the Trusteeship Council and appearance of petitioners in the Fourth Committee would be a departure from established practice and from Article 83 of the Charter. Australia, and Sweden, on behalf of the five Nordic countries, held similar views.

Petitions, communications and observations

The Trusteeship Council on 22 May took decisions on 12 written communications and 15 written petitions. It drew the attention of the petitioners to the observations of the Administering Authority where applicable.

Responding to a September 1983 letter from Senator Peter Sugiyama of Palau, the United States, in a 22 February 1984 letter to the President of the Trusteeship Council, stated that it had no intention of submitting the compact of free association for Palau<sup>(1)</sup> to the United States Congress until Palau had completed its own approval process.

Meeting number. TC 1570.

Other aspects of the International Trusteeship System*Fellowships and scholarships

Under a scholarship programme, launched by the General Assembly in 1952,<sup>(1)</sup> 11 Member States had in the past made scholarships available for students from Trust Territories: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Tunisia, USSR, Yugoslavia. In a May 1984 report to the Trusteeship Council,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he had asked for up-to-date information, receiving a reply from one offering State, the USSR, which said that currently no inhabitant from the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands was studying in the USSR.

In the Council, the USSR said it regretted that the report omitted details of scholarships and fellowships offered by Member States to the Territory's inhabitants, pointing out that the last such description had appeared more than 16 years previously. The USSR had information that many offers never reached the inhabitants or that they had been so hemmed in by obstacles that they had found it impossible to take advantage of them.

The United States said Micronesians were involved in a number of foreign training programmes, mostly in the Pacific, and scholarships most in demand were those where the language of instruction was English. Local Governments handled all international scholarships; information about scholarships offered by the USSR had been made available to Micronesians through those Governments. It was up to the students to decide whether they wanted to apply for them.

On 24 May, the Council took note of the report without objection.<sup>(3)</sup>

Information dissemination

A report by the Secretary-General covering 1 May 1983 to 30 April 1984<sup>(4)</sup> described activities by the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) in distributing United Nations documents, official records and informational materials throughout the Trust Territory. Such information was distributed directly and through its information centres, primarily the United Nations Information Centre (UNIC) in Tokyo. In March, an information officer from that Centre visited the Territory to review arrangements for efficient dissemination, confirming that the offices and libraries of each place he visited were receiving the materials. Video cassettes were found to be a new and effective means of disseminating information, since all educational institutions in Micronesia had video cassette players. United Nations radio programmes were often used in Palau and Yap. The UNIC at Washington, D.C., continued to distribute Council documents and other United Nations material to the United States Congress, Departments of State and the Interior, non-governmental organizations and information media.

Speaking in the Council, the USSR said the Administering Authority had not explained in its annual report how it fulfilled its responsibility for disseminating information. The Micronesians had commented on the lack of information and the report failed to mention whether DPI had corrected that regrettable state of affairs.

The United States said all documents received by the regional Governments were disseminated; none were blocked or controlled under any pretext.

On 24 May, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report without objection.<sup>(3)</sup>

Meeting number. TC 1575.

Trusteeship Council

The Trusteeship Council held its fifty-first session in New York from 14 May to 18 July, adopting its agenda<sup>(5)</sup> on 14 May and its report to the Security Council<sup>(3)</sup> on 18 July.

Meeting numbers. TC 1564, 1580.

Co-operation with the Committee on colonial countries

At its 1984 session,<sup>(3)</sup> the Trusteeship Council again considered the attainment of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory and co-operation with the Committee on colonial countries.

During the discussion of the item in the Council, the USSR said the Administering Authority's report was silent on the implementation of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(6)</sup> The Authority's claim that it was accountable only to the Trusteeship Council and the Security Council was incorrect. The Territory fell within the framework of the Declaration, since the Micronesians had not attained independence, and the Authority's and the Trusteeship Council's refusal to co-operate with the Committee on colonial countries was in defiance of the General Assembly and generally counter-productive to decolonization.

The United States said Article 83 of the Charter, reserving jurisdiction over the Territory to the Security Council rather than the Assembly, was quite definite; the Committee on colonial countries and the Assembly had no jurisdiction with respect to the Territory. France and the United Kingdom agreed with that interpretation of Article 83.

Co-operation with CERD and the Decade against racial discrimination

Co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination was again considered by the Trusteeship Council in 1984.<sup>(3)</sup>

During the discussion in the Council, the USSR said since CERD made recommendations on petitions, the Council was expected to transmit such petitions to CERD, which should also receive reports concerning legislative, judicial, administrative and other measures directly related to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;<sup>(7)</sup> the Council had material of that nature which should be submitted. The USSR said it had been established during the current Council session that instances of racial discrimination had taken place in the Territory and one petitioner had made material available attesting to a policy of racial discrimination, particularly regarding wages. A CERD representative should be invited to attend the current Council session.

The United Kingdom said it had witnessed no racial discrimination during two visits to Micronesia; however, the question of wages could be examined as a possible example of racial discrimination. Concerning co-operation with CERD, the United Kingdom referred to Article 83 of the Charter on the general question of jurisdiction; the United States subscribed to those views, adding that the one case of alleged wage discrimination was currently under litigation in a Court in the Northern Mariana Islands and copies of the subsequent judgement would be made available.

The representative of the Government of the Federated States of Micronesia said it had not complained about racial discrimination because it had never experienced it; in the preceding four years of constitutional government the question of racial discrimination had never arisen.

On 29 May, the Council took note, without objection, of the statements.<sup>(3)</sup>

Meeting number. TC 1576.

Chapter III

Namibia

The United Nations continued in 1984 to work for the independence of Namibia, the largest Territory remaining under colonial rule. As the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until its independence, the United Nations Council for Namibia monitored the situation there and participated in formulating United Nations policy on the Territory. At extraordinary plenary meetings at Bangkok, Thailand, the Council adopted in May its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, outlining its policies.

In its 1984 annual report to the General Assembly, the Council reviewed the political and military situation, foreign investment in the Territory, the exploitation of its natural resources, and social conditions and the labour situation under the continued illegal occupation of the South African administration. It said that South Africa was attempting to maintain control of Namibia through the establishment of a puppet institution, the so-called Multi-Party Conference (MPC). Furthermore, South Africa continued to insist on the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola before acting on independence plans. Independence talks between the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), the South African Administrator-General of Namibia and an MPC delegation took place at Lusaka, Zambia, in May, and at Mindelo, Cape Verde, in July, the first direct encounter between South Africa and SWAPO since 1981, but the conferences ended without agreement on key issues. According to the Council, the talks failed because MPC members refused to support the independence plan endorsed by the Security Council in 1978 and insisted on linking independence to extraneous issues such as the Cuban withdrawal from Angola.

Cuba and Angola, in a joint declaration issued in March, stated their intention to initiate the gradual removal of Cuban forces from Angola as soon as certain conditions had been met, including South Africa's withdrawal of its forces from Angola and implementation of the independence plan.

The General Assembly, in resolution 39/50 A, condemned South Africa for attempting to circumvent the United Nations plan for Namibia by promoting an internal settlement through MPC, and for sabotaging the independence talks held in 1984 by insisting on the "linkage" pre-condition. It urged the Security Council to fulfil United Nations responsibility over Namibia and ensure that the Organization's independence plan was not undermined.

In resolution 39/50 B, the Assembly again called for the plan's implementation, as endorsed by the Council in 1978, and demanded that South Africa and the United States desist from their attempts to establish linkage.

The Council for Namibia viewed with concern the increased assistance given by major Western countries and Israel to South Africa in the economic and financial areas, and said such help was a hostile act against the Namibian people. It reported that certain Western States, in disregard of United Nations resolutions, continued to maintain their wide-ranging economic interests in Namibia. Their unwillingness to prevent those activities had contributed to the illegal exploitation of the Territory's natural and human resources. Foreign economic interests were attracted to Namibia because of the high profitability made possible by the abundance of cheap, enslaved labour. Such interests, particularly South African- and Western-based transnational corporations, continued to exploit the natural resources without reinvesting much of the profit in the Territory. The Council, having sought information and advice about initiating legal proceedings in domestic courts of countries whose nationals and companies were involved, reiterated its resolve to end the plunder through such means as legal action. The Assembly declared that the activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia were illegal under international law and demanded that transnational corporations refrain from activities there.

In co-operation with the United Nations Department of Public Information, the Council disseminated information on Namibia in order to mobilize world public opinion in support of independence. As part of the publicity campaign, it organized seminars and missions, issued publications and broadcast materials, maintained contacts with non-governmental organizations and held observances. The Assembly, in resolution 39/50 D, called for United Nations and other action to promote international public opinion in support of Namibia. By resolution 39/50 C, it decided on the work programme of the Council.

Namibians outside their country continued to receive assistance from various United Nations programmes, financed primarily by the Fund for Namibia. In 1984, the Fund spent $7.5 million, while voluntary contributions by States totalled $4.4 million. Funding was also provided from the regular United Nations budget, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and specialized agencies. The Fund consisted of three main programmes—the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, which financed training programmes and surveys of the economic and social sectors in preparation for independence; the United Nations Institute for Namibia, involved with research, training and planning activities; and educational, social and relief assistance to Namibians, which emphasized their immediate needs and welfare. In resolution 39/50 E, the Assembly appealed for increased contributions to the Fund and urged United Nations organizations to implement projects approved by the Council and to allocate funds for them.

Namibia question

Activities of the UN Council for Namibia. The United Nations Council for Namibia, a policy-making organ of the United Nations and the legal Administering Authority for the Territory until independence under the role mandated by the General Assembly in 1967,<sup>(1)</sup> continued its work in 1984. It reported to the Assembly in November on developments concerning Namibia and on Council activities from 1 September 1983 to 31 August 1984.<sup>(2)</sup> Later 1984 activities were described in its 1985 report.<sup>(3)</sup> As in previous years, the Council participated in the work of other United Nations bodies whenever they dealt with the question of Namibia and related matters: it co-operated with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries; dispatched consultation missions to various countries; organized seminars and regional symposia on Namibia in order to mobilize further international public opinion in support of the Territory's independence; and co-operated with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in efforts to expose the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa and to mobilize international public opinion. The Council continued to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO), recognized by the Assembly as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people.

Acting as the representative of Namibia, the Council continued to serve as a full member of UNCTAD, UNIDO, the Executive Committee of the Programme of UNHCR, IAEA, ILO, FAO, UNESCO and ITU, and was an associate member in WHO.

During 1984, the Council was represented at other conferences and meetings, including: Greater London Council ceremony to declare Greater London an anti-apartheid zone (London, 9-11 January); ninth meeting of the States Parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination<sup>(4)</sup> (New York, 20 January); seminar with NGOs based in Europe, organized by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries) (Vienna, Austria, 21-23 February); Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (Kingston, Jamaica, 19 March-13 April, Geneva, 8-10 August and 13 August-5 September); congressional briefing on United States policy and the war in southern Africa (Washington, D.C., 25 April); North American Regional Conference for Action against Apartheid (New York, 18-21 June); International NGO Conference for the Independence of Namibia and the Eradication of Apartheid (Geneva, 2-5 July); Conference of Arab Solidarity with the Struggle for Liberation in Southern Africa (Tunis, Tunisia, 7-9 August); Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (Geneva, 7-15 August); seminar on the Legal Status of the Apartheid Régime in South Africa and Other Legal Aspects of the Struggle against Apartheid (Lagos, Nigeria, 13-16 August); meeting to observe the International Day of Solidarity with South African Political Prisoners (11 October); meeting of the Council of the International Centre for Public Enterprises in Developing Countries (Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, 25-27 October); and special meeting to commemorate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (New York, 29 November).

On 25 May, the Council held its annual meeting in observance of Africa Liberation Day and of the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of OAU. The Council also commemorated Namibia Day on 26 August, and the Week of Solidarity with the People of Namibia and Their Liberation Movement, SWAPO, on 27 October. As in previous years, the Council participated as observer in meetings of the OAU Assembly of Heads of State and Government and the OAU Council of Ministers.

The Council continued to organize and participate in various seminars and conferences, among them a regional symposium on South Africa's Illegal Occupation of Namibia: The Threat to International Peace and Security (Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, 2-5 April). It made recommendations at the international, regional and national levels, and called for comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

The Seminar on the Efforts by the International Community to End South Africa's Illegal Occupation of Namibia (Montreal, Canada, 23-27 July) considered South Africa's refusal to implement the 1978 United Nations plan for Namibia's independence endorsed in Security Council resolution 435(1978).<sup>(5)</sup> The seminar called for sanctions should South Africa fail to implement the independence plan and for an immediate Council meeting to take urgent action. It urged the international community to increase all kinds of support to SWAPO and recommended future action for the Council for Namibia.

As part of the Week of Solidarity with the People of Namibia, the Council organized a symposium on A Century of Heroic Struggle by the Namibian People against Colonialism (New York, 31 October-2 November). The symposium recommended measures for the Council and called on the international community, in particular the peoples of countries that were allies of South Africa, especially the United States and members of the European Economic Community (EEC), to pressure their Governments and South Africa to end the illegal occupation of Namibia through the implementation of the United Nations plan. The participants condemned the United States policy of "linkage" of the issues of Namibia's independence and the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola, and called on it to close its so-called Liaison Office at Windhoek in Namibia.

Seminars were also held on exploitation of Namibia's natural and human resources (see below) and on the protection of Namibia's natural resources (see below).

Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action. The Council for Namibia, at the conclusion of its 1984 extraordinary plenary meetings (Bangkok, 21-25 May), adopted by acclamation the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia. On 31 May,<sup>(6)</sup> the Council's President transmitted the texts to the Secretary-General. Australia, Belgium, Botswana, Chile, Finland and Turkey, while joining the consensus, expressed reservations or made clarifications concerning certain references therein. At the Bangkok meetings, the Council reviewed the situation in the context of the continued illegal occupation by South Africa and its implications for international peace and security, analysed the causes for the delay in implementing the 1978 United Nations plan for independence,<sup>(5)</sup> and examined measures to increase support for the independence struggle of the Namibians led by SWAPO, their sole and authentic representative, and to assist the front-line States in resisting South Africa's acts of aggression and destabilization.

The Council expressed the hope that its meetings in Asia would cause the Governments and peoples of that continent, and the entire international community, to redouble their efforts to achieve Namibia's liberation from colonial and racist occupation. The Council took note of recent United Nations action, as well as a resolution on Namibia adopted by the OAU Council of Ministers at its fortieth session (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 27 February-5 March 1984)<sup>(7)</sup> (see below, under "Communications"), and welcomed the Final Communiqué of the Summit Meeting of Front-line States (Arusha, 29 April).<sup>(8)</sup> It reaffirmed the inalienable right of the Namibian people to self-determination and independence in a united Namibia, that South Africa's occupation constituted an act of aggression against the people in terms of the Definition of Aggression adopted by the General Assembly in 1974,<sup>(9)</sup> and that the Namibian people in the exercise of their right of self-defence were entitled to use all means at their disposal, including armed struggle, to repel South Africa. The Council reaffirmed its solidarity with, and support for, SWAPO and commended it for continuing the struggle on all fronts, including the armed struggle. It called on States to give political, moral, material, military and financial support to SWAPO, and on United Nations bodies to provide assistance to the Namibian people through SWAPO.

In the light of the current critical situation resulting from South Africa's continued occupation, its defiance of United Nations resolutions, its manoeuvres to subvert the United Nations independence plan, the encouragement it received from Western countries, its increasing military strength, rendered more dangerous by its nuclear weapons capability, and its aggression against African States, the Council called for action from the United Nations, States and intergovernmental organizations. The Council would consult with Governments, NGOs and other support groups because it deemed it important to maintain contacts with those Member States whose position on Namibia did not conform with that of the Council, with a view to convincing them of the need to comply with United Nations resolutions and to cease collaboration with South Africa and to pressure it to expedite Namibia's independence; it was incumbent upon all States and the international community to compel South Africa to comply with United Nations resolutions. In regard to follow-up action, the Council would maintain regular diplomatic contacts with countries visited by its missions.

The Council reaffirmed that Namibia's accession to independence must be with its Territory intact, including Walvis Bay and the offshore islands, and it called on the Security Council to counter any South African dismemberment attempts.

Condemning South Africa for its repression of the Namibian people, its apartheid policy and other human rights violations (see p. 784 et seq.), the Council demanded an end to those policies. It demanded the unconditional release of all Namibian political prisoners (see p. 155) and denounced South Africa for its military buildup in Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians, and its recruitment of mercenaries.

The support of front-line States for the Namibian cause continued to be of paramount importance in bringing independence, in the Council's view, and it called on the international community to render financial, material, military and political support to those States. The Council also reaffirmed its support for the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC) and called on States to assist it in its efforts to promote regional economic co-operation and development and to reduce the economic dependence of countries in the area on South Africa.

Stating that the United Nations plan for Namibia approved by the Security Council<sup>(9)</sup> remained the only basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibia question, the Council reaffirmed the need to implement it without modification, qualification or pre-condition and that Namibia remained a decolonization issue and should be resolved in accordance with the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(10)</sup> Any attempt to portray the question as part of an East-West confrontation, or to link it with other extraneous considerations, was in defiance of the international community. The Council rejected attempts by the United States and South Africa to establish a linkage between the independence of Namibia and extraneous issues, in particular the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola (see p. 180).

The Council also condemned South Africa's attempts to circumvent the United Nations plan for Namibia by promoting an internal settlement through the so-called MPC. Such attempts, immediately following the decision to establish a so-called state council to draw up a "constitution", again made clear that South Africa had no intention of complying with the United Nations plan and sought instead to consolidate its illegitimate hold on the Territory through the installation of puppet political institutions. According to the Council, there were only two parties to the conflict, namely the people of Namibia, led by SWAPO, and South Africa. The Council called on all States and the international community not to recognize any effort to impose any such illegal arrangements.

It urged the Security Council to act decisively to ensure the full implementation of resolution 435(1978),<sup>(5)</sup> the only acceptable basis for peaceful settlement of the question. It commended the Secretary-General for his efforts in pursuing Security Council and General Assembly resolutions and urged him to intensify those efforts. The Council said that, as the representative of Namibia in United Nations organizations, it would make proposals within the respective spheres of competence of those bodies to promote the interests of the Namibian people. It called on NGOs to intensify international action in support of the liberation struggle and to increase support to SWAPO.

In addition, the Council stated its position in regard to States' relations with South Africa (see p. 136), the exploitation of Namibian natural resources (see below), the relations of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) with South Africa (see p. 150), the imposition of mandatory sanctions against South Africa to ensure its compliance with United Nations resolutions (see p. 138), tightening the existing arms embargo against South Africa (see p. 142), assistance to the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see below), and mobilization of public opinion (see below).

Missions. In accordance with a 1983 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(11)</sup> the Council for Namibia sent consultation missions to Western Europe, Latin America and the Asia-Pacific region, covering the following countries and organizations:<sup>(2)</sup> the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, the European Parliament and the Commission of the European Communities from 16 to 31 January; Japan, New Zealand and Australia from 12 to 24 March; and Trinidad and Tobago and Argentina from 7 to 16 April. The purpose of those missions was to promote the implementation of United Nations resolutions on Namibia and to mobilize international support for its independence. Meanwhile, another mission—to France, the Netherlands, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom from 24 April to 12 May—sought legal advice from lawyers on the possibilities of instituting legal proceedings in the domestic courts to ensure compliance with Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia (see below).<sup>(12)</sup> In addition, the Council sent a mission to New Delhi, India, to consult with the Chairperson of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries from 16 to 18 May on developments in Namibia and the role the Movement could play to mobilize support for the Namibian cause.

The missions urged the Governments, pending the imposition by the Security Council of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa, to apply sanctions unilaterally and collectively.

During the visit to the Netherlands, its Government said it opposed extraneous pre-conditions to implementing the United Nations independence plan, and declared its willingness to co-operate in implementing Decree No. 1 to the extent possible under its law. With regard to exploiting Namibian uranium by foreign economic interests, the Netherlands maintained that no uranium from Namibia was being imported for use in nuclear plants in the Netherlands. Regarding sanctions, it said it had taken such measures as imposing strict visa requirements for South African nationals seeking entry into the Netherlands and abrogating a cultural agreement with that country.

In Belgium, the mission expressed concern over the presence there of a South African military attaché. Belgium maintained that it had no military co-operation with South Africa and that his presence had no particular significance; it still had some trading links with South Africa through private enterprise, but no Belgian enterprise or bank had financial interests in Namibia. Regarding Decree No. 1, it said that although the matter raised questions under international law, in practical terms Belgium adhered to its provisions; no Belgian State-owned or private company was engaged in exploiting Namibia's natural resources.

Luxembourg told the mission it rejected South Africa's attempts to impose an internal settlement in Namibia outside the framework of resolution 435(1978). Luxembourg believed that the Western contact group—Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States, which were attempting to negotiate with South Africa on the implementation of the independence plan—could help solve the remaining difficulties. It also rejected the linkage issue.

The mission to Japan was informed of the Government's continued support for the United Nations plan, and that it welcomed recent diplomatic initiatives towards solving the problems in southern Africa through dialogue. Regarding the proposed United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG) to be established under resolution 435(1978), Japan said it would consider making voluntary contributions and providing personnel to the civilian component of UNTAG; in 1975, it had drawn the attention of Japanese companies to Decree No. 1.

New Zealand reiterated its rejection of any linkage and maintained that the United Nations plan should be executed without pre-conditions. It hoped that diplomatic initiatives would contribute to easing tensions in the area. Following the consultations, New Zealand, for the first time, issued a statement jointly with the mission.

Australia also reaffirmed its support of the plan, rejected any linkage, and hoped that the initiatives would contribute to peace and security in the region.

The mission to Trinidad and Tobago was told that the Government would recognize the Namibian travel documents issued by the Council in its capacity as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence. Trinidad and Tobago said it did not trade with South Africa, although there was a possibility of some illegal trade, which would be investigated. As for imposing economic sanctions, it was willing to raise the question at the next meeting of the Ministers of Trade of the African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) States to obtain the concurrence of the Caribbean countries to observe an economic boycott.

Argentina declared that resolution 435(1978) was the only basis for a negotiated settlement of the question and rejected any extraneous pre-conditions.

Communications. In 1984, a number of countries and organizations sent letters to the Secretary-General concerning Namibia. Angola, Cuba, South Africa, and SWAPO (whose communications were forwarded by Zimbabwe) addressed the immediate situation in the Territory; several organizations or conferences outlined their policy on Namibia, particularly the implementation of the United Nations plan for independence; and the United Kingdom disputed a statement made in the Special Committee against Apartheid.

On 5 January,<sup>(14)</sup> the President of SWAPO, responding to a proposal by Angola of 31 December 1983<sup>(15)</sup> that the Secretary-General consult with SWAPO and South Africa on a date for a cease-fire in Namibia, agreed with that proposal and suggested that the Secretary-General immediately convene a meeting between the two sides to discuss the final details of the cease-fire, in accordance with the provisions of Security Council resolution 435(1978).<sup>(5)</sup>

Angola and Cuba, in a joint declaration issued at Havana on 19 March 1984,<sup>(16)</sup> said they would initiate a gradual withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola when certain requirements were met, including the implementation of resolution 435(1978) and the withdrawal of South African troops from Namibia (see p. 181). Referring to the joint declaration on 26 March,<sup>(17)</sup> South Africa said the statement contradicted the February Lusaka agreement on military disengagement in southern Africa (see p. 179), and added that it remained prepared to seek a peaceful settlement to the Namibia question based on resolution 435(1978) within the framework of the understanding reached with the Western contact group; the remaining issue was Cuban withdrawal from Angola, on the understanding that they would not be replaced by other hostile forces.

In a 13 August statement,<sup>(18)</sup> SWAPO reaffirmed its readiness to cease armed struggle in Namibia if South Africa agreed to a specified time frame, with a fixed date for commencing implementation of resolution 435(1978); SWAPO would not agree to a South African-controlled transitional process, but it remained ready for direct, constructive high-level contacts with South Africa. On 6 September,<sup>(19)</sup> South Africa said that SWAPO's letter was simply a repetition of the organization's position that the resolution must be implemented without an agreement on Cuban withdrawal; that withdrawal was not a subject on which SWAPO had any say, but was a matter which rested with Angola and was under discussion.

Angola, on 17 November,<sup>(20)</sup> said it had held talks with the United States and South Africa on Namibia's independence and the cessation of South Africa's aggression. Angola had outlined its position on a future agreement—that it would be guaranteed by the Security Council and would provide for United Nations troops monitoring the South African withdrawal from Namibia, to be followed by the Cuban withdrawal over a three-year period. Referring to Angola's letter on 23 November,<sup>(21)</sup> South Africa said it insisted on an agreement providing for the Cuban withdrawal from Angola parallel with the reduction of South African forces in Namibia. South Africa enclosed its proposals to achieve independence for Namibia based on resolution 435(1978), including a 12-week timetable for the total removal of Cuban forces.

On 20 December,<sup>(22)</sup> South Africa forwarded a letter from the Secretary of the "Multi-Party Conference of South West Africa/Namibia" (MPC) to the President of the General Assembly, explaining that MPC came into being on 12 November 1983 at Windhoek when delegates from six Namibian parties came together to speak for the people of the Territory, rejecting claims of other States, including South Africa, the Western contact group, and the Eastern European countries, to speak for Namibians; MPC rejected the General Assembly's designating SWAPO—which had been invited to join a forthcoming conference—as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people.

Among organizations presenting views on Namibia, EEC put forward its policy as contained in a declaration adopted on 28 February at its Ministerial Meeting on European Political Cooperation, and forwarded by France on 2 March.<sup>(23)</sup> The members welcomed the recent agreement on disengagement in southern Angola (see below) and the understanding between South Africa and Mozambique (see p. 184), hoped that those developments would contribute to mutual confidence and would facilitate the implementation of resolution 435(1978), and expressed readiness to assist in developing a free and independent Namibia.

Morocco forwarded the final communiqué of the Fourth Islamic Summit Conference (Casablanca, Morocco, 16-19 January) to the Secretary-General on 13 March.<sup>(24)</sup> The Conference recognized the legitimacy of the liberation struggle of the peoples of South Africa and Namibia, through all means at their disposal, including armed struggle, rejected the linkage question established by South Africa, denounced the dilatory tactics of some members of the Western contact group, and requested it to accelerate its proceedings so that Namibia could become independent by the end of 1984.

On 18 April,<sup>(7)</sup> Upper Volta transmitted the resolutions adopted at the fortieth ordinary session of the OAU Council of Ministers (Addis Ababa, 27 February-5 March). In one resolution, the Ministers condemned South Africa's use of Namibia as a springboard for aggression against African States, condemned its attempts to impose institutions on the Namibians as well as its propping up puppet political alliances to legitimize an internal settlement, welcomed the Security Council's 1983 condemnation of linkage,<sup>(25)</sup> and called for sanctions against South Africa to compel it to accede to Namibia's independence.

The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid transmitted on 11 August<sup>(26)</sup> the declaration and resolutions adopted by the Conference of Arab Solidarity with the Struggle for Liberation in Southern Africa (Tunis, 7-9 August), in which it condemned the manoeuvres of South Africa to sabotage the implementation of the United Nations independence plan and rejected the linkage question.

India forwarded on 8 October<sup>(27)</sup> the final communiqué adopted by the Meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs and Heads of Delegations of the Non-Aligned Countries to the 1984 General Assembly session (New York, 1-5 October), in which they condemned South Africa for its militarization of Namibia and its use as a springboard for aggression, denounced it and the United States for insisting on the linkage pre-condition, and condemned South Africa's attempts to set up puppet political institutions and impose an internal settlement.

By a letter of 16 October,<sup>(28)</sup> the Sudan forwarded the resolutions adopted by the seventy-second Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Geneva, 29 September), including one in which it called for the implementation of resolution 435(1978), condemned the killing of civilians in Namibia by South Africa's security forces, and blamed South Africa for the failure of its talks with SWAPO at Mindelo and Lusaka, aimed at bringing about a cease-fire and Namibia's independence.

Djibouti forwarded, on 10 January 1985,<sup>(29)</sup> resolutions adopted by the twentieth ordinary session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (Addis Ababa, 12-15 November 1984), including one on Namibia, in which they condemned South Africa for its obstruction of the United Nations plan, rejected the linkage question, encouraged SWAPO to intensify its struggle, and expressed support for the United Nations Secretary-General in his efforts to expedite independence.

The United Kingdom, on 2 July,<sup>(30)</sup> referred to a statement made in the Special Committee against Apartheid concerning its alleged support for linkage, and affirmed that there had been no change in the Government's position on Namibia; it remained committed to the implementation of resolution 435(1978).

Secretary-General's report. In response to two December 1983 General Assembly resolutions on Namibia, one on the situation in Namibia resulting from South Africa's occupation<sup>(31)</sup> and the other<sup>(32)</sup> on implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978),<sup>(5)</sup> the Secretary-General, in a report of 19 September,<sup>(33)</sup> forwarded replies he had received from Governments on implementation of those resolutions. By the 1983 action, the Assembly had, inter alia, called on States to support SWAPO and the front-line States and assist Namibian refugees; to isolate South Africa; and to reject any attempt to link the independence of Namibia with extraneous issues. The report contained replies from 15 Governments which described developments in their relations with South Africa.

Action by Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries, in a 20 August decision<sup>(34)</sup> (see also p. 137), stated that South Africa was responsible for the critical situation in and around Namibia, and that its delaying tactics to prevent the implementation of resolution 435(1978), its military buildup in Namibia and its aggression against Namibians made it more urgent that the United Nations reassert its legal responsibility for Namibia. The Committee rejected all manoeuvres by South Africa to bring about sham independence in Namibia under fraudulent schemes, and condemned attempts to circumvent the United Nations plan by promoting an internal settlement through the so-called MPC. The Committee reiterated that a political solution must be based on the termination of South Africa's illegal occupation, withdrawal of its forces and the free exercise by the people of self-determination, in accordance with the 1960 Declaration on colonial countries.<sup>(10)</sup>

In its view, the issue remained one of decolonization, and was not part of an East-West confrontation. Therefore, the Committee rejected United States and South African attempts to link the question with the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola. Condemning South Africa's attempts to destroy SWAPO, the Committee expressed support for it as the representative of the Namibian people and recommended that the Security Council act against any dilatoriness by South Africa aimed at impeding independence and that it impose sanctions against that country.

In a resolution of 22 August,<sup>(35)</sup> the Committee requested all United Nations bodies to withhold from South Africa any form of co-operation or assistance until the people of Namibia had exercised their right to self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, in a 28 February resolution on violations of human rights in southern Africa,<sup>(36)</sup> reaffirmed the right of the Namibian people to self-determination and independence, in accordance with Security Council decisions, and condemned South Africa for its oppression and the militarization of Namibia. In another 28 February resolution,<sup>(37)</sup> the Commission expressed abhorrence of the violation of human rights in Namibia and renewed its request to South Africa to allow an Expert Group to investigate the living conditions in Namibian prisons and the treatment of prisoners. In a third resolution of the same date,<sup>(38)</sup> the Commission called on Governments to take measures, in respect of their nationals and bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that owned and operated enterprises in Namibia, with a view to stopping their trading, manufacturing and investing activities there. (See p. 852.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 1984/55, the Economic and Social Council requested United Nations organizations to withhold all assistance to South Africa until it restored independence and self-determination to the Namibian people, and to refrain from any action which might imply recognition of, or support for, the occupation of Namibia. The Council condemned attempts by South Africa to circumvent the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978).<sup>(5)</sup> It noted with satisfaction the inclusion of Namibia, represented by the Council for Namibia, as a member of various United Nations organizations and urged those which had not granted it membership to do so.

In resolution 1984/53, the Council called on home countries of transnational corporations to prevent new investments and bring about a withdrawal of existing ones in Namibia and South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Five 1984 General Assembly resolutions (39/50 A-E) dealt with Namibia; two of these (39/50 A and B) concerned the situation there.

On 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 39/50 A by recorded vote.

Situation in Namibia resulting from the illegal occupation of the Territory by South Africa

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling, in particular, its resolutions 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966 and 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967 and subsequent resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to Namibia, as well as the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, delivered in response to the request addressed to it by the Security Council in its resolution 284(1970) of 29 July 1970,

Recalling also its resolutions 3111(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973 and 31/146 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976, by which it, inter alia, recognized the South West Africa People's Organization as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people and granted observer status to it,

Recalling further its resolutions ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981 and 36/121 B of 10 December 1981, by which it called upon States to cease forthwith, individually and collectively, all dealings with South Africa in order totally to isolate it politically, economically, militarily and culturally,

Taking note of Security Council resolutions 532(1983) of 31 May 1983 and 539(1983) of 28 October 1983,

Noting also the Final Communiqué of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting, held at New Delhi from 23 to 29 November 1983, the resolution on Namibia adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its fortieth ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 27 February to 5 March 1984, the Final Communiqué of the Summit Meeting of the Front-line States, held at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, on 29 April 1984,<sup>(8)</sup> the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 25 May 1984 at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Bangkok, the resolution on Namibia adopted by the Organization of African Unity Co-ordinating Committee for the Liberation of Africa at its forty-second session, held at Dar es Salaam from 30 August to 1 September 1984, and the Final Communiqué of the Meeting of Ministers and Heads of Delegation of the Non-Aligned Countries to the thirty-ninth session of the General Assembly, held in New York from 1 to 5 October 1984,

Welcoming the resolution on relations between the European Economic Community and Namibia adopted by the European Parliament on 22 May 1984,

Strongly reiterating that the continuing illegal and colonial occupation of Namibia by South Africa, in defiance of repeated General Assembly and Security Council resolutions, constitutes an act of aggression against the Namibian people and a challenge to the authority of the United Nations, which has direct responsibility for Namibia until independence,

Stressing the solemn responsibility of the international community to take all possible measures in support of the Namibian people in their liberation struggle under the leadership of their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization,

Reaffirming its full support for the armed struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, to achieve self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia, and recognizing that 1984 marks the one hundredth year of heroic struggle of the Namibian people against colonial occupation,

Indignant at South Africa's refusal to comply with repeated resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 439(1978) of 13 November 1978, 532(1983) of 31 May 1983 and 539(1983) of 28 October 1983, and at its manoeuvres aimed at perpetuating its brutal colonial domination and exploitation of the Namibian people,

Deploping South Africa's intransigent stand and insistence on new pre-conditions and its demands for concessions from the South West Africa People's Organization which led to the failure of the Namibian independence talks held in 1984 at Lusaka and Mindelo,

Commending the front-line States and the South West Africa People's Organization for the statesmanlike and constructive attitude which they have displayed in the efforts aimed at implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978),

Strongly condemning the racist régime of South Africa for developing a nuclear capability for military and aggressive purposes,

Deeply concerned at the increasing militarization of Namibia, the forced conscription of Namibians, the creation of tribal armies and the use of mercenaries for the repression of the Namibian people and for carrying out aggression against neighbouring States,

Noting with grave concern that, as a result of the Security Council's failure on 31 August 1981, on account of the veto of the United States of America, to exercise effectively its responsibilities, unprovoked armed aggression against Angola continues and parts of southern Angola are still under occupation by South African troops,

Expressing its strong condemnation of South Africa's continuing acts of aggression against independent African States, particularly Angola, which have caused extensive loss of human life and destruction of economic infrastructures,

Reaffirming that the resources of Namibia are the inviolable heritage of the Namibian people and that the exploitation of those resources by foreign economic interests under the protection of the illegal South African colonial régime, in violation of the Charter of the United Nations, of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council and of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 27 September 1974, and in disregard of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, is illegal and encourages the occupation régime to be even more intransigent and defiant,

Deeply deploring the continued collaboration with South Africa of certain Western States, in particular the United States of America, as well as that of Israel, in the political, military, economic and nuclear fields, in disregard of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council,

Deeply concerned at the continued assistance rendered to the racist Pretoria régime by certain international organizations and institutions, in particular the International Monetary Fund, in disregard of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Indignant at the continuing arbitrary imprisonment and detention of leaders, members and supporters of the South West Africa People's Organization, the killing of Namibian patriots and other acts of brutality, including the wanton beating, torture and murder of innocent Namibians, and other inhuman measures by the illegal occupation régime designed to intimidate the Namibian people and to destroy their determination to fulfil their legitimate aspirations for self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia,

Noting with grave concern that the Security Council has been prevented from taking effective action against South Africa in the discharge of its responsibilities under Chapter VII of the Charter on account of the vetoes cast by one or more of the Western permanent members of the Security Council,

Commending the efforts of the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the responsibilities entrusted to it under the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

1. Approves the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia;

2. Takes special note of the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia;

3. Takes note of the debate on the question of Namibia held in the Security Council from 20 to 28 October 1983, culminating in the adoption of resolution 539(1983), by which the Council rejected South Africa's insistence on linking the independence of Namibia to irrelevant and extraneous issues as incompatible with Council resolution 435(1978) and declared that the independence of Namibia could not be held hostage to the resolution of issues that were alien to resolution 435(1978);

4. Further takes note of Security Council resolution 539(1983) by which the Council decided, in the event of continued obstruction by South Africa, to consider the adoption of appropriate measures under the Charter of the United Nations;

5. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and as recognized in General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) and 2145(XXI) and in subsequent resolutions of the Assembly relating to Namibia, as well as the legitimacy of their struggle by all the means at their disposal, including armed struggle, against the illegal occupation of their territory by South Africa;

6. Reiterates that, in accordance with its resolution 2145(XXI), Namibia is the direct responsibility of the United Nations until genuine self-determination and national independence are achieved in the Territory and, for this purpose, reaffirms the mandate given to the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence under resolution 2248(S-V) and subsequent resolutions of the General Assembly;

7. Reaffirms that the South West Africa People's Organization, the national liberation movement of Namibia, is the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people;

8. Further reaffirms that the genuine independence of Namibia can be achieved only with the direct and full participation of the South West Africa People's Organization in all efforts to implement resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

9. Strongly condemns the South African régime for its continued illegal occupation of Namibia in defiance of the resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

10. Declares that South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia constitutes an act of aggression against the Namibian people in terms of the Definition of Aggression contained in General Assembly resolution 3314(XXIX) of 14 December 1974 and supports the armed struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, to repel South Africa's aggression and to achieve self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

11. Reaffirms that Security Council resolution 435(1978) remains the only acceptable basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibian question and calls once again for its immediate and unconditional implementation;

12. Urges the Security Council to act decisively in fulfilment of the direct responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia and to take, without further delay, appropriate action to ensure that the United Nations plan, as contained in Security Council resolution 435(1978), is not undermined or modified in any way and that it is fully respected and implemented;

13. Reiterates its conviction that South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia, its defiance of United Nations resolutions, its brutal repression of the Namibian people, its acts of destabilization and aggression against independent African States and its policies of apartheid constitute a threat to international peace and security;

14. Expresses its dismay at the failure to date of the Security Council to discharge effectively its responsibilities for the maintenance of international peace and security, owing to the opposition of its Western permanent members;

15. Declares that comprehensive mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations are the only effective measures to ensure South Africa's compliance with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations;

16. Denounces all fraudulent constitutional and political schemes through which the illegal racist régime of South Africa may attempt to perpetuate its colonial domination of Namibia and, in particular, calls upon the international community, especially all Member States, to continue to refrain from according any recognition or extending any co-operation to any régime which the illegal South African administration may impose upon the Namibian people in disregard of Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983) and 539(1983) and of other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Council;

17. Condemns South Africa for its continued attempts to circumvent the United Nations plan for Namibia by promoting an internal settlement through the so-called "Multi-Party Conference" and declares that such attempts by the racist régime, immediately following the decision to establish a so-called State Council with the object of drawing up a "Constitution", once again make clear that Pretoria has no intention of complying with the letter and spirit of the United Nations plan and seeks, instead, to consolidate its illegitimate hold on the Territory through the installation of puppet political institutions subservient to its own interests;

18. Reaffirms that all such manoeuvres are fraudulent and null and void and that they must be rejected categorically by all States as called for in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council;

19. Reiterates that there are only two parties to the conflict in Namibia, namely, the people of Namibia, led by their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization, on the one hand, and the illegal occupation régime of South Africa, on the other;

20. Further reiterates that all efforts must be deployed to counter any sinister manoeuvres aimed at circumventing the United Nations and undermining its primary responsibility for the decolonization of Namibia;

21. Firmly rejects and condemns the persistent attempts by the United States of America and South Africa to establish a "linkage" or "parallelism" between the independence of Namibia and any extraneous and irrelevant issues, in particular the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola, and emphasizes unequivocally that all such attempts are designed to delay the decolonization process in Namibia and that they constitute interference in the internal affairs of Angola;

22. Expresses its appreciation to the front-line States and the South West Africa People's Organization for their statesmanlike and constructive attitude in the efforts aimed at implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978);

23. Reaffirms its conviction that the solidarity and support of the front-line States for the Namibian cause continues to be a factor of paramount importance in the efforts to bring genuine independence to the Territory;

24. Strongly urges the international community to increase, as a matter of urgency, financial, material, military and political support to the front-line States so as to enable them to resolve their own economic difficulties, which are largely a consequence of Pretoria's policies of aggression and subversion, and to defend themselves better against South Africa's persistent attempts to destabilize them;

25. Commends the South West Africa People's Organization for its continued intensification of the struggle on all fronts, including the armed struggle, and for its commitment to embrace all Namibian patriots in an effort to strengthen further the national unity so as to ensure the territorial integrity and sovereignty of a united Namibia, and welcomes the consolidation of unity in action by the patriotic forces in Namibia under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, during the critical phase of their struggle for national and social liberation;

26. Reaffirms its solidarity with, and support for, the South West Africa People's Organization, the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people, and pays tribute to that organization for sacrifices it has made in the field of battle and also for the spirit of statesmanship, co-operation and far-sightedness it has displayed in the political and diplomatic arena despite the most extreme provocations on the part of the racist Pretoria régime;

27. Welcomes the release of Andimba Toivo ya Toivo, Secretary-General of the South West Africa People's Organization, and other leaders of that organization and considers it a victory for the international campaign;

28. Declares that all so-called laws and proclamations issued by the illegal occupation régime in Namibia are illegal, null and void;

29. Calls upon Member States and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render sustained and increased support as well as material, financial, military and other assistance to the South West Africa People's Organization so as to enable it to intensify its struggle for the liberation of Namibia;

30. Urges all Governments and the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to provide increased material assistance to the thousands of Namibian refugees who have been forced by the apartheid régime's oppressive policies to flee Namibia, especially into the neighbouring front-line States;

31. Solemnly reaffirms that Namibia's accession to independence must be with its territorial integrity intact, including Walvis Bay and the offshore islands, and reiterates that, in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations, in particular Security Council resolution 432(1978) of 27 July 1978 and General Assembly resolutions S-9/2 of 3 May 1978 and 35/227 A of 6 March 1981, any attempt by South Africa to annex them is, therefore, illegal, null and void;

32. Calls upon the Security Council to declare categorically that Walvis Bay is an integral part of Namibia and that the question should not be left as a matter for negotiation between an independent Namibia and South Africa;

33. Strongly condemns South Africa for obstructing the implementation of United Nations resolutions, in particular Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983) and 539(1983), and for its manoeuvres, in contravention of those resolutions, designed to consolidate its colonial and neo-colonial interests at the expense of the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people for genuine self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

34. Condemns racist South Africa for sabotaging the Namibian independence talks held in 1984 at Lusaka and Mindelo by insisting on the notorious "linkage" precondition and introducing new insidious subterfuge as alternatives to Security Council resolution 435(1978);

35. Condemns and rejects the puppet "Multi-Party Conference" as the latest in a series of political stratagems through which Pretoria attempts to impose a neo-colonial settlement in Namibia;

36. Strongly urges the Security Council to act decisively against any dilatory manoeuvres and fraudulent schemes of the illegal occupation régime aimed at frustrating the legitimate struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, for self-determination and national liberation;

37. Condemns the increased assistance rendered by the major Western countries and Israel to South Africa in the political, economic, financial and particularly the military and nuclear fields, expresses its conviction that this assistance constitutes a hostile action against the people of Namibia and the front-line States since it is bound to strengthen further the aggressive military machine of the racist régime, and therefore demands that such assistance be immediately terminated;

38. Denounces the establishment of the so-called Liaison Office of the United States Government at Windhoek in direct violation of relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, in particular Council resolutions 283(1970) of 29 July 1970 and 301(1971) of 20 October 1971, and in total disregard of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, and calls for its immediate closure and withdrawal;

39. Calls once again upon all Governments, especially those which have close links with South Africa, to support, in co-operation with the United Nations Council for Namibia, the actions of the United Nations to defend the national rights of the Namibian people until independence;

40. Strongly condemns South Africa for its military build-up in Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians, its recruitment and training of Namibians for tribal armies, its use of mercenaries to suppress the Namibian people and to carry out its military attacks against independent African States, its threats and acts of subversion and aggression against those States and the forcible displacement of Namibians from their homes;

41. Strongly condemns South Africa for its recent imposition of military conscription of all Namibian males between seventeen and fifty-five years of age into the occupying colonial army, in yet another sinister attempt to suppress the national liberation struggle of the Namibian people and to force Namibians to kill one another, and declares that all measures taken by racist South Africa by which the illegal occupation régime attempts to enforce military conscription in Namibia are illegal, null and void;

42. Condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its use of the territory of Namibia as a staging ground from which to launch acts of subversion, destabilization and aggression against neighbouring African States;

43. Strongly condemns South Africa, in particular for its persistent acts of subversion and aggression against Angola, including continued occupation of parts of Angolan territory in gross violation of its sovereignty, and calls upon South Africa to cease all acts of aggression against Angola and withdraw immediately and unconditionally all its troops from that country;

44. Condemns the continuing military and nuclear collaboration on the part of certain Western States and Israel with the racist régime of South Africa, in violation of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Security Council resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977;

45. Declares that such collaboration encourages the Pretoria régime in its defiance of the international community and obstructs efforts to eliminate apartheid and bring South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia to an end and calls for immediate cessation of such collaboration;

46. Calls upon the Security Council to adopt the necessary measures to tighten the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Council resolution 418(1977) and to ensure strict compliance with the embargo by all States;

47. Further calls upon the Security Council to implement, as a matter of urgency, the recommendations contained in the report of the Security Council Committee established in pursuance of resolution 421(1977);

48. Expresses its grave concern at the acquisition of nuclear weapons capability by the racist régime of South Africa and declares that such acquisition constitutes a threat to peace and security in Africa while posing a danger to all mankind;

49. Strongly condemns the collusion between South Africa, Israel and certain Western States, particularly the United States of America, in the nuclear field and calls upon France and all other States to refrain from supplying the racist minority régime of South Africa, directly or indirectly, with installations that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium or other nuclear materials, reactors or military equipment;

50. Reiterates its call upon all States to take legislative and other appropriate measures to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries for service in Namibia;

51. Strongly condemns the illegal occupation régime of South Africa for its massive repression of the people of Namibia and their liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, in an attempt to intimidate and terrorize them into submission;

52. Demands once again that South Africa immediately release all Namibian political prisoners, including all those imprisoned or detained under the so-called internal security laws, martial law or any other arbitrary measures, whether such Namibians have been charged or tried or are being held without charge in Namibia or South Africa;

53. Demands that South Africa account for all "disappeared" Namibians and release any who are still alive and declares that South Africa shall be liable to compensate the victims, their families and the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia for the losses sustained;

54. Reaffirms that the natural resources of Namibia are the inviolable heritage of the Namibian people and expresses its deep concern at the rapid depletion of the natural resources of the Territory, particularly its uranium deposits, as a result of their reckless plunder by South Africa and certain Western and other foreign economic interests, in violation of the pertinent resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971 and of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia;

55. Strongly condemns the activities of all foreign economic interests operating in Namibia which are illegally exploiting the resources of the Territory and demands that transnational corporations engaged in such exploitation comply with all the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations by immediately refraining from any new investment or any other activity in Namibia, by withdrawing from the Territory and by putting an end to their co-operation with the illegal South African administration;

56. Declares that all activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia are illegal under international law and that all the foreign economic interests operating in Namibia are liable to pay damages to the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia;

57. Requests once again all Member States, particularly those States whose corporations are engaged in the exploitation of Namibian resources, to take all appropriate measures, including legislation and enforcement action, to ensure the full application of, and compliance by all corporations and individuals within their jurisdiction with, the provisions of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia;

58. Declares that, by their depletive exploitation of natural resources and continued accumulation and repatriation of huge profits, the foreign economic, financial and other interests operating in Namibia constitute a major obstacle to its independence;

59. Calls upon the Governments of all States, particularly those whose corporations are involved in the mining and processing of Namibian uranium, to take all appropriate measures in compliance with United Nations resolutions and decisions and Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, including the practice of requiring negative certificates of origin, to prohibit State-owned and other corporations, together with their subsidiaries, from dealing in Namibian uranium and from engaging in any uranium-prospecting activities in Namibia;

60. Urges the United Nations Council for Namibia, in its capacity as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, to consider the promulgation of additional decrees and other legislation in order to protect and promote the interest of the people of Namibia and to implement effectively such legislation;

61. Requests the Governments of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which operate the Urenco uranium-enrichment plant, to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the Treaty of Almelo, which regulates the activities of Urenco;

62. Calls upon all specialized agencies, in particular the International Monetary Fund, to terminate all collaboration with and assistance to the racist régime of South Africa, since such assistance serves to augment the military capability of the Pretoria régime thus enabling it not only to continue the brutal repression in Namibia and South Africa itself, but also to commit blatant aggression against independent neighbouring States;

63. Reiterates its request to all States, pending the imposition of mandatory sanctions against South Africa, to take legislative, administrative and other measures unilaterally and collectively, as appropriate, in order effectively to isolate South Africa politically, economically, militarily and culturally, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions ES-8/2 and 36/121 B, and 37/233 A of 20 December 1982;

64. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in implementation of paragraph 15 of General Assembly resolution ES-8/2 and of the relevant provisions of Assembly resolutions 36/121 B and 37/233 A, to continue to monitor the boycott of South Africa and to submit to the Assembly at its fortieth session a comprehensive report on all contacts between Member States and South Africa, containing an analysis of the information received from Member States and other sources on the continuing political, economic, financial and other relations of States and their economic and other interest groups with South Africa and of measures taken by States to terminate all dealings with the racist régime of South Africa;

65. Requests all States to co-operate fully with the United Nations Council for Namibia in the fulfilment of its task concerning the implementation of General Assembly resolutions ES-8/2, 36/121 B and 37/233 A and to report to the Secretary-General by the fortieth session of the Assembly on the measures taken by them in the implementation of those resolutions;

66. Declares that the liberation struggle in Namibia is a conflict of an international character in terms of article 1, paragraph 4, of Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and, in this regard, demands that the Conventions and Additional Protocol I be applied by South Africa, and in particular that all captured freedom fighters be accorded prisoner-of-war status as called for by the Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War and Additional Protocol thereto;

67. Declares that South Africa's defiance of the United Nations, its illegal occupation of the Territory of Namibia, its war of repression against the Namibian people, its persistent acts of aggression against independent African States, its policies of apartheid and its development of nuclear weapons constitute a serious threat to international peace and security;

68. Strongly urges the Security Council, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to respond positively to the overwhelming demand of the international community by immediately imposing comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country, as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations;

69. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 39/50 A

12 December 1984 Meeting 97 1280-25 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/39/24); agenda item 29.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Also on 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 39/50 B by recorded vote.

Implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978)

The General Assembly,

Indignant at South Africa's refusal to comply with Security Council resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976, 431(1978) of 27 July 1978, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 439(1978) of 13 November 1978, 532(1983) of 31 May 1983 and 539(1983) of 28 October 1983 and at its manoeuvres aimed at gaining international recognition for illegitimate groups which it has installed in Namibia, and which are subservient to Pretoria's interests, in order to maintain its policies of domination and exploitation of the people and natural resources of Namibia,

Reaffirming the imperative need to proceed without any further delay with the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978), which, together with Council resolution 385(1976), is the only basis for a peaceful settlement of the question of Namibia,

Condemning the attempts by South Africa and the United States of America to continue to deny the Namibian people their inalienable right to self-determination and independence by linking the independence of Namibia with totally irrelevant and extraneous issues,

Reaffirming that the Cuban forces are in Angola by a sovereign act of the Government of Angola, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, and that the attempts to link their presence in that country with Namibia's independence constitute interference in the internal affairs of Angola,

Reaffirming that the only parties to the conflict in Namibia are, on the one hand, the Namibian people represented by the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative, and, on the other, the racist régime of South Africa, which illegally occupies Namibia,

Recalling its request to the Security Council, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to respond positively to the overwhelming demand of the international community by immediately imposing comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter;

Recalling its call upon all States, in view of the threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country in accordance with the provisions of the Charter;

Taking note of the further reports of the Secretary-General dated 19 May 1983, 29 August 1983 and 29 December 1983 concerning the implementation of Security Council resolutions 435(1978) and 439(1978) on the question of Namibia;

1. Strongly condemns South Africa for obstructing the implementation of Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983) and 539(1983) and for its manoeuvres, in contravention of those resolutions, designed to consolidate its colonial and neo-colonial interests at the expense of the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people for genuine self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

2. Reaffirms the direct responsibility of the United Nations for Namibia pending its achievement of genuine self-determination and national independence;

3. Reiterates that Security Council resolution 435(1978), in which the Council endorsed the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, is the only basis for a peaceful settlement of the question of Namibia and demands its immediate and unconditional implementation without qualification, modification or amendment or the introduction of extraneous and irrelevant issues such as "linkage", "parallelism" or "reciprocity" insisted upon by the United States of America and South Africa;

4. Strongly condemns racist South Africa for sabotaging the Namibian independence talks held in 1984 at Lusaka and Mindelo by insisting on the notorious "linkage" pre-condition and introducing new insidious subterfuge as alternatives to Security Council resolution 435(1978);

5. Condemns the continuing attempts by racist South Africa to set up puppet political institutions and impose an "internal settlement" in Namibia, in defiance of United Nations resolutions and decisions, and, in this context, condemns and rejects the puppet "Multi-Party Conference" as the latest in a series of political stratagems through which Pretoria attempts to impose a neo-colonial settlement in Namibia;

6. Emphasizes once again that the only parties to the conflict in Namibia are, on the one hand, the Namibian people represented by the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative, and, on the other, the racist régime of South Africa, which illegally occupies Namibia;

7. Demands that South Africa urgently comply fully and unconditionally with the resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978) and subsequent resolutions of the Council relating to Namibia;

8. Firmly rejects and condemns the persistent attempts by the United States of America and South Africa to establish a linkage or parallelism between the independence of Namibia and any extraneous and irrelevant issues, in particular the presence of Cuban forces in Angola, and emphasizes unequivocally that all such attempts are designed to delay the decolonization process in Namibia and that they constitute interference in the internal affairs of Angola;

9. Demands that racist South Africa and the United States Administration desist from their reprehensible positions in order to allow Namibia to attain its long overdue independence;

10. Calls upon all States to condemn and reject any attempt to link the independence of Namibia with extraneous and irrelevant issues;

11. Expresses its dismay at the fact that the Security Council has been prevented by its three Western permanent members from adopting effective measures against South Africa in the discharge of its responsibilities for the maintenance of international peace and security, and considers that comprehensive and mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations would ensure South Africa's compliance with the decisions of the United Nations;

12. Requests the Security Council to exercise its authority with regard to the implementation of its resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 532(1983) and 539(1983) so as to bring about the independence of Namibia without further delay, and to act decisively against any dilatory manoeuvres and fraudulent schemes of the South African administration in Namibia aimed at frustrating the legitimate struggle of the Namibian people for independence;

13. Urges the Security Council to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against the racist régime of South Africa under Chapter VII of the Charter, in order to ensure the total cessation of all co-operation with that régime, particularly in the military and nuclear fields, by Governments, corporations, institutions and individuals;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 39/50 B

12 December 1984 Meeting 97 129-0-25 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/39/24): agenda item 29.

Financial implications: ACABQ, A/39/7Add.13 & Corr.1; 5th Committee, A/39/813; S-G, A/39/C.5/70 & Add.1 & Corr.1.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 15, 19; 5th Committee 46; plenary 78-84, 86, 94, 97.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

After the drafts recommended by the Council for Namibia were introduced, the United States, stating that direct and inaccurate references to particular Member States in the texts were contrary to the principles of civility and fairness, put forward amendments to a number of paragraphs of the two texts which were rejected by separate recorded votes.

Prior to the votes, the Assembly had decided, as suggested by Guyana, that, to be adopted, the amendments would require a two-thirds majority, since under Article 18 of the Charter of the United Nations they were considered an important question.

Under the proposed amendments to resolution 39/50 A, changes would have been made to five paragraphs. In the seventeenth preambular paragraph, the reference to the United States veto would have been deleted (the vote was 55 to 65, with 25 abstentions); similarly, in the twentieth preambular paragraph, the references to the United States and Israel would have been omitted (57 to 63, with 22 abstentions). By the proposed amendment to paragraph 21, the Assembly would have rejected attempts by South Africa to establish linkage between Namibia and extraneous issues, rather than attempts by South Africa and the United States to do so (56 to 60, with 29 abstentions). Paragraph 38, by which the Assembly denounced the establishment of a liaison office of the United States in Windhoek, would have been omitted (45 to 65, with 32 abstentions). Finally, the mention of Israel in paragraph 49 would also have been deleted (54 to 66, with 23 abstentions).

The United States also proposed amendments to resolution 39/50 B, by which mention of it would have been removed. The proposed change to the third preambular paragraph was rejected by a vote of 58 in favour, 60 against and 30 abstentions. The change to paragraph 3 was rejected by 53 to 67, with 27 abstentions; the proposal on paragraph 8 was defeated by 55 to 62, with 30 abstentions; and the proposal on paragraph 9 was rejected by 59 to 54, with 30 abstentions.

Countries explained their general reservations on the five resolutions on Namibia (39/50 A-E); in addition, some made specific comments on certain provisions of the five texts.

Most of those expressing reservations objected to the selective or arbitrary singling out of certain States or groups of States for condemnation. Argentina, Australia, Austria, Burma, the Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Denmark (for the five Nordic countries), Honduras, Ireland (for the EEC countries), Japan, Liberia, Malawi, the Netherlands, Peru, Portugal, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Turkey and Vanuatu made such statements. Chad, for example, did not think that condemnation by name would facilitate a solution and believed it would be judicious not to discourage those States which, like the United States, were approaching South Africa in order to induce it to grant independence to Namibia. Liberia considered those paragraphs arbitrarily singling out a few countries for exposure, criticism and condemnation, while deliberately shielding others which were co-operating with South Africa, to be divisive and self-defeating. Senegal favoured most of the proposed amendments because it believed that objectivity and credibility required that condemnations be total rather than selective and that the texts would remain valid in the absence of selectivity. The Bahamas felt that name-calling was sometimes necessary, but repetitious and inconsistent references tended to compromise the balance of the texts and their possible future efficacy.

Brazil, Portugal, Senegal and Vanuatu had objections to some of the language in the texts. Brazil said that certain paragraphs used language which could not be considered as a positive contribution to the objective of achieving Namibia's independence. Ireland (for the EEC countries), Liberia, Malta and Vanuatu regretted that the drafters had not attempted to achieve a consensus. Vanuatu added that independence could be achieved with the support of a broad international constituency.

Reservations were expressed by Austria, Chile and Denmark (for the Nordic countries) about the Assembly making recommendations on measures that fell within the competence of the Security Council. In that regard, several countries raised objections to the Assembly's request that States, pending the imposition of mandatory sanctions against South Africa, take such measures to isolate it. Lesotho had difficulties with those paragraphs which invoked Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter, dealing with action with respect to threats to and breaches of the peace, and acts of aggression. Because of its geographical predicament and its belief in the policy of contact and dialogue, Malawi was unable to support the policy of isolating South Africa and sanctions against it; similarly, Swaziland said it had reservations on economic sanctions. Mozambique supported the imposition of sanctions, but it was not in a position to do so itself. The Netherlands did not agree with the call for the total isolation of South Africa because such measures would run counter to the objective of seeking international agreement on Namibia's independence. Belgium, too, was against breaking off all relations.

Australia, Austria, Belgium, Denmark (for the Nordic countries), Ireland (for the EEC) and the Netherlands objected to the references to SWAPO as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people since that organization had not been so elected. According to Austria, the Assembly should not prejudge the free and democratic political expression of the Namibian people.

Australia, Belgium, Denmark (for the Nordic countries), Ireland (for the EEC), the Netherlands and Swaziland did not accept armed struggle as a means to independence. The Nordic countries opposed endorsing armed struggle since they supported peaceful solutions to international problems; for the same reason, they could not support calls for military assistance to SWAPO. Australia, Chile and the Netherlands were opposed to excluding South Africa from international organizations to pressure it to accept Namibia's independence. Australia pointed out that it was through such membership that South Africa was confronted with the international opposition to its unacceptable policies in relation to apartheid and Namibia. Chile believed the mention of technical financial bodies was counter to their constitutional autonomies, which were based on purely technical considerations.

Concerns about the financial implications of the resolutions were expressed by Denmark (for the Nordic countries), the Federal Republic of Germany and Ireland (for the EEC).

Canada, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States—the Western contact group—said they abstained on all five resolutions (39/50 A-E) because they might be involved in future negotiations concerning implementation of resolution 435(1978)<sup>(5)</sup> and did not want to prejudge the outcome of any such negotiations.

Ireland (for the EEC) said the texts did not take fully into consideration efforts which the Ten had supported, such as those of the Secretary-General, aimed at bringing about a solution to the question in accordance with resolution 435(1978). Malta said that its positive votes on the texts did not imply that it was in full accord with every provision, particularly resolution 39/50 A.

Several other countries mentioned reservations regarding specific paragraphs in resolution 39/50 A.

In regard to the seventeenth preambular paragraph, the United States said it was objectionable that the argument was made that, as a result of its veto to defeat sanctions against South Africa, armed aggression against Angola continued; that the United States was the direct cause of that aggression was not true; also, successful efforts undertaken by the United States to achieve an end to the South African intervention were ignored. The United States also disagreed with paragraph 38 by which the Assembly denounced the establishment of the liaison office at Windhoek since that office was opened as a direct result of the Angola-South Africa Lusaka agreements so that United States representatives could participate in the Joint Monitoring Commission at the request of the parties in order to facilitate the withdrawal of South African troops from southern Angola (see p. 184); the office was in no way accredited to the South African Government or to the authorities in Namibia and was entirely consistent with United Nations resolutions.

Angola opposed all the United States amendments, particularly that in paragraph 38 of resolution 39/50 A, as it rejected the allegation that there was any kind of understanding with the United States to establish the so-called liaison office.

The Bahamas expressed reservations about the seventeenth preambular paragraph because it called into question the Security Council's rules and procedures; its vote against the amendment to paragraph 38 was determined by its belief that until Namibia achieved independence no foreign Government should establish any representative office in that country, particularly since Namibia was being administered by the Council for Namibia.

Chile objected to bringing to the Assembly, in respect of the Namibia question, accusations that would be better placed in the context of the East-West conflict to be debated in other forums; a case in point was paragraph 14, which it said was selective with regard to the general responsibility that Security Council members bore for the maintenance of international peace and security. Reservations were expressed by Turkey about references to the Western countries in the seventeenth, twentieth and twenty-third preambular paragraphs and in paragraphs 14, 21 and 49.

Among those expressing specific reservations about provisions of resolution 39/50 B, Belgium said that it could not accept the unjustified attacks on the United States and the criticism directed at other Western members of the Security Council. Similarly, Turkey disapproved of the mention by name of a Western country and all the countries of that region in the third preambular paragraph and in operative paragraphs 3, 9 and 11. The Netherlands said that the exercise by the Namibians of their right to self-determination and independence should not be impeded because of the situation in a neighbouring country; that independence remained the essential and primary responsibility of the United Nations which must take precedence over other considerations.

Earlier, on 3 September, the Assembly, which had decided to consider the Namibia question directly in plenary meetings, decided that hearings of concerned organizations would be held in the Fourth Committee.

By a letter of 2 October to the Chairman of the Fourth Committee,<sup>(39)</sup> the representative of Amnesty International at the United Nations requested such a hearing. The Committee granted that request and heard the representative's statement on 13 November.<sup>(40)</sup>

The Assembly took related action in resolution 39/17, by which it called for the implementation of the declarations and programmes of action on Namibia adopted by international conferences on the question, reaffirmed its condemnation of South Africa's illegal occupation, condemned its oppression of the Namibian people and the militarization of Namibia, condemned its attempts to dismember the Territory, demanded the implementation of the 1981 Assembly resolution calling on States to adopt sanctions against South Africa,<sup>(41)</sup> and urged States and organizations to support the Namibians, through SWAPO, in their struggle to gain independence.

In resolution 39/21, the Assembly encouraged the Council for Namibia in its endeavours towards eliminating apartheid from the Territory and attaining independence for the Namibian people. The Assembly, in resolution 39/91, requested States to withhold all assistance from South Africa until the Namibian people achieved independence, within a united Namibia including Walvis Bay, and to refrain from actions which might imply recognition of the legitimacy of that régime's occupation of Namibia. States were urged to provide technical and material assistance to the Namibian people.

Work programme of the UN Council for Namibia

On 12 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/50 C by recorded vote.

Programme of work of the United Nations Council for Namibia

*The General Assembly,
Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia,*

Reaffirming that Namibia is the direct responsibility of the United Nations and that the Namibian people must be enabled to attain self-determination and independence in a united Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967, by which it established the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

Taking into consideration the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 25 May 1984 at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Bangkok,

Convinced of the need for continued consultations with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of the programme of work of the United Nations Council for Namibia, as well as in any matter of interest to the Namibian people,

Deeply conscious of the urgent and continuing need to press for the termination of South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia and to put an end to its repression of the Namibian people and its exploitation of the natural resources of the Territory,

1. Approves the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia, including the recommendations contained therein, and decides to make adequate financial provision for their implementation;

2. Expresses its strong support for the efforts of the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the responsibilities entrusted to it both as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia and as a policy-making organ of the United Nations;

3. Requests all Member States to co-operate fully with the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the mandate entrusted to it under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 2248(S-V) and subsequent resolutions of the Assembly;

4. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia, in the discharge of its responsibilities as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, shall:

(a) Continue to mobilize international support in order to press for the speedy withdrawal of the illegal South African administration from Namibia in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

(b) Counter the policies of South Africa against the Namibian people and against the United Nations, as well as against the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

(c) Denounce and seek the rejection by all States of all fraudulent constitutional or political schemes through which South Africa may attempt to perpetuate its presence in Namibia;

(d) Ensure non-recognition of any administration or entity installed at Windhoek not issuing from free elections in Namibia conducted under the supervision and control of the United Nations, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolution 439(1978) of 13 November 1978;

(e) Undertake a concerted effort to counter the attempts to establish linkage or parallelism between the independence of Namibia and extraneous issues such as the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola;

5. Decides further that, in pursuance of the aforementioned objectives, the United Nations Council for Namibia shall:

(a) Consult Governments in order to further the implementation of United Nations resolutions on the question of Namibia and to mobilize support for the cause of Namibia;

(b) Represent Namibia in United Nations conferences and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, bodies and conferences to ensure that the rights and interests of Namibia shall be adequately protected;

6. Decides that Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, shall participate as a full member in all conferences and meetings organized by the United Nations to which all States or, in the case of regional conferences and meetings, all African States are invited;

7. Requests all committees and other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council to continue to invite a representative of the United Nations Council for Namibia to participate whenever the rights and interests of Namibians are discussed, and to consult closely with the Council before submitting any draft resolution which may involve the rights and interests of Namibians;

8. Reiterates its request to all specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to grant full membership to Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, so that the Council may participate as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia in the work of those agencies, organizations and institutions;

9. Reiterates its request to all specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet done so to grant a waiver of the assessment of Namibia during the period in which it is represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia;

10. Again requests all intergovernmental organizations, bodies and conferences to ensure that the rights and interests of Namibia are protected and to invite Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, to participate as a full member whenever such rights and interests are involved;

11. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in its capacity as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia, to accede to any international conventions as it may deem appropriate;

12. Takes note of the final communiqués issued by the regional symposia and seminars organized by the United Nations Council for Namibia in 1984;

13. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to promote and secure the implementation of the Bangkok Programme of Action on Namibia;

14. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall:

(a) Consult regularly with the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization by inviting them to New York and by sending high-level missions to the headquarters of that organization, as it deems appropriate, in order to review the progress of the liberation struggle in Namibia;

(b) Review the progress of the liberation struggle in Namibia in its political, military and social aspects and prepare periodic reports related thereto;

(c) Consider the compliance of Member States with the relevant United Nations resolutions relating to Namibia, taking into account the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971;

(d) Consider the activities of foreign economic interests operating in Namibia with a view to recommending appropriate policies to the General Assembly in order to counter the support which those foreign economic interests give to the illegal South African administration in Namibia;

(e) Continue to examine the exploitation of and trade in Namibian uranium by foreign economic interests and report on its findings to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

(f) Notify the Governments of States whose corporations, whether public or private, operate in Namibia of the illegality of such operations;

(g) Send missions of consultation to Governments of States whose corporations have investments in Namibia in order to review with them all possible action to discourage the continuation of such investments;

(h) Contact administering and managing bodies of corporations, tanker companies and other shipping interests involved in the illicit transportation and/or supply of petroleum and petroleum products to South Africa and Namibia;

(i) Contact specialized agencies and other international institutions associated with the United Nations, in particular the International Monetary Fund, with a view to protecting Namibia's interests;

(j) Draw the attention of the specialized agencies to Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 27 September 1974;

(k) Take all measures to ensure compliance with the provisions of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, including consideration of the institution of legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies;

(l) Conduct hearings, seminars and workshops in order to obtain relevant information on all aspects of the situation in and relating to Namibia, in particular, the exploitation of the people and resources of Namibia by South African and other foreign interests, and to expose such activities;

(m) Organize regional symposia on the situation in Namibia with a view to intensifying active support for the Namibian cause;

(n) Prepare and publish reports on the political, economic, military, legal and social situation in and relating to Namibia;

(o) Secure the territorial integrity of Namibia as a unitary State, including Walvis Bay and the offshore islands of Namibia;

15. Decides to make adequate financial provision in the section of the programme budget of the United Nations relating to the United Nations Council for Namibia to finance the office of the South West Africa People's Organization in New York in order to ensure appropriate representation of the people of Namibia at the United Nations through the South West Africa People's Organization;

16. Decides to continue to defray the expenses of representatives of the South West Africa People's Organization, whenever the United Nations Council for Namibia so decides;

17. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to continue to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of its programme of work, as well as in any matter of interest to the Namibian people;

18. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to facilitate the participation of the liberation movements, recognized by the Organization of African Unity, in meetings of the Council away from Headquarters, whenever such participation is deemed necessary;

19. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in the discharge of its responsibilities as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia, to hold a series of plenary meetings in Western Europe during 1985 and to recommend appropriate action to the General Assembly in the light of South Africa's refusal to implement Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to defray the cost of the plenary meetings of the United Nations Council for Namibia and to provide the necessary staff and services for them;

21. Decides that, in order to expedite training of the personnel required for an independent Namibia, qualified Namibians should be given opportunities to develop further their skills in the work of the United Nations Secretariat and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, and authorizes the United Nations Council for Namibia, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, to take, on an urgent basis, necessary action towards that end;

22. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the President of the United Nations Council for Namibia, to review the requirements of personnel and facilities of all units which service the Council so that the Council may fully and effectively discharge all tasks and functions arising out of its mandate;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia with the necessary resources in order for it to strengthen, under the guidance of the United Nations Council for Namibia, the assistance programmes and services for Namibians, the implementation of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, the preparation of economic and legal studies and the existing activities of dissemination of information undertaken by the Office.

General Assembly resolution 39/50 C

12 December 1984 Meeting 97 148-0-7 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/39/24); agenda item 29.

Financial implications: ACABQ, A/39/7/Add.13 & Corr.1; 5th Committee, A/39/813; S-G, A/39/C.5/39/70 & Add.1 & Corr.1.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 4th Committee 15, 19; 5th Committee 46; plenary 78-84, 86, 94, 97.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Paraguay, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, Japan said that its positive vote should not be construed as support for all paragraphs; as in previous years, it had reservations on parts of the Council's report. For the Netherlands, the request to the Council, in paragraph 19, to hold 1985 meetings away from Headquarters would require considerable additional cost in return for a questionable benefit; furthermore, it did not agree that the Council must enjoy the same rights in international organizations as those reserved for States. Belgium also had strong reservations on the financial implications of the resolution.

Information dissemination

In 1984, the Council for Namibia continued its activities aimed at disseminating information to Governments, organizations and directly to the public in order to mobilize world public opinion in support of independence for Namibia.<sup>(2)</sup> In these efforts, the Council acted through its Standing Committee III which co-operated with the Department of Public Information (DPI) of the Secretariat and with NGOs supporting the Namibian cause and opposing apartheid, and disseminated information to leading opinion makers, the media, political and academic institutions and cultural organizations.

The Council organized publicity for its symposia, seminars and missions (see above). Press releases were disseminated to the press, delegations and NGOs at Headquarters and to United Nations information centres (UNICs) around the world, and material was provided to the pool of non-aligned news agencies. On the occasion of Namibia Day (26 August) and the Week of Solidarity with the People of Namibia and Their Liberation Movement, SWAPO (week of 29 October), coverage was provided in press releases, radio and television, and by a special photographic exhibit at Headquarters. For those two events, most UNICs issued press releases and organized activities such as screenings of United Nations films, lectures and round-tables on the United Nations role in the liberation of Namibia, press conferences and television interviews. Pamphlets were issued on the military situation in Namibia and on social conditions there. A series of six 15-minute radio programmes (in English, French and Spanish), entitled Namibia: Update, and three programmes of the feature series Perspective dealing exclusively with Namibia were produced.

The Department continued to give film, television and photo coverage of the Council's activities to news syndicators. It also distributed 25 television news packages and filmed 260 metres of archival material. Some 140 copies of the films Free Namibia and Namibia: A Trust Betrayed were distributed through UNICs and the Office of the Commissioner for Namibia. DPI organized five journalists' encounters in advance of the Council's symposia, seminars and extraordinary plenary meetings. The encounters—discussions between a panel of the Council and 15 journalists and broadcasters approved by the Council, as well as some local and foreign-based journalists—focused on specific aspects of the Namibia question and on the role of the media in generating greater public awareness of the Namibian cause and promoting the implementation of United Nations resolutions on the issue. The President of the Council addressed the Inter-Regional Mass Media Leaders' Round-table on the Problems of Southern Africa (Arusha, 26-28 March), which was attended by approximately 30 media leaders.

As part of its co-operation with NGOs to intensify the efforts of the international community to bring about Namibia's independence, the Council made financial contributions to seven such organizations for their publicity campaigns. DPI held several briefings on developments in Namibia for non-governmental and other organizations.

The Office of the Commissioner for Namibia served as an additional source of information and assisted the Council in many activities, including publication and distribution of United Nations and other materials on Namibia. It prepared the Namibia Bulletin, a quarterly review and analysis of events relating to Namibia issued in English, French, German and Spanish, and Namibia in the News, a weekly newsletter. The Office also gave briefings to support groups on the Council's activities. At the Asia and Pacific Mass Media Leaders' Round Table (Shanghai, China, 30 April-3 May), the Commissioner discussed Namibia and southern Africa. UNICs at Copenhagen, Brussels, Dar es Salaam, Paris and Vienna arranged for press conferences when the Commissioner visited the respective countries.

In its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, the Council emphasized the importance of action by local authorities, trade unions, religious bodies, academic institutions, mass media, solidarity movements and other NGOs, as well as individuals, in mobilizing public opinion, particularly in Western countries, in support of the Namibian liberation struggle. The Council stated it would intensify efforts to mobilize international public opinion and to expose the intransigence of the South African régime and its flouting of United Nations resolutions. The Council appealed to NGOs to increase awareness of their national communities regarding the exploitation of Namibian resources by foreign economic interests (see below), and to insist that they withdraw from Namibia. NGOs were urged to campaign in their countries in support of sanctions in order to isolate South Africa. The Council appealed to the media to intensify the dissemination of information on Namibia's struggle for independence and said DPI should try to reach a wider audience, particularly in countries where information was lacking or available in distorted form.

The Committee on colonial countries, in a decision of 20 August,<sup>(34)</sup> repeated its request that the Secretary-General, in view of the publicity campaign by South Africa to gain support for its occupation of Namibia, intensify his efforts, through all available media, to mobilize world public opinion against South Africa's policy on Namibia and, in particular, to increase dissemination of information on the liberation struggle. The Committee also emphasized the importance of action by all in mobilizing Governments and public opinion, particularly in the Western countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/50 D by recorded vote.

Dissemination of information and mobilization of international public opinion in support of Namibia

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolutions 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966, 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967 and 38/36 A to E of 1 December 1983, as well as all other resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to Namibia,

Taking into consideration the Paris Declaration on Namibia and the report of the Committee of the Whole and the Programme of Action on Namibia,

Taking into consideration the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 25 May 1984 at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Bangkok,

Taking into consideration also the conclusions and recommendations adopted at the Regional Symposium in Support of the Namibian Cause in Latin America, held at San José from 16 to 19 August 1983, the Regional Symposium on South Africa's Illegal Occupation of Namibia: The Threat to International Peace and Security, held at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, from 2 to 5 April 1984,<sup>(42)</sup> the Seminar on the Activities of Foreign Economic Interests in the Exploitation of Namibia's Natural and Human Resources, held at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, from 16 to 20 April 1984, the Seminar on the Efforts by the International Community to End South Africa's Illegal Occupation of Namibia, held at Montreal, Canada, from 23 to 27 July 1984, and the Regional Symposium on International Efforts to Implement Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, held at Geneva from 27 to 31 August 1984,<sup>(43)</sup>

Deploing the continued assistance rendered by Israel and certain Western States, especially the United States of America, to South Africa in the political, economic, military and cultural fields and expressing its conviction that this assistance should be exposed by the United Nations Council for Namibia by all means available to it,

Stressing the urgent need to mobilize international public opinion on a continuous basis with a view to assisting effectively the people of Namibia in the achievement of self-determination, freedom and independence in a united Namibia and, in particular, to intensify the world-wide and continuous dissemination of information on the struggle for liberation being waged by the people of Namibia under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative,

Recognizing the important role that non-governmental organizations are playing in the dissemination of information on Namibia and in the mobilization of international public opinion in support of the Namibian cause,

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the mandate given by the General Assembly to the United Nations Council for Namibia and mindful of the pressing need for the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to intensify its efforts to acquaint world public opinion with all aspects of the question of Namibia, in accordance with policy guidelines formulated by the Council,

1. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in pursuance of its international campaign in support of the struggle of the Namibian people for independence, to continue to consider ways and means of increasing the dissemination of information relating to Namibia;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, in all its activities of dissemination of information on the question of Namibia, follows the policy guidelines laid down by the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information, in addition to its responsibilities relating to southern Africa, to assist, as a matter of priority, the United Nations Council for Namibia in the implementation of its programme of dissemination of information in order that the United Nations may intensify its efforts to generate publicity and disseminate information with a view to mobilizing public support for the independence of Namibia, particularly in the Western States;

4. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to continue to organize journalists' encounters prior to the activities of the Council during 1985, in order to mobilize further international public support for the just struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative;

5. Decides to intensify its international campaign in support of the cause of Namibia and to expose and denounce the collusion of the United States of America, certain other Western countries and Israel with the South African racists and, to this end, requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to include in its programme of dissemination of information for 1985 the following activities:

(a) Preparation and dissemination of publications on the political, economic, military and social consequences of the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa, as well as on legal matters, on the question of the territorial integrity of Namibia and on contacts between Member States and South Africa;

(b) Production and dissemination of radio programmes in the English, French, German and Spanish languages designed to draw the attention of world public opinion to the current situation in and around Namibia;

(c) Production of material for publicity through radio and television broadcasts;

(d) Placement of advertisements in newspapers and magazines;

(e) Production of films, film-strips and slide sets on Namibia;

(f) Production and dissemination of posters;

(g) Full utilization of the resources related to press releases, press conferences and press briefings in order to maintain a constant flow of information to the public on all aspects of the question of Namibia;

(h) Production and dissemination of a comprehensive economic map of Namibia;

(i) Production and dissemination of booklets on the activities of the Council;

(j) Preparation and wide dissemination of a booklet containing resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to Namibia, together with relevant portions of Assembly resolutions on the activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia and on military activities in Namibia;

(k) Publicity for and distribution of an indexed reference book on transnational corporations which plunder the natural and human resources of Namibia, and on the profits extracted from the Territory;

(l) Preparation and dissemination of a booklet based on a study on the implementation of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the Council on 27 September 1974;

(m) Acquisition of books, pamphlets and other materials relating to Namibia for further dissemination;

6. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to organize an international conference at United Nations Headquarters in 1985 with the participation of prominent personalities, parliamentarians, scholars, support groups and others from all parts of the world, in order to mobilize and strengthen further international support for the just cause and heroic struggle of the Namibian people, led by their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to allocate, in consultation with the United Nations Council for Namibia, sales numbers to publications on Namibia selected by the Council;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the United Nations Council for Namibia with the work programme of the Department of Public Information for the year 1985 covering the activities of dissemination of information on Namibia, followed by periodic reports on the programmes undertaken, including details of expenses incurred;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to group under a single heading, in the section of the proposed programme budget of the United Nations for the biennium 1986-1987 relating to the Department of Public Information, all the activities of the Department relating to the dissemination of information on Namibia, and to direct the Department of Public Information to present to the United Nations Council for Namibia a detailed report on the utilization of the allocated funds;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information to disseminate the list of prisoners in Namibia;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information to give the widest possible publicity and to disseminate information on the commemoration of a century of heroic struggle of the Namibian people against colonial occupation;

12. Requests Member States to broadcast programmes on their national radio and television networks and to publish material in their official news media, informing their populations about the situation in and around Namibia and the obligation of Governments and peoples to assist in the struggle of Namibia for independence;

13. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in co-operation with the Department of Public Information and the Department of Conference Services of the Secretariat, to continue to inform and provide information material to leading opinion makers, media leaders, academic institutions, trade unions, cultural organizations, support groups and other concerned persons and non-governmental organizations about the objectives and functions of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization and also to hold consultations with, and seek the co-operation of, those personalities and institutions by inviting them on special occasions to participate in the deliberations of the Council, and to continue to establish for this purpose a regular and expeditious pattern of distribution of information material to political parties, universities, libraries, churches, students, teachers, professional associations and others falling into the general categories enumerated above;

14. Requests all Member States to commemorate and publicize Namibia Day and to issue special postage stamps for the occasion;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the United Nations Postal Administration to issue a special postage stamp on Namibia by the end of 1985 in commemoration of Namibia Day;

16. Calls upon the United Nations Council for Namibia to enlist the support of non-governmental organizations in its efforts to mobilize international public opinion in support of the liberation struggle of the Namibian people and of their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization;

17. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to prepare, update and continually disseminate lists of non-governmental organizations from all over the world, in particular those in the major Western countries, in order to ensure better co-operation and co-ordination among non-governmental organizations working in support of the Namibian cause and against apartheid;

18. Requests those non-governmental organizations and support groups that are actively engaged in supporting the struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative, to continue to intensify, in co-operation with the United Nations Council for Namibia, international action in support of the liberation struggle of the Namibian people, including assistance to the Council in the monitoring of the boycott of South Africa called for in General Assembly resolution ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981;

19. Decides to allocate the sum of $300,000 to be used by the United Nations Council for Namibia for its programme of co-operation with non-governmental organizations, including support to conferences in solidarity with Namibia arranged by those organizations, dissemination of conclusions of such conferences and support to such other activities as will promote the cause of the liberation struggle of the Namibian people, subject to decisions of the Council in each individual case taken in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization.

General Assembly resolution 39/50 D

12 December 1984 Meeting 97 130-0-24 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/39/24); agenda item 29.

Financial implications. ACABQ, A/39/7/Add.13 & Corr.1; Fifth Committee, A/39/813; S-G, A/39/C.5/39/70 & Corr.1 & Add.1.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 15, 19; 5th Committee 46; plenary 78-84, 86, 94, 97.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

The United States proposed amending the sixth preambular paragraph and paragraph 5 to delete references to itself and Israel. Both amendments were rejected: by votes of 52 in favour to 66 against, with 26 abstentions, and 61 to 63, with 21 abstentions, respectively.

Before the votes, the Assembly had decided that the amendments were important questions and would therefore need a two-thirds majority for adoption (see p. 1040).

Explaining its vote on the text as a whole, Belgium said that the volume of the programme of information dissemination and mobilization was excessive, and that it contained points of view that Belgium did not share. Japan stressed that information to be disseminated must be accurate and fair; it supported close co-operation and co-ordination between the Council for Namibia and DPI so that the latter's facilities would be utilized effectively. Turkey had reservations about the mention of a specific country and group of countries. The Bahamas felt that the language of paragraph 5 failed to show any correlation between the objective thought and the methods to be employed.

UN Commissioner for Namibia

Activities of the Commissioner

The Office of the Commissioner for Namibia continued in 1984 to collect and analyse information on Namibia, including related information on internal political, economic and legal developments in South Africa.<sup>(2)</sup> The Commissioner, through his offices at Headquarters; Gaborone, Botswana; Luanda, Angola; and Lusaka, Zambia; acted to protect Namibian interests by issuing travel documents through the Council for Namibia and by attempts to implement the 1974 Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, banning extraction of those resources without the Council's consent<sup>(12)</sup> (see below). From 1 September 1983 to 31 August 1984, the offices issued 1,472 new and renewed travel and identity documents in Africa, 29 in North America and 16 in Western Europe.

As part of its activities to implement Decree No. 1, the Office arranged briefings for NGOs and educational institutions. In March, a representative addressed the John Jay College of Criminal Justice of the City University of New York on Namibia and the Decree's implementation. Pursuant to a 1982 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(44)</sup> the Office was preparing a reference book on transnational corporations operating or investing in Namibia, to identify foreign commercial and investment practices there and the extent of their exploitation of Namibian resources. It continued work on studies on assistance needs of the front-line States and on economic planning in an independent Namibia. A study analysing the demographic structure and socio-economic characteristics of the Namibian population, including size estimates and growth projections, was completed in May. Concerning the legal situation, the Office prepared: a review of "legislation" promulgated by the illegal administration in Namibia in 1983; a booklet on labour legislation and labour conditions; and a draft booklet on the administration's attempts to devise new "constitutions" from 1968 to 1983.

The Office continued to administer assistance programmes under the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see below), executing 11 projects and preparing project proposals for the Fund's Committee. The Commissioner and his staff met with the SWAPO Co-ordinating Committee on the Nationhood Programme in Lusaka in April 1984 to review the assistance programme for Namibians.

The Luanda Office, which became operational in 1983, served as liaison between the New York Office and SWAPO's provisional headquarters at Luanda. In 1984, the Luanda Office was responsible for 31 projects and was involved in preparing others in consultation with SWAPO and the executing agencies concerned. It facilitated the work of a consultant responsible for a training programme for Namibian broadcasters and assisted in placing Namibians in training programmes in various countries. It also facilitated the travel and participation of SWAPO officials in international meetings and concluded negotiations with Angola regarding the issuance of Council for Namibia travel documents.

The Lusaka Office operated as an administrative office for assistance programmes under the Fund for Namibia, and as a centre for political and information activities in the region. It was responsible for 26 projects, providing support for executing agencies and consultants. From September 1983 to August 1984, several consultancies were completed and three project seminars were held to review draft consultancy reports. Some 63 students completed their training in Zambia, which included labour administration, teacher training and video and cinematography; others continued their training in radio broadcasting, railway operations, soil surveying, labour administration and teacher training.

Implementation of assistance programmes was the main concern of the Gaborone Office, which also continued to monitor developments in southern Africa. It maintained contact with Botswana, SWAPO, UNDP and UNHCR concerning aid to Namibian refugees, particularly at the Dukwe settlement, and also assisted in placing Namibians in educational institutions.

Appointment of the Commissioner

On 14 December,<sup>(45)</sup> the Secretary-General proposed to the General Assembly that it extend the appointment of Brajesh Chandra Mishra as United Nations Commissioner for Namibia for one year beginning on 1 January 1985; he had served in that capacity since 1 April 1982.<sup>(46)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the Secretary-General's recommendation, the General Assembly adopted decision 39/325 without vote.

Appointment of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia

At its 105th plenary meeting, on 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the proposal of the Secretary-General, appointed Mr. Brajesh Chandra Mishra as United Nations Commissioner for Namibia for a further one-year term beginning on 1 January 1985.

General Assembly decision 39/325

18 December 1984      Meeting 105      Adopted without vote
Proposal by Secretary-General (A/39/832); agenda item 17 (j).

Political and military aspects

The Council for Namibia continued in 1984 to monitor the political and military aspects of Namibia. The Council's Standing Committee II, in two April reports, reviewed political developments<sup>(47)</sup> and the military situation.<sup>(48)</sup> In addition, the Secretariat of the Committee on colonial countries issued a July working paper on military activities and arrangements in Namibia impeding its independence<sup>(49)</sup> and another in August which described political developments in Namibia from August 1983 to May 1984.<sup>(50)</sup>

In its annual report,<sup>(2)</sup> the Council said that South Africa sought to entrench its occupation through militarization of Namibia, brutalization of Namibians, and detention and assassination of SWAPO members and supporters. Refusing to co-operate in the 1978 United Nations independence plan for Namibia, South Africa continued to impose on the Namibian people puppet institutions in contravention of that plan. Following the collapse in 1983 of two internal settlements proposed by South Africa,<sup>(51)</sup> a third scheme, known as the Multi-Party Conference (MPC), was sponsored by South Africa as an "internal alternative to SWAPO".

On 16 February, Angola and South Africa held high-level talks at Lusaka, and agreed to set up a joint military commission to monitor the disengagement of forces in southern Angola. Subsequently, the United States established a mission in Windhoek to help monitor the disengagement. On 19 March, Cuba and Angola stated their intention to initiate the gradual withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola as soon as South Africa had withdrawn from Angolan territory, resolution 435(1978)<sup>(5)</sup> had been implemented, South African aggression against Angola had ceased, and Western aid to counter-revolutionary organizations, such as the União Nacional para a Independência Total de Angola (UNITA), was cut off (see also p. 1031). In April and May, the Prime Minister of South Africa reiterated that his Government would not change its demand for the Cuban withdrawal before granting independence to Namibia. Independence talks between SWAPO, the South African Administrator-General of Namibia and a delegation of MPC took place at Lusaka from 10 to 13 May, the first direct encounter between South Africa and SWAPO since the failure of pre-implementation meetings in Geneva in January 1981.<sup>(52)</sup> The Lusaka conference ended without agreement on key issues. On 27 June, the Prime Minister said in South African Parliament that his country remained committed to resolution 435(1978), but added that Cuban withdrawal from Angola was an absolute prerequisite.

According to the Council, the Lusaka talks failed because MPC refused to call for the implementation of resolution 435(1978) and insisted on linking Namibian independence to extraneous issues.

South African forces in Namibia were estimated at 100,000, stationed at approximately 85 to 90 bases. During preparations for attacks against Angola, additional troops were moved into the Territory. On 28 March, South Africa announced a 21.4 per cent increase in military spending for 1984. For the planned 1984/85 budget, the increase would bring military spending to $3 billion out of the total budget of $20.7 billion. The Windhoek Advertiser reported on 23 October that South Africa had made its Defence Act applicable to Namibia, thus imposing conscription into the South African army on all Namibian males between 17 and 55 years of age.

The People's Liberation Army of Namibia (PLAN) continued to mount attacks against South African military installations in Namibia, resulting in the régime's loss of arms and military aircraft. The combat zone covered nearly half of the Territory.

The Council reported that South Africa's nuclear capability had been enhanced and accelerated by the collaboration extended by certain Western States, particularly the United States, and by Israel, through assistance in uranium extraction and processing, the supply of nuclear equipment, and the transfer of technology. The Council quoted press reports stating that in 1984 Israel and South Africa established a ministerial committee to work out an agreement by which South Africa would be supplied with technology for nuclear armaments. (See also p. 140.)

attention of the international community, but detained others. Following its release in March 1983 of Andimba Toivo ya Toivo, the founder of SWAPO, who had been imprisoned for 16 years, South Africa released in May 1984 another 15 SWAPO members who were serving jail sentences and 54 detainees. South Africa admitted it was holding 146 others at the Mariental prison near Windhoek. In June, South Africa detained for a few days 37 prominent leaders and supporters of SWAPO as well as two white lawyers who had supported that organization. Most of them would be tried for violating the Prohibition and Notification of Meetings Act of 1981. There were also numerous cases of "disappearances" and torture of civilian detainees under interrogation.

In its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, the Council denounced South Africa for its illegal occupation, its increasing and large-scale military buildup in Namibia, its use of Namibian territory as a staging ground for launching armed aggression against neighbouring States, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians, its forced recruitment and training of Namibians for tribal armies and its use of mercenaries to carry out internal repression and external aggression. The Council called on States to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries for service in Namibia.

The Committee on colonial countries, on 20 August,<sup>(34)</sup> condemned South Africa for the same reasons and called on States to take the same action. As the Council had done, it condemned military and other collaboration between South Africa and certain Western and other States. On 21 August,<sup>(53)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries, again condemning South Africa for those reasons, deplored that it engaged in military activities and maintained bases in Namibia, and that, in its war against the Namibians, it committed aggression against neighbouring countries. The Committee appealed to States to render moral, political, financial, military and other support to SWAPO to enable it to intensify its struggle for Namibian independence. It stated that the militarization of Namibia had led to forced conscription and to a flow of refugees. The Committee condemned the displacement of Namibians from their homes.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 546(1984) of 6 January adopted after Angola complained of South Africa's aggression, the Security Council condemned South Africa for its bombing, as well as its continuing occupation of parts of Angola, and for its use of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating the attacks.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in decision 39/412, deplored South Africa's military activities and its maintaining military bases in Namibia, and condemned it for its military buildup, the compulsory military service for Namibians, the forced recruitment for tribal armies and the use of mercenaries—calling on States to prevent their use and to provide all kinds of support to SWAPO. It demanded the dismantling of all those military bases and condemned the forcible displacement of Namibians from their homes for military and political purposes. Compulsory military conscription was declared null and void.

By resolution 39/42, the Assembly requested States to end all assistance, including military supplies, to South Africa, which used such assistance to repress the Namibians.

In resolution 39/50 A, it denounced all fraudulent constitutional and political schemes through which South Africa might attempt to perpetuate its colonial domination, condemned its attempts through MPC to circumvent the United Nations independence plan, and declared such manoeuvres null and void. The Assembly welcomed the release of SWAPO leaders as a victory for the international campaign. It declared that all laws proclaimed by South Africa in Namibia were illegal. With regard to the military situation, the Assembly condemned South Africa for the military buildup in Namibia, the imposition of compulsory military service there, the recruitment of Namibians for tribal armies, the use of mercenaries, the forcible displacement of Namibians from their homes, and its use of Namibian territory as a staging ground for launching aggression against neighbouring States. States were called upon to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries for service in Namibia. The Assembly called on all specialized agencies to terminate collaboration with South Africa, since such assistance augmented the military capability of South Africa, thus enabling it to continue repression in Namibia and South Africa and to commit aggression against neighbouring States.

In resolution 39/50 B, the Assembly condemned South Africa's attempts to set up puppet political institutions and impose an "internal settlement" in Namibia, in defiance of the United Nations, and, in that context, rejected the puppet MPC as the latest in a series of political stratagems aimed at imposing a neo-colonial settlement in Namibia.

The Assembly, in resolution 39/50 C, decided that the Council for Namibia would denounce and seek rejection by States of fraudulent schemes by which South Africa might attempt to perpetuate its presence in Namibia; it would ensure non-recognition of any administration installed at Windhoek not issuing from free elections in Namibia conducted in accordance with Security Council resolutions, and counter attempts to link the independence of Namibia and extraneous is-ssues such as the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola.

Economic and social conditions

Foreign investment

The Council for Namibia, in its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action on Namibia included in its 1984 annual report to the General Assembly,<sup>(1)</sup> viewed with concern the increased assistance rendered by major Western countries and Israel to South Africa in several areas, including economic and financial areas, and stated that such assistance constituted a hostile act against the Namibian people and the front-line States. The Council demanded that an immediate end be put to such assistance and called on the international community to intensify efforts for South Africa's complete isolation.

The Council's Standing Committee II, in an April report on the activities of foreign economic interests operating in Namibia,<sup>(2)</sup> described recent international action against such interests and stated that the campaign against economic co-operation with South Africa had grown rapidly. The campaign had sought the support of church, university and community groups in promoting action by stockholders in favour of disinvestment in South African interests, as well as boycotts of community banks and other firms doing business with South Africa. Most observers, the Council said, felt that disinvestment had proved a particularly effective way to organize church and university groups. In disregard of the international campaign and of United Nations resolutions against South Africa and other foreign economic interests operating illegally in Namibia, certain Western nations continued to maintain wide-ranging economic interests in Namibia and South Africa. The unwillingness on the part of those countries to prevent the activities of transnational corporations (TNCs) and their subsidiaries operating in Namibia had contributed to the illegal exploitation of the Territory's natural and human resources (see below), it said.

The mining and agricultural sectors (see below) provided the major portion of Namibia's gross domestic product (GDP). Namibia's commercial and manufacturing sectors produced 10 to 15 per cent of GDP. All sectors were completely dominated by South Africa and other foreign economic interests. The manufacturing sector comprised fewer than 300 enterprises, accounted for under 5 per cent of GDP and employed 10 per cent of the workforce. The South African presence in the manufacturing and commercial sectors was strong, and foreign interests held direct and indirect interests, mainly in mining, but also in such areas as property, building, drilling, freight services, insurance and banking and trade. Financing was mainly generated in South Africa. Decades of foreign economic investment in Namibia and the magnitude of profits had encouraged South Africa's intransigence with regard to Namibia's independence. By their operations in Namibia, TNCs supported South Africa, thereby reinforcing and perpetuating its occupation of Namibia. South Africa did not require TNCs in Namibia to reinvest any part of their profits in the Territory for development purposes. The bulk of profits were repatriated to foreign shareholders, resulting in a huge gap between the Territory's GDP, the total value of goods and services produced, and gross national product (GNP), the total value of products after foreign payments were made.

In an August working paper on Namibia,<sup>(3)</sup> the secretariat of the Committee on colonial countries stated that the economic distortions created in Namibia by years of colonial domination, by the ravages of South African and other foreign economic interests and by South Africa's war of attrition against the people had left the Territory's economy in a state of near collapse. The Territory's rich resources were exclusively controlled by South Africa and other foreign economic interests. Some studies showed that as much as 60 per cent of Namibia's GDP was appropriated as company profits before taxes. As a result, Namibia continued to suffer an economic decline—recent GDP figures showed negative growth rates while administrative expenditures by the illegal administration of the Territory continued to increase. In the Territory's 1983/84 budget, 75 per cent of total funds were allotted for administrative expenditures which included the military and police.

The secretariat, in another working paper on Namibia,<sup>(4)</sup> gave an overview of the Namibian economy and the activities of foreign economic interests in the Territory. Stating that South Africa's economic grip on Namibia was a stranglehold, the secretariat noted that South Africa owned the rail-transport system, the airline and the communication network, it supplied the Territory's oil and coal, and most of the civil servants were South Africans. Two thirds of the Territory's imports originated in South Africa and nearly half of its imports from other countries were routed through that country. As in previous years, Namibia had to borrow to balance its 1983/84 budget. The borrowing rate equalled 15 per cent of its GDP; if the trend continued, Namibia's external debt would, by 1987, equal its GDP, making it one of the most indebted countries in the world. Capital outflow to South Africa amounted to about 20 per cent of its GDP and nearly a third of its 1983/84 budget. The disparities between social expenditure for blacks and whites continued; for example, the white minority, which comprised 7 per cent of the population, received over 50 per cent of the 1983 drought aid.

The secretariat said that foreign economic interests, which were lured to Namibia because of unusually high profits made possible by abundant cheap, enslaved labour under South Africa's apartheid system, conducted their operations under licences issued by South Africa.

In order to obtain information on the exploitation of the Namibian people and resources by South Africa and other foreign economic interests and to expose such activities, the Council for Namibia conducted the Seminar on the Activities of Foreign Economic Interests in the Exploitation of Namibia's Natural and Human Resources (Ljubljana, 16-20 April).<sup>(1)</sup> The seminar was also intended to mobilize international public opinion in support of United Nations demands that foreign economic, financial and other interests operating in Namibia refrain from new investments or activities there, withdraw from the Territory and end their co-operation with the South African administration.

Among its recommendations, the seminar said the Council should commission an investigation into the role of the mineral resources of South Africa and Namibia in the economies of the importing countries and the part played by TNCs in exploiting those resources. The Council was urged to stimulate further research on strategic shipping links with Namibia, compile legislation from countries which adhered to the oil embargo and publish a list of tankers and oil companies which had been involved in shipping oil to Namibia and South Africa. It also recommended that action be taken in national courts of certain States which permitted their TNCs to plunder Namibia's natural resources. Governments, specialized agencies, trade unions and other organizations were urged to expand their support to the National Union of Namibian Workers so that it might resist the growing exploitation of labour by South Africa and the TNCs.

Japan, in a note verbale of 13 September to the President of the Council,<sup>(5)</sup> protested the seminar's recommendation that the Council urge Japan to stop the purchase of Namibian uranium by Japanese companies. Japan said it had published in the official Japanese trade bulletin its recognition of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, adopted by the Council in 1974 to prevent the exploitation of Namibia's resources;<sup>(6)</sup> since then, there had been no official record of Namibian uranium having been imported into Japan (see also p. 1031).

On 20 August<sup>(7)</sup> and again on 21 August,<sup>(8)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries also took action on foreign investment in Namibia. The Committee condemned South African and other foreign economic interests exploiting and plundering the Territory's human and natural resources. It reaffirmed that all such resources were the heritage of the people, and condemned South Africa's exploitation, including its extension of the territorial sea, its proclamation of an economic zone off the coast of Namibia and its exploitation of marine resources. It demanded that States whose TNCs were operating in Namibia comply with United Nations resolutions, withdraw all investments from Namibia and end co-operation between those TNCs and the South African administration.

The Committee also called on States to terminate any investments in Namibia or loans to South Africa and to refrain from promoting trade or other economic relations with that country. It declared that all activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia were illegal and that South Africa and those interests were liable to pay damages to its future lawful Government.

In December, the General Assembly also took action on foreign economic interests in Namibia. In resolution 39/42, it called on States to terminate any investments in Namibia or loans to South Africa and to refrain from promoting trade or economic relations with it. The Assembly also declared the activities of such interests illegal and that they were liable for damages to the future Namibian Government. In resolution 39/50 C, the Assembly decided on the work programme of the Council for Namibia, which included: considering policies to counter the support which foreign economic interests gave to the South African administration; notifying States whose corporations operated in Namibia of their illegality; sending missions to consult those Governments to discourage the continuation of investments; contacting international organizations with a view to protecting Namibia's interests, and drawing their attention to Decree No. 1 to protect its natural resources;<sup>(6)</sup> ensuring compliance with the Decree, including consideration of legal proceedings in domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies; and conducting hearings, seminars and workshops to obtain information on the exploitation of the Namibian people and resources and to expose such activities.

Natural resources

Activities of the Council for Namibia. The Council for Namibia, in its annual report,<sup>(1)</sup> described the exploitation of Namibia's natural resources by foreign economic interests, and, as requested by the Assembly in 1983,<sup>(9)</sup> recommended policies to counter their support to the illegal South African administration. The Council based its findings on the April report of its Standing Committee II.<sup>(2)</sup> According to the Council, Western-based TNCs and other interests continued to exploit, in collaboration with South Africa, the natural resources, despite repeated United Nations resolutions and the Council's 1974 Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia,<sup>(6)</sup> banning the exploitation of those resources without the Council's permission. Namibia's rich natural resources (including uranium, diamonds, copper, lead, zinc, aluminium, silver, gold, pyrite, tin, vanadium, tungsten, manganese, coal, iron, platinum and other metals, as well as agricultural and fishery products) were controlled by South Africa and other foreign economic and financial interests, thereby causing an unbalanced and precarious economic structure.

Although mining constituted almost half of the Territory's total GDP, it employed only 10 per cent of the labour force. Commercial agriculture provided a lucrative income for some 5,000 white farmers who produced more than 95 per cent of the marketed agricultural output. Subsistence agriculture constituted virtually the only economic activity for the indigenous population and its share of the total marketed agricultural output was 2.5 per cent. The agricultural sector contributed about 14 per cent to the GDP and 20 per cent to exports. In the past, Namibia's fish resources were economically significant, but exploitation by South African and other foreign economic interests had seriously depleted those resources, resulting in the loss of several thousand jobs.

The gap between Namibia's GDP and GNP indicated the extent of exploitation. Over 60 per cent of Namibia's GDP was appropriated as company profits before taxes. Foreign economic interests involved in exploiting Namibia's resources included some of the world's largest corporations and financial institutions from South Africa, Western Europe and North America—all licensed by South Africa. They were attracted to Namibia because of the unusually high profits made possible by South Africa's apartheid system, which provided abundant cheap labour.

In the mining sector, which contributed almost half of the GDP and nearly 90 per cent of exports, four corporations—two mostly South African owned, one United States owned and another mostly British owned—accounted for about 95 per cent of mineral production and exports and held approximately 80 per cent of the Territory's mineral assets. Diamond production and exports were controlled by South Africa through the Diamond Board of Namibia and marketed through the De Beers Central Selling Organization, which buffered market fluctuations through stockpiling and selective sales. A wide range of base metals and other precious metals made up 20 per cent of the total output of the mining sector.

For more than a decade, Namibia's reserves of uranium, estimated to be among the largest in the world, had attracted foreign mining interests. South Africa, in particular, sought to maintain its control over the Territory's uranium deposits. The only active uranium mine in Namibia was operated by a consortium of Western and South African firms incorporated in 1970, Rössing Uranium, Ltd. United States companies were prospecting for uranium.

In the agricultural sector, white farmers owned and managed the most important commercially oriented agricultural activities, namely, cattle raising, dairy farming and the production of caracul pelts (a valuable type of sheep's fleece), producing over 97 per cent of the total marketed agricultural output. The main market for beef was South Africa with its Meat Board setting quotas for Namibian exports. The fishing industry was also controlled by South Africa.

The Council, in its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action adopted on 25 May, reaffirmed that the natural, including marine, resources of Namibia were the inviolable heritage of its people, and in that regard, underscored the importance of implementing Decree No. 1. It said that the rapid depletion of the resources, as a result of their illegal plunder by South Africa and other foreign economic interests, was a threat to the integrity and prosperity of an independent Namibia. Calling on corporations to terminate such activities, the Council urged Governments to ensure the cessation of those activities and any new investments in Namibia by corporations under their jurisdiction, as well as their compliance with the Decree. The Council reiterated its resolve to ensure compliance, including by initiating legal proceedings in domestic courts. It reaffirmed that foreign economic interests which were illegally exploiting Namibia's resources were liable to pay reparations to an independent Namibia. Condemning the exploitation of Namibia's resources, including uranium, it reiterated its request to the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom, which operated the Urenco uranium-enrichment plant at Almelo, the Netherlands, to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the 1970 Treaty of Almelo, which regulated Urenco's activities. The Council urged Governments, particularly of those Western States and Israel whose corporations were involved in mining and processing Namibian uranium, to take measures, including requiring negative certificates of origin, to prohibit State-owned and other corporations from dealing in Namibian uranium and from engaging in uranium prospecting in Namibia. The Council stated its intention to consider the feasibility, in the exercise of its rights under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,<sup>(10)</sup> of proclaiming an exclusive economic zone for Namibia.

Council's mission to Western Europe. In 1984, the Council sent a mission to France, the Netherlands, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom (24 April to 12 May), in pursuance of the General Assembly's 1983 decision<sup>(9)</sup> that it should take all measures to ensure compliance with Decree No. 1 on protecting Namibia's natural resources,<sup>(6)</sup> including consideration of legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies. The mission held discussions with NGOs and other groups on ways of implementing the Decree. It sought legal advice on the possibility of the Council's instituting legal proceedings in national courts against TNCs and other business concerns importing or dealing with Namibian goods incompatible with the Decree. It sought clarification on three issues: the legal status in those countries of the United Nations resolutions on Namibia; persons or organizations competent to bring legal action in those countries; and possible procedures for instituting legal action. In July, the mission made recommendations to the Council for action.<sup>(11)</sup>

In France, the mission was informed that the resolutions did not have juridical value under French law, except for those of the Security Council relating to maintenance of peace. It was suggested that indirect enforcement of the Decree could be achieved by bringing it within the purview of international instruments of human rights, or through corporate action. The Netherlands had recognized both the Decree and the competence of the Council to enact it. In the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom, the Decree could not be enforced by the courts since an Assembly resolution was not considered binding. In its recommendations to the Council, the mission strongly advised that the Council clarify the relationship between the Decree and relevant resolutions of the Security Council so as to enhance its effectiveness and enforceability in those countries whose Governments regarded it as a mere recommendation of the Assembly.

Concerning the issue of who was competent to bring legal action, lawyers said that in France legal standing could be given to the Council, the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, NGOs with United Nations consultative status, anyone who advocated the principles of human rights, SWAPO and/or Namibians residing in France. In the Federal Republic of Germany, only the Council, acting on behalf of the United Nations, would have legal standing in its courts. In the Netherlands, such standing would be accorded to either the Council or the Commissioner. In the United Kingdom, there could be reasonable grounds for satisfying the courts that the Council had legal standing, but it was advisable for the United Nations itself and the Council to be joint plaintiffs. The mission said that the suggestion that the Council consider initiating legal proceedings by bodies or persons other than the Council, and without using the Decree as the basis of the proceedings, should be examined, bearing in mind that such a course of action might be interpreted as compromising the legal standing of the Council and/or that of the Decree.

To commence legal action, French lawyers suggested that an investigation be conducted to ascertain what actions stood the best chances of success with regard to the involvement of French corporations engaged in the illegal exploitation of Namibian resources. In the Netherlands, the recommended preliminary procedural step was to obtain from scholars of international law a written opinion on all the issues involved in the implementation of the Decree in that country. The lawyers in the Federal Republic of Germany considered that action could be initiated in the European Court in Luxembourg, which considered alleged illegal acts by corporations in EEC countries, against those buying Namibian uranium or arranging contracts for delivery. Lawyers in the United Kingdom suggested that legal Counsel draft the documentation in order to commence the proceedings, whether in the form of writ or summons or petition, depending on the nature of the proceedings. Possible defendants would include companies in the United Kingdom involved in exploring, exploiting or exporting Namibian natural resources, or companies which imported or distributed such resources.

The mission recommended that any legal action envisaged by the Council for Namibia be brought first in the courts of the Netherlands, since it had recognized the Council and its competence to enact the Decree. Such legal action should initially focus on the exploitation of Namibian uranium. As for the suggestion that legal proceedings be initiated by bodies or persons other than the Council without using the Decree as the basis for such proceedings, this might be interpreted as admission of a certain weakness in the legal standing of the Council and the Decree. The Council called for frequent contact with NGOs in the countries it visited. It recommended that the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia prepare a compendium of all existing reports and studies on the implementation of the Decree.

Symposium on implementation of Decree No. 1. The Council organized the Symposium on International Efforts to Implement Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia (Geneva, 27-31 August) to consider ways of instituting legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies in order to ensure compliance with the Council's 1974 Decree.<sup>(6)</sup> Attended by 13 Member States, 40 participants from NGOs and trade unions, as well as lawyers and parliamentarians, the Symposium came to a number of conclusions and made recommendations to the Council.<sup>(1)</sup>

The Symposium recommended, among other things, that the Council and the Commissioner institute legal proceedings in the Netherlands as soon as possible, and prepare similar action in other countries known to be involved in mining, transporting, processing or receiving Namibian minerals, paying particular attention to Belgium—a Council member. They were also urged to: notify Governments whose national corporations defied the Decree and United Nations resolutions; request States to promote the Decree's implementation; notify each corporation violating it of their intention to institute legal proceedings; consider recommending that the Security Council or the General Assembly request another advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on what measures the Security Council should apply to States refusing to comply with its resolutions and the Decree; and engage experts in those Western States whose corporations were exploiting the resources to compile a list for publication.

The Symposium also recommended that the Council establish a register of profits earned by corporations through their Namibia operations, and to publicize the Decree with the help of public relations experts. It was urged to ensure Namibia's territorial integrity by countering South Africa's claims to the Orange River, Walvis Bay and the offshore islands, and to proclaim an exclusive economic zone for Namibia under the Law of the Sea Convention.<sup>(10)</sup> The Council was also called on to assist trade unions trying to prevent transportation of natural resources originating in Namibia, and to publish a list of tankers and oil companies involved in shipping oil to it.

Activities of the Committee on colonial countries. The secretariat of the Committee on colonial countries, in an August working paper on activities of foreign economic and other interests in Namibia,<sup>(4)</sup> reported findings similar to those of the Council for Namibia. It named some corporations based in Western Europe which operated or invested in Namibia, and noted that they included two of the ten largest mining corporations of the Western world (both of the United Kingdom); two of the largest international banking companies (of the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany); and two of the seven largest Western petroleum companies (one of the United Kingdom and the other a multinational corporation mostly Dutch and British owned). The United States was involved as part owner of mining concerns operating in Namibia. Other North American corporations were involved in the oil and caracul industries. Since 1980, the trend in the activities of foreign economic interests operating in the Namibian mineral sector had been towards maintaining the existing level of direct foreign investment without any appreciable expansion, and staking mining claims and prospecting. A few companies had pulled out of the Territory during that period, resulting in a corresponding increase in South African ownership of Namibian mines and other economic activities.

Action by Committee on colonial countries. On 21 August,<sup>(8)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries condemned South Africa for plundering Namibia's natural resources, for creating an economic structure there dependent on its mineral resources, and for its illegal extension of the territorial sea and proclamation of an economic zone off Namibia's coast. It reiterated that such exploitation by South African and other foreign interests was illegal and contributed to maintaining the occupation régime. The Committee condemned the plunder of Namibian uranium and called on States to comply with Decree No. 1 to prevent corporations from dealing in and prospecting for it.

On 20 August,<sup>(7)</sup> the Committee demanded that foreign exploitation cease and reaffirmed that the natural resources were the inviolable heritage of the Namibians. Noting with concern their rapid depletion as a result of the illegal plunder, the Committee considered it a grave threat to an independent Namibia. It demanded that those States whose TNCs operated in Namibia under the illegal administration of South Africa comply with United Nations resolutions by immediately withdrawing all investments from Namibia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 39/42, the General Assembly condemned the Governments supporting foreign interests exploiting the resources of the colonial Territories, particularly Namibia's marine resources. It called on States to stop investing in Namibia. South Africa was condemned for its plunder, for creating an economic structure in Namibia dependent on its minerals and for the illegal extension of the territorial sea and proclaiming the economic coastal zone. The Assembly declared that all activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia were illegal and that consequently they and South Africa were liable to pay damages to the future lawful Government. States were called on to comply with Decree No. 1, including the requirement of negative certificates of origin, to prevent corporations from dealing in Namibian uranium and from prospecting.

States were also called on to refrain from relations with South Africa and to cease economic and trade relations with it which might support its occupation of Namibia. The Assembly requested the Secretary-General to expose the pillaging of natural resources in colonial Territories by foreign monopolies and, in respect of Namibia, the support they rendered to South Africa.

The Assembly took similar action in resolution 39/50 A, reaffirming that the resources were the inviolable heritage of the people and declaring the illegality of the activities of foreign economic interests. It expressed concern at the rapid depletion of the natural resources, particularly uranium, as a result of plunder by South Africa and certain Western and other foreign interests, in violation of United Nations decisions. Governments were again called on to prohibit corporations from dealing in Namibian uranium. The Assembly requested the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom to have uranium specifically excluded from the Treaty of Almelo, which regulated activities of the Urenco uranium-processing plant. The Assembly demanded that TNCs engaged in exploitation withdraw from the Territory and end co-operation with the South African administration and Member States were requested to ensure compliance with Decree No. 1. The Assembly declared that by their exploitation, the interests were obstructing Namibia's independence.

The Assembly, in resolution 39/50 C on the work programme of the Council for Namibia, decided that it would continue to examine the exploitation of and trade in Namibian uranium by foreign interests, draw the attention of the specialized agencies to Decree No. 1, and take measures to ensure compliance with it, including consideration of instituting legal proceeding in States' domestic courts and other bodies. By resolution 39/50 D, the Assembly requested the Council to include in its 1985 activities distribution of a book on TNCs plundering Namibian resources and on the profits extracted, and a booklet on implementation of the Decree.

Social conditions and exploitation of labour

The Council for Namibia, in its 1984 annual report,<sup>(1)</sup> as well as its Standing Committee II, in April<sup>(2)</sup> and July<sup>(11)</sup> reports, reviewed the social conditions and exploitation of labour in the Territory.

The secretariat of the Committee on colonial countries also described that exploitation in an August working paper on Namibia.<sup>(3)</sup> The Council noted that in Namibia, as in South Africa, the division of the population into ethnic groups (bantus) was the principal means by which the régime sought to perpetuate white power, prevent unity among black Namibians and maintain a pool of cheap labour. The African population had been forced into the poverty-stricken "homelands" or "bantustans". The educational system imposed in Namibia was designed to perpetuate white supremacy, with education for blacks based on the premise that they were to be trained for subservient jobs. Educational facilities for black children were non-existent in some areas and mediocre at best in others. According to available information, $1,500 per year was spent on educating each white child, seven times more than the allocation for each black and "coloured" (mixed race) child.

The health sector was also characterized by gross inequities, with health services for the black majority either rudimentary or virtually non-existent while those available to whites were comparable to that of the best of any country. Many diseases associated with malnutrition resulting from abject poverty and overcrowded living conditions were common among blacks, but almost unknown among whites. Housing was governed by discriminatory laws, and that provided for black Namibians was exceptionally poor. Temporary and makeshift camps and shanties were a prominent feature of black townships, where living conditions were cramped with minimal facilities.

South Africa continued to apply its repressive laws aimed at thwarting the legitimate national liberation struggle of the Namibian people, giving the South African police and occupation forces power to carry out mass arrests, to ban organizations and publications, to detain or deport Namibians without trial, to ban meetings, and to restrict the movement of opposition leaders. The security forces conducted arrests, intimidation, detention, incarceration and murder. Expropriation, war and repression had forced thousands of Namibians to flee to Angola and Zambia. According to 1984 figures compiled by UNHCR, there were some 70,000 Namibian refugees in Angola and 4,500 in Zambia, which had created emergency needs in agriculture, health, education and housing. Namibians in Angola were frequently a target of South African forces based in Namibia who crossed the border into Angola to harass the refugees, operating under the pretext that the camps were SWAPO bases.

In Namibia, the labour force was divided racially; apartheid existed in the conditions of work, wages earned, the right to organize in trade unions and the types of jobs available. The system provided a captive cheap labour force for the white economy. The total black work force was estimated at 500,000, of whom 240,000 were engaged in subsistence agriculture. Of the remainder, about 56,500 worked on commercial farms, 28,000 in mining, 7,500 in the fishing industry, 28,500 in the secondary and 148,000 in the tertiary sectors, and 75,000 in domestic service. Almost half of the non-agricultural labour force excluding whites (about 110,000) were migrant workers on short-term contracts and were mainly from the north. The estimated unemployment level for 1984 was 25 per cent, which did not take into account the agricultural sector where unemployment was exacerbated by the 1983 drought.

Cosmetic changes in racist labour laws introduced by South Africa to placate the labour force and to improve its image abroad had not changed the status of black workers. The requirements of the registration laws for black trade unions had made it almost impossible for them to function, thereby forcing the National Union of Namibian Workers, a country-wide organization affiliated with SWAPO, to operate underground since 1980. Laws prohibited trade unions from pursuing political objectives and the administration had frequently banned union activity.

In the Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, the Council urged Governments, specialized agencies and other organizations to provide material assistance to the Namibian refugees who had been forced to flee into neighbouring States.

International assistance

The Council for Namibia, in its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, included in its 1984 annual report,<sup>(1)</sup> stated that, at the current critical stage in the struggle of the Namibian people for independence, all-round support to SWAPO must be urgently intensified. It urged all States and United Nations bodies to increase political, moral, material, military and financial assistance to SWAPO in that struggle, as well as material assistance to Namibian refugees forced to flee into neighbouring countries. United Nations organizations were urged to give priority to assisting Namibians through SWAPO.

The Council believed that the front-line States' support for the Namibian cause continued to be important in efforts to achieve independence. It deemed it necessary that the international community urgently increase financial, material, military and political support to those States so as to enable them to resolve their own economic difficulties and to defend themselves against South Africa's destabilizing attempts. Reaffirming support for SADCC, it called on States to assist SADCC in promoting regional economic co-operation and development and to reduce the economic dependence of countries on South Africa. NGOs were urged to intensify, in co-operation with the Council, international action in support of the liberation struggle and to increase their support to SWAPO.

The Committee on colonial countries also called for support for the Namibian people. On 20 August,<sup>(2)</sup> it paid particular tribute to the front-line States for their commitment and assistance to the Namibians and SWAPO. It also called on the international community to increase all kinds of support to those States and to assist SADCC. It also urged States and United Nations organizations to support all assistance programmes organized by the Council to benefit the Namibians.

On 22 August,<sup>(3)</sup> the Committee expressed concern that assistance extended so far by United Nations organizations to the colonial peoples, particularly the Namibian people and SWAPO, was inadequate. It noted with satisfaction that SWAPO continued to benefit from programmes established within the framework of the United Nations Institute for Namibia (see p. 1061). It urged the organizations to increase assistance to SWAPO, as well as to the Institute and the Nationhood Programme for Namibia (see p. 1060) and to extend material assistance to the front-line States.

In 1982<sup>(4)</sup> and 1983,<sup>(5)</sup> the General Assembly had requested the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive programme of assistance to the States in question to enable them to become self-reliant. In 1983, he had reported that the basic elements of such a programme were available in the national development plans of those States and in the SADCC programmes, and concluded that since those programmes reflected the judgements of the Governments concerned, additional international assistance to ensure their implementation would be the most realistic approach.<sup>(6)</sup> On 15 October 1984,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that as the Governments concerned had not indicated any change in their positions, his 1983 suggestion continued to be the most appropriate response.

The Assembly, in resolution 39/43, expressed concern that assistance extended by United Nations organizations to the colonial peoples, particularly the Namibians and SWAPO, was far from adequate. It called on United Nations organizations to increase assistance to SWAPO, the Institute for Namibia and the Nationhood Programme, and to extend material aid to the front-line States so that they could support Namibia's struggle and defend themselves against South Africa. In resolution 39/50 E, the Assembly decided that the Council would continue to formulate assistance policies and co-ordinate assistance for Namibia provided by United Nations organizations.

UN Fund for Namibia

Activities of the Fund

The United Nations Fund for Namibia, financed mainly by voluntary contributions, continued to serve in 1984 as the main vehicle through which the Council for Namibia channelled assistance to the Territory. The Council was trustee for the Fund, which became operative in 1972.<sup>(8)</sup> As the Council reported in 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> the Fund's activities were divided into three main programmes: the United Nations Institute for Namibia (see below); the Nationhood Programme for Namibia (see below); and educational, social and relief assistance to Namibians. Expenditures in 1984 from the Fund in the three programmes were: $3,563,147 for the Institute; $1,770,055 for the Nationhood Programme; and $2,188,569 for educational, social and relief assistance.

The first two programmes were set up with particular reference towards future independence, whereas the third programme, which provided individual scholarships under the administration of the Commissioner's Office, emphasized the immediate needs and welfare of Namibians. Financed by the Fund's General Account, it provided assistance for health and medical care, nutrition and social welfare, books and periodicals for Namibian refugee camps and SWAPO offices, and assistance to Namibian representatives at international meetings. During the period from 1 July 1983 to 30 June 1984, 51 new scholarships were approved and 52 students completed their courses. As of 1 July 1984, a total of 124 awards were being used in various fields of study in 11 countries. Vocational training was provided in the following fields: law enforcement, radio broadcasting, cinematography, video techniques, land use for agriculture, journalism and communications, and clerical and transport services. A list of allocations from the General Account and a brief description of the activities under the programme were provided in an April report of the Commissioner for Namibia.<sup>(9)</sup>

In its Bangkok Declaration and Programme of Action, the Council expressed appreciation to Governments and United Nations organizations that had contributed to the Fund and appealed to them to contribute or to increase their contributions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/50 E by recorded vote.

United Nations Fund for Namibia

The General Assembly,

Having examined the parts of the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia relating to the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 2679(XXV) of 9 December 1970, by which it established the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling also its resolution 3112(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, by which it appointed the United Nations Council for Namibia trustee of the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 31/153 of 20 December 1976, by which it decided to launch the Nationhood Programme for Namibia,

Recalling further its resolution 34/92 A of 12 December 1979, by which it approved the Charter of the United Nations Institute for Namibia, and its resolution 37/233 E of 20 December 1982, by which it approved amendments to the Charter,

1. Takes note of the relevant parts of the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia;

2. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall:

(a) Continue to formulate policies of assistance to Namibians and co-ordinate assistance for Namibia provided by the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system;

(b) Continue to act as trustee of the United Nations Fund for Namibia, and, in this capacity, administer and manage the Fund;

(c) Continue to provide broad guidelines and formulate principles and policies for the United Nations Institute for Namibia;

(d) Continue to co-ordinate, plan and direct the Nationhood Programme for Namibia in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, with the aim of consolidating all measures of assistance by the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system into a comprehensive assistance programme;

(e) Continue to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of assistance programmes for Namibians;

(f) Report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the programmes and activities undertaken through the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

3. Decides that the United Nations Fund for Namibia, which comprises the General Account, the United Nations Institute for Namibia Account and the Nationhood Programme Account, shall be the primary source of assistance to Namibians;

4. Expresses its appreciation to all States, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, governmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals that have made contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia to support the activities under the General Account, the activities of the United Nations Institute for Namibia and the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and calls upon them to increase their assistance to Namibians through those channels;

5. Decides to allocate as a temporary measure to the United Nations Fund for Namibia the sum of $1 million from the regular budget of the United Nations for 1985;

6. Requests the Secretary-General and the President of the United Nations Council for Namibia to intensify appeals to Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals for more generous voluntary contributions to the General Account, the Nationhood Programme Account and the United Nations Institute for Namibia Account of the United Nations Fund for Namibia in view of the increased activities undertaken through the Fund, and, in this connection, emphasizes the need for contributions in order to increase the number of scholarships awarded to Namibians under the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

7. Invites Governments to appeal once more to their national organizations and institutions for voluntary contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

8. Requests the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, in order to mobilize additional resources, to formulate, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, a programme of assistance to the Namibian people to be undertaken by means of projects co-financed by Governments and non-governmental organizations;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system, in the light of the urgent need to strengthen the programme of assistance to the Namibian people, to make every effort to expedite the execution of Nationhood Programme for Namibia projects and other projects in favour of Namibians on the basis of procedures which will reflect the role of the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

10. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system that have contributed to the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and calls upon them to continue their participation in the Programme by:

(a) Implementing projects approved by the United Nations Council for Namibia;

(b) Planning and initiating new project proposals in co-operation with, and at the request of, the Council;

(c) Allocating funds from their own financial resources for the implementation of the projects approved by the Council;

11. Emphasizes the need for Namibians to gain practical on-the-job experience in various countries, and appeals to all Governments to make generous contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia to enable Namibians trained under various programmes to be placed in administrations and institutions in diverse countries, particularly in Africa;

12. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Development Programme for its contribution to the financing and administration of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and the financing of the United Nations Institute for Namibia and calls upon it to continue to allocate, at the request of the United Nations Council for Namibia, funds from the indicative planning figure for Namibia for the implementation of the projects within the Nationhood Programme and for the United Nations Institute for Namibia;

13. Calls upon the United Nations Development Programme to raise the indicative planning figure for Namibia;

14. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance provided by the United Nations Children's Fund, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the World Food Programme to Namibian refugees and requests them to expand their assistance in order to provide for the basic needs of the refugees;

15. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system which have waived agency support costs in respect of projects in favour of Namibians, financed from the United Nations Fund for Namibia and other sources, and urges those that have not yet done so to take appropriate steps in this regard;

16. Notes with appreciation that agreement has been reached between the United Nations Development Programme and the organizations of the United Nations system to reduce overhead charges to 3.5 per cent for certain types of project costs financed from the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

17. Decides that Namibians shall continue to be eligible for assistance through the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa and the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa;

18. Commends the progress made in the implementation of the pre-independence components of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to elaborate and consider policies and contingency plans regarding the transitional and post-independence phases of the Programme;

19. Commends the United Nations Institute for Namibia for the effectiveness of its training programmes for Namibians and its research activities on Namibia, which contribute substantially to the struggle for freedom of the Namibian people and to the establishment of an independent State of Namibia;

20. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to co-operate closely with the United Nations Institute for Namibia in strengthening its programme of activities;

21. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, through the United Nations Institute for Namibia, to finalize and publish at an early date a comprehensive reference book on Namibia covering all aspects of the question of Namibia as considered by the United Nations since its inception, in accordance with an outline to be prepared by the Council;

22. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in consultation with the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, to finalize and publish at an early date a demographic study of the Namibian population and a study of its educational needs;

23. Requests the United Nations Institute for Namibia to complete the preparation, in co-operation with the South West Africa People's Organization, the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia and the United Nations Development Programme, of a comprehensive document on all aspects of economic planning in an independent Namibia, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide substantive support through the Office of the Commissioner for the preparation of that document;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia with the necessary resources for the performance of the responsibilities entrusted to it by the United Nations Council for Namibia as the co-ordinating authority for the implementation of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, as well as other assistance programmes.

General Assembly resolution 39/50 E

12 December 1984 Meeting 97 149-0-5 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/39/24); agenda item 29.

Financial implications: ACABQ, A/39/7 Add.13 & Corr.1; 5th Committee, A/39/813; S-G, A/39/C.5/39/70 & Add.1 & Corr.1.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 4th Committee 15, 19; 5th Committee 46; plenary 78-84, 86, 94, 97.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, Japan said that its affirmative vote should not be construed as support for all paragraphs; in regard to the increase in the budget appropriations, Japan, while recognizing and appreciating the role that the United Nations Fund for Namibia was playing, recalled that it was established as a voluntary fund and expressed reservations regarding paragraph 5, which allocated $1 million from the regular budget.

Financing of the Fund

In 1984, 41 States made a total contribution of $4,397,313 to the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see table). In addition to voluntary contributions, the Fund was financed by the United Nations regular budget ($1 million for 1984 as authorized by the General Assembly in 1983<sup>(10)</sup>) and UNDP assistance for projects. For that purpose, UNDP had established an indicative planning figure (IPF) for Namibia ($7,750,000 for 1982-1986).

The Council for Namibia organized several fund-raising missions in 1984: to Denmark, Norway, Finland and Sweden (11 to 18 April); Japan (28 and 29 May); and Austria, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, EEC, Italy and France (13 to 22 June).<sup>(1)</sup> Those Governments recognized the need to prepare the Namibian people for independence and expressed their continuing support for the Council's assistance programmes.

By resolution 39/50 E, the General Assembly called for increased assistance to Namibians through the Fund, and decided to allocate $1 million from the 1985 regular United Nations budget. It requested the Secretary-General and the President of the Council to appeal for more contributions in view of the Fund's increased activities and the need for more scholarships. Governments were invited to appeal to their national organizations for voluntary contributions.

Nationhood Programme

The Nationhood Programme for Namibia, launched by the General Assembly in 1976 to help the Territory prepare for independence,<sup>(11)</sup> continued in 1984 to finance training programmes and surveys of the Namibian economic and social sectors. The Council for Namibia<sup>(1)</sup> reported that during 1983 and the first half of 1984, a new group of students commenced training in the administration of public enterprises, English language, fisheries management and fish processing, labour administration, electricity supply, water supply, pilot training, nursing, shoemaking and leatherwork, and teacher education. In-service training began in truck maintenance, mining and railways operations, and labour administration, and continued in statistics, mining and land use for agriculture. A group of disabled Namibians began six-month training courses in various technical areas. Training continued in geology and mining, maritime economics and management, aircraft maintenance and traffic control, and development planning.

The United Nations Vocational Training Centre for Namibia in Angola, which became operational in 1983,<sup>(12)</sup> could not be staffed by internationally recruited supervisors at the level envisaged because of the situation in the area where the Centre was located. Its Governing Board held its fifth meeting in Angola in May 1984, and took measures to ensure continuous adequate staffing.

All of the surveys envisaged since the inception of the Programme were either completed or were expected to be completed by the end of 1984. Final reports on transport, health, land use, human settlements development, labour legislation and transnational corporations had been distributed to the Council. The reports on civil aviation, telecommunications and a draft harbour survey had been finalized and awaited distribution. Draft reports on agrarian reform, land suitability, protection of food supplies, agricultural education, public administration systems, the criminal justice system and energy supply had been prepared and awaited further discussion.

In resolution 1984/55, the Economic and Social Council requested United Nations organizations to increase assistance to the Namibian people in consultation with OAU and the Council for Namibia, particularly concerning the Nationhood Programme.

The General Assembly, in resolution 38/50 E, decided that the Council for Namibia would continue to act as trustee of the Fund, and in that capacity, administer and manage it. The Assembly requested United Nations organizations to expedite Nationhood Programme projects and others in favour of Namibians based on procedures reflecting the Council's role as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia. The organizations were urged to continue participating in the Programme by implementing projects, initiating new project proposals, and allocating funds from their own financial resources for projects approved by the Council. In that regard, the Assembly urged UNDP to continue to allocate funds from the IPF for Namibia for the projects. The Assembly commended the progress made in implementing pre-independence components of the Programme and requested the Council to elaborate policies and contingency plans for transitional and post-independence phases.

UN Institute for Namibia

Inaugurated in 1976 at Lusaka,<sup>(13)</sup> the United Nations Institute for Namibia continued in 1984 to develop human resources in anticipation of Namibia's independence.<sup>(1)</sup> Open to all persons of Namibian origin who met the requirements of the Institute's 16-member Senate, the Institute held training courses and undertook applied research in various sectors. The Senate, which reported annually to the Council for Namibia, operated on an average annual budget of $4 million financed through the Fund for Namibia. Financial assistance was also provided by UNDP and UNHCR. In 1984, the enrolment totaled 457 students, of whom 183 were new. The curriculum was expanded to include a teacher-training upgrading programme, a special programme for magistrates, a secretarial programme, courses in English, statistics and mathematics. In March, the fifth group of students (92 in 1984) graduated from the Institute with diplomas in management and development studies, thus bringing the total number of graduates to 374.

The Institute's research programme was intended to make available basic documentation for policy formulation by the future Government of an independent Namibia. Studies had been completed and published on human resources requirements, constitutional options, agrarian reform, a language policy for Namibia, a legal system, agricultural economics and a health survey. Studies were under way on development strategy options, the mining industry, an administrative system, trade policy options, monetary policy options, wages and income policy options, the caracul industry and others. The Institute continued its work on a Handbook on Namibia covering various aspects of the question as considered by the United Nations since its inception, and on a comprehensive study on economic planning in an independent Namibia.

In 1984, the Institute's Namibian Extension Unit, which administered an education programme for Namibians whose access to formal education was limited, served some 40,000 Namibian adults and youths in Angola and Zambia.

In resolution 39/59 E, the General Assembly decided that the Council would continue to provide broad guidelines and formulate principles and policies for the Institute. It called on UNDP to continue allocating funds from the IPF for Namibia for the Institute's projects. The Assembly requested the Institute to complete the document on economic planning in an independent Namibia, and requested the Secretary-General to continue providing support for its preparation.

Other UN assistance

UN Educational and Training Programme. In an October 1984 report to the General Assembly,<sup>(14)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that for the 1983/84 academic year, the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa (see p. 190) granted 32 new scholarship awards to Namibians and extended 17. The scholarships did not include awards financed by the United Nations Fund for Namibia.

UNDP assistance. In 1984, UNDP continued to provide assistance to SWAPO through four ongoing projects—three in education and one in health—for a total value of $882,617, according to the UNDP Administrator's March 1985 report on assistance to national liberation movements recognized by OAU.<sup>(15)</sup> The educational projects, all executed by UNESCO, included two aimed at strengthening SWAPO's Namibia Education Centres—the movement's own primary and secondary school system—in its settlements at Kwanza Sul, Angola, and Nyango, Zambia. UNDP assistance went towards the salaries of five Zambian mathematics and science teachers, and living allowances for 48 Namibian teachers at the two settlements. Assistance was also provided to meet the living allowances of support personnel. The third educational project was training for women's role in development, for which courses were organized in teaching, development of co-operatives, nutrition, home economics and handicrafts.

The fourth project was strengthening basic health services, including training, in the two SWAPO settlements, with WHO acting as executing agency. According to the UNDP Administrator, the agency had not been punctual in paying the allowances for the three Namibian doctors and 69 paramedical personnel working in settlements, or in processing fellowship forms for SWAPO candidates.

In response to a 1983 UNDP Governing Council decision,<sup>16</sup> the UNDP Administrator submitted a progress report<sup>17</sup> to the 1984 Council on support costs of projects financed from the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see above). In accordance with the Administrator's recommendation, the Council adopted a 19 June decision<sup>18</sup> by which it expressed appreciation to him and the executing agencies for action taken to treat part of project costs as expenditures against government cash counterpart contributions, took note of agencies' views and those of the Commissioner for Namibia on granting total waiver of such support costs, and noted that the Commissioner intended to continue discussions with agencies with a view to obtaining full waiver.

UNCTAD activities. In 1983, UNCTAD VI, by resolution 147(VI)<sup>(19)</sup> had urged the UNCTAD Secretary-General to co-operate with the Institute for Namibia, through the provision of technical expertise, in preparing a document on economic planning in an independent Namibia. In response, the UNCTAD secretariat approached UNDP to secure the resources, but funds were not available, according to a June 1984 report by the United Nations

Secretary-General.<sup>(20)</sup> On 21 September,<sup>(21)</sup> the Trade and Development Board requested the UNCTAD Secretary-General to implement the 1983 resolution, and urged the UNDP Administrator to provide adequate resources.

Agency assistance. The Secretary-General, in a June 1984 report to the General Assembly,<sup>(22)</sup> transmitted information from the specialized agencies and other United Nations organizations on their assistance to colonial countries (see p. 999), including aid to Namibians. Updated information was included in a 1985 report.<sup>(22)</sup> Some agencies, including FAO and ILO, provided aid through the Nationhood Programme for Namibia. FAO conducted workshops on nutrition and agriculture, provided supplies for a day-care centre, and assisted in agricultural surveys and related policy options. WHO provided training, fellowships, drugs and medical equipment. UNHCR provided $4.3 million for Namibian refugees in Angola for projects including purchase of medicines, basic relief items, vehicles and agricultural goods; an addition to a vocational training centre; construction of a rehabilitation centre for handicapped refugees and school facilities; construction materials for a self-help housing plan and the upgrading of roads; parts to repair vehicles; and scholarships to 386 Namibians at the lower secondary and vocational levels. UNESCO provided training for teachers at all levels, school materials and audio-visual equipment for centres managed by SWAPO.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 1984/55, the Economic and Social Council requested United Nations organizations, in the light of the liberation struggle in Namibia, to do everything possible to increase assistance to the Namibian people, in consultation with OAU and the Council for Namibia, in particular in connection with the Nationhood Programme.

Chapter IV

Other colonial Territories

Conflicts in Western Sahara and East Timor and the sovereignty dispute between Argentina and the United Kingdom over the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) continued to be considered in 1984 by the General Assembly and its Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries).

The Assembly, in resolution 39/40, reaffirming that the Western Sahara question was related to decolonization, again requested Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to undertake direct negotiations for a cease-fire and a self-determination referendum among the people of Western Sahara, under the auspices of the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity. By decision 39/402, it decided to consider the East Timor question in 1985. Meanwhile, the human rights situations in both Western Sahara (see p. 811) and East Timor (see p. 808) were also examined in 1984.

In resolution 39/6, the Assembly again requested Argentina and the United Kingdom to resume negotiations for a peaceful solution to their sovereignty dispute and other differences over the Falkland Islands (Malvinas); it also requested the Secretary-General to continue his good offices mission.

The Assembly adopted resolutions on American Samoa (39/31), Guam (39/32) and the United States Virgin Islands (39/38), under United States administration, and on Bermuda (39/33), the British Virgin Islands (39/34), the Cayman Islands (39/35), Montserrat (39/36) and the Turks and Caicos Islands (39/37), under United Kingdom administration.

A United Nations mission visited Anguilla in 1984, and the Assembly, in resolution 39/39, called on the United Kingdom as the administering Power to intensify its programmes of political education and development assistance in Anguilla. The Assembly noted in resolution 39/30 that another visiting mission had observed an act of self-determination in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands by which a substantial majority of the people voted for integration with Australia. In decision 39/410, it welcomed an agreement by Spain and the United Kingdom to implement their 1980 Lisbon Declaration on Gibraltar by February 1985, including equality of rights, freedom of movement, and negotiation of differences.

It called on the United Kingdom in decision 39/409 to safeguard the interests of the people of Pitcairn, and declared in decisions 39/408 and 39/411 that the possibility of sending visiting missions to Tokelau and St. Helena should be kept under review.

Background information on developments in most of the Territories was prepared for the Committee on colonial countries by the United Nations Secretariat. The Committee, and usually its Subcommittee on Small Territories, considered the situation in each Territory, and made recommendations which were taken up mainly by the Assembly's Fourth Committee.

Topic related to this chapter. General questions relating to colonial countries: information to the United Nations; visiting missions.

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

Communications (January-August). Letters concerning the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) were sent by Argentina, Brazil and the United Kingdom to the President of the Security Council and the Secretary-General between January and August 1984.

Argentina, on 9 January,<sup>(1)</sup> transmitted a press release issued on 3 January noting that the day marked the 151st anniversary of what it called the occupation of the Malvinas by the United Kingdom, and underscoring Argentina's desire that the Malvinas, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands be restored to its jurisdiction. Argentina also reiterated its readiness to open the negotiations which the General Assembly had recommended in November 1983.<sup>(2)</sup>

On 10 February,<sup>(3)</sup> Argentina charged that British aircraft had committed acts of provocation against Argentine fishing vessels, outside a so-called protection zone arbitrarily established by the United Kingdom; on 6 November 1983, a Royal Air Force plane had twice overflown the Api IV, and on 24 December, two British aircraft had twice overflown the Atilio Malvagni.

On 23 July,<sup>(4)</sup> Argentina stated that it had met with the United Kingdom (Berne, Switzerland, 18 and 19 July) in the presence of representatives of Brazil, and had reaffirmed its right of sovereignty over the Malvinas, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands; according to the letter, the United Kingdom would not enter into negotiations on the sovereignty issue.

On 27 July,<sup>(5)</sup> Brazil transmitted a joint communiqué issued by Brazil and Switzerland following the Berne meeting stating that Argentina had reaffirmed it was necessary to establish machinery to discuss the sovereignty question, while the United Kingdom was not prepared to discuss the matter but had advanced several proposals which it said might lend themselves to negotiation; Argentina had replied that it was not prepared to go into those points if the sovereignty question could not be examined.

Referring to the 23 July letter from Argentina, the United Kingdom on 2 August<sup>(6)</sup> declared that the best way to establish more normal relations with Argentina was to discuss practical issues such as resuming commercial relations, restoring air services, and a visit by Argentine next-of-kin to graves on the Falkland Islands, but Argentina was not prepared to negotiate on that basis.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries considered the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) question on 16 and 20 August, hearing statements by the United Kingdom as the administering Power, by representatives of the Falklands Legislative Council, by Argentina and by Committee members. On 20 August,<sup>(7)</sup> the Committee urged the two States to resume negotiations, reiterating its support for a renewed good offices mission by the Secretary-General based on 1982<sup>(8)</sup> and 1983<sup>(2)</sup> Assembly resolutions and deciding to keep the question under review, subject to Assembly directives.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in pursuance of the 1983 Assembly resolution,<sup>(2)</sup> submitted a report in October 1984 on the question.<sup>(9)</sup> He said that he had had extensive exchanges with Argentina and the United Kingdom, including meetings with the President of Argentina and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom as well as their Foreign Ministers. Though the Berne talks (see above) had not achieved the desired progress and it had not yet proven possible to implement the 1983 Assembly resolution, he continued to believe that dialogue and confidence-building measures could help both countries to restore normalcy in the South Atlantic. He stood ready to assist the parties in that process.

Communications (October-December). By a letter of 8 October,<sup>(10)</sup> India forwarded the final communiqué adopted by the Meeting of Foreign Ministers and Heads of Delegation of Non-Aligned Countries to the 1984 General Assembly (New York, 1-5 October) in which they reiterated support for the return of the Malvinas to Argentina, for the resumption of negotiations with the participation of the Secretary-General, and for due regard to the interests of the population of the islands.

On 4 December,<sup>(11)</sup> Argentina transmitted a resolution on the Malvinas question adopted by the Organization of American States (OAS) on 17 November, expressing support for Assembly resolutions requesting the two States to resume negotiations and the Secretary-General to continue his good offices mission and also expressing concern over the lack of progress in complying with those resolutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 November, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/6 by recorded vote.

Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) and having received the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, 2065(XX) of 16 December 1965, 3160(XXVIII) of 14 December 1973, 31/49 of 1 December 1976, 37/9 of 4 November 1982 and 38/12 of 16 November 1983, together with Security Council resolutions 502(1982) of 3 April 1982 and 505(1982) of 26 May 1982,

Reaffirming the principles of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or the threat of force in international relations and the obligation of States to settle their international disputes by peaceful means and recalling that, in this respect, the General Assembly has repeatedly requested the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to resume negotiations in order to find as soon as possible a peaceful, just and definitive solution to the sovereignty dispute relating to the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas),

Observing with concern that, in spite of the time which has elapsed since the adoption of resolution 2065(XX), the prolonged dispute has not yet been resolved,

Aware of the interest of the international community in the settlement by the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom of all their differences, in accordance with the United Nations ideals of peace and friendship among peoples,

Taking note of the communiqué issued by the representatives of the Government of Switzerland and the Government of Brazil at Berne on 20 July 1984,

Reaffirming the need for the parties to take due account of the interests of the population of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 2065(XX), 3160(XXVIII), 37/9 and 38/12,

1. Reiterates its request to the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to resume negotiations in order to find as soon as possible a peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute and their remaining differences relating to the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas);

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his renewed mission of good offices in order to assist the parties in complying with the request made in paragraph 1 above, and to take the necessary measures to that end;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)".

General Assembly resolution 39/6

1 November 1984 Meeting 46 89-9-54 (recorded vote)

20-nation draft (A/39/L.8); agenda item 26.

Sponsors: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Austria, Barbados, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Japan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, Somalia, Spain, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Belize, Dominica, Grenada, Malawi, New Zealand, Oman, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, United Kingdom.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belgium, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Cameroon, Canada, Chad, Denmark, Egypt, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Luxembourg, Maldives, Mauritius, Nepal, Netherlands, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Portugal, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, Vanuatu.

The United Kingdom, Belize, Malawi and New Zealand explained their opposition to the resolution. The United Kingdom said the policy of the current Argentine Government on sovereignty and self-determination did not differ from its predecessors. The text was full of references to negotiations about sovereignty, it said, and, moreover, insinuated that the wishes of the population of the Falkland Islands might be open to negotiation. However, the principle of self-determination applied in the case of the Falklands just as in other cases; the islanders had a Government that they had chosen and had the right to choose for themselves in the future. Belize was not convinced that the text contained elements conducive to a just and lasting solution. Malawi held that the text did not reconcile the two elements in dispute—sovereignty and self-determination. New Zealand opposed the resolution because it believed it did not adequately acknowledge the right of the Falklanders to a say in their future.

Among those that abstained, France was not convinced that the United Nations provided the best framework for the necessary negotiations. The Netherlands felt that the draft contained references prejudging the outcome of the proposed negotiations. A lack of balance of essential elements of the problem in the text was discerned by Belgium. Australia, Chad, Norway and Saint Lucia felt that the interests of the islanders were not adequately served by the text. Greece said its vote was to enhance the appeal that the parties should resume negotiations. The Federal Republic of Germany spoke similarly, adding that the resolution contained several controversial elements. Turkey regretted that a consensus text had not been formulated. The Maldives said that the resolution did not give adequate emphasis to finding a negotiated settlement. Sweden felt it did not explicitly endorse or even refer to the fundamental principle of self-determination. Egypt hoped the two States involved would resume negotiations as soon as possible.

Although it saw the sovereignty of Argentina over the Malvinas as legitimate, Viet Nam said it hoped the parties would resume their talks. Similarly, Mongolia, while sympathizing with Argentina, voted for the resolution in the hope of a peaceful solution.

Earlier, on 31 October, the Assembly adopted without vote decision 39/404. The following petitioners had requested hearings<sup>(12)</sup> and made statements before the Fourth Committee on 30 October:<sup>(13)</sup> Lionel G. Blake and John E. Cheek, members of the Falkland Islands Legislative Council, and Alexander Jacob Betts and Susan Coutts de Maciello, natives of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas).

Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

At its 44th plenary meeting, on 31 October 1984, the General Assembly took note of the report of the Fourth Committee.

General Assembly decision 39/404

Adopted without vote

Oral proposal by President; agenda item 26.

East Timor

Communications. Three notes verbales on the question of East Timor were addressed to either the Secretary-General or the Secretariat in 1984.

On 12 March,<sup>(1)</sup> Portugal stated that it had nothing to add to information it had provided in 1979, as required by Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.

On 3 July,<sup>(2)</sup> Sao Tome and Principe transmitted a statement of 26 January by the Frente Revolucionária de Timor Leste Independente (FRETILIN) on FRETILIN counter-attacks against what were said to be invasions by Indonesian forces; a 16 February letter from the Indonesian-appointed Apostolic Administrator of East Timor on the suffering of the population in several areas from sickness, hunger, lack of liberty and persecution; an appeal by Indonesian bishops for an end to the war; and two press articles—one by the Agence France Presse correspondent in Jakarta, Indonesia, on starvation caused by disruption of food production by military operations, the other by the Lisbon, Portugal, correspondent for major British and Australian newspapers on an Indonesian troop sweep across East Timor.

On 24 September,<sup>(3)</sup> Mozambique transmitted excerpts from a 14 July letter by a Catholic priest concerning events resulting from what was said to be the presence of Indonesian forces in East Timor between January and June and an interview with the former papal administrator of East Timor, published in Newsweek international of 3 September.

Report of the Secretary-General. On 25 July 1984, the Secretary-General submitted a progress report to the General Assembly on his efforts to promote a comprehensive settlement of the East Timor problem.<sup>(4)</sup> The report should have been submitted in 1983, but was not because he did not consider it opportune at that time.<sup>(5)</sup> In September 1983, the Assembly had deferred consideration of the topic until 1984.<sup>(6)</sup> The Secretary-General said that he or Under-Secretary-General Rafeuiddin Ahmed had held consultations with the Foreign Minister of Indonesia and the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Portugal; in addition, a Secretariat team had been formed to explore possible approaches to a settlement. The Secretary-General had requested Indonesia to facilitate the activities of such humanitarian organizations as the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in East Timor. A UNICEF nutrition, primary health care and community development operation had covered 33 villages, with a population of 45,000, and ICRC was carrying out a family reunion/repatriation programme to Australia and Portugal. He said he would continue to try to improve the situation of the people of East Timor, which remained one of his primary concerns, reiterating his readiness to assist in trying to achieve a comprehensive settlement of the problem.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries considered the East Timor question on 13 and 20 August 1984,<sup>(7)</sup> examining the military, human rights and food situations as well as economic, social and educational conditions.

The Committee, after hearing statements by Portugal as the administering Power, Indonesia, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, FRETILIN, Amnesty International and the International League for Human Rights, decided to continue consideration of the question in 1985, subject to Assembly directives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 September 1984, the Assembly adopted decision 39/402 by which it decided to include the East Timor question in its provisional 1985 agenda (see p. 375). It took this action after the General Committee had recommended that the item be deferred.<sup>(8)</sup>

Western Sahara

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. Developments relating to the Western Sahara question were considered by the Committee on colonial countries on 17 August 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> with the Committee hearing statements by a representative of the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (POLISARIO Front), Cuba, Iran, Mali and Sweden. It decided to continue consideration of the question in 1985, subject to General Assembly directives.

Co-operation with OAU. The Secretary-General, in response to a 1983 Assembly resolution,<sup>(2)</sup> submitted to that body a 6 November report on the Western Sahara conflict.<sup>(3)</sup> The Assembly had urged him to co-operate with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and its Implementation Committee on Western Sahara in organizing a referendum on self-determination in the Territory.

The Secretary-General stated that on 6 March he had informed the OAU Secretary-General that he remained ready to assist and co-operate with OAU and, on 25 July, had requested information on OAU activities related to the question. Replying on 22 October, the OAU secretariat stated that the Implementation Committee had met (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 21 and 22 September 1983) but had adjourned in view of the difficulties for the parties to the conflict to negotiate directly to establish a cease-fire; the Committee had not been convened since then. On 21 November,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General added that in a communication of that day OAU stated that the Saharan Arab Democratic Republic (SADR) had resumed its seat as an OAU member during its twentieth session (Addis Ababa, 12-15 November), resulting in Morocco withdrawing from OAU and Zaïre suspending its participation.

By a 21 November letter,<sup>(5)</sup> the United Republic of Tanzania transmitted to the Secretary-General the report of the Implementation Committee which had been adopted at the November OAU meeting.

The Committee pointed out that by OAU resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) of 1983,<sup>(6)</sup> it had been required to report on the conduct of the referendum on self-determination, but due to Morocco's refusal to negotiate on a cease-fire to create the conditions for a peaceful and fair referendum it had not been organized.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/40 by recorded vote.

Question of Western Sahara

The General Assembly,
Having considered in depth the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling the inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination and independence in accordance with the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 38/40 of 7 December 1983 on the question of Western Sahara,

Having considered the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Taking note of the report of the Implementation Committee of the Organization of African Unity on Western Sahara,

Recalling resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) on Western Sahara, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its nineteenth ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 6 to 12 June 1983,

1. Reaffirms that the question of Western Sahara is a question of decolonization which remains to be completed on the basis of the exercise by the people of Western Sahara of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

2. Reaffirms that the solution of the question of Western Sahara lies in the implementation of resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, which establishes ways and means for a just and definitive political solution to the Western Sahara conflict;

3. Requests, to that end, the parties to the conflict, the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro, to undertake direct negotiations with a view to bringing about a cease-fire to create the necessary conditions for a peaceful and fair referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, a referendum without any administrative or military constraints, under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations;

4. Welcomes the efforts of the Organization of African Unity and its Implementation Committee with a view to promoting a just and definitive solution to the question of Western Sahara in accordance with the resolutions and decisions of that organization and the United Nations on the question;

5. Reaffirms the determination of the United Nations to co-operate fully with the Organization of African Unity with a view to implementing the relevant decisions of that organization, in particular resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX);

6. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara as a matter of priority and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

7. Invites the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity to keep the Secretary-General of the United Nations informed of the progress achieved in the implementation of the decisions of the Organization of African Unity relating to Western Sahara;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to follow the situation in Western Sahara closely with a view to the implementation of the present resolution and to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/40

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) by roll-call vote (90-1-45), 28 November (meeting 24); 41-nation draft (A/C.4/39/L.13); agenda item 18.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Benin, Belize, Bolivia, Botswana, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cape Verde, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Yemen, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Iran, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mexico, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Panama, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Togo, Uganda, Vanuatu, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 7, 20-24; plenary 87.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, India, Iran, Jamaica, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Spain, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Bangladesh, Belgium, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Denmark, El Salvador, France, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of Honduras, Iceland, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Nepal, Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Portugal, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Thailand, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States, Zaïre.

Morocco also submitted a draft resolution,<sup>(7)</sup> to which amendments were offered by Sao Tome and Principe, Burkina Faso, and Algeria, Madagascar and Mozambique. By that text, the Assembly would have requested the Secretary-General to pursue consideration of the question, lend his good offices to the speedy attainment of a cease-fire and organize a referendum on self-determination. Subsequently, Morocco withdrew the draft, and stated that it would not participate in voting on a draft which, it said, disregarded all the efforts made and retained only one condition—the most controversial—which had not been retained by the OAU Implementation Committee, namely, direct negotiations between Morocco and the so-called Liberation Front.

Several States explained their abstentions. The United States regretted that it had not been possible to bridge the positions put forward in the two drafts, while China felt it would be useful to African unity if patient negotiations rather than confrontation could settle the problem. Gabon declared that its vote reflected its concern for a peaceful solution. The Sudan did not like the inclusion of certain language in the text. Honduras, which voted for the text in the Committee, abstained in plenary because several African countries had abstained in the Committee or had not participated in the vote.

On 23 November, the Assembly in resolution 39/17 reaffirmed the 1981 and 1983 OAU resolutions on organizing a referendum.

During its consideration of the question, the Fourth Committee heard the following petitioners:<sup>(8)</sup> Thomas Jallaud, President, Association des amis de la République arabe sahraouie démocratique; Ahmed Rachid, Secretary-General, Mouvement des originaires du Sahara; Breika Zerouali, for the deputies of the Saharan provinces, Laayoune; Dakhil Khalil, Parti de l'Union nationale sahraouie, Laayoune; Malika M'barka Zaraiali, Union des femmes du Sahara marocaines, Laayoune; Rachid Douihi, Secretary-General, Front de libération et de l'unité; Hamdati Chbiha Maalainine, President, Association des anciens membres de l'armée de libération marocaine dans les provinces sahariennes Es-Smara (Morocco); Leili Mohamed Salem, Association des parents des séquestrés de Tindouf Oued-dahab (Morocco); Biadillah Mohamed Cheikh, Secretary-General, Front de libération du Sahara (Morocco); Taquiollah Maalainine, on behalf of those elected by the communes and occupational chambers, Laayoune (Morocco); Ali Habib Kentaoui, deputy representative of POLISARIO in New York; and Mohamed Maalainine, Assemblée sahraouie, Laayoune (Jema'a).

It was orally pointed out to the Fourth Committee that the draft which became resolution 39/40 would have financial implications because it required United Nations co-operation in implementing the OAU resolution which called for a joint United Nations-OAU peace-keeping force in Western Sahara. As the Secretary-General was currently not in a position to prepare estimates of those financial implications, he intended, subject to the concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to incur such expenditures as might be necessary under unforeseen and extraordinary expenses.

Other action. A call for the OAU resolutions, particularly that of 1983, to be implemented immediately was also made by the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries (New York, 1-5 October).<sup>(9)</sup>

Other Territories

American Samoa

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December 1984, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/31.

Question of American Samoa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of American Samoa,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to American Samoa, including in particular its resolution 38/41 of 7 December 1983,

Taking into account the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to American Samoa,

Conscious of the need to promote progress towards the full implementation of the Declaration in respect of American Samoa,

Noting with appreciation the continued participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to American Samoa, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory,

Reiterating the view that it remains the obligation of the administering Power to carry out a thorough programme of political education so as to ensure that the people of American Samoa are made fully aware of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV),

Noting that the first five-year economic development plan for the Territory, implemented by the Development Planning Office of the Government of American Samoa, is due to expire at the end of 1984,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of American Samoa and stressing the necessity of diversifying the economy of the Territory as a matter of priority in order to reduce its dependence on fluctuating market conditions,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to American Samoa;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of American Samoa to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to American Samoa;

4. Calls upon the Government of the United States of America, as the administering Power, to take all necessary steps, taking into account the freely expressed wishes of the people of American Samoa, to expedite the process of decolonization of the Territory in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration;

5. Reaffirms that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to carry out a thorough programme of political education so as to ensure that the people of American Samoa are kept fully aware of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

6. Takes note of the fact that a constitutional convention was held in American Samoa and that the convention adopted, on 16 February 1984, a revised draft constitution for the Territory, which was transmitted to the Congress of the United States;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, for the economic and social development of the Territory;

8. Calls upon the administering Power to intensify its efforts to strengthen and diversify the economy of American Samoa in order to reduce its heavy dependence on economic and financial support from the United States and to create employment opportunities for the people of the Territory;

9. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen and extend the responsibilities of the Development Planning Office following the expiration of the five-year development plan at the end of 1984;

10. Urges the administering Power to continue to facilitate close relations and co-operation between the peoples of the Territory and the neighbouring island communities and between the territorial Government and the regional institutions in order to enhance further the economic welfare of the people of American Samoa;

11. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the Territory to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to ensure their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

12. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to American Samoa should be kept under review;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the dispatch of a further visiting mission to American Samoa, in consultation with the administering Power, taking into account, in particular, the wishes of the people of the Territory, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/31

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The draft was recommended by the Committee on colonial countries on 7 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following its approval of the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Small Territories.

Anguilla

On 2 May,<sup>(2)</sup> the United Kingdom invited the Committee on colonial countries to send a visiting mission to Anguilla in September.

The mission, which visited the Territory from 11 to 16 September, submitted its report to the Committee in October.<sup>(3)</sup> The report provided information on the constitutional and political developments as well as economic, social and educational conditions in the Territory, outlined the mission's activities and gave its conclusions and recommendations. Annexed to the report were memoranda presented to the mission by the Anguilla National Alliance and the Anguilla Democratic Party.

The mission recommended that the administering Power, with the territorial Government, continue to develop the economy of Anguilla, in particular, to promote the tourist industry, including improvement of airport facilities; develop the fishing industry; facilitate the establishment of light industry; encourage development of agriculture; and improve roads and communications, water and electrical systems. It also recommended the construction of a new hospital and improvement of health services; expansion of secondary, technical and vocational training facilities; and development of the mass media and communication system. Noting that the Anguillan people had freely expressed their views, the mission said it was confident that their practical approach would enable them to exercise freely their right to self-determination in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(4)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 39/39 without vote on 5 December.

Question of Anguilla

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Anguilla,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Visiting Mission dispatched to Anguilla in September 1984 at the invitation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power,

Having heard the statement of the Chairman of the Visiting Mission,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the administering Power,

Welcoming the co-operation of the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee relating to the Territories under United Kingdom administration and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to those Territories,

Aware of the special problems facing the Territory by virtue of its location, small size, limited resources and lack of infrastructure,

Reiterating the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the implementation of the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to Anguilla,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Anguilla;

2. Approves also the report of the United Nations Visiting Mission to Anguilla in 1984;

3. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Anguilla to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

4. Expresses its appreciation to the administering Power and to the Government of Anguilla for the close co-operation and assistance extended to the Mission;

5. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the Government of Anguilla, to expand the programmes of political education so as to improve the awareness of the people of the Territory of the options available to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration;

6. Expresses the view that measures to promote the economic and social development of Anguilla are an essential element in the process of self-determination and, in that connection, calls upon the administering Power, in close co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to intensify and diversify its programmes of development assistance to Anguilla;

7. Requests the administering Power, in the light of the observations, conclusions and recommendations of the Visiting Mission, to continue to enlist the assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other regional and international bodies, in the development and strengthening of the economy of the Territory;

8. Further requests the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the Territory as an associate member of various organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other regional and international bodies;

9. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

10. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

Bermuda

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December, following the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/33.

Question of Bermuda

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Bermuda,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Bermuda, including in particular its resolution 38/43 of 7 December 1983,

Taking into account the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to the Territory, in which he said that his Government would fully respect the wishes of the people of Bermuda in determining the future constitutional status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Welcoming the continued co-operation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Bermuda, which contributes to informed consideration of conditions in the Territory, with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Recalling all relevant resolutions of the United Nations relating to military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, and aware of the presence of military bases and installations of the administering Power and other countries in Bermuda,

Noting that the economy of the Territory continues to be based on revenue generated from tourism and the registration of foreign companies, which creates a heavy dependence on those activities,

Noting also that Bermuda has been somewhat isolated from its Caribbean neighbours,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, acquiring first-hand information on the situation prevailing in those Territories and ascertaining the views of the peoples concerning their future political status,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Bermuda;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Bermuda to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence, in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to Bermuda;

4. Urges the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, taking into account the freely expressed will and desire of the people of Bermuda, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the full and speedy implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

5. Reiterates that it is the obligation of the administering Power to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of Bermuda to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of Bermuda of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of that right;

6. Reaffirms that, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), it is ultimately for the people of Bermuda themselves to decide on their future political status;

7. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

8. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference directed against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

9. Welcomes the recent exchanges and visits undertaken by the territorial Government with its Caribbean neighbours and recommends that further regional contacts be pursued;

10. Urges once again the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to take all effective measures to guarantee the right of the people of Bermuda to own and dispose of their natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

11. Strongly urges the administering Power, in consultation with the Government of Bermuda, to make every effort to diversify the economy of Bermuda, including increased efforts to promote agriculture, fisheries and the manufacturing sector, which will benefit the people of the Territory;

12. Welcomes the role being played in the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme in providing assistance in the fields of agriculture, forestry and fisheries and urges the specialized agencies and all other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to pay special attention to the development needs of Bermuda;

13. Reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the local authorities, to continue to expedite the process of "bermudianization" in the Territory and, in that connection, urges that particular attention be paid to greater localization of the managerial, executive and professional positions of the public service and the private sector;

14. Calls upon the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to receive a visiting mission in the Territory at an appropriate time;

15. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to Bermuda at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting with appreciation the continued active participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the British Virgin Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory, with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power for the economic and social development of the Territory,

Taking note of the fact that the economy of the Territory has continued to grow, particularly in the real estate, construction, tourist and banking industries, although at a slower pace, due to the world recession,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the recommendation of the United Nations visiting mission dispatched to the British Virgin Islands in 1976 that the administering Power should facilitate the participation of the Territory as an associate member in various organizations of the United Nations system as part of the overall strategy of accelerating the decolonization process,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the British Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to the British Virgin Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of the British Virgin Islands to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the British Virgin Islands themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, takes note of the general elections held in the Territory on 11 November 1983 and reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

6. Notes the continuing commitment of the territorial Government to the goal of economic diversification, particularly in the areas of agriculture, fisheries and small industries, and reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in consultation with the local authorities, to intensify its efforts in this regard;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to ensure their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

8. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank, to take or intensify measures to accelerate progress in the social and economic life of the British Virgin Islands and, in that regard, notes with appreciation the contribution which the United Nations Development Programme continues to make to the development of the Territory;

9. Notes with satisfaction the admission of the British Virgin Islands as an associate member of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and its subsidiary body, the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee, as well as of various other international and regional organizations, and calls upon the administering Power to facilitate further the participation of the British Virgin Islands in those organizations;

10. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

Cayman Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted without vote resolution 39/35 on 5 December.

Question of the Cayman Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Cayman Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Cayman Islands, including in particular its resolution 38/45 of 7 December 1983,

Noting the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to the Territory, in which he said that his Government would fully respect the wishes of the people of the Cayman Islands in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting that although the main sectors of the economy of the Cayman Islands, specifically tourism, international finance and real estate, continued to sustain some degree of growth during the period under review, they have shown signs of being affected by the world recession,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Cayman Islands;

Cocos (Keeling) Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December, following the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/30.

Question of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands,

Having heard the statements of the representatives of Australia,

Having heard the statement of the Chairman of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Recalling also its decision 38/412 of 7 December 1983, by which it noted, inter alia, that the administering Power had discussed with the representatives of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands community the question of holding an act of self-determination to determine their future political status, and its decision 38/420 of 7 December 1983, by which it authorized the Secretary-General to appoint and dispatch a United Nations mission to visit the Cocos (Keeling) Islands in 1984 and requested him to submit to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session a report on the findings of the mission,

Having heard the statement of the Chairman of the United Nations Visiting Mission dispatched to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands in April 1984 pursuant to General Assembly decision 38/420 and having considered the report of the Visiting Mission,

Noting with appreciation the active participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in regard to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands and the co-operation it has extended to the Committee, including the receiving of visiting missions to the Territory in 1974 and 1980,

1. Notes with satisfaction the observations and recommendations of the United Nations Visiting Mission to Observe the Act of Self-Determination in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, 1984;

2. Takes note that the people of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands voted by a substantial majority for integration with Australia;

3. Endorses the view of the Visiting Mission that, in so doing, the people of the Territory have exercised their right to self-determination in accordance with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

4. Considers it appropriate that, in view of the decision of the people of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the transmission of information in respect of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands under Article 73 e of the Charter should cease;

5. Takes note of the actions taken by the Government of Australia to transfer ownership of land to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands community and to extend relevant legislation to the community so that it may enjoy the same benefits as those available to the Australian community at large, as well as the Government's assurances that the unique cultural identity, heritage and traditions of the Cocos community will be preserved;

6. Expresses its appreciation to the Government of Australia, as the administering Power concerned, and to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands Council for the co-operation extended to the United Nations;

7. Expresses its appreciation to the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples for the work it has accomplished, in close co-operation with the administering Power, in respect of the Territory.

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 7 November (meeting 15); 21-nation draft (A/C.4/39/L.3); agenda item 18.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

On 9 August,<sup>(5)</sup> Australia informed the Secretary-General that it had organized an act of self-determination in the Territory on 6 April to enable the people to determine their future political status. A total of 261 votes were cast in a plebiscite, of which 229 were in favour of integration with Australia, 21 in favour of free association with Australia and 9 in favour of independence. There were 2 informal votes. The decision was acceptable to the Australian Government.

On 24 August,<sup>(1)</sup> the Chairman informed the Committee on colonial countries that the visiting mission, authorized by the Assembly to visit the islands,<sup>(6)</sup> had observed the plebiscite. In its report,<sup>(7)</sup> the mission stated that the vote had been carried out in a free and fair manner, that the people had requested the United Nations to guarantee that ownership of the land would be transferred to them in perpetuity, and that Australia had given assurances that title to the land would be transferred to the people within three months. The mission recommended that the role of the Cocos (Keeling) Islands Council and the Management Committee of the Co-operative Society should be extended.

Gibraltar*GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 39/410.

Question of Gibraltar

At its 87th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, noting that the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland signed a Declaration on 10 April 1980 at Lisbon, intending, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, to resolve the problem of Gibraltar, agreeing to that end to start negotiations aimed at overcoming all the differences between them on Gibraltar, agreeing also to the re-establishment of direct communications in the region, the Government of Spain having decided to suspend the application of the measures at present in force, and both Governments agreeing to base future co-operation on reciprocity and full equality of rights, noting that both Governments agreed on 8 January 1982 in London to fix the date of 20 April 1982 for the full implementation of the Lisbon Declaration, including the initiation of negotiations and the simultaneous re-establishment of direct communications in the region, and noting that, when it was subsequently agreed to postpone these arrangements, both Governments expressed their determination to keep alive the process initiated by the Lisbon Declaration of April 1980 and their intention to set a new date for its implementation, welcomes the fact that both Governments agreed on 27 November 1984 at Brussels, in a joint statement, to apply by not later than 15 February 1985 the Lisbon Declaration in all its parts, and urges both Governments to make possible the initiation of the negotiations as envisaged in the consensus adopted by the Assembly on 14 December 1973, with the object of reaching a lasting solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of the relevant resolutions of the Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations."

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696 (Part II)) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft consensus by Chairman (A/C.4/39/L.7); agenda item 18.
Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

In the Assembly, an amendment by Spain and the United Kingdom was adopted without a vote. The amendment inserted the phrase, "welcomes the fact that both Governments agreed on 27 November 1984 at Brussels, in a joint statement<sup>(8)</sup> [see below], to apply by not later than 15 February 1985 the Lisbon Declaration in all its parts, and".

On 4 December,<sup>(8)</sup> Spain and the United Kingdom transmitted to the Secretary-General a joint communiqué issued after a meeting by their Foreign Ministers (Brussels, Belgium, 27 November). The Ministers had agreed on the way in which their Governments would apply the 1980 Lisbon Declaration.<sup>(9)</sup> That would involve simultaneously, the communiqué stated, equality and reciprocity of rights for Spaniards in Gibraltar and Gibraltarians in Spain; free movement of persons, vehicles and goods between Gibraltar and the neighbouring territory; and establishment of a process to negotiate differences. Moreover, Spain would allow safe and effective air communications; and meetings of working groups would be reviewed periodically by the Spanish and British Foreign Ministers.

Taking into account the continuing discussions, the Committee on colonial countries had decided on 20 August<sup>(1)</sup> to continue considering the item at its 1985 session, subject to any Assembly directives. The Committee had examined political developments and economic, social and educational conditions in Gibraltar.

Guam*GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted without vote resolution 39/32 on 5 December.

Question of Guam

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Guam,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Guam, including in particular its resolution 38/42 of 7 December 1983,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to Guam,

Noting with appreciation the continued active participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Guam, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization towards the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration,

Noting that a referendum on political status was organized in the Territory, the final phase of which was held on 4 September 1982,

Recalling all relevant resolutions of the United Nations relating to military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories and aware of the presence of military bases and installations of the administering Power in Guam,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of Guam and the necessity of diversifying the economy of the Territory as a matter of priority and noting the great potential for diversification and development offered by commercial fishing, agriculture and development of the transportation industry,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Guam;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Guam to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reaffirms its conviction that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to Guam;

4. Takes note of the fact that in the referendum on political status, the final phase of which was held on 4 September 1982, 75 per cent of the participants voted for Commonwealth status in association with the United States of America, and of the statement by the administering Power that the Congress of the United States has requested the Guamanian Status Commission to draft legislation establishing Guam as a Commonwealth of the United States and to submit it to the Congress for approval;

5. Calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to expedite the process of decolonization strictly in accordance with the expressed wishes of the people of the Territory;

6. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

7. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference directed against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

8. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, for the economic and social development of Guam and calls upon the administering Power to take all necessary steps to strengthen and diversify the economy of the Territory, with a view to reducing the Territory's economic dependence on the administering Power;

9. Reiterates the view that one obstacle to economic development, particularly in the agricultural sector, stems from the fact that large tracts of land are held by the federal authorities and calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the local authorities, to continue the transfer of land to the people of the Territory;

10. Reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take measures aimed at removing constraints to growth in the areas of commercial fishing, agriculture and the transportation industry and to ensure their development to the fullest extent;

11. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the right of the people of Guam to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over their future development and requests the administering Power to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the people of the Territory;

12. Takes note of the steps taken by the administering Power to develop and promote the language and culture of the Chamorro people, who are the indigenous population of the Territory, and reaffirms the importance of further efforts in that field;

13. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

14. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/32

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.
Financial implications. S-G, A/C.4/39/L.4.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The Committee on colonial countries recommended the draft on 24 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following its approval of the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered the military installations, activities and arrangements on Guam and its economic, social and educational conditions and constitutional and political developments.

Montserrat

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December, following the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/36.

Question of Montserrat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Montserrat,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Montserrat, including in particular its resolution 38/46 of 7 December 1983,

Noting the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to the Territory, in which he said that his Government would respect the wishes of the people of Montserrat in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Noting the statement of the Government of Montserrat that independence was inevitable and desirable and that the Government would work towards that end,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power for the economic and social development of the Territory,

Noting with concern that during the period under review the general slowdown in the world economy also affected Montserrat, particularly in its vital sectors, such as tourism, construction, agriculture and manufacturing,

Welcoming the establishment of a Civil Service Training Centre by the Government of Montserrat and noting that the review of the organization and training needs of the civil service was expected to be completed in 1984,

Welcoming the contribution to the development of the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme and those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system operating in Montserrat and noting in particular the increase envisaged by the Programme for the period 1982-1986,

Aware of the special problems facing the Territory by virtue of its isolation, small size, limited resources and lack of infrastructure,

Recalling the dispatch, in 1975 and 1982, of United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Montserrat;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Montserrat to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to Montserrat;

4. Notes with appreciation the continued participation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Montserrat, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration;

5. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to create such conditions in Montserrat as will enable its people to exercise freely and without interference, from a well-informed standpoint as to the available options, their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the Assembly;

6. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of Montserrat themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration and reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to launch programmes of political education so that the people of Montserrat will be fully informed of the options available to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

7. Calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to strengthen the economy and to increase its assistance to programmes of diversification in order to promote the economic and financial viability of the Territory;

8. Urges the administering Power to take the necessary measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to restore sustained and balanced growth to the economy of the Territory and to intensify its assistance in the development of all sectors thereof, which will benefit the people of the Territory, and expresses the hope that Montserrat's non-budgetary grant-in-aid status can be maintained;

9. Also urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard, guarantee and ensure the rights of the people of Montserrat to own and dispose of their natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

10. Further urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to provide the assistance necessary for the localization of the civil service at all levels, particularly the senior levels;

11. Takes note of the continued participation of the Territory in the work of the Caribbean Group for Co-operation and Economic Development, as well as such regional organizations as the Caribbean Community and the Caribbean Development Bank, and calls upon the organizations of the United Nations system, as well as donor Governments and regional organizations, to intensify their efforts to accelerate progress in the economic and social life of the Territory;

12. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/36

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote
Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.
Financial implications. S-G, A/C.4/39/L.4.
Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The Committee on colonial countries recommended the draft on 20 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following its endorsement of the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered constitutional and political developments and economic, social and educational conditions in Montserrat.

Pitcairn

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted without vote decision 39/409.

Question of Pitcairn

At its 87th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, takes note of the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland affirming the policy of his Government to respect the wishes of the people of Pitcairn when it considers the future constitutional arrangements for the Territory and to give further encouragement to the people of Pitcairn to pursue the way of life that they themselves have chosen and that best suits their own particular circumstances. The Assembly calls once again upon the administering Power to continue to take the necessary measures to safeguard the interests of the people of Pitcairn. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fortieth session."

General Assembly decision 39/409

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft consensus by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The draft was recommended by the Committee on colonial countries on 20 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following adoption of the draft consensus submitted by the Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered the constitutional and political developments and economic, social and educational conditions on Pitcairn.

St. Helena

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted by recorded vote decision 39/411.

Question of St. Helena

At its 87th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of St. Helena to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960. The Assembly noted the commitment of the Government of the United Kingdom to respect the wishes of the people of the Territory in relation to their future political status and, in that regard, urged the administering Power, in consultation with the legislative Council, and other representatives of the people of St. Helena, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of this Territory and in that connection reaffirmed the importance of promoting an awareness among the people of St. Helena of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination. The Assembly expressed the hope that the administering Power would continue to implement infrastructure and community development projects aimed at improving the general welfare of the community and to encourage local initiative and enterprise, particularly in the areas of forestry and the handicrafts industry. The Assembly noted the willingness of the administering Power to revitalize the fishing industry of the Territory. The Assembly reaffirmed that continued development assistance from the administering Power, together with any assistance that the international community might be able to provide, constituted an important means of developing the economic potential of the Territory and of enhancing the capacity of its people to realize fully the goals set forth in the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. The Assembly noted with concern the presence of a military base on the dependency of Ascension Island and, in that regard, recalled all the relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions concerning military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories. Noting the positive attitude of the administering Power with respect to the question of receiving United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under its administration, the Assembly considered that the possibility of dispatching such a mission to St. Helena at an appropriate time should be kept under review. The Assembly requested the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to St. Helena, at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly decision 39/411

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 119-2-24 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) by recorded vote (111-3-26), 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.

Financial implications: S-G, A/C.4/39/L.4.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Belize, Canada, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Samoa, Sweden, Turkey.

The Committee on colonial countries recommended the draft on 24 August,<sup>(1)</sup> after endorsing the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered St. Helena's constitutional arrangements, its economic, social and educational conditions, and its dependencies—Tristan da Cunha and Ascension Island.

Prior to approving the draft as a whole, the Fourth Committee, in a separate vote requested by the United Kingdom, approved the sixth sentence—which referred to a military base on Ascension Island—by 61 to 33, with 36 abstentions.

The United Kingdom felt that references to that island were not appropriate since the text was meant to address the problems of the inhabitants of St. Helena and that it was unclear how an air-base on Ascension, an isolated piece of rock inhabited by migratory birds, green turtles, Atlantic seals and temporary contract employees, could affect St. Helena's population. Sweden, speaking for the Nordic countries, declared they shared the view that the Assembly's 1960 Declaration on colonial countries<sup>(4)</sup> did not cover Ascension Island.

Tokelau

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 39/408.

Question of Tokelau

At its 87th plenary meeting, on 5 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and having heard the statement of the representative of New Zealand with regard to Tokelau, notes with appreciation the willingness of the administering Power to maintain its close co-operation with the United Nations in the exercise of its responsibility towards Tokelau. The Assembly reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Tokelau to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, and reaffirms further that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to keep the people of Tokelau fully informed of that right. In this regard, the Assembly notes that the people of the Territory have expressed the view that, at the present time, they do not wish to review the nature of the existing relationship between Tokelau and New Zealand. The Assembly welcomes the assurances of the administering Power that it will continue to be guided solely by the wishes of the people of Tokelau as to the future status of the Territory and notes that the administering Power has assured the people of Tokelau of its continuing assistance in the event that they should desire to change their status. The Assembly calls upon the administering Power to continue its programme of political education within the context of its efforts to ensure the preservation of the identity and cultural heritage of the people of Tokelau. The Assembly notes with satisfaction that the administering Power is making a compilation of all laws and regulations applying to the Territory, including traditional laws, and urges the administering Power to expedite this process as well as the translation of the laws and regulations into Tokelauan. The Assembly is of the opinion that the administering Power should continue to inform the Tokelauan people of the consideration of their Territory by the United Nations. The Assembly recognizes that the political and economic development of Tokelau is an important element in the process of self-determination. In this connection, the Assembly notes with satisfaction that the General Fono (Council) of Tokelau is assuming greater authority in local political, economic and financial affairs. The Assembly notes further the continuing efforts of the administering Power to promote the economic development of the Territory and the measures it has taken to safeguard and guarantee the rights of the people of Tokelau to all their natural resources and the benefits derived therefrom. In this connection, the Assembly notes with satisfaction the conclusion, in September 1983, of a fisheries access agreement with the American Tunaboat Association covering the combined economic zones of the Cook Islands, Niue, Tokelau, Tuvalu and the State of Western Samoa. The Assembly notes that the Treaty of Tokelau, between New Zealand and the United States of America, which delimits the maritime boundary between Tokelau and American Samoa, entered into force on 3 September 1983. The Assembly is of the opinion that the administering Power should continue to expand its programme of budgetary support and development aid to the Territory. The Assembly notes with appreciation the continuing efforts of the administering Power to make improvements in the fields of public health, public works and education. The Assembly reiterates its expression of appreciation to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as to the regional organizations, for their assistance to Tokelau and calls upon them to continue providing assistance to the Territory. Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, the Assembly considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Territory at an appropriate time should be kept under review, taking into account, in particular, the wishes of the people of Tokelau. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Tokelau, at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its fortieth session."

General Assembly decision 39/408

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft consensus by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.

Financial implications: S-G, A/C.4/39/L.4.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The draft was recommended by the Committee on colonial countries on 20 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following approval of a draft consensus submitted by its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered constitutional and political developments, and economic, social and educational conditions in Tokelau.

Turks and Caicos Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/37.

Question of the Turks and Caicos Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Turks and Caicos Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands, including in particular its resolution 38/47 of 7 December 1983,

Taking into account the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to the Territory, in which he said that his Government would fully respect the wishes of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands in determining the future constitutional status of the Territory, and bearing in mind the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting with appreciation the participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability and to develop a wider economic base for the Territory,

Recalling its strong conviction that military bases and installations must not hinder the populations of the Non-Self-Governing Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Noting the statement of the administering Power that an experimental farm has been set up on North Caicos to study agricultural techniques,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the obligation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Territory as will enable the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter of the United Nations to develop its dependent Territories economically and socially and urges the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to take the necessary measures to promote the economic and social development of the Turks and Caicos Islands and, in particular, to intensify and expand its programme of assistance in order to accelerate the development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Territory;

6. Emphasizes that greater attention should be paid to diversification of the economy, particularly in the promotion of agriculture and fisheries, which will benefit the people of the Territory;

7. Recalls that it is the responsibility of the administering Power, in accordance with the wishes of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands, to safeguard, guarantee and ensure the inalienable right of the people to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to guarantee their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

8. Takes note of the statement of the administering Power to the effect that the military facility in the Turks and Caicos Islands has been closed and that the territorial Government now has complete control over the disposition of the land vacated by the base;

9. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as such regional institutions as the Caribbean Development Bank, to continue to pay special attention to the development needs of the Turks and Caicos Islands and welcomes the continuing contribution of the United Nations Development Programme;

10. Requests the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to continue to provide the assistance necessary for the training of qualified local personnel in the skills essential to the development of economic and social sectors of the Territory;

11. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/37

5 December 1984 Meeting 87 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/39/696) without objection, 12 November (meeting 18); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/39/23); agenda item 18.

Financial implications: S-G, A/C.4/39/L.4.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 4th Committee 12-18; plenary 87.

The draft resolution was recommended by the Committee on colonial countries on 20 August,<sup>(1)</sup> following endorsement of the conclusions and recommendations of the Sub-Committee on Small Territories. The Committee had considered military installations, activities and arrangements; the role of foreign capital and major development activities; constitutional and political developments; and economic, social and educational conditions in the islands.

On 11 May 1984,<sup>(10)</sup> the United Kingdom had invited the Committee on colonial countries to send a visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands to observe the 29 May general election in the Territory.

United States Virgin Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/38.

Question of the United States Virgin Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the United States Virgin Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the United States Virgin Islands, including in particular its resolution 38/48 of 7 December 1983,

Noting with appreciation the continued participation of the United States of America, as the administering Power, in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the United States Virgin Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

Welcoming the participation of a representative of the territorial Government in the work of the Special Committee,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to the United States Virgin Islands,

Noting that the territorial Government has undertaken to intensify its efforts to expand and diversify the economy and further noting the growth in the manufacturing, construction and tourism sectors and in per capita income, as well as the relatively low unemployment rate in the Territory,

Noting that the territorial Government is encouraging the growth of agriculture and to that end recently purchased 804 hectares of land on St. Croix for agricultural development, home ownership and the construction of a vocational school,

Reiterating the view that the participation of Territories as associate members in organizations of the United Nations system is a part of the overall strategy of accelerating the decolonization process,

Aware that in 1967 the administering Power transferred possession of its former naval base on St. Thomas to the territorial Government while retaining the right to re-occupy it, and that it maintains a radar and laser calibration station and an underwater tracking facility off the west coast of St. Croix,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the United States Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the United States Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), which fully applies to the United States Virgin Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to create such conditions in the United States Virgin Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

5. Calls upon the administering Power, taking into account the wish of the people of the United States Virgin Islands, to take all necessary steps to expedite the process of decolonization in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, as well as all other relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly;

6. Notes that the Senate of the United States Virgin Islands has established a Select Committee to ascertain the views of the people of the Territory on their future status and to make recommendations in that regard to the Legislature and further notes that public hearings are being held throughout the Territory;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter for the economic and social development of the Territory;

8. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy of the Territory by taking additional measures of diversification in all fields and developing an adequate infrastructure with a view to reducing its economic dependence on the administering Power;

9. Notes with satisfaction the recent admission of the United States Virgin Islands as an associate member of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and its subsidiary body, the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee, and calls upon the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the Territory in other organizations of the United Nations system;

10. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the Government of the United States Virgin Islands, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the Territory to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to guarantee their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

11. Also urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to improve social conditions and to pay particular attention to overcoming problems of public housing, health care, education and crime and, in that connection, notes that further efforts are necessary to revitalize the health care programme, to improve crime prevention, to discourage juvenile delinquency and to expand and upgrade school facilities;

12. Further urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

13. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

14. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 1984, the International Court of Justice continued to deal with three contentious cases. A fourth dispute was referred to it in April. In addition, it received two requests—one for the revision of a 1982 Judgment and the other for an advisory opinion.

Three Judges were re-elected and two others were elected to the Court for terms beginning in February 1985 (see APPENDIX III).

Judicial work of the Court

In 1984, the Court or its Chamber—meeting at The Hague, Netherlands—considered contentious cases concerning the continental shelf delimitation (Tunisia/Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Malta), delimitation of the maritime boundary (Canada/United States), a frontier dispute (Burkina Faso/Mali), and responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States). In addition, it received a request for an advisory opinion concerning a judgement of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal.

Continental shelf delimitation between Tunisia and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya

On 27 July 1984, Tunisia, invoking the discovery of a new fact, submitted to the Court<sup>(1)</sup> an Application for the revision and the interpretation of the Judgment given by the Court on 24 February 1982<sup>(2)</sup> in the case concerning the delimitation of the continental shelf between it and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

Pursuant to the Rules of Court, the Vice-President fixed a time-limit, expiring on 15 October 1984, within which the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya presented written observations on the Tunisian Application, in particular its admissibility.

Continental shelf delimitation between the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta

In view of the objections raised by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta to Italy's 1983 request for intervention in the continental shelf delimitation case between the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta,<sup>(3)</sup> the Court held public sittings in 1984 during which speeches were made on behalf of Italy and the original two parties concerned. Italy indicated that its object in intervening was to enable it to participate in the proceedings to defend its rights over certain areas claimed by the parties.

On 21 March 1984, the Court delivered at a public sitting a Judgment,<sup>(4)</sup> whose operative paragraph read as follows:

The Court,

By eleven votes to five,

Finds that the Application of the Italian Republic, filed in the Registry of the Court on 24 October 1983, for permission to intervene under Article 62 of the Statute of the Court, cannot be granted.

In favour: President Elias; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Ruda, El-Khani, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui; Judges ad hoc Jiménez de Aréchaga and Castañeda.

Against: Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Oda, Ago, Schwebel and Sir Robert Jennings.

Judges Morozov, Nagendra Singh and Mbaye and Judge ad hoc Jiménez de Aréchaga appended separate opinions to the Judgment. Vice-President Sette Câmara and Judges Oda, Ago, Schwebel and Sir Robert Jennings appended dissenting opinions.

After the decision, the proceedings continued. On 21 March, the President made an Order<sup>(5)</sup> fixing 12 July 1984 as the time-limit for the filing of Replies by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta, both States having expressed the wish to submit a further pleading as provided in their Special Agreement of 1976, which had requested the Court to indicate the principles and rules applicable to delimitation of the continental shelf between the parties and the practical method for their application. The parties each filed their Replies within the time-limit.

Following the resignation for health reasons of Judge ad hoc Jorge Castañeda, Malta appointed N. Valticos as its new Judge ad hoc.

Public sittings were held between 26 November and 14 December 1984.<sup>(6)</sup>

Maritime boundary delimitation between Canada and the United States

The five-member Chamber of the Court continued in 1984 to consider the question, submitted in 1981 by Canada and the United States,<sup>(7)</sup> concerning the course of the maritime boundary dividing the continental shelf and fisheries zones in the Gulf of Maine area.

By an Order of 30 March 1984,<sup>(8)</sup> the Chamber, acceding to a request made by the parties in accordance with their Special Agreement, signed on 29 March 1979 and in force from 20 November 1981, appointed a technical expert to assist it, particularly in preparing the description of the maritime boundary and the charts required.

Between 2 April and 11 May, the Chamber heard, at 26 public sittings, oral arguments presented on behalf of the parties.

On 12 October, the Chamber delivered its Judgment<sup>(9)</sup> at a public sitting. The operative part of the Judgment read as follows:

The Chamber,

By four votes to one,

Decides

That the course of the single maritime boundary that divides the continental shelf and the exclusive fisheries zones of Canada and the United States of America in the area referred to in the Special Agreement concluded by those two States on 29 March 1979 shall be defined by geodetic lines connecting the points with the following co-ordinates:

|   | Latitude North | Longitude West |
|---|----------------|----------------|
| A | 44° 11' 12"    | 67° 16' 46"    |
| B | 42° 53' 14"    | 67° 44' 35"    |
| C | 42° 31' 08"    | 67° 28' 05"    |
| D | 40° 27' 05"    | 65° 41' 59"    |

In favour: President Ago; Judges Mosler, Schwebel; Judge ad hoc Cohen.

Against: Judge Gros.

Judge Schwebel appended a separate opinion to the Judgment and Judge Gros appended a dissenting opinion.

Frontier dispute between Burkina Faso and Mali

In 1984, the Court remained seized of the question of the delimitation of part of the land frontier between Burkina Faso (formerly the Upper Volta, as renamed on 6 August 1984, see p. 373) and Mali—which had been referred to it on 14 October 1983.<sup>(3)</sup>

Military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua

On 9 April 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> Nicaragua filed an Application instituting proceedings against the United States, accompanied by a request for the indication of provisional measures, in respect of a dispute concerning responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua. (See also p. 206.)

On 13 April, the United States informed the Court that it was appointing an agent for the case, while indicating its conviction that the Court was without jurisdiction to deal with the Application and was a fortiori without jurisdiction to indicate the provisional measures requested by Nicaragua.

Having held public sittings on 25 and 27 April to hear the oral observations of both parties, the Court, at a public sitting on 10 May, delivered an Order<sup>(10)</sup> indicating such measures. The operative provisions of the Order read as follows:

The Court,

A. Unanimously,

Rejects the request made by the United States of America that the proceedings on the Application filed by the Republic of Nicaragua on 9 April 1984, and on the request filed the same day by the Republic of Nicaragua for the indication of provisional measures, be terminated by the removal of the case from the list;

B. Indicates, pending its final decision in the proceedings instituted on 9 April 1984 by the Republic of Nicaragua against the United States of America, the following provisional measures:

1. Unanimously,

The United States of America should immediately cease and refrain from any action restricting, blocking or endangering access to or from Nicaraguan ports, and, in particular, the laying of mines.

2. By fourteen votes to one,

The right to sovereignty and to political independence possessed by the Republic of Nicaragua, like any other State of the region or of the world, should be fully respected and should not in any way be jeopardized by any military and paramilitary activities which are prohibited by the principles of international law, in particular the principle that States should refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or the political independence of any State, and the principle concerning the duty not to intervene in matters within the domestic jurisdiction of a State, principles embodied in the United Nations Charter and the Charter of the Organization of American States.

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Ruda, Mosler, Oda, Ago, El-Khani, Sir Robert Jennings, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui.

Against: Judge Schwebel.

3. Unanimously,

The Governments of the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua should each of them ensure that no action of any kind is taken which might aggravate or extend the dispute submitted to the Court.

4. Unanimously,

The Governments of the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua should each of them ensure that no action is taken which might prejudice the rights of the other Party in respect of the carrying out of whatever decision the Court may render in the case;

C. Unanimously,

Decides further that, until the Court delivers its final judgment in the present case, it will keep the matters covered by this Order continuously under review;

D. Unanimously,

Decides that the written proceedings shall first be addressed to the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the dispute and of the admissibility of the Application;

And reserves the fixing of the time-limits for the said written proceedings, and the subsequent procedure, for further decision.

Judges Mosler and Sir Robert Jennings appended a joint separate opinion to the Order and Judge Schwebel appended a dissenting opinion.

In accordance with Article 41, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court, the Registrar immediately notified the parties and the Security Council of the indication of those measures.<sup>(11)</sup>

By an Order of 14 May,<sup>(12)</sup> the President of the Court fixed the following time-limits for the filing of pleadings addressed to the questions of jurisdiction and admissibility: 30 June for the Memorial of Nicaragua, and 17 August for the Counter-Memorial of the United States. The pleadings were filed within the prescribed time-limits.

On 15 August,<sup>(6)</sup> El Salvador filed a Declaration of Intervention in the case under Article 63 of the Statute, asserting that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain Nicaragua's Application. Having regard to the written observations submitted by the parties on that Declaration, the Court made an Order on 4 October<sup>(13)</sup> whose operative provisions read as follows:

The Court,

(i) By nine votes to six,

Decides not to hold a hearing on the Declaration of Intervention of the Republic of El Salvador.

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Oda, El-Khani, Mbaye, Bedjaoui.

Against: Judges Ruda, Mosler, Ago, Schwebel, Sir Robert Jennings, de Lacharrière.

(ii) By fourteen votes to one,

Decides that the Declaration of Intervention of the Republic of El Salvador is inadmissible inasmuch as it relates to the current phase of the proceedings brought by Nicaragua against the United States of America.

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Ruda, Mosler, Oda, Ago, El-Khani, Sir Robert Jennings, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui.

Against: Judge Schwebel.

From 8 to 18 October,<sup>(6)</sup> the Court held 10 public sittings during which speeches were made on behalf of Nicaragua and the United States on the questions of jurisdiction and admissibility. The Judge ad hoc appointed by Nicaragua, C.-A. Colliard, participated in the Court's work from that stage of the proceedings.

At a public sitting held on 26 November, the Court delivered its Judgment,<sup>(14)</sup> whose operative provisions read as follows:

The Court,

(1) (a) finds, by eleven votes to five, that it has jurisdiction to entertain the Application filed by the Republic of Nicaragua on 9 April 1984, on the basis of Article 36, paragraphs 2 and 5, of the Statute of the Court;

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Ruda, El-Khani, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui; Judge ad hoc Colliard.

Against: Judges Mosler, Oda, Ago, Schwebel and Sir Robert Jennings.

(b) finds, by fourteen votes to two, that it has jurisdiction to entertain the Application filed by the Republic of Nicaragua on 9 April 1984, in so far as that Application relates to a dispute concerning the interpretation or application of the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation between the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua signed at Managua on 21 January 1956, on the basis of Article XXIV of that Treaty;

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Mosler, Oda, Ago, El-Khani, Sir Robert Jennings, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui; Judge ad hoc Colliard.

Against: Judges Ruda and Schwebel.

(c) finds, by fifteen votes to one, that it has jurisdiction to entertain the case;

In favour: President Elias; Vice-President Sette Câmara; Judges Lachs, Morozov, Nagendra Singh, Ruda, Mosler, Oda, Ago, El-Khani, Sir Robert Jennings, de Lacharrière, Mbaye, Bedjaoui; Judge ad hoc Colliard.

Against: Judge Schwebel.

(2) finds, unanimously, that the said Application is admissible.

Judges Nagendra Singh, Ruda, Mosler, Oda, Ago and Sir Robert Jennings appended separate opinions to the Judgment. Judge Schwebel appended a dissenting opinion.

Review of a judgement by the UN Administrative Tribunal

On 10 September 1984,<sup>(6)</sup> the Court received a request for an advisory opinion, from the General Assembly's Committee on Applications for Review of Administrative Tribunal Judgments, in respect of Judgement No. 333,<sup>(15)</sup> delivered at Geneva on 8 June by the Tribunal in the case of Yakimetz v. the Secretary-General, involving the staff member's request for further employment after the expiry of his contract with the Organization.

The Committee's decision to request the Court's opinion, under article 11 of the Tribunal's statute, was made on 23 August at the request of the interested party.

By Judgement No. 333, the Tribunal had determined that Vladimir Victorovich Yakimetz, during the period of his service with the United Nations, was on a five-year fixed-term contract under secondment from the USSR Government, which could not be modified without the consent of all three parties (the United Nations, the USSR Government and Mr. Yakimetz); and that no tacit agreement existed between Mr. Yakimetz and the United Nations between 10 February 1983 (when he resigned from the service of the USSR Government, after seeking asylum in the United States the previous day) and 26 December 1983 (when his contract expired) changing the character of their relationship. The Tribunal questioned his suitability as an international civil servant under the existing circumstances, and concluded that Mr. Yakimetz's pleas, including those for monetary relief, could not be sustained.

By an Order of 13 September,<sup>(16)</sup> the Court's President fixed 14 December as the time-limit for submission of written statements by the United Nations and its Member States; by an Order of 30 November,<sup>(17)</sup> the time-limit was extended to 28 February 1985.

Organizational questions

Reports of the Court

The 1984 activities of the International Court of Justice were contained in two reports to the General Assembly, covering the periods 1 August

1983 to 31 July 1984<sup>(18)</sup> and 1 August 1984 to 31 July 1985.<sup>(19)</sup>

Chapter II

Legal aspects of international political relations

In 1984, the United Nations continued working towards effective legal measures for promoting friendly relations among States. The General Assembly, in December, called for continuation of work towards the legal codification of: non-use of force in international relations (resolution 39/81), offences against the peace and security of mankind (39/80) and an international convention against mercenary activities (39/84). It also requested the Secretary-General to prepare a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States (39/79), decided to begin identifying good-neighbourliness between them (39/78), and recommended that work continue on draft articles on the non-navigational use of international watercourses (39/85).

Topic related to this chapter. International peace and security.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States

As in previous years, the question of peaceful settlement of disputes between States was considered by the General Assembly and its Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization. In December 1984, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to prepare a draft handbook on the topic for consideration by the Committee in 1985.

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee, at its April 1984 session,<sup>(1)</sup> continued work on the peaceful settlement of disputes, as called for by the Assembly in December 1983.<sup>(2)</sup> This was one of three main questions considered by the Committee, the others being proposals on rationalizing the existing procedures of the United Nations and ways to maintain international peace and security (see p. 1100).

An open-ended Working Group of the Committee held six meetings on the question between 6 and 11 April, at three of which it considered a 1983 proposal by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania<sup>(3)</sup> for the creation of a United Nations permanent commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation for the settlement of disputes and the prevention of conflicts among States. The proposal was later submitted to the Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee as a working paper.<sup>(4)</sup>

The Working Group also discussed a proposed handbook on dispute settlement—focusing on the approach and the contents, and on the manner of preparation—based on a preliminary draft outline,<sup>(5)</sup> prepared by the Secretary-General at the Assembly's 1983 request,<sup>(2)</sup> and working papers submitted by France in 1981<sup>(6)</sup> and 1984.<sup>(7)</sup> The Committee concluded that the Assembly should request the Secretary-General to prepare a draft handbook, based on the outline it had agreed on during the session, and to report to the Committee in 1985 on the progress of work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 39/79 without vote.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States

The General Assembly,

Having examined the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes between States",

Recalling its resolution 37/10 of 15 November 1982, by which it approved the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, annexed thereto,

Recalling also its resolution 38/131 of 19 December 1983,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of conflict situations and the emergence of new sources of disputes and tension in international life, and especially at the growing tendency to resort to force or the threat of force and to intervention in internal affairs, and at the escalation of the arms race, which gravely endanger the independence and security of States as well as international peace and security,

Taking into account the need to exert the utmost effort in order to settle any situations and disputes between States exclusively by peaceful means and to avoid any military action and hostilities against other States, which can only make more difficult the solution of existing problems,

Considering that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes should represent one of the central concerns for States and for the United Nations, and that efforts for strengthening the process of peaceful settlement of disputes should be continued,

Taking note of the working papers on the establishment of a commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation for the settlement of disputes and the prevention of conflicts among States, submitted to the General Assembly by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania,

Taking into account the elaboration by the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization of the outline for a handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and the conclusions thereon,

1. Again urges all States to observe and promote in good faith the provisions of the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes in the settlement of their international disputes;

2. Stresses the need to continue efforts to strengthen the process of the peaceful settlement of disputes through the progressive development and codification of international law and through enhancing the effectiveness of the United Nations in this field;

3. Requests the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, during its session in 1985, to continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context:

(a) To continue the consideration of the proposal contained in the above-mentioned working papers;

(b) To examine the report of the Secretary-General on the progress of work on the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, on the basis of the outline elaborated by the Special Committee and in the light of the views expressed in the course of the discussions in the Sixth Committee and in the Special Committee, a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, and to report to the Special Committee at its session in 1985 on the progress of work, before submitting to it the draft handbook in its final form, with a view to its approval at a later stage;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes between States".

General Assembly resolution 39/79

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/774) without vote, 6 December (meeting 64); 31-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.7); agenda item 124.

Sponsors: Australia, Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Indonesia, Madagascar, Mali, Mexico, Morocco, Nigeria, Panama, Philippines, Romania, Rwanda, Senegal, Singapore, Sudan, Suriname, Togo, Uganda, Uruguay, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 6th Committee 23-31, 64; plenary 99.

In explanation of position, the USSR expressed its opposition to the proposed commission, asserting that the idea ran counter to the Charter of the United Nations and would undermine the prerogatives of the Security Council; however, it had not objected to the adoption of the text which it considered to be procedural in nature.

Good-neighbourliness between States

The General Assembly, in December 1984, decided to start identifying and clarifying the elements of good-neighbourliness between States.

In connection with the Assembly's agenda item on the subject, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Morocco addressed a letter on 15 October to the Secretary-General,<sup>(8)</sup> transmitting the text of a treaty, signed by them on 13 August, establishing a union between the two States to be called the Arab-African Union.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly, on 13 December 1984, adopted resolution 39/78 without vote.

Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the determination of the peoples of the United Nations, as expressed in the Charter of the United Nations, to practise tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours,

Recalling the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, approved by its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Recalling its resolutions 1236(XII) of 14 December 1957, 1301(XIII) of 10 December 1958, 2129(XX) of 21 December 1965, 34/99 of 14 December 1979, 36/101 of 9 December 1981, 37/117 of 16 December 1982 and 38/126 of 19 December 1983,

Bearing in mind that, owing to geographic proximity and to other relevant reasons, there are particularly favourable opportunities for co-operation and mutual advantage between neighbouring countries, in many fields and various forms, and that the development of such co-operation may have a positive influence on international relations as a whole,

Considering that the great changes of a political, economic and social nature, as well as the scientific and technological progress which has taken place in the world and led to unprecedented interdependence of nations, have given new dimensions to good-neighbourliness in the conduct of States and increased the need to develop and strengthen it,

Taking into account the working paper concerning the development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States, as well as the written replies sent by States and international organizations on the content of good-neighbourliness and on ways and means to enhance it<sup>(9)</sup> and the views expressed by States on this subject in the General Assembly,

Recalling its opinion that it is necessary to continue to examine the question of good-neighbourliness in order to strengthen and develop its content, as well as ways and modalities to enhance its effectiveness, and that the results of this examination could be included, at an appropriate time, in a suitable international document,

1. Reaffirms that good-neighbourliness fully conforms with the purposes of the United Nations and shall be founded upon the strict observance of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, and so presupposes the rejection of any acts seeking to establish zones of influence or domination;

2. Calls once again upon States, in the interest of the maintenance of international peace and security, to develop good-neighbourly relations, acting on the basis of these principles;

3. Reaffirms that the generalization of the long practice of good-neighbourliness and of principles and rules pertaining to it is likely to strengthen friendly relations and co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter;

4. Deems it appropriate, on the basis of the working paper concerning the development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States mentioned above, as well as of other proposals and ideas which have been or will be submitted by States, and the replies and views of States and international organizations, to start clarifying and formulating the elements of good-neighbourliness as part of a process of elaboration of a suitable international document on the subject;

5. Decides to proceed with the task of identifying and clarifying the elements of good-neighbourliness within the framework of a working group or other appropriate organ of the Sixth Committee as may be decided upon by the Committee when organizing its work at the fortieth session of the General Assembly;

6. Invites once again Governments, United Nations bodies and programmes and the specialized agencies, within their respective fields of competence, to communicate to the Secretary-General their views and suggestions or, if they deem it appropriate, to update the replies already given by them, on the content of good-neighbourliness and ways and means to strengthen it;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a report containing the replies received in accordance with paragraph 6 above;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States".

General Assembly resolution 39/78

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/C.6/39/773) without vote, 3 December (meeting 61); 37-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.14); agenda item 123.

Sponsors: Bangladesh, Bolivia, Burundi, Congo, Costa Rica, France, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Indonesia, Iraq, Kenya, Liberia, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Morocco, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, Panama, Philippines, Portugal, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Singapore, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 6th Committee 20-23, 61; plenary 99.

In explanation of position, the Netherlands said the working paper by Romania addressed a wide range of topics, some of which were being dealt with in other forums; care should be taken, therefore, not to duplicate such work, and the option of a working group suggested in paragraph 5 should not be pursued. If the elements of good-neighbourliness had to be formulated, the task should be assigned to the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization.

Non-use of force in international relations

In December 1984, the General Assembly renewed its previous requests to the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations to continue its work towards drafting a world treaty on that principle.

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee—established in 1977<sup>(10)</sup> to consider, among other things, proposals and suggestions with the goal of drafting a world treaty on the non-use of force in international relations—met at United Nations Headquarters from 21 February to 16 March 1984.<sup>(11)</sup>

As in the previous year, the 35-member Committee had before it a draft world treaty on the non-use of force, submitted in 1976 by the USSR;<sup>(12)</sup> a 1979 working paper by Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom;<sup>(13)</sup> and a 1981 revised working paper from 10 non-aligned countries (Benin, Cyprus, Egypt, India, Iraq, Morocco, Nepal, Nicaragua, Senegal, Uganda).<sup>(14)</sup> Also before the Committee was an informal paper by the Chairman of the Committee's 1982 session, grouping together the suggestions made in the Committee,<sup>(15)</sup> and a document<sup>(16)</sup> containing comments submitted by two States in reply to a renewed Assembly invitation in December 1983 for States' observations.<sup>(17)</sup>

An open-ended Working Group, re-established by the Committee in 1984, held 15 meetings between 28 February and 9 March. On 7 March, the Chairman suggested compiling the proposals officially made, so as to help the delegations to see the existing differences and the areas of possible agreement. His suggestion, and an informal paper he subsequently circulated, met with varying response.

Similarly, differing views were expressed on the progress of work, or lack thereof, in the Committee, and suggestions were made on the future course of action, including a view that the Committee be disbanded.

On 16 March, the Committee approved the Group's report as well as its own. Since the Committee had not completed its work, it generally recognized the desirability of further considering the question before it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

For its consideration of the item, the General Assembly's Sixth Committee had before it the report of the Special Committee on its 1984 session,<sup>(11)</sup> along with an August report<sup>(18)</sup> of the Secretary-General containing observations received from six States on the drafting of a world treaty. The Secretary-General also submitted to the Sixth Committee, at the request of Austria and France, a letter from them dated 19/21 September<sup>(19)</sup> calling for early ratification of an amendment on the non-use of force against civil aircraft to the 1944 Convention on International Civil Aviation, as adopted by the Assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization on 10 May 1984 at an extraordinary session; the text of the amendment was annexed to the letter (see also PART TWO, Chapter X).

On the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the Assembly, on 13 December 1984, adopted resolution 39/81 by recorded vote.

Report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 31/9 of 8 November 1976, in which it invited Member States to examine further the draft World Treaty on the Non-Use of Force in International Relations, as well as other proposals made during the consideration of this item,

Recalling also its resolution 32/150 of 19 December 1977, by which it established the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations,

Recalling, in particular, its resolutions 33/96 of 16 December 1978, 34/13 of 9 November 1979, 35/50 of 4 December 1980, 36/31 of 13 November 1981, 37/105 of 16 December 1982 and 38/133 of 19 December 1983, in which it decided that the Special Committee should continue its work,

Taking note of the statements made by the Chairmen of the Special Committee at its sessions in 1983 and 1984, based on the informal working paper presented by the Chairman of the Special Committee at its session in 1982,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of the session it held in 1984,

Taking into account that the Special Committee has not completed the mandate entrusted to it,

Reaffirming the need for effectiveness in the universal application of the principle of non-use of force in international relations and for assistance by the United Nations in this endeavour,

Expressing the hope that the Special Committee will, on the basis of the proposals before it, complete the mandate entrusted to it as soon as possible,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall continue its work with the goal of drafting, at the earliest possible date, a world treaty on the non-use of force in international relations as well as the peaceful settlement of disputes or such other recommendations as the Committee deems appropriate;

3. Requests the Special Committee, in order to ensure progress in its work, to speed up at its session in 1985 the elaboration of the formulas of the working paper containing the main elements of the principle of non-use of force in international relations, taking duly into account the proposals submitted to it and the efforts undertaken at its sessions in 1982, 1983 and 1984;

4. Invites Governments to communicate their comments or suggestions or to bring them up to date, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 31/9;

5. Requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever it has significance for the outcome of its work;

6. Decides that the Special Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including participation in the meetings of its working group;

7. Requests the Special Committee to concentrate its work in the framework of its working group;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the necessary facilities and services;

9. Invites the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations".

General Assembly resolution 39/81

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/776) by recorded vote (80-16-11), 28 November (meeting 58); 31-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.9); agenda item 126.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Angola, Benin, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, India, Iraq, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Poland, Romania, Syrian Arab Republic, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, Venezuela, Viet Nam.

Financial implications: 5th Committee, A/39/734; S-G, A/C.5/39/68, A/C.6/39/L.11. Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 41; 6th Committee 12-19, 58, 64; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Brazil, Germany, Federal Republic of Ireland, Ivory Coast, New Zealand, Paraguay, Sweden, Turkey.

In explanation of vote, Australia, the Netherlands and Spain felt that the best way of enhancing the principle of non-use of force in international relations, already enshrined in the United Nations Charter, was not by elaborating a world treaty but by improving the existing mechanisms such as the system of collective security. The Netherlands added that its negative vote was because paragraph 2 stated that the drafting of such a treaty was the raison d'être of the Special Committee. Australia felt that the Committee's very existence would come under question if no progress was achieved in the future.

Argentina, Brazil and Mexico hoped that, in the future, extraneous factors such as political issues and activities being addressed in other forums would not hinder the work of the Special Committee. Along with Brazil, Kenya felt the Committee needed a clear mandate to make progress.

Draft Code of Offences against peace and security

The General Assembly, in December 1984, requested the International Law Commission (ILC) to continue work on the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind by elaborating an introduction as well as a list of offences. Prepared by ILC in 1954<sup>(20)</sup> in response to a 1947 Assembly request,<sup>(21)</sup> the draft Code defined offences which were crimes under international law and for which the responsible individual was to be punished. In 1982,<sup>(22)</sup> ILC had resumed work on the topic pursuant to a 1981 Assembly invitation.<sup>(23)</sup>

ILC consideration. The Commission, at its 1984 session,<sup>(24)</sup> considered the second report submitted by its Special Rapporteur on the topic, Doudou Thiam (Senegal).<sup>(25)</sup> In the report, he observed that while all offences against the peace and security of mankind were international crimes, the reverse was not necessarily true; and that the ILC objective was to prepare a code of offences against the peace and security of mankind and not an international penal code.

After considering a list of acts to be classified as offences suggested by the Special Rapporteur, ILC agreed to focus on the criminal liability of individuals and to begin drawing up a provisional list of offences, while bearing in mind the drafting of an introduction summarizing the general principles of relevant international criminal law. In addition to the offences covered in the 1954 Code, there was a general trend in ILC in favour of including colonialism, apartheid, acts causing serious damage to the human environment and economic aggression. At the same time, it considered that such phenomena as the taking of hostages, violence against persons enjoying diplomatic privileges and immunities, and the hijacking of aircraft should be approached from the angle of international terrorism; and that it would be desirable also to take account of the work of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries (see below). ILC also discussed the appropriateness of including specific provisions on the use of atomic weapons in the draft Code, and agreed to consider the matter in greater depth in the light of any views expressed in the General Assembly. These conclusions were contained in paragraph 65 of the ILC report to the Assembly.<sup>(24)</sup>

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly comments received from 10 Member States<sup>(26)</sup> in response to a December 1983 Assembly request.<sup>(27)</sup>

On 13 December 1984, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 39/80 by recorded vote.

Draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind

The General Assembly,

Mindful of Article 13, paragraph 1 a, of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolution 177(II) of 21 November 1947, by which it directed the International Law Commission to prepare a draft code of offences against the peace and security of mankind,

Having considered the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind prepared by the International Law Commission and submitted to the General Assembly in 1954,

Recalling its belief that the elaboration of a code of offences against the peace and security of mankind could contribute to strengthening international peace and security and thus to promoting and implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 36/106 of 10 December 1981, in which it invited the International Law Commission to resume its work with a view to elaborating the draft Code and to examine it with the required priority in order to review it, taking into account the results achieved by the process of the progressive development of international law,

Bearing in mind that the International Law Commission should fulfil its task on the basis of the early elaboration of draft articles,

Having considered chapter II of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-sixth session, in particular paragraph 65 of the report, containing the Commission's conclusions,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking into account the views expressed during the debate on this item at the current session,

Recognizing the importance and the urgency of the subject,

1. Requests the International Law Commission to continue its work on the elaboration of the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind by elaborating an introduction as well as a list of the offences, taking into account the progress made at its thirty-sixth session, as well as the views expressed during the thirty-ninth session of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States and intergovernmental organizations regarding the conclusions contained in paragraph 65 of the report of the International Law Commission and to include them in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fortieth session with a view to adopting, at the appropriate time, the necessary decision thereon;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind", to be considered in conjunction with the consideration of the report of the International Law Commission.

General Assembly resolution 39/80

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/775) by recorded vote (96-0-16), 5 December (meeting 63); 30-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.21); agenda item 125.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Benin, Bolivia, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Egypt, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Iran, Ivory Coast, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mali, Mauritania, Mongolia, Morocco, Nigeria, Philippines, Poland, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Sudan, Thailand, Togo, Tunisia, Viet Nam, Zaire.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape

Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Belgium, Burma, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Several States explained their abstentions. The United Kingdom said it had abstained out of regard for the African sponsors which attached particular political importance to the item. Similarly, the United States deferred to the good intentions of the sponsors. France abstained out of consideration for ILC and to safeguard the consensus necessary for its continued work. Italy, a sponsor of the draft resolution on the ILC report (see Chapter VII of this section), felt it would be inconsistent to support a text which sought to alter the Commission's work programme and priorities.

Most delegations that explained their vote questioned the wisdom of keeping the subject separate from the agenda item on the ILC report. France and Israel observed that the topic had already been entrusted to ILC. Keeping the topic as a separate item, the United Kingdom felt, put political pressure on the Commission. The United States thought the approach had a subversive effect on that body and on the long-term prospects for the codification and progressive development of international law; further, it considered it imprudent to have ILC continue work on the Code, and pushing the draft resolution to a vote was irresponsible. The Federal Republic of Germany added that separate treatment of the item could jeopardize the consensus achieved on the work of ILC.

Similar points were made by Australia and Norway (on behalf also of Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Sweden), which, nevertheless, voted in favour of the text. Ireland, while supporting the Code's elaboration, did not favour separate treatment of the topic; it also preferred that the draft resolution did not refer to the early elaboration of the draft articles, as it felt that ILC required sufficient time to produce an authoritative text.

Reservations were expressed by a number of States—among them, the Nordic countries—about paragraph 3. Australia would have voted against that paragraph, had a vote been taken. The Federal Republic of Germany and Israel said ILC did not require detailed instructions from the Sixth Committee. The United Kingdom, which had difficulties also with the sixth and last preambular paragraphs, said paragraphs 1 and 3 gave the impression that the Sixth Committee lacked confidence in ILC's ability to carry out its mandate.

France feared that ILC would lose its credibility as a juridical body if it took up such issues as nuclear weapons as part of the Code.

Draft convention against mercenaries

In December 1984, the General Assembly decided that its Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries should continue its work towards that goal, with a view to completing its mandate in 1985.

Work of the Committee against mercenaries.

The Ad Hoc Committee held its fourth session at United Nations Headquarters from 30 July to 24 August 1984,<sup>(28)</sup> in pursuance of a December 1983 Assembly resolution.<sup>(29)</sup>

The Committee re-established two Working Groups: Group A to deal with issues of definition and the convention's scope, and Group B to deal with all other issues relevant to the future convention. In addition to the documents considered at its 1983 session,<sup>(30)</sup> the Ad Hoc Committee had before it a working paper submitted later that year by Mexico to the Assembly's Sixth Committee,<sup>(31)</sup> and a topical summary of the Sixth Committee's 1983 discussion on the question,<sup>(32)</sup> as prepared by the Secretary-General at the Assembly's request.<sup>(29)</sup>

The 1984 report of the Ad Hoc Committee incorporated the reports of its Working Groups and a document prepared by the Committee's Bureau to serve as a consolidated negotiating basis for facilitating further work. In addition to definitions and the obligations of States, Group A considered the question of the characterization of offences to be covered and State responsibility, discussed a document submitted by its Chairman on a draft structure for the provisions under discussion, and produced 12 draft articles. Group B, which produced 13 draft articles, considered such questions as jurisdiction and extradition, preventive measures, status of mercenaries, damage reparation and dispute settlement, as well as a machinery for enhancing the effectiveness of the convention and a saving clause concerning the application of relevant existing international instruments.

The Committee—established in 1980<sup>(33)</sup> with envisaged membership of 35 Member States—continued to have one vacancy in 1984 (see APPENDIX III).

In the course of 1984, the Secretary-General received a series of letters with requests that they be circulated under the agenda item on mercenaries. These letters included the situations in Afghanistan (see p. 224) and in Central America (see p. 195).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 39/84 without vote.

Drafting of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need for strict observance of the principles of sovereign equality, political independence, territorial integrity of States and self-determination of peoples, enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and developed in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions, particularly resolutions 2395(XXIII) of 29 November 1968, 2465(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2548(XXIV) of 11 December 1969, 2708(XXV) of 14 December 1970 and 3103(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, and its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, as well as Security Council resolutions 405(1977) of 14 April 1977, 419(1977) of 24 November 1977, 496(1981) of 15 December 1981 and 507(1982) of 28 May 1982, in which the United Nations denounced the practice of using mercenaries, in particular against developing countries and national liberation movements,

Recalling in particular its resolution 38/137 of 19 December 1983, by which it renewed the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on its fourth session,

Recognizing that the activities of mercenaries are contrary to fundamental principles of international law, such as non-interference in the internal affairs of States, territorial integrity and independence, and seriously impede the process of self-determination of peoples struggling against colonialism, racism and apartheid and all forms of foreign domination,

Bearing in mind the pernicious impact that the activities of mercenaries have on international peace and security,

Considering that the progressive development and codification of the rules of international law on mercenaries would contribute immensely to the implementation of the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Taking account of the fact that, although the Ad Hoc Committee has made some progress, it has not yet fulfilled its mandate,

Reaffirming the need for the elaboration, at the earliest possible date, of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries and the progress made by the Ad Hoc Committee, especially during its fourth session;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee to enable it to continue its work on the drafting of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries;

3. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee, in the fulfilment of its mandate, to use the draft articles contained in chapter IV of its report, entitled "Consolidated Negotiating Basis of a convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries", as a basis for future negotiation on the text of the proposed international convention;

4. Invites the Ad Hoc Committee to take into account the suggestions and proposals of Member States submitted to the Secretary-General on the subject and the views and comments expressed at the thirty-ninth session of the General Assembly during the debate in the Sixth Committee devoted to the consideration of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee;

5. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including participation in the meetings of its working groups;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to make available to the Ad Hoc Committee at its fifth session a topical summary of the discussions which took place in the Sixth Committee during the thirty-ninth session of the General Assembly and any up-to-date and relevant documentation on the subject;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with any assistance and facilities it may require for the performance of its work;

8. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall hold its fifth session for four weeks, from 8 April to 3 May 1985;

9. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to make every effort to complete its mandate at its fifth session and to submit a draft convention to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries".

General Assembly resolution 39/84

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/777) by consensus, 6 December (meeting 64); 49-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.13), orally revised; agenda item 129.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Egypt, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guyana, India, Iraq, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Mali, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Romania, Senegal, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Financial implications: 5th Committee, A/39/817; S-G, A/C.5/39/78, A/C.6/39/L.17. Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 45; 6th Committee 49-57, 64; plenary 99.

In explanation of position, Ireland (on behalf of the 10 States members of the European Community (EC)), Denmark (on behalf of the five Nordic States) and Japan felt that the wording of the fifth preambular paragraph was far-reaching: the misdeeds of private individuals acting in a personal capacity could not be imputed to States or regarded as breaches of international law. The United States said its participation in the consensus did not mean agreement with that paragraph. Concurring with the United States that paragraph 9 should not be interpreted as imposing a rigid time-limit for the completion of the Committee's mandate, the EC members asserted that a draft convention should not be submitted until all outstanding issues had been solved, and that the Committee must continue to work on the basis of consensus.

Draft articles on non-navigational uses of international watercourses

The International Law Commission, at its 1984 session,<sup>(24)</sup> continued work on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses, as recommended by the General Assembly in December 1983,<sup>(24)</sup> by taking up the second report by its Special Rapporteur, Jens Evensen (Norway).<sup>(25)</sup>

The report—the fifth on the topic, including those prepared by two predecessors to the current Special Rapporteur—contained a tentative draft of a convention, revised on the basis of debates in ILC and the Assembly's Sixth Committee on the 1983 draft.<sup>(26)</sup> The Special Rapporteur observed in the report that the political aspect of the drafting task could not be underestimated if the convention was to be broadly acceptable to the international community.

The 1984 draft consisted of 41 articles contained in six chapters: two new articles added to the 1983 text concerned the status of international watercourses, their waters, constructions, etc. in armed conflicts; and obligations under general, regional or bilateral agreements or arrangements. As suggested by the Special Rapporteur, ILC, at its 1984 session, focused its discussion on the nine articles comprising the first two chapters—an introduction, and general principles, rights and duties of watercourse States—and subsequently referred them to its Drafting Committee for further consideration. Owing to lack of time, however, the Committee was unable to do so at the 1984 session.

In its 1984 resolution (39/85) on the work of ILC, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account government comments, ILC should continue work on the topic.

Chapter III

States and international law

Protecting diplomats and consular missions continued to be a major concern for the United Nations, which received, throughout 1984, reports of incidents threatening their security and safety. In December, the General Assembly condemned, by resolution 39/83, acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and urged States to ensure their security.

The International Law Commission (ILC) (see p. 1117) continued preparing draft articles with a view to elaborating legal instruments on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier, jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, international liability for injurious consequences arising from acts not prohibited by international law, and State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts.

In the past 40 years, more had been done by the United Nations in codifying international law than in all the previous years of history, the Secretary-General pointed out (see p. 4).

Protection of diplomats

As at 31 December 1984, the number of parties to the various international instruments relating to the protection of diplomats and to diplomatic and consular relations<sup>(1)</sup> was as follows: 142 States were parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations,<sup>(2)</sup> 41 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality,<sup>(3)</sup> and 52 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes,<sup>(3)</sup> the Netherlands having acceded to the three instruments in 1984.

With Liberia acceding in 1984, the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations<sup>(4)</sup> had 109 parties; 32 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality;<sup>(5)</sup> and 40 States were parties to the Optional Protocol on compulsory dispute settlement.<sup>(5)</sup>

Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,<sup>(6)</sup> had 61 States parties, Greece and Jamaica having adhered in 1984.

Report of the Secretary-General. Following a December 1983 request of the General Assembly,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted in September 1984 a report, with later addenda,<sup>(8)</sup> containing information from States on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and on actions taken to bring offenders to justice.

Austria reported a June 1984 car-bombing near the Turkish Embassy in Vienna, which killed a Turkish diplomat. Referring to attacks in May and July 1983 against Turkish representatives,<sup>(9)</sup> Belgium said the perpetrators were being sought, as were those responsible for a May 1983 bombing of a Greek travel agency in Brussels.

Burma reported an October 1983 bombing attack in Rangoon (see p. 213), during a visit by the President of the Republic of Korea, resulting in a number of people being killed and injured. Burma stated that the perpetrators, acting on the order of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, had been sentenced. The latter said the allegations were groundless and quoted evidence showing, in its view, that the incident had been staged by the Republic of Korea.

Greece provided information on several 1983 and 1984 incidents. In 1983 were the January theft of a Syrian Embassy diplomatic pouch; the June placing of explosive devices at the Iraqi Embassy; and the gunning down of a Jordanian Embassy employee and killing of a United States sailor in November. The 1984 incidents were: the killing of the British Cultural Attaché and thwarting of an attempted assassination of the Israeli Chargé d'affaires, in March; and an attempt on the life of a United States soldier in April. Greece also reported that the culprits in the 1982 seizure of the Nigerian Embassy and Consulate in Athens had been convicted.

Jordan updated information on October 1983 assassination attempts against its Ambassadors to India and Italy, and the killings in November 1983 of two officers of its Athens Embassy and a Madrid Embassy officer in December. Jordan also reported that in April 1984 its Embassy in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya had been set afire and looted. The Netherlands reported two 1983 incidents—windows of the Consulate-General of El Salvador at The Hague broken in March, and an attempt to set fire to the chancery of the Iranian Embassy at The Hague in September. It also presented information concerning a January 1984 break-in at the Surinamese Embassy at The Hague by a group of people who were subsequently charged.

The USSR recounted incidents during 1983 in various countries: in the United States, attacks on the San Francisco USSR Consul in June and Consulate in September, and several acts against its Mission to the United Nations and USSR employees of the Secretariat, in February and March; in Japan, attacks with explosives against Consulates in Osaka (May) and Sapporo (September); and in France, an armed attack in April on the Marseilles Consulate. In 1984 the incidents were: the February bombing of the residential complex of its New York Mission; the May arrest of an attaché of the USSR Washington Embassy; a March attack on a Tokyo Embassy official; in the Federal Republic of Germany, aggressive acts against the USSR Bonn Embassy and its Hamburg Consulate in June and July, and the July detention of a vehicle carrying a diplomatic bag at Helmstad.

Other 1984 incidents were reported by: Cyprus, the October car-bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Nicosia, also reported by Israel; and France, the February assassination of the Ambassador of the United Arab Emirates to France and the March shooting of the United States Consul-General at Strasbourg.

Equatorial Guinea, Finland, Kiribati, Lesotho and Suriname informed the Secretary-General that they had no incidents to report.

The Secretary-General's report also contained a report on the state of ratification of and accession to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and the views of eight States (Australia, Austria, Egypt, Finland, France, Israel, Sweden, USSR) on measures needed to enhance the protection of diplomatic missions and representatives.

Communications. By a letter of 17 April 1984 to the Secretary-General,<sup>(10)</sup> the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya reported that its diplomatic mission in London had been surrounded that day by the British authorities, and that other incidents involving the British police had taken place, such as the detention of several of its diplomats and a correspondent, and the breaking into of the Libyan Arab College and residences of Libyan students in London.

That version of events was disputed on 18 April by the United Kingdom,<sup>(11)</sup> which stated that its police wished to search the mission with the permission of the authorities of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya after shots fired from it had killed a police-woman and injured 10 people. It also said that no Libyan was currently under arrest as a result of the incident and that no attempt had been made to force entry into the school or students' homes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/83, as recommended by the Sixth (Legal) Committee.

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Emphasizing the important role of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as of missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, in the maintenance of international peace and the promotion of friendly relations among States and also the need for enhancing global understanding thereof,

Emphasizing also the duty of States to take all appropriate steps, as required by international law:

(a) To protect the premises of diplomatic and consular missions, as well as of missions to international intergovernmental organizations,

(b) To prevent any attacks on diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as on representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations,

(c) To apprehend the offenders and to bring them to justice,

Deeply concerned about the continued large number of failures to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and about the serious threat presented by such violations to the maintenance of normal and peaceful international relations, which are necessary for co-operation among States,

Expressing its sympathy for the victims of illegal acts against diplomatic and consular representatives and missions, as well as against representatives and missions to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations, in particular those aimed at ensuring the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that only a small number of States have so far, in response to the call by the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth, thirty-sixth, thirty-seventh and thirty-eighth sessions, become parties to the relevant conventions concerning the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Convinced that the reporting procedures established under General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in Assembly resolutions 36/33 of 13 November 1981, 37/108 of 16 December 1982 and 38/136 of 19 December 1983 are important steps in the efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Desiring to maintain and further strengthen those reporting procedures,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations;

3. Emphasizes the importance of enhanced awareness throughout the world of the necessity of ensuring the protection, security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials, as well as of the role of the United Nations in this regard;

4. Urges States to observe and to implement the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations and, in particular, to take all necessary measures in conformity with their international obligations to ensure effectively the protection, security and safety of all diplomatic and consular missions and representatives officially present in territory under their jurisdiction, including practicable measures to prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions and representatives;

5. Recommends that States should co-operate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State, with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives and with regard to exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

6. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

7. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of the principles and rules of international law concerning the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, to make use of the means for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General;

8. Requests:

(a) All States to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

(b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent applicable, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report as promptly as possible on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 8 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to invite States to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General, when a serious violation has been reported pursuant to paragraph 8 (a) above, to draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 8 above;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a report on the state of ratification of, and accessions to, the instruments referred to in paragraph 6 above, as well as the reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 8 and 10 above, and invites him to submit any views he may wish to express on these matters;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives: report of the Secretary-General".

General Assembly resolution 39/83

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/722) without vote, 23 November (meeting 55); 17-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.8); agenda item 128.

Sponsors: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Canada, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Japan, Nigeria, Norway, Philippines, Sierra Leone, Sweden, Turkey, Uruguay.

Status of diplomatic bags and couriers

In response to a December 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(12)</sup> ILC, at its 1984 session,<sup>(13)</sup> continued preparing draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier, with a view to elaborating a legal instrument on the topic.

The Special Rapporteur, Alexander Yankov (Bulgaria), in presenting his fifth report,<sup>(14)</sup> noted that ILC had at its disposal at the current session the complete set of draft articles on the topic. The fifth report was essentially a progress report intended to establish a linkage between the work accomplished and future work; it sought to ascertain the extent to which the draft articles coincided with the views arising from the Sixth Committee's 1983 debate and from the new materials provided by Governments or obtained from research by the Secretariat's Codification Division. Information received from 18 Governments on national laws, regulations, administrative acts and recommended practices relating to the topic was also provided to ILC.<sup>(15)</sup>

The Special Rapporteur also submitted addenda to his fourth (1983) report,<sup>(16)</sup> containing the text of, and explanations to, draft articles 20 to 42.

The Commission resumed its discussion of draft articles 20 to 23 (on inviolability and immunity from jurisdiction) and considered draft articles 24 to 35 (on various categories of exemption and status), referring all those articles to its Drafting Committee. It also commenced discussion, and decided to resume consideration in 1985, of draft articles 36 to 42: inviolability of the diplomatic bag (article 36), exemption from customs and other inspection (article 37), exemption from customs duties and all dues and taxes (article 38), protective measures in circumstances preventing the delivery of the diplomatic bag (article 39), obligations of the transit State in case of force majeure or fortuitous event (article 40), non-recognition of States or Governments or absence of diplomatic or consular relations (article 41) and relation to other conventions and international agreements (article 42).

On the recommendation of the Drafting Committee, ILC provisionally adopted in 1984 draft articles and commentaries concerning the diplomatic courier's nationality (article 9), functions (article 10), end of the functions (article 11), the courier declared persona non grata or not acceptable (article 12), facilities (article 13), entry into the territory of the receiving State or the transit State (article 14), freedom of movement (article 15), personal protection and inviolability (article 16), inviolability of temporary accommodation (article 17), exemption from personal examination, customs duties and inspection (article 19) and exemption from dues and taxes (article 20), as well as an amendment to draft article 8 (appointment of the courier) and its modified commentary.

The articles provisionally adopted in 1984, along with those previously adopted, were transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in August.<sup>(17)</sup> trade marks and other intellectual properties (article 16), fiscal liabilities and customs duties (article 17), share-holdings and membership of bodies corporate (article 18), ships employed in commercial service (article 19) and arbitration (article 20).

While the Commission did not conclude its deliberations on article 19 or take up article 20, due to lack of time, it adopted provisionally, on the recommendations of its Drafting Committee, draft articles and commentaries on contracts of employment (article 13) and personal injuries and damage to property (article 14)—both of which had been revised in 1983<sup>(4)</sup>—and articles 16 to 18. The texts were transmitted to the Assembly in August by the Secretary-General.<sup>(5)</sup>

On draft article 19, some ILC members asserted that it would put in a disadvantageous position the maritime transport and trade of developing countries, which were basically controlled by Governments and hence not always motivated by profit-making. Others considered it unfair in the context of international shipping to expect a private merchant ship to deal or compete with a governmental one while the latter enjoyed complete immunity from jurisdiction. A number of members preferred the draft article to use more general terms than rely heavily on Anglo-American systems of law and particularly admiralty law. Based on the discussion, the Special Rapporteur subsequently submitted to the Drafting Committee a revised version of the draft article.

State immunities, liability and responsibility

In response to a December 1983 General Assembly recommendation,<sup>(1)</sup> ILC, at its 1984 session,<sup>(2)</sup> continued drafting articles on three aspects of international law concerning States: jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, and State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts.

In resolution 39/85, adopted in December, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account government comments, ILC should continue its work on those topics.

Draft articles on State immunities

In 1984, ILC continued preparing draft articles on the jurisdictional immunities of States and their property. Its work, detailed in its report,<sup>(2)</sup> was based on a sixth report by the Special Rapporteur, Sompong Sucharitkul (Thailand),<sup>(3)</sup> containing five draft articles for part III (which comprised articles 11 to 20, concerning exceptions to State immunity). The five draft articles covered patents,

Draft articles on State liability

ILC at its 1984 session continued work on international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law. It had before it the fourth (1983) report<sup>(6)</sup> of the Special Rapporteur, Robert Q. Quentin-Baxter (New Zealand), as well as his fifth (1984) report.<sup>(7)</sup> The latter report presented, and commented on, draft articles 1 to 5, which covered general provisions that corresponded broadly to the first section of the schematic outline prepared in 1982.<sup>(8)</sup>

Also before ILC was a survey of State practice<sup>(9)</sup> prepared by the Secretariat in response to the Commission's 1983 request,<sup>(6)</sup> and a report<sup>(10)</sup> containing the replies received, as at 9 February 1984, to a 1983 questionnaire, prepared by the Special Rapporteur with the Secretariat's assistance and addressed to 16 selected United Nations and other organizations to ascertain whether obligations which States owed each other and discharged as members of international organizations might fulfil or replace some procedures indicated in the topic's schematic outline as previously prepared.<sup>(6)</sup> Those responding were the International Narcotics Control Board, IAEA, FAO, WHO and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Although significant differences of opinion and emphasis remained, there was almost unanimous agreement in ILC that its work on the question should continue, and that the topic was correctly centred on the need to avoid—or to minimize and, if necessary, repair—transboundary loss or injury arising as a physical consequence of an activity within the territory or control of another State. Many stressed the difficulty and novelty of the topic, but concluded that challenges must be met—if only because scientific progress could not be stopped and because traditional rules of international responsibility for wrongful acts were no longer responsive to all the international community's needs.

Based on the discussion, the Commission, rather than sending the proposed draft articles to its Drafting Committee, invited the Special Rapporteur to continue his research and to prepare draft articles which could be considered together with draft articles 1 to 5.

Draft articles on State responsibility

In 1984, ILC continued preparing draft articles on State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts, and had before it a fifth report by the Special Rapporteur, Willem Riphagen (Netherlands),<sup>(1)</sup> containing 12 new draft articles (articles 5 to 16) to follow four others (articles 1 to 4) provisionally adopted in 1983<sup>(6)</sup> for part II, on the content, forms and degrees of State responsibility. (Article 4 had been provisionally adopted in 1983 as article 5.) The new drafts, based on previous reports and discussions, were meant to replace all earlier draft articles proposed for part II, and dealt with the legal consequences of international crimes, including aggression.

In discussing the drafts, several Commission members commented that the new submission marked a major breakthrough in considering part II and that it should enable ILC to progress in the drafting of articles within a measurable time-scale. The Commission referred to the Drafting Committee draft articles 5 and 6, dealing with definitions and certain rights of an "injured" State.

Chapter IV

International organizations and international law

In 1984, the United Nations remained concerned with strengthening its role in maintaining international peace and security, and the General Assembly requested the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization to devote more time to considering that question (resolution 39/88 A).

The Assembly, having considered the annual report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, urged the host country, the United States, to continue ensuring the security of diplomatic missions and their personnel (resolution 39/87). The Assembly again called on States which hosted international organizations or conferences to accord to specified national liberation movements the facilities, privileges and immunities necessary for their functioning (resolution 39/76).

The Assembly once more deferred consideration of an item on the implementation of United Nations resolutions, until it resumed its thirty-ninth session in 1985 (decision 39/456), and of draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences, until its fortieth (1985) session (decision 39/419).

Topics related to this chapter. International peace and security. Legal aspects of international political relations.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

In 1984, the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization discussed, but did not conclude consideration of, the question of maintaining international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations, in particular the Security Council, and to enable it to discharge fully its responsibilities under the Charter.

Report of the Secretary-General for 1983/84

The Secretary-General, in his annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization (p. 3), stressed the importance of preserving and strengthening the United Nations as a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations, and pointed out that general acceptance of Charter principles as rules to be lived by at all times by Governments was still far away.

Noting, among other things, that the non-implementation and proliferation of resolutions had had debilitating effects on the Organization's efforts in promoting peace and economic co-operation, the Secretary-General stressed the need to reaffirm Charter obligations and for all States to work towards striking a balance between national and international interests in order to make the United Nations work better.

Activities of the Special Committee

The 47-member Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, meeting in New York from 2 to 27 April 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> resumed its consideration of Member States' proposals on rationalizing the existing procedures of the United Nations and adopted agreed conclusions towards that end. Those conclusions were subsequently approved by the Assembly in resolution 39/88 B (see p. 376). In addition, the Committee continued considering the peaceful settlement of disputes (see p. 1087) and ways to maintain international peace and security (see also p. 114).

Taking up the latter topic under an extended mandate given by the Assembly in 1983,<sup>(2)</sup> an open-ended Working Group of the Committee held 13 meetings between 11 and 23 April, devoting the first six to discussing how to proceed with its work. It also considered a working paper—submitted by Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand and Spain—on prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute,<sup>(3)</sup> containing suggested points for discussion and proposals for enhancing the functions of the United Nations organs for preventing international conflicts, particularly those of the Security Council and the Secretary-General, and the strengthening of co-operation between the organs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

During its consideration of the question, the General Assembly had before it an August 1984 report by the Secretary-General,<sup>(4)</sup> containing the comments submitted by Suriname in response to a 1983 Assembly invitation<sup>(2)</sup> for States' observations on strengthening the United Nations role in the maintenance of international peace and security and on related proposals.

On 13 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted, under the agenda item on the report of the Special Committee, resolution 39/88 A without vote.

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its support for the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 686(VII) of 5 December 1952, 992(X) of 21 November 1955, 2285(XXII) of 5 December 1967, 2552(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2697(XXV) of 11 December 1970, 2968(XXVII) of 14 December 1972 and 3349(XXIX) of 17 December 1974,

Recalling also its resolutions 2925(XXVII) of 27 November 1972, 3073(XXVIII) of 30 November 1973 and 3282(XXIX) of 12 December 1974 on the strengthening of the role of the United Nations,

Recalling especially its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its resolutions 31/28 of 29 November 1976, 32/45 of 8 December 1977, 33/94 of 16 December 1978, 34/147 of 17 December 1979, 35/164 of 15 December 1980, 36/122 of 11 December 1981, 37/114 of 16 December 1982 and 38/141 of 19 December 1983,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh and thirty-ninth sessions as well as of the views and comments expressed on them by Member States,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization on the work of the session it held in 1984,

Taking into account the elaboration by the Special Committee of the outline for a handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and the conclusions thereon,

Noting the importance that pre-session consultations among the members of the Special Committee and other interested States may have in facilitating the fulfilment of its task,

Conscious of the fact that the year 1985 marks the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations,

Considering that the Special Committee has not yet fulfilled the mandate entrusted to it,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall convene its next session from 4 to 29 March 1985;

3. Requests the Special Committee at its session in 1985:

(a) To accord priority by devoting more time to the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations, in particular the Security Council, and to enable it to discharge fully its responsibilities under the Charter in this field; this necessitates the examination, inter alia, of the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations which may lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute; the Special Committee will work on all questions with the aim of submitting its conclusions to the General Assembly, in accordance with paragraph 5 below, for the adoption of such recommendations as the Assembly deems appropriate; in doing so, the Special Committee should continue its work on the working paper on the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations which may lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute or any revision thereof, as well as other proposals which might be made;

(b) To continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context:

(i) To continue consideration of the proposal contained in the working papers on the establishment of a commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation;

(ii) To examine the report of the Secretary-General on the progress of work on the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

4. Requests the Special Committee to keep the question of the rationalization of the procedures of the United Nations under review and to revert to its work on this topic when it deems appropriate;

5. Also requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever that has significance for the outcome of its work;

6. Urges members of the Special Committee to participate fully in its work in fulfilment of the mandate entrusted to it;

7. Decides that the Special Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including in the meetings of its working groups;

8. Invites Governments to submit or to bring up to date, if they deem it necessary, their observations and proposals, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 3499(XXX);

9. Requests the Secretary-General to render all assistance to the Special Committee;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, on the basis of the outline elaborated by the Special Committee and in the light of the views expressed in the course of the discussions in the Sixth Committee and in the Special Committee, a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, and to report to the Special Committee at its session in 1985 on the progress of work, before submitting to it the draft handbook in its final form, with a view to its approval at a later stage;

11. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

13 December 1984      Meeting 99      Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/781 & Corr.1) without vote, 6 December (meeting 64); 35-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.18 & Corr.1), orally revised; agenda item 133.

Sponsors: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Congo, Cyprus, Egypt, Germany, Federal Republic of, Indonesia, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Kenya, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Philippines, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Singapore, Spain, Thailand, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Financial implications: 5th Committee, A/39/818; S-G, A/C.5/39/79, A/C.6/39/L.20. Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 45; 6th Committee 23-31, 64; plenary 99.

Another draft, sponsored by Iran and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya,<sup>(5)</sup> was not acted on.

The Sixth Committee acted first on the 35-nation draft, on the proposal (adopted by 73 votes to 23, with 26 abstentions) of Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand and Spain. The Committee took no action on the two-nation draft as a result of a proposal by France and the United Kingdom that the Committee, under rule 131 of the Assembly's rules of procedure, decide not to vote on a second draft on the same question; that proposal was adopted by 46 votes to 36, with 39 abstentions. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said that the proposal was designed to subvert the democratic character of United Nations proceedings and that such tactics would lead to paralysis and a new kind of veto. The Syrian Arab Republic stated that the proposal was a procedural manoeuvre to prevent a vote on the two-nation draft; if there was general opposition to that draft, it should be expressed through a democratic vote. Iran also spoke against the motion. Egypt abstained in that action, stating that the Sixth Committee was not the right place to discuss the content of the two-nation text.

The two-Power draft would have had the Assembly request the Special Committee to examine what the text's sponsors termed the adverse effects of the voting method in the Security Council, taking into account, among other things, the need to restrict the use of the unanimity rule (the right of veto) with respect to questions relating to the rights of peoples struggling for self-determination and liberation, and the fact that maintaining international peace and security was the common responsibility of all Member States.

Implementation of UN resolutions

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly—which, in December 1983,<sup>(6)</sup> had retained on its agenda an item on implementation of United Nations resolutions for consideration at its resumed thirty-eighth session—adopted decision 38/459 on an oral proposal by its President at the closing of that session in September 1984.

Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations

At its 106th plenary meeting, on 17 September 1984, the General Assembly decided to include in the draft agenda of its thirty-ninth session the item entitled "Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations".

General Assembly decision 38/459

Adopted without vote

Oral proposal by President; agenda item 42.

By decision 39/456 of 18 December, the Assembly decided to resume its thirty-ninth session, at a date to be announced, for the sole purpose of considering 13 items, one of which was the implementation of United Nations resolutions (see p. 374).

Host country relations

Throughout 1984, the Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued its efforts to resolve with the United States, the host country, questions of common concern to the United Nations diplomatic community and to help improve the community's relations with New York City's local population.

Consideration by the Committee on host country relations. The 15-member Committee on Relations with the Host Country met seven times in 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> in pursuance of a December 1983 General Assembly request,<sup>(2)</sup> and considered various aspects of relations between the Headquarters diplomatic community and the United States. Summaries of communications by Member States on the security of their missions were contained in the Committee's report to the Assembly.<sup>(1)</sup>

In February, the USSR complained that three explosives, thrown into its Riverdale (New York City) residential complex by what it called the terrorist organization "Jewish Direct Action", had destroyed one car and seriously damaged two others. The United States condemned the attack and stated that an intensive investigation was being carried out by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the New York City Police Department under the auspices of the Joint Terrorist Task Force; further, it pointed out that it had placed additional security coverage at USSR diplomatic locations.

In October, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, recalling similar protests in January 1984 and June 1983,<sup>(3)</sup> complained to the Committee of restrictions imposed on the use of its residential property in Englewood, New Jersey, and on the movement of its mission members (limited to the five boroughs of New York City); it asked the Committee to negotiate elimination of harassment of missions based on political factors and to request the Secretary-General to arbitrate. The United States replied that its actions had not been based on reciprocity or political considerations but on certain events which were breaches of diplomatic norms; no country waived its right to maintain public order or diminish its capability to protect its citizens. It added that no delegate had the right to reside anywhere in the United States; a residence in the proximity of the United Nations seemed appropriate and for this purpose the five New York City boroughs were more than adequate.

The Committee discussed at four meetings the implications of the most recent United States legislation pertinent to the United Nations diplomatic community: its 1983 Foreign Missions Amendments Act, by which, beginning on 1 February 1984, the head of a mission was required to notify the United States Department of State of the lapse or termination of liability insurance coverage held on motor vehicles, vessels and aircraft owned by the mission, its members or their families; when any such person not covered by liability insurance was found negligent of satisfying a court-rendered judgement on, or was legally liable for, injury or damage, the State Department would impose a surcharge on the mission amounting to the unsatisfied portion of the judgement or an estimated amount of damage incurred by the victim.

At meetings in February, April and June, the Committee heard the views of States on the question. The USSR called the new legislation a departure from the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations<sup>(4)</sup> and the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, adding that the insurance problem could be dealt with adequately without jeopardizing the missions' diplomatic status, rights and privileges. Bulgaria shared that view. France and Honduras regretted that no consultations had taken place before the legislation was enacted. The United States, observing that some 20,000 diplomatic vehicles in the country fell under different state-mandated laws, spoke of the merit of a unified approach for safeguarding mandatory insurance requirements; needless to say, the Headquarters Agreement and the 1961 Vienna Convention continued to govern privileges and immunities accorded to United Nations missions.

Subsequently, in July, the United States notified all missions that a programme had been developed to meet the liability insurance needs of the diplomatic community, and that the federal Government, instead of state authorities, would henceforth issue all diplomatic motor vehicle registrations and licence plates. Under the new arrangement, special justification was required for missions to use more than five official cars, and the State Department's Office of Foreign Missions would keep the record of proof of vehicle ownership.

The Committee, in co-operation with the United Nations Secretariat and the United States Mission to the United Nations, organized two talks in 1984: one, in February, on immunities of diplomats in United States court proceedings, and the other, in May, concerning the parking situation in New York City. A contact group, subsequently established to seek practical solutions relating to the first topic, met twice and submitted questions to the host country on the possibility of gathering admissible evidence from a diplomat outside formal court proceedings.

Other matters considered by the Committee included immigration and customs procedures at New York airports, the possibility of establishing a commissary at Headquarters for diplomats and staff, the feasibility of medical insurance for the diplomatic community, and the public image of that community in the host city.

By recommendations approved on 18 November, the Committee, among other things, urged the host country to prevent, and punish, acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel. It also expressed hope that its contact group would contribute to establishing procedures for prosecuting law-breakers, and agreed that adherence to the Headquarters Agreement was indispensable to ensure normal functioning of the United Nations and missions. The Committee appealed to the host country to review its parking measures and to consult with the Committee on them. It urged intensified efforts to acquaint the people of New York City with the importance of the functions of diplomatic missions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 39/87 without vote.

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations and the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recalling further that the problems related to the privileges and immunities of all missions accredited to the United Nations, the security of the missions and the safety of their personnel are of great importance and concern to Member States, as well as the primary responsibility of the host country,

Noting with deep concern the continued acts violating the security and the safety of the personnel of those missions accredited to the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 58 of its report;

2. Strongly condemns any terrorist and criminal acts violating the security of missions accredited to the United Nations and the safety of their personnel;

3. Urges the host country to continue to take all necessary measures to ensure effectively the protection, security and safety of the missions accredited to the United Nations and their personnel, including practicable measures to prohibit illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts and activities against the security and safety of such missions and representatives;

4. Reiterates that adherence of all Member States to the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and to other relevant agreements is an indispensable condition for the normal functioning of the Organization and permanent missions in New York and underlines the necessity for avoiding any action not consistent with obligations in accordance with the Agreement and international law;

5. Calls upon all countries, especially the host country, to build up public awareness by explaining, through all available means, the importance of the role played by the United Nations and all missions accredited to it in the strengthening of international peace and security;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country and to continue to stress the importance of effective measures to avoid acts of terrorism and violence against the missions and their personnel;

7. Requests the Committee on Relations with the Host Country to continue its work, in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

Observer status of national liberation movements in international organizations

The Secretary-General submitted a report in September 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> containing comments received from seven Governments (Argentina, Byelorussian SSR, Hungary, Mexico, Sri Lanka, Ukrainian SSR, USSR) on their implementation of a 1982 General Assembly resolution concerning the observer status of national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity and/or by the League of Arab States.<sup>(2)</sup> In 1980,<sup>(3)</sup> and again in 1982,<sup>(2)</sup> the Assembly had called on States to accord to the movements in question the facilities, privileges and immunities necessary to perform their functions, in accordance with the provisions of the 1975 Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in Their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character.<sup>(4)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 39/76 by recorded vote.

Observer status of national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity and/or by the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 35/167 of 15 December 1980 and 37/104 of 16 December 1982,

Recalling also its resolutions 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974, 3280(XXIX) of 10 December 1974 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind the resolution of the United Nations Conference on the Representation of States in Their Relations with International Organizations relating to the observer status of national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity and/or by the League of Arab States,

Noting that the Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in Their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character, of 14 March 1975, regulates only the representation of States in their relations with international organizations,

Taking into account the continued and uninterrupted current practice of inviting the above-mentioned national liberation movements to participate as observers in the sessions of the General Assembly, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and in the work of the conferences held under the auspices of such international organizations,

Convinced that the participation of the national liberation movements referred to above in the work of international organizations helps to strengthen international peace and co-operation,

Desirous of ensuring the effective participation of the above-mentioned national liberation movements as observers in the work of international organizations and of regulating, to that end, their status and the facilities, privileges and immunities necessary for the performance of their functions,

1. Urges all States that have not done so, in particular those which are hosts to international organizations or to conferences convened by, or held under the auspices of, international organizations of a universal character, to consider as soon as possible the question of ratifying, or acceding to, the Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in Their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character;

2. Calls once more upon the States concerned to accord to the delegations of the national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity and/or by the League of Arab States, and accorded observer status by international organizations, the facilities, privileges and immunities necessary for the performance of their functions in accordance with the provisions of the Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in Their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 39/76

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 106-10-21 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/771) by vote (92-10-17), 7 December (meeting 65); 27-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.25); agenda item 121.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Bahrain, Benin, Burkina Faso, Cuba, Democratic Yemen, Iraq, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zambia.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 6th Committee 31-33, 65; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Burma, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Uruguay.

The vote in the Sixth Committee was requested by Israel.

In explanation of vote, Israel and the United Kingdom observed that the 1975 Convention, whose entry into force required ratification or accession by 35 States, had 26 signatories to date, including only a few of the sponsors of the draft resolution and none of the principal host States of United Nations bodies.

Israel went on to question the draft's legal value, since, it said, States not parties to a convention, which was not in force, were being asked to apply that instrument to an entity possessing none of the attributes of a State, and the Secretary-General was being requested to follow up the implementation of an inapplicable resolution. In a similar vein, Belgium, France and the United Kingdom believed that paragraph 1 did not reflect established law and that the Convention was applicable only to States. Japan and the United States similarly objected to the paragraph. France and Belgium said the Convention's scope of application could not be enlarged by an Assembly resolution. Further, Belgium, Canada and the United Kingdom considered it unwarranted to accord to representatives of national liberation movements privileges and immunities on the same footing as those of States. The Netherlands, while not opposed in principle to granting certain privileges and immunities to those movements having observer status, felt that such status did not carry the right to the same privileges and immunities granted to representatives of States. Japan and the United States considered paragraph 2 to have no legal basis.

Belgium and Italy—both hosts to international organizations—pointed out that they were not party to the Convention; they, and the United Kingdom, especially objected to the reference to host countries. Kenya said attempts had been made to give the impression that the States which had not become parties to the Convention were opposed to the granting of privileges and immunities to the liberation movements; that was not the case with Kenya, which was host to a number of international organizations.

The United States felt that texts of the kind in question weakened the authority of resolutions on widely accepted conventions, urging States that had not done so to accede to them. The United Kingdom felt it would be undesirable for the Committee to take up the question in future.

Draft standard rules of procedure for conferences

The General Assembly, which had asked the Secretary-General in 1980<sup>(1)</sup> to propose draft standard rules of procedure for special conferences of the United Nations, had deferred consideration of the topic since his first report, issued in 1981.<sup>(2)</sup>

In a November 1984 report,<sup>(3)</sup> submitted in pursuance of a December 1983 General Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he had received no comments from either Governments or international organizations and had no changes to propose in the draft texts he had submitted in 1983.<sup>(5)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The Assembly, in December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted decision 39/419 without vote.

Draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee:

(a) Decided to defer until its fortieth session consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General on draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences;

(b) Again invited Governments and the international organizations concerned to communicate to the Secretary-General, by 1 May 1985, their observations on the above-mentioned reports;

(c) Decided to request the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a report on draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences.

Chapter V

Treaties and agreements

In 1984, the General Assembly decided by resolution 39/86 that the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations should be held at Vienna, Austria, from 18 February to 21 March 1986.

Work reviewing the multilateral treaty-making process was completed in 1984, and the Assembly, in resolution 39/90, recommended to States which were considering initiating such a treaty to give attention to the procedures set forth by the Working Group established to review that process.

The Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies entered into force in July 1984 (see p. 106)

Review of the multilateral treaty-making process

The Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process, first established by the General Assembly in 1981<sup>(1)</sup> to determine whether current treaty-making methods were as efficient, economical and effective as they could be, completed its review and on 23 November 1984 adopted a final document on the subject.<sup>(2)</sup> The Group, established in 1984 by the Sixth (Legal) Committee pursuant to a December 1983 Assembly decision,<sup>(3)</sup> held 13 meetings between 27 September and 23 November,<sup>(4)</sup> basing its work on a compilation by its Chairman of ideas, suggestions and proposals submitted by members of the Group during its 1982<sup>(5)</sup> and 1983<sup>(6)</sup> sessions.

The final document adopted by the Group listed questions to be taken into account by a State wishing to initiate a multilateral treaty, including whether such a treaty was the best means for achieving the intended objective; the extent to which the subject of the proposed treaty was already regulated by international law through treaties and State practice; and the extent of the international community's interest. It also set out drafting and adoption procedures and suggested the preparation of a handbook on multilateral treaty-making.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/90.

Review of the multilateral treaty-making processThe General Assembly,*

Bearing in mind that multilateral treaties are an important means of ensuring co-operation among States and an important primary source of international law,

Conscious, therefore, that the process of elaboration of multilateral treaties, directed towards the progressive development of international law and its codification, forms an important part of the work of the United Nations and of the international community in general,

Aware of the responsibility which active involvement in the process of multilateral treaty-making places on Governments,

Convinced that optimum use should be made of the finite resources available for the elaboration of multilateral treaties,

Conscious of the desirability of consolidating and disseminating information on the procedures followed by the United Nations in the preparation and formulation of the text of multilateral treaties,

Taking into account that in certain important and specialized areas interested parties have developed methods of negotiation of proven and continued value,

Bearing in mind the important contribution of the International Law Commission to the preparation of multilateral treaties during the past thirty-six years,

Aware that the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee has been reviewing certain aspects of multilateral treaty-making,

Having taken note of the report of the Secretary-General on the review of the multilateral treaty-making process submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth session and of the views of Governments and of the International Law Commission contained in the addenda thereto,

Having taken note also of the subsequent reports of the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh sessions and of the replies and observations made by Governments and international organizations,

Having considered the statements made at the current session during the debate in the Sixth Committee,

Noting that the Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process, first established in accordance with General Assembly resolution 36/112 of 10 December 1981, concluded its mandate, and taking note of the report of the Working Group, together with its final document on the review of the multilateral treaty-making process,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process for the completion of its mandate and for its final document;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate to all States Members the final document of the Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process;

3. Recommends to all States which are considering the initiation of a multilateral treaty within the framework of the United Nations to give consideration to the procedures set out in the final document of the Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare, for information and possible use by Governments, a handbook on multilateral treaty-making as described in paragraph 18 of the final document of the Working Group on the Review of the Multilateral Treaty-making Process, to be made available within two years;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To examine, together with the specialized and related agencies, and other international organizations exercising depositary functions, the feasibility and financial implications of consolidating, in a similar way to the volumes entitled Multilateral Treaties Deposited with the Secretary-General, the information regarding depositary functions performed by these international organizations;

(b) To hold consultations on the feasibility and financial implications of publishing, at regular intervals, consolidated information regarding depositary functions performed by Governments;

(c) To examine the regulations in force for giving effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations, with a view to their possible updating;

(d) To invite the specialized and related agencies, and other international organizations in consultative status with the United Nations, to communicate to the Secretary-General information regarding their respective treaty-making activities; and to report thereon to the Sixth Committee;

6. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to continue to prepare for publication as soon as possible new editions of the Handbook of Final Clauses and the Summary of the Practice of the Secretary-General as Depositary of Multilateral Agreements, taking into account relevant developments and practices in that respect.

General Assembly resolution 39/90

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 125-012 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/783) by vote (111-0-13), 6 December (meeting 64); 2-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L16/Rev.2); agenda item 135.

Sponsors: Australia, Thailand.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mongolia, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

The USSR explained that it had abstained because the so-called "final document" had never been submitted to Governments for their reaction or properly discussed in the Sixth Committee and because it could be used to justify the positions of those countries which were opposed to the progressive development of international law.

The United States pointed out that the negotiations leading up to the draft resolution had been conducted on the understanding that a consensus would be reached; to prey on the willingness of others to attain general agreement and make concessions and then request a vote at the last minute was to negotiate in bad faith.

Treaties involving international organizations

In pursuance of a December 1983 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General invited States and international intergovernmental organizations that had not done so to submit their comments on final draft articles, adopted by the International Law Commission in 1982,<sup>(8)</sup> on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between such organizations. In a September 1984 report,<sup>(9)</sup> he stated that two additional Governments and one United Nations specialized agency had replied. As at 10 September, a total of 15 Governments, seven agencies and organizations within the United Nations system and two other international intergovernmental organizations had submitted their views.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/86.

United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 37/112 of 16 December 1982, by which it decided that an international convention should be concluded on the basis of the draft articles on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between international organizations, adopted by the International Law Commission at its thirty-fourth session,

Recalling also its resolution 38/139 of 19 December 1983, by which it decided that the appropriate forum for the final consideration of the draft articles should be a conference of plenipotentiaries to be convened not earlier than 1985 and agreed to decide at its thirty-ninth session upon the question of the date and place for the convening of the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations, as well as upon the question of participation in the Conference,

Having received the report of the Secretary-General, which contains comments and observations submitted by States and principal international intergovernmental organizations, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 38/139,

Recognizing the importance of achieving a successful conclusion of the work of the Conference through the promotion of general agreement,

Bearing in mind the relationship between the law of treaties between States and the subject-matter to be dealt with by the Conference,

Noting with appreciation that an invitation has been extended by the Government of Austria to hold the Conference at Vienna,

1. Decides that the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations shall be held at Vienna from 18 February to 21 March 1986;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to invite:

(a) All States to participate in the Conference;

(b) Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, to participate in the Conference, in accordance with paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 37/233 C of 20 December 1982;

(c) Representatives of organizations that have received a standing invitation from the General Assembly to participate in the sessions and the work of all international conferences convened under its auspices in the capacity of observers to participate in the Conference in that capacity, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976;

(d) Representatives of the national liberation movements recognized in its region by the Organization of African Unity to participate in the Conference as observers, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 3280(XXIX) of 10 December 1974;

(e) Representatives of international intergovernmental organizations that have traditionally been invited to participate as observers at legal codification conferences convened under the auspices of the United Nations to participate in the Conference in a capacity to be considered during the consultations referred to in paragraph 8 below and to be decided upon by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

3. Invites the participants referred to in paragraph 2 above to include as far as possible among their representatives experts competent in the field to be considered;

4. Decides that the languages of the Conference shall be the official and working languages of the General Assembly, its committees and its sub-committees;

5. Refers to the Conference, as the basic proposal for its consideration, the draft articles on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between international organizations adopted by the International Law Commission at its thirty-fourth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Conference all relevant documentation and recommendations relating to the rules of procedure and methods of work, taking into account the importance of promoting general agreement on the final results of the work of the Conference, and to arrange for the necessary staff, facilities and services which it will require, including the provision of summary records;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to arrange for the presence at the Conference, as an expert, of the International Law Commission's Special Rapporteur on the question of treaties concluded between States and international organizations or between two or more international organizations;

8. Appeals to participants in the Conference to organize consultations, primarily on the organization and methods of work of the Conference, including rules of procedure, and on major issues of substance, including final clauses and settlement of disputes, prior to the convening of the Conference in order to facilitate a successful conclusion of its work through the promotion of general agreement;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session an item entitled "Preparation for the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations".

General Assembly resolution 39/86

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/779 & Corr1) by consensus, 7 December (meeting 65); 47-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.27); agenda item 131.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Cape Verde, Chile, Colombia, Cyprus, Ecuador, Egypt, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, India, Iraq, Kenya, Kuwait, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mauritania, Mozambique, Oman, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, United Arab Emirates, Yemen, Zambia.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 6th Committee 31-33, 65; plenary 99.

In explanation of position, the United Kingdom stressed that Conference costs should be kept to a minimum. The USSR pointed out that it had proposed the Sixth Committee draft the convention in question, which would have saved the United Nations some $3 million; the programme budget implications should be duly considered by the Fifth Committee. The United States endorsed the observations of the USSR and the United Kingdom. Israel felt the Sixth Committee could have undertaken the work to be done by the Conference. France, in the light of its traditional position concerning the Council for Namibia and its legal capacity to represent Namibia, expressed reservations concerning the invitation to that body to take part in the Conference.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 1984, some 670 international agreements and 407 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 233 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performs depositary functions.

The texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded are published in the United Nations Treaty Series in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. In 1984, the following volumes of the Treaty Series covering treaties registered or filed and recorded in 1975, 1976 and 1977 were issued:

976, 980, 985, 991, 992, 993, 996, 1006, 1008, 1010, 1011, 1012, 1013, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1018, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1022, 1023, 1025, 1026, 1028, 1029, 1030, 1031, 1033, 1034, 1035, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1039, 1041, 1042, 1043, 1045, 1046, 1048, 1049, 1054, 1055, 1058, 1061, 1062.

Chapter VI

International economic law

In 1984, the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and the General Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee continued to deal with legal aspects of international economic relations.

The Assembly, by resolution 39/82, recommended that UNCITRAL continue its work on the topics in its work programme and reaffirmed the importance of training and assistance in international trade law, particularly for developing countries. The United Nations Institute for Training and Research completed an analytical study on the progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order, and the Assembly, by resolution 39/75, urged States to submit their comments on the study, including proposals for further action.

Topics related to this chapter. Development policy and international economic co-operation: economic rights and duties of States. Industrial development: industrial co-operation contracts.

General aspects*Report of UNCITRAL

At its seventeenth session, held in New York from 25 June to 10 July 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> UNCITRAL considered legal aspects of international commercial arbitration, international payments, liability of operators of transport terminals, co-ordination of trade law activities, and training and assistance, as well as various legal aspects of the new international economic order.

The 1984 report of UNCITRAL was considered and taken note of by the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on 14 September<sup>(2)</sup>—an action which the Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in October.<sup>(3)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By resolution 39/82, adopted without vote on 13 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, also took note of the UNCITRAL report.

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its seventeenth session,

Recalling that the object of the Commission is the promotion of the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law,

Recalling, in this regard, its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, as well as all its other resolutions relating to the work of the Commission,

Recalling also its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974 and 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would significantly contribute to universal economic co-operation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having regard to the need to take into account the different social and legal systems in harmonizing and unifying the rules of international trade law,

Stressing the value of participation by States at all levels of economic development, including developing countries, in the process of harmonizing and unifying rules of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its seventeenth session;

2. Commends the Commission for the progress made in its work, in particular towards the preparation of a draft convention on international bills of exchange and international promissory notes, a model law on international commercial arbitration, a legal guide on drawing up international contracts for the construction of industrial works and a legal guide on electronic funds transfers, and for having reached decisions by consensus;

3. Calls upon the Commission, in particular its Working Group on the New International Economic Order, to continue to take account of the relevant provisions of the resolutions concerning the new international economic order, as adopted by the General Assembly at its sixth and seventh special sessions;

4. Notes that the Commission has assigned to its Working Group on International Contract Practices the task of preparing uniform legal rules on the liability of operators of transport terminals, and that the Commission has placed in its programme of work as a priority item the topic of legal implications of automatic data processing to the flow of international trade;

5. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to co-ordinate legal activities in this field in order to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law, and, in this connection, recommends that the Commission should continue to maintain close co-operation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

6. Reaffirms also the importance, in particular for the developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and assistance in the field of international trade law and the desirability for it to sponsor symposia and seminars, in particular those organized on a regional basis, to promote such training and assistance, and, in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to those Governments, regional organizations and institutions that have collaborated with the secretariat of the Commission in organizing regional seminars and symposia in the field of international trade law;

(b) Welcomes the additional initiatives being undertaken by the Commission and its secretariat to collaborate with other organizations and institutions in the organization of regional seminars;

(c) Invites Governments, international organizations and institutions to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing regional seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Invites Governments, relevant United Nations organs, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to allow the resumption of the programme of the Commission for the award of fellowships on a regular basis to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such symposia and seminars;

7. Recommends that the Commission should continue its work on the topics included in its programme of work;

8. Reaffirms the important role of the International Trade Law Branch of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, as the substantive secretariat of the Commission, in assisting in the implementation of the work programme of the Commission and expresses the hope that the same high quality of the work of the Secretariat will be maintained for the future.

International trade law

In 1984, UNCITRAL continued its consideration of a draft model law on international commercial arbitration and the draft Conventions on international bills of exchange and promissory notes and on international cheques. It adopted the Arabic and Chinese versions of its 1976 Arbitration Rules and considered the progress made in preparing a legal guide on electronic funds transfers.

The Commission also continued its co-ordination of trade law activities, promoted training and assistance, and held symposia and seminars on international trade law.

Unification of trade law

International commercial arbitration

Draft model law

In 1981,<sup>(1)</sup> UNCITRAL had requested its Working Group on International Contract Practices to prepare a draft model law on international commercial arbitration for use in modernizing and harmonizing related national laws and practices. The Group, which began work on the project in 1982,<sup>(2)</sup> held its seventh session in New York from 6 to 17 February 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> and completed its work by adopting the text of a draft model law, after a drafting group had established corresponding language versions in the six languages of UNCITRAL.

UNCITRAL, at its June/July 1984 session,<sup>(4)</sup> took note of the Working Group's reports on its sixth<sup>(5)</sup> and seventh sessions, and expressed appreciation to it for having completed its task. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to transmit the draft text to all Governments and interested international organizations for their comments, to be submitted no later than 30 November 1984, and asked its secretariat to submit to its 1985 session a commentary on the draft text, which it would consider in the light of those comments, with a view to finalizing and adopting a model law.

In resolution 39/82, the Assembly commended UNCITRAL for the progress made on the draft model law and recommended that it continue its work.

Arbitration Rules

In 1984,<sup>(4)</sup> UNCITRAL noted that its Arbitration Rules<sup>(6)</sup>—for optional use in ad hoc arbitration relating to international trade—had been reviewed, before their adoption in 1976, by a drafting group only in the official languages of UNCITRAL pertaining at that time (English, French, Russian, Spanish). Subsequently, translations into Arabic and Chinese—which had become official languages of the General Assembly—were prepared but needed to be revised, especially the legal terminology. At its 1984 session, the Commission had before it the revised texts which had been prepared by its secretariat with the assistance of experts. Regarding the Arabic version, it was noted that minor changes were still needed, a task which was entrusted to an ad hoc working party of States using that language.

On 6 July, the Commission adopted the Arabic, as modified by the working party, and the Chinese texts of the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules.

International payments

Draft Conventions on international bills of exchange and promissory notes and on international cheques

As it had decided in 1983,<sup>(5)</sup> UNCITRAL took up in 1984<sup>(4)</sup> the major controversial and other issues contained in written comments from Governments and international organizations concerning draft Conventions on international bills of exchange and promissory notes (mainly credit instruments) and on international cheques (mainly payment instruments). The texts of the draft Conventions—adopted by UNCITRAL's Working Group on International Negotiable Instruments in 1981<sup>(7)</sup>—had been sent for comments in 1982 and the deadline for such views extended until September 1983.<sup>(8)</sup>

At its 1984 session, UNCITRAL had before it a report of the Secretary-General containing an analytical compilation of the comments by Governments and international organizations,<sup>(9)</sup> a secretariat note identifying the major controversial and other issues inferred from those comments<sup>(10)</sup> and a secretariat note setting forth a summary of the comments of two States which were received after the first note had been prepared.<sup>(11)</sup> Opinions on the draft Conventions were divided on whether further work on negotiable instruments was justified.

In view of the significant degree of support for the unification of negotiable instruments law along lines earlier agreed to by UNCITRAL, it agreed that further work was justified. It decided that such work should concentrate on the draft Convention on international bills of exchange and promissory notes, and that work on the draft Convention on international cheques should be postponed until work on the former draft had been concluded.

UNCITRAL considered the manner in which future work on the draft Convention on international bills of exchange and promissory notes might be undertaken and decided that preparatory work was to be undertaken by a working group. It noted that the Arabic version of the draft was inadequate, particularly the legal terminology, and that it had to be revised.

On 5 and 6 July, the Commission requested the Working Group on International Negotiable Instruments to revise the draft Convention in the light of decisions and discussion at UNCITRAL's 1984 session and to submit a progress report in 1985.

In resolution 39/82, the Assembly commended the Commission for the progress made towards the preparation of the draft Convention and recommended that it continue working on that item.

Electronic funds transfers

In 1984,<sup>(4)</sup> the UNCITRAL secretariat and its Study Group on International Payments—a consultative body consisting of representatives of banking and trade institutions—continued preparing a legal guide on electronic funds transfers to identify the legal issues, describe the various approaches, point out the advantages and disadvantages of each approach and suggest alternative solutions. At its 1984 session, UNCITRAL had before it a report of the Secretary-General<sup>(12)</sup> containing several draft chapters of the guide, which laid the basis for the development of an international common understanding of the legal issues involved. The Commission noted that it would be premature to formulate uniform legal rules governing electronic funds transfers before an international common understanding on the subject had been reached.

The secretariat informed UNCITRAL that an additional chapter on finality of honour of a funds transfer instruction, currently under preparation, and a list of legal issues to be considered in electronic funds transfer systems would be submitted to the Commission in 1985. It suggested that the work already completed might be submitted to Governments and interested international organizations for their comments. UNCITRAL instructed the secretariat to complete its work on the topic, which was to be considered by the Commission in 1985.

In resolution 39/82, the General Assembly commended UNCITRAL for the progress made towards preparing the legal guide, recommending that it continue work on that subject.

Liability of operators of transport terminals

In 1984, the Commission<sup>(4)</sup> had before it a report of the Secretary-General<sup>(13)</sup> on the liability of operators of transport terminals which it had requested in 1983.<sup>(14)</sup> Annexed to the report was the preliminary draft Convention adopted in 1983 by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (UNIDROIT).

The Commission requested its Working Group on International Contract Practices to consider approaches to be adopted on issues arising from the liability of operators of transport terminals and to proceed with the drafting of uniform rules on the subject. It further decided that the Group should base its work on the Secretary-General's report and consider issues not dealt with in the UNIDROIT preliminary draft Convention as well as any other relevant issues.

UNCTAD informed UNCITRAL that it would participate in the Working Group. In view of UNCTAD's expertise in maritime and multimodal transport, port operations and other aspects of containerization, and its relevance to issues concerning the proposed uniform rules, the Commission welcomed that co-operation.

Co-ordination of trade law activities

During 1984, UNCITRAL<sup>(4)</sup> continued its co-ordination of trade law activities. It took note of the Secretary-General's report<sup>(15)</sup> on current activities of international organizations related to the unification and harmonization of international trade law. It noted the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee's recommendation that Asian-African Governments should ratify or adhere to the 1978 United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea (the Hamburg Rules)<sup>(16)</sup> and the 1980 United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods.<sup>(17)</sup> The Committee reported that the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules (see above) were used by the regional arbitration centres at Cairo (Egypt) and Kuala Lumpur (Malaysia) with some modifications.

Among other things, the Commission noted UNCTAD's co-operation regarding legal implications of automatic data processing. The observer from the Hague Conference on Private International Law indicated that the Diplomatic Conference to consider the draft Convention on the Law Applicable to Contracts for the International Sale of Goods would be held in October 1985 and that all States were invited. Concerning the 1983 revision of the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits, UNCITRAL adopted on 6 July a decision commending the use of that revision, as from 1 October 1984, in transactions involving the establishment of a documentary credit. On current activities of international organizations in barter and barter-like transactions, the Commission decided to await a report, being prepared by its secretariat, before deciding whether further steps should be undertaken.

UNCITRAL also had before it a report<sup>(18)</sup> of the Secretary-General describing several legal problems arising out of the use of automatic data processing in international trade. As suggested in the report, UNCITRAL decided to place the matter on its work programme as a priority item.

Training and assistance

During the year, the UNCITRAL secretariat continued to promote training and assistance and to publicize the work of UNCITRAL.<sup>(19)</sup> Symposia and seminars on international trade law were held in collaboration with other organizations.

Meetings held in 1984 included: a regional symposium on international commercial arbitration organized by the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee and hosted by the Indian Council of Arbitration (New Delhi, March); a regional symposium, organized by the Chamber of Commerce of Bogotá (Colombia, June), dealing with the 1980 United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods,<sup>(17)</sup> the model law on international commercial arbitration, the Hamburg Rules, the draft legal guide on drawing up international contracts for the construction of industrial works, and the relevance of UNCITRAL's work to the Andean region; and an Asian-Pacific regional trade law seminar on the unification and harmonization of international trade law and practices, conducted by the Attorney-General's Department of Australia (Canberra, November).

The Commission<sup>(4)</sup> suggested that in future efforts be made to organize symposia and seminars in Africa in order to disseminate in that region information on UNCITRAL activities.

In resolution 39/82, the Assembly reaffirmed the importance of training and assistance in international trade law, particularly for developing countries, and invited Governments, United Nations bodies and individuals to help finance and organize seminars.

Legal aspects of the new international economic order

In 1984, legal aspects of the new international economic order (NIEO) continued to be dealt with by UNCITRAL<sup>(1)</sup> and the General Assembly's Sixth Committee, while other aspects were considered by other United Nations bodies (see p. 395). As requested by the Assembly in 1983, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) submitted the third and final phase of an analytical study on the progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO. In December, the Assembly, by resolution 39/75, urged States to submit their views on that study no later than 30 June 1985.

UNCITRAL Working Group action. The UNCITRAL Working Group on the New International Economic Order (fifth session, New York, 23 January–3 February 1984) continued drafting a legal guide on drawing up contracts for the supply and construction of industrial works (see p. 575).

UNITAR study. In response to a December 1983 Assembly resolution,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to that body in October 1984 a report<sup>(3)</sup> which included the third and final phase of an analytical study by UNITAR on the progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO—a study requested by the Assembly in 1980.<sup>(4)</sup> One addendum gave information received from Cuba on the topic, while the other contained annexes outlining and summarizing the study's third phase.

The first phase of the study—a compendium of topics or issues of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO—had been forwarded to the Assembly in 1981.<sup>(5)</sup> The second phase, submitted in 1982, dealt with analytical papers on three principles: preferential treatment for developing countries, stabilization of their export earnings, and permanent sovereignty over natural resources.<sup>(6)</sup> In 1983, UNITAR, with the assistance of an expert panel engaged to carry out the last phase, had completed analytical papers on: every State's right to benefit from science and technology, entitlement of developing countries to development assistance, and the common heritage of mankind. An analytical paper on the principle of participatory equality of developing countries in international economic relations had also been submitted to the Assembly but required revisions, and the expert panel had recommended that, in view of the task's complexity, UNITAR should submit its completed study in 1984 or, more realistically, in 1985. In order to complete the tasks, the Assembly had extended UNITAR's mandate.<sup>(2)</sup>

In the third phase of its study, UNITAR analysed the seven principles listed above, as well as an additional principle on freedom of choice of economic system, which UNITAR felt deserved inclusion. The study analysed, among other things, the integration of those eight principles into the general framework of international law and examined the legal scope of their content, concentrating on salient legal issues.

UNITAR concluded in its report<sup>(3)</sup> that the evaluation made in the study was warranted in international law where, in the absence of legislative power, there was no possibility of instant creation of norms of general international law, except for the far-fetched hypothesis of a treaty to be adopted simultaneously by the whole international community. The principles which had been discussed—and the NIEO to which they gave legal expression—were considered as necessary preconditions for the creation of an international economic environment favourable to the development of the less developed countries and could thus be viewed as collectively constituting for those countries a "right to development", parallel, on the economic level, to self-determination on the political plane.

To further the progressive development of the principles and norms, UNITAR recommended building on what had already been accepted as law and, through the United Nations process of progressive development of international law, clarifying the areas of shade, with the hope that the process of progressive development and elaboration of those principles and norms would favour a widening consensus over them, thus contributing to consolidating their legal status. It further recommended that consideration be given to continuing action of progressive development by means of an intergovernmental working group within the framework of the Assembly's Sixth Committee or that the task be entrusted to a commission with appropriate machinery and expert resources.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December, the General Assembly adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/75, as recommended by the Sixth Committee.

Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the General Assembly is called upon to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic co-operation and 35/56 of 5 December 1980, the annex to which contains the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recalling its resolutions 34/150 of 17 December 1979 and 35/166 of 15 December 1980, entitled "Consolidation and progressive development of the principles and norms of international economic law relating in particular to the legal aspects of the new international economic order", and its resolutions 36/107 of 10 December 1981, 37/103 of 16 December 1982 and 38/128 of 19 December 1983, entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

Recognizing the need for a systematic and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for the completion of the analytical study on the progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order;

2. Urges Member States to submit, not later than 30 June 1985, their views and comments on the study, including proposals concerning further action and procedures to be adopted within the framework of the Sixth Committee with regard to the consideration of the analytical study;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

General Assembly resolution 39/75

13 December 1984 Meeting 99 120-0-17 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/39/770 & Corr.1) by vote (92-0-16), 5 December (meeting 63); 16-nation draft (A/C.6/39/L.19); agenda item 120.

Sponsors: Egypt, India, Kenya, Malaysia, Mexico, Morocco, Nigeria, Pakistan, Philippines, Romania, Senegal, Thailand, Tunisia, Venezuela, Zaire, Zambia.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 6th Committee 50, 55-58, 63; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, the United States said it could not accept some of the text's preambular provisions referring to the need for a systematic and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO.

Argentina and Chile, which had abstained on similar texts in previous years because of their objection to UNITAR's classifying Antarctica under the heading of the common heritage of mankind, maintained those earlier objections.

Spain felt that the deadline for the submission of views (30 June 1985) should have been later; its vote did not prejudice its position with regard to the further action referred to in paragraph 2. Poland doubted that UNITAR was the best body for conducting the study, but was convinced that the development of international law relating to NIEO would contribute to its promotion.

Chapter VII

Other legal questions

In 1984, the International Law Commission (ILC) held its thirty-sixth session at Geneva from 7 May to 27 July, continuing work on the progressive development and codification of international law and maintaining co-operation with several juridical bodies. By resolution 39/85, the General Assembly recommended that ILC continue work on all the topics in its current programme.

The International Law Seminar held its twentieth session at Geneva. Other seminars and training courses were offered in 1984 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law.

By resolution 39/47, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to continue promoting co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee.

International Law Commission*ILC work programme

The 1984 ILC session (Geneva, 7 May–27 July)<sup>(1)</sup> was devoted mainly to considering draft articles on the following aspects of international law: jurisdictional immunities of States and their property (see p. 1098); State responsibility (see p. 1099); status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier (see p. 1097); non-navigational uses of international watercourses (see p. 1094); and international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law (see p. 1098). It also continued work on elaborating the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind, which it had prepared in 1954 (see p. 1090).

The Commission decided to continue, in 1985, work on all the topics on its current programme, bearing in mind the desirability of achieving maximum progress in preparing draft articles on topics in the remaining two years of the Commission's current five-year term of membership. The Commission felt that it might be able to complete, before the term concluded in 1986, a first reading of draft articles on two topics—status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier, and jurisdictional immunities of States and their property—with a possibility of giving similar treatment to parts two and three of the draft articles on State responsibility.

The Secretary-General, in August,<sup>(2)</sup> transmitted to the General Assembly the draft articles which had been provisionally adopted by ILC in 1984 on the status of diplomatic couriers and bags, and on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property.

Throughout 1984, ILC continued to co-operate with several other juridical bodies, namely the Inter-American Juridical Committee, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee (see below), the European Committee on Legal Co-operation and the Arab Commission for International Law. Such co-operation included ILC representation at meetings of those bodies or their sending observers to the ILC session.

The Commission also considered the desirability of dividing its annual session into two parts, alternating between Geneva and New York, but concluded that it was not in a position to suggest any change in the current practice of one annual session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, the General Assembly, on 13 December 1984, adopted resolution 39/85 without vote.

Report of the International Law Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-sixth session,

Emphasizing the need for the progressive development of international law and its codification in order to make it a more effective means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and to give increasing importance to its role in relations among States,

Recognizing the importance of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics which might be submitted to the International Law Commission, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission further to enhance their contributions to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the contemporary international community, may be suitable for progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-sixth session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at that session;

3. Recommends that, taking into account the comments of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission should continue its work on all the topics in its current programme;

4. Expresses its satisfaction with the conclusions and intentions of the International Law Commission concerning its procedures and methods of work, as reflected in paragraphs 385 to 397 of its report;

5. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the increased role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the documentation of the International Law Commission;

6. Appeals to Governments and, as appropriate, to international organizations to respond as fully and expeditiously as possible to the requests of the International Law Commission for comments, observations and replies to questionnaires and for materials on topics in its programme of work;

7. Reaffirms its wish that the International Law Commission continue to enhance its co-operation with intergovernmental legal bodies whose work is of interest for the progressive development of international law and its codification;

8. Expresses the wish that seminars will continue to be held in conjunction with sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants from developing countries will be given the opportunity to attend those seminars;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the thirty-ninth session of the General Assembly and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate.

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

International Law Seminar

In accordance with a December 1983 General Assembly wish,<sup>(3)</sup> the twentieth session of the International Law Seminar—for advanced students and junior professors or government officials dealing with international law—was held at Geneva from 4 to 22 June, with 24 participants, all of different nationality and mostly from developing countries.<sup>(1)</sup> In addition, three holders of fellowships from the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and three observers were admitted to the Seminar. Participants followed the work of the 1984 ILC session and heard lectures given by its members and by others. As in the past, none of the costs of the Seminar fell on the United Nations. Austria, Denmark, Finland and the Federal Republic of Germany made fellowships available to participants from developing countries. Fellowships were awarded to 15 participants in 1984. Since the beginning of the Seminar in 1965,<sup>(4)</sup> fellowships have been awarded to 213 of the total of 447 participants, representing 108 nationalities.

Other activities

A number of training courses were offered in 1984 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law. Under the annual joint United Nations/UNITAR fellowship programme, conducted by UNITAR,<sup>(5)</sup> 18 middle-grade government legal officers and young international legal experts took courses at The Hague Academy of International Law (Netherlands) and attended seminars organized by UNITAR (2 July–10 August). Several fellows also received practical training at legal offices of the United Nations and related organizations.

Other activities, offered or co-sponsored by UNITAR, included a practical course in drafting treaties, resolutions and other international instruments (New York, 9–13 and 18 April), a briefing on developments in international humanitarian law (Geneva, 18 and 20 June), and a regional training and refresher course in international law for Africa (Yaoundé, Cameroon, 12–24 November).

The Secretary-General reported<sup>(6)</sup> that, during 1984, $95,246 had been voluntarily contributed to the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship, established in 1981<sup>(7)</sup> for study and research in the law of the sea.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

In pursuance of a December 1983 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to that body in 1984 a report<sup>(9)</sup> on co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee—an organization to which the Assembly had accorded permanent observer status in 1980.<sup>(10)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December 1984, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/47 without vote.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/38 of 18 November 1981, 37/8 of 29 October 1982 and 38/37 of 5 December 1983,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee,

Having heard the statement of the Secretary-General of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee on the continuing close and effective co-operation between the two organizations,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with satisfaction the progress achieved towards strengthening the existing co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee;

3. Commends the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee for orienting its programme to strengthen its supportive role to the work of the United Nations in wider areas, as called for by the General Assembly in its resolution 36/38;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take steps to promote co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee in the field of progressive development and codification of international law and other areas of common interest;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a report on co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee".

10 December 1984      Meeting 93      Adopted without vote

Chapter I

United Nations financing

A number of actions were taken by the General Assembly in 1984 on various aspects of United Nations financing.

With the short-term deficit of the United Nations expected to amount to $356 million by the end of 1984, the General Assembly again appealed to States to pay their assessed contributions promptly (resolution 39/239 B). Concerned also about the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the Organization's regular budget, the Secretary-General was asked to prepare a study on the problem (resolution 39/240).

The Assembly also took several decisions on the 1984-1985 programme budget. It increased budget appropriations by $24.4 million, raising the amount appropriated for the two-year period to $1.6 billion (resolution 39/237 A) and increased income estimates, other than income from Member States, by $17.5 million, to $301.4 million (39/237 B). The Assembly also specified the amounts to be obtained to finance appropriations during the second year of the biennium (39/237 C).

Regarding budget contributions, the Assembly established the rates for the Organization's newest members (39/247 A) but deferred action on adjusting the assessments of all Members until 1985 (decision 39/456).

In view of the growth of United Nations activities, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to carry out a review of the Secretariat's Internal Audit Division to determine whether its resources were adequate to handle its increased responsibilities (decision 39/416).

Budget for 1984-1985

Appropriations

In December 1984, the General Assembly approved a $24,391,400 increase in the United Nations programme budget for 1984-1985, raising appropriations for the biennium to $1,611,551,200.

This increase over the initial level approved by the Assembly in December 1983<sup>(1)</sup> resulted from a number of additional expenditures authorized by the Assembly at its 1984 session. The most sizeable of these were $5.2 million to expand conference facilities at Bangkok for the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), $5 million for the Industrial Development Decade for Africa (1980-1990), $4.2 million for conference-servicing costs of additional meetings scheduled for 1985 ($2.2 million for Headquarters and $2 million for Vienna), $4.1 million for activities relating to the Namibia question (including $1 million for public information), $3.2 million for conference facilities at Addis Ababa for the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), $1.5 million for the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), $1.5 million to improve the United Nations communications system, $1.4 million for the Transport and Communications Decade in Africa (1978-1988), $1.4 million for Senior Industrial Development Field Advisers (SIDFAs), and $1.1 million for Chinese language verbatim reporting services for the Assembly and Security Council.

The increase would have been higher but for savings resulting from more favourable foreign exchange rates and lower inflation rates than had been assumed when the budget was initially approved in 1983. According to calculations by the Secretary-General in his first budget performance report for the biennium, submitted to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee in December 1984,<sup>(2)</sup> the strengthening of the United States dollar, the currency in which the budget was expressed, would net the United Nations some $45.7 million in 1984-1985 by lowering the cost of its expenditures in non-dollar currencies. At the same time, an estimated $2.6 million would be saved thanks to lower-than-anticipated inflation.

An analysis of the Secretary-General's report by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ),<sup>(3)</sup> also issued in December 1984, showed that the net savings from inflation were due to lower costs at United Nations offices other than New York, offsetting a projected $20 million net increase at Headquarters. Major factors in the increase were an $8 million salary raise for General Service staff, a $4.1 million rise in the post adjustment (cost-of-living) component of Professional staff salaries, $3.6 million in higher common staff costs (fringe benefits), and $3.1 million in cost increases for common services.

Another increase cited in the Secretary-General's report was a $22.4 million rise in common staff costs, due to such factors as a higher pension contribution and increased insurance costs. In the other direction, a higher-than-expected staff vacancy rate would save an estimated $9.8 million.

On the recommendation of ACABQ, the Fifth Committee approved on 15 December the figures contained in the performance report, including a $9,158,700 decrease in appropriations. This was the net effect of all budget changes not due to specific Assembly action during its 1984 session. The results of the recorded vote were 70 to 9 (Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United States), with 12 abstentions.

Fifth Committee voting on other revised budget estimates submitted by the Secretary-General and exceeding $1 million apiece was as follows: ECA conference facilities, $3,231,400 gross ($3,215,100 net of staff assessment), 83 to 3, with 13 abstentions (recorded vote), 16 October; ESCAP conference facilities, $5,213,200 gross ($5,200,400 net), 104 to 11, with 8 abstentions (recorded vote), 30 November; communications system, $1,537,000 gross ($1,497,400 net), 75 to 8, with 14 abstentions (recorded vote), 11 December; and conference servicing, $5,150,000 gross ($4,250,000 net), 70 to 21 (recorded vote), 15 December. The additional $1,251,400 for Chinese language services was approved without vote on 11 October.

Fifth Committee voting on the programme budget implications of draft resolutions subsequently approved by the Assembly was as follows for totals exceeding $1 million: Namibia question, $4,123,100 gross ($4,097,000 net), 92 to 8, with 8 abstentions (recorded vote), 11 December; UNITAR, $1,500,000, 60 to 15, with 17 abstentions (recorded vote), 13 December; SIDFAs, $1,373,500 gross ($1,135,000 net), 71 to 17, with 11 abstentions (recorded vote), 15 December; Industrial Development Decade for Africa, $5 million, 71 to 18, with 10 abstentions (recorded vote), 15 December; and Transport and Communications Decade in Africa, $1,439,600, 73 to 17, with 9 abstentions (recorded vote), 15 December.

The budget increases approved by the Assembly in 1984 provided for 29 additional established posts in the Secretariat, of which 18 were for a new Chinese Verbatim Unit in the Department of Conference Services.

The United Nations Controller informed the Fifth Committee on 17 December that the revised budget represented a 0.55 per cent increase over the initial level, in real terms. As the initial appropriation had recorded a 0.9 per cent real growth over the 1982-1983 budget,<sup>(4)</sup> total real growth amounted to 1.5 per cent over the previous biennium. (Real growth calculations exclude cost increases due to foreign exchange fluctuations and inflation, as well as costs that do not recur from year to year.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly on 18 December 1984 adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/237 A, revising the 1984-1985 appropriations.

Revised budget appropriations for the biennium 1984-1985

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1984-1985 the amount of $US 1,587,159,800 appropriated by its resolution 38/236 A of 20 December 1983 shall be increased by $US 24,391,400 as follows:

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Belgium, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Hungary, Israel, Japan, Luxembourg, Mongolia, Netherlands, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Canada, France, Italy, New Zealand, Romania.

Several of the States voting against the revised appropriations objected to the budget growth resulting from Assembly approval of additional expenditures.

Among them, Belgium said its support for zero budget growth meant that it would have to curtail voluntary contributions. The Federal Republic of Germany, noting that it had abstained when the initial budget was approved in 1983, described the revised budget as no longer reasonable. Japan remarked that the Secretary-General's financial implications statements had failed to reveal determined efforts to absorb costs through savings or redeployment. The Netherlands said its increasingly strong position on budget restraint stemmed from a concern for sound and prudent management. The USSR, urging redeployment rather than budget increases, said additional funds should be appropriated only for the essential tasks of maintaining international peace and security, promoting disarmament and averting world war. The United Kingdom also stressed the need for financing new or expanded programmes by redeploying existing resources, improving efficiency and curtailing obsolete activities. The United States, saying the financing system offered little incentive to limit budget growth, felt that neither Member States nor the Secretariat had shown much fiscal responsibility; it particularly objected to the construction projects at Addis Ababa and Bangkok, which it called costly status symbols, and to subsidies for the voluntarily financed UNITAR and United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research.

Canada, abstaining in the vote, voiced concern at the increasing unwillingness of States to share United Nations financing, together with an unrestrained enthusiasm for new and expanded activities. France urged better Secretariat control over expenditure growth, particularly operational costs, coupled with further efforts on salary policy and the regular-budget financing of activities that should be funded voluntarily. Italy cited a need for rigid financial discipline at a time when States had to contain their national budgets because of persistent economic difficulties.

While acknowledging efforts to limit expenditures, Spain was discouraged that appropriations had proved inadequate before the end of the budget biennium's first year.

Voting for the appropriations, Austria thought the increase modest and said far more was being spent elsewhere for far less noble causes; whether the money was being spent to further the Organization's goals and to obtain the best value from it was another issue, however. Cameroon did not see how a modest increase could be avoided when negotiations within the United Nations had become more difficult and time-consuming. Cuba, while supporting the concerns of those favouring financial soundness, said it firmly opposed the intentions of those wanting budget cuts in order to limit the United Nations role.

Egypt thought Member States had shown responsibility by curtailing many programmes and avoiding many requests for valid activities in recognition of financial constraints. Ireland said the United Nations should have sufficient funds to perform its functions, while at the same time it welcomed efforts to redeploy funds and set priorities.

Nigeria believed that financial responsibility could be improved if States showed political will for multi-lateral co-operation. In the view of Pakistan, preoccupation with budgetary restraint should not reduce the Organization's capacity to implement programmes effectively, especially those important to developing countries. Sweden, on behalf of the Nordic States, endorsed the idea of rational redeployment of resources to make room for new and urgent activities, but believed that Member States were getting reasonably good value for their investment in the United Nations. Tunisia thought the Secretariat had made commendable efforts to eliminate waste.

Income sources

Revised income estimates under the United Nations programme budget for 1984-1985, covering income other than that derived from assessments of Member States, were approved by the General Assembly in December 1984 in the amount of $301,439,100. This was $17,546,300 above the total approved when the Assembly acted on the initial estimates in December 1983.<sup>(5)</sup>

According to the Secretary-General's December 1984 budget performance report<sup>(2)</sup> and the analysis of that report by ACABQ,<sup>(3)</sup> the main factor responsible for the increase was a technical one: the consolidation into base salaries of a portion of the post adjustment (cost-of-living component) paid to Professional staff, as approved by the Assembly in resolution 39/27 of 30 November 1984. This adjustment had no appreciable effect on the net budget or on take-home pay. At the same time, the estimate of income from revenue-producing activities was decreased by $1.6 million, due mainly to reduced sales by the gift and souvenir shops at United Nations Headquarters.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly on 18 December 1984 adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/237 B, revising the 1984-1985 income estimates.

Revised income estimates for the biennium 1984-1985

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1984-1985 the estimates of income of $US 283,892,800 approved by its resolution 38/236 B of 20 December 1983 shall be increased by $US 17,546,300 as follows:

General Assembly resolution 39/237 B

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 126-11-10 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/839) by recorded vote (85-11-11), 17 December (meeting 55); agenda item 109.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Israel, Mongolia, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, United Kingdom.

Explaining its negative vote, the United States objected to the addition of seven posts to the Headquarters garage administration staff, chargeable to revenue-producing activities (see also p. 1178).

Financing 1985 appropriations

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly on 18 December 1984 adopted by recorded vote resolution 39/237 C, specifying the amounts to be obtained from each major income source in order to finance appropriations during the second year of the 1984-1985 biennium. Member States were to be assessed $658,500,126.

Financing of appropriations for the year 1985

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the year 1985:

1. Budget appropriations in a total amount of $US 817,971,300 consisting of $US 793,579,900, being half of the appropriations initially approved for the biennium 1984-1985 by General Assembly resolution 38/236 A of 20 December 1983, plus $US 24,391,400, being the increase in appropriations approved during the thirty-ninth session by resolution A above, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 5.1 and 5.2 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations as follows:

(a) $25,972,100, consisting of $28,570,700, being half of the estimated income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium 1984-1985 by resolution 38/236 B of 20 December 1983 less $2,598,600, being the decrease in estimated income other than from staff assessment approved by resolution B above;

(b) $93,162 being contributions of new Member States for 1983 and 1984;

(c) $791,906,038 being the assessment on Member States in accordance with General Assembly resolution 37/125 A of 17 December 1982 on the scale of assessments for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of $US 133,499,074 consisting of:

(a) $113,375,700 being half of the estimated staff assessment income approved by resolution 38/236 B;

(b) Plus $20,144,900 being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by resolution B above;

(c) Less $51,660 being the decrease in actual income from staff assessment compared to the revised estimates for the biennium 1982-1983, approved by General Assembly resolution 38/226 B of 20 December 1983;

(d) Plus $30,134 representing additional income from staff assessment in respect of adjustments for prior financial periods.

General Assembly resolution 39/237 C

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 122-16-7 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/839) by recorded vote (86-14-8), 17 December (meeting 55); agenda item 109.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Report of ACABQ

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions reported to the General Assembly in September<sup>(6)</sup> on its activities during the second and third quarters of 1984, during which time it had held meetings in New York, Geneva, Addis Ababa (Ethiopia) and Bangkok (Thailand) to discuss problems and make recommendations pertaining to the programme budget for the 1984-1985 biennium. Also, having examined programme budget performance for 1982-1983 and the question of unliquidated obligations and proposed transfers among budget sections, ACABQ said it believed that the current method of estimating requirements and forecasting expenditure needed refining.

In addition to recommending several interim parking measures for the Headquarters garage, the Committee concurred in requests by the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in connection with Chinese language services and with leasing satellite telecommunications capacity for peace-keeping and emergency relief activities (see Chapter IV of this section, under "UN premises", "Documents" and "Computerized and other information systems and communications"). It also authorized commitments to implement human rights activities approved by the Economic and Social Council earlier in 1984, and for rental subsidies until completion of residential buildings at Baghdad, Iraq, for staff of the Economic Commission for Western Asia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/236, section I, on 18 December 1984.

Budget contributions

The General Assembly's Committee on Contributions continued in 1984 its study of ways to make the assessments of Member States towards the United Nations budget reflect more closely their capacity to pay. On the Fifth Committee's recommendation, the Assembly, by decision 39/456 of 18 December, put off action on the Contribution Committee's recommendations until its resumed session in 1985, to allow time for continued efforts at agreement on a resolution. In resolution 39/247 A of the same date, the Assembly fixed rates for the two newest Members, Brunei Darussalam and Saint Christopher and Nevis.

Action by the Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions held its forty-fourth session in New York from 4 to 29 June 1984. In its report to the Assembly,<sup>(1)</sup> it described its further exploratory work in response to the Assembly's 1981 request<sup>(2)</sup> for a thorough study of alternative methods to assess the real capacity of Member States to pay.

The Committee concentrated on possible variants of the current methodology for assessing the national income of Members as a prime determinant of their capacity to pay. Specifically, it examined the use of economic and social indicators and ways of taking account of the effects of inflation and foreign exchange rate conversion.

The Committee selected 10 economic and social indicators, and tested them for their effects on assessment rates. The indicators pertained to each State's economic development, educational development, health, external debt and international monetary reserves and changes in terms of trade. Had these data been used, the Committee found, most developed countries would have had lower rates and most developing countries, higher ones. Given those results, and the fact that statistical data were often not comparable between States, the Committee decided not to propose that the indicators be used. Instead, it proposed to examine the matter further, studying other indicators, trying different weights and norms, and exploring new methods.

The results of its study of possible adjustments for inflation and foreign exchange rate changes were equally inconclusive.

The Committee made three recommendations affecting components of the current assessment methodology: to maintain the 10-year statistical base period, by which national income data for each State were averaged over the most recent decade so as to lessen the effects of short-term economic fluctuations; to raise from $2,100 to $2,200 the per capita income limit, below which States were entitled to reduced assessments; and to apply a new formula for avoiding excessive variations of individual assessment rates between two successive scales. The formula combined percentage and percentage-point limits on a sliding scale, so that, for example, a State paying at the minimum rate of 0.01 per cent would not have its rate raised by more than one point (to 0.02), while the limit for a State paying 5 per cent or more could be raised by no more than 5 per cent or 75 points, whichever was smaller.

In response to the Assembly's 1981 request<sup>(2)</sup> for guidelines on presentation and collection of uniform and comparable data by Member States, the Committee generally endorsed guidelines already followed by the United Nations Statistical Office in soliciting statistical data from States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY CONSIDERATION

The Fifth Committee discussed the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions in October 1984 and again in December. However, it was unable to reach agreement on a draft resolution by the time the Assembly concluded the first part of its 1984 session. Neither of two drafts submitted in December, one on behalf of the Member States which were members of the Group of 77 developing countries and the other by 27 Eastern European and Western States, was acceptable to the entire Committee.

The first draft,<sup>(3)</sup> submitted by Egypt on behalf of the Group of 77, would have had the Assembly approve the three recommendations of the Committee on Contributions, but with modifications more favourable to the smallest contributors and States with the lowest per capita income. Specifically, for States paying shares of less than 1 per cent each, scale-to-scale variations would be limited more than the Committee had recommended. Further, in addition to raising the upper limit of the low per capita income allowance formula as recommended by the Committee, the maximum relief gradient for such States would be raised from 85 to 90 per cent, thereby authorizing a greater reduction from regular assessment rates.

The draft added two further elements to the Committee's recommendations: that assessment calculations should include indicators reflecting the serious world economic and financial situation, particularly the high external debts of developing countries; and that all of the least developed countries be assessed at the floor level (0.01 per cent). It further specified that redistribution of the relief burden (the cost that others would have to bear as a result of the reduced rates for the poorest and smallest States) must not fall on developing countries.

The draft would have had the Committee on Contributions study two matters: what the scale of assessments for 1983-1985 would have looked like if the Committee's current recommendations on limiting scale-to-scale variations had been in effect, and whether relief for low per capita income States might be modified by assigning a relief gradient (percentage reduction) on the basis of gross domestic product.

The sponsors accepted an oral amendment by Poland to amend this draft by expanding projected relief for debtor developing countries to include others facing high debt levels.

The second draft resolution,<sup>(4)</sup> introduced by Denmark, was ultimately sponsored also by Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Mongolia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States.

This draft would have had the Assembly accept without change the three recommendations of the Committee on Contributions, with maximum reductions for low per capita income States remaining at 85 per cent. With regard to the least developed countries, it would specify that their rates should not exceed their current level.

Japan orally proposed an amendment to the second draft favouring rate reductions for developing countries in light of their severe economic and financial situation, particularly as regards the ratio of export earnings to debt servicing, as well as in cases where national revenue depended primarily on the export of one or a few products or where per capita income had fallen below the $2,200 limit for the first time. However, Japan later withdrew its amendment and became a sponsor of the draft.

Canada, supported by Austria and Sweden, orally proposed that the Assembly simply request the Committee on Contributions to take the two drafts into account in preparing the next scale of assessments. The Fifth Committee Chairman agreed with an interpretation by Cuba that the Canadian proposal be regarded as a third draft resolution to be taken up after the first two. Canada then moved adjournment of the meeting, and the Committee accepted this proposal by 56 votes to 50.

Following further consideration in an informal working group, the Chairman informed the Committee that the group had considered two possibilities: adoption of the Canadian proposal or postponement of a decision on the scale of assessments until a resumed Assembly session in 1985. He suggested that, if postponement was agreed to, work should continue in January in an informal working group chaired by himself, in which any interested United Nations Member could participate. The Committee, acting without vote on 18 December, recommended postponement until the resumed session. The Assembly, before suspending its session later that day, included the item in the list of topics for consideration at the resumed session (decision 39/456).

Budget contributions of new Members

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Committee on Contributions and the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly, by resolution 39/247 A of 18 December 1984 adopted without vote, fixed the assessment rates of Brunei Darussalam, admitted to the United Nations in September 1984 (see p. 371), and Saint Christopher and Nevis, admitted in September 1983.<sup>(5)</sup>

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The rates of assessment for the following States, admitted to membership in the United Nations on 23 September 1983 and on 21 September 1984, respectively, shall be as follows:

| Member State         | Per cent |
|-----------------------------|-----------------|
| Saint Christopher and Nevis | 0.01            |
| Brunei Darussalam           | 0.03            |

For 1983, 1984 and 1985, these rates shall be added to the scale of assessments established under General Assembly resolution 37/125 A of 17 December 1982;

2. For the year of their admission, Saint Christopher and Nevis and Brunei Darussalam shall contribute at the rate of one ninth of 0.01 and 0.03 per cent, respectively, such contributions to be taken into account as miscellaneous income under regulation 5.2 (c) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

3. For the years 1984 and 1985, Saint Christopher and Nevis shall contribute at the rate of 0.01 per cent and for the year 1985 Brunei Darussalam shall contribute 0.03 per cent; such contribution for 1984 by Saint Christopher and Nevis also to be taken into account as miscellaneous income under regulation 5.2 (c) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

4. The contributions of Saint Christopher and Nevis for 1983 and 1984 and Brunei Darussalam for 1984 shall be applied to the same basis of assessment as for other Member States, except that, in the case of appropriations or apportionments approved under General Assembly resolutions 37/38 A of 30 November 1982 and 38/35 A of 1 December 1983 for the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and resolutions 37/127 A of 17 December 1982 and 38/38 A of 5 December 1983 for the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, the contributions of those States, as determined by the group of contributors to which they may be assigned by the Assembly, shall be calculated in proportion to the calendar year;

5. The advances of Saint Christopher and Nevis and Brunei Darussalam to the Working Capital Fund, under regulation 5.8 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, shall be calculated by the application of the rates of assessment of 0.01 and 0.03 per cent, respectively, to the authorized level of the Fund, such advances to be added to the Fund pending the incorporation of the new Members' rates of assessment in a 100 per cent scale.

General Assembly resolution 39/247 A

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/844) without vote, 18 December (meeting 56); draft recommended by Committee on Contributions (A/39/11 and Corr.1); agenda item 115.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 4-11, 13, 14, 51, 53, 55, 56; plenary 105.

Budget contributions in 1984

Of the $847.9 million in contributions for the United Nations regular budget payable as at 1 January 1984, $681.7 million had been collected from Member States by 31 December, leaving $166.2 million outstanding<sup>(6)</sup> (see table, "Status of contributions to the UN regular budget"). Of the amount payable, net assessments for 1984, due early in the year, totalled $677.8 million; the remaining $170.1 million related to previous years. In addition, seven non-member States were assessed a total of $2.3 million for their share of United Nations activities in which they participated<sup>(7)</sup> (see table, "Assessment of non-member States for 1984 expenses of UN activities in which they participated"). Budget assessments of Members and non-members were in accordance with scales for 1983-1985 approved by the General Assembly in 1982.<sup>(8)</sup>

The continuing shortfall in collections was among matters dealt with by the Secretary-General in a report to the Assembly on the Organization's financial situation (see below).

At the resumption of the Assembly's 1983 session on 26 June 1984, the Secretary-General, in a letter of that date,<sup>(9)</sup> informed the Assembly President that seven Members—Chad, Comoros, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Grenada, Mauritania and South Africa—were more than two years in arrears in the payment of their budget contributions. By 17 September,<sup>(10)</sup> Equatorial Guinea, Grenada and Mauritania had made payments bringing their arrears below the two-year limit.

When the Assembly opened its regular 1984 session on 18 September, the Secretary-General reported<sup>(11)</sup> that only El Salvador and South Africa were more than two years in arrears. On 20 September,<sup>(12)</sup> he reported that El Salvador had paid enough to reduce its arrears below the two-year limit. Consequently, South Africa alone remained in arrears throughout 1984; it would have had to pay $17,910,970 to remove itself from that category.

This information was conveyed by the President to the Assembly, which took note of it at both its resumed and regular sessions in 1984, without adopting a formal decision.

Under Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations, a Member in arrears to the extent of contributions due for the preceding two full years shall have no vote in the Assembly, but the Assembly can permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that failure to pay was due to conditions beyond the State's control.

Meeting numbers. GA 38th session: plenary 105, 106. GA 39th session: plenary 1, 3.

Financial situation

Amounts collected from Member States in 1984 in payment of their assessed contributions were insufficient to meet the Organization's cash need, the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly in a 9 October report<sup>(1)</sup> on the United Nations financial situation requested by the Assembly in December 1983.<sup>(2)</sup> It had therefore been necessary in September 1984 to borrow temporarily from the account for peace-keeping activities in order to meet obligations under the regular budget, as normal reserve funds—the Working Capital Fund and the United Nations Special Account—had been depleted.

The Secretary-General ascribed the problem mainly to delays in payment. By the end of September, he stated, only 53 Members, or 33.8 per cent of the membership, had paid their contribution in full, despite the requirement of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations that they be paid within 30 days after each State was notified of its assessment. Including partial payments, only 47.7 per cent of total assessments had been paid by then, the lowest proportion since 1978. He urged Members to settle their accounts expeditiously and appealed for further efforts to ensure early and full payment. If the situation did not improve during 1985, revisions to the Financial Regulations would have to be considered.

The report added that cash balances had increased by $25.8 million since 1981 as a result of the Assembly's 1981 decision<sup>(3)</sup> to suspend financial regulations requiring unspent appropriations to be returned to Members. In addition, $624,897 had been placed in the Special Account, representing half the proceeds from the 1982 United Nations postage stamps on nature conservation, in accordance with Assembly decisions of 1980<sup>(4)</sup> and 1983.<sup>(5)</sup>

The short-term deficit of the United Nations, another measure of its financial difficulties, would rise by an estimated $12.8 million during 1984, to a projected total of $356 million, the Secretary-General reported (see cumulative table below). Of the increase, $13.3 million related to withholdings by certain Members of their share for peace-keeping operations to which they had political and legal objections. The $93.2 million deficit in the regular budget, a part of this total, included an estimated $3.5 million in withholdings for 1984.

In its report to the Assembly on this subject, also issued in October 1984,<sup>(6)</sup> ACABQ said it shared the Secretary-General's concerns and thought that further examination of issues he and ACABQ had raised in 1981 reports to the Assembly<sup>(7)</sup> would provide a useful basis for considering measures to alleviate the financial situation.

The Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations, established by the Assembly in 1975,<sup>(8)</sup> did not meet in 1984.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

A renewed appeal to Members for prompt payment of assessments was contained in resolution 39/239 B, adopted by the Assembly without vote on 18 December 1984, on the Fifth Committee's recommendation.

Financial situation of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 3049 A (XXVII) of 19 December 1972, 3538(XXX) of 17 December 1975, 32/104 of 14 December 1977, 35/113 of 10 December 1980, 36/116 B of 10 December 1981, 37/13 of 16 November 1982 and 38/228 B of 20 December 1983,

Mindful of the report of the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations and of the views expressed by Member States thereon in the Fifth Committee at the thirty-second session of the General Assembly,

Reiterating earlier appeals to Member States, without prejudice to their position of principle, to make voluntary contributions to the Special Account referred to in annex IV of the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations,

Noting with concern that the short-term deficit of the Organization is expected to exceed $356 million as at 31 December 1984,

Concerned at the increasingly precarious financial situation of peace-keeping operations and, in particular, its adverse impact on developing-country troop contributors,

Noting also with concern that delays and partial payment of assessed contributions continue to create serious cash-flow problems for the Organization,

Considering the possibility that for many Member States administrative considerations, including a calendar difference between the national fiscal year and that of the Organization, may be responsible for the delay in the payment of assessed contributions,

Taking note of the views expressed in the Fifth Committee,

1. Reaffirms its commitment to seek a comprehensive and generally acceptable solution to the financial problems of the United Nations, based on the principle of collective financial responsibility of Member States and in strict compliance with the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Urges all Member States to meet their financial obligations;

3. Renews its appeal to all Member States to make their best efforts to overcome constraints to the prompt payment early each year of full assessed contributions and of advances to the Working Capital Fund;

4. Expresses its appreciation to all Member States which pay their assessed contributions in full within thirty days of the receipt of the Secretary-General's communication, in accordance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in addition to his official communications to the permanent representatives of Member States, to approach, as and when appropriate, the Governments of Member States for the purpose of encouraging expeditious payment in full of assessed contributions, in compliance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

6. Invites Member States also to provide, in response to the Secretary-General's official communication and consistent with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, information regarding their expected pattern of payments, in order to facilitate the financial planning by the Secretary-General;

7. Requests the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations to keep the financial situation of the Organization under review and to report, as and when appropriate, to the General Assembly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session detailed information relating to the extent, rate of increase and composition of the deficit of the Organization, the pattern of payments of Member States, the cash-flow situation and voluntary contributions received from Member States and other sources pursuant to Assembly resolutions 2053 A (XX) of 15 December 1965 and 3049 A (XXVII) of 19 December 1972;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fortieth session the item entitled "Financial emergency of the United Nations".

General Assembly resolution 39/239 B

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/841 & Cor.1) without vote, 14 December (meeting 51); 10-nation draft (A/C.5/39/L.23), orally revised; agenda item 111.

Sponsors: Bangladesh, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 33, 40, 43, 46, 51; plenary 105.

The United Kingdom observed that the word "so-called" preceding the words "short-term deficit" in the fifth preambular paragraph of the 10-nation draft introduced by Sweden was imprecise; it was intended to qualify "short term" rather than "deficit". The United Kingdom's suggestion that it be deleted was supported by Sweden and Bangladesh on behalf of the sponsors, and the text, as amended, was approved without vote.

The USSR said the major reasons for the financial emergency were the inclusion in the budget of expenses contrary to the Charter, the imposition on all Members of costs incurred by Israel's aggression, and the high growth of overall expenditures. The bond issue and technical assistance expenditures should be removed from the regular budget and financed through voluntary contributions, and budgetary expenditures in general should be reduced and subjected to strict financial control.

Along with this text, the Assembly adopted resolution 39/239 A, by which it authorized a United Nations postage stamp on the social and economic crisis in Africa, with half of the revenue to go to the United Nations Special Account (see Chapter IV of this section).

Effects of currency instability and inflation

In a report of 20 November 1984,<sup>(9)</sup> the Secretary-General reviewed the interplay of various economic factors that appeared to be at the roots of inflation and exchange rate movements, and analysed their impact on the real domestic cost of Member States' assessed contributions as well as their effect on the United Nations budget by expenditure category. The report was submitted in response to a 1982 Assembly request<sup>(10)</sup> for preparation of a more penetrating and detailed study of the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the budget than the one submitted to the 1982 session.<sup>(11)</sup>

The report observed that there seemed to be no consensus on the nature of inflation or its precise causes, but two features that had characterized it in recent years were its accelerating pace and its transmission across international borders through trade—the most likely vehicle—as well as through other international economic linkages. Exchange-rate volatility was of particular relevance to inflation, movements in the value of the United States dollar vis-à-vis other currencies assuming special importance. The impact of inflation and monetary instability on the “burden” of sharing in the budget was examined within the framework of a theoretical analysis describing the various stages in the investigation of those phenomena and their relation to the real economic growth of the contributing countries.

Conceptually, the Secretary-General concluded, it was possible to pinpoint one or more factors contributing to inflation and trace their impact on the economy. However, it was exceedingly difficult to measure each factor's contribution to a given rate of inflation, or to determine the weights of domestic factors as opposed to those of an international origin; hence the difficulty of drawing conclusions on specific causes of inflation. Based on the assumptions used, the Secretary-General concluded that the precise causes of monetary instability which are reflected in sharp fluctuations in exchange rates, and their effect on the burden of financing mandated requirements expressed in one or a few national currency units, might be difficult to identify with any precision.

Irrespective of the impact of inflation and exchange rate fluctuations on domestic price movements in the various duty stations and wherever else the United Nations spent its money, the general drift of prices would affect the local cost of mandated goods and services. In addition, exchange rate fluctuations among the currencies the United Nations used might have a direct bearing on the total dollar cost of those outlays. The United Nations budget contained several expenditure categories, each affected in different ways by inflation and exchange rate fluctuations. Mandated purchases of goods and services other than those contracted for at pre-specified rates and adjustment mechanisms were directly affected by price fluctuations at the place where the money was spent.

Regardless of the origin of inflation and monetary instability, cost changes were eventually reflected in the dollar magnitude of the budget. Inflationary forces and exchange rate fluctuations affected budget expenditures, though not necessarily fully and immediately, and the rates of inflation and exchange rate fluctuations reported in the statistics issued by the countries in which the various duty stations were located were not appropriate indicators of the impact of price and exchange rate changes on the budget. Some expenditures were subjected to cost increases when new contracts were negotiated; others were buffered by threshold criteria (costs linked to escalation clauses or automatic cost-of-living adjustment provisions), minimum costing periods, incomplete transmission of fluctuations, and other factors.

Annexed to the report were a summary table indicating the rates of exchange and inflation reported in programme budget performance reports for the last four bienniums for four major duty stations (New York, Geneva, Nairobi and Vienna), and two graphs: one showing the cumulative impact of inflation on local currency expenditures at each of the four locations, and the other the annual fluctuations in the value of the local currencies of the last three locations in relation to the dollar.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By resolution 39/240, adopted by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Secretary-General was requested to prepare for it in 1985 another detailed study on the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the United Nations budget, taking into account the views expressed by Member States at its 1984 session.

Impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/230 of 18 December 1981 and 37/130 of 17 December 1982,

Deeply concerned at the increased cost of the goods and services associated with the operation of the United Nations and the United Nations system as a whole as a result of the persistence of inflation and monetary instability in those developed countries in which the United Nations makes its main expenditures,

Convinced that many Member States are not responsible for the losses that the budget of the United Nations experiences as a result of the monetary phenomena referred to in the preceding paragraph,

Stressing that, in order to cover the substantial losses caused by inflation and monetary instability, there is a need for a continuing review of procedures that could help to meet the above-mentioned budget costs in the most appropriate way,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations,

Convinced of the need to analyse more thoroughly all aspects of the increased costs of the goods and services associated with the operations of the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a more penetrating, extensive and detailed study on the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations, as was requested in General Assembly resolution 37/130, taking very duly into consideration the content of the preambular paragraphs of Assembly resolutions 36/230, 37/130 and the present resolution, together with the opinions expressed by Member States during the debates on this item at the thirty-ninth session of the Assembly, and to submit it to the Assembly at its fortieth session;

3. Also requests that the above-mentioned study include:

(a) The amounts which, over the last four bienniums, have resulted from inflation and monetary instability in the developed countries where United Nations organizations have their headquarters;

(b) A comparison between real, net and growth increases and increases due to inflation during the last four bienniums.

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 83-25-23 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/842) by recorded vote (43-23-11), 15 December (meeting 52); 6-nation draft (A/C.5/39/L.22); agenda item 112 ibid.

The United States contended that the average inflation rate over the past decade for the developed countries in which the United Nations incurred its main expenditures had been five times less than for the developing countries in which it incurred substantial expenditures, and the resolution was thus based on false assertions; moreover, the proposed study would waste valuable resources and the time should instead be used to study the real economic problems impeding development and growth. Egypt also made the point that inflation in the developed countries had for several years been lower than at other duty stations.

Cuba, on the other hand, said the inflation in developing countries where the United Nations had duty stations had been imported from the developed countries. The USSR was in agreement that budget growth in the United Nations system was attributable largely to inflation in the various host countries and that not all Member States were responsible for the increased costs resulting therefrom.

Canada, as well as Ireland speaking on behalf of the 10 member countries of the European Community, said the text was clearly politically, not financially, motivated. It suggested, Ireland said, that the developed countries alone were to blame for inflation and monetary instability and should compensate other countries accordingly. Resources should not be wasted on a pointless study, especially when inflation was slowing down world-wide.

Austria could not see what was meant by paragraph 3, and said that a preambular paragraph seemed to suggest that Austria experienced persistent monetary instability; the text was unclear, was based on false assumptions and analyses and called for a study which was beyond the capacity of the Office of Financial Services. While Cameroon believed the new study was necessary, it also found some of the preambular paragraphs problematic: it had not been proved that the Assembly was "convinced" that many Member States were not responsible for losses from inflation and monetary instability, it said, nor that there was "a need for a continuing review" of procedures that could help meet budget costs.

Accounts and auditing

Accounts for 1983

The 1983 accounts and financial statements of the United Nations and nine voluntarily financed United Nations development and humanitarian assistance programmes were accepted by the General Assembly at its 1984 session, along with the audit opinions on those programmes by the United Nations Board of Auditors. The Assembly also concurred with the observations of ACABQ on the subject. These actions were incorporated into resolution 39/66, adopted without vote on 13 December 1984, as recommended by the Fifth Committee.

Financial reports and audited financial statements and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the financial reports and audited financial statements for the period ended 31 December 1983 of the United Nations, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation and the United Nations Industrial Development Fund, the audit opinions of the Board of Auditors and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking into account the views expressed by delegations during the debate in the Fifth Committee, particularly in support of measures for the sound financial management and control of the United Nations family of organizations,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the audit opinions of the Board of Auditors;
2. Concurs with the observations and comments made by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report;
3. Requests the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to continue to give greater attention to areas regarding which they have made observations and comments;
4. Further requests the executive heads of the organizations and programmes concerned within the United Nations system to take such remedial action in areas falling within their competence as may be required by the observations and comments made by the Board of Auditors in its reports;

5. Renews its invitation to the governing bodies of the organizations concerned to consider each year at their regular sessions the remedial action taken by the respective executive heads in response to the observations and comments made by the Board of Auditors in its reports.

General Assembly resolution 39/66

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/618) without vote, 19 October (meeting 14); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.3), amended by Philippines (A/C.5/39/L.4) and by Ireland (A/C.5/39/L.5, orally revised); agenda item 108.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee, 3-7, 13, 14; plenary 98.

The draft, proposed by the Fifth Committee Chairman, incorporated two amendments approved in Committee without objection. The first was the addition by the Philippines of a phrase to the second preambular paragraph taking into account delegations' views "particularly in support of measures for the sound financial management and control of the United Nations family of organizations". The second was an amendment by Ireland adding paragraph 5, which it further orally revised to "renew its invitation to" rather than "invite" governing bodies to consider remedial action.

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Board of Auditors on 31 March 1984 his financial report on the accounts for the United Nations (including the International Trade Centre (ITC) jointly sponsored by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and the United Nations University (UNU))<sup>(1)</sup> for the 1982-1983 biennium. It included a statement of income and expenditure as shown in the table below (in millions of United States dollars):

| Account                                      | Income  | Expenditure |
|--|---------|-------------|
| General Fund                                 | 1,469.6 | 1,462.4     |
| Other General Fund-related activities        | 15.1    | —           |
| Peace-keeping missions                       | 529.6   | 470.8       |
| Technical co-operation activities            | 606.5   | 608.4       |
| General trust funds                          | 146.2   | 119.4       |
| Special accounts for programme support costs | 88.6    | 88.5        |

SOURCE: A/39/5 and Corr.1.

The Board of Auditors made recommendations and observations on various aspects of the financial management of the United Nations for the biennium and on the following programmes or organs for the year ended 31 December 1983, on which financial reports and audited financial statements<sup>(2)</sup> had also been submitted to the Assembly (see the headings "Accounts for 1983" in the chapters of this book pertaining to individual programmes): United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); United Nations Children's Fund

(UNICEF); United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA); United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR); voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP); United Nations Fund for Population Activities; United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation; and United Nations Industrial Development Fund (of UNIDO).

The Board's report on the United Nations was transmitted to the Assembly on 18 June;<sup>(1)</sup> its reports on other programmes and organs were included in the financial reports of those programmes.<sup>(2)</sup> In its review, the Board had concentrated on cash management, budgetary control, trust funds, the procurement system, including control over expendable and revenue-producing activities, and internal audit. ACABQ commented on the Board's recommendations in its report of 20 September<sup>(3)</sup> before they were reviewed by the Fifth Committee. Among the Board's findings, and comments thereon by ACABQ, were the following.

Some submissions of budgetary proposals to the Budget Division were tardy; others did not conform to the prescribed format, or contained significant errors. ACABQ said it intended to return to the question of a full determination of the validity of unliquidated obligations, on which the Board recommended regular and thorough reviews, when it examined modalities for estimating requirements and forecasting expenditures.

The cost of some non-recurrent maintenance at Geneva had been incorrectly charged to the current maintenance account. Some undelivered purchases were charged against the wrong biennial appropriations; ACABQ noted that the administration had already issued instructions to discontinue that practice. Trust fund expenditure control was inadequate and closure of inactive funds unduly delayed.

The Board commented on procurement practices at the United Nations, ITC, UNICEF, UNRWA and UNHCR. Procurement systems and procedures at Headquarters and Geneva needed improvement, as did inventory-record maintenance. Established procedures should be followed in conducting inventories; regulations relating to contracts and purchases were not adequately applied at Geneva, and there was need for better contract arrangements for equipment-and-services-supply for projects at the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator. Procedures for reporting losses and writing off property should be reviewed and guidelines set up. The automated purchase and payment system required refinement, although it was doubtful that its full implementation would be achieved. ACABQ shared the Board's concern regarding inventories, write-off procedures and procurement practices and urged that administrations pay closer attention to all aspects of the procurement process.

The success of measures to control travel costs would depend on the co-operation of officers authorized to approve their own travel plans; and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific should enter into contractual arrangements with a travel agent.

A weakness persisted in implementing and monitoring technical co-operation projects; reporting on and evaluating fellowship programmes should be enhanced; and budgetary control for UNIDO's project expenditures should be made more effective and project implementation improved through timely project inputs. ACABQ felt that the Board's observations on technical co-operation activities could be brought to the attention of the UNDP Governing Council.

Concerning computer operations, inter-agency co-ordination procedures related to electronic data processing (EDP) facilities and resources needed to be harmonized and developed, and a formal monitoring process established to ensure compliance with security, quality control and performance standards of the New York Computing Service. Guidelines should be drawn up to establish a formal and consistent basis for EDP planning and budget formulation procedures. ACABQ agreed with the Board that compliance with the standards set by the Electronic Data Processing and Information Systems Division should be monitored.

Internal Audit Division coverage needed to be improved (see below), and collection of assessed contributions required further efforts.

ACABQ had no comments on the Board's reports on the financial statements of UNU, UNITAR, the UNEP Fund or UNIDO.

Accounts and financial statements for 1984 relating to the above organs and programmes, other than the United Nations, the UNEP Fund and the Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, were submitted to the Assembly in 1985.<sup>(4)</sup>

Auditing practices

In its 1984 report to the General Assembly, contained in the financial report and audited financial statements on the United Nations for the 1982-1983 biennium,<sup>(1)</sup> the Board of Auditors reported on its review of the Internal Audit Division, describing the Division's new responsibilities relating to the audit of programme performance, including determining the validity of submissions, the effectiveness of monitoring procedures, the accuracy of data and the reliability of results. It concluded that, particularly in the light of the growth of United Nations activities, Division resources were inadequate to handle effectively the additional responsibilities. It recommended a review of the Division's resources and measures taken to correct deficiencies, as well as a review of its training programme. ACABQ<sup>(3)</sup> considered that the reviews recommended by the Board should be undertaken without delay and their results reflected in the proposed 1986-1987 budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

A decision with the effect of endorsing ACABQ's recommendations was proposed in the Fifth Committee by Canada, which revised its text and orally edited the revision, changing the original request for a report to be submitted to the Assembly at its 1985 session to one to be submitted in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987. The Committee approved the text without vote, and the Assembly adopted it in the same manner as decision 39/416 in December 1984.

Internal Audit Division

At its 98th plenary meeting, on 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, recognized the continuing and invaluable contribution of the Internal Audit Division of the Secretariat in ensuring that internal controls were operating effectively and decided to request the Secretary-General to conduct a review of the Internal Audit Division as recommended by the Board of Auditors, taking into account, inter alia:

- (a) Staff qualifications;
- (b) The adequacy of audit coverage of United Nations programmes, particularly in offices away from Headquarters, in the light of the decentralization of accounting functions;
- (c) The need for training in order to keep abreast of contemporary audit practices and techniques; and to report thereon in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987.

General Assembly decision 39/416

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/618) without vote, 24 October (meeting 16); draft by Canada (A/C.5/39/L.7/Rev.1), orally revised; agenda item 108.
Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 3-7, 15, 16; plenary 98.

Chapter II

United Nations programmes

Further action was taken in 1984 to improve United Nations programme planning, budgeting and evaluation. The Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) reported progress in joint planning on human settlements, nutrition and rural development. CPC's recommendations and conclusions, taken at its twenty-fourth annual session, were endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1984/61 A. The General Assembly, by resolution 39/238 on programme planning, adopted addenda and revisions proposed by the Secretary-General to the medium-term plan for 1984-1989.

A timetable for intergovernmental review of in-depth and triennial evaluation studies scheduled for 1986-1992 was accepted by the Assembly, also by resolution 39/238, as were other aspects of programme planning. The complete text of regulations governing programme planning, programme aspects of the budget, monitoring of programme implementation and evaluation methods was issued by the Secretary-General in September 1984.

The Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) presented 15 reports, most of which evaluated specific United Nations programmes, and the Assembly, in resolution 39/242, requested JIU to concentrate its work programme on areas of greatest importance within the system, and renewed its invitation to United Nations organs to bear in mind specific decisions on JIU recommendations for effective follow-up.

The annual report on administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the United Nations system, prepared by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), focused in 1984 on budgetary practices of the specialized agencies and of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). The Assembly, in resolution 39/241, concurred with ACABQ's observations and recommendations.

Topics related to this chapter. Development policy and international economic co-operation: economic co-operation among developing countries—co-ordination in the United Nations system; rural development. Operational activities for development: interagency co-operation—programme evaluation; technical co-operation through UNDP—UNDP programme planning and execution; other technical co-operation—Department of Technical Co-operation for Development. Institutional arrangements: coordination in the United Nations system. United Nations financing.

Programme planning

Aspects of the programme planning and budgeting process in the United Nations Secretariat, including the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 and programme monitoring and evaluation, were the subject in 1984 of recommendations by CPC and the General Assembly.

CPC, in a report on the work of its 1984 session,<sup>(1)</sup> noted that the progress achieved in joint planning since the adoption of a 1977 Assembly resolution on the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations system<sup>(2)</sup> had been slow but, nevertheless, satisfactory. The Committee expressed appreciation for such achievements as the cross-organizational programme analysis on human settlements (see p. 782) which would serve as a basis for joint planning. Other examples of areas where joint planning had been successful were nutrition, monitored by the Sub-Committee on Nutrition of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) (see p. 735), and rural development, dealt with by the ACC Task Force on Rural Development (see p. 410). CPC also pointed out that prior consultations on work programmes, particularly those which took place before programme proposals were completed, provided a useful tool for joint planning and gave it the opportunity to take into account comments made on proposed activities by organizations of the United Nations system.

Joint planning of the United Nations organizations was a subject of the ACC annual overview report for 1983-1984 and a CPC recommendation (see p. 971).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In section I of resolution 1984/61 A, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the conclusions and recommendations in the CPC report and emphasized the importance of the Committee's programming and co-ordination functions. The Council stressed the need for timely and full implementation of intergovernmental mandates concerning the submission of reports to CPC by the United Nations organizations, organs and bodies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, following the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/238.

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/197 of 20 December 1977, 33/118 of 19 December 1978, 34/224 of 20 December 1979, 35/9 of 3 November 1980, 36/228 of 18 December 1981, 37/234 of 21 December 1982 and 38/227 of 20 December 1983,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-fourth session,

Having considered the proposed revisions to the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989 and the report of the Secretary-General on the strengthening of the capacity of the United Nations evaluation units and systems,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the medium-term plan for financial, common and conference services,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/61 of 26 July 1984,

Noting also the views expressed by the Main Committees of the General Assembly on the revision of various chapters of the medium-term plan,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-fourth session;

2. Adopts the revisions to the medium-term plan contained in the report of the Secretary-General, as modified by the recommendations contained in chapter X, paragraphs 305 to 323, of the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and approved by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 1984/61 A;

3. Approves the conclusions and other recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination contained in chapter X of its report and the decisions of the Economic and Social Council contained in its resolution 1984/61;

4. Endorses the proposals by the Secretary-General in paragraphs 18 and 19 of his report on the strengthening of the capacity of the United Nations evaluation units and systems;

5. Also endorses the medium-term plan for financial, common and conference services and the views thereon expressed by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions.

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/840) without vote, 14 December (meeting 51); draft by Cameroon (A/C.5/39/L.21), orally revised; agenda item 110.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 16, 17, 29, 35, 36, 50, 51, 53, 54; plenary 105.

Explaining its position before the Committee took action, the Byelorussian SSR said while CPC had made some recommendations for rationalizing the Organization's work and improving programmes, it could have made more substantial proposals for strengthening co-ordination within the system and eliminating ineffective programmes. One of the main reasons for introducing the new system of programme planning and budgeting had been to enable managers to provide intergovernmental bodies with timely analyses of all aspects of activities and of the resources available. The system having been in place for 10 years, Member States were justified in asking the Administration to ensure that programme managers released funds for new activities by cutting out obsolete or secondary programme elements.

Indonesia and the United States voiced reservations on certain aspects of the medium-term plan.

In other action concerning programme planning, the Assembly, by decision 39/456, decided to resume its thirty-ninth session to consider a number of agenda items, including programme planning, thereby postponing action on a draft decision introduced by Cameroon<sup>(3)</sup> which would have changed "sections" to "section" in paragraph 7 (c) (iii) of its 1983 resolution on programme planning<sup>(4)</sup> concerning one of the guidelines for statements to be provided by the Secretary-General on programme implications of draft resolutions.

The Fifth Committee adopted on 15 December 1984 a motion by Egypt for closure of debate on the draft decision, by a recorded vote of 63 to 22, with 7 abstentions.

Speaking against the motion, the United States, which had requested the vote, said that Egypt's request to close the debate before the Committee had heard the opinion of the Legal Counsel confirmed the suspicion that what was being sought was probably not in accordance with the legal rules of the Assembly. Whether or not the wording of the 1983 resolution was a mistake, it should remain; if some were unhappy with it, they should make new proposals. The use of the singular "section" implied a substantive difference; as the decision would actually change the wording of a previous resolution, a legal opinion on it should be sought. Following adoption of the decision, the United States expressed the view that in the light of the vote, the 1983 resolution could no longer be considered to have been adopted by consensus.

Appealing to the United States not to press for a vote, Egypt said that the Committee had been assured by the Under-Secretary-General for Administration and Management that the word "sections" was a typographical error.

Given those assurances, Sweden felt that there was no need for a decision on the matter; in interpreting and applying the 1983 resolution, the Secretariat would follow the wording of the agreed text.

Italy asked whether the decision would mean that when the Secretary-General was requested to undertake specific activities within existing resources, he was limited to the resources of the relevant budget section and was prevented from using those of other sections; if that was the case, Italy would be even more strongly in favour of the decision.

Speaking as Chairman of CPC, Cameroon said the real issue was that if a resolution contained an error, it should be corrected. The substantive issues arising from the 1983 resolution could be discussed by the Assembly in 1985.

Priority setting

In accordance with recommendations for a new system of setting priorities made by CPC in 1981<sup>(5)</sup> and endorsed by the General Assembly the same year,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted in February 1984 to the Assembly's Fifth Committee a report<sup>(7)</sup> on operating the new system and the experience gained with it in formulating and reviewing the medium-term plan and the programme budget. The report also provided an overview of the institutional aspects of priority setting.

The Secretary-General stated that in spite of efforts made at the Secretariat and intergovernmental levels, setting priorities in the manner envisaged proved difficult in the context of the medium-term plan for 1984-1989. However, priorities were successfully set in substantive areas in the proposed 1984-1985 programme budget. It was too early to draw clear conclusions about the effect of such designations on implementing the work programme proposed in the narrative of the programme budget or on the adjustment of that work programme by the incorporation of supplementary activities mandated by intergovernmental bodies.

As a consequence, the operation of the new system of setting priorities would be kept under review. For the time being, however, no changes were suggested in the concept of priority setting or in the programme planning regulations adopted by the Assembly in 1982.<sup>(8)</sup>

Following consideration of the report, CPC stated that it shared the Secretary-General's view that it was too early to draw clear conclusions concerning the effect of priority setting and that, while no changes were suggested for the time being, its operation would be kept under review. The system had not yet been fully implemented by some intergovernmental bodies and Secretariat services, and there was still no system for submitting Secretariat proposals on priorities to intergovernmental bodies. CPC therefore requested the Secretariat to ensure that the relevant Assembly resolutions on programme planning and priority setting<sup>(9)</sup> would be implemented more systematically.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In section III of resolution 1984/61 A, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to ensure that in future the relevant Assembly resolutions would be implemented more systematically.

Regulations for programme planning and evaluation

In September 1984, the Secretary-General issued the complete text of regulations governing programme planning, the programme aspects of the budget, the monitoring of programme implementation and methods of evaluation,<sup>(10)</sup> as adopted by the General Assembly in 1982,<sup>(8)</sup> and the rules formulated by him for implementing those regulations. The Secretary-General had been asked by the Assembly in December 1983<sup>(4)</sup> to issue the regulations, taking into account the CPC recommendations of May of that year.<sup>(11)</sup>

Financial rules of UN

The Secretary-General, in an October 1984 report,<sup>(12)</sup> issued revisions to the United Nations Financial Rules required as a result of the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations under a 1977 General Assembly resolution.<sup>(2)</sup> The revisions were made in the light of the new programme planning and budgeting regulations and procedures, and covered definitions, budget estimates, the form of the proposed programme budget, publication of the approved programme budget, submission of supplementary programme budget proposals, internal audit, and resolutions involving expenditures.

The Chairman of ACABQ, in an oral report before the General Assembly's Fifth Committee<sup>(13)</sup> noted that ACABQ had received the Secretary-General's report and had discussed it with the Controller on 23 October. The corrigendum to the report reflected ACABQ's suggestions with regard to a number of points which had required clarification.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 39/456, the General Assembly suspended its thirty-ninth session until a date to be announced, when it would further consider programme planning, among other agenda items. The Fifth Committee had recommended to the Assembly on 17 December that it adopt a draft decision taking note of the revisions to the Financial Rules promulgated by the Secretary-General.

Medium-term plan (1984-1989)

Experience gained in applying the new system for setting priorities in the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 was reviewed in a February 1984 report by the Secretary-General (see above).<sup>(7)</sup> He stated that as it was too early to draw conclusions about the effect of the new system on implementation of the work programme, consequently, it would be kept under review.

The medium-term plan, adopted by the General Assembly in 1982,<sup>(14)</sup> covered the entire range of United Nations activities, both global and regional. It described those activities in major programmes or chapters covering a broad sectoral area, which themselves were broken down into programmes and subprogrammes.<sup>(15)</sup> In 1983,<sup>(4)</sup> an additional chapter had been added to the original 24. In 1984, the Secretary-General submitted four more chapters, which were approved by the Assembly in its resolution 39/238 on programme planning, as were the revisions proposed by the Secretary-General to existing chapters or programmes.

Medium-term plan revisions

In a March 1984 report,<sup>(16)</sup> the Secretary-General proposed revisions to the medium-term plan, incorporating new developments and making necessary adjustments so that the plan could provide a framework for the proposed programme budgets for 1986-1987 and 1988-1989. The revisions pertained to entire programmes or individual subprogrammes and also included textual revisions. No significant revision was required in ten of the major programmes.

After reviewing the proposed revisions, CPC drew several conclusions.<sup>(1)</sup> It agreed that the revisions reflected fairly and comprehensively all new mandates having programme implications for the next biennial budgets. The 15 major programmes for which revisions had been proposed were appropriate, although there were two other major programmes where CPC thought some amendments were called for and accordingly proposed changes. CPC generally agreed on the interpretation of the new legislative mandates. It noted that some revisions were not the result of the adoption of new mandates but due to the lack of anticipated extrabudgetary resources or to a disproportionately high rate of staff vacancies in some of the regional commissions.

Turning to methodological considerations, CPC felt that the link between medium-term plan and programme budget needed careful interpretation. It pointed out that some of the proposed programme revisions stemmed from decisions that had been approved within the context of the 1984-1985 programme budget. It recognized that time constraints might necessitate such procedure, but reiterated that the medium-term plan should continue to serve as the framework for future biennial budgets.

To improve future revisions, CPC suggested that further efforts be made to identify the specific paragraphs of new legislative mandates on which the proposed revisions were based, and to apply more systematically the methodology for medium-term planning adopted by the General Assembly in 1979,<sup>(17)</sup> particularly with regard to the participation of sectoral and regional intergovernmental bodies.

CPC recommended that the Assembly adopt the proposed revisions with modifications specified by CPC for each programme and subprogramme.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July 1984, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote decision 1984/172.

Proposed revisions to the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 25 July 1984, the Council decided to endorse the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination with regard to the proposed revisions to the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989, as contained in the report of the Committee on the work of its twenty-fourth session.

Economic and Social Council decision 1984/172

Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (E/1984/136) without vote, 12 July (meeting 5); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 21).

In section II of resolution 1984/61 A, the Council endorsed CPC conclusions and recommendations regarding the proposed revisions to the medium-term plan to incorporate the programme implications of resolutions and decisions adopted by intergovernmental organs or international conferences. The Council reiterated that the plan should continue to serve as the framework for future programme budgets. It requested the Secretary-General, when preparing future revisions, to identify the specific paragraphs of new legislative mandates on which the proposed revisions were based and to apply the methodology for medium-term planning adopted by the Assembly in 1979.<sup>(17)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In a note of 13 December 1984,<sup>(18)</sup> the Fifth Committee Chairman summarized replies received in response to his letters<sup>(19)</sup> of 20 November to the other Main Committees of the General Assembly asking for their views on the proposed revisions in the relevant chapters of the medium-term plan. In doing so, the Chairman followed the CPC recommendation endorsed by the Assembly in 1981,<sup>(6)</sup> that each chapter be submitted to the appropriate Main Committee before the plan as a whole was adopted by the Assembly.

The First, Special Political and Third Committees had no comments. The Second Committee, on 6 December 1984<sup>(20)</sup> recommended adoption of the revisions of the relevant chapters. The Fourth Committee Chairman stated that the attention of the Committee members had been drawn to the letter. The Sixth Committee said there were no further views it wished to express on chapter III (International justice and law) of the medium-term plan, concerning the work of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL).<sup>(21)</sup>

Following the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly in resolution 39/238 approved the Secretary-General's proposed revisions to the medium-term plan as modified by the CPC recommendations and approved by the Economic and Social Council.

Addenda to medium-term plan

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in 1984 an addendum to the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 on chapters 26 to 30,<sup>(22)</sup> covering financial services, personnel management services, general services and other management and technical support services, and conference and library services.

The addendum was considered ACABQ in November.<sup>(23)</sup> While agreeing that the major programmes discussed in those chapters should correspond to main organizational units, ACABQ believed nevertheless that both presentation and substance of the proposals could have been considerably refined. In its opinion, the subdivisions within each chapter corresponded too closely to the subunits of each main organizational unit; the existence of those subunits seemed to have been a major factor in deciding whether certain subprogrammes should be identified separately. Such a compartmentalized approach had resulted in some activities appearing as subprogrammes which did not warrant that designation, it stated. Furthermore, this approach did not facilitate the examination of activities that cut across organizational units, nor did it help in presenting a consolidated picture of those activities.

ACABQ believed that subsequent medium-term plans for servicing activities should be more general, and that the Secretariat should define the responsibilities and themes of each major organizational unit, analyse the related problems and outline corrective activities and strategies. It stated that the amount of detail contained in the proposals and the subdivision of programmes were excessive.

Among other observations, ACABQ noted that several of the proposed activities were listed as continuing, but some of a continuing nature were listed as activities proposed for the plan period mainly because the Secretary-General planned to enhance or reorient them. ACABQ believed that a clearer differentiation should be made between new and continuing activities, including those being reoriented or reinforced. It was also of the opinion that a more concise description of continuing activities should be incorporated into future plans.

With regard to computer and other technological innovations, to which numerous references were made throughout the Secretary-General's proposals, the Advisory Committee requested additional information on the totality of those innovations both in the plan for common services and that for conference and library services, and on the schedule for implementing them. ACABQ also commented on each of the programmes and subprogrammes as proposed by the Secretary-General.

The Assembly, in resolution 39/238, endorsed the medium-term plan for financial, common and conference services and the views expressed by ACABQ.

Another addendum covering the programme on marine affairs and a subprogramme in the area of social development and humanitarian affairs, both adopted by the Assembly in December 1983,<sup>(4)</sup> was issued by the Secretary-General in March 1984.<sup>(24)</sup>

Programme budgeting

Cross-sectional programme analysis of the 1984-1985 budget

In May 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to CPC a cross-sectional programme analysis using the population programme as an example. An analysis had been requested by CPC in 1983 for its consideration in 1984 of the 1984-1985 programme budget.

Following consideration of the Secretary-General's report, CPC, at its 1984 session,<sup>(2)</sup> concluded that his analysis made it possible to grasp the way in which an activity was covered in the budget, as well as to identify gaps, shortcomings and overlappings. The Committee further concluded that cross-sectional programme analyses could usefully complement cross-organizational analyses, but that some aspects of the methodology required clarification; for example, the basis on which programmes would be chosen for analysis was not clear. CPC recommended that the Secretary-General submit on an ad hoc basis cross-sectional analyses of certain programmes which it would choose or which presented specific problems.

A possible linkage between in-depth evaluation and cross-organizational programme analyses was examined in a February note by the Secretary-General (see p. 1143).

Programme performance report (1982-1983)

In April 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a programme performance report for 1982-1983, examining departures from programmed commitments in terms of causes of reformulations, postponements, terminations and additions, and in terms of organizational units. Those results, he stated, would be utilized in preparing the 1986-1987 programme budget.

The volume of postponements and terminations was greater than expected, the primary cause for that being that the United Nations budget consisted of two very different sources of financing—the predictable regular budget and extrabudgetary resources which could only be estimated at the time of budget preparation. The mixture of funding also presented difficulties in programming and performance reporting.

The Secretary-General noted that a Central Monitoring Unit had been established under the authority of the Programme Planning and Budgeting Board (PPBB). In the year to come, the Unit would establish procedures: to reinforce monitoring capacities in individual organizations and set up a methodology for periodic performance reporting; to establish mechanisms for an independent central check of output production; and to hold consultations on significant departures from programmed commitments. In addition, the financial rules were being changed to incorporate a programme audit function into the responsibilities of the Internal Audit Division.

Upon consideration of the report, CPC recommended that steps be taken to improve the methodology of programme performance reports, especially by expanding their scope so as to include the greatest possible number of administrative units and all categories of activities and by improving the system of rating implementation. It also recommended that programme elements and outputs with more than 50 per cent financing from extrabudgetary resources be separately identified; outputs designated as highest priority have an implementation rate close to 100 per cent; urgent steps be taken to alleviate the vacancy situation in several units, which was adversely affecting programme implementation; and a review of submissions to intergovernmental bodies of integrated management instruments (the medium-term plan, programme budget, programme performance and evaluation reports) be undertaken to bring about closer harmonization.

By section IV of resolution 1984/61 A, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to implement those recommendations when preparing the programme performance report for 1984-1985.

The General Assembly, in resolution 39/238 on programme planning, approved CPC's conclusions and recommendations.

Programme budget documentation

In April 1984,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly through CPC a report on preparation of proposed programme budget documentation, as requested by the Economic and Social Council in July 1983.<sup>(5)</sup> He stated that work had begun on the drafting of instructions for preparing budget submissions by heads of offices and departments; in that connection, a small task force had been established within the Secretariat. The possibility of an instruction manual was considered. It was expected that the instructions would be reviewed by PPBB and prepared for issuance by 31 May to give programme managers time to prepare budget proposals and adhere to a deadline of 31 October for submissions.

Improvement of budget submissions would expedite their review by the Office of Financial Services of the Department of Administration and Management and, where applicable, the Office for Programme Planning and Co-ordination of the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs. The central review would be streamlined to remedy shortcomings identified by the Secretary-General in 1983.<sup>(6)</sup> The preliminary analysis of submissions was to be completed by the end of December 1984; by that date, preliminary decisions would be taken by PPBB on all sections of the budget based on a review of summary sheets prepared by the Office of Financial Services or, in the case of economic and social sections, prepared jointly with the Office for Programme Planning and Co-ordination. PPBB would take final decisions starting in January 1985.

Other improvements were contemplated to facilitate the task of the central reviewing units and to expedite budget preparation. Such improvements included direct inputting of data by submitting offices with access to computer terminals and compilation during the last quarter of 1984 of all data necessary to produce a revalued base. That would require daily updating of the 1984-1985 budget formulation file to reflect action taken by the Assembly at its 1984 regular session in respect of revised estimates and statements of programme, financial and administrative implications.

Those initiatives should be viewed as part of an ongoing process of management improvement, the report concluded; solutions identified in 1983 by the Secretary-General<sup>(6)</sup> either had already been devised or were being pursued.

CPC expressed satisfaction with the Secretary-General's efforts to improve the budget preparation process and ensure timely submission of budget documentation; however, it added, there was a need for those efforts to result in substantial improvements in presenting budget proposals for 1986-1987. It suggested that the Secretariat include submission dates with each fascicle.<sup>(2)</sup>

While commenting favourably on the Secretariat's intention to prepare an instruction manual, the Committee felt that the manual should reflect the budgetary procedures established by the Assembly and other intergovernmental bodies. CPC requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the arrangements indicated in his report would be followed and that special attention would be paid to regulation 4.7 of the Regulations Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation. The regulation stipulated that heads of departments and offices should submit programme proposals and budget estimates as prescribed by the Secretary-General; that PPBB review submissions and report to the Secretary-General, who would decide on programme content and resource allocation; and that work programmes submitted by programme managers to specialized intergovernmental organs contain programme elements and output specifications identical to those in the programme portion of the proposed budget. The Secretary-General would then provide CPC and ACABQ with copies of the proposed budget by the end of April of the year preceding the budgetary period.

In section VIII of resolution 1984/61 A, the Economic and Social Council requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the arrangements set out in his report would be followed. The Assembly, in resolution 39/238, approved CPC's conclusions and recommendations and the Council decision in resolution 1984/61.

Programme evaluation

Possibilities for further action to strengthen Secretariat machinery for evaluating the efficiency and impact of United Nations programmes and activities were examined in 1984 by CPC, JIU and the General Assembly.

The text of regulations and rules governing programme planning, programme aspects of the budget, programme implementation and the methods of evaluation were issued by the Secretary-General in September 1984 (see p. 1139).

Questions related to evaluation were considered by CPC at its 1984 session in the following areas: the United Nations Development Programme-financed technical co-operation activities of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization in the field of manufactures (see p. 570); JIU report on the United Nations Department of Technical Co-operation for Development (p. 456); report on the programme and activities of the Joint United Nations Information Committee (p. 367); and a tentative timetable for intergovernmental review of in-depth and triennial evaluation studies scheduled for 1986 to 1992 (see below).

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 1984/176, took note of a 1983 JIU report on United Nations system co-operation in developing evaluation by Governments and the ACC comments thereon.<sup>(1)</sup> In September 1984, the Secretary-General reported on implementation of JIU's recommendations (see p. 433).

Strengthening of UN evaluation units

In response to a December 1983 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General in a November 1984 report<sup>(3)</sup> reviewed the possibilities of strengthening United Nations evaluation units and systems. He stated that six units had examined their 1984-1985 staffing tables to identify posts which could be redeployed for evaluation work. The units were the Office for Programme Planning and Coordination of the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs; the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean; the Economic Commission for Africa; the Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat); and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. They indicated that although executive heads and programme managers recognized the importance of strengthening programme evaluation, the scarcity of resources was a limiting factor.

In view of the situation, the Secretary-General said he would propose permanent solutions for strengthening the evaluation functions in those units in his proposed programme budget for 1986-1987. Meanwhile, he would try to reallocate resources for evaluation from savings in other sections of the 1984-1985 budget.

The Secretary-General's proposals were endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 39/238.

Intergovernmental review of in-depth and triennial evaluation studies

In a February 1984 note,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a timetable for intergovernmental review of in-depth and triennial evaluation studies scheduled for 1986 to 1992, as proposed in 1983.<sup>(5)</sup> At its 1984 session, CPC recommended acceptance of the timetable.<sup>(6)</sup>

In his note, the Secretary-General also examined a possible linkage between themes of in-depth evaluation studies and of cross-organizational programme analyses, which were both ways of looking at United Nations programmes. However, while the latter were designed to give an overview of all the activities within a programme or subject area currently under way or to be undertaken in the forthcoming budget period by agencies and organizations throughout the system, evaluation studies requested by CPC only covered activities of units and bodies within the United Nations proper. Also, an evaluation focused on completed activities or those well under way to assess their impact and aimed at improving planning, design and implementation of individual programmes; a cross-organizational analysis, on the other hand, looked at projected activities and its aim was to improve co-ordination among organizations in a given area. Based on those differences, the Secretary-General concluded, a direct linkage between both types of analyses would be unfeasible, though certain aspects could be harmonized. He suggested that the Committee approve the principle that they be designed to provide complementary information and that, to the extent possible, the data bases assembled for them be compatible.

Expressing disagreement with the Secretary-General's proposal that direct linkage between in-depth evaluation and cross-organizational analyses would be unfeasible, CPC reconfirmed its recommendation that the relationship should be complementary; that linkage should be maintained by scheduling evaluations and analyses of the same or related topics as close as practicable to each other; and that each should make use of the information generated by the other.

In view of the requirement that all programmes in the medium-term plan be reviewed within the six-year plan period, CPC recommended that other types of evaluation be considered to supplement the in-depth evaluation. In particular, the broadening of scope should be envisaged through employing the following kinds of programme review: self-evaluation by the Administration Management Service of the Department of Administration and Management; external evaluation, such as that undertaken by JIU; and evaluations undertaken by Governments.

The Assembly, in resolution 39/238, approved CPC's conclusions and recommendations.

Joint Inspection Unit

Fifteen reports, most of which evaluated specific programmes of the United Nations and the United Nations system, were submitted during 1984 by JIU.

Two of the reports covered organizational units: the Office of Secretariat Services for Economic and Social Matters<sup>(7)</sup> (see p. 990) and the International Maritime Organization.<sup>(8)</sup> Thirteen reports were studies of activities—co-operation between and management of libraries of the United Nations system (see p. 1185);<sup>(9)</sup> the International Labour Organisation (ILO) social security major programme;<sup>(10)</sup> recruitment policy and its application in ILO;<sup>(11)</sup> publications policy and practice in the United Nations system (see p. 367);<sup>(12)</sup> reporting to the Economic and Social Council (see p. 978);<sup>(13)</sup> personnel problems in the World Food Programme (see p. 674);<sup>(14)</sup> the impact of the International Atomic Energy Agency's technical co-operation on the nuclear energy development programmes of member States;<sup>(15)</sup> common services of United Nations organizations at the Vienna international centre (see p. 1181);<sup>(16)</sup> competitive examinations in the United Nations (see p. 1154);<sup>(17)</sup> staff costs and some aspects of utilization of human and financial resources in the United Nations Secretariat (see p. 1154);<sup>(18)</sup> United Nations technical co-operation in Central America and the Caribbean (see p. 636);<sup>(19)</sup> role of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in South-East Asia (circulated in 1985);<sup>(20)</sup> and drug abuse control activities in the United Nations system (see p. 955).<sup>(21)</sup>

In addition, JIU sent to the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in July a note containing the results of a management review of the Joint Nordic-UNESCO Project in Africa. The note was sent to UNESCO for action and to the other participating organizations of JIU for information.

Circulated in 1984 was a 1983 JIU report on the Office for Projects Execution of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) (see p. 441), transmitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General in February 1984.<sup>(22)</sup>

The activities of JIU from 1 July 1983 to 30 June 1984 were described in its sixteenth report to the General Assembly.<sup>(23)</sup> The rest of the year was covered in its 1984-1985 report.<sup>(24)</sup>

The work programme of JIU for 1984 was transmitted to the General Assembly by a February note of the Secretary-General.<sup>(25)</sup> In its 1984 report, JIU pointed out that its 1984 work programme included a study concerning the structure of the field representation of United Nations organs, requested by the Assembly in 1983.<sup>(26)</sup> The study would be presented to the 1985 Assembly.

The widest possible contacts continued to be maintained by JIU. Inspectors held informal meetings in January 1984 with representatives of the group of Western European and other States and the Latin American group; JIU considered those meetings useful as they enabled it to obtain a sense of how its work was viewed by Member States. In March, it arranged a three-day informal interagency evaluation meeting attended by evaluation specialists and representatives from 25 organizations; among other topics, the meeting discussed national evaluation efforts, the impact of evaluation on management decision-making and policy formulation, and built-in self-evaluation. In May, JIU met with ACABQ at Geneva to discuss the development of several JIU reports. JIU also maintained contact with the International Civil Service Commission, the Panel of External Auditors and the management and audit services of several secretariats.

In accordance with procedures established by the General Assembly in 1977,<sup>(27)</sup> the Secretary-General provided information in a September 1984 report<sup>(28)</sup> on the status of implementation of 1983 JIU recommendations on the following matters: contribution of the United Nations system to the conservation and management of Latin American cultural and natural heritage (see p. 638); United Nations system co-operation in developing evaluation by Governments (see p. 433); activities of the United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office (see p. 510); progress of regional programmes in the conservation of African wildlife (p. 617); UNDP field offices (see p. 453); and reports on the United Nations Department of Technical Co-operation for Development (see p. 456), the United Nations Department of International Economic and Social Affairs (see p. 990), and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (see p. 337).

During a brief discussion of the JIU reports at CPC's 1984 session, several delegations expressed the view that the reports were not receiving adequate consideration by CPC.<sup>(6)</sup> The Committee decided that in future, programming aspects of JIU reports would be reviewed even without the written comments of the Secretary-General and that it would select at its organizational meeting each year the JIU reports to be examined at its regular session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/242.

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the UN system

In its annual report to the General Assembly on administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the United Nations system, submitted in October 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> ACABQ reviewed budgeting practices of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). Discussions covered such questions as inflation, exchange rates, categories of budget increase, personnel lapse factors and distributed costs.

While many similarities existed in the ways the agencies prepared their budgets, ACABQ observed that there were differences resulting from a variety of factors such as the size of an agency, the frequency with which its legislative body met, and the nature of its programme. Of prime importance, ACABQ believed, was co-ordination among the agencies with a view to harmonizing their budgeting practices. Progress had been made, particularly concerning the adoption of biennial budgeting, synchronization of budget cycles, and the development of a common budget structure, including comparable prefatory material.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 39/241.

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency

The General Assembly

1. Takes note of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the administrative and budgetary co-ordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency;
2. Concurs with the comments and recommendations of the Advisory Committee as contained in its report;
3. Refers to the organizations concerned the report of the Advisory Committee as well as the comments and observations made in the course of its consideration in the Fifth Committee;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to refer to the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system, through the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, matters arising from the report of the Advisory Committee and from the related debate in the Fifth Committee that call for their attention and necessary action;
5. Transmits the report of the Advisory Committee to the Board of Auditors, the Panel of External Auditors, the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, the International Civil Service Commission and the Joint Inspection Unit for their information.

Expenditure in relation to programmes

The seventeenth ACC report on expenditures of the United Nations system in relation to programmes was presented to the Economic and Social Council in July 1984.<sup>(2)</sup> The report was based on interorganization classification of programmes developed by ACC in consultation with individual Governments and other interested parties. In tables, it showed expenditures of regular budget and extrabudgetary funds for 1982-1983 and estimated expenditures of those funds for 1984-1985.

The Economic and Social Council took note of the report in decision 1984/176.

Chapter III

United Nations officials

Staff in organizations of the United Nations system belonging to the common system of salaries and fringe benefits of the international civil service totalled 50,544 as at 31 December 1984, according to figures compiled for the inter-agency Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC). This total consisted of 26,251 in the United Nations Secretariat and the balance in specialized agencies and other related intergovernmental organizations. The common system encompassed the entire United Nations system except for international financial institutions headquartered at Washington, D.C.

Of the total in the system, 21,346, or 42 per cent, were stationed at the organizations' headquarters, 20,688, or 40 per cent, were at other established offices, and 8,510, or 16 per cent, were project staff, working on technical co-operation and other operational activities in the field. By category, 18,875 were Professionals and 31,669 were in the General Service or related categories.

As in previous years, the General Assembly acted on issues affecting working conditions, salaries and benefits, guided by advice from the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), which in turn consulted the participating intergovernmental organizations. In 1984, ICSC held its nineteenth and twentieth sessions, from 5 to 23 March in Paris, and from 5 to 27 July in New York.

By resolutions 39/27 and 39/69, the Assembly adopted a number of changes in the United Nations salary system with effect from 1 January 1985 for staff in the Professional and higher categories. It requested ICSC to re-examine, and recommend to the Assembly in 1985, a desirable margin between the net remuneration (net base salary and post adjustment) of the United Nations and that of the best-paid national civil service and its effect on the operation of the post adjustment system; and to suspend implementation of the post adjustment increase for New York, while ensuring equivalence of purchasing power at all duty stations. The Assembly also ruled on consolidation of post adjustment into net base salaries, rates of staff assessment, and separation payments.

After examining the United Nations pension system, the Assembly adopted changes in the pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories and approved amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and to its pension adjustment system, with a view to improving the Fund's actuarial balance (resolution 39/246). The action followed recommendations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, ICSC and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ).

By resolution 39/245 on the composition of the Secretariat, the Assembly expressed concern over the lack of progress regarding unrepresented and underrepresented Member States; the recruitment, career development and promotion of women; and the achievement of a balanced and equitable geographical distribution of staff. It supported the Secretary-General's decision to designate, on a temporary basis, a Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat, and requested the Secretary-General to: review the system of competitive examinations in the United Nations, pursue work on the design and implementation of a career development system, strengthen various appeals machinery and examine the feasibility of setting up an office of Ombudsman. The Assembly urged the Secretary-General to give priority to reporting and follow-up of cases of arrest, detention and other matters related to the safety of international civil servants (resolution 39/244).

In 1984, the United Nations Administrative Tribunal delivered 21 judgements with respect to claims arising under labour contracts. The Assembly decided to defer consideration, until 1985, of the feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal for the entire common system (decision 39/450), and conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials (resolution 39/236, section V). It requested the Secretary-General to provide, in future, details on all exceptions to the rules on standards of accommodation for air travel (resolution 39/236, section VII) and to continue to assure maximum restraint in the travel of United Nations officials to attend Assembly sessions (section VIII).

Personnel management

In 1984, the General Assembly acted on personnel management questions based on information provided by the Secretary-General and by bodies such as ICSC, ACABQ and the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU). Written comments were submitted to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee by the representatives of staff in the United Nations system—the staff unions and associations of the United Nations Secretariat, the Co-ordinating Committee for Independent Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System (CCISUA) and the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations (FICSA). These questions concerned management improvement, staff composition, career development, personnel policies, Staff Rules, field staff, and privileges and immunities.

The 1984 ICSC report<sup>(1)</sup> to the Assembly covered various aspects of conditions of service, including salaries, post adjustment and other benefits; human resources planning; and recruitment, promotion and training.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted without vote resolution 39/69. Specific issues raised in the resolution are discussed throughout this chapter.

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission (chaps. IV-IX)

The General Assembly,

Having considered the remaining chapters of the report of the International Civil Service Commission,

Reaffirming that, in the exercise of its functions, the Commission shall be guided by the principle which aims at the development of a single unified international civil service through the application of common personnel standards and arrangements,

Noting the progress made by the Commission in the regulation and co-ordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Noting also the implementation of recommendations and decisions of the Commission by the organizations of the common system, as requested in General Assembly resolutions 36/233 of 18 December 1981 and 38/232 of 20 December 1983,

I

1. Notes the survey of best prevailing conditions of service for the General Service and related categories in New York conducted by the International Civil Service Commission under article 12 of its statute;

2. Notes also that the Commission has approved a methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of service for locally recruited staff at non-headquarters duty stations which is to be applied from 1985 onwards;

3. Requests the Commission to keep under review the implementation of the methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of service for locally recruited staff at non-headquarters duty stations and to re-examine, where necessary, the technical aspects of the methodology in the light of experience;

II

1. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1985, for all staff in the Professional and higher categories, separation payments (commutation of accrued annual leave, repatriation grant, death grant and termination indemnities) should continue to be based on the scale which has been in effect since 1 January 1981, subject to the current adjustment procedure approved by the General Assembly and to the revised scale of staff assessment set out in annex V to the report of the International Civil Service Commission;

2. Requests the Commission, in conformity with article 10 of its statute, to review the practices of the organizations of the United Nations common system as regards long service steps for staff in the Professional category, to examine ways in which uniformity on this question may be established within the common system and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

III

1. Notes the progress made by the International Civil Service Commission in the establishment of job classification standards;

2. Takes note of the recommendations made by the Commission to the organizations of the United Nations common system on the use of selection interviews, on the role of selection mechanisms and processes and on promotion policy, and requests the Secretary-General, taking into account the views expressed by Member States, to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the action taken on these recommendations in the United Nations Secretariat;

3. Notes the intention of the Commission to pursue its work on the development of training policies by elaborating an approach to the evaluation of training programmes;

4. Requests the Commission to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the use of competitive examinations for both selection and promotion;

IV

Approves the amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, with effect from 1 January 1985, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution, to replace the present schedules of net and gross salaries, post adjustment amounts, and the scales of staff assessment.

ANNEX Amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations

Regulation 3.3

General Assembly resolution 39/69

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/718/Add.1) without vote, 11 December (meeting 45); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.16), based on informal consultations; agenda item 117.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 16, 17, 19, 21, 24-30, 34, 36, 37, 44, 45; plenary 98.

In related action, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to improve the recruitment policy and procedures (resolution 39/245), and addressed staff questions of the Economic Commission for Western Africa (39/243).

Management improvement programme

Measures to achieve improved efficiency and effectiveness of the Secretariat through a management improvement programme were the focus of a December 1984 report<sup>(2)</sup> of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly. Introduced in the autumn of 1984 on the basis of June recommendations of a high-level Secretariat advisory group on administrative reform, the programme sought to minimize duplication of effort, clarify the lines of authority and responsibility, reduce administrative complexity, strengthen cost-control mechanisms, and develop the professional and managerial capability of staff members (see p. 1156). Some of the measures initiated included the establishment of a staff incentive programme, a temporary suspension of staff recruitment, and strengthening of personnel management; in addition, a number of initiatives were taken at the departmental level.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted section XVI of resolution 39/236 without vote.

General Assembly resolution 39/236, section XVI

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/839) without objection, 14 December (meeting 51); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 109.

International Civil Service Commission*ICSC statute

amend its statute by removing a provision that required a member leaving the Commission to wait three years before working in a United Nations organization that accepted the statute. The Commission informed the Secretary-General, in his capacity as ACC Chairman, that it considered it inappropriate to express its views on an issue dealing directly with its members. With regard to the procedure envisaged in 1983<sup>(4)</sup> for amending its statute, ICSC felt that prior consultations with all of the current contracting parties would help avoid a deadlock.

In September,<sup>(5)</sup> the Secretary-General presented the results of his consultations with ICSC and the member organizations of the United Nations common system; the latter did not favour the proposed amendment, asserting that the restriction in question guaranteed ICSC members' independence and impartiality.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted decision 39/417 without vote.

Statute of the International Civil Service Commission

At its 98th plenary meeting, on 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the statute of the International Civil Service Commission.

General Assembly decision 39/417

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/718/Add.1) without objection, 11 December (meeting 45); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 117.

Revised ICSC budget estimates

Reporting on the revised estimates for the ICSC programme budget for 1984-1985 relating to an ongoing three-phase project to computerize the ICSC administrative data base,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General noted that provisions had already been made for the first phase of the project, covering the computerization of data on the daily subsistence allowance. Based on the recommendations of the ACC Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (CCAQ), the Secretary-General requested an additional appropriation of $51,500 for the remaining two phases (post adjustment and rental subsidy, and classification of duty stations). In view of expected savings in the future resulting from computerization, ACABQ did not object to the requested appropriation.<sup>(7)</sup>

Staff composition

In a September 1984 report to the Assembly,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General presented statistical data on the composition of the United Nations Secretariat staff as at 30 June, including information on nationalities, sex and type of appointment (contract).

The staff with appointments for a year or more totalled 15,861, including 11,263 paid from the regular budget, and 4,598 from extrabudgetary resources; of the total, 3,090 held posts subject to geographical distribution, and 984 were in posts with special language requirements (mainly interpreters and translators).

The report stated that 15 out of the 158 Member States did not have their nationals represented in posts subject to geographical distribution: Albania, Bahrain, Djibouti, Gabon, Guinea-Bissau, Kuwait, Maldives, Mongolia, Papua New Guinea, Qatar, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Sao Tome and Principe, Solomon Islands, Vanuatu. The "geographical" posts excluded personnel such as those with appointments of less than one year, in the General Service and in posts with special language requirements.

Twenty-four Members, one fewer than in 1983, were underrepresented, in the sense that the number of their nationals was less than the lower limit of their desirable ranges of representation, calculated according to a formula based largely on budget contributions. During the year covered, 225 appointments had been made to geographical posts, of which 46 were of unrepresented or underrepresented Members, 138 were of those within range, and 40 were of overrepresented States. It was noted, however, that those appointments excluded those resulting from the competitive examinations held in 1983 in a number of mostly underrepresented Member States, whose successful candidates were to be appointed in 1984.

In response to Assembly resolutions of 1980<sup>(9)</sup> and 1982,<sup>(10)</sup> reaffirming the need for increased representation of developing countries in senior and policy-making posts, the Secretary-General provided two sets of information on the distribution of staff: at levels D-1 and above according to four groups of Member States, and at levels D-2 and above, by region and nationality.

In another September report,<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a list of Secretariat staff members as of 30 June 1984. In November, the Secretariat informed the Assembly of the evolution, between 1980 and 1984, of the desirable ranges of Member States.<sup>(12)</sup>

The question of a unified personnel structure was again raised by the Secretariat staff representatives,<sup>(13)</sup> who called on the Assembly to request a feasibility study of such a structure incorporating a more uniform system of salaries and allowances, unified career development, and a more streamlined personnel administration.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 39/245 without vote. The issues raised in the resolution are discussed throughout this chapter.

Composition of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

I

Recalling its previous resolutions on personnel policy and in particular resolutions 33/143 of 20 December 1978, 35/210 of 17 December 1980, 37/235 of 21 December 1982 and 38/231 of 20 December 1983,

Bearing in mind Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations which states that "The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible",

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the composition of the Secretariat, on personnel policies and on the status of the linguistic skills of United Nations staff,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on competitive examinations in the United Nations and the related comments of the Secretary-General,

Concerned by the lack of progress towards meeting the goals and objectives established with respect to:

(a) The situation of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States,

(b) The recruitment, career development and promotion of women,

(c) The achievement of a balanced and equitable geographical distribution of staff throughout the Secretariat,

1. Reaffirms the principles embodied in its resolutions 33/143, 35/210, 37/235 and 38/231;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to make special efforts to pursue an active recruitment policy in order to accelerate recruitment from unrepresented Member States and to increase the number of staff recruited from underrepresented Member States and from Member States below the mid-point of their desirable ranges, to the extent possible towards their mid-point, and further to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the results of these efforts to achieve a balanced and equitable geographical distribution of staff throughout the Secretariat;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures in order to ensure that the recruitment procedures are completed with all due speed within a reasonable time frame, bearing in mind the need for the co-operation of the substantive departments and offices with the Office of Personnel Services of the Secretariat, and that all candidates are duly notified of the result of their applications;

4. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to increase the representation of developing countries in senior and policy-formulating posts, while safeguarding the principle of equitable geographical distribution in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Takes note of the decision of the Secretary-General to designate, on a temporary basis, a senior official with the title of Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat of the United Nations, to review the situation of women in the Secretariat and to make proposals for its improvement, in the framework of the report of the Secretary-General to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fortieth session, requests that the Co-ordinator function within the Office of Personnel Services, requests further that the Office of Personnel Services ensure that the Co-ordinator is provided with all necessary assistance for the effective carrying out of all tasks assigned to the Co-ordinator and notes that the Office of Personnel Services will continue to be responsible for the implementation of General Assembly directives and the Secretary-General's policies in personnel matters, for the formulation and application of personnel policy and for the recruitment and administration of all staff;

6. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To implement recommendations 1, 2 and 3 of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit to the extent possible and in such a manner that implementation will not adversely affect the flexibility of personnel policy;

(b) To ensure to the extent possible that the creation of new posts in budgets include a reasonable proportion of P-1 and P-2 posts;

(c) To conduct an overall review of the system of competitive examinations in the United Nations, including the consequences of the proposed expansion of the competitive examinations to the P-3 level and, taking into account the recommendations of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the subject, to submit his views in this regard to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

(d) To pursue his work programme on the design and implementation of a career development system, taking into account staff serving on different types of contracts, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

(e) To strengthen the various appeals machinery, with a view to eliminating the backlog of cases;

(f) To report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the feasibility of establishing an office of Ombudsman;

(g) To implement recommendation 7 of the Joint Inspection Unit with a view to facilitating an in-depth consideration of the matter of appointment of staff in the General Service category by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

(h) To study ways and means of applying the population factor and to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session, taking into account the views expressed by Member States at its thirty-ninth session;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to strengthen the role and emphasize the authority of the Office of Personnel Services in recruitment and other personnel matters throughout the Secretariat and to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on measures taken to this effect;

8. Invites legislative bodies of all organizations of the United Nations system to examine as soon as possible the situation with regard to the implementation of the principle of equitable geographical distribution in their respective secretariats and to take measures, where appropriate, with the aim of securing its implementation throughout the system, within the framework of Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of the constitutional instruments of the other organizations;

II

Recalling its decision with respect to the education grant referred to in section III, paragraph 3 (a), of its resolution 38/232 of 20 December 1983,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, Approves the amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations with effect from 1 January 1984, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution, to give effect to its decision with respect to the education grant.

ANNEX

Amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations

Regulation 3.2

In the first paragraph, replace the third sentence by the following text:

"The amount of the grant per scholastic year for each child shall be 75 per cent of the first $6,000 of admissible educational expenses, up to a maximum grant of $4,500."

In the third paragraph, replace the second sentence by the following text:

"The amount of this grant per year for each disabled child shall be equal to 100 per cent of the educational expenses actually incurred, up to a maximum of $6,000."

General Assembly resolution 39/245

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/C.5/39/45) without vote, 17 December (meeting 54); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.32 & Corr.1), orally revised and orally amended by Morocco; agenda item 116 (a) and (c).

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 14, 15, 17-30, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 49, 53-55; plenary 105.

The United Kingdom and the United States expressed concern about the Committee's preoccupation with geographical distribution, at the expense of efficiency and competence, and hoped that the Secretary-General would be left free to fulfil his tasks in accordance with the Charter and the principles of good management. Canada, Nigeria and Pakistan also stressed the importance of applying Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter through a balanced recruitment of staff. Egypt and Spain added that balance should be struck between competence and geographical distribution. Bangladesh and China hoped that paragraph 6 (h) would be implemented in the context of section II of Assembly resolution 35/210 of 1980. India shared the views of China and Pakistan, and Kuwait hoped serious attention would be paid to section I, paragraph 2.

Spain and the United States regretted the deletion from paragraph 6 (e), as a result of Morocco's oral amendment, of reference to the conciliation and mediation functions of the appeals machinery.

In other action, the Assembly requested ICSC to report in 1985 on the use of competitive examinations for staff selection/promotion (resolution 39/69, section III), and adopted a recommendation of the Committee on Information to increase representation of underrepresented countries in the Department of Public Information (resolution 39/98 A, annex).

Recruitment policy

among other things: the use of formal examinations, to be further standardized on an inter-agency basis, in recruiting personnel for language-related posts; standardizing examinations for several other categories of personnel; and improving the testing of Professional staff for language proficiency. It requested the United Nations to present in 1985 an evaluation of the effectiveness of competitive examinations in selecting junior professionals, as well as in promoting the staff in the General Service to the Professional category (see p. 1156).

In a September report on personnel policies,<sup>(14)</sup> submitted in response to 1982<sup>(10)</sup> and 1983<sup>(15)</sup> Assembly resolutions, the Secretary-General described action taken to meet the 1983-1984 recruitment targets, including efforts, as a temporary measure, to earmark 40 per cent of all posts at the P3 and higher levels for the nationals of inadequately represented countries. He also discussed the scope and results of external competitive examinations held in 1982 and 1983; reported that six Member States were participating in such examinations in 1984; and described the difficulties involved, such as the decreasing availability of vacancies at the P1/P2 levels for the placement of successful candidates. The Secretary-General stressed that eliminating imbalances in geographical distribution required special additional measures, such as widening the use of competitive examinations and extending that system, on a trial basis, to posts at the P3 level.

In recommending the use of external national competitive examinations for recruitment at P1/P2 levels and extending it in a modified form for the P3 level, JIU in September<sup>(16)</sup> proposed procedures for preparing a list of successful candidates, emphasized the need to re-establish a normal pyramid of Professional grades through creation of a substantial proportion of P1/P2 posts, and suggested the possibility of extending the examination system to several United Nations programmes and agencies.

Commenting on the JIU recommendations, the Secretary-General<sup>(17)</sup> discussed some problems in their implementation as well as measures envisaged or taken to improve the recruitment procedures.

In another September report,<sup>(18)</sup> JIU concluded that the Secretariat currently had sufficient human resources; it recommended that within the next two budget periods there should be neither establishment of new posts nor transfer of staff from extrabudgetary to budgetary financing, and that the Assembly should consider redeploying existing staff by eliminating ineffective activities and examining staff requirements. In its comments on the report, ACC<sup>(19)</sup> noted with concern that the JIU attempt to consider the substance of ICSC-recommended personnel policies could undermine the Commission's authority and create a confusion of responsibilities with regard to the United Nations common system. The Secretary-General<sup>(20)</sup> refuted as baseless the assertions regarding the so-called persisting inefficiency of the Secretariat. (See also p. 1159.) In his annual report on the work of the Organization (p. 3), he said he had directed that there should be a temporary suspension of recruitment; by an administrative instruction issued in September, he announced a six-month suspension of external recruitment to posts found vacant on or after 14 September 1984, as an initial step in effecting management improvement and cost reduction throughout the Secretariat.

The staff representatives<sup>(21)</sup> were of the view that long-range planning—involving greater co-ordination among Member States, recruitment officers, examination and public information specialists—was needed in recruiting qualified candidates from unrepresented and underrepresented countries.

Status of women in the Secretariat

Pursuant to a December 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(25)</sup> the Secretary-General reported, in September 1984,<sup>(8)</sup> that the percentage of female staff against the total Secretariat staff in geographical posts had risen in the year ended 30 June 1984 from 22.3 to 22.6 per cent; a comparison of the number of female staff in geographical and language posts in 1974 and in 1984 showed the percentage increase from 16 to 22.6 for the former category and from 31.4 to 33.6 for the latter. He stated in another report<sup>(24)</sup> that, despite reminders to Member States of the Secretariat's interest in identifying women candidates, only 10 per cent of those nominated by Governments for the candidates roster had been women. In the course of the year, major women's and other professional organizations were contacted for assistance in identifying women candidates.

In December,<sup>(21)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the Fifth Committee of the details concerning the appointment at the Assistant Secretary-General level, on an experimental basis beginning in early 1985 for a period not exceeding one year, of a Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat of the United Nations. The Co-ordinator—whose post, supporting staff and travel were to be financed out of savings in 1985—was entrusted to review the situation, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary-General for Personnel Services, and prepare a comprehensive plan of action with specific strategies to improve the status of women in the Secretariat.

The General Assembly, in resolution 39/245, took note of the Secretary-General's designation of the Co-ordinator and requested the Office of Personnel Services to assist him.

The Secretariat staff representatives,<sup>(23)</sup> recalling a 1978 Assembly resolution<sup>(22)</sup> setting at 25 per cent the target for the proportion of women holding geographical posts in 1982, stated that 75 per cent of women in those posts were at the junior levels (P1 to P3), the same percentage distribution as in 1974; that only 16 per cent of Professionals recruited were women; that only 6 out of the 103 staff members recruited above the P3 level in the year ending in June 1984 were women; and that the current recruitment policy was inadequate to correct the imbalance. The staff representatives hoped that the appointment of a Co-ordinator with a sufficiently broad mandate could help bring about a significant improvement.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 May 1984, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, adopted resolution 1984/11 without vote.

Equal opportunity for women employed in the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind the long-standing commitment of the United Nations to the equal rights of women and men as expressed in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations and in the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and, in particular, Article 8 of the Charter of the United Nations on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in the work of the Organization,

Concerned by the lack of progress towards increasing the proportion of women in the Secretariat, in particular the failure to reach by 1982 the target of 25 per cent of the total number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution which was set by the General Assembly in section III of resolution 33/143 of 20 December 1978,

Keeping in mind that the 25 per cent target should not be viewed as a limit on the number of women employed, and paying particular attention to those areas of the United Nations system where compliance with General Assembly resolution 33/143 has lagged,

Reaffirming section III of General Assembly resolution 33/143, section V of Assembly resolution 35/210 of 17 December 1980 and Assembly resolutions 37/235 B of 21 December 1982 and 38/231 of 20 December 1983, as well as resolution 24 of the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, in which the Conference, inter alia, called upon the Secretary-General and the heads of the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies to end all forms of discrimination based upon sex in the recruitment, promotion and training of women and to increase the proportion of women employed, particularly at the senior levels,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the relevant recommendations of the General Assembly and the Joint Inspection Unit and, in particular, to promote the recruitment and hiring of women in Secretariat Professional posts at middle and high levels, whether as permanent, temporary or fixed-term appointees, or as experts and consultants;

2. Calls upon Member States to include the names of qualified women in lists of candidates nominated for appointment to advertised United Nations posts;

3. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to consider at its thirty-first session strategies for the achievement of equal employment opportunities for women in the United Nations system on the basis of the reports prepared by the Joint Inspection Unit on the status of women in the Professional category and above and of any other relevant reports;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to invite, through the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, organizations within the United Nations system to provide information to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-first session on measures taken and results achieved in pursuit of equal opportunity for women within their organizations.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/11

24 May 1984 Meeting 19 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1984/93) without vote, 10 May (meeting 9); draft by Commission on women (E/1984/15), orally corrected by Secretariat; agenda item 12.

Also on 24 May, and on the Second Committee's recommendation, the Council adopted resolution 1984/12 without vote.

Concerns of women within the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the terms of reference of the Commission on the Status of Women set forth in Economic and Social Council resolution 48(IV) of 29 March 1947,

Noting that, in the programme budget for the biennium 1984-1985, women are listed as only one of several specific population groups that are disadvantaged,

Reaffirming the central but not exclusive role of the Commission on the Status of Women within the United Nations in considering matters relating to the achievement of the objectives of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace,

Reaffirming that within the United Nations system the Branch for the Advancement of Women of the Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs of the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat remains the focal point for co-ordination, consultation, promotion and advice on matters relevant to women,

Recognizing that planning for, as well as monitoring of, efforts is essential to advancing the status of women within the United Nations system,

Recognizing also the efforts made by the specialized agencies to integrate women into their ongoing programmes, especially into the establishment of cross-sectoral mechanisms,

Concerned about the need to strengthen and go beyond the present integrated reporting system,

Deeply concerned that international efforts on behalf of women should keep pace with the heightened national efforts to concentrate on more effective national machineries and resources to ensure the integration of women into all stages of planning, monitoring and development activities,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to examine the ways in which the needs and concerns of women can be integrated into all planning and programme activities of the United Nations system and the implications of so doing, and to report the findings of such an examination to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-first session;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide in the programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987 and the revised medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989 for a special financial component, within existing overall budgetary resources, that will reflect the need for on-going analysis of the impact of programmes on the advancement of women;

3. Recommends the General Assembly to request the specialized agencies to ensure continued co-operation and co-ordination with the Commission on the Status of Women beyond the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, to be held in 1985, in order to achieve the goals of the Decade;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at each session on all significant developments pertaining to the advancement of women within the United Nations system that have occurred since the previous session.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1984/12

24 May 1984 Meeting 19 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1984/S3) without vote, 10 May (meeting 9); draft by Commission on women (E/1984/15); agenda item 12.

In related action, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to regularize the senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions (resolution 39/127) (see p. 1172).

Career development

In 1984, ICSC<sup>(1)</sup> examined the promotion policies of United Nations organizations and recommended that they: announce all vacancies open for internal advancement and give full regard to internal candidates; develop criteria for promotion to supervisory and managerial positions; and adopt procedures providing for supervisors' presence at meetings of promotion bodies. Other recommendations included the scope of "personal promotions" given in recognition of exceptional merit and situations, importance of seniority in addition to merit and competence, and a need to develop strict criteria for accelerated promotions. In all other cases, the recommended minimum time-in-grade requirements were: five years for promotions to D-1 and P-5, two years to P-2 and three years for all other levels.

With regard to the use of competitive examinations in promoting General Service staff to the Professional (G to P) category, ICSC, anticipating its examination of the issue in 1985, requested the United Nations to evaluate its experience with that selection method, and CCAQ to provide details on G-to-P promotion policies and practices. JIU<sup>(16)</sup> observed that the examinations had brought to light questions going beyond the movement from one category to another and dealing with the entire concept of a General Service staff policy. The Secretary-General<sup>(14)</sup> noted that 137 staff had been promoted through the four examinations since 1979, and that the fifth G-to-P examination was to be completed in September 1984.

The Secretary-General reported in October<sup>(23)</sup> on his efforts to establish a comprehensive career development system for all categories of Secretariat staff, aimed at the rational use and training of human resources for the efficient functioning of the Organization. The system envisaged the use of computerized inventories of skills, and covered, among other things, career paths, performance evaluation, assignment and promotion, mobility and rotation, counselling and training, and dissemination of information on vacancies and career opportunities. A task force had been set up in the Office of Personnel Services in 1984, and the system was expected to become operational in two years. The Secretary-General stated that should the Assembly approve his proposals, additional appropriations of $302,800 would be required for 1985. A CABO<sup>(24)</sup> agreed to that amount, pending a review of resource requirements in the 1986-1987 proposed programme budget.

The Secretariat staff representatives<sup>(13)</sup> urged the Fifth Committee to endorse the Secretary-General's proposal, calling it an important first step in modernizing and rationalizing personnel management.

Other aspects of career development, including occupational and language training (see p. 1157), were discussed in a September report of the Secretary-General on personnel policies.<sup>(14)</sup>

The staff representatives<sup>(13)</sup> expressed concern at the declining availability of junior Professional posts for promotion, a trend which could severely curtail the career prospects of General Service staff; they also felt that a career development plan should address the particular needs of the General Service and field staff. CCISUA<sup>(25)</sup> also called for a common career development system for all categories.

In December, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report on the action taken on various aspects of promotion and selection policies and practices (resolution 39/69, section III), and on the design and implementation of a career development system (resolution 39/245, section I).

Job classification

Continuing its effort to develop job classification standards for various occupational groups throughout the international civil service, ICSC considered in 1984 progress made in applying a three-tiered system of job classification standards, which it had formulated in 1980.<sup>(26)</sup> After assessing the application to project posts of the system's Tier I, or the Master Standard, ICSC requested that a supplement be presented in 1985, when it would promulgate the Tier II grade-level standard, retaining the P-1 level, for financial management specialists, and urged the organizations to develop jointly the relevant quantitative indicators for its consideration that year.

With regard to classification standards for the General Service and related categories at Vienna, Austria, and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, ICSC welcomed the initiative taken by the organizations with established offices at Vienna to start consultations developing common classification standards before the 1986 salary survey, and requested information on the Joint Committee on Job Classification established at that duty station; it heard an oral report by a similar Joint Committee at Addis Ababa on its plans to begin the job-description process.

In its comments, CCISUA<sup>(25)</sup> stressed that, as progress on job classification proceeded, the need for a system-wide approach to human resources development became more essential.

In December, the General Assembly noted the progress made by ICSC in establishing job classification standards (resolution 39/69, section III).

Training

Affirming that management should determine staff training needs in the context of human resources planning, ICSC<sup>(1)</sup> requested the organizations of the common system to report in 1985 on their methods of identifying such needs and on the feasibility of following ICSC guidelines on the topic. It stressed that the assessment of training needs should be linked to overall organizational objectives and that the cost-effectiveness of training activities should be demonstrated. It asked for a progress report by its secretariat in 1985 on developing training policies and on the prospects of expanding inter-agency co-operation in training. The Secretariat staff representatives,<sup>(13)</sup> stressing the importance of proper training and counselling, said the Training and Examinations Service lacked the resources needed to update staff skills.

In a September report on the linguistic skills of United Nations staff,<sup>(27)</sup> submitted in response to a December 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(28)</sup> the Secretary-General noted that the financial and other incentives as currently offered to encourage the broader use of the official languages had not fully met their objectives; an analysis of alternative incentives revealed disadvantages, thus providing no justification for changing the current system.

Staff representation

In his September report on personnel questions,<sup>(14)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that the Staff-Management Co-ordination Committee (SMCC) had drafted administrative instructions on the establishment of panels on discrimination and other grievances and on outside activities, and that, on its recommendation, privileged confidential files at Headquarters and elsewhere had been abolished. SMCC also participated in the discussions on various questions of human resources planning and development.

In the view of the staff representatives,<sup>(13)</sup> however, a series of problems in staff-management relations pointed to the need for stronger Assembly action to ensure full implementation of the Staff Rules and Regulations and to prevent possible abuses of administrative authority resulting from the decentralization of functions.

Field staff

In March 1984, ICSC<sup>(1)</sup> considered a report of its tripartite Working Group on the Classification of Duty Stations according to Conditions of Life and Work, composed of representatives of the Commission, CCAQ and staff. The Commission made recommendations on matters including travel and shipping entitlements, and the 18-month home leave provision, and decided to establish two levels of financial incentives to become effective, respectively, on 1 July 1984 and 1 January 1985, and to review them every three years. With regard to duty stations with prevailing hazardous conditions, ICSC authorized its Chairman to take exceptional measures such as temporary reclassification of their status and provision of additional entitlements. In July, ICSC commenced a study of salary and allowances and other conditions of work of the Field Service category.

In their written comments, the Secretariat staff representatives<sup>(13)</sup> stated that it had become increasingly difficult to attract and maintain qualified field staff because of limited promotion and career development opportunities, both during field assignment and upon returning to Headquarters. They felt that greater attention should be paid to health facilities, and suggested the establishment of a Secretariat-wide revolving fund to facilitate the provision of housing in difficult duty stations and of an educational assistance programme for the children of locally recruited staff. CCISUA<sup>(25)</sup> urged ICSC to undertake a more detailed and long-range study, with emphasis on staff serving far from designated duty stations and on the provision of housing.

In December, the General Assembly requested ICSC to keep under review its methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of service for locally recruited staff at non-headquarters duty stations (resolution 39/69, section I).

Staff rules of the United Nations

In August 1984, the Secretary-General submitted an annual report containing the full text of provisional staff rules, and amendments<sup>(29)</sup> made to them since the previous report in 1983.<sup>(30)</sup> The changes concerned, among other things, salaries and related allowances (see p. 1162), appointment and promotion, special and home leave, travel and removal expenses, and the composition of the Joint Disciplinary Committee.

In a September addendum to his report,<sup>(31)</sup> the Secretary-General reviewed, in response to a December 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(32)</sup> amendments to two rules concerning staff/management relations, as proposed in 1983 by the USSR.<sup>(30)</sup> The Secretary-General said he intended to maintain the text of staff rule 108.1, subparagraph (d), which granted staff representatives the right to participate in an advisory capacity in resolving issues of personnel policies; the USSR had proposed deleting from it the phrase "and other personnel policies", which it felt could be interpreted as giving staff representatives powers that ran counter to the Secretary-General's role as chief administrative officer. Regarding the proposal to delete subparagraph 108.2 (c), the Secretary-General said he intended to amend the text by deleting the phrase "if made with the concurrence of the staff representatives," so as to avoid the misleading impression that he required their concurrence in issuing instructions or directives.

In order to reflect in the Staff Regulations the provisions of a December 1983 Assembly resolution<sup>(28)</sup> concerning the education grant for eligible staff members and the reimbursement rate for disabled children, the Secretary-General<sup>(33)</sup> proposed to make corresponding amendments to regulation 3.2 and consequential amendments to the Staff Rules (see p. 1162).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted decision 39/451 without vote.

Amendments to the Staff Rules

At its 105th plenary meeting, on 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, took note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the amendments to the Staff Rules.

General Assembly decision 39/451

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/845) without vote, 17 December (meeting 55); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 116 (c).
Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 14, 15, 17-30, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 49, 53-55; plenary 105.

Privileges and immunities of the international civil service

In October 1984, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report,<sup>(34)</sup> on behalf of ACC, on measures to safeguard staff security and encourage respect for the privileges and immunities of United Nations officials. He stated that 84 cases of arrest and detention of officials in 28 countries or territories had been reported during the year ended 31 August 1984. In all but 10 of those new cases, either the organizations concerned were able to exercise their right of functional protection or the officials were released.

As regards long-standing cases, the Secretary-General intended to give priority in 1985 to nine cases of detention in four countries or areas. He added that a number of SMCC recommendations had been implemented and that an interdepartmental advisory committee had been established to advise him on cases which could not be resolved at the local level; a United Nations Security Co-ordinator had been designated as a focal point for the reporting of arrest and detention cases. The particulars, provided by the organizations concerned regarding the 10 new cases, were attached to the report.

In presenting information available as at 30 September on the arrests, imprisonments, disappearances and deaths of staff members, the United Nations staff representatives<sup>(13)</sup> asserted that in all instances the Governments in question had failed to inform the United Nations of the charges or to facilitate the determination of the applicability of the provisions of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations.<sup>(35)</sup> The staff representatives suggested that special representatives be sent to duty stations where staff members were imprisoned, that information be updated quarterly rather than annually, and that the possibility of raising claims in the International Court of Justice might be considered. In their view, United Nations funds should not be used in countries that continued to violate the Charter. FICSA<sup>(36)</sup> suggested that the Secretary-General, as ACC Chairman, should report on how the different organizations of the common system complied with the Assembly resolutions on the subject. It requested the Assembly to urge them to provide residential protection of the staff in high-crime field duty stations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 39/244 without vote.

Respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 35/212 of 17 December 1980, 36/232 of 18 December 1981, 37/236 of 21 December 1982 and 38/230 of 20 December 1983,

Recalling that, under Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, officials of the Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Member States such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization, which is indispensable for the proper discharge of their duties,

Recalling the obligation of the staff in the conduct of their duty to observe fully the laws and regulations of Member States,

1. Takes note with concern of the report submitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General on behalf of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, which shows a continuing neglect of the observance of the principles related to respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations;

2. Reaffirms the above-mentioned resolutions;

3. Welcomes the measures already taken by the Secretary-General in furtherance of the safety and security of international civil servants, as outlined in paragraph 7 of his report;

4. Calls upon the Secretary-General, as chief administrative officer of the Organization, to continue personally to act as the focal point in promoting and ensuring the observance of the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations by using all such means as are available to him;

5. Urges the Secretary-General to give priority, through the United Nations Security Co-ordinator and the other special representatives, to the reporting and prompt follow-up of cases of arrest, detention and other possible matters relating to the security of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations;

6. Calls upon the staff of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies and related organizations to comply with the obligations arising from the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, in particular regulation 1.8, and from the equivalent provisions governing the staff of the other agencies;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to review and appraise the measures already taken to enhance the safety and protection of international civil servants and to modify them where necessary;

8. Invites the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, to suggest in his next annual report to the General Assembly further steps designed to alleviate the present situation.

General Assembly resolution 39/244

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/845) without vote, 15 December (meeting 53); 17-nation draft (A/C.5/39/L.24), orally revised; agenda item 116 (b).

Sponsors: Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Ireland, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Sierra Leone, Spain, Sweden, Tunisia.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 14, 15, 17-30, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 49, 53; plenary 105.

In resolution 39/99 I, the Assembly called on Israel to release the employees of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

Staff costs

Salaries and allowances

Salaries

As in previous years, ICSC reported in 1984 on the margin between the remuneration of the United States federal civil service and that of the Professional staff of the United Nations system.<sup>(1)</sup> It based its calculations for the period from 1 October 1983 on two methodologies: the traditional one using net base salaries only, and a new one, agreed in 1983,<sup>(2)</sup> comparing all benefits except expatriate benefits. The average net remuneration of international staff was 17 per cent above that of the United States civil service, the comparator service, up from a 16.5 per cent difference for the previous 12 months. This calculation of the pay margin between the United Nations staff and that of a comparator representing the best-paying national service took into account net salaries (which correspond to after-tax salaries in national services) and post adjustment payable to United Nations staff based in New York, adjusted for the cost-of-living differential between New York and Washington, D.C.

The Commission noted factors that had influenced the margin figure. One was a 4 per cent increase in United States federal civil service gross salaries effective 1 January 1984, or three months later than the traditional date of October each year; another was the ICSC decision to correct the post adjustment index for New York. Those factors had also affected the margin based on total compensation, indicating United Nations salaries were 10.6 per cent above those of the United States civil service. In accordance with a 1983 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(3)</sup> ICSC decided that in future the margin would be calculated on the basis of total non-expatriate benefits applicable to both sides. It noted, however, that being a continuously evolving process, the new methodology would be further reviewed and refined. With regard to the level of remuneration, the Commission decided that for the time being there was no justification for any increase in the levels for the Professional and higher categories.

On the question of salary scales, ICSC recommended to the Assembly that an additional step be introduced for long service at levels P1 to P5, and recommended to executive heads that the same action be taken at those duty stations where the salary scales of General Service and other locally-recruited categories did not contain longevity steps. Such steps, it suggested, should be pensionable and should take effect as of 1 January 1985.

ICSC conclusions drew comments from a number of United Nations bodies and staff organizations. After assessing remuneration of Professional and higher categories, JIU recommended<sup>(4)</sup> that the Assembly should not increase salaries at its 1984 session, but should request ICSC to reconsider the question, report on the results in 1986 and develop further methodology for the compensation comparison between the United Nations and United States civil services. JIU also recommended that the Assembly request all organs dealing with the determination of salaries and post adjustment (see below) to observe strictly the Noblemaire Principle (whereby salaries in the Professional and higher categories were based on the best-paid national civil service) and relevant Assembly decisions. In its comments on the JIU conclusions, ACC proposed<sup>(5)</sup> that the part of the report dealing with remuneration be referred to ICSC, before its consideration by the Assembly, particularly because it contained errors of substance and detail. Earlier, at its extraordinary July session,<sup>(6)</sup> ACC had reiterated its 1982 recommendation<sup>(7)</sup> for an increase in the salaries of staff in the Professional and higher categories.

Concern over the ICSC conclusions regarding the basis and level of remuneration was expressed by FICSA,<sup>(8)</sup> which stated that it would ask the Commission to take up the matter again in 1985 with a view to acting on the Federation's long-standing request for a 10 per cent adjustment in Professional base salaries. FICSA also felt that ICSC's recommendation to grant one additional long-service step was not adequate and therefore it intended to request an early review of the issue. CCISUA,<sup>(9)</sup> on the other hand, informed the Fifth Committee that it had no recommendation in respect of the proper level of Professional remuneration but that it hoped to contribute some in 1985.

The Assembly, by section IV of resolution 39/69, approved amendments to the Staff Regulations, effective 1 January 1985, affecting salaries, post adjustment amounts and the scales of staff assessment.

Post adjustment

Matters relating to post adjustment were high on the agenda of ICSC's March and July sessions,<sup>(1)</sup> the latter one acting on the findings of the Commission's Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions (ACPAQ), which held its ninth session at Geneva from 7 to 23 May. ICSC agreed on the need to consolidate 20 points of post adjustment into net base salary with effect from 1 January 1985 and recommended the resulting gross salary scales and amounts of post adjustment per index point to the General Assembly. It also recommended that modified rates of staff assessment for staff in the Professional and higher categories take effect from 1 January 1985. In assessing ways of eliminating all major consolidation-related costs, ICSC suggested that the Assembly once again request Member States that had not done so to exempt their nationals from income taxation so that the Taxation Equalization Fund could be abolished.

After discussing ACPAQ's recommendations pertaining to the cost-of-living surveys in major duty stations, ICSC agreed that the anomalies in the post adjustment index for New York must be corrected through a 9.6 per cent increase, bringing it to the level of 170.86. In other actions, the Commission decided that the adjusted index for New York should be used for determining post adjustment classifications of all duty stations effective 1 August 1984; approved cost-of-living relativities between New York and the other six headquarters duty stations and Washington, D.C.; noted the recommended procedure for cost-of-living surveys at field duty stations; and agreed that adjustments of four and one multiplier points to the post adjustment classifications of Geneva and Vienna, respectively, should cease to be made with effect from 1 August 1984. The overall financial implications of ICSC's decisions for the United Nations common system amounted to $2,833,800 for 1984; $6,454,600 for 1985; and $2,048,000 for 1986. The Commission also approved a number of special measures for cases of abrupt and substantial devaluation and high inflation.

In a July 1984 decision on personnel matters,<sup>(6)</sup> ACC welcomed ACPAQ's recommendation to correct the understated post adjustment index in New York and urged its immediate and full application. ACPAQ's conclusions were also endorsed by CCISUA, which urged that the relevant ICSC decision be respected.<sup>(9)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted on 30 November resolution 39/27 without vote.

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission (chap. III)

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter III of the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 1984,

Having received the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on staff costs and some aspects of utilization of human and financial resources in the United Nations Secretariat and the comments thereon of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination,

Noting the Commission's consideration of the basis and level of remuneration of the Professional and higher categories as requested in section II of General Assembly resolution 37/126 of 17 December 1982,

Reaffirming that the Noblemaire Principle is the basis for the determination of the level of remuneration for staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York, the base city for the post adjustment system, and in other duty stations,

Recalling that, in previous resolutions, the General Assembly took note of the levels of the margin, ranging from 9.3 per cent to 18.2 per cent, reported by the Commission between the net remuneration of the United Nations in New York and that of the comparator service, at present the United States federal civil service,

Recalling further its resolution 31/141 B of 17 December 1976, in which it decided that at any time that the Commission considered corrective action was necessary it should either recommend such action to the General Assembly or, if urgent conservatory action was necessary between sessions of the Assembly to prevent an undue widening of the margin of United Nations remuneration over that of the comparator civil service, take appropriate measures itself within the operation of the post adjustment system,

Noting with concern that the margin between the net remuneration of the United Nations and that of the comparator civil service would widen to the order of 24 per cent following the Commission's decision to increase the post adjustment index at the base city, New York, by 9.6 per cent, which decision led to an increase of one class of post adjustment in New York in August 1984 and would entail a further class in December 1984,

1. Considers that a margin of 24 per cent is too high in relation to past levels of the margin and, consequently, requests the International Civil Service Commission to:

(a) Re-examine, in the light of the views expressed in the Fifth Committee at the current session, what would constitute a desirable margin between the net remuneration of the United Nations in New York and that of the comparator civil service and its effect on the operation of the post adjustment system;

(b) Submit its recommendations to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on:

(i) A specific range for the net remuneration margin, together with a concise summary of the methodology applied in calculating that margin, taking into account that, on average, the margin in the past has been within a reasonable range of 15 per cent;

(ii) The technical measures which would be applied by the Commission to ensure that the post adjustment system operates within the framework of the defined margin range;

(c) Take the necessary measures to suspend implementation of the increase in post adjustment for New York envisaged for December 1984, pending receipt by the General Assembly at its fortieth session, and action thereon, of the Commission's recommendations regarding the margin and other measures referred to in subparagraphs (a) and (b) above; and take whatever related measures are required in respect of the post adjustment levels at other duty stations to ensure equivalence of purchasing power as soon as possible at all duty stations in relation to the level of net remuneration in New York;

2. Decides that:

(a) The International Civil Service Commission should continue to report the margins in respect of both total compensation comparisons and net remuneration comparisons of the United Nations system and the comparator civil service;

(b) In determining the total compensation margin, the Commission should consider all relevant factors in the two services including, inter alia, the differences in annual leave, taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee;

3. Decides to refer to the International Civil Service Commission the report of the Joint Inspection Unit, the related comments of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, and the views of Member States and requests the Commission to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

4. Decides that 20 points of post adjustment shall be consolidated into the base salaries of the Professional and higher categories with effect from 1 January 1985, in conformity with the recommendation of the Commission in paragraph 137 of its report, thereby establishing the salary scales (gross and net), post adjustment schedules and scales of staff assessment set forth in annexes III, IV and V to the report of the Commission and the corrigendum thereto, and that the base of the post adjustment system shall be changed from New York at 100 as at October 1977 to New York at 100 as at December 1979;

5. Renews its earlier request, made in resolution 239 C (III) of 18 November 1948, to Member States that have not done so to take necessary action to exempt their nationals employed by the United Nations from national income taxation with respect to their salaries and emoluments paid to them by the United Nations, which could result in the abolition of the Tax Equalization Fund.

30 November 1984 Meeting 81 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/718) without vote, 29 November (meeting 37); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.10), following informal consultations; agenda item 117.

Financial implications: ACABQ, A/39/7Add.4; S-G, A/C.5/39/26.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 16, 17, 19, 21, 24-30, 34, 36, 37; plenary 81.

A draft resolution<sup>(10)</sup> sponsored by the USSR and the United States was not pressed to a vote. It would have had the Assembly revoke ICSC's decision to increase the New York post adjustment index and instruct the Commission to eliminate unjustified over-payments at duty stations with a higher level of post adjustment than the results of the latest cost-of-living survey could justify.

Emoluments of top-echelon officials

The question of emoluments of top-echelon officials, last reviewed by the General Assembly in 1980,<sup>(11)</sup> was considered in 1984 by ACABQ,<sup>(12)</sup> which submitted its recommendations to the Assembly. As revised, the Secretary-General's net salary stood at $85,000 with dependants and at $74,621 without them ($163,300 gross). ACABQ also recommended that 20 points of post adjustment be consolidated into the base salaries of the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation, the resulting net salary increasing to $78,430 and $69,334, with and without dependants ($159,115 gross). With regard to pensionable remuneration of those two officials, ACABQ recommended that, should the Assembly approve the scale for the Professional and higher categories proposed by ICSC (see p. 1163), pensionable remuneration for them be established at $143,400 as of 1 January 1985. It believed that the recommendations need not give rise to additional appropriations for 1984-1985.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted, on 18 December 1984, section XVII of resolution 39/236, without vote.

Emoluments of the Secretary-General, the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme
(The General Assembly . . .)

Having considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the emoluments of the Secretary-General, the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme,

1. Concurs with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions concerning the emoluments of the Secretary-General, contained in paragraph 10 of its report;

2. Also concurs with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee concerning the emoluments, including the level of pensionable remuneration, of the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation and the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme, contained in paragraphs 11 and 13 of its report;

3. Approves the amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, with effect from 1 January 1985, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution.

ANNEX*Amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United NationsAnnex 1Salary scales and related provisions

In paragraph 1, the salary figure for the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme and the Director-General for Development and International Economic Co-operation shall read $US 159,115.

General Assembly resolution 39/236, section XVII

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/839) without objection, 15 December (meeting 52); draft by ACABQ (A/39/7/Add.16); agenda item 109.

AllowancesEducation grant*

Following a December 1983 General Assembly decision<sup>(3)</sup> to increase the maximum of the education grant payable to international civil service staff serving outside their home country, the Secretary-General proposed in March 1984<sup>(13)</sup> corresponding amendments to the Staff Regulations. He noted that the relevant provisions of the 1983 Assembly resolution had been implemented through administrative instructions, and consequential amendments would be made to the Staff Rules.

In the view of the staff representatives,<sup>(14)</sup> the current eligibility requirements for education benefits gave rise to the impression of unequal treatment. Factors such as the availability of adequate public educational facilities and the economic need of parents should be taken into account, and the category or nationality of the staff member concerned should not preclude assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

As proposed by the Secretary-General, the General Assembly, in section II of resolution 39/245, approved the amendments to the Staff Regulations to give effect, from 1 January 1984, to its 1983 decision on the education grant.<sup>(3)</sup>

Other allowances

On receiving comments from United Nations organizations and staff representatives with regard to the establishment, in 1983, of a methodology for non-resident's allowance and the granting, on a trial basis, of a rental subsidy to staff with non-resident status,<sup>(15)</sup> ICSC decided to continue the trial scheme and re-examine in 1985 the question of rental subsidy for internationally recruited staff in the General Service category. CCISUA,<sup>(9)</sup> in its comments on the problem of non-resident General Service staff, expressed the hope that ICSC would address the matter and find an equitable formula for applying the rental subsidy scheme to this group of staff. With regard to dependency allowances for General Service staff, CCISUA stressed that equalization of the children's allowance for all staff categories and the issue of educational assistance for staff not eligible for the education grant should receive priority attention.

Acting on the question of separation payments, the General Assembly decided in resolution 39/69 that commutation of accrued annual leave, repatriation grant, death grant and termination indemnities should continue to be based on the scale in effect since 1981.<sup>(16)</sup>

Pensions

During 1984, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, providing retirement, death, disability and related benefits for staff upon cessation of their services with the United Nations, increased from $3,115,548,779 to $3,500,632,266, with the number of its participants reaching 53,204. Investment income during the year amounted to $334,556,580 ($330,706,767 net). From that amount, the Fund paid $314,546,040 in benefits, including 7,571 retirement benefits amounting to $166,232,793. In addition, it paid 7,514 early and deferred retirement benefits, 2,578 widows' and widowers' benefits, 4,199 children's benefits, 477 disability benefits and 39 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, it also paid 3,596 lump-sum withdrawal and other settlements.

In considering the United Nations pension system, the General Assembly focused in 1984 on two major aspects: the Fund's actuarial situation and the pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories. The Assembly acted on the basis of information and recommendations submitted by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, ICSC and ACABQ.

The 21-member Pension Board, charged with administering the Fund, held its thirty-second (special) session in March in Paris and the thirty-third session in August at Vienna. In its annual report to the Assembly,<sup>(17)</sup> the Board outlined measures to improve the Fund's actuarial balance which, as at 1 January, showed a shortfall equal to 4.04 per cent of pensionable remuneration, based on the valuation as of 31 December 1982. The Board proposed an amendment to the Fund's Regulations concerning an increase in the level of pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories, as of 1 October 1984, recommended by ICSC, and examined questions related to the management of its investments. It also studied the effect of marriage and its dissolution on benefits from the Fund.

Recommendations on the appropriate level of pensionable remuneration were presented by ICSC,<sup>(1)</sup> after it had examined various aspects of the problem in response to a December 1983 Assembly request.<sup>(18)</sup> Its conclusions were drawn from a comparison of United Nations and United States pensions within the framework of total compensation comparisons. In its calculations, the Commission took into account a seven-year difference between the average length of service in the United States federal civil service (27 years) and that applicable to the United Nations (20 years), and, on the other hand, a higher level for United Nations net remuneration than United States net salaries, to allow, inter alia, for the expatriate nature of United Nations service. Account was also taken of the mandatory age of separation in the United States federal civil service which was quantified as an additional benefit for 2.4 years of service.

ICSC concluded that the appropriate step differential for pensionable remuneration amounts would be 4.0, 3.5, 3.5, 3.0, 3.0, 3.0 and 3.0 per cent of step I for grades P1 through D-2, respectively. It recommended to the Assembly a scale of pensionable remuneration to be implemented for staff in grades P1 through Under-Secretary-General with effect from 1 January 1985 and proposed a scheme for applying the new scale to staff with various pensionable remuneration levels, times of appointment and other variables. The Commission drew the Assembly's attention to the fact that under the proposed method for determining pensionable remuneration amounts, the scale of staff assessment would not have any direct bearing on the level of those amounts. It also suggested that the current dual mechanism—the weighted average of post adjustments and the consumer price index—for adjusting pensionable remuneration amounts between comprehensive reviews should continue to be used with some modifications, and recommended increasing, as of 1 October 1984, the levels of pensionable remuneration for those in the Professional and higher categories.

ICSC's conclusions were reiterated in an October report of ACABQ,<sup>(19)</sup> which concurred with a number of the Pension Board's recommendations concerning: measures to improve the actuarial balance of the Fund, including increasing the interest rate used to calculate the amount of lump-sum commutation; a new unisex mortality table reflecting longer life expectancies; re-examination of early retirement provisions; imposition of a ceiling on the highest level of pensions; and a reduction of cost-of-living adjustments. ACABQ agreed with the Board that the existing survivor benefits should be not be disturbed and that the lump sum should not be paid in net equivalent terms, suggestions that had been made by the Assembly in December 1983.<sup>(18)</sup>

The United Nations pension system, particularly the question of pensionable remuneration, was the subject of two ACC actions. At its July (extraordinary) session,<sup>(6)</sup> the Committee urged the Assembly to take steps aimed at restoring the Fund's actuarial balance through an increase in the rate of combined organization/staff contributions to 24 per cent. To preserve the acquired rights of the staff, no retroactive measures reducing benefits should be taken. Pensionable remuneration had to be seen together with the benefits to be provided, and both had to be approached in terms of total compensation, which was the only sound basis for comparison with the United States federal civil service. That approach required more thorough studies, as well as harmonization in determining the level of pensionable remuneration by ICSC and the nature and level of benefits by the Fund. In a statement to the Assembly, approved at its October session,<sup>(20)</sup> ACC said the package of measures proposed by the Pension Board, if accepted in their entirety, would virtually eliminate the deficit of the Fund's actuarial balance. With regard to the scale of pensionable remuneration recommended by ICSC, ACC felt that it preserved the acquired rights and conditions of service, while taking into account the concerns of Member States. ACC also believed that the adjustment in pensionable remuneration due on 1 October 1984 should be implemented throughout the system.

FICSA, in its comments,<sup>(8)</sup> recommended that the Assembly decide to apply the 5.4 per cent adjustment to Professional pensionable remuneration due on 1 October 1984 and that ICSC pursue its studies concerning a new approach for determining that remuneration. It stressed the need to protect fully the acquired rights of serving staff and to study in depth the actuarial impact of the proposed remuneration scale. Support for the new methodology of calculating pensionable remuneration levels was also expressed by CCISUA.<sup>(9)</sup> In connection with a December 1983 Assembly decision to defer any increase in pensionable remuneration due in 1984,<sup>(18)</sup> CCISUA expressed concern over a procedure which appeared to jeopardize acquired rights. It felt that in future any such changes should be referred to the appropriate bodies for consultation, in this case the Pension Board.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted, on 18 December, resolution 39/246 without vote.

Report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/233 of 20 December 1983, Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 1984 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, chapter II of the report of the International Civil Service Commission and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Actuarial situation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling that in resolution 38/233 it indicated that a co-operative effort by member organizations, participants and beneficiaries is required if the actuarial imbalance is to be reduced or eliminated, thereby securing an adequate level of benefits under the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund,

Noting the proposals made by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in response to the request addressed to it in section II of General Assembly resolution 38/233,

1. Approves the following measures which will result in an improvement of the actuarial balance of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund:

(a) For participants taking early retirement between the ages of 55 and 60 after 25 years or more but less than 30 years of contributory service, the reduction factor shall be increased from 2 per cent for every year below age 60 to 3 per cent for service performed as from 1 January 1985;

(b) The periodicity of adjustment of benefits in payment for changes in the cost of living shall be reduced from twice a year to once a year, subject to the modalities set out in annex X to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board;

(c) On the first occasion after 1 January 1985 when a benefit in payment is to be adjusted for a change in the cost of living, the adjustment shall be reduced by 1.5 percentage points, except as specified in paragraph 4 of the present section;

(d) In the case of participants to whom the two-track adjustment system is applicable, the adjusted amount of the United States dollar benefit, when converted into local currency, shall be limited to 120 per cent of the adjusted local currency benefit, subject to the transitional measures described in annex X to the report of the Pension Board;

(e) The periodic benefits of participants who separate from service on or after 31 December 1984 shall be paid at the end of the month to which they relate;

(f) Organizations' monthly contributions to the Fund should be remitted during the first two working days of the month following the month to which they relate;

(g) The interest rate used for the purpose of lump-sum commutation shall be raised from 4.5 to 6.5 per cent as stated in paragraph 20 of the report of the Pension Board;

2. Defers action on the question of changing the statutory age of separation;

3. Amends, with effect from 1 January 1985 and without retroactive effect, article 29 (b) (ii) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Approves, with effect from 1 January 1985 and without retroactive effect, the changes in the system of adjusting benefits in payment, set out in annex X to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension

Board, except that the one-time reduction of the cost-of-living adjustment by 1.5 percentage points shall not apply to the minimum benefits under the Regulations of the Fund and the benefits under sections E and F of the pension adjustment system;

5. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, with the assistance of the Committee of Actuaries, to review the method of calculating the lump-sum commutation of benefits using a uniform discount rate and to make recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

6. Requests the Pension Board to keep under review the question of the determination of the lump sum in net equivalent terms;

7. Further requests the Pension Board to re-examine the question of the imposition of a ceiling on the highest levels of pensions and to make recommendations thereon, and also on the imposition of a ceiling on the amount that may be paid to a participant by way of lump-sum commutation of part of his periodic benefit, to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

8. Requests the Pension Board to re-examine the operation of the two-track pension adjustment system in countries where the adjusted United States dollar amount, when converted into local currency, yields a larger benefit in local currency units than the adjusted local currency amount and to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on further limiting the resultant excess benefits;

9. Requests the Pension Board, in the light of the results of the actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1984, to consider additional measures, with a view to avoiding, if possible, further increases in the rate of contribution of member organizations and participants to the Fund, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

10. Requests the Pension Board to consider measures for the fair and equitable treatment of all participants, whatever their dates of entry into contributory service or of separation, and to submit such consequential amendments to the Regulations of the Fund and to the pension adjustment system as may be required;

II

Pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories

Recalling section III of its resolution 38/233,

Having considered chapter II, section B, of the report of the International Civil Service Commission and section III.B of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board,

1. Decides that the upward adjustment by 5.4 per cent of the scale of pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories, which became due as of 1 October 1984 on the basis of article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund but the implementation of which had been deferred in accordance with section III, paragraph 4, of resolution 38/233, shall be implemented and shall be applicable during the three-month period from 1 October to 31 December 1984;

2. Approves, for implementation with effect from 1 January 1985 for all staff members in the Professional and higher categories in the member organizations of the Fund, the scale of pensionable remuneration which was recommended by the International Civil Service Commission and which is reproduced in the appendix to the annex to the present resolution, and amends the first sentence of article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the Fund, as set forth in the said annex;

3. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to consider, taking into account, inter alia, the legal aspects of the question, any compensatory or interim measures regarding participants whose pensionable remuneration has been higher than it will be as of 1 January 1985, and to make appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly at its fortieth session, it being understood that such recommendations will also address the question of the equality of treatment of participants retiring on different dates, and that such measures as will be approved by the Assembly would, if necessary, be applicable with effect from 1 January 1985;

4. Notes from paragraph 53 of the report of the International Civil Service Commission that no interim adjustment of the scale is contemplated in 1985;

5. Requests the International Civil Service Commission, in co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, to re-examine the procedure for adjustment of pensionable remuneration in between comprehensive reviews, taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session, and in the mean time suspends the operation of the adjustment procedure in article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and defers until its fortieth session further consideration of the recommendation of the Pension Board regarding amendment of the said article;

6. Requests the International Civil Service Commission, in co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, to review the methodology for the determination of pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories and for monitoring the level of pensionable remuneration, and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session, so that the Assembly could consider whether it would be appropriate to request the Commission to propose a new scale of pensionable remuneration to its forty-first session;

7. Invites all member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund to take the necessary measures to implement the provisions of paragraphs 1, 2 and 5 above;

III

Non-resident's allowance

Recalling section IV, paragraph 2, of its resolution 38/232 of 20 December 1983,

Amends, with effect from 1 January 1985 and without retroactive effect, article 54 (a), of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution;

IV

Exclusion from participation under Article 21 (a) of the Regulations

of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund
Recalling section VI of its resolution 37/131 of 17 December 1982,

Notes that junior professional officers and associate experts who are participants in a national pension scheme may be excluded under the terms of their appointment from participation in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund in accordance with the provisions of article 21 (a) of the Regulations of the Fund;

V

Special index for pensioners

Decides that the procedures applicable to existing pensioners as set out in section C, paragraph (d), of annex X to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh session shall be amended so that no retroactive adjustment will be made for the period between the date entitlement began and 31 December 1984, but the reduced local currency amount will become effective from 1 January 1985;

VI

Emergency Fund

Authorizes the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to supplement the voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund, for a further period of one year, by an amount not exceeding $100,000;

VII

Administrative expenses

Approves expenses, chargeable directly to the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, totalling $7,440,800 (net) for 1985 and additional expenses of $6,500 (net) for 1984 for the administration of the Fund;

VIII

Biennial budget

1. Decides that the estimates of administrative expenses of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund shall be prepared on a biennial basis beginning with the biennium 1986-1987;

2. Amends article 15 (b) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, without retroactive effect, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution;

IX

Composition of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, to review its composition and to submit recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

ANNEX

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Article 15

Administrative expenses

(a) Expenses incurred by the Board in the administration of these Regulations shall be met by the Fund.

(b) Biennial estimates of the expenses to be incurred under (a) above shall be submitted to the General Assembly for approval during the year immediately preceding the biennium to which the said estimates relate. Supplementary estimates may similarly be submitted in the first and/or the second year of the biennium to which the budget relates.

(c) Expenses incurred in the administration of these Regulations by a member organization shall be met by that organization.

Article 29

Early retirement benefit

(a) An early retirement benefit shall be payable to a participant whose age on separation is at least 55 but less than 60 and whose contributory service was five years or longer.

(b) The benefit shall be payable at the standard annual rate for a retirement benefit, reduced for each year of part thereof by which the age of the participant on separation was less than 60, at the rate of:

- (i) if the contributory service of the participant was 30 years or longer, 1 per cent a year, or
- (ii) if the contributory service of the participant was 25 years or longer but less than 30 years, 2 per cent a year in respect of the period of contributory service performed before 1 January 1985, and 3 per cent a year in respect of the period of such service performed as from 1 January 1985, or
- (iii) if the contributory service of the participant was less than 25 years, 6 per cent a year.

(c) The benefit may be commuted by the participant into a lump sum to the extent specified in article 28 (f) for a retirement benefit.

Article 54

Pensionable remuneration

(a) In the case of participants in the General Service and other locally-recruited categories, pensionable remuneration shall be the equivalent in dollars of the sum of:

- (i) The participant's gross salary,
- (ii) Any language allowance payable to him, and
- (iii) In the case of a participant who became entitled to a pensionable non-resident's allowance prior to 1 September 1983, and for as long as he continues to be entitled thereto, the amount of such allowance.

(b) In the case of participants in the Professional and higher categories, the pensionable remuneration effective 1 January 1985 shall be that set out in the appendix hereto.*

*This sentence replaces the first sentence of the existing article 54 (b). The operation of the remaining provisions of that article is suspended pursuant to paragraph 5 of section II of the present resolution.

18 December 1984 Meeting 105 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/C.5/39/846) without vote, 14 December (meeting 51); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.20), following informal consultations; agenda item 118.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 19, 23, 25, 27-30, 32, 51; plenary 105.

Explaining its position, Belgium pointed out, in relation to paragraphs 5 and 6 of section II, that adjustments of benefits were not justified at the base of the system, i.e. New York, since they ought to be made in the light of comparison with the national civil service. The USSR was not entirely satisfied with the text, saying that the proposed measures would not fully eliminate the Fund's actuarial imbalance and that the pensions of Secretariat staff would continue to exceed a reasonable level under the Noblemaire Principle. It also hoped that the Pension Board would demonstrate political astuteness in implementing the text's requests relating to measures aimed at avoiding increases in the rate of contribution to the Fund and regarding the composition of the Board.

Pension Fund investments

The market value of Pension Fund investments stood at $3,727,447,000 as at 31 December 1984, compared to $3,519,891,000 a year earlier. After deduction of investment management costs of $3,849,813, net investment income during 1984 amounted to $330,706,767.

Investment return for the year ending 31 March 1984 was 13.01 per cent, according to a report of the Secretary-General on the Fund's investments, submitted to the Fifth Committee in September.<sup>(21)</sup> Over the preceding 34 years, the total book value of the portfolio had risen from $13 million to $3,167 million, a compound increase of 17.5 per cent a year. The report attributed that increase to contributions by participants and member organizations, reinvested investment income and net realized capital gains, less benefit payments and investment expenses. For the year up to 31 March, equities (stocks) provided the best total investment return at 15.7 per cent, followed by real estate at 13.3 per cent, short-term investments at 13.1 per cent and bonds at 8.7 per cent. Bonds constituted 39 per cent of the Fund's portfolio, the same as a year earlier, while equities decreased from 52 to 48 per cent.

In accordance with General Assembly requests, special emphasis was given to identifying more investment opportunities in developing countries, resulting in a 15 per cent increase in development-related investments, which reached $636 million on 30 June 1984, as compared with $554 million a year before. In Africa, for example, those investments had increased to $69.5 million from $52.6 million. The combined investments in developing countries as at 30 June represented 20.1 per cent of the total Fund.

The Pension Board, in its annual report to the Assembly,<sup>(17)</sup> noted that, as at 31 March, $1,884 million, or 55 per cent, of the Fund's long-term investments were allocated to markets outside the United States. The Fund was invested in 44 countries, including 23 developing countries. Substantial investments had been made through international and regional development institutions. For reasons of currency and geographic diversification, funds had been invested in 20 different currencies (other than the United States dollar) and in 19 equity markets, including 5 in developing countries. Noting that the inflation-adjusted rate of return over the past 24 years had been 1.5 per cent compared with the current actuarial assumption of 3 per cent, the Board did not expect that the real rate of return would exceed 3 per cent a year or that the increase in the rate would, on its own, eliminate the existing imbalance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, acting on a recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted decision 39/452 without vote.

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

At its 105th plenary meeting, on 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund.

General Assembly decision 39/452

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/846) without objection, 14 December (meeting 51); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 118.

(New York). As in previous years, it submitted a note to the General Assembly outlining its activities for the year.<sup>(1)</sup>

The Tribunal delivered 21 judgements during the year in cases brought by staff members against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other organizations in the United Nations system with respect to claims arising under labour contracts of the international civil service. It also considered the question of harmonizing its statute, rules and practices with those of the ILO Administrative Tribunal (see below), the other of the two existing common system tribunals.

The Assembly's Committee on Applications for Review of Administrative Tribunal Judgements held its twenty-third and twenty-fourth sessions in New York, on 9 January and from 21 to 28 August, respectively.

Feasibility of establishing a single tribunal

Following a November 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted in September 1984 a report on the feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal for the entire common system.<sup>(3)</sup> He commented on the proposed reforms designed to improve and/or harmonize the proceedings of the two tribunals, covering such issues as jurisdiction, proceedings, procedures, remedies, review of judgements and co-operation between the tribunals. Annexed to the report was a set of existing texts of, and proposed revisions to, the two tribunals' statutes and rules, and a draft resolution by which the Assembly could adopt the proposed changes and accomplish a number of other reforms. The proposals had been prepared by the United Nations Secretariat with the assistance of legal advisers and comments from ILO, the International Telecommunication Union and FICSA; the decisions of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board were also taken into consideration.

The Board noted in its report<sup>(4)</sup> that the amendments recommended by the Secretary-General had possible bearing on appeals against its decisions, review of Tribunal judgements in Pension Fund cases, and the requesting of advisory opinions; the Board proposed to amend its Regulations to include the review procedure provided for in the Tribunal's statute.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted decision 39/450 without vote.

Feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal

At its 105th plenary meeting, on 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided:

UN Administrative Tribunal

Activities of the Tribunal

In 1984, the United Nations Administrative Tribunal met in annual plenary session in New York on 1 November, and held two panel sessions—2 May to 8 June (Geneva) and 8 October to 2 November

(a) To defer consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal until its fortieth session;

(b) To consider at its fortieth session how to proceed with the examination of this matter at that session.

General Assembly decision 39/450

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/842) without vote, 15 December (meeting 52); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.31), orally amended by USSR; agenda item 112 (c). Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 33, 42-44, 46, 51, 52; plenary 105.

Before approving the draft, the Committee agreed to an oral amendment by the USSR to delete a request for Member States comments, by 30 June 1985, to the Secretary-General's 1984 report.

Proposed office of Ombudsman

In their written comments to the Fifth Committee, the staff representatives<sup>(5)</sup> made a number of proposals aimed at reforming the current machinery for the administration of justice in the Secretariat, suggesting that an office of Ombudsman be established at Headquarters and at other duty stations; the Ombudsman, who would be solely responsible and accountable to the General Assembly, should be elected by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) from among eminent jurists, diplomats or former senior international civil servants recommended by the Joint Advisory Committee—a committee composed of representatives of the staff and of the Secretary-General to advise him on personnel policies and general questions of staff welfare.

The staff representatives also proposed that an office for the administration of justice be created within the Executive Office of the Secretary-General.

In December, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to strengthen the various appeals machinery, and to report in 1985 on the feasibility of establishing an office of Ombudsman (resolution 39/245).

Travel

In an annual report, presented in October, on the savings achieved through utilization of economy and other air fares,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that an estimated $449,000 had been saved during the year ended 30 June 1984, as a result of cost-saving measures taken in pursuance of a 1977 Assembly decision<sup>(2)</sup> that limited the first-class travel of United Nations officials.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section VII of resolution 39/236 without vote.

First-class travel

[The General Assembly . . .]

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on first-class travel;

2. Decides that the reports on this subject should in future be entitled "Standards of accommodation for air travel";

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in preparing future annual reports on this subject, to include details of, resultant additional costs of, and reasons for all exceptions made to the rules on standards of accommodation for air travel established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 32/198 of 21 December 1977, as amended by resolutions 35/217, section X, of 17 December 1980 and 37/237, section III, of 21 December 1982;

Staff travel to General Assembly sessions

On behalf of the Secretary-General, the Under-Secretary-General for Administration and Management orally reported to the Fifth Committee in November 1984 that the Secretary-General, in response to a December 1983 Assembly resolution,<sup>(3)</sup> had informed all heads of departments and offices outside Headquarters of the need to limit the travel of staff to attend Assembly sessions; in September, the Secretary-General introduced new procedures by which the prior approval of his Office was required for all travel of staff to attend meetings and conferences.

At the request of the United States, the Secretariat submitted to the Fifth Committee in December<sup>(4)</sup> a breakdown and brief explanation of all staff travel to attend the 1984 regular session of the Assembly: 38 staff members had travelled to New York for this purpose from overseas United Nations offices, two of them making two trips each.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted, on 18 December 1984, section VIII of resolution 39/236 without vote.

Travel of United Nations officials to attend sessions of the General Assembly

[The General Assembly . . .]

1. Takes note of the oral report of the Secretary-General on the question of travel by United Nations officials to attend sessions of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assure that the maximum restraint be exercised concerning such travel;

3. Decides to keep the matter under periodic review;

Other UN officials*Conditions of service

In September 1984, ACABQ<sup>(1)</sup> presented its recommendations regarding allowances for the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of ICSC and members of ICJ, following its examination of the Secretary-General's 1983 report on conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials.<sup>(2)</sup> The Assembly, in December 1983,<sup>(3)</sup> had deferred consideration of that report until 1984.

ACABQ concurred with the Secretary-General's proposals to raise the special allowance payable to the ICSC Chairman from $5,000 to $8,000 per year; and to approve an installation grant, an education grant and a death benefit to both the Chairman and Vice-Chairman. However, it recommended against introducing a $2,000 special annual allowance for the ICSC Vice-Chairman, a distinction in compensation to both officials according to dependency status, and a relocation allowance.

With regard to ICJ members, ACABQ recommended that the special annual allowance payable to the Court President be set at $15,000 as of 1 January 1985 with a corresponding adjustment to $94 per day (up to a maximum of $9,400 per year) for the special daily allowance paid to the Vice-President when acting as President. The Committee agreed that the President and members of the Court who had taken up residence at The Hague should be reimbursed $4,500 maximum per child per school year for the actual cost of their education in addition to one related travel per year to The Hague from the place of scholastic attendance when outside the Netherlands. It also recommended a death benefit scheme for ICJ members, and lump-sum payments, upon completion of service and relocation outside the Netherlands, for those judges who had maintained, on a continuous basis, a bona fide primary residence at The Hague for a specified number of years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, the General Assembly adopted, without vote, section V of resolution 39/236, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee.

On compensation in the event of disabilities attributable to service with the United Nations, and health insurance for members of commissions, committees and similar bodies, the Secretary-General<sup>(4)</sup> proposed, in November, to increase, with effect from 1 January 1985, the fixed amounts payable in the event of death, injury or illness, respectively, from $100,000 to $130,000, $50,000 to $65,000, and $100,000 to $130,000; he also proposed that the scale of compensation be reviewed again in 1988. The Secretary-General considered the current arrangements for health insurance to be appropriate, given the modest cost of the insurance coverage to the members, its ready availability and its optional character.

ACABQ<sup>(5)</sup> supported the Secretary-General's recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section X of resolution 39/236 without vote.

Compensation in the event of death, injury or illness attributable to service with the United Nations and health insurance for members of commissions, committees and similar bodies[The General Assembly . . .]*

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on compensation in the event of death, injury or illness attributable to service with the United Nations and health insurance for members of commissions, committees and similar bodies;

2. Approves the proposals of the Secretary-General, as contained in paragraph 6 of his note;

Experts and consultants

In a November report,<sup>(6)</sup> submitted in response to a 1982 Assembly request,<sup>(7)</sup> on the United Nations use of consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups in 1982-1983, the Secretary-General said a total of $15,580,100 covered the remuneration and cost of related travel of 2,361 individuals and 48 institutions engaged as consultants, while an additional $3,215,100 covered 1,677 payments of travel expenses of 1,527 participants in ad hoc expert groups. Of a total of 210 contracts issued during the period to 165 former staff members as consultants, 134 were for 100 individuals over 60 years of age. The majority of consultant services related to special analytical studies (60.5 per cent), followed by advisory services (9.4 per cent) and programme implementation (8.2 per cent). In accordance with the guideline requiring the selection of outside expertise from as wide and representative a number of countries as possible, nationals of 124 Member States, including 75 developing countries, had been engaged as consultants, and those of 127 Member States, including 95 developing countries, had been invited to participate in ad hoc groups.

In December, ACABQ<sup>(8)</sup> stressed that only in exceptional circumstances should departures occur from the interim measure instituted by the Assembly in 1982<sup>(7)</sup> that excluded former staff members who were beneficiaries of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund from receiving emoluments exceeding $12,000 from the United Nations in any one calendar year; it requested the Secretary-General to report in future on exceptions to that and another requirement that consultancy agreements should be short term in nature.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly, on 18 December 1984, adopted section XII of resolution 39/236 without vote.

Use of experts, consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups

[The General Assembly . . .]

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the use of consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups in the United Nations in 1982-1983 and of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the use of consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups for the biennium 1984-1985 and, in preparing his report, to take into account the comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the views of Member States expressed in the course of the debate in the Fifth Committee;

2. Confirms the interim measure instituted by section VIII, paragraph 3, of its resolution 37/237 of 21 December 1982 and decides to review the situation at its fortieth session in the light of additional information to be provided by the Secretary-General on former staff members of any organ, organization or body of the United Nations system in receipt of a pension benefit from the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund who are engaged by the Secretary-General in any capacity;

Questions relating to regional commissions

In October 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that the permanent redeployment of regular budget resources for continuing senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions could jeopardize the overall work programme, and that, while temporary arrangements could continue in 1985, he intended to seek the regularizing of the staffing situation. In 1983,<sup>(2)</sup> the Assembly had urged the Secretary-General to continue those posts within the commissions' regular budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 December 1984, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted resolution 39/127 by recorded vote.

Senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 33/188 of 29 January 1979, 35/137 of 11 December 1980 and 37/62 of 3 December 1982 and, in particular, its view that the appointment of senior women's programme officers at the regional commissions represents a valuable contribution to the implementation of the goals of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace,

Recalling also its resolution 38/106 of 16 December 1983, in particular the reference to the question of senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions contained in paragraphs 2 and 3 of that resolution,

Reaffirming that questions concerning women should be approached and dealt with as an integral part of overall policies and programmes in the field of social and economic development,

Convinced that further efforts are needed to ensure the maintenance and continuation, at the appropriate level, of posts assigned to women's programmes at the regional commissions,

Recognizing that these posts are integral to the successful outcome of national and regional programmes for women,

1. Takes due note of the report of the Secretary-General on the situation of senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions;

2. Takes note of the decision of the Secretary-General to continue posts through temporary arrangements during 1985;

3. Expresses deep concern that there has been a lack of progress in regularizing senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions and that work with respect to women's programmes is thereby seriously impeded;

4. Stresses that the appointment of senior women's programme officers at the regional commissions represents a valuable contribution to the implementation of the goals of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace, and beyond;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the executive secretaries of the five regional commissions, to reassess all individual work programmes, with a view to incorporating women's concerns at all levels in the overall programme of work of each Commission;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the executive secretaries of the five regional commissions, to allocate sufficient budgetary resources to staff, including, where possible, by redeployment, within the context of the 1986-1987 programme budget, in order to regularize all temporary and permanent senior women's programme officers posts at the regional commissions before the end of the Decade, so as to allow the integration of policies and programmes concerning women;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on measures taken in implementation of paragraph 5 above.

General Assembly resolution 39/127

14 December 1984 Meeting 101 135-1-8 (recorded vote)

Approved by Third Committee (A/39/702) by recorded vote (124-1-10), 26 November (meeting 50); 17-nation draft (A/C.3/39/L.28); agenda item 93.

Sponsors: Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Bolivia, Cameroon, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Guyana, India, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Kenya, Norway, Philippines, Trinidad and Tobago, United Kingdom.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 3rd Committee 23-33, 42, 47, 50; plenary 101.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Israel, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

The United States, which had asked for the vote, opposed creating new positions, as against redeployment. Similarly, the USSR felt that, under paragraph 6, financial implications could arise in the 1987-1988 programme budget. While sharing that concern, Canada believed that better staffing arrangements at regional commissions would result in more efficient use of resources. Morocco felt the text could help the position of women at the commissions. The Budget Division Director stated that should financial implications arise, they would be presented to the Assembly in the 1987-1988 budget.

Chapter IV

Other administrative and management questions

In 1984, the General Assembly took a number of actions related to United Nations administration and management. It continued to foster the rational use of conference resources and to pursue the possibility of shortening sessions (resolution 39/68 B), and to seek improvement in the pattern of conferences (39/68 C) and in the control and limitation of documents (39/68 D). The Assembly authorized meetings of subsidiary organs during its 1984 session (decision 39/403) and approved the revised calendar of meetings for 1985 (39/68 A). It also took action on the catering operation (39/67) and parking facilities at United Nations Headquarters (39/236, section II), on the United Nations Office at Nairobi, Kenya (39/236, sections XIII-XV), and on the management of support services shared by the various entities of the United Nations system at the Vienna International Centre, Austria (39/236, section IV).

The Assembly set the United Nations share of the costs of the Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems for 1984-1985 (39/236, section IX) and approved the 1985 budget for the International Computing Centre (39/236, section VI). In December, the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee approved an additional net amount of $1,497,400 for 1984-1985 to improve the United Nations communications system.

To strengthen the role of United Nations libraries in information systems, the Assembly requested implementation of recommendations to improve the functioning of those libraries (39/242, section III).

In connection with the activities of the United Nations Postal Administration, the Assembly called for a special postage stamp issue to sensitize the international community to the social and economic crisis in Africa (39/239 A).

Topics related to this chapter. Institutional machinery. Institutional arrangements.

Conferences and meetings

In 1984, the 22-member Committee on Conferences held in New York an organizational meeting on 9 March and its substantive session from 30 April to 4 May and from 20 August to 5 September. Its work centred on the calendar of conferences, control and limitation of documentation, effective use of conference resources, proposals for conference services in the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 and special conferences. The Committee also adopted guidelines for its review of proposals for conferences and meetings involving exceptions to General Assembly resolutions and decisions, as well as administrative and financial implications.

The Committee's report<sup>(1)</sup> contained four draft resolutions on the main aspects of its work, which the Assembly adopted as resolutions 39/68 A-D (see below).

In keeping with a General Assembly request of November 1983,<sup>(2)</sup> the Committee on Conferences in 1984 discussed a Secretariat note containing the proposed additions and changes to the existing provisions of a 1976 Assembly resolution governing conferences and meetings of United Nations bodies.<sup>(3)</sup>

The Committee continued its efforts to reduce the conference resources allocated to those bodies found to have used less than 75 per cent of their meeting resources during 1980-1982. Thus in April 1984, the Committee Chairman issued a reminder to the 10 bodies that had not replied to his July 1983 letter suggesting the possibility of such a reduction. In May, after examining the 13 replies received,<sup>(4)</sup> the Committee agreed that the bodies concerned should be urged to ensure that their requests for conference services corresponded accurately to their requirements, to utilize rationally the services provided, to consider reducing formal meetings by increasing the use of informal consultations, and to provide for such consultations, drafting committees and report preparation in their programmes of work.

The Committee recommended a draft resolution on each of these two topics for Assembly action.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1984, the General Assembly, acting on recommendations of the Fifth Committee, adopted two resolutions. Resolution 39/68 C was adopted without vote.

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolution 38/32 C of 25 November 1983,
Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences on its efforts to implement that resolution,
Requests the Committee on Conferences to undertake an in-depth study of all existing provisions relating to the pattern of conferences, taking into account all the modifications proposed during the thirty-eighth session of the General Assembly, with a view to reporting to the Assembly at its fortieth session.

Shortening of sessions or adoption of a biennial cycle for sessions of United Nations organs

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 32/71, section IV, and 32/72 of 9 December 1977, 33/55, section II, of 14 December 1978, 35/10 A of 3 November 1980, 36/117 A, section I, of 10 December 1981 and 38/32 D of 25 November 1983,

Emphasizing the continued need for maximum efficiency in the provision of conference services,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts made by the Committee on Conferences to improve utilization of conference-servicing resources in consultation with the officers of those organs which have in recent years utilized 75 per cent or less of the conference resources made available to them;

2. Urges subsidiary organs of the General Assembly to make further efforts, on the basis, inter alia, of current statistical data, to ensure that their requests for conference services correspond accurately to their requirements and that the services provided to them are utilized rationally and efficiently;

3. Further urges those organs, when submitting requests for conference services, to make due provision for meetings when no interpretation services are required, such as informal consultations and periods allocated to drafting, to the extent that such needs might be anticipated on the basis of past practice, and to consider an appropriate reduction in the number of formal meetings to allow the balance of time to be utilized for informal meetings and/or consultations;

4. Recommends that the bureaux of those organs monitor their utilization of the conference-servicing resources allocated to them with a view to including in their reports to the General Assembly an analytical survey of their utilization of those resources;

5. Reaffirms that in drawing up future calendars of conferences and meetings, the document-processing capacity of the Secretariat and the reporting schedules of subsidiary organs of the General Assembly should be taken into account;

6. Requests those organs also to discuss at their organizational sessions the possibility of meeting on a biennial basis;

7. Invites the Secretary-General to determine, in the course of 1985, the extent to which subsidiary organs of the General Assembly, through both formal and informal meetings and/or consultations, utilize the conference services they have requested, with a view to achieving the most effective utilization of conference resources;

8. Invites the Committee on Conferences to continue its examination of this question and to make a further report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session.

General Assembly resolution 39/68 B

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote
Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/730) without vote, 16 November (meeting 29); draft by Committee on Conferences (A/39/32), amended by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.9/Rev.1) following consultations; agenda item 114.
Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 6, 11-15, 18, 27, 29; plenary 98.

The original text differed from that adopted in that the first preambular paragraph did not mention Assembly resolution 33/55, section II, of 14 December 1978, and the second referred to maximum economy in the effective use of conference-servicing resources; paragraph 4 would have had the Assembly recommend that each organ make one member of its bureau responsible for the rational use of such resources; paragraph 5 was not part of the original text; paragraph 6 would have had the Assembly request inclusion in reports to it of an analytical statement on the utilization of resources, with an explanation for any under-utilization; and the last phrase in paragraph 7 had read "with a view to the future redeployment of unused resources".

Calendar for 1984

Two inter-sessional departures from the calendar of conferences for 1984 involving financial implications were approved by the Committee on Conferences in accordance with its 1974 mandate,<sup>(5)</sup> as redefined in 1977,<sup>(6)</sup> to act on behalf of the General Assembly with respect to such departures. One was a change of dates of the resumed session of the Committee on the Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (the 1980s) (see p. 392), which was approved on the understanding that services would be provided on an "as available" basis. The second was a one-day extension of the Fourth General Conference of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) (see p. 558).

By letters of 14 and 18 September and 1 and 15 October,<sup>(7)</sup> the Committee Chairman informed the Assembly President that requests to meet in New York during the 1984 regular session of the Assembly had been received from a number of its subsidiary organs. The Chairman asked that the meetings be authorized as requested, on the understanding that they would be accommodated as facilities and services became available so as not to affect Assembly activities adversely.

The Economic and Social Council, by decisions 1984/102, 1984/103, 1984/105 and 1984/110, also authorized changes to the calendar of meetings for 1984 in respect of four of its subsidiary bodies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly adopted decision 39/403 without vote.

Meetings of subsidiary organs during the thirty-ninth session

At its 3rd, 27th and 32nd plenary meetings, on 21 September and 9 and 17 October 1984, the General Assembly, on the recommendations of the Committee on Conferences and of the General Committee, decided that the following subsidiary organs should be authorized to hold meetings during the thirty-ninth session:

- (a) Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against Apartheid in Sports;
- (b) Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean;
- (c) Advisory Committee on the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa;
- (d) Committee of Trustees of the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa;
- (e) Committee on Applications for Review of Administrative Tribunal Judgements;
- (f) Committee on Relations with the Host Country;
- (g) Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;
- (h) Preparatory Committee for the Fortieth Anniversary of the United Nations;
- (i) Special Committee against Apartheid;
- (j) Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;
- (k) United Nations Council for Namibia;
- (l) Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

General Assembly decision 39/403

Adopted without vote

Approved by General Committee (A/39/250 & Add.2), 19 September and 9 October (meetings 1, 2, 4); proposals by Committee on Conferences (A/39/482 & Add.1-3); agenda item 8.

Calendar for 1985

During its August/September 1984 meetings, the Committee on Conferences recommended for General Assembly adoption a draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of United Nations bodies for 1985. The revised calendar, drawn up as at 31 August 1984 and annexed to the Committee's report,<sup>(1)</sup> incorporated the change made by Economic and Social Council decision 1984/117 with respect to the Third United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for the Americas.

Noting that several bodies had decided to extend or change session dates and venues or accept government offers to host sessions, the Committee agreed to issue a reminder that such decisions could be taken only by the Assembly on the Committee's recommendation, and that rescheduling of sessions should be proposed in reports to the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/68 A on 13 December 1984.

Report of the Committee on Conferences

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Committee on Conferences;
2. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 1985 as submitted by the Committee on Conferences;
3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make adjustments in the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1985 which may become necessary as a result of action and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session;
4. Requests the Secretary-General, in the interests of maximum efficiency and cost-effectiveness, to consider organizing the conference-servicing staff at the Vienna International Centre into a single conference-servicing operation;
5. Invites the International Atomic Energy Agency to participate in the consideration of this matter.

General Assembly resolution 39/68 A

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/730) without vote, 16 November (meeting 29); draft by Committee on Conferences (A/39/32), amended by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.9/Rev.1) following consultations; agenda item 114.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 6, 11-15, 18, 27, 28; plenary 98.

Amendments to the original text deleted: a paragraph by which the Assembly would have reaffirmed that, for meetings included in the calendar of conferences as approved, the Department of Conference Services at Headquarters would be responsible for servicing meetings in North and South America and in Asia, and the United Nations Office at Geneva for those in Europe, Africa and the Middle East; and "within the resources approved in the biennial budget for 1984-1985" at the end of paragraph 4. Paragraph 5 was amended to read "consideration of this matter" instead of "study of this question".

Conference and meeting services

Following consideration of the Secretary-General's consolidated statement<sup>(8)</sup> of programme budget implications of conference-servicing costs for the 1984-1985 programme budget (see Chapter I of this section), as well as of the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ),<sup>(9)</sup> the Fifth Committee on 15 December 1984 approved, by recorded vote of 70 to 21, an additional appropriation totalling $4,250,000 for such costs for 1985.

The Secretary-General had requested an additional amount of $9,238,200 for 1985, in the light of the calendar of conferences as approved by the General Assembly on 13 December 1984 (see above), distributed as follows: $4,616,800 for Headquarters, $4,600,000 for the United Nations Office at Vienna and $21,400 for the United Nations

Office at Geneva. In the opinion of ACABQ, there was room for increased productivity and better preparation of documents in New York, the method of estimating conference-servicing requirements for Vienna should be refined, and, in certain cases, forecasts for documentation could be decreased without jeopardizing the work of bodies reviewing such documents. On that basis, ACABQ scaled down the request to the approved amount, to be appropriated as follows: $2,250,000 for Headquarters and $2,000,000 for Vienna.

Improvement of conference resources

In keeping with a November 1983 General Assembly request,<sup>(10)</sup> the Committee on Conferences considered a report of the Secretary-General on existing conference resources, services and facilities within the United Nations system.<sup>(11)</sup> It also examined conference room papers on Headquarters conference-servicing capacity, external conference-servicing resources, and the revised calendar of conferences and anticipated United Nations meetings for 1985, grouped by subject-matter.

A revision of the reports was suggested, to illustrate better, by quantifying and comparing the demand for and supply of conference resources, the impact of delegation demand on the physical and human resources available to the Organization. It was agreed that draft calendars of conferences and meetings should continue to be presented in traditional chronological form, but that there was value in indicating documentation requirements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 39/68 A, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General, for maximum efficiency and cost-effectiveness, to consider organizing the conference-servicing staff at the Vienna International Centre into a single conference-servicing operation. It invited the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to participate in the consideration of that matter.

Draft rules of procedure for conferences

By decision 39/419, the General Assembly deferred to its regular 1985 session consideration of the 1983<sup>(12)</sup> and 1984 (see p. 1106) reports of the Secretary-General on draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences. It invited Governments to communicate to him their observations on those reports by 1 May 1985.

Documents

Documents limitation

Various aspects of controlling and limiting United Nations documents were examined by the Committee on Conferences in 1984.<sup>(1)</sup> They included the feasibility of instituting an abbreviated form of summary record,<sup>(2)</sup> the causes of late issuance of documentation<sup>(3)</sup> and backlogs in publications.<sup>(4)</sup>

The Committee agreed that the samples of abbreviated summary records examined, as well as the observations made on them, should be communicated to United Nations organs entitled to summary records, with a request for their views on the form of record most appropriate for their purposes, to enable the Committee to report to the General Assembly in 1985. Identified as causes of late issuance of documentation were: failure of author departments to adhere to timetables; the low proportion of terminologists to translators (six to over 300), a proportion incompatible with the demands of the Organization's increasingly specialized activities for specialized vocabularies to be established in some languages; and the overload to which the document-processing services were subjected by the clustering of sessions with heavy documentation needs. It was agreed that author departments, United Nations organs and servicing units should abide by the relevant guidelines set forth by the Assembly in 1978<sup>(5)</sup> and 1981.<sup>(6)</sup>

The report on publication backlogs dealt with three publications: the Yearbook of the United Nations; the Treaty Series; and the Official Records of the United Nations, for which temporary assistance had been granted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/68 D on 13 December 1984.

Control and limitation of documentation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2292(XXII) of 8 December 1967, 2538(XXIV) of 11 December 1969, 2732(XXV) of 16 December 1970, 31/140, section II, of 17 December 1976, 33/56, section II, of 14 December 1978, 34/50 of 23 November 1979, 36/117 of 10 December 1981, 37/14 C and D of 16 November 1982 and 38/32 E of 25

November 1983 and its decision 34/401 of 21 September, 25 October, 29 November and 12 December 1979,

1. Takes note of the results of the study of the feasibility of instituting an abbreviated form of summary record;

2. Notes that the Committee on Conferences will further examine, after consulting with the United Nations organs entitled to receive summary records, the relative suitability of summary records as now prepared and the abbreviated summary records prepared by the Secretariat on an experimental basis, with a view to reporting to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

3. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To instruct all Secretariat units responsible for the drafting of documents to ensure that their manuscripts are delivered to the Department of Conference Services in accordance with the prescribed timetable for their submission;

(b) To circulate eight weeks before the opening of the session of each United Nations organ, including the Main Committees of the General Assembly, a report on the state of preparation at that time of all the documents in all languages required for the session;

(c) To include in that report an explanation for any delay in processing the documentation and to identify the Secretariat unit responsible for that delay;

4. Reaffirms that lists of all documents requested by each United Nations organ, including the Main Committees of the General Assembly, shall be submitted by the Secretary-General at the end of each session, with an indication of the date on which it will be possible to issue each document in all required languages, reflecting the time required for its preparation by both the substantive and conference-servicing units of the Secretariat.

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/730) without vote, 16 November (meeting 29); draft by Committee on Conferences (A/39/32), amended by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/39/L.9/Rev.1) following consultations; agenda item 114.

Meeting numbers: GA 39th session: 5th Committee 6, 11-15, 18, 27, 29; plenary 98.

The amendments to the original text consisted of editing changes to paragraphs 3 (b) and 4.

Meeting records

Chinese language services

In a September 1984 report,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General provided information regarding recent developments in Chinese language services for producing documentation in that language, which he indicated had not been provided on the same level as the other working languages of the General Assembly and the Security Council. Chinese had been included as a working language of those bodies in 1973.<sup>(8)</sup>

The report stated that, in 1983, in response to a 6 September complaint from China that service was inadequate, efforts were made, within available resources, to ensure the simultaneous distribution of documentation and more timely issuance of summary records in Chinese. In view of the primary importance attached to simultaneous distribution of verbatim records in all languages including Chinese, it was felt that the creation of the necessary facilities for that purpose could no longer be postponed.

The Secretary-General thus requested, and obtained, the concurrence of ACABQ<sup>(9)</sup> to enter into additional commitments in 1984 in an amount not exceeding $998,400 under the provisions of the December 1983 Assembly resolution on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the 1984-1985 biennium.<sup>(10)</sup> This amount provided for the nucleus of a Chinese Verbatim Unit, on a temporary basis from 1 August to 31 December; for temporary assistance equivalent to 24 posts from 1 October to 31 December; and for costs relating to the acquisition of reproduction and specialized equipment, paper, office supplies and furniture, and alterations to premises.

The Secretary-General further requested an additional $1,114,400 to provide the same temporary assistance for the 1985 Assembly session. ACABQ had no objection and accordingly recommended approval of that amount in the 1984-1985 budget.

Proposals to restructure the Chinese language service were to be made to the Assembly as part of the proposed programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium.

Documents distribution

In response to a 1982 request by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC),<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to it in April 1984 a report<sup>(12)</sup> addressing the question of whether the distribution system for United Nations documents provided a mechanism whereby studies and reports produced by the Secretariat could effectively reach the target-users for whom, as defined in the programme budget, they were intended.

The report concluded that the system was appropriately designed for the purpose, but that additional attention could be given to ensure its more effective use. To this end the report recommended that programme managers be made fully aware of the system. They should keep their distribution lists under continuing review, and methodically update and improve them, particularly in respect of developing countries. Instructions for the preparation of the 1986-1987 programme budget estimates would require that proposals for publication of studies and reports be supported by evidence that target-users had been identified and were on a mailing list. Compliance with this requirement would be examined through the existing machinery for programme budget review, in-depth programme evaluation, and performance monitoring at the Secretariat and intergovernmental levels.

The report also mentioned that the central maintenance of departmental lists was undergoing conversion from an addressograph system to a computerized one, thus allowing for their review by user departments.

Following its consideration of the report, CPC recommended<sup>(13)</sup> that the Secretary-General make the documents dissemination system more effective, in particular by clearly identifying end-users. Efforts should be made to find alternative means of documents distribution and to follow up on the results. Criteria could be defined to assist distribution services systematically to bring different United Nations publications to end-users, particularly in developing countries.

UN premises

Headquarters

Catering

The continuing financial deficit in the catering operation at United Nations Headquarters was taken up by the General Assembly in 1984.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 39/67 on 13 December 1984.

Catering operation at United Nations Headquarters The General Assembly,

Noting that, in spite of the Secretary-General's statement that the financial objective of the catering operation at United Nations Headquarters is a break-even result, deficits have occurred in the last two bienniums,

1. Confirms that the catering operation at United Nations Headquarters should be financially self-supporting to the extent possible;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take steps to rectify the situation that is causing the deficit in the catering operation;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session on the situation.

General Assembly resolution 39/67

13 December 1984 Meeting 98 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/618) without vote, 24 October (meeting 16); draft by United States (A/C.5/39/L.6), orally revised; agenda item 108. Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 3-7, 13, 14; plenary 98.

Explaining its position in the Fifth Committee, Iraq said that it would be unacceptable if the draft resolution resulted in catering price increases without prior examination of the causes of the deficits referred to and without benefit of an opinion from ACABQ.

Parking

In information provided to ACABQ on parking in the United Nations garage, the Secretary-General stated that the Garage Review Board, established in 1982, had recently completed a review of all parking authorizations except those of delegates and had established procedures for future annual reviews. The measures recommended by the Board, the Secretary-General stated, adequately addressed the problem of parking for staff and other qualified users; therefore, his information dealt mainly with the parking problems of diplomatic cars.

In the light of that information, ACABQ recommended<sup>(1)</sup> the following interim measures: increasing parking spaces for delegates from 200 to 300 by immediately making available 100 additional spaces in the second level of the garage; making available, as of September 1985, an additional 100 spaces during the General Assembly's regular sessions; eliminating dead-storage parking currently held for staff reassigned to other duty stations or no longer acting in their official capacity; discontinuing the practice of allowing delegation chauffeurs to park their own vehicles in the garage when removing official delegation vehicles; for security reasons and to prevent evasion of garage admission rules, permitting the parking of delegation rented cars only if rented from a bona fide rental company; limiting parking privileges to one car per delegate; as of September 1985, suspending the parking privileges of any delegate in arrears of parking fees by more than three months.

These measures, ACABQ believed, should be continually monitored and evaluated. It stated that, if further remedial action were warranted, consideration could be given to other measures, including increasing the overnight parking fee or eliminating 24-hour and overnight parking, particularly during Assembly sessions.

Noting that garage revenue for 1984-1985 had been estimated at $989,900 (gross), ACABQ concurred with the Secretary-General's proposal to augment the garage administration staff as at 1 January 1985 with one additional clerk and six security officers, whose costs would total $242,600 (gross) in 1985.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted section II of resolution 39/236 by recorded vote on 18 December 1984.

Addis Ababa

In 1984, the General Assembly considered two reports by the Secretary-General on the proposed new conference and related facilities of the Economic Commission for Africa at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. One was submitted in 1983;<sup>(2)</sup> and the other in September 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> containing updated information, including a breakdown of the cost of the project, based on preliminary plans and recosted at 1984 prices.

Having examined the Secretary-General's proposals, ACABQ, in a related report,<sup>(4)</sup> made a series of recommendations, including approval in principle of the project, based on which the Assembly adopted section III of resolution 39/236.

Bangkok

In 1984, the General Assembly considered proposals to expand the conference facilities of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) at Bangkok, Thailand. The facilities envisaged were deemed sufficient to meet ESCAP conference needs for some 20 years after construction. Subject to certain observations, ACABQ made a number of recommendations, which served as the basis for section XI of Assembly resolution 39/236.

(For details, see p. 627.)

Nairobi

Construction

In a November 1984 report,<sup>(5)</sup> the Secretary-General described progress made in the construction at Nairobi, Kenya, of the permanent headquarters facilities for the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), and accommodation in that complex for other United Nations offices. He stated that, with all works completed as envisaged in the tender documents plus one office block, the United Nations Office at Nairobi was officially inaugurated in May 1984. Additional works required from the contractor were completed by 30 September.

The Secretary-General annexed a summary of the status of appropriations, disbursements and obligations as at 30 September, indicating a balance of $843,562. He also itemized requirements for additional complementary equipment and external works to allow the complex to function efficiently, estimated at $415,000, which could be covered by the balance. A full-scale study was to be undertaken to determine the precise needs for maintaining the buildings and the results were to be reflected in a proposed programme budget for 1986-1987 for common services at Nairobi.

Having discussed the Secretary-General's request with UNEP representatives, ACABQ<sup>(6)</sup> was satisfied that the proposed additional requirements were essential and should be completed shortly, rather than later when costs would probably be higher.

Common services

In accordance with an ACABQ recommendation on common services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, as endorsed by the General Assembly in December 1983,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General reported in November 1984<sup>(8)</sup> on the conclusions reached with regard to rental charges to be established for users of the Office premises.

The Secretary-General stated that, following negotiations with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), agreement was reached on a number of modifications in the method of calculating the rental rate. The result was that, whereas the Secretary-General had proposed an annual rental charge of $96.88 per square metre, which combined the cost of common services calculated at $54.32 and amortization charges at $42.56, the revised rate was reduced to $66 per square metre, combining the cost of services of $44.61 and amortization charges of $21.35.

The revised rate was accepted by the United Nations Environment Fund and the United Nations Human Settlements Foundation. It was expected that ICAO and UNICEF, already occupying office space in the complex, would pay the revised rate, and that UNESCO, if it moved into the premises, would do likewise. The Environment Fund would be granted remission from amortization charges for the first four and a half years of occupancy to enable it to recoup the current value of an investment of $640,000 that it had made at the time of the construction of the original building.

On these assumptions, the income estimates in the 1984-1985 budget needed to be revised from $1,295,600 to $953,900, or reduced by $341,700.

In the belief that the revised charge was not excessive and should thus be generally acceptable, ACABQ recommended approval of the proposed income reduction.<sup>(6)</sup>

Land grant

In a December 1984 note,<sup>(9)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that, on 21 May, in connection with the inauguration of the United Nations Office at Nairobi (see above), the Government of Kenya made an offer to grant an additional 40 acres of adjoining land to the existing 100 acres at Gigiri. The UNEP Governing Council had recommended that the General Assembly accept the offer (see p. 749), and the Secretary-General, having determined that such acceptance entailed no financial implications, made the same recommendation. If accepted, he would undertake negotiations for the formal transfer of the land to the United Nations.

Vienna

In October 1984, the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) reported<sup>(10)</sup> on its study of the organization and management of the common support services of United Nations organizations at the Vienna International Centre. The study was undertaken pursuant to a recommendation arising from possible changes to existing common service arrangements formalized in a 1977 memorandum of understanding by the Centre occupants—the United Nations, IAEA and UNIDO—owing to the forthcoming conversion of UNIDO into a specialized agency and the subsequent transfer to the Centre of other United Nations entities. Under those arrangements, authority and responsibility for services were allocated as follows: IAEA for computer, library, printing and reproduction, medical, housing and commissary services; UNIDO for buildings management, language training and catering; and the United Nations for security and safety service, under the authority of the Director-General of the United Nations Office at Vienna.

JIU observed that, some weaknesses notwithstanding, the services functioned generally well, the costs to the user organization(s) would have been appreciably higher had services not been provided communally, and the financial benefits, knowledge and practical experience gained should be consolidated and maximized. It concluded that no change should be made to the existing common service arrangements unless it was demonstrated that a change led to more efficient and cost-effective results. The joint committees that served as co-ordinating and advisory mechanisms needed, however, to be strengthened and refined, and a series of recommendations to this end were made.

These included establishment of a joint co-ordination committee of the three organizations at the level of Chiefs of Administration, to conclude agreement on policy issues concerning financial and budgetary questions and to review costing procedures and cost-sharing patterns; representation in the common service advisory committees of all user organizations and at a high enough level to ensure implementation of recommendations; entrusting those committees with simplifying the cost-sharing keys—developed on the basis of the space occupied by an organization and the number of its staff, and in direct proportion to services received—in computer and other contested services; and an investigation as to whether the services envisaged in the 1977 memorandum of understanding and others suggested by JIU (procurement and contracting; conference; receiving, storage and inventory control; mail, pouch, visas and insurance) could be rendered on a common service basis in accordance with a set of five criteria set out in the study.

It was further recommended that the Secretary-General withhold implementation of any definitive changes in existing joint services until the new UNIDO Constitution had entered into force and, in the light of the conclusions and recommendations of the study, review changes already made. The existing UNIDO/United Nations joint conference service should continue after UNIDO assumed its new status. Current informal co-operative arrangements with some IAEA conference-servicing units should be formalized and modalities determined for pooling other IAEA conference-servicing units into a single conference structure.

Commenting on the recommendations,<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he understood the recommendation directed to him as stemming from the perception of JIU that his proposal to establish separate United Nations services in the personnel, public information and legal areas prior to the change in status of UNIDO was precipitate, a view he did not share. He explained that the changes made related to internal administrative arrangements that were neither of a common service nature nor the subject of formal agreements, and that the administrative action taken with regard to personnel and information services did not prejudice consultations leading to further agreement among the three organizations to extend common services along lines compatible with their respective work programme requirements and legislative mandates.

The Secretary-General agreed with the rest of the recommendations. He stated that the question of including additional common services would receive attention during the ongoing review of the memorandum of understanding, and that he had consistently favoured unifying the conference services to achieve maximum efficiency and economy. In this connection, he affirmed United Nations readiness to assume responsibility for providing conference services for the organizations and sought the views and guidance of Member States on this question.

ACABQ<sup>(12)</sup> concurred with the JIU conclusions and recommendations. In noting the Secretary-General's observations, it supported the idea of a unified conference service and believed that responsibility for it should be assumed by the United Nations, but trusted that the merger of such services could be accomplished without adding to the existing administrative structure.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In section IV of its resolution 39/242, the General Assembly concurred with the recommendations and observations of ACABQ and requested the Secretary-General to set out proposals to give effect to them in a report to the Assembly in 1985.

Information systems and communications

Co-ordination of information systems

ACC activities. The Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) continued in 1984 to strengthen the co-ordination of information systems in the United Nations system through its Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems (ACCIS). Established in 1983,<sup>(1)</sup> ACCIS was to assist agencies to communicate with each other in the preliminary and design stages of inter-agency systems and to provide assistance in launching them. Project execution was to be entrusted to a lead agency, with common financing from participating organizations. To carry out its 1984-1985 work programme, ACCIS set up three technical panels.

At its second session, held from 24 to 26 September 1984 at Geneva,<sup>(2)</sup> ACCIS considered the work of its technical panels on a register of development activities and on computer-based communication services; the panel on data-base access met in October. ACCIS also drew up a draft programme of work and budget for the 1986-1987 biennium.

On 23 October 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> ACC approved that work programme and budget.

Register of development activities. A detailed, costed proposal for a register of development activities was drawn up by the technical panel on the subject and presented by ACCIS<sup>(2)</sup> to ACC. The register would comprehensively cover activities of the United Nations system supporting economic and social development, including activities in approved programmes and budgets, regular programmes of technical assistance funded from assessed budgets, technical assistance projects funded from extrabudgetary resources, grant-based development activities, and loans and credits. It would enable Governments to identify ongoing activities throughout the United Nations system, their subject areas and in which countries they were taking place, and rely on data that could be derived from information currently available in agencies' reporting systems.

Development of the register was envisaged in two stages: version 1 would comprise a meaningful minimum set of data elements to be derived from what was currently available in agencies' reporting systems; version 2 would add elements that were needed but not currently available and under which data from user surveys and data derived from system monitoring could be considered. Information on the register would be structured into two data bases: one to contain information on individual development activities and another on procurement/recruitment by country of origin.

The proposal included cost estimates for setting up a system based on the Programme and Project Management System of the United Nations Development Programme and operating costs for version 1 for one year. Based on available information, it was estimated that the total cost to organizations would probably be in the order of $2 million to $3 million. It was also noted that there would be no possibility of financing the project within the ACCIS budget.

On 23 October 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> ACC approved, in principle, the register's design as a basis for final consideration by a special ACCIS session. It noted that governing bodies of individual United Nations organizations might have to be apprised of costs to them for the register's implementation. ACCIS was to report to ACC on the final design, scope and implementation problems, as well as institutional arrangements and financial implications, before submitting a report on ACC's behalf to CPC in 1985.

Report of the Secretary-General. In November 1984, the Secretary-General reported<sup>(4)</sup> that, as of 30 September, total disbursements and expenditure commitments of ACCIS amounted to $350,028. Assuming an even rate of expenditure for the entire year, expenditures could amount to approximately $467,000 for 1984. Further, assuming a continuation of the current expenditure rate through 1985 and taking into account a 5.5 per cent annual inflation rate, 1985 costs might be estimated at $493,000, bringing the total estimated cost of ACCIS for 1984-1985 to $960,000. On that basis, the United Nations share (43 per cent) would be $412,600, or $139,200 in excess of the existing appropriation. The Secretary-General therefore requested an additional appropriation of $139,200 for ACCIS, on the understanding that the General Assembly would again review the matter in examining the second budget performance report in 1985.

ACABQ report. In its oral report to the Fifth Committee on 27 November 1984<sup>(5)</sup> on the request for an additional appropriation for ACCIS, ACABQ stated that, according to available information, inflation at Geneva had been lower than the initial assumed rate of 5.5 per cent and the United States dollar had been quite strong; there thus appeared less justification for the request at the Assembly's current session than there had been in 1983, when no additional appropriation had been requested.<sup>(6)</sup> Accordingly, ACABQ proposed that the revised estimates for ACCIS be approved but that no additional appropriations be authorized at the current session. If that created problems, the Secretary-General could raise the matter again in the context of the final programme budget performance report for the 1984-1985 biennium to be submitted in 1985.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1984, acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted section IX of resolution 39/236.

United Nations share of the costs of the Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems

[The General Assembly . . .]

Decides that any additional appropriation that may be required in respect of the United Nations share of the costs of the Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems for the biennium 1984-1985 should be reported upon in the context of the programme budget performance report to be considered by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/839) without objection, 27 November (meeting 35); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 109.

Other action. The United Nations continued during 1984 to operate several information systems concerned with special aspects of development. These included the Industrial and Technological Information Bank of UNIDO (see p. 583) and the International Referral System for Sources of Environmental Information of UNEP (see p. 749).

In addition, a review by the Secretary-General of the institutional and financial arrangements for the Information Systems Unit as a distinct unit within the Secretariat Library was in progress (see p. 409).

Budget of the International Computing Centre

In September 1984, the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee the 1985 budget estimates for the International Computing Centre (ICC) at Geneva,<sup>(7)</sup> as reviewed by the United Nations and 13 other participating organizations and programmes in the system which used and financed ICC services.

The United Nations share of ICC's 1985 estimated budget stood at $1,691,700 against a total of $5,691,500.

Following its review of the estimates, ACABQ<sup>(5)</sup> recommended approval of the ICC budget, with the United Nations share to be met from the resources appropriated under the 1984-1985 budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted section VI of resolution 39/236 on 18 December 1984.

UN communications system

The United Nations communications system was the subject of a comprehensive report by the Secretary-General, submitted in November 1984<sup>(8)</sup> as a follow-up to his statement to the Fifth Committee in October 1983 that the work of the Organization necessitated considerable improvement in its communications system. The report described the existing communications network, pointed to its major deficiencies and examined opportunities for improvement and expansion.

The report contained proposals to interconnect the Organization's main offices and certain subsidiary offices with reliable multi-purpose communications circuits available 24 hours daily and dedicated exclusively to United Nations use. The network would include United Nations-owned earth stations operating on leased satellite circuits, primarily for use by peace-keeping missions. Links between the main duty stations of the United Nations would be provided by leased telecommunications circuits. The network would have the capacity to carry all teletype, facsimile and electronic data traffic generated between the duty stations connected to it, as well as a significant portion of telephone traffic. The proposals included a provision for a limited stock of communications equipment to be held in reserve against the possible establishment of new peace-keeping missions on short notice.

A multiphased programme of implementation over approximately three years (1985-1987) was envisaged, to allow an orderly integration of the improved facilities into the existing structure.

Costs for implementing the full system were estimated at $1.57 million yearly, in addition to a non-recurrent cost of $5.76 million. Of the yearly costs, $1.07 million would be covered by redeployments from various budget sections, leaving a yearly recurring amount, after full implementation of the plan, of $499,400. The portion of these costs to be covered under the regular programme budget in 1985, for which an appropriation was requested, was shown as $1.88 million ($789,000 on a recurrent basis, offset by $536,600 from redeployments, leaving a net recurrent cost of $252,400, and a non-recurrent cost of $1.63 million).

The Secretary-General also stated that, to meet the telecommunications requirements of the United Nations peace-keeping and emergency relief activities, he had leased in July 1984, with prior ACABQ concurrence, satellite facilities from the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization for a five-year term at $200,000 yearly. The lease replaced an earlier arrangement that had been withdrawn on short notice, by which the United Nations had used, free of charge since 1976, the facilities of the experimental "Symphonie" satellite operated by a France-Federal Republic of Germany satellite consortium. No financial commitment authority was requested in respect of 1984 costs relating to the lease ($91,500 for the period from 15 July to 31 December) or the non-recurrent start-up expenses ($26,000), since they were to be absorbed within existing resources for peace-keeping activities.

Following its examination of the Secretary-General's proposals, ACABQ<sup>(9)</sup> recommended against the further expansion of the satellite network in 1986 and 1987, reducing the estimated costs of the full system in the biennium 1986-1987 by $2,350,000 (at 1984 rates) for earth stations, and by $200,000 yearly for leased facilities on a second satellite. ACABQ also recommended against the proposed procurement of reserve communications equipment, resulting in a recommended reduction in the amount of $1,580,000, of which $380,000 represented a reduction in the proposed appropriation for 1984-1985. Accordingly, ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve an additional appropriation of $1,497,400 in the 1984-1985 budget. It also recommended approval of the proposed redeployments between sections of the budget.

Acting on the ACABQ recommendation on 11 December 1984, the Fifth Committee approved, by a recorded vote of 75 to 8, with 14 abstentions, additional net appropriations of $1,497,400 for 1984-1985. The Committee did not concur with the Secretary-General's proposal to expand the communications satellite network.

The recorded vote had been requested by the USSR, which felt that the ACABQ recommendations still included appropriations that went beyond rational needs and would thus vote against them. The proposed expanded network would lead to the creation of a complex technical system, including satellites, not in keeping with United Nations needs. ACABQ's mandate had prevented it from examining the very principle of creating such a system. The USSR felt that the advanced high-frequency radio and telephone communications and the broad range of commercial channels available to the United Nations were sufficient to resolve all its communications problems.

Explaining its negative vote, the United States said it remained unconvinced of the need for many of the proposed expenditures. The Secretary-General's report did not provide convincing examples of how United Nations work had suffered because of inadequacies in the current communications system. Expenditures of the magnitude proposed must be carefully weighed against competing alternatives.

Communications satellite

In keeping with a recommendation by the Committee on Information as approved by the General Assembly in December 1983,<sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted for the Committee's consideration, at its June/July 1984 session, a final report on the acquisition by the United Nations of its own communications satellite.<sup>(11)</sup> Investigation of the feasibility of such acquisition was undertaken by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), whose assistance was requested in preparing the report.

The findings of ITU were against the acquisition on financial, regulatory, technical and political grounds. First, the projected traffic—on a complete system, a maximum of 4,519 telephone-equivalent channels in 1987, rising to 6,111 in 1996—would utilize only 31 per cent of the system's capacity in 1987 and 42 per cent by 1996. Second, two satellites would be needed for full coverage, one over the Atlantic and another over the Indian Ocean. At 1983 constant prices, those satellites and their earth system components would cost $558 million. Were this two-satellite system scaled down to a less complete, one-satellite system (over the Atlantic Ocean, covering most major United Nations locations in North and South America, Africa, the Middle East and Europe), the cost would be reduced to only $460.69 million. Presuming the imperfect yet cheaper coverage of the single-satellite system and taking account of the projected revenues from its use, the operation would still result in a yearly deficit, totalling an estimated $200.89 million by 1996. Third, since the United Nations satellite system would be competing with existing carriers, which had contractual arrangements with host countries, long negotiations would have to be entered into. Positioning the satellite in optimal orbit, given the heavy satellite traffic, would also require sensitive negotiation.

These considerations argued for two options that were less expensive, easier to co-ordinate and quicker to implement: leased space segment facilities on an as-required basis; or a backbone leased channel network, which could be defined for different services, traffic volumes and interconnection needs and could be established on conventional common carriers on commercial terms. Noting that the existing link between New York and Geneva was leased full-duplex at a yearly cost of $152,000, ITU suggested that developing similar links with other main United Nations centres and optimizing the traffic routing would perhaps only be a fraction of the cost of a United Nations-owned and operated satellite system.

In taking note of the ITU report, the Committee recommended<sup>(12)</sup> that the Secretary-General be requested to present to it in 1985 a complementary report on the acquisition of a United Nations communications satellite. The recommendation, along with the Committee's other recommendations (see p. 358), was approved by the Assembly in resolution 39/98 A.

Library management

In 1984, JIU submitted a report on a comprehensive study it had conducted of the libraries of the United Nations system,<sup>(13)</sup> using an extensive questionnaire to which 78 of those libraries had responded. The study gave an overview and summary of patterns, trends, problems and issues in the system's library operations and services. Taking into account variations in size, level of development and resources, the study also identified several weaknesses which the libraries had in common.

It was the view of JIU that the main avenue for improvement lay in co-operative actions in acquisition, in information tools, in the use of those acquired collections and tools, in greater scope of services to users, and in the progressive creation of a network of the system's libraries.

JIU submitted four recommendations. Recommendation 1 called for the establishment of an inter-library panel to meet periodically to establish a practical co-operative work programme, and report jointly to the organizations on actions taken and needed. Possible topics for the panel's consideration included common indexing vocabularies, improved standards and training for library staff, microform programmes and joint use of technologies, inter-library co-operation at local duty stations, strengthening depository library networks and closer working relationships with public libraries and international library organizations. Recommendations 2 and 3 concerned management improvement efforts and the introduction of new technology that could be undertaken by the individual libraries of the United Nations system. Recommendation 4 dealt exclusively with problems related to the library services at Geneva, calling for their streamlining and modernization.

In his comments on the JIU report, the Secretary-General<sup>(14)</sup> agreed with most of the recommendations, indicating possible steps that could be taken to implement them, but also drawing attention to their financial implications. He believed that the new mechanism to be established for improving co-operative activities among libraries should be integrated in the ACC framework. It should have a few realistic goals to be achieved within a specific time-frame, a priority being an agreement on the application of international rules and standards to facilitate development of common bibliographic control over United Nations documentation.

The Secretary-General generally endorsed the recommendations on management improvement and on the use of new technology. He also agreed that most of the problems mentioned with respect to library services at Geneva existed in varying degrees, and suggested that JIU might wish to undertake further studies into two important questions in this regard: space requirements and staffing, and grading of the library personnel.

In general, ACC<sup>(15)</sup> felt that establishing an inter-agency panel could be a first step towards implementing library co-operation. The panel could consider measures to improve compatibility among computerized operations and encourage co-operative ventures to apply new techniques and promote information interchange. In that connection, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations felt that informal ad hoc consultations to deal with specific needs and problems as they arose appeared more cost-effective and practical than an inter-library panel. It was accepted that co-operation among the libraries to set up new management standards and test the fast-growing technologies could only be beneficial to the whole system. It was mentioned, however, that in a period of budgetary constraints, it would be more reasonable to set limited goals to be achieved in a short period than to try to embrace the whole range of problems at the same time.

While concurring with JIU on the need for system-wide library co-operation, ACABQ<sup>(16)</sup> noted the hesitation of the Secretary-General and ACC concerning the organizational and financial implications of the proposed inter-library panel. It therefore recommended that ACC be invited to review the proposal further to determine whether or not such an approach would best achieve the intended objective. Should ACC decide to establish the panel, ACABQ recommended that the terms of reference be defined clearly and suggested that ad hoc meetings every three or four years might be sufficient. As to the problems at Geneva, ACABQ hoped that prompt action would be taken by the Secretary-General. It would consider any recommendations in that regard or other proposals to improve management or introduce technological innovations in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In section III of resolution 39/242, the General Assembly, having considered the JIU report and related comments, and taking account of the views expressed during the debate in the Fifth Committee, concurred with ACABQ's recommendations and requested the Secretary-General to implement them.

During discussion of the JIU report in the Fifth Committee, the Ukrainian SSR drew attention to the additional appropriations entailed by the proposed inter-library panel and said that it shared the view of ACABQ that the proposal be given further consideration. Also sharing that view was the United States, which observed that the central issue was that the libraries were not meeting user requirements and that greater effort was needed to identify and service the real information needs of the United Nations system. Canada supported establishing such a panel provided it was granted a mandate to encourage substantive results, notably a realistic, comprehensive plan of action; a background paper should be prepared outlining proposed terms of reference, objectives and a schedule of meetings. As to the introduction of new technology, user requirements should first be identified and the costs weighed against projected benefits.

UN Postal Administration

In 1984, gross revenue of the United Nations Postal Administration from the sale of philatelic items at United Nations Headquarters and at overseas offices totalled nearly $5 million. Revenue from the sale of stamps for philatelic purposes was retained by the United Nations; revenue from stamps used for postage from Headquarters was retained by the United States Postal Service under an agreement between the United Nations and the United States Government. Similarly, revenue from stamps used for postage from the United Nations Office at Geneva and from the Vienna International Centre was retained by the Swiss and Austrian postal authorities, respectively, in accordance with agreements between the Organization and the Swiss and Austrian Governments.

Six commemorative stamp issues and two souvenir cards were released during the year.

The first issue, on the subject of the "International Conference on Population, 1984", was released on 3 February in denominations of 20 and 40 United States cents, 1.20 Swiss francs (SwF) and 7 Austrian schillings (S). A souvenir card was issued on the same day.

The second issue, on the theme of "World Food Day, 1984", was released on 15 March in denominations of 20 and 40 cents, SwF 0.50 and 0.80, and S 4.50 and 6.

The third issue, commemorating "World Heritage—UNESCO", was released on 18 April in denominations of 20 and 50 cents, SwF 0.50 and 0.70, and S 3.50 and 15.

The fourth issue, of 29 May, was on the theme of "A Future for Refugees". Denominations were in 20 and 50 cents, SwF 0.35 and 1.50, and S 4.50 and 8.50.

On 21 September, a group of 16 stamps was issued in the commemorative "Flag Series"—the fifth group in that series, in denominations of 20 cents each. This was the fifth commemorative issue.

The sixth and final issue, on the theme "International Youth Year" (1985), was released on 15 November in denominations of 20 and 35 cents, SwF 1.20 and S 3.50 and 6.50. A souvenir card was also released on that date.

The number of first-day covers serviced for the various issues in 1984 was:

Issue of special postage stamps

Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of December 1983,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a financial report on the project to issue special postage stamps,<sup>(2)</sup> which formed part of an analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations (see Chapter I of this section).

The Secretary-General stated that the final gross proceeds from the special postage stamp issue on the conservation and protection of nature, on sale from November 1982 until November 1983,<sup>(3)</sup> amounted to $1,956,461 which, after deducting $706,666 for expenses, yielded a net revenue of $1,249,795. As stipulated by the 1983 Assembly resolution,<sup>(1)</sup> one half of the net revenue had been allocated to UNEP to contribute to financing projects promoting the conservation and protection of nature and endangered species; the other half had been placed in the United Nations Special Account.

The Executive Director of UNEP was to submit a report to the UNEP Governing Council on the results of the projects financed from the special issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 39/239 A on 18 December 1984.

Issue of special postage stamps

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 35/113 of 10 December 1980, 36/116 B of 10 December 1981, 37/13 of 16 November 1982 and 38/228 A of 20 December 1983,

Noting with concern that the deficit of the Organization is projected to increase to $356 million by 31 December 1984,

Mindful of the necessity to place the finances of the Organization on a sound footing,

Taking note of the relevant statements of Member States in the Fifth Committee on this item,

Noting with appreciation the implementation of the postage stamps project as envisaged in resolution 35/113, the utilization of half of its sale proceeds for the promotion of the noble cause of conservation and protection of nature and endangered species and the allocation of the remaining half to the United Nations Special Account,

Bearing in mind that, pending comprehensive settlement of the differences which have given rise to the financial emergency of the Organization, partial or interim steps could enhance the liquidity of the Organization and alleviate its financial difficulties to some extent,

1. Invites the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to issue special postage stamps on the critical social and economic crisis in Africa with a view to sensitizing the international community to the problems in Africa;

2. Decides that:

(a) One half of the revenues so earned shall be earmarked for the implementation of objectives as detailed in the Declaration on the Critical Economic Situation in Africa adopted by the General Assembly on 3 December 1984;

(b) The remaining revenues shall be placed in a special account;

3. Further decides that the provisions of regulations 5.2 and 7.1 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations shall not apply to the sale proceeds of the above-mentioned postage stamps;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to give appropriate publicity to the above-mentioned postage stamps, with the aim of mobilizing the support of all States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the philatelic community;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fortieth session a progress report on the status of the project on the issue of special postage stamps.

PART TWO

Intergovernmental organizations related to the United Nations

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 1984, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued its activities to accelerate and enlarge the contributions of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world and to ensure that the assistance provided was not used for military purposes. Continued emphasis was placed on safeguards, the safety of nuclear power stations, nuclear fuel-cycle services and the management of nuclear wastes, and on the provision of technical assistance to member States, particularly the developing countries.

At the end of 1984, the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons<sup>a</sup> (Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT)) had 122 non-nuclear-weapon States parties and 98 per cent of the world's nuclear facilities outside the nuclear-weapon States were under IAEA safeguards. Trends in the Agency's safeguards programme were towards greater effectiveness through structural and management changes, improvements in safeguards implementation, increased manpower for inspections and new instruments and equipment. During the year, negotiations were concluded between the Agency and the USSR for an agreement relating to its offer to place some of its peaceful nuclear installations under IAEA safeguards.

The Agency's efforts to help strengthen nuclear safety and radiation protection included three new initiatives: a scheme to make available to member States radiation protection advisory teams to assist in defining long-term technical co-operation projects in radiation protection; extension of IAEA's radiation protection service to include provision of technical advice to member States on establishing national radiation protection services; and an international nuclear safety advisory group, composed of individuals of high standing from the industrial, research and regulatory sectors, to consider current nuclear safety issues without involving itself in regulatory matters or the development of safety standards.

The IAEA Nuclear Safety Standards (NUSS) programme continued to progress; emphasis shifted towards promoting implementation of NUSS documents. During 1984, the Agency's regulations for the safe transport of radioactive materials were updated and revision of its recommended regulations was completed and published in the safety series.

During the year, IAEA continued to assist in preparations for the United Nations Conference for the Promotion of International Co-operation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, originally scheduled for 1986 (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter X).

China became a member of IAEA on 1 January 1984 bringing the number of member States to 112, including virtually all States with significant nuclear programmes.

The twenty-eighth session of the IAEA General Conference was held at Vienna, Austria, from 24 to 28 September. The Conference decided, among other things: to demand that South Africa submit its nuclear installations and facilities to IAEA inspection, and to call on member States to end nuclear co-operation with South Africa, in particular the transfer of fissionable material and technology to it, and to stop purchases of Namibian uranium; to demand that Israel undertake not to carry out further attacks on nuclear facilities in Iraq or other countries; and to request the IAEA Director General to assist in securing financing for nuclear power projects in developing countries, in particular the least developed.

To mark the twentieth anniversary of co-operation between IAEA and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) in promoting world food production, the FAO Director-General addressed the opening meeting of the General Conference.

The Board of Governors met four times during 1984, in February, June, July/August and September at Vienna.

Agency safeguards responsibilities

As at 31 December 1984, 122 non-nuclear-weapon States and three nuclear-weapon States (USSR, United Kingdom, United States) had ratified or acceded to NPT. Safeguards agreements with IAEA, concluded under article III of the Treaty, had entered into force for 78 non-nuclear-weapon States parties. Fourteen of those agreements had also been concluded pursuant to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco). In addition, safeguards agreements were in force with two States pursuant to the

Tlatelolco Treaty only. Negotiations were concluded to place some peaceful nuclear installations in the USSR under IAEA safeguards—it was expected that the agreement would enter into force in 1985. Similar agreements were in force with France (1981), the United Kingdom (1978) and the United States (1980).

Agency safeguards were applied under other agreements in 10 non-nuclear-weapon States not party to either NPT or the Tlatelolco Treaty but which have significant nuclear activities—Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Israel, Pakistan, South Africa and Spain—as well as in Viet Nam (which is a party to NPT).

At the end of 1984, safeguards applied by IAEA in non-nuclear-weapon States covered material in 165 power reactors, 174 research reactors and critical assemblies, 6 conversion, 38 fuel fabrication, 6 reprocessing and 4 enrichment plants, and in some 480 other installations.

Technical assistance

During 1984, more than 80 countries received IAEA technical assistance in the form of expert services, equipment and/or training. A total of 825 fellows carried out individual field studies and 850 persons participated in 51 group training courses. Technical assistance provided by IAEA in 1984 exceeded $32 million, some 22 per cent higher than in 1983.

The Agency served as executing agency for 23 projects in 19 countries and two regions financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); in three additional countries the IAEA provided UNDP-financed assistance in an associated agency capacity. Ten projects were completed during the year and four new ones approved.

In 1984, income to the IAEA Technical Assistance and Co-operation Fund, derived from voluntary contributions of member States and additional income, rose to over $22 million, 15.5 per cent more than in 1983. Extrabudgetary funds totalled $9.1 million, a decrease from the exceptionally high level attained in 1983. UNDP and in-kind resources at the Agency's disposal amounted to $2.5 million and $2.1 million respectively; their shares of the total available resources declined for the third consecutive year.

Programme emphasis varied from region to region in 1984, with agriculture the leading field for Africa, Latin America and the programme as a whole. Industry and hydrology ranked first in Asia and the Pacific, nuclear engineering and technology in Europe, and general atomic energy development in the Middle East.

An important development in 1984 was the increase to about 46 per cent in the share of nationals from developing countries serving on Agency-assisted projects. Of 51 training courses conducted during the year, 31 were held in developing countries.

Agency staff carried out 378 assignments in 1984; support was provided to 770 ongoing projects by 108 technical officers.

Nuclear power

At the end of 1984, 345 nuclear power plants with a total capacity of some 220,000 megawatts (electrical) accounted for around 13 per cent of the world's electricity-generating capacity. The record of operating nuclear power plants continued to be excellent; 3,470 reactor years had accumulated without any significant spread of radioactivity to the environment or any radiation-induced fatality.

The Agency continued to assist developing member States to introduce nuclear-powered electricity-generating plants with planning surveys, feasibility studies, and development of manpower and infrastructure. It also continued preparing a series of guidebooks on, for example, energy and nuclear power planning for developing countries, expansion planning for electrical generating systems, engineering and science education for nuclear power, industrial support for nuclear power, nuclear power project management, quality assurance programme auditing, operation of nuclear power plants in weak grids, qualification of nuclear power plant operations personnel, and nuclear power plant instrumentation and control.

In 1984, six interregional training courses, three of which focused on special aspects of nuclear power plant safety, were attended by about 200 participants from developing countries.

IAEA continued to develop its energy data bank and to collect and disseminate information on nuclear technology and the technical aspects of nuclear power plants. A computerized power-reactor information system containing nuclear power plant operating-experience data provided by member States since 1971, was expanded and used to analyse the technical performance of operating nuclear power plants.

Environment

During 1984, IAEA continued to attach importance to its waste management programme. A senior advisory group met in October to review the programme and make recommendations regarding its work in handling, treatment, storage and conditioning of radioactive wastes; decontamination and decommissioning of nuclear facilities; underground disposal of radioactive wastes; and environmental and radiological safety aspects of waste management.

In the area of handling and treatment of radioactive waste, an advisory group reviewed techniques and practices for the handling, transportation and storage of low- and intermediate-level waste prior to treatment. A code of practice on the management of radioactive waste from nuclear power plants was finalized and a safety guide on the design of radioactive waste management systems for nuclear power plants was completed.

A seminar on site investigation techniques and assessment methods for the underground disposal of radioactive wastes was held (Sofia, Bulgaria, February) and work was begun on a code of practice for management of wastes from the mining and milling of uranium and thorium ores and on a paper on standards and criteria for the underground disposal of high-level wastes.

Work continued on various environmental aspects of disposal of radioactive waste at sea. Revision of a document defining radioactive material unsuitable for dumping at sea neared completion.

Among material published in 1984 relating to environmental aspects of nuclear energy were: the proceedings of the 1983 International Conference on Radioactive Waste Management,<sup>b</sup> an IAEA/World Health Organization (WHO) booklet on nuclear power, the environment and man, the fifteenth annual edition of waste management research abstracts, three technical reports reviewing the technology of waste handling and treatment, five reports containing guidance on the safe underground disposal and sea-dumping of radioactive waste, and technical documents on the behaviour of radium in waterways and aquifers and on sediments and pollution in waterways.

Nuclear safety

At the end of 1984, with only five documents in the NUSS series of safety codes and guides for nuclear power plants to be completed, the programme's emphasis shifted towards revising the documents, preparing guidance manuals for their use, and promoting their implementation by means of training courses, seminars and visits by experts to member States.

The operational safety review teams (OSART) programme, established in 1983, sent review teams to the Philippines and Yugoslavia. The team which visited the Philippines was the first to review a nuclear power plant prior to its going into operation, the emphasis being on the adequacy of preparations for safe operation. OSART reviews were expected not only to enhance nuclear safety for specific plants, but also to contribute to the exchange of information between OSART members, observers and regulatory and operating organizations of the visited countries. They also provided insights with respect to updating the Agency's technical assistance programmes.

Under the Agency's radiological safety programme, work focused on elaborating guidelines for implementing the system of dose limitation set forth in the revised Basic Safety Standards for Radiation Protection; guidelines were elaborated for the design of radiation protection systems and for occupational monitoring, and work started on formulating principles for operational radiation protection activities. In co-operation with WHO, a symposium was organized on the assessment of radioactive contamination in man. Work on two technical reports on protection of workers in nuclear installations was completed.

By the end of the year, 17 countries had joined the Agency's incident reporting system which collected and disseminated information on significant incidents at nuclear power plants; however, incident reports were received from 20 countries. Two technical meetings were held, one to improve the system and another—organized in co-operation with the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development—to evaluate significant incidents.

The Agency initiated a scheme for making available to member States the services of radiation protection advisory teams to assist in defining long-term technical co-operation projects in radiation protection; China and Iraq were the first countries visited. Missions visited Kenya, the Sudan, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zambia to advise on the establishment of national radiation protection services.

Advisory services continued throughout the year to member States with developing nuclear programmes. Teams visited four countries to advise on nuclear power plant siting, licensing and safety analysis and other nuclear power plant safety matters. Advice was provided to several member States on the safety of research reactors.

Safety information was disseminated worldwide through publications and was also provided in a number of interregional, regional and in-country training courses: 65 technical co-operation projects concerning radiation protection were handled and 13 missions visited developing member States; fellowships in radiation protection were arranged for 43 persons from developing countries; a training course on physical protection of nuclear facilities and materials was held at Madrid, Spain, and attended by 18 participants from seven member States; a revised version of the Agency's regulations for the safe transport of radioactive materials was completed; and guidelines on mutual emergency assistance arrangements were published.

Nuclear information

The International Nuclear Information System, with 73 participating countries and 14 international organizations, in 1984 enlarged its bibliographic data base on nuclear literature to some 888,000 items.

Life sciences

In co-operation with WHO and several other international organizations, IAEA continued in 1984 to promote the use of nuclear techniques in medicine, biology and health-related environmental research and improvement of the accuracy of radiation dosimetry, with emphasis on the needs of developing member States.

A symposium was held on high-dose dosimetry (Vienna, October). Seminars for the Asia and Pacific region dealt with quality control in radioimmunoassay (Bangkok, Thailand, December) and tissue banking of radiation-sterilized grafts for clinical use (Quezon City, Philippines, May). The IAEA/WHO Secondary Standard Dosimetry Laboratories (SSDLs) network advisory group met to discuss the status and future of the network (Vienna, November); another advisory group dealt with immunodiagnosis of parasitic infections using nuclear techniques (Vienna, May).

In 1984, China and Indonesia each nominated a dosimetry laboratory for membership in the IAEA/WHO network of SSDLs, bringing the number of member laboratories to 48.

Twenty-two co-ordinated research programmes were carried out during 1984. These included: maintenance plans for nuclear laboratories; quality control procedures for nuclear medicine instruments; data processing for internal quality control of radioimmunoassay; nuclear medicine procedures for the diagnosis and management of thyroid disorders; radioimmunoassay of thyroid-related hormones; application of nuclear-related techniques in occupational health; nuclear and other techniques to measure human daily dietary intakes of nutritionally important trace elements; radiation sterilization practices for local medical supplies (Africa and Middle East); radiation sterilization practices for tissue grafts (Asia and the Pacific); chromosomal aberration analysis in radiation protection; nuclear techniques for detecting parasitic antigens in body fluids; nuclear techniques for diagnosis of tropical parasitic diseases in Asian countries; development of nuclear and related techniques for monitoring malaria vectors; irradiation and radioisotopic techniques for developing defined vaccines for schistosomiasis; possible use of high-LET (linear energy transfer) radiation in cancer therapy; improvement of cancer therapy by combining conventional radiation and physical or chemical means; radiation treatment of sewage sludge for safe reutilization; and hair mineral analysis in assessing environmental mineral pollutants.

Training provided by the Agency included: a workshop on maintenance of nuclear instruments in Malaysia for participants from Asia and the Pacific; a workshop on radioimmunoassay in Mexico; an interregional training course and study tour on nuclear medicine in the USSR; a training course for radiotherapy technologists in Japan for participants from South-East Asia; and a training course on dosimetry in Brazil.

An IAEA/WHO technical co-operation project on the use of brachytherapy in treating cancer of the cervix, begun in Egypt in 1983, continued; a second training/demonstration course in November was attended by 31 participants.

Physical sciences and laboratories

IAEA's role in co-ordinating the international effort in controlled fusion continued through the International Tokamak Reactor (INTOR) Workshop, in which scientists from the major fusion laboratories of the European Atomic Energy Community, Japan, the USSR and the United States participated. Work on optimization of the INTOR design and cost/benefit/risk analysis of design alternatives also continued during 1984.

A UNDP-supported project on industrial applications of isotopes and radiation technology in Asia and the Pacific continued towards its goal of introducing these technologies in radiation processing for vulcanization of natural latex, curing surface coatings of wood products and cross-linking of products, as well as nucleonic control systems in the paper, steel and mineral industries, non-destructive testing and tracer technology.

In 1984, renewed emphasis was placed on programmes for the application of nuclear techniques to mineral exploration and exploitation. Work continued on the development of new radiopharmaceutical products and on isotope production by use of accelerators and research reactors.

Within the isotope hydrology programme, IAEA supported 37 technical co-operation projects in 29 countries, some of which were undertaken in co-operation with other United Nations organizations; the projects involved the use of isotope techniques in solving hydrological problems in water resource development, including the problem of sedimentation and sediment transport.

Two co-ordinated research programmes on isotope hydrology continued—one in the Far East, financed by Australia, and the other in Latin America, financed by the Federal Republic of Germany. A second co-ordinated research programme was launched in Latin America on the use of isotopic and geochemical techniques in geothermal exploration; at the end of the year, eight countries were participating in the programme, financed by Italy.

A regional training course for hydrologists and hydrogeologists (Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, November) studied the potential use and scope of isotope techniques for various hydrological problems encountered in water development activities. Two regional seminars were held in Latin America during the year—one in Mexico on isotopic and geochemical techniques in geothermics and the other in Argentina on isotope hydrology.

The Agency continued to provide nuclear data services to member States. In the course of 1984, some 1,600 nuclear data reports, 60,000 sets of numerical data and more than 500 data processing computer codes were distributed to scientists on request.

Within the framework of the transfer of nuclear data technology to developing member States, IAEA held a four-week workshop on nuclear model computer codes at the International Centre for Theoretical Physics, Trieste, Italy. It continued to provide equipment, fellowships and experts for an interregional project on nuclear data techniques and instrumentation designed specifically for the training of nuclear scientists in developing countries and, at IAEA headquarters, five fellows received training in nuclear data compilation and computer processing techniques.

In 1984, the Centre celebrated its twentieth anniversary with a commemorative meeting on plasma physics, which was the subject of the first course held at the Centre in 1964. The Centre, a joint undertaking with UNESCO, continued research and training-for-research in plasma and nuclear physics, non-conventional energy, elementary particle physics and fundamental theory, applications of physics in biology, geology, and medicine, physics and development, and mathematics. It organized in June and July a workshop on high-energy physics and cosmology which attracted 88 scientists, 53 of them from developing countries. During the same period, 130 scientists took part in the eighth Trieste conference on particle physics.

The IAEA Laboratory at Seibersdorf, Austria, provided support services for the Agency's food and agriculture, life sciences, physical sciences and safeguards programmes. During 1984, agricultural work emphasized fertilizer utilization, residues left by agrochemicals, mutation breeding, and the sterile-male technique for insect control. Medical programmes included studies on trace elements in human hair and animal bone. A new medical applications and dosimetry laboratory was commissioned at Seibersdorf as the central reference for a growing network of dosimetry laboratories in member States. The Safeguards Analytical Laboratory, also at Seibersdorf, analysed nuclear fuel-cycle samples collected by IAEA safeguards inspectors.

The International Laboratory of Marine Radioactivity in Monaco, with the co-operation of the United Nations Environment Programme and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), conducted studies in the occurrence, distribution and behaviour of radio-nuclides and other pollutants in the Mediterranean Sea and the Pacific, Atlantic and Indian Oceans. Research activities related to the disposal of radioactive wastes in the oceans were established with several countries.

Food and agriculture

Under a joint programme with FAO, the Agency continued to help developing member States to improve their agriculture and food production through the application of isotopes, ionizing radiation and related techniques. Support was given to over 130 technical co-operation projects in 54 developing countries. Some 400 agricultural institutes and laboratories in 67 member States took part in 35 co-ordinated research programmes, for several of which extrabudgetary support was received from the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and Sweden.

Work continued on insect control, particularly of the Mediterranean fruit fly in Egypt and Peru and the tsetse fly in Nigeria. Other projects were designed to improve crop and livestock production.

Secretariat

As at the end of 1984, 1,861 staff members were employed by IAEA. Of these, 684—drawn from 76 countries—were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,177 were in the General Service and Maintenance and Operatives Service categories.

Budget

The IAEA General Conference in September 1984 adopted a regular budget of $95,025,000 for 1985. The target for voluntary contributions to finance the Agency's technical assistance and co-operation programme for 1985 was set at $26 million.

Chapter II

International Labour Organisation (ILO)

During 1984, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) continued activities in its six major programme areas: promotion of policies to create employment and satisfy basic human needs; development of human resources; improvement of working and living conditions and environment; promoting social security; strengthening of industrial relations and tripartite (government/employer/worker) co-operation; and the advancement of human rights in the social and labour fields. The main instruments of action continued to be standard-setting, technical co-operation activities, research and publishing.

The ILO membership reached 151 with the admission of Solomon Islands on 28 May.

Meetings

The seventieth session of the International Labour Conference, held at Geneva from 6 to 26 June 1984, was attended by some 1,850 delegates and advisers from 139 countries. The Conference had before it the annual report of the ILO Governing Body, the report of the Director-General, focusing on international labour standards, and the twentieth special report on the effect of apartheid on labour and employment in South Africa.

The Conference adopted an International Labour Recommendation on employment policy. A general discussion was held on the ILO International Programme for the Improvement of Working Conditions and Environment (PIACT) (see below). Following first discussions on occupational health services and revision of the Convention concerning Statistics of Wages and Hours of Work, 1938, the Conference adopted resolutions by which it decided to place these questions on the agenda of its 1985 session. Other resolutions concerned productivity improvement and aid to the least developed countries.

The Conference elected members of the ILO Governing Body for the three-year term 1984-1987.

In accordance with usual practice, a tripartite Conference committee examined the application by member States of ILO Conventions and Recommendations, and reviewed the application of ILO standards concerning the reduction of hours of work, weekly rest and holidays with pay.

A special sitting of the Conference was addressed by President Luis Alberto Monge of Costa Rica.

The Fourth Tripartite Technical Meeting for Mines Other than Coal Mines (Geneva, 11-20 January) adopted conclusions on industrial relations and occupational safety and health, and resolutions concerning job creation, working time and multinational enterprises.

A Tripartite Conference on Apartheid (Lusaka, Zambia, 4-8 May) adopted conclusions on intensification of international action against apartheid in all fields and, in particular, recommended the strengthening of the economies of the front-line and neighbouring States in order to reduce their dependence on South Africa. The Tripartite Conference's conclusions and the twentieth special report by the ILO Director-General on the application of the 1964 Declaration concerning the Policy of Apartheid in South Africa (updated in 1981<sup>a</sup>) were considered in June by the ILO Conference Committee on Apartheid, which adopted a number of recommendations for strengthening ILO activities and those of its members in the struggle against apartheid.

At its twenty-fourth session (Geneva, 20-28 September), the Joint Maritime Commission adopted resolutions on safety, working conditions, social security, health protection and medical care for the world's seafarers.

Two sets of conclusions, on employment and income security and on occupational safety and health, were adopted by the eleventh session of the Textiles Committee (Geneva, 10-18 October). The Committee also adopted resolutions on multinational enterprises, free trade zones in textiles, technological change, equal pay for equal work, migrant workers, and youth and children in the textiles industry.

The first session of the Joint Committee for Postal and Telecommunications Services (Geneva, 27 November-5 December) adopted conclusions on methods of wage determination and safety and health. Resolutions were adopted on working hours, freedom of association, technological change, women and workers with family responsibilities, and youth unemployment.

At its first session (Geneva, 5-13 December), the Food and Drink Industries Committee adopted conclusions on the social effects of technological developments in the industry and on occupational safety and health. By its resolutions, the Committee urged Governments to give priority to achieving food self-sufficiency, and called for new forms of work organization to enable workers of both sexes to realize their full potential.

Working environment

Approved by the ILO Governing Body in 1976, PIACT continued to encourage member States to set definite objectives for improving working conditions and the working environment. It used all the means of action at ILO's disposal, including standard-setting, studies and research, tripartite meetings, technical co-operation and the dissemination of information. In June, the ILO Conference evaluated PIACT and adopted a resolution noting that the programme enjoyed the full support of Governments, employers and workers, as well as conclusions which set out an ambitious agenda for action at the national and international levels.

A number of technical co-operation activities were designed to assist member States in establishing policies for the improvement of working conditions and environment through the organization of tripartite national seminars or multidisciplinary team missions. Others sought to strengthen existing structures, systems, procedures and technical capabilities, or establish new ones where appropriate. A multidisciplinary team visited Portugal; national tripartite conferences or seminars were organized in the Ivory Coast, Peru and the Philippines and a needs assessment mission visited Nigeria. A technical advisory mission visited Bolivia to assist in preparing a project aimed at strengthening the institutional machinery for programme development and a similar project begun in Indonesia in 1982 was completed and plans for a second phase made.

Training activities were increased and tripartite seminars and symposia were organized in Indonesia, the Philippines and Thailand. An innovative consultancy and training programme was organized for the benefit of small-scale enterprises in Asia, and training materials suitable for the needs of various target groups were developed.

Information dissemination activities were strengthened. The Clearing-house for the Dissemination of Information on Conditions of Work published two issues of Conditions of Work: A Cumulative Digest, a biannual publication containing fact sheets on specific technical subjects, annotated bibliographies, listings of forthcoming meetings and information on research in progress in different countries.

Collaboration with the World Health Organization (WHO) and other United Nations agencies in occupational safety and health continued, and included participation in the United Nations Environment Programme/WHO/ILO International Programme on Chemical Safety, as well as close co-operation with the International Atomic Energy Agency and WHO in protecting workers against ionizing radiation.

In 1984, the International Occupational Safety and Health Information Centre added two new centres to its network of national centres, bringing the total to 48.

World Employment Programme

The World Employment Programme (WEP) was launched in 1969 to assist Governments to promote an increase in employment and income, alleviate poverty and satisfy basic needs. The Declaration of Principles and Programme of Action, adopted by the 1976 World Employment Conference and endorsed by the 1979 International Labour Conference, reinforced WEP's central role in the world-wide attack on unemployment and poverty. A major event under WEP was the adoption in June by the International Labour Conference of the Employment Policy (Supplementary Provisions) Recommendation, 1984.

WEP continued to account for approximately one third of ILO's total technical co-operation activities, mainly in special works programmes, manpower and employment planning, labour market information, technology, rural development, women, refugees and population. Advisory missions at the country and regional levels remained important elements of WEP. Much of this work was carried out by WEP regional employment teams in Africa, southern Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Field activities

During 1984, ILO spent more than $83 million on technical co-operation activities (about 11.9 per cent less than in 1983) to promote employment, develop human resources and social institutions, and improve living and working conditions.

Most of this expenditure ($38.1 million) continued to be financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). The ILO regular programme provided $8.4 million, while expenditure funded from multi-bilateral arrangements and other special programmes was $32.4 million. Activities financed by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA) accounted for $4.4 million.

A breakdown of expenditure on technical co-operation by field of activity and source of funds, and by country, territory, region or organization, is shown in the following tables.

Educational activities

The International Institute for Labour Studies at Geneva, an ILO centre for advanced labour and social studies, held its nineteenth annual international internship course on active labour policy development from 25 April to 6 June 1984 in English. Twenty-four participants from 18 countries in Africa, the Americas, Asia and Europe attended the course which focused on: processes of economic and social change; demographic, employment and related aspects of development; comparative industrial relations; and the role of ILO in formulating and implementing labour and social policy.

The Fourth Tripartite International Course on Labour-Management Relations in the Petroleum Industry (Geneva, 2-19 October), organized by the Institute, was attended by some 30 participants from Governments, employers' organizations and trade unions from petroleum-producing countries and those in which refining was a major industry. The general theme was the respective roles of Government, employers, trade unions and workers in labour-management relations in the context of the petroleum industry. Specifically, the topics covered were: the economic structure and environment of the industry; the structure of employers' and workers' organizations, including questions of recognition, workers' representation and participation in decision-making within the enterprise; collective bargaining; dispute resolution and grievance adjustment; working conditions; and in-plant labour-management relations.

The Institute also organized a number of seminars or meetings, including a tripartite national seminar in Israel on employment and unemployment problems and a meeting in Hungary for some 25 participants from European labour courts and related institutions.

During 1984, the ILO International Centre for Advanced Technical and Vocational Training at Turin, Italy, organized 68 courses and seminars, attended by 1,387 participants from 124 countries, and granted fellowships or financed study tours for 486 individuals. There was increased demand for the training of trainers and managers, particularly in the energy, co-operatives and transport sectors, and in workers' education. Management courses and seminars represented almost a third of the Centre's total activity. Seminars and workshops implemented either partly or wholly in the field included: training of technicians in job analysis and classification, and training trainers in road maintenance (Africa); training of trainers for supervisory development, and audio-visual aids technology (Asia); management training for industrial co-operatives, and training of trainers (Europe); and small enterprise development in the non-informal rural sector, and training of trainers (Latin America).

Publications

ILO's published research covered a wide range of topical social and labour questions. New volumes issued in 1984 included: Clandestine Employment: The Situation in the Industrialised Market Economy Countries; Financing Social Security: The Options; Income Distribution and Economic Development: An Analytical Survey; Into the Twenty-first Century: The Development of Social Security; Managing Construction Projects: A Guide to Processes and Procedures; Profession: Journalist—A Study on the Working Conditions of Journalists; The Reduction of Working Time: Scope and Implications in Industrialised Market Economies; Safety in the Use of Asbestos: An ILO code of Practice; The Trade Union Situation and Industrial Relations in Norway; The Trade Union Situation and Industrial Relations in Hungary; and Voluntary Arbitration of Interest Disputes: A Practical Guide.

The first volume of World Labour Report, surveying the main labour issues in the world, was published, and the forty-fourth (1984) issue of the Year Book of Labour Statistics appeared. Regular periodicals and technical series continued to be published, including the bimonthly International Labour Review, the quarterly Social and Labour Bulletin and the biannual Legislative Series.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the total number of full-time staff under permanent, fixed-term and short-term appointments at ILO headquarters and elsewhere was 2,870. Of these, 1,399 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 116 nationalities) and 1,471 were in the General Service or Maintenance categories. Of the Professional staff, 614 were assigned to technical co-operation projects.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The 49-member Council of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the organization's governing body between biennial meetings of the FAO Conference, held its eighty-sixth session at Rome, Italy, from 19 to 30 November 1984. The Council expressed grave concern at the extremely serious food situation in Africa, particularly in Ethiopia and countries south of the Sahara, and urged Governments and international organizations to assist those countries in preventing the death of those most threatened by food shortages and in rehabilitating their agricultural and livestock sectors.

The Council also expressed concern over the destruction and depletion of the world's forests and the consequent harm to the environment and agricultural production. It noted that the Ninth World Forestry Congress would be held in Mexico in 1985 and declared 1985 the International Year of the Forest.

During 1984, FAO held conferences in each of its five regions to enable member nations to assess problems specific to their regions and to identify priorities for the next biennium. The conferences also promoted co-operation among countries and reviewed FAO's performance within each region.

At the Conference for the Near East (Aden, Democratic Yemen, 11-15 March); representatives of 26 nations discussed education and training for agricultural and rural development, regional agricultural price policies, agricultural investment strategies, development of agro-industries, and prospects for regional co-operation.

The Conference for Asia and the Pacific (Islamabad, Pakistan, 24 April-3 May), attended by representatives from 21 member countries and three observer nations and by observers from 15 international organizations, discussed training for agricultural and rural development, agricultural price policies, development of renewable energy sources, and the performance of selected FAO regional commissions.

The Conference for Africa (Harare, Zimbabwe, 16-25 July), attended by representatives from 41 nations, discussed training for agricultural and rural development, agricultural pricing policies, monitoring the implementation of the 1980 Lagos Plan of Action for the economic development of Africa,<sup>a</sup> follow-up to the 1979 World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development (WCARRD),<sup>b</sup> irrigation development, implementation of the Pan-African Rinderpest Campaign, and development and transfer of food and agricultural technology. The Conference approved the Harare Declaration, a regional call to action, and adopted a resolution expressing concern about continuing acute food shortages in Africa and appealing to the international community for additional food aid and support for agricultural development.

The Conference for Latin America and the Caribbean (Buenos Aires, Argentina, 6-15 August), attended by representatives from 29 countries, including 16 Ministers of Agriculture, discussed education and training for rural development, agricultural pricing policies, food security and follow-up to WCARRD. The Conference adopted the Buenos Aires Declaration, which emphasized the close relationship between the financial problems of the region and the deterioration of the food situation. The Declaration also asked developed countries to remove protectionist measures which restricted the development of Latin American agricultural trade, requested countries to redouble efforts to reach international agreement on tropical products, particularly sugar and bananas, and condemned the use of food as a political weapon.

The Conference for Europe (Reykjavik, Iceland, 17-21 September), attended by representatives of 27 countries, discussed research in support of agricultural policies, protection of European forest resources and follow-up to WCARRD. The Conference requested countries to promote public awareness of the importance of forests and called for legislation to strengthen long-term forest protection.

During 1984, membership of FAO remained unchanged at 156 countries.

World food and agricultural situation

In 1984, global food production increased by 4 per cent over 1983, with cereal production rising between 9 and 10 per cent, boosting estimated supplies at the beginning of the 1984/85 season to an all-time record level. However, in the course of the year the worst drought of the century reached its peak and well over 30 million people in 21 African countries were directly threatened by starvation.

Agricultural output of developing countries increased by 2.9 per cent in 1984, less than the average annual growth of 3.6 per cent of the preceding five years but above the population growth of about 2 per cent. In Asia, the combined increase of 1983 and 1984 was between 9 and 10 per cent. Latin America and the Near East had more favourable weather and production recovered somewhat. Some recovery in food and agricultural production was also recorded in Africa, which was due mainly to improved production in the coastal countries of western Africa. Many countries in southern and eastern Africa were afflicted by drought, with Chad, Ethiopia, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, the Niger and the Sudan having the most acute food supply problems.

In developed countries, food and agricultural production rose between 5 and 5.5 per cent. Much of the increase was a consequence of the North American recovery from the sharp decline of 1983. Western Europe also had exceptionally good harvests of cereals and some progress was made in the USSR and Eastern Europe. Crop production in the south-west Pacific fell a little from the very good results of 1983.

Funding

FAO funds come from three main sources: contributions by member nations, national trust funds and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

The regular programme, financed by members according to a scale of contributions set by the FAO Conference, supports field work and enables FAO to advise Governments, to provide a neutral forum for discussing issues related to food and agriculture and to provide the international farming community with information.

The FAO field programme is supported by UNDP and funds provided in trust mainly by individual countries or international financing institutions. In the early 1970s, UNDP provided well over 80 per cent of the funding for field programme expenditures but the amount of UNDP support available for development activities had decreased sharply. The main sources of alternative funding in 1984 were trust funds provided through the FAO Government Co-operative Programme. The trust funds allowed one nation to assist another directly, while enabling both countries to benefit from FAO expertise and technical backstopping for field projects. In 1984, trust funds provided $135 million in extrabudgetary funding for FAO field projects and UNDP provided $117 million.

Activities in 1984

Agricultural development. In order to help developing countries create the necessary framework for agricultural development, FAO collected, analysed and disseminated information, advised Governments on policy and planning, promoted consultations and co-operation among member countries, and provided technical assistance.

On 1 January 1984, FAO inaugurated the Research and Technology Development Division to promote individual and co-operative research efforts among member nations, provide technical assistance for remote sensing applications, coordinate environment and energy activities, and foster dissemination of information on research and technology related to agriculture, forestry and fisheries.

The International Information System for the Agricultural Sciences and Technology (AGRIS) entered its tenth year of operation. During the year, the number of participating centres reached 131 and the number of entries in the AGRIS data base passed the 1 million mark.

The FAO field programme in agricultural planning included a record 106 projects. Of these, 67 were in planning assistance and 12 in training. Another 27 technical assistance projects had a major planning component. Review and planning missions on agricultural research were organized for Burundi, Chad, Democratic Yemen, Egypt, Iraq, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, Mozambique, Nigeria, Panama and Uganda. At the regional level, research directors and project managers from nine African countries participated in a workshop on agricultural research management at Morogoro, United Republic of Tanzania. Co-operative research efforts were organized among the member nations of the Great Lake Economic Community (Burundi, Rwanda, Zaire) and among those of the Gambian River Basin Development Organization (Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Senegal).

Rural development. In accordance with the Programme of Action of the 1979 WCARRD, FAO continued to support national policies to alleviate rural poverty and to promote rural development. During the year, WCARRD follow-up missions visited Mozambique and Sri Lanka, bringing to 16 the number of countries which had requested such help since 1979; missions to Colombia, Costa Rica and Uganda were scheduled for 1985. In addition, in-depth studies on alleviating rural poverty were conducted in Bangladesh, Cameroon, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Indonesia, Nicaragua, the Republic of Korea and Sri Lanka. Another important part of WCARRD follow-up was direct technical assistance to member countries; in 1984, FAO provided technical support to 116 rural development field projects in 68 countries.

Food security. At the ninth session of the FAO Committee on World Food Security in April 1984, the Director-General proposed the development of a World Food Security Compact—a long-term framework for the establishment of a fully effective world food security system. The aim of the Compact would be to consolidate into an authoritative charter the consensus that already existed in a variety of texts. Adherence to it would not involve legally or financially binding obligations, but a moral commitment from Governments, non-governmental organizations and public figures.

Throughout the year, the FAO Global Information and Early Warning System continued to monitor changes in the balance of food supply and demand. In view of the precarious food situation in many African countries, the System paid special attention to that region and provided up-to-date information for the three 1984 reports of the FAO/World Food Programme (WFP) Task Force on Africa.

The FAO Food Security Assistance Scheme, which helped to build up national food security systems, including grain reserves, storage facilities and distribution capabilities, organized missions to 14 African countries during 1984 to help identify food security training needs.

In August 1984, FAO approved a project to assist in establishing a subregional food security system for the Andean Pact countries (Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Venezuela). The project would help to assess the food security situation, compile a list of projects to contribute to food security, and formulate a plan for a subregional early warning system.

Country projects with food security planning components were started in Bhutan, Costa Rica, Nepal and Rwanda. An FAO mission helped Yemen prepare a policy to improve food security through increased cereal production. Switzerland agreed to provide $2 million for a food security project for Bangladesh.

Women in agriculture. FAO was committed to supporting rural women in its programmes and projects at all stages and in all disciplines. Although women were responsible for growing more than half of the food produced in developing countries and for processing an even larger proportion of it, comparatively little agricultural assistance had been directed towards them. FAO's assistance priorities included strengthening rural women's organizations and improving women's access to training, inputs, services and credit. A working group on women in development was established to monitor progress and advise the Director-General accordingly.

A government consultation on the role of women in food production and food security in the African region (Harare, 10-13 July), which brought together delegates from 38 countries, effectively linked so-called women's issues to the basic issues of food production and food security. Similar meetings were held in the Near East and in Latin America during the year.

In 1984, the theme of FAO's World Food Day (16 October) was women in agriculture.

Land and water management. During 1984, FAO helped countries to assess the potential of land and water resources, and to promote their development on a sound environmental basis.

An important event in soil resource assessment was the publication of a study on the potential of land in the developing world to meet the food needs of future populations. The study, covering 117 countries, prompted the implementation of national follow-ups in Kenya, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand. Prepared with the support of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities and in collaboration with the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, the study revealed that large areas of land in the developing world would have insufficient potential to feed their populations if traditional farming methods continued. No fewer than 64 countries—29 of them in Africa—would be unable to feed their projected populations from their own land resources. Most, however, would be able to feed their people if they could raise the level of farming or slow down the rate of population growth.

FAO estimated that between 5 and 7 million hectares of good land were lost to agricultural use annually through soil degradation. Consequently, the number of requests from member countries for assistance in erosion and desertification control and in reclaiming degraded lands continued to increase.

In Brazil, an FAO/UNDP project helped to build a nation-wide soil and water conservation programme, a basic part of which was the promotion of exchanges of expertise in soil conservation techniques between Brazil and other developing countries.

The first phase of a regional project on soil conservation in Africa—funded by Norway—assessed erosion problems in 31 countries.

In view of the continued depletion and degradation of forest resources in the developing countries, especially in the tropics, renewed efforts in inventory and monitoring of forest lands were needed. FAO's activities in this area included helping a regional training centre at Dehra Dun, India, to disseminate forest inventory techniques and publishing a manual on land evaluation for forestry uses. In addition, a regional study on improving techniques for assessing and mapping desertification hazards in North Africa and the Near East was completed with financial assistance from the United Nations Environment Programme.

Crops. In 1984, over 450 FAO projects to improve crop and grassland production were in operation. Cereals, rice and food legumes, which supplied more than half of the world's total calories, continued to be a primary focus. Improvement of indigenous grains such as sorghum and millet became increasingly important, as developing countries, particularly those in Africa, strove to reduce their dependence on imported cereals. In Kenya, a project to improve sorghum production resulted in yield increases of up to 300 per cent. During the year, on-farm demonstrations of improved cropping methods for maize, sorghum, millet and wheat were held in Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cape Verde, Ghana, the Niger, Rwanda and Zambia.

FAO's work in rice—the staple food of more than half of the world's population—concentrated on developing village production systems in Africa. In Mauritania, under an FAO-supported project, villagers pooled their resources by combining one-hectare plots and jointly purchasing a large tractor. Irrigation ditches, which had occupied 15 per cent of the total crop area and allowed more than half the water to drain away, were replaced by buried plastic pipe, thus increasing the efficiency of both land and water use; yield had been more than doubled. In areas of Guinea-Bissau and Senegal, water-buffaloes were introduced for lowland rice cultivation and for transport.

In 1984, FAO formulated 22 projects to improve seed production and helped strengthen national seed services in 12 countries. National training courses were held in 15 countries for over 300 participants. At the regional level, training courses on improving seed production, processing, quality control and distribution were held in Latin America and the Caribbean (Brazil); Africa (Cameroon); Asia and the Pacific (Indonesia); and the Near East (Egypt and Tunisia). In addition, 16 countries were assisted in improving seed quality control and a videotape course on seed testing was completed. The FAO Seed Laboratory distributed more than 20,000 seed samples to over 90 countries for use in breeding experiments.

To breed new high-yielding varieties of crops, a wide variety of samples, including primitive strains and wild species, was needed. Through the International Board for Plant Genetic Resources (IBPGR)—jointly sponsored by FAO, UNDP and the World Bank—FAO helped to collect, evaluate, document and conserve samples. In 1984, IBPGR concluded its first decade of activity, during which hundreds of collecting missions had been mounted and a world-wide network of over 60 plant gene banks had been established.

FAO continued to assist countries to increase food production through the judicious use of mineral fertilizers and organic sources of plant nutrients. In 1984, projects were under way in 18 countries; since the start of the FAO Fertilizer Programme in 1961, more than 3.5 million farmers had been trained in efficient fertilizer use.

Most of FAO's 123 horticultural projects in 1984 concentrated on improving fruit and vegetable production by small-scale farmers to help guarantee family supplies of nutritious foods. However, some projects also demonstrated how horticultural products could be cultivated as cash crops. In Africa, a series of projects was funded to develop more productive varieties of traditional vegetables, including amaranth, okra and taro, which, although grown widely, had been neglected in development plans because of their low yield.

FAO's plant protection activities fell into three broad categories: development of disease-resistant crop varieties; promotion of efficient and environmentally sound use of chemical pesticides; and expansion of integrated pest control systems. In Latin America, where banana and plantain production suffered heavy losses as a result of a fungus, FAO provided emergency training to national extension workers in identification and quarantine techniques in Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela. In Africa, where cassava crops suffered 30 to 80 per cent losses due to mealy-bug and green spider mite infestation, a regional project helped train national plant protection workers in Nigeria to propagate and spread a tiny wasp which preyed on the mealy-bug. Twenty-two other African countries requested similar assistance.

Livestock. In 1984, FAO was involved in over 200 projects to improve animal production: 58 projects on fodder improvement were under way and another 18 were formulated in a total of 64 countries. Drought in Africa led to an increase in the number of requests for both emergency and long-term aid to the animal feed sector. FAO missions visited Botswana, Chad, Ethiopia, Lesotho, Senegal, Swaziland, Zambia and Zimbabwe to evaluate feed resources and formulate proposals for assistance projects. Plans were also finalized for a comprehensive animal-feed security programme to begin in 1985, with special emphasis on the drought-prone countries of Africa.

To assist in the conservation of animal genetic resources, the Netherlands agreed in November to fund a five-year programme to maintain liquid nitrogen units for the cryogenic storage of such resources in Egypt, Ethiopia, Rwanda, Somalia, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zaire.

Fisheries. At the World Conference on Fisheries Management and Development (Rome, 27 June–6 July), representatives from 147 countries and over 60 international organizations discussed the problems and potential of world fisheries as a vital source of food, employment and income. In particular, they focused on the difficulties faced by developing and developed countries in adjusting to the new legal régime of the oceans, as embodied in the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea.<sup>c</sup> The Conference endorsed a global strategy and five special action programmes to promote the rational development of fisheries, including aquaculture.

A large part of FAO's activities in fishery development concentrated on improving the capabilities of small-scale fisheries, which, although they supplied more than 40 per cent of the world's food-fish, had received little development assistance. Projects were under way in the Congo River Basin to improve fishing and fish processing techniques; in India's Bay of Bengal to introduce inboard diesel engines for fishing craft; in Rwanda to train people in night fishing; and in Somalia to train fishermen to use sails in conjunction with motors.

Forestry. In 1984, FAO was involved in projects to increase fuelwood production in all regions of the developing world. In Cape Verde, forestry development was being promoted in naturally treeless areas to control erosion and help capture atmospheric humidity and return it to the soil; in the Peruvian sierra, a project supported by the Netherlands was helping to re-establish depleted forest resources; in Papua New Guinea, mangrove tree development was being combined with crocodile raising; and in Senegal, trees were being planted for fuelwood, enrichment of soil nutrients and erosion control.

Special relief operations. While most of FAO's assistance to agricultural development was of a medium- or long-term nature, emergency and rehabilitation assistance was available through the Office for Special Relief Operations, which, throughout 1984, continued to serve as the focal point for the FAO/WFP Task Force on Africa. Of its more than 70 projects in operation during the year, over a third focused on the drought-stricken countries of Africa.

World Food Programme. In 1984, WFP provided $1.1 billion in assistance to developing countries. Since beginning operations in 1963, it had provided over $7.5 billion worth of food to almost 250 million people.

During the year, WFP committed more than $575 million of food aid to agricultural and rural development projects, which included land reclamation, irrigation systems and better farming systems. Labourers received food rations for their work and projects took place during periods when no other work was available. The availability of food aid also helped Governments widen their development programmes. Substantial assistance ($325 million in 1984) was also provided to poor rural populations most likely to be malnourished, especially mothers, infants and young children. Such projects usually also incorporated activities to improve social and economic well-being, including nutrition education and health care.

In 1984, WFP also supplied more than $200 million in assistance to emergency operations, both from its own resources and from the International Emergency Food Reserve. Over half of this went to sub-Saharan Africa, where drought and civil strife had led to severe malnutrition and starvation. Other major operations supplied flood victims in Bangladesh and refugees in Pakistan. During the year, WFP also bought, shipped or monitored the movement of 500,000 tonnes of aid on behalf of bilateral donors.

Secretariat

At the end of 1984, the number of staff employed by FAO at its headquarters was 3,331, of whom 1,145 were in the Professional and higher categories. Field project personnel working in 122 countries numbered 1,288 in the Professional and higher categories and 658 in the General Service category. Regional office, joint division and country representation staff numbered 242 in the Professional and higher categories and 668 in the General Service category. Of the 315 associate experts working with FAO, 264 were in the field, 13 in regional and country offices and 38 at headquarters. In addition, WFP employed 105 Professional and higher category staff and 159 General Service personnel at headquarters and 185 staff in the field.

Budget

The November 1983 session of the FAO Conference approved a budget of some $421 million for 1984-1985.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

During 1984, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued a broad range of activities by promoting collaboration among nations through education, natural and social sciences, culture and communication.

Following the withdrawal of the United States from the organization on 31 December 1984, the membership of UNESCO decreased to 160; the associate membership went down to two after the British Eastern Caribbean Group ceased to be a member on 31 December.

Education

The 1984 UNESCO education programmes continued to focus on education for development. UNESCO, which originated literacy drives, had some of its achievements neutralized by the world's population growth. Among its education programmes were: the democratization of education; out-of-school and lifelong education for all; the formulation of educational policies; and improved financing and administration of educational institutions.

In its fight against illiteracy, UNESCO assisted literacy programmes outside formal education systems for adults, as well as girls, women and groups or sectors of the population that encountered difficulties in exercising their right to education. It assisted member States at the national level and promoted regional and international co-operation for educational purposes: training educational personnel, mainly at the primary and special education levels; and promoting technical, vocational and adult education, integrated rural development and educational participation of the elderly.

An intergovernmental regional committee (Mexico City, 5-9 November) reviewed efforts of member States and adopted a regional plan of action for the eradication of illiteracy by the year 2000, a minimum schooling of 8 to 10 years and an improvement in the quality of education in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Seminars, workshops and meetings were held during the year in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Arab States for the improvement of rural teaching and the use of technology. Others, which took place in Argentina, China, Guatemala, Malawi, Mali and Zaire, dealt with agricultural education, vocational training activities, the adaptation of curricula to meet rural development needs, and upgraded teaching.

Other efforts by UNESCO to develop co-operation with member States in education included: promoting the equality of educational opportunities for girls and women in Cape Verde, India, Peru and the Syrian Arab Republic; special education programmes in Africa; educational programmes for liberation movements and Palestinian refugees; and studies to meet the needs of migrant workers and their families.

UNESCO contributed in 1984 to the formulation and application of education policies and the strengthening of national capacities for educational planning, management, administration and economics. The thirty-ninth session of the International Conference on Education (Geneva, 16-25 October), with more than 500 participants, discussed the relationship between education for all and the new scientific and technological environment. It highlighted the importance of science and technology education as a means of equal opportunity in some societies and examined aspects of the repercussion of informatics on education.

UNESCO continued its technical and financial assistance to the five regional and subregional networks of educational innovation for development (Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Arab States, South and South-East Europe, and the Caribbean), which organized over 100 meetings and workshops to exchange experiences.

Other activities dealt with the interaction between education and society: education and culture; education and communication; education and science and technology; education and the work market; and education and sports. The role of higher education, particularly its training and research functions, was discussed. Financial and technical support was provided for studies on national languages and mother tongues, including those of ethnic minorities, as a means of educational teaching and cultural exchange. Regional meetings in Latin America and the Caribbean considered strategies for using the media to improve and develop educational services to disadvantaged sectors of the population and to promote education for peace and the respect of human rights.

UNESCO also provided technical assistance to member States to strengthen national infrastructures and launch projects on science and technology education; the Association of African Universities for studies on the potential of higher education institutions and research centres in Africa; and the Regional Institute on Higher Education and Development in Asia for the implementation of research projects and the development of informational resources.

The fifth regional conference of Arab education ministers and those responsible for economic planning, rescheduled for 1984, was postponed to 1986.

During 1984, UNESCO participated in over 300 national, regional and subregional education projects with financial assistance from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA), the World Bank, regional banks and funds-in-trust.

Natural sciences

In 1984, UNESCO continued to assist member States to use the resources of science and technology for development. It initiated a new programme to set up an international system of regional networks for training, research and information exchange in science and technology policy management.

In co-operation with the International Council of Scientific Unions, UNESCO provided research training to some 3,000 scientists from developing countries.

The International Geological Correlation Programme pursued its undertaking of geological science projects and, in co-operation with 116 countries, implemented 48 such projects in 1984.

The International Hydrological Programme entered its third phase (1984-1989). Thirty post-graduate courses in hydrology and water resources were sponsored, mainly for participants from developing countries, and several seminars, training courses and workshops were offered.

In the ecological sciences, the eighth session of the International Co-ordinating Council of the Man and the Biosphere programme drew up a plan of action for biosphere reserves from 1985 to 1989. Other activities for the assessment of natural hazards of geological origin, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and landslides, were characterized by regional operational projects, and a study for an international early-warning system for volcanic eruptions was prepared.

In the marine sciences, some 400 specialists were helped to improve their scientific skills and research through participation in 30 training courses, meetings and seminars, and through fellowships and travel grants. Scientific reports and publications, designed to stimulate research in areas such as the mangrove ecosystem, coral reefs, pollution research, and coastal zone management in the Indian Ocean region, were published. Several developing countries were also assisted in strengthening their marine science infrastructure through national and regional extrabudgetary projects.

In addition to its regular programme activities, UNESCO assisted member States in the execution of over 100 science and technology projects financed from extrabudgetary funds. Other extrabudgetary activities contributed to the development of science and technology through science training for research, technical application and information exchange.

Social sciences

During 1984, UNESCO continued to support the development of social sciences at various levels: at the national level, by strengthening research, training and documentation capacities within disciplines and in interdisciplinary work; at the regional level, by expanding networks of co-operation; and at the international level, by reinforcing co-operation with the scientific community through governmental and non-governmental organizations and professional associations over a wide range of activities, including scientific exchanges of data, an international journal, publications and scholars.

Philosophical and interdisciplinary activities were also carried out in several areas: the unity of man in the perspective of neurophysiology; behavioural neurosciences and cognitive science; goals of development; varieties of development planning; ethical dimensions of peace; and philosophical aspects of human rights.

Concerning population activities, technical assistance was provided to 35 national projects in communication training, research and planning. Co-operation was sought with regional broadcasting organizations, such as the Asia Pacific Institute for Broadcasting Development, the Arab States Broadcasting Union and the Asociación Interamericana de Radiodifusión. Other projects dealt with migration and its socio-economic effects, and the interrelationships between population, resources, environment and development.

Activities for and concerning youth aimed at: encouraging research about young people in different parts of the world; promoting the dissemination and exchange of information; and assisting with the drafting of policies and the implementation of programmes to increase youth's participation in social life. UNESCO co-operated also with member States and youth organizations to promote sports, mainly in rural areas, to expand voluntary work among young people and to examine the circumstances which led young people to become socially deprived.

On the question of apartheid, UNESCO organized meetings at Dakar, Senegal, for specialists from scientific, religious and cultural communities. On 21 March 1984, a public lecture was held at UNESCO headquarters on the occasion of the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. UNESCO also assisted national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity in social sciences training.

The organization continued to analyse human rights violations and the conditions for peace. Research activities centred on: human rights in different cultural and religious traditions; ways of improving the human rights of disadvantaged social groups; and technological and scientific progress and human rights. Legal, sociological, historical and philosophical studies were undertaken to elucidate the concept of peoples' rights, as were training sessions, publications and studies to promote human rights teaching.

UNESCO's status of women programmes included research on women's participation in political and public life and the effects of socio-economic change within their societies. The 1984 publication Women in the Villages, Men in the Towns dealt with the situation of rural women left as heads of household because of male migration. It included case-studies on Bangladesh, India, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and Thailand.

Culture

In 1984, UNESCO continued its international campaigns for the protection of cultural and natural heritage. The 29 campaigns approved by the UNESCO General Conference were either being conducted or in preparation and, by the end of the year, $12.5 million had been raised. New campaigns were launched to safeguard in Yemen the historic city of Sana'a, and in Democratic Yemen the monuments and sites of Wadi Hadramawt and the walled city of Shibam.

The World Heritage Committee (eighth session, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 29 October-2 November), established under the 1972 International Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage, added 23 sites to the World Heritage List, raising the number to 186 cultural and natural properties in 48 countries protected by the Convention, which had 86 States parties as at 31 December 1984. Efforts continued to promote public awareness of the Convention's objectives and to encourage contributions to the World Heritage Fund, which provided assistance for training activities and restoration work on World Heritage sites.

Other activities during 1984 included: studies on African, Latin American, Caribbean, Arab, Asian, European and Arctic culture; the printing of the General History of Africa in Arabic, English, French, Portuguese and Spanish; the revision of The History of the Scientific and Cultural Development of Mankind, dealing with various world cultures and their development; the preparation of travelling exhibits and art albums; a seminar in Finland on the theoretical and methodological aspects of cultural development with UNESCO's financial assistance; studies in Latin America on cultural activities to motivate local populations in support of development; consultant missions to regional and international economic co-operation bodies to emphasize the importance of the cultural dimension in economic development strategies; a meeting of specialists at Bogotá, Colombia, for the planning and administration of cultural activities in Latin America and the Caribbean; a regional training workshop at New Delhi, India, for the administration of cultural activities in Asia and the Pacific; and studies for the training of cultural personnel in Asia and the Pacific and in East Africa.

Regarding international cultural co-operation, studies were carried out on co-operation between industrialized and developing countries and on measures likely to foster in international cultural exchanges a more balanced participation by developing countries or countries whose languages were not widely known. In Europe, five projects on problems related to cultural development were launched in the framework of studies conducted under the aegis of national commissions with the support of UNESCO.

In the field of artistic creativity, an international survey on art in society was undertaken. A series of music rostra, to promote high-quality works and performances in co-operation with broadcasting organizations, were organized in Africa, Asia and Europe with the assistance of the International Music Council. An international meeting of experts on the preservation and development of crafts in the contemporary world was held in co-operation with the World Crafts Council at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. A film workshop on the art of depicting the real-life situation of rural dwellers was held at Luxor, Egypt.

Communications

During 1984, UNESCO continued to promote a free flow and wider and better-balanced dissemination of information, primarily by reinforcing communication systems in developing countries and training communication personnel. It also dealt with the role of communication in society, emphasizing new technologies and formulating national policies and plans.

Consultations on the programme "The right to communicate" and seminars on the international flow of information were held. Plurality in communication, the "watch-dog" role of the press, media education and the media's contribution to worldwide security and peace were also studied. The publication Many Voices, One World, originally issued as a hardback in 1980, was printed in English and French in 1984 as a paperback and widely distributed.

The Intergovernmental Council of the International Programme for the Development of Communication (IPDC) (fifth session, Paris, 3-9 May) approved 32 projects from developing countries for full or partial funding. Other projects were recommended by the Council for funding through funds-in-trust or other similar arrangements. Since January 1982, over $5.6 million had been provided for communication development and some $5 million pledged in the form of expert and fellowship assistance.

Development of communication infrastructures continued to be one of IPDC's major objectives and funds-in-trust provided the largest source of finance.

The Council approved the establishment of a biennial IPDC-UNESCO Prize for Rural Communication to reward innovative activities of exceptional merit undertaken by individuals or groups working in a private capacity to improve communication in rural communities through such media as local newspapers, radio and television programmes, printing equipment and films.

Other activities in 1984 included: national and regional training; the development of human and physical resources in a particular region through greater use of accumulated experience and research on the use of local skills and materials; the expansion of news agencies and exchange systems; and making available to smaller agencies modern computer-based techniques in news editing and dispatching. With the increased interest in preserving the national heritage in sound and images, a new programme initiated activities in the development of film and sound archives and in training specialists in film and tape preservation techniques.

A programme in Latin America for the co-publishing of books was expanded and several children's books were published with print-runs ranging from 30,000 to 100,000 copies per title. The cycle of regional monitoring groups on follow-up action to the 1982 UNESCO World Congress on Books<sup>a</sup> continued and recommendations were adopted at 1984 meetings held in Europe and the Arab States for measures to be taken at the national, regional and international levels to implement the Congress's resolutions. Training was provided to some 200 book specialists, with national and subregional courses held in Africa, the Arab States, Asia and the Pacific, and Europe. In addition, an annotated bibliography of books for linguistically retarded children was produced.

General Information Programme

In 1984, the UNESCO General Information Programme provided assistance at the national, regional and international levels for the development and promotion of information systems in scientific and technological information, documentation, libraries and archives.

The Programme emphasized: the improvement of access to information through modern technologies, standardization and interconnection of information systems; and required infrastructures, policies and training for the processing and dissemination of specialized information. It also aimed at strengthening national capabilities for handling information through the development of national information systems.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

The thirty-seventh World Health Assembly, which met at Geneva from 7 to 17 May 1984, reviewed the first progress report on the implementation of strategies towards achieving health for all by the year 2000, in conformity with the plan of action approved in 1982.<sup>a</sup> The report indicated that the political will to achieve health for all existed in most countries and that many had already formulated health policies, strategies and plans. The Assembly urged member States to accelerate their action, especially the reorientation of health systems towards primary health care, and to strengthen further the managerial capacity of those systems. It also called for support by the World Health Organization (WHO) to be intensive and target-oriented.

Concern that pharmaceuticals should be cost-effective as well as acceptably safe was reflected in an Assembly resolution requesting the Director-General to convene in 1985 a conference of experts on the rational use of drugs and the role of marketing practices.

The organization's financial position, infant and young child nutrition, prevention of xerophthalmia and intensified co-operation with member States affected by natural and man-made disasters were among other issues dealt with by the Assembly.

Four countries became members of WHO during 1984—Antigua and Barbuda on 12 March, the Cook Islands on 9 May, Kiribati on 26 July and Saint Christopher and Nevis on 3 December—which brought its membership to 165 and one associate member.

Co-ordination with other organizations

During 1984, WHO continued its collaboration with bilateral agencies, funding agencies within the United Nations system, the World Bank, regional banks and other institutions to mobilize resources for health for all. Activities included the fourth meeting of the Committee of the Health Resources Group for Primary Health Care (Geneva, November) and the first overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade (see also p. 391). WHO also responded to the appeal of the United Nations to deal urgently with socio-economic problems facing sub-Saharan Africa by establishing an emergency standing committee in the regional office for Africa.

Research promotion and development

Following its 1983 decision to concentrate on broad health research policy issues instead of reviewing specific technical programmes, the Advisory Committee on Medical Research (ACMR) established, in co-operation with its regional committees, three sub-committees, to deal with health research strategy for health for all, health manpower research, and the transfer of health technology to developing countries. ACMR also decided to involve national medical research councils whenever feasible.

With regard to drugs in use or in an advanced stage of development, work at various collaborating centres had resulted in a new antimalarial drug effective against strains of plasmodium falciparum resistant to chloroquine and other drugs, and another promising compound for the control of malaria was undergoing field tests.

Primary health care

The Declaration of Alma-Ata (USSR, 1978)<sup>b</sup> set forth the eight elements of primary health care through which the goal of health for all by the year 2000 was to be achieved. Activities of WHO during 1984 in respect of these elements are set out below, followed by a ninth section on other health concerns.

Health education

Efforts by countries to inform and educate people to promote healthy life-styles and practices encouraging self-reliance were supported by WHO at country, regional and global levels through an exchange of experiences, technical co-operation, training, research and dissemination of information.

In South-East Asia, a workshop on integration of public information and education for health examined strategies and suggested plans to strengthen them. At another workshop supported by WHO, the first Caribbean strategy and plan of action for community participation was adopted. The first symposium on smoking and health in southern Europe led to the creation of the Mediterranean Committee on Health Promotion and Smoking Control, and an inter-country meeting at Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, formulated guidelines on the integration of health education within primary health care and on collaboration between the ministries of health and education.

The 1984 slogan for World Health Day, "Children's health—tomorrow's wealth", was used to convey the message that children were a priceless resource and that any nation which neglected them (and their health) did so at its peril. Many countries used the slogan to promote related health education and information activities. In Europe, a system linking government departments, universities, research and training centres and experts in a network for the exchange of education technology and information was established. Similar networks were also considered in the Americas and the Western Pacific.

A draft manual on health education in primary health care for use by health workers was circulated for review and field-testing to WHO member States, collaborating institutions and technical experts.

Food and nutrition

Food and nutrition projects, supported by the WHO/UNICEF Joint Nutrition Support Programme and funded by Italy, were launched in eight countries in Asia, Africa and the Caribbean. A joint UNICEF/UNDP/IFAD programme, aided by the Belgian Third World Survival Fund, was implemented in Kenya and Uganda. Nutrition education began in four African countries; health systems research on nutrition was the subject of projects in seven African countries, and research on breast-feeding was supported in five others.

A Central American health plan, adopted in Costa Rica in March, identified food and nutrition as a priority area, and the regional office, in collaboration with the Institute of Nutrition of Central America and Panama, formulated project proposals for submission to donors. Several countries of the Western Pacific participated in infant and young child nutrition studies and national nutrition surveys.

Safe water and basic sanitation

Progress reports on the implementation of the objectives of the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) were received from some 80 member States and territories representing three quarters of the developing world's population. In co-operation with UNDP, the World Bank and other agencies, WHO reviewed the mobilization of external resources for improving water supplies and sanitation in the Decade.

An agreement for strengthening human resources in Central America, the Dominican Republic and Panama was concluded with the Inter-American Development Bank and the Agency for Technical Co-operation (Gesellschaft für Technische Zusammenarbeit) of the Federal Republic of Germany. The Pan American Centre for Sanitary Engineering and Environmental Sciences organized an international seminar at Brasilia, Brazil, on water system losses. Fifty participants from 10 countries in the Americas developed strategies for prevention of wastage and drew up an agreement on inter-country co-operation through a network of centres. In the Eastern Mediterranean region, WHO decided to establish in Jordan a regional centre for environmental health activities aimed at developing human resources and disseminating technical information. The Arab Gulf Programme for United Nations Development Organizations approved a $1 million funding to meet the cost of fellowships, equipment and personnel for the centre.

Maternal and child health, including family planning

WHO provided in 1984 technical and managerial support to some 90 countries to improve their health care services for mothers and children. To strengthen national managerial capabilities, WHO and UNFPA jointly initiated workshops for national programme managers and WHO/UNFPA country staff to improve programme formulation, problem-solving and evaluation skills. Two workshops were held during the year: one for English-speaking countries of Africa and the other for countries of the European and Eastern Mediterranean regions.

Several countries initiated studies on perinatal, infant, early childhood and maternal mortality and morbidity to identify priority areas for action and develop appropriate preventive measures. A regional meeting in the Americas on infant mortality and primary health-care strategies (Mexico, May) highlighted the advances made in reducing infant and child mortality and the relationship between those advances and the implementation of such strategies.

An international task force worked closely with WHO collaborating centres, research institutes in developing countries and interested non-governmental organizations (NGOs). Research activities included: evaluation of equipment and methods for home deliveries; development of birth-weight surrogates; evaluation and quality control of supplies and equipment for use in maternal and child health programmes—including family planning—in health systems based on primary health; appraisal of various means of temperature control in relation to the new-born; and evaluation of environments in which deliveries and care of the new-born take place.

As part of its participation in preparations for the International Youth Year (1985), WHO convened in June a study group on young people and health for all by the year 2000 to review adolescent and youth health and health-related issues, and to analyse health systems on the basis of their relevance, resources and service gaps in the specific needs of that age group.

Immunization against major infectious diseases

During 1984, improvements in immunization services and coverage were made in all regions. Reductions in the incidence of diseases—diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, measles, poliomyelitis and tuberculosis—covered by the Expanded Programme on Immunization (EPI) were also reported. In the Americas, all countries had set national coverage targets for immunization against these diseases; in its health-for-all strategy, the European region specified that by the year 2000 those diseases would have been eliminated.

WHO supported immunization services in member States through the implementation of a five-point action programme: promotion of EPI within primary health care; development of human resources; mobilization and investment of financial resources; continuous monitoring and evaluation to increase the programme's effectiveness; and research. Training of health workers in immunization continued to be a priority, with a shift from training of managers using materials developed at the global level to training of middle- and peripheral-level health workers, often in national languages, using materials adapted for national use.

Further development of the "cold-chain" monitor and of solar-powered refrigeration was notable, as well as the evaluation of sterilizable plastic syringes and pressure-cooker sterilizers for use in rural health centres. Vaccine availability and the cold-chain situation generally improved during the year.

The Bellagio Conference (Italy, March), co-sponsored by UNDP, UNICEF, WHO and the World Bank and supported by the United States Rockefeller Foundation, created a child-survival task force to reduce childhood morbidity and mortality through the acceleration of key primary health-care activities. Support concentrated on Colombia, India and Senegal.

Prevention and control of locally endemic diseases

Locally endemic diseases continued to affect a large number of people in developing countries where diarrhoeal diseases, acute respiratory infections and EPI-covered diseases were major causes of death and illness among young children. WHO reported that, with recent advances in technology for diagnosis and treatment, the control and prevention of malaria, tuberculosis and parasitic and tropical diseases (such as schistosomiasis, leprosy and filariasis) had improved, and member States were taking further steps to strengthen that element of primary health care.

Progress was made in diarrhoeal disease control. WHO provided technical co-operation to member States for the development of national plans, training of managerial and supervisory personnel and programme evaluation. By the end of 1984, 88 developing countries had operation plans for controlling diarrhoeal diseases and 62 of them had begun implementing their plans. In collaboration with UNICEF, WHO also supported countries in the local production and supply of oral rehydration salts.

Health systems research and clinical studies on acute respiratory infections were being carried out in over 20 countries in all WHO regions, mainly to test the feasibility of a standard plan for case management at the primary health-care level. A working group on case management in developing countries evaluated methods of diagnosis and treatment in children, identifying those most suitable for rural areas and recommending training materials.

Brazil and the Republic of Korea joined other countries participating in the evaluation of the effectiveness of the Bacillus Calmette-Guérin vaccination against tuberculosis in infants and young children. The first national prevalence survey in the Philippines was completed in April. A global survey of mycobacterial resistance to antituberculosis drugs was started with WHO collaborating centres in bacteriology of tuberculosis to determine regional and global levels of initial and acquired drug resistance.

Leprosy remained a major public health problem in many developing countries. WHO activities concentrated mainly on research and development, including clinical trials with multidrug therapy, training and promoting community involvement, and integration of leprosy control services into primary health care.

Little change was reported in the world malaria situation. Information on a number of cases in the preceding 10 years was published, together with a map of the distribution of chloroquine-resistant plasmodium falciparum, in the World Health Statistics Quarterly. Member States continued searching for effective means to implement malaria control strategies within primary health care and for new and simpler technologies, and WHO provided technical support in programme planning and evaluation, training and research and promoted inter-country cooperation. The report of the Study Group on Malaria Control as Part of Primary Health Care was published.

Progress in vector biology and control included: the development of impregnated bed-nets for malaria mosquito control in the African and Western Pacific regions and simple tsetse-fly traps in West Africa; the elimination of larval habitats of filariasis vectors in southern India; and a large-scale trial of control of aedes aegypti vectors of dengue and dengue haemorrhagic fever, employing students and schoolteachers with other volunteers, in Thailand. Field trials of new insecticides against anopheles vectors of malaria were carried out in Indonesia, and against simulium vectors under the Onchocerciasis Control Programme in West Africa.

Treatment of common diseases and injuries

In several countries, the health care delivery infrastructure needed strengthening to provide treatment of common diseases and injuries. In collaboration with WHO, member States searched for simple technologies and practical approaches to prevent and control common non-communicable diseases and promote oral health, mental health, and health of workers and of the elderly. To further those aims, WHO supported information exchange among countries, training, transfer of technology, research—especially on appropriate technology—and dissemination of information. A guide on managing services for the disabled in the community was prepared to improve the competence of health and community workers in this field.

WHO supported training activities in rehabilitation at national and inter-country levels. Financial resources were provided by the Norwegian Red Cross, the Norwegian Agency for International Development and the Swedish International Development Authority for inter-country and global activities. Member States, mainly in South-East Asia and the Western Pacific, strengthened their eye care services within primary health care.

There was an increase in 1984 of non-communicable diseases—particularly cancer and cardiovascular diseases—among adult populations in both developed and developing countries. Many countries took steps to accelerate health activities aimed at prevention through changes in life-styles and behaviour, early detection and treatment, and promotion of self-care. WHO further supported research, training and exchange of experience in technology. An estimate of the effects of 12 major cancers on the five continents was published in the 1984 Bulletin of the World Health Organization. Guiding principles for the formulation of national cancer programmes in developing countries, prepared by WHO, were used to identify priorities in a number of countries, including India and Sri Lanka.

A WHO expert committee on prevention and control of cardiovascular diseases in the community, convened in December, reviewed health problems such as hypertension (including cerebrovascular stroke), coronary heart disease, and rheumatic fever/rheumatic heart disease.

Essential drugs

WHO reported that many countries had accelerated actions towards the development of drug legislation, policies and implementation plans along the lines of the Action Programme on Essential Drugs and Vaccines. A review of progress in five regions showed that some 90 member States had established a list of essential drugs, 36 were in various stages of establishing or implementing measures in accordance with the Action Programme, and another 27 were developing national policies. Most countries already implementing essential drug programmes were making good progress with or without international collaboration. WHO assistance included the formulation of national plans and programmes, drug legislation, training, exchange of experience and dissemination of information, procurement and production of essential drugs, and quality control. Inter-country co-operation and co-ordination at the international level was particularly promoted.

A four-day international conference on essential drugs in primary health care, sponsored by UNICEF, WHO, the United States Agency for International Development and member companies in the International Federation of Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Associations, held at the Harvard University School of Public Health (Boston, United States, April 1984), attracted over 160 participants, including 60 from developing countries. The purpose of the conference was to develop problem-oriented teaching and training material for use in public-health schools.

Opportunities for promoting consolidated procurement within individual countries, as well as among groups of countries through pool procurement schemes, were explored in Africa, the Americas and the Western Pacific. In Central America and Panama, high priority was placed on promoting and developing national and sub-regional programmes, and a revolving fund for the joint procurement of essential drugs, based on studies undertaken by the Pan American Health Organization and the Central American Bank, was in the process of being established.

Other health concerns

WHO also supported member States in developing health policies for the care of the elderly as an integral part of primary health care. The role of NGOs and voluntary organizations in this area was promoted. An NGO/WHO collaborating group on aging provided manuals for community workers on self-care and health promotion, suitably adapted to particular regional and cultural groups.

Field trials of various models of primary health-care delivery to underserved working people in agriculture and small industries were made in several countries, including Burkina Faso, Chile, China, Egypt, Nigeria, the Republic of Korea, the Sudan, Thailand, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe. Countries exchanged experiences through regional workshops in the Americas and South-East Asia.

Regarding mental health, a major study on the epidemiology of schizophrenia and related disorders was completed in 13 geographically defined areas in Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, India, Ireland, Japan, Nigeria, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States. This was the first investigation of the incidence of this group of disorders in which uniform instruments and research techniques were employed, allowing direct comparisons of areas in different countries. The findings provided a basis for long-term forecasts of treatment needed and for the planning of appropriate services, as well as clues to aetiologically oriented research.

Neuro-epidemiological studies co-ordinated by WHO in China, Ecuador and Nigeria were completed, providing information for programmes for the prevention and control of neurological disorders and for application, after suitable adaptation, in Chile, India, Italy, Peru, Senegal, Tunisia and Venezuela. A related training programme included seminars co-sponsored by WHO at Quito, Ecuador, and Bombay, India.

Responding to an alarming global increase in drug abuse—particularly cocaine—WHO launched a project to study the adverse health consequences of cocaine and coca-paste smoking. In that context, an advisory group (Bogotá, Colombia, September) reviewed the methodology of problem assessment and treatment approaches.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the total number of full-time staff employed by WHO stood at 4,449 on permanent and fixed-term contracts. Of these, 1,454 staff members, drawn from 122 nationalities, were in the Professional and higher categories and 2,995 were in the General Service category. Of the total number of staff, 122 were in posts financed by UNDP, UNEP, UNFPA and UNFPA.

Budget

The thirty-sixth (1983) World Health Assembly had approved a working budget of $520,100,000 for 1984-1985.<sup>c</sup>

Chapter VI

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

During the fiscal year 1 July 1983 to 30 June 1984, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) and its affiliate, the International Development Association (IDA), continued to help developing countries to raise their standards of living by channelling financial resources to them from developed countries.

Lending commitments by the Bank, credit approvals from IDA, and investment commitments by a second affiliate, the International Finance Corporation (IFC), amounted to $16,220 million—up $898 million from the previous fiscal year.

Membership in the Bank rose to 148 in 1984, with the admission of Saint Christopher and Nevis (15 August) and Mozambique (24 September).

Lending operations

In the fiscal year ending 30 June 1984, the World Bank made 129 loans amounting to $11,949.2 million to 43 countries, an increase of $813 million over fiscal year 1983. This brought the cumulative total of loan commitments by the Bank since its inception in 1946 to $101,565.4 million.

The following table summarizes World Bank lending in fiscal 1984 by region or country and by purpose.

Agriculture and rural development

The Bank continued its commitment to agriculture and rural development, making 26 loans in fiscal 1984 amounting to $2,062.7 million in 20 countries. Brazil received $398.7 million, of which $303 million was to support a general agricultural-investment credit line, as well as a revolving fund to rediscount pre-financing credits for exporters of agricultural and agro-industrial products. Nigeria received $372 million, of which $250 million was to provide approximately 60 per cent of an estimated 2 million tons of fertilizer needed for 1984 and 1985. Of $233.2 million provided to Indonesia, $89 million went to strengthen irrigation services of eight island provinces and $79.2 million to develop some 12,400 hectares of sugar-cane, expected to produce 50,000 tons of sugar a year.

Development finance companies

The Bank made nine loans totalling $762.3 million in fiscal 1984 to assist development finance companies in seven countries. The larger borrowers were Egypt ($395 million to help expand small and medium-sized industries and manufactured exports and improve the construction industry), Hungary ($110 million to support governmental programmes for industrial restructuring and export promotion and to strengthen the development-banking role of the National Bank of Hungary), and China ($105 million to assist the China Investment Bank to finance investment loans for small and medium-sized industrial projects in need of foreign exchange).

Education

During fiscal 1984, the Bank granted 12 loans totalling $491.2 million for education projects in 11 countries. Indonesia received $106.3 million for middle-level agricultural manpower training and to provide basic education and training in employment-oriented skills to some 800,000 illiterates and school drop-outs. The Republic of Korea received $100 million to upgrade the country's science and technology education. Papua New Guinea received $49.3 million to expand and improve schools, to upgrade teacher training and to provide textbooks and other teaching materials with a view to increasing the number of secondary-school graduates.

Energy

Twenty-two energy projects—in oil, gas, coal and power—were assisted in 16 countries during fiscal 1984 at a total cost of $3,015.7 million.

Five loans totalling $987.1 million were made to India, of which $300.8 million was to help meet electricity demand in the eastern region by the addition of 1,000 megawatts to the thermal power-generating capacity of the Farakka thermal power plant in West Bengal. Brazil received two loans amounting to $473.4 million, of which $250.6 million was to expand and modernize power-distribution systems in five less-developed states in the north-eastern and north-western regions and in the low-income metropolitan areas of Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo. Colombia received $364.6 million, of which $164.5 million was for the construction of facilities needed to provide safe and reliable water supply to the Antioquia region by 1990, and to finance hydropower infrastructure. Of two loans totalling $245.7 million to China, $145.4 million was to provide additional generating capacity and energy to the Yunnan power grid, to introduce modern technology in the construction of dams, tunnels and underground powerhouses, and to provide technical assistance and staff training.

Industry

The Bank made seven loans to eight countries for the industrial sector, amounting to $503 million during fiscal 1984. The largest loans included $203.6 million to India for the construction of a fertilizer plant; $150.4 million to Morocco to support implementation of the first phase of its industrial and trade policy-adjustment programme, aimed principally at introducing structural changes in a system of incentives to eliminate bias against export production and to lower manufacturing costs; and $75 million to Zambia to finance the first phase of a five-year programme to modernize the Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines Limited.

Non-project

Five non-project loans totalling $1,026.9 million were made to five countries during the fiscal year, all in support of programmes for the structural adjustment of national economies. Turkey received $376 million, the fifth in a series of loans to finance essential imports. A $300-million loan to the Republic of Korea was for structural reforms in industry, energy and public-sector efficiency. The Ivory Coast received $250.7 million to promote sustainable growth and increase public savings.

Smaller loans to two other countries were for import financing and to help accelerate production of export goods by the private sector.

Population, health and nutrition

Two loans amounting to $68.5 million were made to two countries in fiscal 1984. Brazil received $57.5 million to provide São Paulo with a basic health-care system emphasizing preventive care, and to support a study programme designed to help the Government to formulate policy and implement medium-term plans for the health sector. Botswana received $11 million to make health and family-planning services more accessible, better focused and more cost effective.

Small-scale enterprises

Three loans totalling $597.6 million were made to three countries for small-scale enterprises during the fiscal year. Brazil received $352 million to expand its manufactured exports by liberalizing imports and increasing the availability of foreign exchange. A $204.6-million loan to Indonesia was to assist in financing small-enterprise projects nationwide in nearly all economic sectors. Nigeria received $41 million to initiate a programme to provide technical advice, training and credit to small- and medium-scale enterprises.

Technical assistance

During fiscal 1984, three countries received loans for technical assistance amounting to $14.5 million. Mauritius and Panama each received $5 million to assist government structural-adjustment programmes. A $4.5-million loan went to Jamaica to provide consultants, training and equipment in support of its administrative reform programme.

The largest element of technical assistance continued to be that financed under the lending programme, particularly as a component of loans for other purposes. Some 90 per cent of loans included technical assistance components. These totalled $1,093.2 million in 203 operations, compared with $1,275.3 million in 219 operations in fiscal 1983. Among the larger amounts of such components were $41.4 million in an energy loan to India, $35 million in a highway loan to Indonesia, $32 million in a power loan to Kenya and $26.9 million in a railway loan to Zimbabwe.

The Bank continued to serve as executing agency for projects financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). At the end of fiscal 1984, the number of projects in progress stood at 115—down from 127 the previous year—while 26 new projects, involving commitments of $12.3 million, were approved during the year, compared to 33 projects with commitments of $33.1 million in 1983. Among the largest new UNDP-financed projects were a coal pre-investment study in Colombia, the third phase of a planning project in the Sudan, an energy assessment in Paraguay and the first of four seminars in energy policy for the Bank's members from sub-Saharan Africa.

The Bank's technical co-operation was extended to capital-surplus developing countries in Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, on a reimbursable basis when the annual programme exceeded a staff-year of Bank input, and on a non-reimbursable basis in response to ad hoc requests for programmes. In fiscal 1984, about 32 staff-years of reimbursable technical assistance were provided by the Bank, some 90 per cent of it to Saudi Arabia. Non-reimbursable technical assistance was provided to Kuwait in the form of a general economic review and assistance in manpower planning.

Telecommunications

Three loans amounting to $166.5 million were made to three countries in fiscal 1984. Algeria received $128 million for the expansion of a telecommunication network and provision of related equipment, technical assistance and training. Guatemala received $30 million for the installation of more than 100,000 lines of local-exchange equipment in urban areas to improve telecommunication services.

Transportation

Seventeen loans totalling $2,243.4 million were made to 15 countries during fiscal 1984 to help develop their transportation systems. India received $530.7 million for the modernization of Indian Railways and construction of a new container and bulk-freight port near Bombay to accommodate projected growth in marine freight through 1993. A $276.3-million loan to Mexico went to road reconstruction (trunk-roads) and maintenance (rural roads) and upgrading of industrial port installations. Indonesia received $240 million for the restoration and upgrading of its road network and bridges, and improvement of highway planning and management. Other loans were for highway and railroad construction and improvement, to include equipment, technical assistance and training.

Urbanization

In fiscal 1984, 10 countries received 10 loans amounting to $447 million to aid the urban poor. Peru received $82.5 million to support the transfer of urban administration from national to local government and improve high-priority infrastructure and services. A $60-million loan went to the Republic of Korea to promote economic development in the Jeonju region, currently the poorest in the country. Brazil received $52.7 million to provide 287 towns in the State of Parana with infrastructure and public and social services.

Water supply and sewerage

The Bank made 10 loans totalling $549.9 million in fiscal 1984 for water supply and sewerage projects in 10 countries. Algeria received $290 million to increase water supply and distribution in the Greater Algiers area. A $78.5-million loan was made to the Republic of Korea to provide water supply services to 13 cities and 24 towns, and for pilot sub-projects in leak detection and in the use of microcomputers for water utilities. Tunisia received $50 million to improve water supply in rural areas.

Economic Development Institute

Fiscal 1984 was a year of transition for the Economic Development Institute (EDI)—designed to train senior officials of the Bank's developing member countries in economic management and investment—as preparations began for a new five-year plan for fiscal 1985 through 1989. The plan defined new objectives and instruments to achieve them.

The year was also one of experimentation with newly designed courses and seminars, while core training activities continued. A total of 72 courses and seminars were held—19 in the United States (18 at Washington, D.C., and 1 in New York) and 53 in other countries; participants totalled 2,400. New courses introduced were on such topics as technical and vocational education (Washington, D.C.); energy assessment and planning, co-sponsored by UNDP (New York); port projects (China); railway projects and policies (Kenya); and planning, financing and managing city growth (Thailand).

In anticipation of the new plan, EDI increased to eight the number of policy seminars for high-level officials. Topics included development management, management of agricultural research, rural health care, industrial policy (three seminars), energy policy, and railway management. At Washington, D.C., the seventh annual seminar on world development issues, co-sponsored by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, was held for diplomats assigned to United Nations Headquarters.

Other seminars were for trainers of training institutions in developing countries. During fiscal 1984, 39 such institutions acted as partners for EDI activities—3 in Africa; 18 in Asia; 9 in Europe, the Middle East and North Africa; and 9 in Latin America and the Caribbean. EDI also mounted, jointly with other aid agencies, its first broad review mission of a training institution, namely the Eastern and Southern African Management Institute at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania.

A Training Materials Policy Committee was created to set and administer standards in the production of training material. During fiscal 1984, material produced included 30 course notes, 14 project case-studies and 20 exercises, as well as the first computerized policy-simulation model. Work was completed on eight new multimedia modules in a series of 16 planned on water supply and sanitation. A number of revisions or translations of EDI books were published.

New EDI financial partners in fiscal 1984 included the Australian Development Assistance Bureau, the Gulbenkian Foundation of Portugal, the Organization of American States, and the Statistical, Economic and Social Research and Training Centre for Islamic Countries of the Organization of the Islamic Conference.

Co-financing

Despite difficult market conditions affecting the availability of private and export-credit funds, the flow of funds to developing countries continued to be maintained through co-financing with the World Bank. The Bank's contribution during fiscal 1984 amounted to over $4.6 billion. A meeting with 25 credit and insurance agencies (Washington, D.C., November 1983) reviewed co-financing policies and procedures. As a result, a set of suggested measures to increase export credit for priority purposes and to help secure the best possible terms was under consideration. A key objective of the Bank's co-financing efforts was to help reinstate a net inflow of commercial funds on long maturities appropriate for development finance. Through the B-loan pilot programme, nine such loans amounting to $1.1 billion were processed during the fiscal year, including two B-loans for Paraguay and Hungary totalling $502 million, to be signed early in fiscal 1985.

Special Assistance Programme

The Special Assistance Programme, approved in fiscal 1983,<sup>a</sup> was intended to strengthen the World Bank's ability to assist developing countries to adjust to the current economic environment. The Programme's major elements included: expansion in lending for high-priority operations that supported structural adjustment, policy changes, production for export, fuller use of existing capacity and maintenance of crucial infrastructure; accelerated disbursements under existing and new commitments to ensure timely implementation of high-priority projects; expanded advisory services on the design and implementation of appropriate policies; and efforts aimed at enlisting similar action from other donors.

In March 1984, the Executive Directors met to assess the progress achieved during calendar year 1983. They agreed that progress had been accomplished towards meeting the Programme's objectives, although it was too soon to assess its impact. A further assessment of the Programme, covering operations through June 1984, was to be made later in calendar year 1984.

Financing activities

During fiscal 1984, the World Bank borrowed the equivalent of $9,831 million: $2,418.1 million in United States dollars, $2,299.7 million in Swiss francs, $1,838.3 million in Deutsche mark, $1,700.2 million in Japanese yen, $828.4 million in Netherlands guilders, $421 million in pounds sterling, $101.3 million in Libyan dinars, $68.3 million in European currency units, $57.1 million in Canadian dollars, $40.8 million in Austrian schillings, $39.8 million in Belgian francs and $18 million in Luxembourg francs.

Of the 94 medium- and long-term borrowing operations conducted by the Bank, 71 were public issues or private placements throughout the world, which accounted for $6,502 million, or 66 per cent of the total amount of funds borrowed. The other 23 issues, totalling $2,072 million or 21 per cent of the funds raised, were placed with official sources: the Bank's member Governments, central banks and government institutions. Short-term borrowings outstanding as at 30 June amounted to $2,749 million.

As at 30 June 1984, the Bank's outstanding obligations totalled $45,029 million—an increase of $5,622 million over fiscal 1983—denominated in 20 different currencies.

During fiscal 1984, the Bank continued to engage in currency swaps<sup>b</sup> as a means of increasing its access to low nominal-cost currencies. It executed 44 currency-swap transactions aggregating $1,299 million ($893 million into Swiss francs, $306 million into Deutsche mark, $59 million into Netherlands guilders and $41 million into Austrian schillings), compared with $1,731 million in fiscal 1983.

Capitalization

For the fiscal year ending 30 June 1984, the value of the World Bank's capital stock was expressed on the basis of special drawing rights (SDRs) in terms of the United States dollar as computed by the International Monetary Fund on 30 June. On that date, the value of the SDR was set at $1.03121.

The subscribed capital of the Bank, as at 30 June, totalled SDR 54,315 million, an increase of over SDR 5,500 million from fiscal 1983.

Income, expenditures and reserves

The World Bank's gross revenues, generated primarily from loans and investments, increased by $422 million, or 10 per cent, to a total of $4,655 million in fiscal 1984. Net income was $600 million, a decrease of $152 million compared with fiscal 1983. The 20 per cent decrease was anticipated, since the previous year's net income had resulted primarily from high rates of return on the Bank's liquidity.

Expenses totalled $4,022 million, an increase of 16 per cent from the previous fiscal year. Administrative costs amounted to $330 million, up by $8 million.

The General Reserve of the Bank amounted to $3,450 million at the end of fiscal 1984.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC) was established in 1956 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) to provide the financing and investment expertise particularly suited to attracting private sector investors in developing countries. IFC also attracts funds for promising ventures in developing countries from international capital markets by syndicating loans and by underwritings and standby financing. It is one of the few international organizations which can provide risk capital as well as long-term loans without government guarantees.

During the fiscal year ending 30 June 1984, IFC investment operations and technical assistance efforts reflected the difficult economic conditions encountered by many private firms in the developing countries. The prolonged recession kept many private investors from undertaking large industrial projects in those countries, where much of the investment demand was for consolidating and improving productivity in existing industrial facilities. The IFC Board of Directors approved 62 projects totalling $696 million in fiscal 1984; of those, 34 were to expand, modernize or restructure existing businesses.

A total of $632 million was approved for loans made in line with prevailing commercial rates and for a bonding guarantee. The typical loan was for seven years with a grace period of three years. Although the majority of loans continued to be denominated in United States dollars, $121.1 million was in other major currencies, including Deutsche mark, French francs, Japanese yen, Pounds sterling and Swiss francs.

The Corporation's co-financing efforts, which became more important in light of economic uncertainties in many countries, continued to attract commercial financing for private sector project financing through the syndication of its loans. During the 1984 fiscal year, some 75 institutions signed a record $415 million worth of participations in IFC loans. In response to the economic situation, the Corporation also expanded its operations in a relatively new area—the physical and financial restructuring of existing firms which faced temporary financial difficulties but were otherwise sound. Ten such efforts were undertaken; four resulted in new investment opportunities, and in the others, IFC arranged the corporate restructuring without investing funds of its own. In addition, IFC helped create a bonding facility for construction firms operating outside their own countries, helped establish a secondary mortgage market institution and provided financing for a regionally oriented venture capital company. For the first time, it participated as a co-lead manager in a major equity underwriting for a diversified, closed-end investment company.

The estimated total cost of approved projects was $2,473 million, which meant that for every dollar invested by IFC, others invested $5—about the same as during the previous year. Projects were located in 37 countries, in three of which—Barbados, the Gambia and Ghana—IFC had not previously invested and in four of which it had not undertaken investments during the prior three years. Nineteen investments were in Africa, 18 in Asia, 19 in Latin America and the Caribbean, and 6 in the Middle East/European region.

Of the total 62 ventures financed, most were in manufacturing. IFC provided technical assistance and financing for six chemical plants, five basic construction material manufacturers and five pulp, paper and timber firms. Agribusiness projects continued to figure prominently in IFC activities, with nine ventures financed in as many countries. Of the other investments, eight were in fuel and non-fuel minerals and 13 were in a wide variety of financial institutions, including two leasing companies and three venture capital companies. The Corporation also invested in three hotels. Of the projects approved, 33 were wholly privately-owned enterprises and 29 were mixed government/private enterprises.

In sub-Saharan Africa, 16 projects, four more than during the previous year, were approved. They had an estimated total cost of $342 million of which IFC expected to provide $137 million, about double the amount invested in the region the previous year. A prime IFC objective, especially in that region, continued to be expansion of assistance to resource development projects, particularly agriculture; of the total number of projects, 36 were in resource development. Another central objective of IFC was increased support to ventures in low-income countries; 24 projects were in countries with a per capita annual income of $805 or less.

Operating income for fiscal 1984 rose to $151.1 million up from $137.4 million in fiscal 1983. Interest and dividend income equalled $134.1 million. Equity sales of $11.6 million included $7.4 million of capital gains. While most firms continued to service their obligations and pay dividends throughout the year, a combination of the lack of foreign exchange and the continuing economic recession forced some companies into arrears. Net income of $26.3 million, compared to $23 million in the previous year, was added to accumulated earnings and brought that total to $230.1 million.

Membership in IFC increased to 125 countries, with the admission of the Gambia.

Chapter VIII

International Development Association (IDA)

The International Development Association (IDA) was established in 1960 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) to provide assistance for the same purposes as the Bank, but primarily in the poorer developing countries and on easier terms. Though legally and financially distinct from the Bank, IDA shares the same staff.

During the fiscal year 1984 (1 July 1983 to 30 June 1984), IDA continued to promote economic development, concentrating on countries with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $806 (in 1982 dollars). Over 50 countries were eligible under that criterion.

The funds lent by IDA—called credits to distinguish them from World Bank loans—come mostly from three sources: subscriptions in convertible currencies from members; general replenishments from IDA's more industrialized and developed members; and transfers from the Bank's net earnings. IDA credits are repayable over 50 years without interest, except for a service charge of 0.75 per cent on disbursed and 0.5 per cent on undisbursed balances to cover administrative costs; there is a grace period of 10 years before repayment begins.

Unlike the Bank, which may lend to public and private entities with government guarantees, IDA lends only to Governments. In the case of revenue-producing projects, IDA credits are re-lent by the Governments on terms reflecting the local cost of capital. Therefore, IDA terms assist Governments to finance economic development without distorting the local credit structure.

At the end of fiscal 1984, IDA's resources amounted to $30,872 million.

The bulk of IDA funds for lending is provided by its Part I (richer) member countries and several Part II (developing) countries under a series of replenishment agreements.

Negotiations for the seventh replenishment of resources to provide IDA with funds for fiscal 1985-1987 were launched when the IDA Deputies (representatives of 33 donor countries) met at Washington, D.C., in November 1982.<sup>a</sup> They met four times in fiscal 1984 to discuss burden-sharing and implementation arrangements for replenishment, including conditions of effectiveness, method of payment and voting rights. The meetings were held in Tokyo (19-21 July 1983), Washington, D.C. (24 September 1983 and 12-14 January 1984), and Paris (9-10 December 1983).

At their final meeting in January, the Deputies reaffirmed their support for IDA and its activities. At that meeting, the United States reiterated its decision to contribute to IDA a maximum of $2.25 billion ($750 million a year) and to limit its share to 25 per cent. All other donors repeated the concern they had expressed at an earlier meeting in Paris that the United States position on its contribution would result in limiting the seventh replenishment to $9 billion, an amount they felt was inadequate in view of the needs of the poorest countries for development assistance. They suggested that, in order to reach a conclusive outcome and prevent a hiatus in IDA's commitment authority as of 1 July 1984, agreement should be reached on a replenishment size to which all donors could subscribe.

On 24 May 1984, the Bank's Executive Directors approved reports recommending that the Board of Governors authorize a seventh replenishment of IDA resources for the period fiscal 1985-1987 in the amount of $9 billion. They also provided IDA with a mandate to raise additional resources to close the gap between the $9 billion agreed upon and the level of $12 billion, which most donors considered the minimum level of resources required by IDA for its 1985-1987 programme.

Although fiscal year 1984 should have been the first year of lending under the seventh replenishment, the delay in the United States contribution to the sixth replenishment (two instalments totalling $1,190 million were received during fiscal 1984) made it impossible. To augment inadequate lending resources, donors other than the United States provided special contributions totalling $1,844 million to either a Fiscal Year 1984 Account or a Special Fund.<sup>b</sup> Seventeen countries contributed $1,241 million to the Fiscal Year 1984 Account during fiscal 1984 and four pledged $85 million to be paid early fiscal 1985. Six countries provided contributions totalling $413 million to the Special Fund in fiscal 1984 and another was expected to contribute $73 million in early fiscal 1985. Another four countries, whose special contributions amounted to $32 million, had not indicated as of 30 June 1984 the account to which they would contribute.

Membership of IDA rose to 132 in 1984 after the admission of Mozambique on 24 September.

By 30 June 1984, IDA had made cumulative net commitments totalling $33,653.9 million. Commitments in fiscal 1984 amounted to $3,575 million, of which $1,835.6 million went to seven countries in South Asia and $741.4 million to 16 countries and the region of Eastern Africa. India was the largest borrower during the year with nine credits amounting to $1,001 million, followed by China with five credits of $423.5 million and Bangladesh with 10 credits totalling $393.1 million.

Agriculture and rural development

In fiscal 1984, as in previous years, credits for agriculture and rural development accounted for the largest portion of IDA lending in fiscal 1984. Thirty-six credits totalling $1,401.4 million were committed in 25 countries.

Of credits totalling $715 million made to India, one of $172 million went to construct or modernize 29 irrigation projects, creating some 241,000 hectares of additional irrigated area and improving the water supply for existing irrigation. China received two credits amounting to $150 million, of which $100 million funded the planting and replanting of 40,000 hectares of rubber in the Guangdong province, the planting of windbreaks in typhoon-prone areas, the modernization of transport and agricultural machinery and the upgrading of timber-processing facilities.

Other credits were committed to agricultural research and development, agro-industry, irrigation and drainage, fisheries, forestry, livestock, training and technical assistance.

Development finance companies

IDA made four credits in fiscal 1984 totalling $201 million to development finance companies in four countries.

A credit of $70 million went to China to develop further the China Investment Bank, an institution providing investment loans for small and medium-sized industries. The South Asia region received $95 million to upgrade textile industries in Bangladesh and support five participating financial institutions in Pakistan which provided investment loans to medium- and large-sized industries. A $36-million credit was made to Zaire to support the capital-investment requirements of sub-projects approved by the Société Financière de Développement in the agricultural, transportation, industrial and agro-industrial sectors.

Education

Seven countries received eight credits totalling $202.6 million for educational projects during fiscal 1984.

China received $108.5 million, of which $85 million went to improve the quality of skilled technical manpower by supplying facilities and equipment to the television university system and to 17 post-secondary-level polytechnic institutions. A $36-million credit was made to Bangladesh to increase its technical manpower by improving education programmes and training at engineering colleges and polytechnics.

Other purposes for which credits were committed included projects to improve access to, and quality of, primary and secondary education, technical and vocational training, and educational materials, and to increase the number of schools.

Energy

Fifteen countries or regions received credits totalling $500 million for energy-related projects.

India received $143 million to increase the power-generating capacity in Madhya Pradesh state and the western region of India by 500 megawatts. A credit of $107 million was made to Nepal to build a hydroelectric power plant with a power-generating capacity of 69 megawatts. The United Republic of Tanzania was granted a credit of $35 million to increase its electricity-generating capacity by building a water intake at the Mtera reservoir and a system-control centre at Dar es Salaam, to upgrade power-system plants, and to initiate a four-year management-training programme.

Other credits went for strengthening the management of national petroleum industries, geothermal energy and hydroelectric development, evaluation of hydrocarbon potential, and technical assistance and training.

Industry

Four countries received credits totalling $51.6 million for industrial development projects in fiscal 1984.

Burma received a credit of $29.7 million to redress the structural imbalance of its fabric-finishing capacity by constructing a new plant and phasing out inefficient finishing capacities, reorganizing its Textile Industries Corporation, and upgrading its management-information and control systems. A credit of $7.6 million went to Mali for various improvements aimed at reducing the country's dependence on petroleum imports through development of other energy sources and investments to rehabilitate the Office du Niger, a parastatal enterprise operating the largest irrigation network in West Africa. Upper Volta received a $7.4-million credit to attract private foreign investors for developing the Perkoa zinc-silver deposit.

Other countries received credits for technical and economic feasibility studies of the mining and petroleum industries.

Non-project

IDA made five credits amounting to $351 million to four countries in the non-project sector during the fiscal year.

Bangladesh received two credits totalling $170 million to finance general imports and support ongoing projects in irrigation, rehabilitation of the fertilizer industry, developing the Chittagong port and rural electrification. A $76-million credit was made to Ghana for the rehabilitation of traditional export industries (cocoa, timber and gold mining) through provision of spare parts, equipment and materials and the improvement of port facilities. Malawi received $55 million to diversify exports, encourage import substitution, adjust incentives, improve the public sector's financial performance and strengthen policy-making capability. A $50-million credit went to Uganda to finance high-priority imports, support policy and institutional reforms and generate resources for the Government's budget.

Population, health and nutrition

During fiscal 1984, four countries received credits amounting to $174.5 million for projects in population, health and nutrition.

China received $85 million for health improvement projects and for upgrading teaching and research programmes of the country's 13 core medical schools. A $70-million credit went to India towards its integrated health and family-welfare programme to be implemented throughout India by the year 2000. Mali received $16.7 million to improve the effectiveness of primary health-care services in one of the poorest areas of the country and to strengthen health-support systems at the national level. A $2.8-million credit was made to the Comoros to develop a programme to slow population growth and strengthen basic health and family-planning services.

Small-scale enterprises

Two countries received credits totalling $75 million for small-scale enterprises.

A $50-million credit went to Pakistan to promote investments in small-scale industries and modernize existing ones. Sri Lanka received $25 million in technical assistance and credit to finance imported equipment to increase the output, efficiency and employment of industrial enterprises.

Technical assistance

Credits totalling $120.5 million were awarded to 12 countries for technical assistance in fiscal 1984.

Bangladesh received $25 million for technical assistance in pre-investment planning, engineering studies and the formulation of economic policies and plans. Ghana was awarded $17.1 million to assist the Government in implementing export policy and institutional reforms, build local capability through staff training, and ensure management capacity of cocoa, timber and gold mining organizations. Another $15 million went to Uganda to strengthen the country's decision-making, planning, project-preparation and implementation capabilities and to transfer skills to Ugandans through training.

Other credits were made for technical assistance in training, education, equipment, agricultural reforms, export development and investment, and tourism promotion.

Transportation

Fourteen credits totalling $353.5 million went to 13 countries for transportation projects during fiscal 1984.

Ethiopia received $70 million for a road project to promote agricultural and industrial production by improving access to productive areas, upgrade social services to the rural population and provide better access to drought-prone areas. A $58-million credit went to build a third highway, improve road maintenance, train road-maintenance personnel, develop the local construction industry and improve traffic-safety regulations in Uganda. Kenya received $40 million to help finance a highway project. Credits approved for other countries went for construction or improvement of roads, railway systems and ports, technical assistance, equipment and training.

Urbanization

Five countries received credits amounting to $53 million for urban development during fiscal 1984.

Madagascar received $12.8 million to assist two municipalities in tax collection, financial management and institution building, to expand production of local building materials and to finance a programme to improve living conditions. A $12-million credit was made to Yemen to provide affordable infrastructure services to the low-income population of Hodeidah and to strengthen the Government's capacity to plan, design and execute urban-development programmes.

Credits were also awarded for land development, upgrading settlements, equipment, technical assistance and training.

Water supply and sewerage

Of three credits totalling $90.9 million for water supply and sewerage, $73 million went to India to expand facilities to provide safe drinking-water to some 3.3 million people of Tamil Nadu state and to improve sanitation facilities. A $10.9-million credit to Mali went to upgrade living and sanitary conditions in the western part of the country, and to provide technical assistance, equipment and training.

Democratic Yemen received $7 million to begin construction of a long-term water-supply plan, carry out water-supply studies and provide technical assistance and training.

Secretariat

The principal officers, staff, headquarters and other offices of IDA are the same as those of the World Bank (see pp. 1234 and 1236).

Chapter IX

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

After years marked by global recession, stagnating world trade and debt crises, 1984 marked the beginning of recovery both in industrial and developing nations. The degree of recovery, however, varied from country to country.

The improving world economic situation was reflected in the fact that member countries of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) made less use of the Fund's financial resources than in 1983. Total purchases—measured in special drawing rights (SDRs), the unit of account of IMF—amounted to SDR 7.3 billion, a decrease of 42.2 per cent from 12.6 billion in the previous year. Nevertheless, the 1984 drawings were the third highest in IMF history.

The Fund's financial resources were made available through various policies and facilities, which differed mainly in respect of members' balance of payments difficulty and the degree of conditionality attached to them. Conditionality requirements, which linked financial assistance to the adoption of economic adjustment policies by members and aimed at achieving a viable balance of payments position, were less rigorous for purchases in the first credit tranche (under which a member may draw up to 25 per cent of its quota). Drawings in the first credit tranche required only that members made reasonable efforts to overcome their external payments imbalances.

Purchases in the upper credit tranches, which were generally under stand-by or extended arrangements, required substantial justification and were subject to performance criteria and phasing (that is, made available in instalments). Extended arrangements provided financial assistance to meet balance-of-payments deficits for longer periods and in larger amounts than under credit tranches; they incorporated a wider range of policies and included economic and financial measures geared to a medium-term adjustment of structural imbalances in production, trade and prices.

Accompanying the reduction in credit use during 1984 was an acceleration of a trend by members towards making a larger proportion of drawings under highly conditional facilities. About 89 per cent of drawings in 1984—SDR 3.1 billion and 3.3 billion respectively—were under stand-by arrangements (typically made over a one-year period), or under the extended facility (usually made over three years), which indicated strenuous economic adjustment efforts in member countries using Fund resources. The largest adjustments in 1984 were made by seven major borrowers—Argentina, Brazil, Indonesia, Mexico, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and Venezuela. At the end of the year, 33 stand-by and extended arrangements were in effect between the Fund and its members, totalling SDR 14.8 billion.

In addition to tranche policies, IMF's special facilities assisted members with balance-of-payments difficulties identifiable by specific economic criteria. The compensatory financing facility assisted members with deficits arising from shortfalls in export receipts that were short term and largely beyond their control. The buffer stock financing facility supported members' contributions to international buffer stocks concerned with commodity price stabilization. Drawings in 1984 under the compensatory financing facility totalled SDR 0.8 billion, while those under the buffer stock financing facility totalled SDR 2.1 million, drawings under both facilities accounted for 11 per cent of total 1984 drawings, compared with nearly 25 per cent in 1983.

IMF liquidity

The Fund's liquidity position was again reviewed in February 1984 by its Executive Board, resulting in an increase in members' quotas by a third to SDR 89,236.3 million (about $90 billion). Borrowing arrangements were put into place with the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency, the Bank for International Settlements, Japan, and the National Bank of Belgium.

Following a February 1984 decision of the Executive Board that IMF should aim at reducing its SDR holdings to approximately SDR 4 billion by the end of May 1985, the Fund made more use of SDR relative to currencies available in the operational budget for transfers.

Access to IMF resources

The Fund's policy of enlarged access to its resources enabled it to provide supplementary financing to members whose balance of payments deficits were large in relation to their quotas and which needed resources in larger amounts and for longer periods than were available under the regular credit tranches. The IMF Executive Board reviewed the enlarged access policy on 16 November 1984 and decided to continue it in 1985 with access limits adjusted slightly downward as follows. Access would be subject to annual limits of 95 or 115 per cent of quota (previously 102 or 125 per cent), three-year limits of 280 or 345 per cent of quota (previously 306 or 375 per cent), and cumulative limits of 408 or 450 per cent of quota (previously 408 or 500 per cent), depending on the seriousness of a member's balance-of-payments need and the strength of its adjustment effort. However, in exceptional circumstances, arrangements could be approved for amounts above those limits. The enlarged access policy and revised access limits were to be revised in 1985.

Exchange rate policies

During 1984, IMF strengthened its surveillance over the exchange rate policies of both industrial and developing countries. At the June 1984 economic summit in London, the leaders of the seven major industrial countries expressed their intent to co-operate with the Fund in its surveillance of exchange rates. The Fund's function in that regard was to ensure that its members' exchange rate policies were guided by principles adopted in 1977<sup>a</sup> enjoining members to avoid manipulating exchange rates or the international monetary system. The 1977 agreement also obliged members to collaborate with IMF and other members in promoting a stable system of exchange rates.

In March 1984, the Executive Board conducted both its biennial review of the 1977 agreement and its annual review of the implementation of surveillance. It concluded that no revision of the principles and procedures set out in 1977 was necessary, but called for more active implementation. A further point noted during the 1984 surveillance review was that many of the international economic difficulties of recent years had been associated with pronounced swings in exchange rates between major industrial countries and with the repercussions of the prevailing low levels of economic activity and high interest rates in those countries on the rest of the world. The Board concluded that it was incumbent on the Fund to form a view on domestic policies needed to foster the smooth working of the system and to attempt to persuade its members to follow such policies.

Publications

Publications issued by the IMF in 1984 included the Annual Report of the Executive Board, the Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions, International Financial Statistics, Balance of Payments Statistics (monthly and Yearbook), Government Finance Statistics Yearbook, and Direction of Trade Statistics (monthly, Yearbook and biannual supplement).

Periodicals included Staff Papers, Finance and Development (published jointly with the World Bank), and the IMF Survey (published 23 times a year). Also published were a series of papers on wide-ranging subjects of interest to the international financial community, explanatory pamphlets on the workings of the Fund, books on monetary and fiscal issues and seminar volumes.

Membership

Membership of the Fund rose to 148 in 1984 with the admission of Saint Christopher and Nevis on 15 August and Mozambique on 24 September.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, IMF staff numbered 1,750, drawn from more than 100 countries.

Chapter X

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) estimated total traffic of the world's scheduled airlines to be over 157 billion tonne-kilometres during 1984, an increase of 8 per cent over 1983. The airlines carried over 830 million passengers at a load factor of 65 per cent, 1 percentage point above 1983. Air freight increased by 13 per cent to almost 39 billion tonne-kilometres, the highest annual increase during the past decade. Airmail traffic amounted to over 4 billion tonne-kilometres, an increase of 7 per cent, higher than the average rate of increase in 10 years.

In 1984, the ICAO Council held three regular sessions and also convened an extraordinary session to consider an amendment to the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago, United States, 1944) following the 1983 destruction of a Korean Air Lines civil aircraft (for further details, see below, under "Legal matters").

During 1984, membership of ICAO rose to 153 with the admission of Tonga on 2 December.

Activities in 1984Air navigation*

During 1984, ICAO's efforts in air navigation continued to be directed towards updating and implementing ICAO Specifications, guidance material and Regional Plans. The Specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 17 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention, and of Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS) contained in three PANS documents. Regional Plans set forth air navigation facilities and services required for international air navigation in the nine ICAO regions.

During the year, the Specifications in six annexes and in one PANS document were amended. Amendments were also made to Regional Plans.

Seven air navigation meetings were held in 1984. They covered a wide range of subjects and recommended changes to ICAO Specifications. To promote their uniform application, ICAO made available guidance material—new and revised technical manuals and ICAO circulars—to assist States in establishing and maintaining up-to-date and effective aeronautical infrastructures.

ICAO regional offices assisted States to implement Regional Plans and, in addition, experts were sent to advise on installing new facilities and services and on operating existing ones.

Special attention was given to: aircraft airworthiness and operation; environmental protection; accident investigation and prevention; aerodromes; air traffic control; aeronautical charts, communications, information services and meteorology; helicopter operations; personnel licensing and training; search and rescue; aviation medicine and security; and transport of dangerous goods.

Air transport

ICAO continued its programmes of economic studies, collecting and publishing air transport statistics, promoting greater facilitation in international air transport and preparing for the Third Air Transport Conference (scheduled for October/November 1985). Air transport meetings convened during the year included three meetings of expert panels, four regional workshops and one facilitation area meeting.

Panel meetings considered guidelines on route facility cost accounting and cost allocation (Montreal, Canada, February/March and December) and international air transport fares and rates (Montreal, October). Workshops were held on international fares and rates (Nairobi, Kenya, October/November), statistics (Bangkok, Thailand, November) and airport and route facility economics (Dakar, Senegal, April; Panama, June). The facilitation meeting discussed problems in the Middle East area (Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, November).

ICAO publications in 1984 included a document on international signs to provide guidance to persons at airports, the regular series of digests of civil aviation statistics, the yearbook on world civil aviation statistics, policy and guidance material on international air transport regulation and tariffs, a new edition of the manual on the ICAO statistics programme, a manual of airport and air navigation facility tariffs, a study of regional differences in fares, rates and costs for international air transport for 1982 and a survey of international air transport fares and rates in 1983.

During the year, ICAO continued to co-operate closely with other international organizations such as the International Air Transport Association, the Airport Associations Co-ordinating Council, the Customs Co-operation Council, the World Tourism Organization and the Universal Postal Union. It also continued to provide secretariat services to three independent regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

Following a 1982 conference to amend the 1956 Danish and Icelandic joint financing agreements for air navigation services in Greenland and the Faeroe Islands, the two agreements as amended were provisionally applied from 1 January 1983. By the end of 1984, the protocols of amendment had been accepted by 10 countries.

Legal matters

Early in the year, the ICAO Council considered the final report of the ICAO Secretary-General on the investigation carried out in accordance with a Council resolution of September 1983 following the destruction of a Korean Air Lines civil aircraft earlier that month.<sup>a</sup> On 6 March, it condemned the use of armed force which resulted in the destruction of the airliner and urged all contracting States to co-operate fully in examining and adopting an amendment to the Chicago Convention and in improving measures for preventing a recurrence of this type of tragedy.

At its extraordinary session at Montreal from 24 April to 10 May 1984, the ICAO Assembly unanimously adopted an amendment (article 3 bis), embodied in a Protocol, to the Chicago Convention which reaffirmed the principle that every State must refrain from resorting to the use of weapons against civil aircraft in flight. The amendment was to enter into force after ratification by two thirds of ICAO's members. By the end of the year, two States had ratified the Protocol.

As requested by the Council in December 1983, a sub-committee of the Legal Committee met at Montreal from 25 September to 3 October 1984 to consider the preparation of a draft instrument on the interception of civil aircraft. The sub-committee concluded that this item should be considered only after the entry into force of the amendment to the Chicago Convention and the completion of the work of the Air Navigation Commission and the Council on the review of ICAO Standards, Recommended Practices and guidance material on the subject of the interception of civil aircraft. On 16 November, the Council considered the report of the sub-committee and requested the Secretary-General to prepare a preliminary study of appropriate action to be submitted to the Council in March 1985.

The Committee on Unlawful Interference with International Civil Aviation and Its Facilities held three meetings during the year. It reviewed proposals for the amendment of Specifications on security—safeguarding international aviation against acts of unlawful interference. As a result of the Committee's recommendations, the ICAO Council adopted on 30 November an amendment differentiating between the requirements for the carriage of weapons on board aircraft by law enforcement officers and authorized persons and the requirements for the transportation of weapons in other cases. The Committee also considered improving the current system of obtaining and analysing information from States concerned in incidents of unlawful interference.

The following conventions and protocols on international air law concluded under ICAO auspices were ratified or adhered to during 1984:

Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft (Tokyo, 1963)

Bahrain, Czechoslovakia, Haiti, Nauru

Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft (The Hague, 1970)

Bahrain, Guinea, Haiti, Monaco, Nauru

Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation (Montreal, 1971)

Bahrain, Guinea, Haiti, Monaco, Nauru

Additional Protocol No. 1 to Amend the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air signed at Warsaw on 12 October 1929 (Montreal, 1975) (not in force)

United Kingdom

Additional Protocol No. 2 to Amend the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air signed at Warsaw on 12 October 1929, as amended by the Protocol done at The Hague on 28 September 1955 (Montreal, 1975) (not in force)

United Kingdom

Additional Protocol No. 3 to Amend the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air signed at Warsaw on 12 October 1929, as amended by the Protocols done at The Hague on 28 September 1955 and at Guatemala City on 8 March 1971 (Montreal, 1975) (not in force)

United Kingdom

Montreal Protocol No. 4 to Amend the Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air signed at Warsaw on 12 October 1929, as amended by the Protocol done at The Hague on 28 September 1955 (Montreal, 1975) (not in force)

Technical assistance

During 1984, ICAO provided technical assistance to 93 States; in 54 of these, there were resident missions consisting of one or more experts. In addition to resident expertise, assistance was provided in the form of equipment, fellowships and scholarships and through short missions by experts.

Eight new large-scale projects, each costing more than $500,000, for which ICAO was to be the executing agency, were approved by the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). Three large-scale projects were financed under trust fund assistance.

ICAO employed 589 experts from 49 countries during all or part of 1984, 349 on assignments under UNDP and 250 on trust fund projects (including 11 under the associate experts programme). There were also 27 United Nations Volunteers. The number of experts in the field at the end of 1984 was 331 as compared with 373 at the end of 1983.

A total of 1,106 fellowships were awarded in 1984 (as compared with 985 in 1983), of which 1,042 were implemented.

Equipment purchases and sub-contracts were a substantial proportion of the technical assistance programme in 1984. Thirty-nine Governments or organizations had registered with ICAO under the Civil Aviation Purchasing Service. The total sum committed to equipment under technical assistance during the year amounted to $10.5 million.

The following countries and Territories were aided:

Africa: Angola, Benin, Botswana, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Chad, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Ivory Coast, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Swaziland, Togo, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Americas: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bolivia, Brazil, Cayman Islands, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Netherlands Antilles, Panama, Peru, Saint Lucia, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Turks and Caicos Islands, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Asia/Pacific: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Samoa, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Tonga, Viet Nam.

Europe, Mediterranean and Middle East: Algeria, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Morocco, Oman, Poland, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Yemen.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the total number of staff members employed in the ICAO secretariat stood at 861: 308 in the Professional and higher categories drawn from 71 nationalities, and 553 in the General Service and related categories. In addition, 212 persons were employed in regional offices and 159 in the Professional category served as technical experts on UNDP projects in the field.

Budget

The revised appropriations for the 1984 financial year totalled $32,889,000. Modifications were approved by the ICAO Council and are reflected below (in United States dollars):

Chapter XI

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

The Universal Postal Union (UPU), established at Berne, Switzerland, in 1874 for the exchange of postal services between nations, is one of the oldest international intergovernmental organizations. It promotes the organization and improvement of postal services, plays an important role in the development of international collaboration and participates, at the request of its members, in various forms of postal technical assistance.

In 1984, the membership of UPU rose to 167 following the admission of Solomon Islands (4 May) and Kiribati (14 August) and the confirmation by the Congress of the expulsion of South Africa.

Activities of UPU organsUniversal Postal Congress*

The Universal Postal Congress, composed of all member States, is the supreme legislative authority of UPU and usually meets every five years. The nineteenth session of the Congress was held at Hamburg, Federal Republic of Germany, from 18 June to 27 July 1984, and the next was scheduled to meet at Washington, D.C., in 1989.

The 1984 Congress revised the Acts of the Union on the basis of proposals submitted by member States, the Executive Council and the Consultative Council for Postal Studies. It also considered the work accomplished during the preceding five years and set the framework and scope of future work.

In addition to its legislative and regulatory functions, the Congress dealt with the Union's finances, the work programmes of its permanent bodies, technical co-operation, and election of the senior officers of the International Bureau and members of the Executive and Consultative Councils. It also decided to replace the name "UPU Day" (celebrated on 9 October every year) by "World Post Day".

Because of communications-market development, the Congress discussed changes in the postal system, which resulted in the Declaration of Hamburg, stressing that UPU must "actively participate in strengthening the international postal service as a whole and in improving the standard and speed of international mail circulation and postal exchanges". It also relaxed the existing provisions to permit the introduction of new services between Congresses.

On technical co-operation, the Congress decided that means should be found for improving and developing the postal services, particularly in the least developed countries, and drew up the general framework of UPU activities for 1985-1989.

Executive Council

At its 1984 session, held at Berne from 27 February to 8 March, the 40-member Executive Council—which carries the work of UPU between sessions of the Congress by maintaining close contact with postal administrations, exercising control over the International Bureau, promoting technical assistance and working with the United Nations and other organizations—considered administrative matters, completed the tasks referred to it by the 1979 Congress and finalized the proposals and documents to be submitted to the 1984 Congress.

The new Executive Council, elected by the 1984 Congress, held an organizational meeting on 23 July during the Congress.

Consultative Council for Postal Studies

The 35-member Consultative Council for Postal Studies pursued in 1984 its studies of various technical, economic and operational problems affecting postal administrations of UPU member States, and examined teaching and training difficulties in newly independent and developing countries.

The new Council, elected by the 1984 Congress, held an organizational meeting on 24 July during the Congress. At its annual meeting held at Berne from 29 October to 2 November, the Council adopted the work programme approved by the Congress and assigned to its committees studies to be undertaken during 1984-1989. Pursuant to a 1982 decision, the Council decided to prepare for publication the fifth edition of the Multilingual Vocabulary of the International Postal Service. It also dealt with technical co-operation, international high-speed mail and computers in the postal service.

International Bureau

Under the general supervision of the Government of the Swiss Confederation, the International Bureau—the secretariat of UPU—continued to serve the postal administrations of member States as an organ for liaison, information and consultation.

During 1984, the Bureau was responsible for collecting, co-ordinating, publishing and disseminating international postal service information. At the request of postal administrations, it also conducted inquiries and acted as a clearing-house for settling certain accounts between them. In addition, the Bureau considered requests for amendments to the Acts of the Union, gave notice of changes adopted and took part in the preparatory work for the 1984 Congress.

The Congress elected Adwaldo Cardoso Botto de Barros and Félix Cicéron as Director-General and Deputy Director-General of the Bureau, respectively, to take office on 1 January 1985.

As at 31 December 1984, the number of staff members employed by the UPU secretariat stood at 138: 57 in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 46 countries) and 81 in the General Service category. Also, 15 officials were employed in the Arabic, English, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish translation services.

Technical co-operation

In 1984, UPU technical co-operation was financed mainly by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), with expenditures amounting to some $1.6 million.

Assistance was also provided through the UPU Special Fund (voluntary contributions in cash and kind from member States) and the regular budget. Total expenditures from these two sources in 1984 amounted to approximately $878,000. In addition, postal administrations provided assistance on a bilateral basis.

Training of postal instructors continued to be given priority. Several training courses were organized in France, the United Kingdom and other regional training centres. Other courses were held in various developing countries.

Thirty-two national and regional projects concerning postal services were carried out under UNDP. Forty-six expert missions were undertaken and 272 fellowships were awarded (two thirds for study courses). Several projects received assistance in the form of equipment. The projects dealt with all main branches of postal service, including national or regional vocational training centres.

The Special Fund and the regular budget funded missions by experts and consultants, scholarships for training, instruction materials and equipment. During 1984, 36 consultants carried out technical missions in 44 postal administrations and 157 fellowships were granted for training courses and technical meetings.

In addition, the Special Fund programme included a contribution by Belgium to continue a project to assist the drought-stricken Sahelian region of Africa. Other technical assistance activities, such as fellowships and training courses, were also offered by several countries during the year.

UPU continued its programme of technical assistance subject to payment, under which member States could finance assistance themselves by funds on deposit.

Budget

Since 1981, under UPU's self-financing system, contributions are payable in advance by member States on the basis of the following year's budget. At its 1984 session, the Executive Council approved a budget of 22,961,300 Swiss francs for 1985 (see table).

|  | Amount(in Swiss francs) |
|--|-----------------------------|
| Income  |                             |

| Total   | 22,961,300*          |

*Equal to $10,986,268 on the basis of 2.09 Swiss francs = $US 1.00.

Each member State of UPU chooses its class of contribution, on a scale of 1 to 50 units. For 1984, the Executive Council fixed the amount of the contributory unit at 18,800 Swiss francs on the basis of a total of 1,067 units. The following table gives assessments in Swiss francs by class of contribution:

| CLASS OFCONTRIBUTION | ASSESSMENTS     |                          |

*Calculated on the basis of 2.09 Swiss francs = $US 1.00.

Three new assessment classes of contribution (applicable on 1 January 1986) were added by the 1984 Congress: 40, 35 and 0.5 units. The last class is reserved for the least developed countries listed by the United Nations and for other countries designated by the Executive Council.

Chapter XII

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

During 1984, membership of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) rose to 160 with the admission of Namibia (represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia) on 25 January and Brunei Darussalam on 19 November.

Administrative Council

The thirty-ninth session of the Administrative Council of ITU was held from 2 to 19 April 1984 at ITU headquarters, Geneva. It reviewed administrative matters, approved a revised schedule of conferences, and drew up the agenda for the first (1986) session of the Regional Administrative Radio Conference for broadcasting in the frequency band 1605-1705 kilohertz in Region 2 (the Americas and Greenland). The Council also strengthened ITU's regional presence in technical co-operation activities and reviewed its computer facilities concerning radio frequency spectrum management and administrative radio conferences.

Administrative radio conferences

The first session of the World Administrative Radio Conference for the planning of the HF (high frequency) bands allocated to the Broadcasting Service was held at Geneva from 10 January to 11 February 1984. It adopted a technical report to the second (1987) session and five resolutions to improve the planning and use of HF broadcasting bands.

The second session of the Regional Administrative Conference for the planning of VHF (very high frequency) sound broadcasting in Region 1 (Africa and Europe) and certain countries in Region 3 (Asia and Australasia), held at Geneva from 29 October to 7 December, adopted a regional agreement incorporating a plan for FM (frequency modulation) sound broadcasting stations in the frequency band 87.5-108 megahertz.

International consultative committees

In 1984, the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR) made important progress in system standards for fixed-satellite service systems and terrestrial radio relay systems, particularly in digital transmission, and on the hypothetical reference path in the Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN) reference connection. New recommendations were drafted on land-mobile and maritime-mobile systems, with particular progress on cellular radio systems, radio paging and the future global maritime distress and safety system.

The CCIR Conference Preparatory Meeting (Geneva, 25 June-20 July) prepared technical guidelines for the 1985 World Administrative Radio Conference (WARC) on the use of the geostationary satellite orbit and the planning of the space services using it.

The International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT) eighth plenary assembly (Malaga-Torremolinos, Spain, 8-19 October) approved a large number of recommendations to appear in the CCITT book to be published in 1985. Topics covered in the principal study groups included: transmission systems; telephone operation and quality, data transmission on the public-switched telephone and public data networks; digital networks; switching and signalling; maintenance and protection; and general tariff principles. Special study groups produced manuals and case-studies of particular interest to developing countries on subjects such as: general network planning; primary sources of energy; rural telecommunications; regional satellite communications; transition from analogue to digital telecommunication networks; effects of inflation on telecommunications organizations; allocation of scarce resources and application of information technology; and socio-economic implications of teleprocessing.

International Frequency Registration Board

During the year, the International Frequency Registration Board (IFRB) continued to implement the decisions taken at the 1979 WARC, including a review of the Master International Frequency Register (MIFR), activities related to computer analysis and the search for replacement frequencies, conversion and transfer of MIFR resulting from revision of the International Frequency List, and conversion of MIFR to a new method of designating emissions.

IFRB's other activities were follow-up actions to the 1981 Regional Administrative MF (medium frequency) Broadcasting Conference (Region 2) and the first (1982) session of the Regional Administrative Conference for FM sound broadcasting in the VHF band (Region 1 and certain countries in Region 3) and preparation for and participation in the second (1984) session; organization of international monitoring programmes; preparation for administrative radio conferences and the 1985 WARC; and examination of frequency matters.

Technical co-operation

In 1984, ITU continued its activities of technical co-operation in conformity with the 1982 ITU Plenipotentiary Conference<sup>a</sup> (Nairobi, Kenya) which made a provision in the Nairobi Convention—which entered into force on 1 January 1984—to strengthen ITU's role in promoting and providing supportive action in addition to its regulatory, standardization and co-ordination activities.

The slowing down of activities financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) increased during 1984. However, towards year's end, resources available to UNDP began to level out and even to show a slight upturn, giving promise of additional funds to be carried forward and become available during the rest of the programming cycle until the end of 1986.

Under ITU programmes of technical co-operation in developing countries, 477 expert missions were carried out, 629 fellows were trained abroad and equipment valued at $4,044,819 was delivered for various field projects. The total cost of this assistance amounted to $23,558,312.

The following countries and territories were aided:

Africa: Angola, Benin, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Djibouti, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gambia, Ivory Coast, Lesotho, Mauritania, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal, Somalia, Sudan, Swaziland, Tunisia, Uganda, Zaire, Zimbabwe.

The Americas: Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay.

Asia and the Pacific: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Burma, China, India, Indonesia, Iran, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Mongolia, Nepal, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Samoa, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Tokelau, Tonga.

The main objectives of ITU technical co-operation continued to be: promoting development of regional telecommunications networks in Africa, the Americas, Asia, the Pacific, the Middle East and the Mediterranean Basin; strengthening telecommunication technical and administrative services in developing countries; and vocational training.

ITU continued to promote development of regional telecommunication networks and their integration into the world-wide telecommunication system, in accordance with objectives established by the World Plan Committee and regional plan committees.

The Pan-African Telecommunications (PANAFTEL) Network progressed at interconnecting countries without transit beyond the continent. Most of the network was installed during the year, with the exception of the subregion of Central Africa.

In 1984, other ITU activities included: the search for solutions to interface problems; the study of trunk routes in the Kagera River Basin (United Republic of Tanzania); participation in acceptance tests for several links; and specific technical proposals, such as the synchronization of central frequency generators. ITU also encouraged administrations to sign mutual operational agreements aiming at facilitating the use of PANAFTEL's installations and continued its study and implementation of subregional routing plans for telephony and telex.

By the end of 1984, 18 countries had begun to develop their national plan for the improvement of maintenance based on the existing general strategy and the manual issued in 1983.<sup>b</sup>

In the Americas, several projects were under way to strengthen national telecommunication technical and administrative services, notably in Bermuda—advice on a draft of a new telecommunications act; Brazil—advice on technology transfer and procurement of high-technology equipment; Cuba—assistance to the Central Telecommunications Laboratory; Haiti—preparation of development plans; Panama—assistance in installing a new maritime radio system; Peru—support with outside plant planning, design and engineering, and contract management; and Uruguay—introduction of data communication services.

Together with the Asia-Pacific Telecommunity, ITU prepared a work programme for implementation in 1985, and assisted the least developed countries of the region in developing rural networks, improving maintenance standards and upgrading telecommunication services. Under a UNDP/ITU regional project on development, operation and maintenance, South Pacific countries were assisted in planning new telecommunication facilities and implementing development projects. Another South Pacific project provided training in radio frequency monitoring and management.

Activities continued in the Middle East and Mediterranean Basin to develop the regional network, under the 1978 master plan. This included: enhancing technical capabilities in transmission switching, traffic, network planning, maintenance, management and ISDN networks; assisting in the implementation of projects in the master plan; enhancing capabilities of Arab regional organizations; and co-ordinating the international terrestrial and satellite networks regionally.

In co-operation with GULFVISION, ITU continued its study of radio propagation in the Gulf area, enabling the countries of the region to make the best use of the allocated bands for television and sound/FM broadcasting services. The main objective of the European regional project was to provide countries concerned with a more effective international telecommunications infrastructure. In Albania, a project was under way to develop national links and two international links—to Greece and Italy. Other projects in Europe and the Middle East were devoted to the development and strengthening of administration and to training.

Training activities

By year's end, 190 training packages were available through the ITU sharing system for training and a comprehensive basic course in teletraffic engineering was designed. Under the course development in telecommunications project, 56 course developers from eight countries had completed their training and 40 more had started.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the total staff of ITU numbered 709 officials (excluding staff on short-term contracts). Of these, nine were elected officials, 564 had permanent contracts and 136 had fixed-term contracts; 53 nationalities were represented in posts subject to geographical distribution.

Budget

The following budget for 1984 was adopted by the Administrative Council in 1983:

|   | Amount(in Swiss francs) |
|---|-----------------------------|
| Income   |                             |
| Contribution by members and private operating agencies                  | 93,554,000                  |
| Contribution by UNDP for technical co-operation administrative expenses | 9,987,000                   |

Each member of ITU chooses the class of contribution in which it wishes to be included and pays in advance its annual contributory share to the budget on the basis of the budgetary provision. In accordance with the 1982 International Telecommunication Convention, new classes of contribution were chosen by ITU members with effect from 1 January 1984. The classes of contribution for 1985 for members are listed in ANNEX I below.

As at the end of 1984, the total of units for members was 393. The contributory unit for 1984 was 209,000 Swiss francs; the contributory unit for 1985 was to be 221,400 Swiss francs.

Chapter XIII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

With the admission of Brunei on 26 December, the membership of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) rose to 158 in 1984—153 States and five territories.

WMO carried out its 1984 work in accordance with the programme and budget adopted for 1984-1987 by the Ninth (1983) World Meteorological Congress, the highest body of WMO, which meets at least once every four years.

The 36-member Executive Council (known as the Executive Committee until 1983<sup>a</sup>), which supervises implementation of Congress resolutions and regulations, held its thirty-sixth session at Geneva from 6 to 23 June 1984.

The twenty-ninth annual International Meteorological Organization Prize, commemorating the non-governmental organization which preceded WMO, was awarded to Thomas F. Malone (United States) for outstanding contributions to the development of international meteorology, leadership in atmospheric sciences and collaboration in meteorology.

Activities in 1984World Weather Watch*

The World Weather Watch (WWW), the basic programme of WMO, continued to provide in 1984 the observational data and processed information required by member States for operational and research purposes. Its essential elements were: the Global Observing System (GOS), which obtained observational data; the Global Data-processing System (GDPS), which provided for processing, storage and retrieval of observational data and made available processed information; and the Global Telecommunication System (GTS), which offered telecommunication facilities and arrangements for rapid and reliable collection, exchange and distribution of observational data and processed information.

The activities of GOS continued under its two sub-systems—one surface-based and the other space-based. The surface-based sub-system provided conventional basic data from regional synoptic networks, other observational networks of stations on land and at sea, and aircraft meteorological observations required for operation and research. In the space-based sub-system, meteorological satellites in near-polar orbiting and geostationary systems took direct observations and provided data collection and dissemination. GOS also provided member States with both quantitative information derived from instrument measurements, such as atmospheric pressure, humidity, air temperature and wind velocity, and qualitative information aimed at describing phenomena by providing information on the state of the sky, forms of clouds and types of precipitation.

Meteorological satellite systems operated by member States and the European Space Agency continued to provide valuable information. Progress was achieved in developing observation systems involving new technology to improve global coverage of observational data, especially from oceans and data-sparse areas. Two important elements for improving GOS—the Aircraft to Satellite Data Relay System for automatic meteorological observations from wide-bodied commercial aircraft and the Automated Shipboard Aerological Programme for upper-air observations from merchant ships and drifting buoy systems—were expected to be operational by 1985-1986.

To assist member States in providing meteorological services required for the socio-economic development of their countries, upgrading to high-quality observations and products was achieved during 1984 on GOS, GDPS and GTS. Steps were taken within GDPS to make available numerical weather prediction and other products to enable countries to provide extended and improved services for various applications of meteorology and operational hydrology. Further improvement in the operation of GTS was achieved through the upgrading of circuits, making them capable of high-speed data transmission, the use of multiplexed channels and the progressive automation of centres for handling increased volumes of traffic.

Ocean affairs

In 1984, WMO continued to promote marine meteorological services over high seas and coastal areas and the application of marine climatological information for planning marine activities. The Commission for Marine Meteorology (CMM) (ninth session, Geneva, 1-12 October) adopted several resolutions and recommendations relating to the Marine Meteorology Programme, and approved its work programme for the four-year inter-sessional period. As the demand for marine meteorological information increased, CMM acted on several issues, including means of improving data coverage of the world's oceans using the latest advances in marine telecommunications, satellite systems and automation techniques. To this end, the Commission approved a plan for a WMO Wave Programme and suggested the establishment of a guide to applications of marine climatology. It also recommended that workshops and seminars on the intercalibration of conventional and remotely sensed marine data be continued, and proposed the creation of a digital sea-ice data bank.

In addition to marine activities co-ordinated by CMM, other ocean-related activities were carried out by the Integrated Global Ocean Services System, a joint WMO/Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission programme. WMO's support for the meteorological component of the investigation of the phenomenon known as "El Niño" was also continued.

Aviation

At its June session, the Executive Council recommended that the activities of the Aviation Meteorology Programme be expanded and strengthened. In this connection, a revision of WMO Technical Regulations, where they applied to international aviation services, was undertaken in view of their relevance to the World Area Forecast System. Other activities were also being carried out within the Aeronautical Meteorology Programme, in close co-operation with the International Civil Aviation Organization, to assist member States with the aeronautical meteorological services required to ensure the safety, efficiency and economy of air navigation. The WMO Commission for Aeronautical Meteorology recommended the development of work and specific studies aimed at improving forecasting accuracy in respect of meteorological parameters affecting the safety and economy of air navigation.

World Climate Programme

During 1984, the objectives of the World Climate Programme (WCP), which was accorded a high priority by the Ninth (1983) Congress,<sup>b</sup> continued to aid nations in applying climate information to human activities, to improve the knowledge of climate processes and to develop the capability to foresee changes of climate which might affect human activities. Responsibilities within WCP are divided between the World Climate Applications Programme (WCAP), the World Climate Data Programme (WCDP), the World Climate Impact Studies Programme (WCIP) and the World Climate Research Programme (WCRP).

Activities within WCAP included a Technical Conference on Urban Climatology and Its Applications with Special Regard to Tropical Areas (Mexico City, 26-30 November 1984), with 95 participants. Progress was made towards a WMO/WHO/UNEP Symposium on Climate and Human Health to be held at Lenin-grad, USSR, in 1985.

WCDP activities included data requirements and data exchange; assistance to countries for the improvement of climate data management systems/services; transfer of technology in climate data processing; information on climate observing stations, data sets and data sources; climate system monitoring (CSM); international co-ordination; and world weather records. At a meeting (Niamey, Niger, 3-7 December) which reviewed climate data management in Africa, deficiencies were identified and remedial action requiring national and international support suggested. Progress was made by an expert meeting (Offenbach, Federal Republic of Germany, July) to define the structure and format for the compilation and preparation of the World Climate Data Information Referral Service catalogue of published data sets. A CSM scientific review meeting (Geneva, 19-23 November), supported by UNEP, developed the first "prototype" CSM review.

The main activity within WCIP, carried out by UNEP in collaboration with WMO, focused on the impact of climate variations on national food systems, assessment of the impact of man's activities on climate (especially increased atmospheric carbon dioxide) and the methodology of climate impact assessments.

WCRP work, conducted jointly by WMO and the International Council of Scientific Unions to determine the extent of climate predictability and of man's influence on climate, included studies on cloud climatology and radiation, ocean-atmosphere interaction and ocean processes, and ozone concentration trends.

Research and development

The Research and Development Programme continued to focus on weather prediction, tropical meteorology, environmental pollution monitoring and weather modification research. The responsibility for promoting and co-ordinating these research activities lay with the WMO Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS).

In 1984, progress was achieved in the implementation of expanded programmes approved by the Ninth Congress concerning short- and medium-range weather prediction research and long-range forecasting research. As requested by the Congress, a Steering Group on Numerical Experimentation was established within CAS (first session, Geneva, 19-21 November) to review, promote and co-ordinate weather prediction research based on data from the First GARP Global Experiment (also known as the Global Weather Experiment) and other Global Atmospheric Research Programme (GARP) experiments and improve operational weather forecasting models and techniques. A WMO workshop on limited-area numerical weather prediction (NWP) models for computers of limited power was held (Erice, Italy, 1-14 October) to discuss the needs of developing countries in implementing NWP systems. At a symposium (Norrköping, Sweden, 3-7 September), experts exchanged experiences and technical information on mesoscale phenomena and their observation and forecasting, as well as economic benefits and user requirements. A CAS Working Group on Long-range Weather Forecasting Research (first session, Geneva, 2-6 April) met to discuss the development of the Programme on Long-range Forecasting Research (PLRF) established by the Ninth Congress and, at another meeting of experts on ocean-atmosphere interaction relevant to long-range weather forecasting (Geneva, 14-16 November), proposals for the development of this aspect of PLRF were formulated.

Efforts were made during the year to implement the WMO Tropical Meteorology Programme (TMP). The CAS Working Group (Geneva, April) reviewed the progress achieved in implementing 12 ongoing specific priority projects within TMP and provided guidance on their implementation. In the monsoon component, a detailed implementation plan was developed by the Steering Committee (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, December) for studies of the South-East Asian winter monsoons. Under the semi-arid zone meteorological/tropical drought component, progress was achieved in implementing the long-term project on research and monitoring of the moisture budget in the Sahel, with an activity centre at Niamey.

Under the Environmental Pollution Monitoring and Research Programme, further progress was achieved in the implementation of the Background Air Pollution Monitoring Network (BAPMoN). IAEA laboratories in Vienna and Monaco collaborated in analysing aerosol and precipitation samples from over 50 stations. A panel of experts (Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Federal Republic of Germany, 30 April-4 May) discussed BAPMoN activities, long-range transport of air pollution, integrated monitoring and exchange of pollutants between the atmosphere and the oceans and impact-level air pollution aspects. Other activities included a course on background air pollution measurements (Budapest, Hungary), a seminar on BAPMoN operational functions and on interpretation of data (Kuala Lumpur, October) and the issuance and preparation of publications.

WMO also continued its collaboration in projects on long-range transmission of air pollutants in Europe, mainly through operational Meteorological Synthesizing Centres (MSCs) in Moscow and Oslo, Norway; expert meetings were held in May and November to discuss technical aspects of the intercomparison of routine model calculations used by these two MSCs.

A two-year joint WMO/UNEP/UNESCO pilot project on integrated monitoring—supported by the national meteorological and forest services—was launched during the year in the Torres del Paine National Park (Patagonia, Chile). Air-sea material interchange on the pollutant modification of ocean-related processes—especially those pertinent to climate—was provided by the WMO-led Working Group on the Interchange of Pollutants between the Atmosphere and the Oceans (INTERPOLL). At the request of the Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Pollution (Vienna, 26-30 March), an ad hoc expert group was created within INTERPOLL to prepare a report on atmospheric transport of pollutants into the Mediterranean region. Progress was also achieved in the Mediterranean in developing computational models to assess the transport of heavy metals into the sea via the atmosphere. An expert meeting (Spain, December) elaborated an experimental programme aimed at direct (aircraft and ground-based) measuring of the composition of the atmosphere and assessing long-range transport of trace elements from the Atlantic Ocean to the Mediterranean Sea. This experiment will also contribute to the study of long-range transport of air pollutants in Europe and to verifying the vertical and horizontal gradient of selected pollutants in the vicinity of existing BAPMoN baseline stations.

The long-term objectives of the Weather Modification Programme approved by the Ninth Congress were to encourage research activities and to facilitate the exchange of information on weather modification operations and research. As a result, technical papers were issued in 1984 and information was made available to member States, as well as to the United Nations and other international organizations. Among other activities, WMO organized a meeting of experts on the evaluation of hail suppression experiments (Nalchik, USSR, September) and provided information on the status of weather modification to the review conference of the parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques.<sup>c</sup>

Hydrology and water resources development

The Hydrology and Water Resources Programme—composed of the Operational Hydrology Programme, applications and services to water resources, and co-operation with water-related programmes of other international organizations—was re-established by the Ninth Congress as a major programme for the period 1984-1987 to promote world-wide co-operation in the evaluation of water resources and to assist in their development through the co-ordination of hydrological networks and services.

The Commission for Hydrology—which meets every four years—held its seventh session at Geneva

(August/September 1984) to review the work accomplished during the inter-sessional period 1980-1984.

In 1984, the second phase of the Hydrological Operational Multi-purpose Subprogramme (HOMS) was launched. It was to provide an international and systematic framework for the integration of techniques for data collection and processing. In co-operation with UNDP, WMO organized workshops on river basin simulation (Madras, India, September) and planning and implementation of HOMS in Asia and the South-West Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, October), and a meeting of representatives of HOMS national reference centres on standardization of HOMS data-processing systems (Geneva, December).

Technical support to other WMO programmes, such as the Tropical Cyclone Programme and the World Climate Programme, continued to be provided. In addition, co-operation with water-related programmes of other international organizations was maintained, in particular with the International Hydrological Programme of UNESCO.

Education and training

The main activities of the Education and Training Programme in 1984 were the awarding of fellowships, strengthening of regional meteorological training centres, organization and co-sponsorship of courses, seminars and workshops, preparation of training publications and other training aids, surveys of training needs, provision of advice and information on education and training, and collaboration with other organizations.

The WMO Executive Council's Panel of Experts on Education and Training (eleventh session, Algeria, 27 February-2 March) reviewed proposals for programme development, with special attention to problems experienced at the WMO Regional Meteorological Training Centres.

Twenty-seven training events organized or co-sponsored by WMO during 1984 covered: tropical meteorology and tropical storm forecasting (United States); Global Telecommunication System operation for North and West Africa (Algeria); hydrological forecasting (United States); operational applications of agrometeorology in semi-arid zones (Italy); limited-area NWP models for computers of limited power and use of NWP products (Italy); BAP MoN operational functions and interpretation of data (Malaysia); combined use of data from the space-based and ground-based GOS sub-systems (Nepal); teaching methods and techniques for instructors (Italy); instruction for instrument specialists (Argentina); utilization of satellite data and radar meteorology (Mozambique); marine meteorological services (Colombia, Costa Rica, Uruguay); intercalibration of conventional and remotely sensed sea surface temperature data (United States); agrometeorology (Belgium, USSR); water resources technology in developing countries (United Kingdom); meteorology (Costa Rica); practical use of NWP (United Kingdom); background air pollution monitoring (Hungary); practical techniques for regionalizing and transferring hydrological variables (United Kingdom); disaster prevention and preparedness (Mauritius); satellite applications to flood forecast, control and preparedness (Italy); operational meteorology (Brazil); use of hydrometeorological instruments (Colombia); climatology (Argentina); Integrated Global Ocean Services System operation and data management (Argentina); and operational and applied hydrology (Switzerland).

Over 650 participants, mainly from developing countries, participated in WMO training events and 271 fellowships were awarded and commenced during the year. Financial assistance was also provided to 82 participants in various WMO-supported training events.

Technical co-operation

In 1984, under the WMO technical co-operation programme, assistance was provided to 116 countries through UNDP, the Voluntary Co-operation Programme (VCP), trust-fund arrangements and the WMO regular budget.

Under UNDP, assistance in meteorological and hydrological services development and for personnel training was provided to 88 countries in 1984 at an estimated value of $11.8 million, compared with $11.3 million in 1983. Under UNDP sectoral support in meteorology and operational hydrology, missions were undertaken to 29 countries for the formulation of new projects.

Under VCP, assistance was provided mainly to the GOS element of WWW and to the establishment or updating of automatic picture transmission/weather facsimile and upper-air stations. Fellowships for training meteorological personnel were also awarded. The value of assistance provided under VCP in 1984 amounted to approximately $5.2 million, compared with some $4.9 million in 1983.

Thirty-three fellowships were awarded from WMO's regular budget and financial support was given for participation in group training, technical conferences and study tours. Under the technical co-operation programme, 582 fellows received meteorological or hydrological training during the year: 267 under UNDP, 218 under VCP, 76 under the regular budget and 21 under trust funds. Under the associate expert programme, six young professionals with limited experience worked in association with, and under the guidance of, senior experts. Thirteen United Nations volunteers served in WMO-executed projects during the year—six in Yemen, two each in Botswana and Qatar, and one each in the Gambia, Paraguay and Sierra Leone.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the total number of full-time staff employed by WMO (excluding 63 professionals on technical assistance projects) on permanent and fixed-term contracts stood at 296. Of these, 134 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 48 nationalities) and 162 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

The year 1984 was the first year of the ninth financial period (1984-1987), for which the Ninth (1983) Congress had established a maximum expenditure of $77.5 million. It had authorized additional expenditures of no more than $1 million to provide for circumstances such as losses resulting from currency exchange rate changes or urgent unforeseen programme activities.

The regular budget for 1984 amounted to $18,750,000; the budget for technical co-operation activities, financed from overhead allocations and other extrabudgetary sources, amounted to an additional $2,545,300.

At its June 1984 session, the Executive Council approved the following regular budget for 1985.

Chapter XIV

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

During 1984, several legal instruments adopted under the auspices of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) entered into force, while various new measures were adopted.

Following the entry into force on 10 November 1984 of the 1979 amendments to the IMO Convention, membership of the IMO Council increased from 24 to 32 member States.

As at 31 December 1984, IMO membership stood at 127 and one associate member. New members admitted during the year were Viet Nam (12 June) and Brunei Darussalam (31 December).

Activities in 1984Safe containers*

Amendments to the International Convention for Safe Containers, 1972, which were adopted in June 1983, entered into force on 1 January 1984. The amendments dealt with container examinations and testing procedures.

Training

The International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978, entered into force on 28 April 1984. The Convention established minimum standards of training, certification and watchkeeping for masters, officers and crew members.

Liability and compensation

The International Conference on Liability and Compensation for Damage in Connection with the Carriage of certain Substances by Sea, which was held at IMO headquarters (30 April–25 May 1984), adopted amendments to the International Convention on Civil Liability for Oil Pollution Damage, 1969, and the International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage, 1971. As a result, liability limits of both instruments were increased substantially.

A proposed convention on liability and compensation for damage caused by hazardous and noxious substances was to be studied further by IMO.

Facilitation

The 1973 amendments to the Convention on Facilitation of International Maritime Traffic, 1965, entered into force on 2 June 1984. These amendments would enable any future changes to be implemented much faster than previously.

Search and rescue

The conditions for entry into force of the the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue, 1979, were fulfilled on 21 June 1984. The Convention was to enter into force on 22 June 1985.

Safety of life at sea

Amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974 (SOLAS Convention), entered into force on 1 September 1984. These amendments had been adopted by the IMO Maritime Safety Committee in 1981.

Prevention of pollution

Amendments to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the 1978 Protocol which entered into force in 1983 (MARPOL 73/78),<sup>a</sup> were adopted by the Marine Environment Protection Committee on 7 September 1984. The amendments, affecting regulations designed to combat pollution by oil, were to enter into force on 7 January 1986.

A seminar on reception facilities for shipborne wastes was held at IMO headquarters (30–31 August 1984) to assist compliance with measures contained in the Convention and Protocol.

IMO Convention

The 1977 and 1979 amendments to the IMO Convention entered into force on 10 November 1984. The main effect of the 1977 amendments was to institutionalize the Technical Co-operation Committee by making reference to it throughout the Convention, while the 1979 amendments increased the size of the IMO Council from 24 to 32 member States.

International Conventions

IMO performed depositary and related functions in respect of the following international conventions and other treaty instruments almost all of which were adopted under its auspices:

International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1948, 1960

International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974 and the 1978 Protocol relating thereto (replacing and superseding the 1948 and 1960 instruments)

International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution of the Sea by Oil, 1954, as amended in 1962 and 1969

International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, and the 1978 Protocol relating thereto (replacing and superseding the 1954 instrument)

International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue, 1979

Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972

World Maritime Day

The theme for World Maritime Day (27 September 1984) was Global co-operation for the training of maritime personnel. On that day, the International Maritime Prize, awarded annually for the most significant contribution to the work and objectives of IMO, was awarded to Hjalmar R. Bardarson of Iceland.

In his World Maritime Day message, the IMO Secretary-General announced the launching of an appeal to raise $25 million for the World Maritime University, established at Malmö, Sweden, in 1983.<sup>b</sup>

Publications

Among publications issued by IMO during 1984 were: amendment No. 5 to Ships' Routing; the Code for Special Purpose Ships; Resolutions and other decisions of the thirteenth IMO Assembly (November 1983); the amended IMO Convention; amendments Nos. 21-83 and 21-84 to the International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code; amendments to the Medical First Aid Guide for use in Accidents involving Dangerous Goods; and a supplement to Facilities in Ports for the Reception of Oily Wastes.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the IMO secretariat employed 270 full-time staff members (excluding those on technical assistance projects). Of these, 90 were in the Professional and higher categories and 180 were in the General Service and related categories. There were 30 Professional and 8 General Service staff employed on technical assistance projects.

Budget

In November 1983, the IMO Assembly had adopted a budget of $25.8 million for the 1984-1985 biennium ($12.6 million for 1984 and $13.2 million for 1985).

Chapter XV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

During 1984, membership of the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) rose to 109 with the admission of Cyprus, New Zealand, Rwanda and Venezuela. Berne Union membership increased to 76 as a result of the accession of Rwanda to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. Barbados, China, Rwanda and the Sudan acceded to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, bringing membership of the Paris Union to 96.

Sixteen intergovernmental Unions in the two main areas of intellectual property were administered by WIPO in 1984. They were founded on the multilateral treaties, conventions and agreements listed below in order of adoption:

Industrial property: Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property; Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source on Goods; Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Marks; The Hague Agreement concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs; Nice Agreement concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purpose of the Registration of Marks; Lisbon Agreement for the Protection of Appellations of Origin and Their International Registration; Locarno Agreement establishing an International Classification for Industrial Designs; Patent Co-operation Treaty (PCT); International Patent Classification (IPC) Agreement; Trade Mark Registration Treaty; Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Micro-organisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure; Nairobi Treaty on the Protection of the Olympic Symbol.

Copyright and neighbouring rights: Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations; Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Brussels Convention relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite.

At the fifteenth series of meetings, held at Geneva in September 1984, the governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by it approved reports on activities, and the Co-ordination Committee decided to nominate Arpad Bogsch for reappointment by the WIPO General Assembly at its 1985 session for a six-year term as Director General of WIPO.

Activities in 1984

Development co-operation activities

Two WIPO permanent programmes, supervised by intergovernmental permanent committees, provided the framework for development co-operation relating to industrial property and to copyright and neighbouring rights.

Regarding development co-operation relating to industrial property, WIPO organized the following meetings: a training course on industrial property for developing countries of Asia and the Pacific (Colombo, Sri Lanka), seminars on the role of industrial property in technological and economic development (Dhaka, Bangladesh; Islamabad and Karachi, Pakistan), a seminar on patent licensing in industry (Jakarta, Indonesia), a trade mark seminar (Beijing, China), a workshop on the law of intellectual property (Maseru, Lesotho), a seminar on industrial property for Portuguese-speaking African countries (Lisbon, Portugal), a seminar on the use of trade marks and patents in trade and industry (Singapore), a seminar on the use of industrial property for trade and industry (Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea), a seminar for industrial property agents and lawyers (Nairobi, Kenya), a workshop on patent drafting and patent agency (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia), a seminar on trade marks (Hanoi, Viet Nam), a course on patent classification and documentation (San José, Costa Rica), a meeting of the heads of industrial property offices of the countries of the Central American isthmus, and a course on office organization and management (Panama), a meeting of industrial property directors from Argentina, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay (Montevideo, Uruguay), a training course on trade marks for the Andean countries (Caracas, Venezuela), a regional meeting on industrial property for Latin America and the Caribbean (Bogotá, Colombia), and a seminar on industrial property for the member States of the Co-operation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf (Riyadh, Saudi Arabia).

Medals and prizes for inventors were awarded by WIPO at exhibitions and competitions held in Bulgaria, China, Egypt, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea, Switzerland and the USSR.

In continuation of a programme initiated in 1975, 270 state-of-the-art search reports on technology disclosed in patent documents and related literature were furnished to developing countries, free of charge, under agreements concluded between WIPO and contributing industrial property offices in developed countries. Most of the reports were prepared by the Federal Republic of Germany (103), Austria (57), the German Democratic Republic (38), Sweden (25) and Australia (15).

Development co-operation activities in copyright and neighbouring rights included the convening, by WIPO, of a subregional course (Manila, Philippines), a specialized training course (Montevideo), a specialized training course on the administration of those rights (Zurich, Switzerland) and a general introductory course (London). In addition, a regional committee of experts on means of implementation in the Arab States of model provisions on intellectual property aspects of protection of expressions of folklore, convened by WIPO and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), met at Doha, Qatar.

Within the framework of the WIPO training programmes in industrial property and in copyright, training courses were organized also at Geneva, The Hague, Madrid, Moscow, Munich, Rio de Janeiro, Stockholm and Strasbourg. The training programmes in both areas continued to grow, with 216 fellowships granted in 1984 to nationals of 76 developing countries.

WIPO also co-operated during 1984 with Governments of 69 developing countries and with eight intergovernmental organizations in their development projects relating to intellectual property, by assisting in the preparation of legislation, or establishment or modernization of national or regional institutions, including patent documentation and information services.

Industrial property

The fourth session of the Diplomatic Conference on the Revision of the Paris Convention took place at Geneva from 27 February to 23 March 1984. It recommended to the Paris Union Assembly that it reconvene the Conference as soon as it found prospects for positive results and asked the Assembly to consider setting up machinery for consultations designed to prepare, in substance, the Conference's next session. The Assembly, at an extraordinary session (24-28 September), decided that the machinery would consist of consultative meetings, the first to take place in June 1985. The object of the Convention's revision was to introduce special provisions to meet developing countries' needs more effectively and to incorporate new provisions giving full recognition to inventors' certificates, a form of protection of inventions existing in some socialist countries.

Work continued on keeping up to date IPC and other classifications relating to industrial designs or registration of trade marks and service marks; the fourth edition of the International Patent Classification was published in nine volumes in June 1984. As in the past, WIPO assisted the International Patent Documentation Centre and remained on its Supervisory Board. Efforts continued towards early conclusion of the Computerized Administration of Patent Documents Reclassified According to IPC.

At the end of 1984, 39 States were party to PCT. During the year, 5,733 international applications were filed. Thirty issues of the PCT Gazette were published in 1984, containing information on 5,012 published international applications.

Meetings were convened of a Committee of Experts on the Grace Period for Public Disclosure of an Invention Before Filing an Application (Geneva) and of a Working Group on Technical Questions relating to the Legal Protection of Computer Software (Canberra, Australia); the WIPO Joint Inventive Activity Guide was published.

Publications on industrial property included those on industrial property statistics and on industrial property laws and treaties, the monthly review Industrial Property and several guides on related activities.

Copyright and neighbouring rights

In 1984, meetings were convened, jointly with ILO, UNESCO or both, on questions of copyright and neighbouring rights: a discussion meeting on the possible contents of copyright legislation concerning employee authors (Geneva), a group of experts on the international protection of expressions of folklore by intellectual property (Paris), a group of experts on unauthorized private copying of recordings, broadcasts and printed matter (Geneva), a group of experts on the rental of phonograms and videograms (Paris), and a group of consultants on the advisability of setting up an international register of audiovisual works (Geneva).

Publications on copyright included copyright laws and treaties, a Guide de la Convention de Madrid sur la double imposition and the monthly periodical Copyright.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, WIPO employed 252 full-time staff members. Of those, 89 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 38 member States); 163 were in the General Service category. In addition, 71 experts were employed on development co-operation projects during the year.

Budget

The principal sources of the WIPO budget—approximately 86 million Swiss francs for the 1984—

1985 biennium—are ordinary and special contributions from member States and income derived from international registration services.

Ordinary contributions are paid on the basis of a class-and-unit system by members of the Paris, Berne, Nice, Locarno and IPC Unions and by WIPO member States that do not belong to any of the Unions.

States members of those five Unions are placed in seven classes (I to VII) to determine the amounts of their ordinary contributions. Other WIPO member States are placed in three classes (A, B or C) for the same purpose. States in Class I or A pay the highest contributions of their group and those in Class VII or C the lowest. The class in which a State is placed is decided solely by the State. The rights of each State are the same, irrespective of class chosen.

The contribution class for each member State of WIPO and of the Paris or Berne Unions, together with the amount of the ordinary contribution of each State, is given in Annex I below (the class indicated for the Paris Union also applies to the Nice, Locarno and IPC Unions). Members of the Paris or Berne Unions do not pay separate contributions to WIPO; the Unions themselves contribute towards the costs of WIPO's International Bureau and programme of legal-technical assistance.

The amounts of ordinary contributions for 1984 and 1985 are given in the table below.

Chapter XVI

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) completed its seventh year of operations in 1984, during which it continued to provide concessional-term resources for agricultural development in developing countries, emphasizing self-sufficiency and self-reliance. Through IFAD loans, small farmers, labourers, artisans, fishermen and herdsmen benefited from the strengthening of existing local organizations, the promotion of new farm groups and the use of village associations. Following the approval of loans in 1984 to six countries not previously covered, IFAD had provided loans to nearly all low-income and low-middle-income countries.

The IFAD Executive Board, which met three times in 1984 (in April, September and December), approved 25 projects and 26 technical assistance grants. At the eighth session of the Governing Council (Paris, 11-13 October), Idriss Jazairy of Algeria was unanimously appointed second President of IFAD for a period of three years, effective 19 November 1984. In addition, the Governing Council approved an administrative budget of $26.6 million for 1985—an increase of $1.8 million over 1984.

Membership of IFAD remained at 139 countries in 1984. Of these, 20 were in Category I (developed countries), 12 in Category II (oil-exporting developing countries) and 107 in Category III (other developing countries).

Since 1979, approved loans have been denominated in special drawing rights (SDRs), an international unit of account. Dollar figures in this chapter are based on the SDR/United States dollar conversion rate at 31 December 1984 (SDR 1 = $US 0.980205). However, approximate amounts in United States dollars for loans approved since 1979 have been based on the SDR/United States dollar exchange rate at the time of loan negotiations.

With the approval of 25 additional projects in 1984, total assistance provided by the Fund to 84 member countries since 1978 amounted to SDR 1,765.4 million ($2,058 million), of which SDR 1,685.4 million ($1,968 million) was provided for 160 projects and SDR 80 million ($90 million) for technical assistance grants.

Of the 160 loans granted since 1978, 57 were for projects in Africa, 44 in Asia, 31 in Latin America and the Caribbean, and 28 in the Near East and North Africa. Most loans (67.6 per cent) were made on highly concessional terms, with a service charge of 1 per cent per annum, a 50-year maturity period and a 10-year grace period. Another 26.5 per cent of the loans were made available on intermediate terms (at 4 per cent, 20 years maturity and a five-year grace period) and the remaining 5.9 per cent on ordinary terms (8 per cent, 15-18 years maturity and a three-year grace period).

Resources

The Fund's resource situation worsened during 1984, forcing it to reduce its operations. Several first replenishment contributions remained outstanding at the end of 1984. Contributions pledged by Category I and II members towards the first replenishment amounted to $1,050 million at the valuation date, 11 December 1980. As a result of fluctuating exchange rates, these pledges totalled $913,083,000 at 31 December 1984; payments towards them by Category I and II countries amounted to $849,137,612. Payments by Category III countries as at 31 December 1984 totalled $30,952,765 against pledges of $31,643,499.

Considerable attention was given to the second replenishment of IFAD's resources in 1984. Members of the consultation on the second replenishment agreed on the period (1985-1987) and the approximate level of replenishment, but a decision on the relative share of the two major donor groups (Categories I and II) had not been reached by the end of the year. In a resolution adopted in October, the IFAD Governing Council requested that consultations be continued and encouraged member countries to make advance contributions. As at 31 December 1984, advance payments of $2.5 million had been received from 15 Category III members towards the second replenishment.

Investments

Investment of the Fund's liquid assets, which totalled $574.5 million at the end of 1984, continued to be restricted to obligations (bonds) issued or fully guaranteed by Governments and to time deposits with major banks. Of these assets, $15.8 million was held on demand deposit, $296.6 million was held on deposit with or in obligations issued by commercial banks, and $262.1 million was in bonds and similar securities issued or guaranteed by member Governments. While the maximum maturity for any of these investments was five years, the average length of investment was 15 months. The Fund had a total of $182.2 million (31.7 per cent of its total liquid assets) deposited with banks of developing countries or in bonds or similar securities issued by their Governments and international development institutions.

In 1984, interest rates in the United States remained relatively high, while the rates of other major currencies were somewhat stable. The average rate of return on the Fund's investments in 1984 was about 11.06 per cent, compared to 11 per cent in 1983.

Activities in 1984

During 1984, IFAD approved 25 new loans totalling SDR 192.8 million ($196 million) and technical assistance grants of SDR 13.9 million ($14.2 million), bringing the total financial assistance provided that year to SDR 206.7 million ($210.2 million), a 22 per cent reduction from the 1983 level.

The tables below indicate the project loans and technical assistance grants approved during 1984.

In addition to its activities to identify investment and technical assistance projects, IFAD organized special programming missions to analyse in depth the overall socio-economic environment of selected countries. In 1984, it launched two such missions—to Guatemala and Democratic Yemen. These two countries were selected on the basis of their broad regional representation and low per capita income.

Of the 25 projects approved in 1984, 14 were initiated by IFAD and 11 by co-operating institutions; the share of IFAD's contribution in total investment declined from an average of 31 per cent in 1980-1981 to 24 per cent in 1984, reflecting the Fund's effectiveness in its resource mobilization effort.

IFAD continued also to mobilize resources from other external donors, as evidenced by the agreements it signed with two member countries in 1984. Under one of them, signed in May with the Government of Belgium for the Survival Fund for the Third World, IFAD acted as the focal point in the execution of the IFAD/WHO/UNICEF/UNDP joint programme for the Fund. The Fund, established in October 1983, aimed at increasing food production and improving health and nutrition of the rural poor in regions with the highest mortality rates. The launching of the first project—for farmers' groups and community support in Kenya—began in 1984. Activities were also intensified to ensure an early start of projects in Ethiopia, Somalia and Uganda and to commence the preparation of a medium-term programme of assistance (1985-1986) of $60 million, jointly set up by the participating agencies and approved by the Belgian Council of Ministers. Under the second agreement, approved in December, the Government of the Netherlands was to reimburse IFAD some $15 million against amounts disbursed under loans to six countries for seven projects.

Income and expenditure

Total revenue for 1984 was $73.6 million, mainly from investments but including $8.4 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total expenses for the year amounted to $18.7 million compared with a budget of $24 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $54.9 million.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the secretariat of IFAD totalled 165, of whom 71 were executive or technical staff (Professional category and above) drawn from 42 countries and 94 were support staff (General Service category).

Chapter XVII

Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, held at Havana, Cuba, between November 1947 and March 1948, drew up a charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) and established an Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO). Since the charter itself was never accepted, ITO was not established. However, while drawing up the charter, the Preparatory Committee's members negotiated on tariffs among themselves, and also drew up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The Agreement—a multilateral treaty embodying reciprocal rights and obligations—is the only multilateral instrument that lays down agreed rules for international trade. It entered into force on 1 January 1948 with 23 contracting parties. Since then, ICITO has provided the GATT secretariat.

As at the end of 1984, the number of contracting parties to GATT stood at 90. One other country, Tunisia, had acceded provisionally. The contracting parties conducted about 85 per cent of all international trade while 31 other countries applied the rules of GATT.

Multilateral trade negotiations

The multilateral work programme pursued within GATT during 1984 had two distinct strands—the continuation of work resulting from the conclusion of the Tokyo Round of multilateral trade negotiations in 1979,<sup>a</sup> and the work programme set out by the 1982 GATT Ministerial Meeting.<sup>b</sup>

Implementation of the Tokyo Round agreements

The agreements of the Tokyo Round, the seventh “round” of multilateral trade negotiations in the 37-year history of GATT, provided an improved framework for the conduct of world trade and were adopted as an integral part of the rules of GATT.

Tariff negotiations during the Tokyo Round resulted in agreement on import duty reductions to be effected in eight annual cuts by the industrialized countries. On 1 January 1984, the fifth of such cuts was made, and several countries agreed to accelerate their remaining cuts to some degree, especially with regard to products of interest to developing countries.

In 1984, the GATT Committee on Tariff Concessions continued compiling tariff schedules in loose-leaf form to allow an easier reference to changes made during rounds of tariff negotiations. It also considered procedures for renegotiating tariff schedules following GATT's decision at its 1982 ministerial session to adopt the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System developed by the Customs Co-operation Council at Brussels, Belgium. The Harmonized System, which would facilitate the analysis of trade statistics and monitor and protect the value of tariff concessions, was to be implemented in January 1987.

During the year, the Committee on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures continued to oversee the implementation of a code on the topic, which provided a mechanism for international surveillance and dispute settlement and for ensuring that the use of subsidies by any signatory did not harm the trading interests of others. It continued to consider panel reports on complaints by the United States on alleged subsidies by the European Community (EC) on exports of wheat flour and pasta products and by EC concerning a section of a 1984 United States Trade and Tariff Act relating to the wine industry.

The Committee on Anti-Dumping Practices continued to examine national laws and legislation and studied an EC request for conciliation concerning an anti-dumping investigation by Canada on electric generators from Italy.

The Government Procurement Committee examined laws, procedures and regulations and made further progress in renegotiating the Agreement on Government Procurement. The Committee adopted a dispute panel report on a United States complaint against EC practices in relation to the exclusion of value added tax from the contract price of government purchases in EC member States.

The International Meat Council met twice in 1984 to discuss the bovine meat market situation and outlook. The 26 signatories to the Arrangement regarding Bovine Meat—one of two multilateral agreements relating to trade in agricultural products negotiated during the Tokyo Round (the other covered dairy products)—accounted for some 90 per cent of the world's exports of fresh, chilled and frozen beef and veal (excluding intra-EC trade), or about 60 per cent of both world imports and production.

The International Dairy Products Council, which supervised the International Dairy Arrangement, met in late 1984 to consider problems raised by EC's decision to sell public stocks of butter at prices which, because of the product's age, would be below the agreed minimum.

Work also continued during the year in committees overseeing the agreements on trade in civil aircraft, technical barriers to trade, import licensing and customs valuation. The Committee on Customs Valuation in 1984 adopted decisions dealing with interest charges in the customs valuation of imported goods and with the valuation of carrier media bearing software for data processing equipment.

Ministerial work programme

In 1984, GATT continued to implement the multilateral work programme set out by the 1982 GATT Ministerial Meeting. The ministerial declaration had called for efforts to achieve a comprehensive understanding on safeguards—the right of GATT contracting parties to impose temporary trade restrictions on imports which seriously injured a domestic industry or threatened to do so. Consultations held during the year, revealed some convergence of views on several issues relating to safeguards; in November, the contracting parties decided that the work on safeguards should be continued with a view to its rapid completion.

The Committee on Trade in Agriculture, established by the Ministerial Meeting, continued to examine trade measures in its member countries, focusing on measures affecting market access and supplies, the General Agreement's operation with respect to agricultural subsidies and measures maintained under exceptions or derogations from GATT. In November, the contracting parties adopted the Committee recommendations on elaborating a number of approaches on quantitative restrictions and related measures affecting imports, export subsidies and other forms of export assistance, including subsidized export credits, and the use of sanitary and phytosanitary regulations and other technical barriers to trade.

The Committee on Trade and Development held further consultations with, and examined the trading policies of, a number of countries in relation to Part IV of the General Agreement dealing with special treatment for developing countries. Consultations covering trade in tropical products and barriers affecting the trading prospects of the least developed countries were also continued.

Other aspects of the ministerial work programme included the examination of quantitative restrictions and other non-tariff measures in order to eliminate those not in conformity with GATT and a further review of the adequacy and effectiveness of the Tokyo Round agreements and obstacles to their acceptance by non-signatories.

Other GATT activities

Contracting parties session

In November 1984, at a session held at the senior official level, GATT contracting parties reviewed progress made in implementing the 1982 ministerial work programme and the Tokyo Round agreements.

Council of Representatives

In 1984, the Council of Representatives, GATT's highest body between sessions of the contracting parties, held two special meetings—in May and November—to review developments in the trading system. It acted on several international trade policy issues and disputes, and four new dispute panels were set up during the year.

Consultative Group of Eighteen

At its three meetings held in 1984, the Consultative Group of Eighteen—a high-level forum for discussing problems facing international trade—reviewed progress in implementing the 1982 ministerial work programme and considered ways for moving the programme towards the stage of joint action by Governments to maintain and strengthen the trading system, including the possibility of initiating a new multilateral trade round. The Group also discussed subsidies and counter-trade questions.

Balance-of-payments restrictions

During 1984, the GATT Committee on Balance-of-Payments Import Restrictions held full consultations with Hungary, Israel, Nigeria, Portugal and the Republic of Korea whose balance-of-payments difficulties had led them to restrict imports. Consultations also took place, under a simplified procedure, with Bangladesh, India, the Philippines and Yugoslavia.

Textiles Arrangement

The Arrangement regarding International Trade in Textiles, known as the Multifibre Arrangement (MFA), regulating most of the $15 billion worth of textiles and clothing which MFA member countries in the developing world exported to those in the developed world, was extended a second time in 1981<sup>c</sup> until 31 July 1986. By the end of 1984, the Protocol extending the Arrangement had been accepted by 42 signatories representing 51 countries. In October 1984, the Textiles Committee, which had before it a report of the Textiles Surveillance Body, conducted its third annual review of the current extension.

Technical assistance

In 1984, the GATT secretariat's Technical Co-operation Division organized missions to, or seminars in, the following developing countries: Brazil, Cameroon, Chile, China, Cuba, Indonesia (twice), Kenya, Macao, Panama, the Philippines, Singapore and Zimbabwe. GATT officials also participated in seminars sponsored by regional organizations.

Training programme

Two commercial policy training courses were held at Geneva in 1984. These were the fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth in a series which began in 1955 and which, by the end of 1984, had been attended by 907 officials from 112 countries and eight regional organizations. In the past, courses had been held in English and French only, but one of the two courses in 1984 was conducted in Spanish for the first time.

International Trade Centre

Established by GATT in 1964, and jointly operated by GATT and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development since 1968, the International Trade Centre continued to provide trade information and trade promotion advisory services for developing countries. The Centre's work was directed at assisting developing countries to formulate and implement trade promotion programmes and activities and to become self-reliant. The value of its technical co-operation programme in 1984 was estimated at $15 million.

Publications

Publications issued in 1984 included the annual volumes of GATT Activities and International Trade, and the monthly newsletter GATT Focus. Other publications included Textiles and Clothing in the World Economy and The World Market for Dairy Products.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1984, the GATT secretariat employed 283 staff members; of these, 119 were in the Professional and higher categories and 164 were in the General Service category. They were drawn from 38 nationalities.

Financial arrangements

Member countries of GATT contribute to the budget in accordance with a scale assessed on the basis of each country's share in the total trade of the contracting parties and associated Governments. The budget for 1984 was 51,805,000 Swiss francs. The scale of contributions for 1984 is given below. (The United Nations rate of exchange for December 1984 was SwF 2.50 = $US 1.00.)

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971, and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles.

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco, or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1(b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1(c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23<sup>1</sup>

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.)

Voting

Article 27<sup>2</sup>

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.

3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.

2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.

3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.

2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims, or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

<sup>2</sup>Amended text of Article 27 which came into force on 31 August 1965.

(The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61<sup>3</sup>

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.
2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.
4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connexion with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

<sup>3</sup>Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973. (The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.
2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.
4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.)

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI
DECLARATION REGARDING NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories, and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:
  - a. territories now held under mandate;
  - b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
  - c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.
2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79, and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.
2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendments, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
- b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV
THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI
MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connexion with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII
TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of the Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII
AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109<sup>4</sup>

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be

(The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.
2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.
2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.
3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.
4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.
5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.
6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.
4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.
5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.
6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.
7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.
8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.
2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.
2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.
3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.
2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:
  - a. the interpretation of a treaty;
  - b. any question of international law;
  - c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
  - d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.
3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.
4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.
5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.
6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:
  - a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
  - b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
  - c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
  - d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.
2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III

PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of parties.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

United Nations Scientific Advisory Committee

Established by the General Assembly in 1954 as a seven-member advisory committee on the International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy (1955), the United Nations Scientific Advisory Committee was so renamed and its mandate revised by the Assembly in 1958,<sup>22</sup> retaining its original composition. The Committee has not met since 1956.<sup>23</sup>

Members: Brazil, Canada, France, India, USSR, United Kingdom, United States.

United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation

The 20-member United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its thirty-third session at Vienna, Austria, from 25 to 29 June 1984.

Members: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, India, Indonesia, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Poland, Sudan, Sweden, USSR, United Kingdom, United States.

Chairman: D. Beninson (Argentina).

Vice-Chairman: T. Kumatori (Japan).

Rapporteur: A. Hidayatalla (Sudan).

United Nations Special Fund
(to provide emergency relief and development assistance)

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

The activities of the United Nations Special Fund were suspended, ad interim, in 1978 by the General Assembly, which assumed the functions of the Board of Governors of the Fund. In 1981,<sup>24</sup> the Assembly decided to continue performing those functions, within the context of its consideration of the item on development and international economic co-operation, pending consideration of the question in 1983. However, no action was taken in 1983 or 1984.

United Nations Special Fund for Land-locked Developing Countries

The General Assembly established the United Nations Special Fund for Land-locked Developing Countries in 1975<sup>25</sup> and approved its statute in 1976.<sup>26</sup> The Special Fund was to operate as an organ of the Assembly, with its policies and procedures to be formulated by a Board of Governors.

The chief executive officer of the Special Fund, the Executive Director, to be appointed by the Secretary-General subject to the confirmation of the Assembly, was to discharge his functions under the guidance and supervision of the Board of Governors and an Executive Committee, if established.

Pending appointment of the Executive Director, the Administrator of UNDP, in close collaboration with the Secretary-General of UNCTAD, manages the Fund.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

A 36-member Board of Governors of the United Nations Special Fund for Land-locked Developing Countries was to be elected by the General Assembly from among Members of the United Nations or members of the specialized agencies or of IAEA, keeping in view the need for a balanced representation of the beneficiary land-locked developing countries and their transit neighbours, on the one hand, and potential donor countries on the other.

Members were to serve three-year terms, except that at the first election the terms of one third of the members were to be for one year and those of a further third for two years.

The Board was to report annually to the Assembly through the Economic and Social Council.

On 10 December 1984 (decision 39/313), the Assembly deferred election of the Board to its fortieth (1985) session.

United Nations Staff Pension Committee

The United Nations Staff Pension Committee consists of three members elected by the General Assembly, three appointed by the Secretary-General and three elected by the participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund. The term of office of the elected members is three years, or until the election of their successors.

Members:

Elected by Assembly (to serve until 31 December 1985): Members: Sol Kuttner (Chairman), Mario Majoli, Michael George Okeyo. Alternates:

Trusteeship Council

Article 86 of the United Nations Charter lays down that the Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following:

Members of the United Nations administering Trust Territories;
Permanent members of the Security Council which do not administer Trust Territories;

As many other members elected for a three-year term by the General Assembly as will ensure that the membership of the Council is equally divided between United Nations Members which administer Trust Territories and those which do not.<sup>a</sup>

continued as non-administering members. Therefore, the parity called for by Article 86 of the Charter was not maintained.

MEMBERS

On 31 December 1984, the total number of staff of the United Nations holding permanent, probationary and fixed-term appointments with service or expected service of a year or more was 26,723. Of these, 8,818 were in the Professional and higher categories and 17,905 were in the General Service, Manual Worker and Field Service categories.

Of the same total, 24,496 were regular staff serving at Headquarters or other established offices and 2,227 were assigned as project personnel to technical co-operation projects. In addition, UNRWA had some 17,000 local area staff.

Appendix IV

Agenda of United Nations principal organs in 1984

This appendix lists the items on the agenda of the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council during 1984. For the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, the column headed "Allocation" indicates the assignment of each item to plenary meetings or committees.

Agenda item titles have been shortened by omitting mention of reports following the subject of the item. Thus, "Question of Cyprus: report of the Secretary-General" has been shortened to "Question of Cyprus". Where the subject-matter of the item is not apparent from its title, the subject is identified in square brackets; this is not part of the title.

Using the subject index

The subject index to the Yearbook of the United Nations 1984 is designed to assist the reader to find information on specific subjects. The designations employed and the presentation of entries in the index do not imply the expression of any opinion by the Department of Public Information of the United Nations. The subject index contains four types of entries:

Subject terms, including geographical names, are in bold face and, in most cases, are based on the subject descriptors used in the United Nations Bibliographical Information System (UNBIS), published in the UNBIS Thesaurus (United Nations Publication: Sales No. E.85.I.20). In order to minimize subentries, the index lists broad and narrow terms in their separate alphabetical positions; for example, "human rights", "racial discrimination" and "right to development". Subjects pertaining to the United Nations or the system as a whole, such as "contributions (UN)", "finances (UN)" and "staff (UN/UN system)", are indexed separately, with cross-references under "United Nations".

NAMES of organizations and subsidiary bodies, conferences, United Nations Secretariat departments and offices, programmes, and special decades and observances, are given in full in capitals and small capitals and are alphabetized in either of two ways: (1) Names of bodies, units and programmes that are part of the United Nations, names of subsidiary bodies of specialized agencies and of their affiliated institutions, and titles of special decades and observances, are indexed under their key word: APARTHEID, SPEC. CT. AGAINST DEVELOPMENT DECADE, 3RD UN; LAW OF THE SEA, 3RD UN CF. ON THE; MARITIME DAY, WORLD; TECHNICAL CO-OPERATION FOR DEVELOPMENT, DEPARTMENT OF. (2) Names of specialized agencies and of non-United Nations organizations are alphabetized under the first word of their title: INTER-AMERICAN CS. ON HUMAN RIGHTS; WORLD METEOROLOGICAL ORGANIZATION.

Names of publications are italicized, with only those receiving relatively extensive treatment in Yearbook articles, such as Development Forum and the World Economic Survey 1984, being listed.

Cross-references are not given to entries in close proximity; for example, there is a cross-reference to "economic development" under "development" but not "development assistance".

Bodies/subjects/topics are listed only when substantive information is given.

Entries are alphabetized word by word. Examples: human rights; HUMAN RIGHTS, CS. ON; humanitarian assistance.

Within most entries, the organization, body or unit dealing with the subject is indicated (by abbreviation or short title) in parentheses, preceded or followed by the appropriate page number(s). Bold-face numbers refer to resolution or decision texts. Thus, the entry cardiovascular diseases, 1223 (WHO) indicates that WHO activities relating to cardiovascular diseases are described on the page cited. The entry

Bermuda: 1070-72 (Colonial Countries Ct., 1072; GA, 1070-72); information to UN, 1018 indicates that information on Bermuda appears on pages 1070 to 1072, and that, on this topic, the activities of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples are described on page 1072; the text of one or more General Assembly resolution(s)/decision(s) is on pages 1070-1072; and related information can be found on page 1018.

Abbreviations

In addition to the abbreviations contained in the list on pp. xiv-xv, the subject index uses the following:
