Report of the Commission on Transnational Corporations on its special session

At its resumed fifty-seventh session in 1974, the Economic and Social Council decided to establish an intergovernmental Commission on Transnational Corporations as an advisory body to the Council to assist it in dealing with the issue of transnational corporations; and decided further that the Commission would assist the Council in fulfilling its responsibilities in the field of transnational corporations by undertaking work which might assist the Council in evolving a set of recommendations which, taken together, would represent the basis for a code of conduct dealing with transnational corporations (resolution 1913 (LVII)).

The Commission, which meets annually, has held nine regular sessions.

At its resumed second regular session in 1982, the Economic and Social Council decided that the Commission should hold a special session early in 1983 for the purpose of continuing and completing the formulation of a code of conduct on transnational corporations; and requested the Commission to submit to it the full and final draft code of conduct for its consideration and transmission to the General Assembly at its thirty-eighth session for consideration and appropriate action (resolution 1982/68).

The Organizational Committee of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination later entrusted the Commission on Narcotic Drugs with the responsibility of ensuring the implementation of resolution 34/177 and requested the Director of the Division of Narcotic Drugs to pursue consultations with the organizations concerned to co-ordinate related international drug control matters within the United Nations system.

The Council also endorsed the Commission's decisions to authorize the Ad Hoc Working Group to organize in 1984 a seminar to consider the most effective means of reinforcing the Commission's efforts to eliminate apartheid, racism and racial discrimination and to authorize the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts to participate in conferences, symposia, seminars or other events connected with the action against apartheid organized under the auspices of the Special Committee against Apartheid and the United Nations Council for Namibia (decision 1983/135); and decided to transmit Commission on Human Rights resolution 1983/9 to the General Assembly (decision 1983/136).

At its thirty-second session, in 1977, the General Assembly, having recognized the urgent need to make individuals and Governments more aware of the dangers of drug abuse and the need for increased attention to the field of prevention, treatment and rehabilitation, requested the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to study the possibility of launching a meaningful programme of international drug abuse control strategy and policies, including the possibility of integrating therein existing policies or envisaged development assistance programmes (resolution 32/124).

At its thirty-third session, the General Assembly urged Governments to support the work of the Commission and to provide complete data and information to the Secretary-General in their annual reports; and requested the Commission to undertake at its twenty-eighth session the finalization and implementation of the comprehensive programme of international drug abuse control strategy and policies (resolution 33/168).

At its thirty-fourth session, the General Assembly requested the Commission to finalize as next special session, to be held in 1980, a meaningful programme of international drug abuse control strategy and policies aimed at eradicating illicit demand for, production of and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and to report to the Economic and Social Council at its first regular session of 1980 on the progress achieved; further requested the organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies with programmes having an impact on narcotics to report annually to the Assembly on their activities and proposed projects in this field; and requested the Secretary-General to report annually to the Assembly (resolution 34/177).

At its thirty-fifth session, the General Assembly called upon the Commission to present, at its thirtieth regular session, the completed international programme for drug abuse control so that such a comprehensive, co-ordinated global strategy might be translated at the earliest possible date into actions seeking to interdict narcotics trafficking, eradicate the illicit production and demand, educate citizens throughout the world regarding the dangers of drugs and treat and rehabilitate those individuals who had become dependent upon or addicted to drugs (resolution 35/195).

At its thirty-sixth session, the General Assembly adopted the International Drug Abuse Control Strategy and the basic five-year programme of action dealt with in Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 1 (XXIX) which the Economic and Social Council, in its decision 1981/113 of 6 May 1981, had decided to transmit to the Assembly; requested the Commission, within available resources, to establish a task force, in consultation with the Directors-General of the appropriate specialized agencies and other United Nations drug-related bodies, composed of representatives of these agencies and bodies and representatives of the Member States most interested in and affected by the production, trafficking and consumption of and demand for illicit drugs, as well as those interested in and affected by the licit production of drugs, to review, monitor and co-ordinate the implementation of the Strategy and the programme of action and to submit a report to the Commission at each session or special session on the progress made in implementing the Strategy and programme of action and to provide any recommendations it deemed necessary regarding future revision of such Strategy and programme of action; and requested the Commission to review the report of its task force and to report thereon, through the Economic and Social Council, to the Assembly at its thirty-eighth session and annually thereafter (resolution 36/168).

At its thirty-seventh session, the General Assembly, having noted with satisfaction the establishment of the task force requested in paragraph 3 of resolution 36/168, approved the projects recommended by the Commission in its resolution 1 (S-VII), as set out in the report of the Commission on its seventh special session; and requested the Commission to review the reports of its task force and to report thereon, through the Economic and Social Council, to the Assembly at its thirty-eighth session (resolution 37/168).

At its first regular session of 1983, the Economic and Social Council, having noted that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in its resolution 1 (S-VII) of 8 February 1982, decided to establish a task force on a provisional basis and to review the composition of the task force at its thirtieth session, noting further the number of representations subsequently made to the Secretary-General concerning the provisional membership of the task force and its possible enlargement, aware that a task force with limited participation might prove to be discriminatory in nature, recognizing that the original purpose of the task force would be thwarted if the task force were to become too large, recognizing also that the monitoring and review procedure, as currently organized, might lead to a duplication of effort between the Commission and its task force and concerned that the financial constraints under which the task force had been authorized to meet made it necessary for the Commission to renounce its own meeting when its task force was in session, thereby further curtailing the time available to the Commission for examination of its agenda items, recommended to the General Assembly that the Commission, meeting in plenary during its sessions and in the presence of all interested observers, should in future replace the current task force as provisionally established and thus constitute the task force envisaged in Assembly resolution 36/168 (resolution 1983/2).

Also at its first regular session of 1983, the Economic and Social Council decided to transmit annex II to the report of the Commission on its thirtieth session to the General Assembly at its thirty-eighth session. The annex contained the programme for the third and fourth years of the basic five-year programme of action adopted by the Assembly in the context of the International Drug Abuse Control Strategy established by resolution 36/168 (decision 1983/117).
