1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Appreciates the support of Member States in approving the advance to the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women of up to US $800,000 for 2001, pending receipt of voluntary contributions, on a one-time, exceptional and emergency basis;

4. Expresses its appreciation to the Director of the Institute for her efforts to revitalize the Institute through the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System vision and methodology, and urges the Secretary-General to ensure that a new Director is appointed immediately in order to ensure continuity in the leadership and direction of the Institute;

5. Commends the Institute for the implementation of successive phases I and II of the System;

6. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the Director of the Institute as well as its Board of Trustees in developing a fund-raising strategy for the Institute, and urges that it be implemented as soon as possible;

7. Expresses its concerns that, due to the insufficient reserves in the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women at the current time, the Institute may be unable to continue its operations beyond 2001;

8. Takes into account that the Institute cannot anticipate the level of contributions that will be received during the course of 2001;

9. Recommends that the General Assembly consider transferring to the Institute any balance remaining of the sum of $800,000 advanced for 2001 by the Assembly as a reserve for the year 2002, and invites the Assembly to consider requesting the Joint Inspection Unit to conduct a review of the Institute's Trust Fund and an urgent evaluation of the activities of the Institute, including options for its future;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2002 as well as to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Critical situation

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/219 [YUN 2000, p. 1129], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the critical situation of INSTRAW [A/56/279]. Having described the status of implementation of INSTRAW activities during 2001, reported on the use of the financial resources provided from the UN regular budget for the year, and provided detailed information on the financial flows of the INSTRAW Trust Fund, the Secretary-General discussed prospects for the Institute beyond 31 December 2001. He stated that, by the end of the year, it was anticipated that INSTRAW would have used approximately $369,000 of the $800,000 subvention approved by Assembly decision 55/457 [YUN 2000, p. 1128], resulting in an unspent balance of $431,000. He noted that the INSTRAW Board of Trustees had recommended that any unspent amounts be carried forward to 2002 to facilitate the Institute's initial operations for that year (see p. 1087). The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2001/40, had recommended that the Assembly consider transferring the unspent balance from the subvention as a reserve for 2002, which would allow the Institute to initiate its 2002 operations. Given the flow of contributions received during 2000 and 2001, the Secretary-General estimated that during 2002 INSTRAW's core operations might need to be adjusted to a minimal budget level of $600,000, which would entail a considerable downsizing of the core staff and a significant reduction in operational activities. He observed that, despite the persistent difficulties and uncertainties that INSTRAW had confronted during the two preceding years, it had managed to secure minimal resources with which to respond to the mandates given by the Assembly and the Council. Given that the Institute had begun to achieve tangible results through GAINS, the Secretary-General suggested that the Assembly might wish to decide on the scope within which INSTRAW could operate beyond 2001 in a productive and cost-effective manner.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/576], adopted resolution 56/125 without vote [agenda item 112].

Critical situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/219 of 23 December 2000, in which it decided to provide the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women with financial assistance on a non-recurrent basis, enabling the Institute to continue its activities throughout 2001,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/40 of 26 July 2001 and the recommendation contained therein that the General Assembly consider the transfer of any balance remaining from the $800,000 advance for 2001 to the Institute as a reserve for 2002,

Recognizing that, despite the persistent difficulties and uncertainties that the Institute has confronted during the past two years, it has managed to secure the minimal resources with which to respond to the mandates given by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Commends the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women for the successive implementation of phases I and II of the Gender Awareness Information and Networking System and the initiation of phase III;

4. Decides:

- (a) To establish a working group composed of two governmental representatives from each of the five regional groups of the United Nations and one representative of the host country, the mandate of the working group being to make recommendations to the General Assembly before the end of the fifty-sixth session, for its consideration by the end of 2002, on the future operation of the Institute;

- (b) To examine ways, within the framework of General Assembly resolution 55/219 and Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/40, in which the Institute could be provided with resources to enable it to continue its operation until the Assembly has considered the recommendations of the working group;

5. Urges the Secretary-General:

- (a) To appoint a Director of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women as soon as possible in order to provide the Institute with the required leadership;

- (b) To continue to encourage Member States to support the Institute by making voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, through the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2002, on the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XI

Children, youth and ageing persons

In 2001, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) continued its efforts to secure the best possible start in life for every child, collaborating with multisectoral partners to ensure that all children could begin life healthy and cared for and receive education, in order to develop to their optimal potential, safe from abuse and exploitation.

UNICEF spent much of the year preparing for the United Nations General Assembly's special session on children, which, because of the 11 September terrorist attacks in New York, had to be postponed from 2001 until May 2002. In the context of the Global Movement for Children, UNICEF and key partners galvanized the support of people around the world for the cause of children, so that their voices could be heard at the special session.

In addition to being guided by the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, which established international standards of behaviour towards children, UNICEF's efforts were also in accordance with its medium-term plan for 1998-2001. The four core organizational priorities for that period were: enhancing partnerships and promoting advocacy on children's rights; enhancing the survival, development, protection and participation of children; improving the availability and use of data in critical areas; and strengthening management and operations. In 2001, the UNICEF Executive Board approved the medium-term strategic plan for the period 2002-2005, which established five organizational priorities: girls' education; fighting HIV/AIDS; integrated early childhood development; immunization "plus"; and improved protection of children from violence, exploitation, abuse and discrimination.

Important developments in favour of children's rights during 2001 included the deposit of sufficient ratifications of the two optional protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and on the involvement of children in armed conflict, for them to enter into force in 2002 (see p. 595).

United Nations policies and programmes focusing on youth in 2001 strengthened the implementation of the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond.

The Youth Employment Network, formed by the Secretary-General in collaboration with the International Labour Organization and the World Bank, appointed a high-level panel, which prepared policy recommendations for national action and established four top priorities: employability; equal opportunity for young men and women; entrepreneurship; and employment creation. The fourth session of the World Youth Forum of the United Nations System (Dakar, Senegal, August) adopted the Dakar Youth Empowerment Strategy, which set out priority areas of action and interest adopted by young people themselves.

In preparation for the Second World Assembly on Ageing, to be held in 2002, the Commission for Social Development, acting as preparatory committee, held three sessions. The central task of the Second World Assembly would be to revise the International Plan of Action on Ageing, adopted by the first World Assembly in 1982.

Children

United Nations Children's Fund

Because of the 11 September terrorist attacks in New York, the General Assembly special session on children, initially scheduled for 19 to 21 September 2001, was postponed until 8 to 10 May 2002. As the secretariat for the special session, UNICEF spent much of 2001 on preparations. It was a driving force for children's participation in the preparatory process and the special session, and hosted regional consultations and other events that rallied leadership around the cause of children. With UNICEF advice and support, 150 countries collected key information about children's rights and well-being to assess progress made for children since the 1990 World Summit for Children [YUN 1990, p. 797]. That effort amounted to the most comprehensive study ever completed on the situation of children around the world.

UNICEF and its key partners in the Global Movement for Children worked to ensure that children's voices could be heard at the special session. Under the "Say Yes for Children" campaign, which was launched in April, the partners devised a mechanism through which people from all walks of life could pledge their support for 10 essential actions to ensure children's rights to live in health, peace and dignity, promising to deliver the pledges to heads of State or Government attending the special session: leave no child out; put children first; care for every child; fight HIV/AIDS; stop harming and exploiting children; listen to children; educate every child; protect children from war; protect the earth for children; and fight poverty: invest in children. Nearly 100 million people in 155 countries pledged their support for those actions, indicating that the three top priority issues were educate every child, leave no child out and fight HIV/AIDS.

UNICEF's major achievements in 2001 included: a record 575 million children immunized against polio; an increase in school enrolment of girls in 21 countries; the provision of HIV/AIDS prevention support to young people in 71 countries; $14 million worth of emergency aid to children and their families in Afghanistan; UNICEF-organized opinion polls that permitted 40,000 children on three continents to speak out on key issues; the freeing of more than 8,000 child soldiers in Sierra Leone and the Sudan; and a birth registration campaign in Bangladesh that reached 1 million infants.

UNICEF continued to form strategic alliances to focus global attention on child-specific issues. In 2001, the Fédération Internationale de Football Association, the international governing body for football (soccer), announced that its 2002 World Cup would be dedicated to children and joined UNICEF in promoting the well-being of children through sports.

The State of the World's Children 2001, UNICEF's annual flagship publication, focused on early childhood development, noting that the earliest years, from birth to age 3, influenced how the rest of childhood and adolescence would unfold. Drawing on reports from around the world, The State of the World's Children 2001 detailed the daily lives of parents and other caregivers who were striving—in the face of war, poverty and the HIV/AIDS epidemic—to protect the rights and meet the needs of the youngest children. It made the case for giving the highest-priority attention to the time of early childhood, highlighting how choices made during the early years affected not only how a child developed, but also how a country progressed.

In 2001, UNICEF cooperated with 162 countries, areas and territories: 46 in sub-Saharan Africa; 35 in Latin America and the Caribbean; 34 in Asia; 20 in the Middle East and North Africa; and 27 in Central and Eastern Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States.

Total expenditures, including write-offs, amounted to $1,246 million (compared with $1,103 million in 2000), of which 93 per cent ($1,157 million) was for country programmes of cooperation; 6 per cent ($81 million) for management and administration of the organization; and about 1 per cent ($8 million) for write-offs and other charges. Programme expenditures by priorities were: $364 million on integrated early childhood development; $240 million on immunization "plus"; $153 million on girls' education; $146 million on the improved protection of children; and $67 million on HIV/AIDS. UNICEF operations in 2001 were described in the 2002 UNICEF Annual Report and the annual report of its Executive Director [E/ICEF/2002/4 (Part I) & (Part I)/Corr.1 & (Part II)].

The UNICEF Executive Board held its first regular session of 2001 (22-24 and 26 January), the annual session (4-6 June) and the second regular session (10-12 December), all in New York [E/2001/34]. The Board adopted 23 decisions during those sessions.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/226 of 10 July, took note of the Board's report on its first regular session; an extract from the report on its annual session; and the annual report of the Executive Director covering the year 2000 [E/2001/20], which was transmitted in accordance with a January decision of the Board [dec. 2001/3].

On 12 December [dec. 2001/23], the Executive Board adopted the programme of work and dates for its 2002 sessions. The first regular session was to be held from 21 to 25 January, the annual session from 3 to 7 June and the second regular session from 16 to 20 September.

Programme policies

In decisions related to UNICEF's programme policies, the Executive Board, on 6 June [dec. 2001/9], took note of the report entitled "A good start for every child: UNICEF programming to improve immunization services and child health, reduce the burden of vaccine-preventable disease and eradicate polio" [E/ICEF/2001/9]. In another decision of the same date [dec. 2001/11], the Board, having considered a report on sector-wide approaches (SWAPs) [E/ICEF/2001/10], encouraged the Executive Director to strengthen further UNICEF participation in SWAPs, identified on the basis of national specific needs and priorities. It requested the continuation of adequate staff training on SWAPs to enable the full participation of UNICEF in the process.

General Assembly special session (2002)

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/93 [YUN 1999, p. 1113], preparations were made during 2001 for a special session of the General Assembly to review the achievement of the goals of the 1990 World Summit for Children [YUN 1990, p. 797], which was scheduled to be held in New York from 19 to 21 September. In the light of the terrorist attacks in New York on 11 September, it was decided to postpone the special session on children until 8 to 10 May 2002.

Preparatory Committee. The Preparatory Committee for the Special Session of the General Assembly on Children, established by General Assembly resolution 54/93, convened its second (29 January–2 February) and third (11–15 June) substantive sessions both in New York [A/S-27/2 & Add.1]. It had held an organizational session and its first substantive session in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1132].

The second session considered organizational arrangements for the preparatory process and the special session and authorized its Bureau to prepare a revised version of the draft outcome document for the third session. Panel discussions were held on adolescent development and participation and on the girl child.

Among other documents, the Committee considered a note by its Chairperson on the participation of children and adolescents in the special session [A/AC.256/8] and a 22 January letter from Jamaica [A/55/743], transmitting the Kingston Consensus, which was endorsed by the fifth Ministerial Meeting on Children and Social Policy in the Americas (Kingston, 9–13 October 2000).

The Committee recommended for adoption by the General Assembly three draft decisions regarding arrangements for the participation of non-governmental organizations (NGOs), the provisional agenda and organizational arrangements for the special session.

On 14 February (decision 55/459), the Assembly decided on arrangements for NGO participation in the special session.

In June, the Preparatory Committee considered the organizational arrangements for the preparatory process and the special session and the outcome document of the special session [A/AC.256/CRP.6/Rev.2 & Rev.3 (Parts I & II)], entitled "A world fit for children". It also had before it the report of the Secretary-General [A/S-27/3] entitled "We the Children: End-decade review of the follow-up to the World Summit for Children". The report, prepared in response to General Assembly resolutions 51/186 [YUN 1996, p. 1083], 54/93 [YUN 1999, p. 1113] and 55/26 [YUN 2000, p. 1133], reviewed the implementation and results of the 1990 World Declaration and Plan of Action [YUN 1990, p. 797], including appropriate recommendations for further action, and also elaborated on the best practices noted and obstacles encountered in the implementation. Measures to overcome those obstacles were suggested. Major thematic issues discussed in the report included: health, nutrition, water and environmental sanitation; education and literacy; special child protection measures; civil rights and freedoms; and the role of the family.

Other documents considered included: a 23 January letter from Canada transmitting the Marchel Review 1996-2000 [A/55/749]; a 22 February letter from Canada transmitting documents of the International Conference on War-Affected Children (Winnipeg, 10–17 September 2000) [A/AC.256/14]; a 7 June letter from Germany transmitting the report of the Conference on Children in Europe and Central Asia (Berlin, 16–18 May 2001) [A/AC.256/16 & Corr.1]; and a note by the Preparatory Committee's Chairperson on participation. Panel discussions were held on children and armed conflict and on commercial sexual exploitation of children.

The Committee recommended to the General Assembly for adoption a draft resolution on the organizational arrangements for the round tables for the special session and a draft decision on the presentation of the outcome of the children's forum to the special session. It also decided to consider and take action on the draft outcome document "A world fit for children" at its resumed third session.

Pan-African Forum. Egypt transmitted to the Secretary-General on 11 June [A/S-27/4] the African Declaration and Plan of Action adopted at the Pan-African Forum on the Future of Children (Cairo, 28–31 May).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Preparatory Committee [A/55/L.85], adopted resolution 55/276 without vote [agenda item 42].

Organizational arrangements for the round tables for the special session of the General Assembly on children

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/93 of 7 December 1999 and 55/26 of 20 November 2000 on the preparations for the special session on children,

1. Decides that the special session on children shall include three interactive round-table sessions;
2. Decides also to adopt the organizational arrangements set out in the annex to the present resolution;
3. Decides further that these arrangements shall in no way create a precedent for other special sessions.

ANNEX

1. The round tables shall be held as follows:

Round table 1: Wednesday, 19 September 2001, from 3 p.m. to 6.30 p.m.

Round table 2: Thursday, 20 September 2001, from 9.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Round table 3: Friday, 21 September 2001, from 9.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

2. The round tables shall have as their overarching theme "Renewal of commitment and future action for children in the next decade".

3. Each round table shall have two co-chairpersons, making a total of six co-chairpersons. The co-chairpersons shall be heads of State or Government. Five co-chairpersons shall be selected from the five regional groups by 31 July 2001. The sixth co-chairperson, who shall be the head of State of the country of the President of the fifty-sixth session of the General Assembly, will co-chair round table 3.

4. Each round table shall be limited to a maximum of 71 participants, of whom approximately 66 will be heads of delegation of Member States and approximately five will be participants representing observers and entities of the United Nations system.

5. Following the selection of the chairpersons of the round tables, each regional group should determine which of its members will participate in each round table, ensuring that equitable geographical distribution is maintained, allowing for some flexibility.

6. Thus, in order to allow for some flexibility, for each round table the maximum number of participants from each regional group shall be as follows:

African States	18 Member States
Asian States	18 Member States
Eastern European States	8 Member States
Latin American and Caribbean States	12 Member States
Western European and other States	10 Member States

7. Member States that are not members of any of the regional groups may participate in a round table of their choice.

8. For each round table, participants other than Member States, representing observers and entities of the United Nations system, will be selected by the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with Member States. In addition, the President of the Assembly, in consultation with the co-chairpersons of each round table and Member States, will choose, by 31 August 2001, two child delegates, taking into account equitable gender and geographical representation, who will each be permitted to present a brief introductory statement on the theme of the round tables in a language of their choice.

9. Each head of delegation attending a round table may be accompanied by two advisers.

10. The Holy See and Switzerland, in their capacity as observer States, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer, may also participate in different round tables, to be determined in consultation with the President of the General Assembly.

11. The co-chairpersons of each round table will be responsible for presenting orally their summary of the discussions during the concluding plenary meeting of the special session.

12. The round tables shall be closed to the media and the general public. Accredited delegates and observers will be able to follow the proceedings of the round tables via a closed-circuit television in an overflow room.

The Assembly, by decision 56/401 of 12 September, decided to postpone the special session until a date to be decided by the Assembly at its fifty-sixth session.

Executive Board. The UNICEF Executive Board, on 12 December [dec. 2001/21], decided that, in the light of the postponement until 2002 of the special session on children, the Executive Director would provide a final report on the use of funds to the Board's first regular session of 2003. The Board urged that Member States contribute to the unfunded balance of $1,132,665 to ensure that UNICEF could adequately support the preparations and arrangements for the special session and the children's forum.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly adopted resolution 56/222 [draft: A/56/L.7] without vote [agenda item 26].

Special session of the General Assembly on children

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/26 of 20 November 2000, in which it decided to convene the special session of the General Assembly for follow-up to the World Summit for Children from 19 to 21 September 2001, and refer to it as the "special session on children",

Recalling also its decision 56/401 of 12 September 2001, by which it decided to postpone the special session on children until a date to be decided by the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session,

1. Decides to convene the special session of the General Assembly on Children from 8 to 10 May 2002;

2. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session the item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children".

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on follow-up to the special session would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Medium-term strategic plan (2002-2005)

At its second regular session in December, the Executive Board had before it the medium-term strategic plan (MTSP) for the period 2002-2005 [E/ICEF/2001/13 & Corr.1], which combined a reinforced results-based management approach and a human rights-based approach to programming. Building on the lessons learned from the implementation of the medium-term plan for 1998-2001 [YUN 1998, p. 1093], the new plan established five organizational priorities, defined objectives and indicators more clearly, and strengthened the strategic use of the evaluation function. The MTSP was developed through a widespread consultation process, involving staff at all levels from headquarters and regional and country offices.

UNICEF's five organizational priorities during the programming period would be: girls' education; integrated early childhood development; immunization "plus" (protection from vaccine-preventable diseases and micronutrient deficiencies, with lifelong benefits); fighting HIV/AIDS; and improved protection of children from violence, exploitation, abuse and discrimination. UNICEF's strategies to pursue those organizational priorities would be: programme excellence; effective country programmes of co-operation; partnerships for shared success; influential information, communication and advocacy; and excellence in internal management and operations.

On 12 December [dec. 2001/22], the Board welcomed the MTSP for 2002-2005 and approved the five organizational priorities for action and financial expenditure set forth in it. It also approved the MTSP as a framework of projections for 2002-2005, including the preparation of up to $424 million in programme expenditures from regular resources to be submitted to the Board in 2002. The Executive Director was requested to review and, where necessary, propose adjustments to the MTSP, based on comments made by Board members, the results of the General Assembly's special session on children and experience in implementing the plan. She was further requested to assess progress towards the targets set within the five organizational priorities in her annual report to the Executive Board.

Emergency assistance

During 2001, UNICEF used its Emergency Programme Fund to retain emergency response capacity in Afghanistan, Angola, Burundi, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Guinea, Liberia and the Sudan, and in the Central American and South-Eastern European regions.

It also accessed funding from the Central Emergency Revolving Fund to jump-start emergency actions for children and women affected by the protracted humanitarian situation in the Sudan and to address the acute needs of internally displaced persons and refugee women and children affected by the crisis in Afghanistan and its neighbouring countries.

During the year, UNICEF worked closely with the United Nations Mine Action Service, the United Nations Development Programme and other UN agencies to develop the United Nations Mine Action Strategy 2001-2005 and the United Nations Sectoral Policy on Information Management for Mine Action. It also developed its own mine action strategy, to be launched in 2002 (see also p. 828).

Maurice Pate Award

In January, the Bureau of the Executive Board asked the secretariat to review the selection process and criteria to ensure that the Maurice Pate Award, established in 1966 [YUN 1966, p. 385] in memory of UNICEF's first Executive Director, was continuing to meet its purpose. A working group held consultations throughout the year on the matter. The Board, which was to consider the group's proposals at its first regular session of 2002, decided not to make an Award for 2001 while the review was being undertaken.

UNICEF programmes by region

In 2001, UNICEF expenditures on regional programmes totalled $1,157 million, of which $444 million (38 per cent) went to programmes in sub-Saharan Africa; $344 million (30 per cent) to programmes in Asia; $101 million (9 per cent) to programmes in Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States; $99 million (9 per cent) to programmes in the Middle East and North Africa; and $94 million (8 per cent) to programmes in the Americas and the Caribbean. An additional $74 million (6 per cent) went to interregional programmes.

The majority of UNICEF resources continued to be spent in the 64 low-income countries with a per capita gross national product of $755 or less. Those countries had a total child population of 1.3 billion, or about 70 per cent of all children worldwide, and received 68 per cent of the total programme expenditure, which was 1 per cent higher than in 2000.

Field visits

Members of the UNICEF Executive Board visited the Republic of Moldova and Romania from 5 to 17 May to learn about the problems and needs of the two countries and about the countries in the region in general. It was noted that UNICEF-supported programmes of cooperation effectively complemented the countries' efforts to protect their children and women, and the lessons learned could be shared with other countries in similar situations. UNICEF was viewed as a reliable partner, with a good reputation with donors and highly skilled professional staff. It was felt that possibilities existed for improving co-operation with other agencies, especially with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund).

Executive Board members who visited the Gambia and Senegal from 5 to 17 May were impressed by UNICEF's work in both countries. The challenge, which was to build true partnerships with local authorities, was being met in those countries, where the group witnessed frank, open and ongoing dialogue on all issues. It was noted that international NGOs were important partners, but the team observed that, in some cases, those organizations were competitors rather than true partners with UNICEF. Private sector support in both countries was limited, and more avenues needed to be explored to ensure more predictable funding. In the area of education, there appeared to be great progress, especially in providing separate sanitation facilities in schools and in working to harmonize Koranic schools with the mainstream education system.

In June [dec. 2001/10], the Executive Board took note of the report [E/ICEF/2001/CRP.7] and oral presentation on the field visits.

UNICEF programmes by sector

As in previous years, the largest single share of total UNICEF programme expenditure of $1,157 million was in the area of health ($440 million or 38 per cent). Significant shares also went to basic education ($188 million or 16 per cent); programme support ($145 million or 13 per cent); child protection ($122 million or 11 per cent); water and environmental sanitation ($98 million or 8 per cent); community development and gender ($72 million or 6 per cent); nutrition ($48 million or 4 per cent); and assessment, analysis and monitoring ($45 million or 4 per cent).

A total of $25.7 million was made available to country programmes in 2001 from the global set-aside of 7 per cent of regular resources. Based on the criteria set out in a 1997 Executive Board decision establishing the set-aside [YUN 1997, p. 1220], the Executive Director made allocations for strategic programming efforts in support of programme priorities and for additional special needs. The largest segment of funds—40 per cent—went to the global polio eradication effort and the second largest (24 per cent) went to initiatives to fight HIV/AIDS. Stronger emphasis was placed on girls' education (14 per cent) and child protection (10 per cent). The balance of the funds was allocated to other areas, including malaria prevention, early childhood development and water and environmental sanitation. Programmes in sub-Saharan Africa received 51 per cent of the funds, those in Asia 38 per cent and other regions 11 per cent.

Child and adolescent health

UNICEF continued to assist Governments in immunizing children against the "basic six" diseases—polio, measles, diphtheria, pertussis, tuberculosis and tetanus—and against other diseases, such as hepatitis B, for which newer vaccines had been developed. In 2001, the immunization focus was primarily on polio, measles and tetanus, and on the introduction of new vaccines through the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization (GAVI). During the year, UNICEF procured over 2 billion doses of vaccines for nearly 100 developing countries, including vaccines and immunization supplies on behalf of GAVI for 23 countries approved for support from GAVI's Vaccine Fund.

Spearheaded by UNICEF, the World Health Organization (WHO) and other members of the Global Polio Eradication Initiative, the campaign to eradicate polio vaccinated a record 575 million children against the disease in 2001, reducing the number of new polio cases globally by more than 80 per cent. The number of confirmed polio cases declined from 2,979 in 20 countries in 2000 to 537 in only 10 countries in 2001. UNICEF collaborated with WHO and other Initiative members on vaccine supply and delivery and the organization of national and subnational immunization days in endemic countries.

UNICEF fought measles in more than 30 countries in 2001, helping to save the lives of over 80,000 children. Efforts were particularly directed towards Africa, where most measles deaths occurred. The Measles Initiative, launched by UNICEF and a number of partners, immunized more than 20 million children in eight African countries and reduced annual deaths due to measles in those countries by more than 47,000.

UNICEF continued to be a major partner in the Roll-Back Malaria Initiative. Collaboration between the Initiative partnership and the integrated management of childhood illness (IMCI) increased. In partnership with WHO, UNICEF supported the IMCI approach in over 70 countries, emphasizing training of local health workers and strengthening family childcare practices. Community-based, family-oriented health and nutrition programmes registered achievements in Bangladesh and parts of Cambodia, India, Madagascar and Nepal, using such approaches as participatory assessment and monitoring of child development. In Malawi and other countries, SWAPs in health provided opportunities to increase the priority given to community-based approaches to child health and nutrition. However, the programmes tended to be slowed by funding shortfalls, poor-quality data and the impact of AIDS.

Consistent with IMCI and the integrated approach to early childhood development, UNICEF cooperation gave greater priority to improved sanitation and hygiene education, including through school programmes in some 55 countries. Although affected by funding shortages in some countries, UNICEF continued to support safe water programmes, notably in response to emergencies, or as part of multisectoral approaches in disadvantaged areas. UNICEF assistance to monitoring and improving the quality of water expanded to over 30 countries. With arsenic, fluoride and nitrates joining faecal contamination as serious threats to domestic drinking water supplies and child health—especially but not only in Asia—UNICEF was assisting the development of national standards for water quality and the introduction of community surveillance systems.

Since efforts to improve the lives of children were inseparable from actions to improve the lives of women, UNICEF supported programmes in 102 countries in 2001 to secure women's rights to quality health care and freedom from discrimination and violence. Those programmes helped to reduce the death toll from tetanus and unsafe practices during childbirth and to improve women's health and nutrition.

One urgent UNICEF goal was the prevention of mother-to-child transmission (PMTCT) of HIV/AIDS. In 2001 alone, more than 720,000 children contracted HIV from their mothers. UNICEF programmes provided women with voluntary and confidential counselling and testing, anti-retroviral drugs where needed, and counselling and support in choosing the best feeding options for their infants. UNICEF supported prevention programmes in 47 countries and was the lead agency for those efforts in several countries, including Botswana, the only nation in Africa with a national PMTCT programme; by December 2001, UNICEF had helped all health facilities in 23 districts to implement programmes.

Basic education

In 2001, UNICEF emphasized girls' education and issues of quality. Several countries in sub-Saharan Africa and the Middle East and North Africa reported significantly increased numbers of children enrolled in primary schools, but problems of dropouts or very poor learning achievement became more apparent in other regions. Endemic weaknesses of educational systems continued to pose challenges for many poor and conflict-affected countries, including low teachers' salaries, unreliable data, population displacement and discrimination.

In 38 countries, UNICEF supported "child-friendly" schools, which provided a welcoming and effective learning environment. In the Philippines, it helped 200 schools to join the child-friendly schools programme, bringing the total number of children reached to 165,000. In Colombia, 11,000 children were enrolled in child-friendly schools for the first time, and Tajikistan began a new child-friendly school programme.

With regard to girls' education, UNICEF assisted 74 countries to break down the barriers that excluded girls. Programmes provided girls with scholarships and school supplies, constructed separate sanitation facilities for girls and boys, and promoted curricula and teaching methods free of gender bias. In 2001, 21 countries reported improvements in school enrolment and retention for girls. In Afghanistan, where girls were excluded from the official education system, UNICEF supported home schools for girls and boys. By the end of the year, such schools were teaching 58,000 children. During the year, Egypt undertook a major new push to end gender discrimination in schools, working with eight UN agencies in a partnership brokered by UNICEF. The UNICEF-assisted Africa Girls' Education Initiative covered 34 countries.

Educational interventions in emergencies were also a critical component of UNICEF efforts. Although the 2001 earthquake in the state of Gujarat, India, destroyed or damaged more than 12,000 primary schools, within five months UNICEF had helped the state authorities to set up and equip 2,000 tent schools for 400,000 children. In war-ravaged Sierra Leone, UNICEF's contribution of supplies, teacher training and rehabilitation of schools helped to enrol nearly 70,000 additional children in primary schools in 2001. Late in the year, there was a massive mobilization to support the commitment of the Afghan Interim Authority to re-establish educational opportunities for boys and girls throughout Afghanistan. Large-scale support was also given for the restoration of primary education in East Timor.

Protection from armed conflict, exploitation and abuse

UNICEF's support with regard to protecting children from exploitation, violence and abuse focused on child labour, reducing the impact of AIDS and conflict on children, prevention of sexual abuse and trafficking, and reform of juvenile justice systems.

During the year, UNICEF helped to expand Cambodia's community-based Child Protection Networks from 52 to 225 villages and facilitated two major cross-border agreements to halt child trafficking between China and Viet Nam and among Benin, Gabon, Nigeria and Togo. Sexual exploitation and the trafficking of children gained global attention when the Second World Congress against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children was convened in Yokohama in December, sponsored by the Government of Japan, and produced a new plan of action.

In the area of child labour, the rapid ratification of International Labour Organization (ILO) Convention 182 on the elimination of the worst forms of child labour [YUN 1999, p. 1388] was an important stimulus. In 2001, UNICEF supported education as a preventive strategy in some 30 countries. It also facilitated inter-country contacts for cross-border coordination in both West Africa and East Asia and participated, together with ILO, in discussions with producers to protect children on cocoa plantations.

UNICEF assisted in the care and reintegration of child soldiers in 16 countries, helped to negotiate the release of abducted child soldiers in Uganda and advocated against the recruitment of children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. UNICEF assisted in the demobilization of over 3,500 child soldiers in the Sudan, and more than 3,600 child soldiers in Sierra Leone were helped to leave army life. With UNICEF support, thousands of former child soldiers in Sierra Leone and other countries were able to rejoin their families; obtain counselling, vocational training and education; and take other steps towards reintegrating into their communities.

Many UNICEF offices advocated or provided technical support for the better protection of children in conflict with the law and the broader reform of juvenile justice systems. The organization advocated against the detention of children except as a measure of last resort, and for the diversion of children away from the criminal justice system.

Prevention of gender discrimination

UNICEF continued to promote the elimination of discrimination against women, with emphasis on issues relating to girls. It supported the mainstreaming of gender-related concerns in consolidated appeals and emergency training materials, and participated in the gender subgroup for Afghanistan. The advancement of women was promoted in a number of countries—notably in West Africa—through training and support to small-scale enterprises, usually linked to basic service programmes.

Efforts to combat female genital mutilation received UNICEF support in more than a dozen countries through national workshops, information campaigns and partnerships with local leaders, health workers and youth clubs. Similar strategies were used to address other issues of gender-based violence, such as advocacy against “honour” killings in South Asia and partnerships with health services to assist victims of violence in Peru. There were also new initiatives to strengthen action against early marriage.

Organizational and administrative matters

UNICEF finances

UNICEF income in 2001 totalled $1,218 million, an increase of $86 million (8 per cent) over 2000 and of $58 million (5 per cent) over the target of $1,160 million established in the financial plan. As in previous years, UNICEF derived its 2001 income principally from two sources: Governments and intergovernmental organizations, which, on a net basis, contributed $782 million (64 per cent) of total income; and non-governmental or private sector sources, which provided $400 million (33 per cent). The balance of $36 million (3 per cent) was derived from other miscellaneous sources. Interest was the main component of miscellaneous income.

By a 12 December decision [dec. 2001/20], the Executive Board took note of UNICEF's interim financial report and statements for the year ended 31 December 2000 [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.5].

Budget appropriations

In order to allow UNICEF to take full advantage of the conclusions and outcomes of the General Assembly special session on children (initially planned for 19-21 September 2001) in the finalization of the medium-term strategic plan, the Executive Board, on 6 June [dec. 2001/12], decided to merge its second regular session with the extraordinary budget session.

On 11 December [dec. 2001/14], at the second regular session, the Board approved the Executive Director's recommendations for funding from regular and other resources in 2001 for 57 country programmes, 4 multi-country or subregional programmes, and 3 programmes with other resources proposals only, of which 2 were of a multi-country nature [E/ICEF/2001/P/L.73], amounting to the following respective amounts for regular resources and other resources by region: Africa, $410,261,601 and $550,535,000; Americas and the Caribbean, $69,463,909 and $252,135,000; Asia, $58,159,363 and $117,675,000; Central and Eastern Europe, CIS and the Baltic States, $12,894,000 and $66,500,000; and the Middle East and North Africa, $82,535,229 and $123,091,000. The Board also approved the amount of $2,344,697 from regular resources to cover expenditures against write-off and overexpenditures due to revaluation.

Having considered the biennial support budget for 2002-2003 [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.10], the Board, on 10 December [dec. 2001/13], approved gross appropriations in the amount of $566,169,000 for UNICEF programme support in the field and at headquarters, and for management and administration. It resolved that income estimates of $88,300,000 would be used to offset the gross appropriations, resulting in estimated net appropriations of $477,869,000. The Board authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between appropriation lines up to a maximum of 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed.

On 11 December [dec. 2001/15], the Board approved the allocation of additional regular resources totalling $12,762,102 to fund the approved country programmes of 11 countries for 2001 and 11 countries for 2002, as recommended by the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2001/P/L.72]. It also approved the one-year extension of the Amazon subregional programme for social action to allow time to prepare a new programme proposal to start in 2003.

Also on 11 December [dec. 2001/16], the Board approved a regular resources programme budget of $19.67 million (other than the Emergency Programme Fund) for 2002-2003. The budget for that Fund for 2002-2003 was approved for $25 million. The Executive Director was authorized to transfer, if necessary, between the programme fields an amount not exceeding 10 per cent of the approved budget of the fund to which the transfer was made. The Board also approved a resources-funded programme budget of $203 million for the 2002-2003 biennium, subject to availability of specific-purpose contributions. Further, a total recommendation of $203 million for other resources funding was approved for the biennium.

Audits

On 24 January [dec. 2001/6], the Executive Board took note of the UNICEF financial report and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 and the report of the Board of Auditors [A/55/5/Add.2], and the UNICEF report to the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.2], which reported on steps taken in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on UNICEF accounts for the 1998-1999 biennium and the status of implementation of the Board's recommendations on the 1996-1997 UNICEF accounts.

In its fourth annual report [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.7], the Office of Internal Audit stated that in 2000 it had completed 34 audits of field offices and found that overall control in most locations was satisfactory. On 12 December [dec. 2001/18], the Executive Board took note of the report.

On 11 December [dec. 2001/17], the Board took note of the UNICEF report to the United Nations Board of Auditors and ACABQ [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.8] on steps taken or to be taken in response to the Board's recommendations on the UNICEF accounts for the 1998-1999 and 1996-1997 bienniums.

Operational reserve

As recommended by ACABQ in 1999, UNICEF conducted a review of the advantages and disadvantages of establishing an operational reserve for both regular and other resources [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.3], which it submitted to the Executive Board's first regular session in January. The review, having considered the existing financial management framework and liquidity policy, concluded that enhancements to UNICEF financial management systems, together with increased government and National Committee support, would enhance the Fund's ability to manage cash resources even more effectively. Therefore, the establishment of a funded operational reserve was unwarranted. In a related report [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.4], ACABQ recommended that the Executive Board keep the issue of establishing an operational reserve under review.

On 24 January [dec. 2001/7], the Board took note of the UNICEF and ACABQ reports and decided that UNICEF should continue its current practice based on management of its short-term liquidity requirement on a cash-flow basis and should not establish a funded operating reserve. It also decided to keep the issue of establishing an operational reserve under review and to consider it further in 2003, taking into account the ACABQ report on the biennial support budget of UNICEF for 2002-2003 and the report of the Board of Auditors for 2000-2001.

Resource mobilization

During 2001, UNICEF developed new ways of collaborating with Governments for mobilizing regular and other resources, holding 15 formal and informal consultations with donor Governments and partners on various aspects of co-operation, including core financial support. UNICEF also entered into five new framework agreements with donor Governments.

At the pledging event in January, 66 Governments (28 donor and 38 programme Governments) pledged or indicated tentative pledges of $346 million; 11 more countries announced pledges than in 2000.

A total of 91 countries contributed to UNICEF regular resources in 2001, 27 of them members of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development. The United States remained the largest government donor, contributing $216 million, followed by Japan ($97 million), the United Kingdom ($74 million) and the Netherlands ($69 million). Compared to prior years, 35 countries increased their contributions.

Private Sector Division

Net income from the UNICEF Private Sector Division (PSD) for the year ending 31 December 2001 totalled $161.1 million for regular resources, compared to $163.3 million in 2000 [E/ICEF/2002/AB/L.3]. That amount included $31.1 million from the sale of UNICEF cards and products, $147 million from private sector fund-raising activities, and an offset of $17 million for other charges and adjustments. In addition, $174.2 million ($146.2 million in 2000) was raised from private sector fund-raising activities that were earmarked for other resources. The net consolidated income, including both regular and other resources, amounted to $335.3 million ($309.5 million in 2000).

On 24 January [dec. 2001/5], the Executive Board approved budgeted expenditures of $87.7 million for the PSD work plan for 2001 [E/ICEF/2001/AB/L.1]. The Executive Director was authorized to redeploy resources between the various budget lines up to a maximum of 10 per cent of the amounts approved and to spend an additional amount between Executive Board sessions, when necessary, up to the amount caused by currency fluctuations, to implement the 2001 approved work plan. The Board approved changes in posts with a net decrease of four posts as indicated in the proposed budget; renewed the Market Development Programme ($3.4 million), the Fund-raising Development Programme ($7 million), the Central and Eastern National Committees Development Programme ($0.4 million) and the Nordic Investment Programme ($4.1 million). It also authorized the Executive Director to incur expenditures in 2001 related to the cost of goods delivered (production/purchase of raw materials, cards and other products) for 2002 up to $32.5 million.

In December [dec. 2001/19], the Board took note of the PSD financial report and statements for the year ended 31 December 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1139].

JIU reports

In January, the Executive Board had before it a secretariat note on the reports of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) prepared between June 1999 and August 2000 of relevance to UNICEF [E/ICEF/2001/5].

On 22 January [dec. 2001/4], the Board requested the Executive Director to submit JIU reports to it along with a brief summary and recommendations for Board action. She was also asked to inform the Board of measures taken to implement JIU's recommendations.

Coordinating Committee on Health

At its third session (New York, 19-20 April) [E/ICEF/2001/11], the WHO/UNICEF/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Coordinating Committee on Health reviewed progress in implementing its 2000 recommendations [YUN 2000, p. 1140], discussed the role of SWAPs for health and development at the country level, and reviewed the resolutions and decisions of the governing bodies of WHO, UNICEF and UNFPA adopted since the Committee's second session that were relevant to its work.

The Executive Board, on 5 June [dec. 2001/8], approved the Committee's report.

Youth

Implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth

In 2001, UN policies and programmes on youth continued to focus on the implementation of the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/81 [YUN 1995, p. 1211]. The Programme of Action addressed the problems faced by youth worldwide and outlined ways to enhance youth participation in national and international policy- and decision-making.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/56/180], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 54/120 [YUN 1999, p. 1123], the Secretary-General reviewed progress in implementing the Programme of Action, which was based on information received from Member States, the UN system and statements made by Member States during the 2000 session of the Assembly, as well as on information collected by the Secretariat, and focused on priority youth issues for the twenty-first century: globalization and empowerment of youth.

The report summarized action taken at the national, regional and global levels to implement the Programme of Action and described youth participation at the United Nations. Annexed to the report was a table indicating the status of implementation of national youth policies, coordination mechanisms and programmes of action as at May 2001.

Follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit

In a 28 September letter to the President of the General Assembly [A/56/422], the Secretary-General referred to his report to the Millennium Summit in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 55], in which he called the attention of world leaders to the urgency of addressing the problem of unemployment and underemployment of young people. That challenge had been taken up in the Millennium Declaration, contained in Assembly resolution 55/2 (ibid., p. 49), in which heads of State and Government resolved to develop and implement strategies that gave young people everywhere a real chance to find decent and productive work.

The Secretary-General, in collaboration with ILO and the World Bank, had formed the Youth Employment Network and appointed a high-level panel to prepare a set of policy recommendations. The recommendations of the Youth Employment Network and its High-level Panel were attached to his letter. The recommendations were based on a new approach and a new partnership between national Governments and global organizations for full employment: young people were an asset in building a better world, not a problem; heads of State and Government at the Millennium Summit had given a firm political commitment to developing and implementing strategies to give young people a real chance to find decent and productive work; and there was great potential for improving the employment situation through the integration of public policies for young women and men in overall employment policies. The Panel identified four top priorities for all national action plans: employability, equal opportunities for young men and women, entrepreneurship and employment creation.

Noting that translating those priorities into national action plans was only a start towards meeting the common goal of decent and productive employment for young people, the Panel recommended that the heads of the United Nations, the World Bank and ILO provide guidance and organize technical support for the policy-making process over the coming years, with ILO having lead responsibility for the effort. The Panel also made 12 recommendations to provide a guide to the range of actions to improve the position of young people in the labour market. They covered: a youth employment dimension integrated into comprehensive employment strategies; strong institutional support for youth employment policies; investment in education, training and life-long learning; a bridge between the informal and the mainstream economies; the potential of information and communication technologies; new sources of work in the service sector; entrepreneurship and enterprise development; access of youth to employment services and support; a social floor for working youth; partnership for youth employment; an enabling international environment; and the future of the Youth Employment Network.

Dakar Youth Empowerment Strategy

By a 4 October letter [A/C.3/56/2], Senegal submitted to the Secretary-General the Dakar Youth Empowerment Strategy, which was adopted by the fourth session of the World Youth Forum of the United Nations System (Dakar, 6-10 August). The document, designed to strengthen the Braga (Portugal) Youth Action Plan developed at the third (1998) session of the World Youth Forum [YUN 1998, p. 1103], set out priority areas of action and interest identified by young people themselves.

Several youth empowerment strategies were identified in the areas of education and information and communication technologies; employment; health and population; hunger, poverty and debt; human settlements and the environment; social integration; a culture of peace; youth policy, participation and rights; young women and girls; youth, sports and leisure-time activities; and the establishment of mechanisms for monitoring and implementing the Dakar Youth Empowerment Strategy and the Braga Youth Action Plan.

Annexed to the Strategy was a statement on HIV/AIDS by the young people attending the Forum.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/56/572], adopted resolution 56/117 without vote [agenda item 108].

Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002)

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/262 [YUN 2000, p. 1141], the Commission for Social Development, during 2001, acted as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing, which, as decided in Assembly resolution 55/58 [ibid., p. 1142], would be held in Madrid, Spain, from 8 to 12 April 2002.

Commission for Social Development (February/March and April/May). The Commission for Social Development acting as the preparatory committee held its first session in New York from 26 February to 2 March and on 30 April and 1 May 2001 [E/2001/71].

In addition to a number of documents on procedural and organizational questions, the Commission had before it the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Towards the Second World Assembly on Ageing" [E/CN.5/2001/PC/2 & Corr.1]. The Secretary-General stated that the World Assembly would be devoted to the overall review of the outcome of the first World Assembly on Ageing, which was held in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1182], and to the adoption of a revised plan of action and a long-term strategy on ageing in the context of a society for all ages, the theme of the 1999 International Year of Older Persons [YUN 1999, p. 1124]. His report reviewed the preparations for the Second World Assembly and included an extended draft framework for the revised International Plan of Action on Ageing. The main body of the revised Plan of Action identified three priority directions for policy action: sustaining development in an ageing world; advancing health and well-being into old age; and ensuring enabling and supportive environments for all ages.

The Commission, acting as the preparatory committee, recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval for adoption by the General Assembly (see below) of a draft resolution on the United Nations Trust Fund for Ageing and draft decisions on arrangements regarding participation of NGOs in the World Assembly and on its provisional rules of procedure. The Commission also recommended to the Council the adoption of a draft decision on its report and the provisional agenda for its second session (see below). In addition, the Commission adopted three decisions that it brought to the Council's attention. By a decision on abuse against older persons [dec. 2001/PC/1], the Commission requested the Secretary-General to submit a report on the subject to its second (2002) session. In the second decision [dec. 2001/PC/2], the Commission decided to meet in resumed session on 30 April and 1 May and for one week in November (subsequently changed to 10-14 December), in order to complete the work of its first session. In the third decision [dec. 2001/PC/3], the Commission established arrangements regarding the accreditation of NGOs to the Second World Assembly.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Commission for Social Development acting as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing on its first session and approved the provisional agenda for the second session (decision 2001/239).

On the same date, the Council adopted decision 2001/237, recommending to the General Assembly a draft decision on arrangements regarding participation of NGOs in the Second World Assembly (see Assembly decision 56/426 below).

Also on the same date, the Council adopted decision 2001/238, recommending to the General Assembly, for adoption by the Second World Assembly, the provisional rules of procedure for the Second World Assembly (see General Assembly decision 56/427 below).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to resolution 54/262 [YUN 2000, p. 1141], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on preparations for the Second World Assembly [A/56/152]. In addition to describing the work of the preparatory committee (see above), the report outlined the format of the World Assembly, which would comprise a political segment, responsible for the central task of preparing the revised International Plan of Action on Ageing, and other associated events, including a series of round-table discussions under the sponsorship of the host Government; an NGO forum, to be held in Madrid prior to and during the Assembly; and a research forum, to take place in Valencia the week before the Assembly.

Member States had been invited to submit additional comments on the draft revised Plan to the Secretariat by 25 June and the preparatory committee set the end of August as the deadline for the secretariat to complete the draft to allow Member States and the international community to review it before the preparatory committee's December meeting.

Activities in preparation for the Second World Assembly took place during the year: a meeting of UN system organizations (6-7 March) discussed preparations and opportunities for future collaboration; the Department of Public Information published the brochure Building a Society for All Ages and unveiled the Assembly's logo; and the UN programme on ageing published the World Ageing Situation [Sales No. E.00.IV.4], a compilation of studies on global trends and emerging issues on ageing. Planned events included a regional preparatory consultation, organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (Macao, China, September) and an expert group meeting to explore approaches to alleviating urban and rural poverty in old age, especially among older women in developing countries and countries with economies in transition (October).

Commission for Social Development (December). The Commission for Social Development acting as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing held its resumed first session from 10 to 14 December [E/2001/71/Add.1].

The Commission brought two decisions to the attention of the Economic and Social Council. The first [dec. 2001/PC/3] listed 26 NGOs that it had decided to accredit to the Second World Assembly; and the second [dec. 2001/PC/4] took note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Towards the Second World Assembly on Ageing" (see above).

By decision 2001/327 of 20 December, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Commission acting as the preparatory committee on its resumed first session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 56/426, by which it established the arrangements regarding participation of NGOs in the Second World Assembly on Ageing. On the same date, by decision 56/427, the Assembly recommended for adoption by the Second World Assembly the provisional rules of procedure, which were annexed to the decision.

On 24 December [meeting 92], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/573], adopted resolution 56/228 without vote [agenda item 109].

Chapter XII

Refugees and displaced persons

In 2001, the total number of persons of concern to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) throughout the world fell to 19.8 million, from 21.1 million in 2000. Over 12 million (60 per cent) of the total were refugees, 5.3 million were internally displaced persons, 925,677 were asylum-seekers, 703,558 returned to their places of origin and the remaining 1 million included forced migrants and stateless people.

Although there were no major refugee emergencies on the scale of those of the 1990s, UNHCR still faced major challenges concerning refugee protection. The military action in Afghanistan following the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States led to the return of hundreds of thousands of Afghan refugees from Iran and Pakistan. However, the impact of those events also fuelled intolerance and distrust of aliens, including refugees and asylum-seekers. In tackling those challenges, UNHCR emphasized the need to secure refugee protection by facilitating durable solutions, such as voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement whenever possible.

Although Africa's refugee population fell by almost 10 per cent in 2001, the continent's 3.1 million refugees still accounted for approximately 30 per cent of the global refugee population at the end of the year. The main countries of origin of refugees were Angola, Burundi and the Sudan, while the host countries of the largest refugee populations were the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Sudan and the United Republic of Tanzania. The main refugee returns in the region in 2001 were Burundians, Eritreans, Sierra Leoneans and Somalis.

The prime focus in Central and South America remained the protracted armed conflict in Colombia, which had uprooted some 700,000 people, most of them forced into the neighbouring countries of Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela.

In South Asia, peace initiatives in Sri Lanka raised hopes for durable solutions for the estimated 700,000 internally displaced Sri Lankans and the 64,000 refugees in India. However, there was only minimal progress on the situation of the 110,000 Bhutanese, one of the largest refugee groups in the region, who had been in Nepalese camps for over 10 years. The protection of asylum-seekers was the dominant issue in East Asia and the Pacific, where there was a general narrowing of access to asylum. As East Timor moved closer to independence, UNHCR initiated negotiations with the Indonesian Government for the local settlement of some 50,000 East Timorese remaining there. In Central and South-West Asia, UNHCR's main focus was on Afghanistan and surrounding countries following the military intervention. UNHCR provided relief for the estimated 200,000 Afghans who fled to Pakistan in 2001, in addition to the over 2 million who were already in camps in Iran and Pakistan.

The main challenge in Western Europe continued to be the maintenance of access for asylum-seekers. Close to 420,000 applications for asylum were made in a context of reinforced legislation against irregular migration, people smuggling and trafficking, and of security concerns. In Eastern Europe, UNHCR focused on finding durable solutions for those displaced by protracted conflicts in the Caucasus.

To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, UNHCR convened, in December, the first meeting of States parties to the Convention and its 1967 Protocol, which adopted a landmark declaration reinforcing commitment to those two instruments. During the course of the year, UNHCR continued to hold meetings within the framework of the Global Consultations on International Protection, launched in 2000. It also took steps to sharpen its focus and strengthen its capacity to meet future challenges. A review of priorities and fund-raising efforts resulted in the reduction of UNHCR's 2001 budget by some 10 per cent and the number of staff posts by 16 per cent.

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its fifty-second session (Geneva, 1-5 October) [A/56/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme, noting the fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520], expressed satisfaction at the increasing number of parties to the Convention and/or its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477] and urged broader accession. Recognizing that some countries of asylum, particularly developing countries and countries in transition, bore a heavy burden by hosting large numbers of refugees, the Committee reiterated its strong commitment to international solidarity and cooperation to share responsibilities. It stressed the national and international responsibilities of countries of origin and reaffirmed UNHCR's role in assisting and supporting countries receiving refugees and in mobilizing assistance to address the impact of large-scale refugee populations. The Committee emphasized that the ultimate goal of international protection was to achieve a durable solution for refugees, notably voluntary repatriation and, where feasible, local integration and resettlement. Noting the global dimension of statelessness, the Committee encouraged States to cooperate with UNHCR in devising appropriate solutions for stateless persons. The trafficking of persons, which represented a grave violation of their human rights, was strongly condemned by the Committee, which also expressed concern that many trafficking victims were rendered effectively stateless due to an inability to establish their identity and nationality. It reiterated its call to States to accede to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416] and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533].

The Committee also adopted conclusions on the registration of refugees and asylum-seekers and follow-up to the 1996 Geneva Conference on the problems of refugees, displaced persons, migration and asylum issues. It also adopted decisions on administrative, financial and programme matters and institutional questions.

Since Ruud Lubbers began his first three-year term as High Commissioner on 1 January, the Committee decided to replace the traditional annual theme discussion with a debate on his perspective on the work of the Office.

Reflecting on UNHCR's challenges in 2001 in his opening statement to the Committee, the High Commissioner highlighted the large-scale refugee movements in Guinea and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM), and the unfolding humanitarian emergency in Afghanistan and surrounding countries. He observed that emergencies were hard to predict and UNHCR and its partners needed to be ready at all times to respond efficiently; measures taken towards that end included improved staff training, increased numbers of deployable emergency staff and emergency stockpiles, and new standby arrangements with Governments and partners. Other major concerns included staff security, the management of complex population flows, the need to find durable solutions for refugees and the need to promote coexistence and reconciliation in divided communities.

Regarding organizational management, the High Commissioner stated that he had taken a number of measures to sharpen UNHCR's focus and strengthen its capacity to meet future challenges, including new appointments, changes to the organizational structure and new policy directives. In addition, further measures were taken to strengthen internal investigation and oversight mechanisms. As to the budget, the High Commissioner recalled that when he took up his appointment a 20 per cent budget freeze had been imposed on all operations because donors had stated that the 2001 budget of $955 million, approved by the Executive Committee only three months earlier [YUN 2000, p. 1150], was not fundable. However, through the "Actions 1, 2 and 3" exercise, UNHCR defined its strategic direction, reviewed its operations and priorities and had initiated an ongoing review of its fundraising efforts. Under that process, UNHCR reduced its budget for 2001 by approximately 10 per cent and the number of staff posts by 16 per cent.

Looking to the future, the High Commissioner said the Office faced many threats, including restrictive interpretation of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, the deteriorating quality and perceived abuse of asylum systems and the high costs and burdens of hosting refugees. To address the question of whether UNHCR was adequately positioned to address the problems it was mandated to tackle, the High Commissioner announced that he had launched the "UNHCR 2004" process to develop a concept to better position the Office to carry out its mandate. That process would be completed by 1 January 2004 when UNHCR's current mandate would be due for renewal.

By decision 2001/317 of 26 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's report covering the period 1 January 2000 to 31 March 2001 [E/2001/46 & Corr.1].

Coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance

In 2001 [A/57/12], UNHCR placed renewed emphasis on strengthening existing partnerships to increase the level and quality of resources reaching refugees and returnees. A Task Force on Partnerships was established in September with two working groups: one examined partnerships with UN agencies and international organizations while the other considered partnerships with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) (see below). Within the context of the Global Consultations on International Protection (see also p. 1113), UNHCR and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) formed the Action Group on Asylum and Migration to further the understanding of the connection between migration and asylum, review policy issues and improve cooperation between UNHCR and IOM on related matters.

In June, the annual high-level UNHCR/International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) meeting considered issues relating to their respective mandates and activities, the security of refugees and staff, and the separation of armed elements. The 1969 memorandum of understanding with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) was amended to update the framework of cooperation between the two organizations in the areas of protection of and material assistance to refugees, internally displaced persons and persons of concern; promotion of refugee law; emergency preparedness; and public awareness of refugee rights. In November, UNHCR signed a memorandum of understanding with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) to ensure protection, repatriation and resettlement of refugees within ECOWAS countries.

Within the UN system, UNHCR participated in the Administrative Committee on Coordination and the Inter-Agency Standing Committee, among other bodies, and in the resident coordinator system and UN country team at the field level. At year's end, a senior UNHCR staff member was seconded to the Internal Displacement Unit within the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

Following the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States, UNHCR contributed to the work of the Security Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee (see p. 66) and participated at the senior level in meetings of the Executive Committee on Peace and Security, set up by the Secretary-General as the UN system-wide focal point on terrorism. UNHCR also participated in the Executive Committee on Humanitarian Affairs, established to develop an integrated UN strategy for humanitarian response, post-conflict rehabilitation and development in Afghanistan in the first months of the crisis following the advent of the war on terror.

During 2001, UNHCR concluded project agreements with 573 NGOs, covering operational activities favouring refugees and other populations of concern. Those partnerships mobilized $193 million, representing 21 per cent of UNHCR's total budget. Throughout the year, NGOs played an active role in UNHCR's Global Consultations on International Protection, participating in round-table meetings to examine trends in refugee law, with a view to informing decision makers who formulated refugee policy.

Evaluation plan and activities

UNHCR's evaluation policy, which was described in an August report [A/AC.96/947], included a three-year development plan that committed UNHCR to steadily increasing levels of evaluation activity, placed new responsibilities on regional and field offices to undertake and commission evaluations, and introduced new approaches to ensure that the findings and recommendations of evaluations were effectively utilized.

The work programme of the Evaluation and Policy Analysis Unit focused on a number of key policy issues, including refugee children, refugee women, statelessness, refugee education, protracted refugee situations, and incorporating protection and human rights issues into evaluations.

Evaluation projects initiated in 2001 included reviews of UNHCR's work on internal displacement issues in Angola and Sri Lanka, reintegration programmes in Liberia and South-East Asia, and refugees' physical security in Kenya and the United Republic of Tanzania. UNHCR's role in strengthening national and non-governmental organizations and in developing policy issues affecting urban-based refugees was also evaluated.

Inspections

In 2001 [A/57/12], inspections of operations by the Inspector General's Office (IGO) were conducted in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Botswana, Djibouti, Eritrea, India, Lebanon, Namibia, South Africa, Yemen and Zambia. In September, IGO oversaw the conduct of an inquiry into the violent death of a staff member in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). In the course of the year, IGO received 31 complaints of alleged wrongdoing and conducted nine investigations of 16 staff members accused of harassment, fraud, corruption regarding resettlement and misuse of UNHCR assets and facilities. Disciplinary measures were recommended against 12 staff members while the remaining four were cleared of the allegations against them. Two other investigations initiated during the year were ongoing, one of which was being conducted jointly with the Investigations Division of the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS).

OIOS report. In December [A/56/733], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly an OIOS report on the investigation into allegations of refugee smuggling at the Nairobi Office of UNHCR, which resulted in the arrest of nine persons—three UNHCR staff members, two members of an affiliated NGO and four others who operated the alleged criminal enterprise. Criminal charges were pending against all nine, including conspiracy to threaten to kill the United States Ambassador and the UNHCR representative and for demanding money from refugees. OIOS noted that UNHCR had taken substantial measures to correct management lapses that provided the opportunity for such activities and had also improved operations in Kenya. However, it warned against the recurrence of such incidents wherever the demand for resettlement by refugees who could not return home exceeded the ability or willingness of other Governments to take them.

Commenting on the OIOS findings and recommendations, UNHCR stated that it had learned and implemented many lessons from the investigation and would, as a result, become a much more accountable organization with strengthened management and improved oversight and investigation capacity.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

10. Emphasizes the obligation of all States to accept the return of their nationals, calls upon all States to facilitate the return of their nationals who have been determined not to be in need of international protection, and affirms the need for the return of persons to be undertaken in a safe and humane manner and with full respect for their human rights and dignity, irrespective of the status of the persons concerned;

11. Recognizes that adequate and timely resources are essential to the High Commissioner to discharge effectively his mandated functions on an equitable basis, and urges Governments and other donors to respond promptly to the global appeal issued by his Office for requirements under its annual programme budget;

12. Requests the Office of the High Commissioner, with that sustained support, to continue to fulfil the mandate conferred upon it by its statute and by subsequent General Assembly resolutions regarding refugees and other persons of concern, in close cooperation with its relevant partners;

13. Requests the High Commissioner to report on his activities to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, and to include in his report the results of the Global Consultations on International Protection.

Enlargement of Executive Committee

On 3 May, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/217, took note of Guinea's request [E/1999/13] for membership in the UNHCR Executive Committee and recommended that the General Assembly decide, at its fifty-sixth (2001) session, on the issue of enlarging the Committee's membership from 57 to 58 States.

In July, the Council had before it communications from Ecuador [E/2001/52], New Zealand [E/2001/4] and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) [E/2001/49] requesting membership in the Committee. By decision 2001/298 of 25 July, the Council took note of those requests and recommended that the Assembly take a decision at its fifty-sixth session on the question of enlarging the Committee's membership from 58 to 61 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/578], adopted resolution 56/133 without vote [agenda item 114].

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decisions 2001/217 of 3 May 2001 and 2001/298 of 25 July 2001 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the requests regarding the enlargement of the Executive Committee contained in the annex to the note verbale dated 21 January 1999 from the Permanent Mission of Guinea to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, in the letter dated 3 November 2000 from the Permanent Representative of New Zealand to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, in the annex to the letter dated 20 April 2001 from the Permanent Representative of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General and in the note verbale dated 27 April 2001 from the Permanent Mission of Ecuador to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from fifty-seven to sixty-one States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect the additional members at its resumed organizational session for 2002.

Financial and administrative questions

UNHCR's initial annual programme budget target for 2001 was set at $898.5 million [A/57/12] by the Executive Committee in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1150]. In addition, during the course of 2001, some $117 million was added for operations in Afghanistan, Eritrea, Sierra Leone and FYROM. However, income from donors' contributions stood at only $779.2 million, considerably short of requirements, resulting in budget cuts that affected many operations. Expenditures during the year totalled $801 million, of which $677.6 million was from the annual programme budget. UNHCR expenditure by region was as follows: Africa, $307 million; Europe, $172 million; Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, $105 million; Asia and the Pacific, $52 million; and the Americas, $23 million.

In October, the Executive Committee approved the revised 2001 annual programme budget amounting to $782.1 million, which, together with the UN regular budget contribution of $19.2 million, provisions for Junior Professional Officers of $7 million and the needs under supplementary programmes of $66.1 million, brought total requirements for the year to $874.4 million. For 2002, the Committee approved budgetary requirements of $801.7 million, including an operational reserve of $72.9 million (representing 10 per cent of programmed activities), which, together with the UN regular budget contribution of $19.9 million and provisions for Junior Professional Officers of $7 million, brought total requirements for 2002 to $828.6 million. The High Commissioner was requested, within the resources available, to respond flexibly and efficiently to the needs currently indicated under the annual programme budget for 2002, and authorized to create supplementary programmes and issue special appeals in the case of new emergency needs. Member States were urged to respond generously and promptly to such appeals.

Accounts (2000)

The audited financial statements of voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ending 31 December 2000 [A/56/5/Add.5] showed total expenditures of some $784 million and total income of $709 million, with a reserve balance of $127 million.

The Board of Auditors recommended that UNHCR should: ensure that field offices verified project monitoring reports, including supporting documents and bank statements; ensure that field offices reviewed audit certificates and followed up significant issues that arose; establish realistic milestones against which the progress of projects could be monitored; establish a single line of project management for staff reports on all aspects of the integrated system project development; review the appropriateness of undertaking projects not directly related to assistance to refugees and routinely set clear milestones against which to measure progress and assess when its mission was complete; maintain accurate information on the size and characteristics of the refugee population; and include clearly stated and quantified objectives and outputs, incorporating key milestones and target dates.

UNHCR, in September [A/AC.96/949/Add.1], reported on measures taken or proposed to respond to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors.

In an October report [A/56/436], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), while noting UNHCR's progress in reducing its level of expenditures, expressed the hope that further efforts would be made to address the $55.5 million outstanding in advances to implementing partners, covering the years 1994 to 2000. The Committee asked UNHCR to examine the problem of denial of access to the accounting records of implementing partners, requesting that it be brought to the attention of the Secretary-General if necessary. With regard to subproject monitoring, ACABQ recommended increased staff training and a stringent application of accountability requirements. UNHCR was asked to take measures to improve the performance of all country offices where significant gaps in the extent and quality of audit certificates existed and to take immediate steps to address the findings of the Board of Auditors and report to the Committee not later than autumn 2002 on actions taken in that regard. ACABQ also reiterated its request that UNHCR report comprehensively on the implementation of all information technology projects, including relevant costs.

The Executive Committee, in a decision on administrative, financial and programme matters [A/56/12/Add.1], requested that it be kept regularly informed of the measures taken to address the recommendations and observations raised by the Board of Auditors and ACABQ.

OIOS reports

In July [A/56/128], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the OIOS report on its November 1999 audit of UNHCR's emergency operations in Albania and on a follow-up audit in November 2000. The initial audit disclosed serious shortcomings in the management of the operation, owing to sub-standard procurement, improper tracking of assets and commodities, inadequate programme monitoring and budget control, unrefunded taxes paid on purchases and inadequate staffing.

Noting that the follow-up audit showed that UNHCR had made significant progress in addressing those shortcomings, OIOS found, however, that further improvement could be made in the following areas: staffing of emergency operations to ensure continuity and proper internal control; monitoring of implementing partners with proper and timely financial reporting; and asset management to more accurately reflect both assets on hand and those provided by partners.

OIOS recommended that UNHCR should: ensure that emergency operations were adequately staffed and that rotation was kept to a workable minimum; establish from the beginning of an emergency adequate tracking of assets and commodities; review rules and procedures for financial management, procurement and asset management; and renegotiate existing cooperation agreements with host Governments to ensure that tax exemptions granted to UNHCR were extended to purchases made by implementing partners using UNHCR funds.

In December [A/56/759], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly an OIOS report on its audit of UNHCR's private sector fund-raising activities. It found that policies and procedures still needed to be more clearly defined or developed in some areas; self-sustainability, critical for any fund-raising operation, and the achievement of financial targets were not explicitly established as objectives in most cases; the methodology for calculating the return on investment should be determined to increase the value of analytical comparison and ensure better informed decision-making; complete data on the overall cost of UNHCR's private sector fund-raising were not readily available; contributions and associated fund-raising costs were understated; and the concept of using national associations, UNHCR's preferred tool for private sector fund-raising, had still to be proved effective. By year's end, OIOS stated, UNHCR had taken positive steps to address the issues raised.

By decision 56/428 of 19 December, the Assembly took note of the report of OIOS on the audit of UNHCR operations in Albania. The Assembly, on 24 December, again took note of the report and looked forward to the full and expeditious implementation of the recommendations contained in it within the context of the annual OIOS report at the Assembly's fifth-seventh (2002) session (decision 56/459).

Standing Committee

The UNHCR Standing Committee held three meetings in 2001 (12-14 March [A/AC.96/945 & Corr.1], 25-27 June [A/AC.96/956] and 26 September [A/AC.96/958]). It reviewed UNHCR's programmes and activities in various regions, and considered updates on overall programme and funding issues; the Global Report on UNHCR's activities in 2000; programme/protection policy issues, including the safety and security of staff and the security of refugees; the economic and social impact of refugee populations on host countries; refugee women; the refugee situation in Afghanistan; international protection, statelessness and resettlement; coordination issues within the UN system; and issues relating to management, finance, oversight and human resources.

In October [A/56/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee adopted the following items for the Standing Committee's 2002 programme of work: international protection; programme/protection policy; programme and funding; governance; coordination; and management, financial, oversight and human resources. It authorized the Standing Committee to add items to and delete items from its intersessional programme of work.

Safety of staff

At its March meeting [A/AC.96/945 & Corr.1], the Standing Committee discussed the issue of staff safety, including action taken to reinforce and strengthen it, which had focused on three key areas: mainstreaming responsibilities and capacities for security within UNHCR; supporting proactive security management; and establishing and maintaining security standards in UNHCR's operations. The Committee emphasized the importance of the management aspects of staff security, clear lines of decision-making, increased accountability at all levels and inter-agency cooperation. While stressing the need for adequate funding from the UN regular budget, the Committee also acknowledged that UNHCR required extra funding for its increased security needs and proposed examining how best to provide that additional support.

Addressing the UNHCR Executive Committee in October [A/56/12/Add.1], the High Commissioner stated that a UNHCR staff member was murdered in the DRC in March and that six ICRC staff members had been killed a month later. He indicated that addressing the staff security issue would be one of his major priorities.

In resolution 56/217 of 21 December, the General Assembly urged all States to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and UN and associated personnel (see p. 1349).

Refugee protection and assistance

Protection issues

In his annual report covering 2001 [A/57/12], the High Commissioner said the environment in which refugee protection had to be realized was increasingly affected by recurring cycles of violence and systematic human rights violations in many parts of the world, by the changing nature of armed conflict and of patterns of displacement, and by serious apprehensions about "uncontrolled" migration in an era of globalization. Additional compounding factors included the trafficking and smuggling of people, abuse of asylum procedures and difficulties in dealing with unsuccessful asylum-seekers. Countries of asylum in many parts of the world were concerned about the failure to resolve some longstanding refugee problems, urban refugee issues, irregular migration and a perceived imbalance in burden-sharing.

In a September note on international protection [A/AC.96/951], the High Commissioner focused on the fiftieth anniversary in 2001 of the 1951 UN Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] (see also p. 1113). He observed that while many States and regional organizations had reaffirmed their commitment to that Convention and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477], many States still faced challenges in trying to reconcile their obligations under the Convention with problems arising from migratory movements, misuse of the asylum system, increasing costs, the growth in smuggling and trafficking of people and the struggle for international solidarity in resolving refugee situations.

UNHCR also faced considerable challenges. Over the preceding decade, States had asked the organization to take on a wider range of responsibilities. However, funding in recent years had not been commensurate, leading to the closure of some offices and the curtailment of a number of programmes and operations. UNHCR also had to contend with an increasingly restrictive application of the 1951 Convention, including diverging interpretations of its provisions and a waning quality of asylum offered worldwide.

The High Commissioner stated that security threats to refugees during the reporting period included, in particular, refoulement (forced return) and violence and intimidation in camps. Although the basic civil and political rights of refugees had generally been respected by States parties to the 1951 Convention, challenges remained in connection with documentation and certainty of status, non-discrimination, freedom of movement, freedom of association and religion, and access to courts. Moreover, States, often for resource-related reasons, had tended to curtail refugees' economic, social and cultural rights under the Convention.

The Executive Committee, in October [A/56/12/Add.1], re-emphasized that the protection of refugees was primarily the responsibility of States, whose full and effective cooperation was required to enable UNHCR to fulfil its mandated functions.

International instruments

In 2001, Belarus became party to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and to its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477], bringing the number of parties to the Convention to 138 and to the Protocol to 137. Hungary became party to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416], increasing the number of States party to that instrument to 54. In March, FRY succeeded to those three instruments and all other treaties to which the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia had been a party, assuming the latter's responsibilities in that regard. Following the accession of the Czech Republic, Guatemala and Uruguay, the number of States party to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533] rose to 26.

Global Consultations

The Global Consultations on International Protection, launched in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1153], proceeded along three parallel tracks in 2001. The first track culminated in the Ministerial Meeting of States Parties to the 1951 Convention and its 1967 Protocol (see below). The second track provided a forum to consider developments in refugee law and examine a number of emerging legal issues. Four expert round tables discussed cessation and exclusion; the principle of non-refoulement and UNHCR's supervisory responsibility; membership of a particular social group; gender-related persecution; internal protection/relocation/flight alternative; illegal entry; and family unity. The third track was structured around a number of protection policy matters, including issues not adequately covered by the Convention. Four broad themes were selected for discussion: protection of refugees in mass influx situations; protection of refugees in the context of individual asylum systems; the search for protection-based solutions; and protection of refugee women and children. The first two themes were addressed at meetings held in March, June and September. The Global Consultations would conclude in 2002.

Ministerial Meeting of States Parties

On the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, UNHCR and Switzerland co-convened the first Ministerial Meeting of States Parties to the Convention and/or its 1967 Protocol (Geneva, 12-13 December) [HCR/MMSP/2001/10]. Conceived as an integral part of the Global Consultations on International Protection, the meeting was preceded by a preparatory session (Geneva, 20-21 September) [HCR/MMSP/2001/03].

On 13 December, the meeting adopted by consensus a declaration in which States parties, acknowledging the continuing relevance of the international regime of rights and principles established by the Convention and its Protocol, reaffirmed their commitment to upholding the values embodied in them. They recognized the importance of promoting universal adherence to those instruments and reaffirmed UNHCR's importance as the institution mandated to provide international protection to refugees. Urging all States to consider ways to strengthen the Convention, ensure closer cooperation with UNHCR and respond promptly and adequately to its funding appeals, the States parties committed themselves to providing better refugee protection through comprehensive regional and international strategies.

Assistance measures

The global population of concern to UNHCR decreased from 21.1 million in 2000 to 19.8 million at the end of 2001, due mainly to a net decrease in the number of internally displaced persons. Those assisted included asylum-seekers, refugees, returning refugees in the early stages of their reintegration, internally displaced persons and other people of concern, mainly victims of conflict. Although there were no major refugee emergencies on the scale of those in the 1990s, persistent instability and strife, particularly in Africa and parts of South America, continued to cause population movements. In the course of the year, UNHCR facilitated the resettlement of some 33,400 refugees from 75 first asylum countries to 23 countries of permanent residence.

In 2001, UNHCR received a total of some $779.2 million in voluntary contributions towards its annual programme budget.

Refugees and the environment

In 2001, UNHCR reformulated its objectives for promoting environmental management in refugee and returnee situations and developed new and improved guidelines for the application and monitoring of sound practices in agriculture, land management and energy conservation. Parallel efforts were made in collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to promote environmental awareness in refugee communities through educational outreach programmes geared particularly towards children. Specific projects included those in Afghanistan, Rwanda, the Sudan and Zimbabwe to prevent soil erosion and reduce wood usage through reliance on alternative fuel sources. Permaculture systems were introduced to benefit environmental rehabilitation and income-generating activities, such as the sale of produce. Joint ventures with NGOs helped UNHCR to identify potential development partners for eventual handover of projects it had initiated. Monitoring and assessment missions were dispatched to the DRC, Djibouti, Kenya, Rwanda, the Sudan, Thailand and Uganda.

Refugee women

UNHCR's main objective with regard to refugee women in 2001 was to assess progress in advancing their rights and promoting gender equality, with a view to redefining a strategy for the future based on lessons learned and the views of refugees themselves. Other objectives included: developing and improving multisectoral activities to prevent and respond to sexual and gender-based violence; empowering refugee and returnee women as peace-builders; promoting the rights and equality of women; strengthening the protection of women through training of both staff and refugees; and disseminating good practices.

In March, UNHCR hosted an inter-agency lessons learned conference on prevention of and response to sexual and gender-based violence in refugee situations, which, among other things, identified where progress had been made towards developing a multisectoral approach and provided the basis for updating UNHCR's Guidelines on Prevention and Response to Sexual Violence. The Office also hosted a dialogue involving women of concern to UNHCR from over 20 locations across the world, which culminated in an international meeting (Geneva, June) where 50 refugee women shared their experiences. At the field level, the Office undertook and/or supported various activities to prevent and respond to sexual and gender-based violence against women and girls in Kenya and in Sierra Leone (see p. 678).

UNHCR efforts to mainstream gender equality included incorporating the experience of refugee women in various peace processes in East and West Africa. In Guinea, Kenya, Liberia and Uganda, it supported the training of refugee women in negotiation and conflict resolution skills. Gender awareness staff were deployed with emergency response teams sent to Afghanistan, Guinea and Sierra Leone, and that approach would become common practice in future emergency operations.

Refugee children and adolescents

UNHCR's key concerns regarding refugee children and adolescents, numbering an estimated 7.7 million in 2001, continued to be issues of separation, exploitation, sexual abuse and HIV/AIDS, military recruitment, access to education and the specific needs of adolescents. In most refugee and returnee situations, children, particularly girls, faced increasing risks of sexual abuse and violence because of their age and the social disruption surrounding them. A joint UNHCR/Save the Children (United Kingdom) assessment mission visited West Africa in October and November. It reported alleged sexual exploitation of refugee children, noting that some employees of NGOs and UN agencies, including UNHCR, could be involved. OIOS was immediately asked to investigate, and UNHCR put in place a comprehensive action plan to address programme, management and resource issues and to work on an effective code of conduct based on "zero tolerance" in the region and elsewhere.

The issue of unaccompanied and separated children continued to be a UNHCR priority and was the subject of a General Assembly resolution (see below). Resource materials on child protection continued to be produced and, by year's end, 10 packs of such materials, including one on child soldiers, were available on UNHCR's web site. UNHCR and its partners incorporated peace education into refugee assistance programmes in the DRC, Guinea, Kenya, Liberia and Uganda, with some 200,000 schoolchildren and many others in non-formal education receiving peace education as part of their learning during 2001.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 54/145 [YUN 1999, p. 1138], the Secretary-General submitted a September report on assistance to unaccompanied refugee minors [A/56/333 & Corr.1]. The report reviewed new developments in family tracing and reunification and described the work of the Separated Children in Europe Programme and the Action for the Rights of Children training and capacity-building initiative. It also detailed action taken on behalf of internally displaced children and problems relating to the military recruitment of children and to sexual violence, exploitation and abuse. Efforts to strengthen UNHCR's field network were also described. Other issues of concern in the report included the girl child, adoption of separated children, and child-headed households and self-reliance of unaccompanied and separated children.

The Secretary-General noted that, despite some progress, many of the basic needs of unaccompanied and separated children remained unmet. A key challenge was the lack of adequate human and financial resources. Community-based strategies for addressing those needs required further emphasis and support in humanitarian interventions, and there was a need to strengthen inter-agency coordination and to pursue more effective registration and tracing systems. States were urged to accede to the two Optional Protocols to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 561], on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, which were adopted by General Assembly resolution 54/263 [YUN 2000, p. 615].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/578], adopted resolution 56/136 without vote [agenda item 114].

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the implementation of the present resolution and to give special attention in his report to the girl-child refugee.

Refugees and HIV/AIDS

In recognition of the fact that the circumstances in which refugees and displaced persons lived offered fertile ground for the spread of HIV/AIDS, UNHCR accorded high priority to HIV/AIDS issues in 2001 and drafted a strategic plan for 2002-2004, aimed at strengthening prevention and care in refugee situations globally. The plan was discussed at the first meeting in February 2001 of a newly created UNHCR Advisory Group on HIV/AIDS, whose role covered advocacy, the promotion of partnerships, the provision of technical and financial support and the identification of potential support from existing bilateral and multilateral aid.

Within the context of a three-year joint initiative with the United Nations Population Fund, which began in 2000 with funding from the United Nations Foundation, UNHCR continued to support projects on HIV/AIDS and reproductive health. In 2001, projects that particularly targeted young people were executed in 12 countries, in cooperation with national and international NGOs.

Regional activities

Africa

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 55/77 [YUN 2000, p. 1158], the Secretary-General submitted a September report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa [A/56/335]. He stated that, although some repatriation had taken place, some 3.6 million refugees remained in Africa, representing 30 per cent of the global 12.1 million refugee population. The main refugee groups continued to originate from Angola (421,200), Burundi (567,000), the DRC (340,000), Eritrea (377,100), Sierra Leone (401,800), Somalia (441,600) and the Sudan (443,000). Substantial numbers also originated from Liberia and Rwanda.

In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, a tripartite agreement signed in March between Eritrea, the Sudan and UNHCR enabled the repatriation of Eritrean refugees from the Sudan to begin in May. Some 62,000 refugees were scheduled to return home by year's end and, by the end of July, 20,984 of them had done so. However, the protracted civil conflict in the Sudan itself made the repatriation of some 443,000 Sudanese refugees in exile unlikely. UNHCR, while caring for the Sudanese refugees, also pursued a policy of self-reliance for them and for host communities. It also pursued local integration as a possible durable solution for such protracted refugee situations. Kenya continued to receive a steady influx of asylum-seekers, mainly from Ethiopia and the Sudan. Some 11,000 Somalis fled to Kenya following the eruption of inter-factional fighting in the southern town of Bula Hawa in March; 4,000 of them returned to Somalia with UNHCR assistance. Several thousand other Somali refugees repatriated voluntarily from Ethiopia to north-west Somalia, bringing the number of those that had returned since 1997 to over 160,000. The return of 10,547 former Ethiopian refugees from the Sudan and 1,780 from Djibouti brought the number of Ethiopians that had repatriated since 1993 to over 84,000 and marked the end of one of the oldest refugee situations on the continent.

In West and Central Africa, although the situation in the Mano River Union countries of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone remained complex and insecure, witnessing movements of 705,600 refugees, a decrease in the violence in Sierra Leone enabled 25,000 Sierra Leonean refugees in Guinea to return home voluntarily in May. More than 58,000 others were relocated to more secure sites further away from the volatile border area between the two countries. Ongoing conflict in northern Liberia forced several thousand refugees into neighbouring countries and remained a cause for concern. A total of 15,000 Liberians were scheduled to be relocated from border areas in Guinea to less violent sites, where UNHCR would further improve living conditions and consolidate assistance programmes. The repatriation of Chadian refugees from Cameroon entered its final stage, with a total of 5,530 repatriated during the year, while some 40,000 had integrated locally with UNHCR assistance. The Office also assisted Senegalese refugees in the Gambia, Central African Republic refugees in the DRC and Congolese ex-military refugees in Gabon.

In the Great Lakes region, despite some progress in the inter-Congolese dialogue in the DRC and the Arusha peace process in Burundi, many obstacles to peace and voluntary repatriation for Burundian and DRC refugees remained. Preparations were being made to repatriate Congolese refugees from the United Republic of Tanzania and a bilateral committee was to be established to discuss modalities for repatriating and resettling Burundian refugees living along Tanzania's western border.

In Southern Africa, the number of refugees increased by 7.8 per cent during the first half of the year to over 345,000. The conflict in Angola and the fragile peace process in the DRC dominated political activity in the region. Angola alone had 3.8 million internally displaced persons, with UNHCR providing assistance to over 200,000 of them in three northern provinces. Over 430,000 Angolan refugees were hosted mainly in the DRC and Zambia. In May, bilateral talks between Angola and Zambia established a mechanism to aid repatriation and UNHCR established a technical committee to further consider the possibilities of repatriation in the region, while also assisting some 20,600 refugees in Namibia.

The Secretary-General described inter-agency cooperation efforts to protect and assist refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa and discussed UNHCR's cooperation with continental and subregional initiatives.

Report of High Commissioner. In his report covering 2001 [A/57/12], the High Commissioner stated that the refugee population in Africa fell by almost 10 per cent to 3.1 million at year's end. While there were almost 190,000 new refugees, 260,000 others returned home, and another 14,500 were resettled by UNHCR in countries of permanent residence.

UNHCR's activities in West Africa covered 21 countries, focusing mainly on the Mano River Union countries. Throughout 2001, there were few opportunities for repatriation in the Great Lakes region owing to the prevailing security situation. The safety of humanitarian workers remained a major preoccupation, especially following the shooting in March of a UNHCR driver in south-eastern DRC and the assassination in May of six ICRC delegates in the north-east. In Burundi, UNHCR's access to populations of concern was often blocked by sporadic violence; as a result, only 28,000 Burundian refugees were able to return during the year. In the United Republic of Tanzania, which continued to witness an influx of refugees from neighbouring countries, UNHCR assisted 500,000 out of the 670,000 refugees in the country. Security in and around refugee camps remained a cause for concern and sexual and gender-based violence against women persisted. UNHCR facilitated the voluntary repatriation of 21,000 refugees to Rwanda, and it was anticipated that the target figure of 25,000 returns would be reached in 2002.

In Southern Africa, efforts to find lasting solutions for refugees through voluntary repatriation and resettlement were affected by the wars in Angola and the DRC. Elsewhere in the subregion, concerted efforts were made to develop self-sufficiency projects for refugees, including those in Malawi, where UNHCR provided land and loans to initiate income-generating agricultural activities, and in Swaziland, where animal husbandry and agricultural activities were initiated under a microcredit scheme.

By subregion, UNHCR assisted 888,392 persons in West and Central Africa, which received $85.2 million in agency expenditures. In East Africa, the Horn of Africa and the Great Lakes region, $185.9 million was spent on 2,445,822 persons of concern, while some $35.5 million was spent on programmes assisting 602,312 refugees, internally displaced persons, asylum-seekers and returnees in Southern Africa.

Communication. By a 9 October letter [A/56/457], the Sudan transmitted to the Secretary-General the decisions adopted by the Council of Ministers of OAU (Lusaka, Zambia, 5-8 July) and by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (Lusaka, 9-11 July), which included decisions on the situation of refugees, returnees and displaced persons and on the fiftieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/578], adopted resolution 56/135 without vote [agenda item 114].

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

Noting that 2001 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, which, together with the 1967 Protocol thereto, as complemented by the Organization of African Unity Convention of 1969, remains the foundation of the international refugee protection regime in Africa,

Recognizing that the fundamental principles and rights embodied in those Conventions have provided a resilient protection regime within which millions of refugees have been able to find safety from armed conflicts and persecution,

Recalling the Comprehensive Implementation Plan adopted by the Special Meeting of Governmental and Non-Governmental Technical Experts convened by the Organization of African Unity and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at Conakry from 27 to 29 March 2000 on the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Organization of African Unity Convention, and noting its endorsement by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its seventy-second ordinary session,

Acknowledging with appreciation that some assistance is already rendered by the international community to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and host countries in Africa,

Noting with great concern that, despite all the efforts deployed so far by the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and others, the situation of refugees and displaced persons in Africa remains precarious,

Stressing that the provision of relief and assistance to African refugees by the international community should be on an equitable, non-discriminatory basis,

Considering that, among refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons, women and children are the majority of the population affected by conflict and bear the brunt of atrocities and other consequences of conflict,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Notes with concern that the declining socio-economic situation, compounded by political instability, internal strife, human rights violations and natural disasters, has led to increased numbers of refugees and displaced persons in some countries of Africa, and remains particularly concerned about the impact of large-scale refugee populations on the security, socio-economic situation and environment of countries of asylum;

3. Encourages African States to ensure the full implementation of and follow-up to the Comprehensive Implementation Plan adopted by the Special Meeting of Governmental and Non-Governmental Technical Experts convened by the Organization of African Unity and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at Conakry on the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 1969;

encourages African States parties to the Convention to participate actively in the event;

7. Welcomes the process of the Global Consultations on International Protection launched by the Office of the High Commissioner, which provides an important forum for open discussion on complex legal and operational protection issues, and in this context invites African States to continue to participate actively in this process so as to bring their regional perspective to bear, thus ensuring that adequate attention is paid to concerns that are specific to Africa;

8. Reaffirms that the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees, as complemented by the Organization of African Unity Convention of 1969, remain the foundation of the international refugee protection regime in Africa, encourages African States that have not yet done so to accede to those instruments, and calls upon States parties to the Conventions to reaffirm their commitment to their ideals and to respect and observe their provisions;

9. Notes the need for States to address the root causes of forced displacement in Africa, and calls upon African States, the international community and relevant United Nations organizations to take concrete action to meet the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons for protection and assistance and to contribute generously to national projects and programmes aimed at alleviating their plight;

10. Notes also the link, inter alia, between human rights violations, poverty, natural disasters and environmental degradation and population displacement, and calls for redoubled and concerted efforts by States, in collaboration with the Organization of African Unity, to promote and protect human rights for all and to address these problems;

11. Encourages the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to cooperate with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, within their respective mandates, in the promotion and protection of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa;

12. Notes with appreciation the ongoing mediation and conflict resolution efforts carried out by African States, the Organization of African Unity and sub-regional organizations, as well as the establishment of regional mechanisms for conflict prevention and resolution, and urges all relevant parties to address the humanitarian consequences of conflicts;

13. Expresses its appreciation and strong support for those African Governments and local populations that, in spite of the general deterioration of socio-economic and environmental conditions and overstretched national resources, continue to accept the additional burden imposed upon them by increasing numbers of refugees and displaced persons, in compliance with the relevant principles of asylum;

14. Expresses its concern about instances in which the fundamental principle of asylum is jeopardized by unlawful expulsion or refoulement or by threats to the life, physical security, integrity, dignity and well-being of refugees;

15. Calls upon States, in cooperation with international organizations, within their mandates, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection and, in particular, to ensure that the civilian and humanitarian nature of refugee camps is not compromised by the presence or the activities of armed elements;

16. Deplores the deaths and injuries and other forms of violence sustained by staff members of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and urges States, parties to conflict and all other relevant actors to take all necessary measures to protect activities related to humanitarian assistance, to prevent attacks on and kidnapping of national and international humanitarian workers and to ensure their safety and security, calls upon States to investigate fully any crimes committed against humanitarian personnel and bring to justice persons responsible for such crimes, and calls upon organizations and aid workers to abide by the national laws and regulations of the countries in which they operate;

19. Reaffirms the right of return and also the principle of voluntary repatriation, appeals to countries of origin and countries of asylum to create conditions that are conducive to voluntary repatriation, and recognizes that, while voluntary repatriation remains the pre-eminent solution, local integration and third-country resettlement, as appropriate, are also viable options for dealing with the situation of African refugees who, owing to prevailing circumstances in their respective countries of origin, are unable to return home;

20. Notes with satisfaction the voluntary return of millions of refugees to their homelands following the successful repatriation and reintegration operations carried out by the Office of the High Commissioner with the cooperation and collaboration of countries hosting refugees and countries of origin, and looks forward to other programmes to assist the voluntary repatriation and reintegration of all refugees in Africa;

The Americas

UNHCR's main focus in Central and South America in 2001 remained the protection of some 700,000 Colombians, a high percentage of whom were indigenous and Afro-Colombians, affected by four decades of armed conflict. Although the neighbouring countries of Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela, which were affected by cross-border movements of displaced Colombians, signed tripartite agreements to facilitate the repatriation of those refugees, voluntary returnee numbers remained small. UNHCR encouraged local integration as a durable solution for long-staying refugees. Within Colombia, UNHCR reinforced the response of national institutions that addressed internal displacement, working with 14 Colombian NGOs and with local authorities. Elsewhere in South America, UNHCR continued to build and strengthen national constituencies to which it could progressively hand over responsibility for refugee protection and local integration, as in Brazil and Chile, both of which received refugees from outside the subregion for resettlement. Following the events of 11 September in the United States (see p. 60), asylum-seekers in the region were affected by stricter immigration controls resulting from heightened security concerns in the so-called "triple frontier" abutting Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay.

In North America and the Caribbean, UNHCR's utmost concern was the suspension of the United States resettlement programme owing to security concerns after 11 September. Only about 800 out of 14,000 expected refugees were admitted for resettlement in the last quarter of the year, with over 20,000 approved cases put on hold. In Canada, where visa requirements were tightened for citizens of leading asylum-seeker countries, 12,250 refugees were resettled, which was slightly below the 2000 figure of 13,520. Working with NGOs and government partners, UNHCR addressed the issue of separated children seeking asylum in Canada and published a report with recommendations for improved practices. In the Caribbean, the Office increased its monitoring of key refugee-receiving countries, including the Bahamas, the Dominican Republic and Jamaica, and worked to build up asylum systems in the region.

Total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas and the Caribbean for the year was $22.6 million for a total population of concern numbering 1,850,836.

Asia and the Pacific and the Arab States

In 2001, UNHCR spent a total of $52.3 million on activities in Asia and the Pacific for a total population of concern of 1,662,166. For operations in Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, a total of $105.5 million was spent for a population of concern of 6,342,768.

South Asia

The protracted armed conflict in Sri Lanka had resulted in the displacement of an estimated 700,000 people within the country and another 64,000 in refugee camps in southern India. As peace initiatives by the new Sri Lanka Government were being pursued, the United Nations Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement [YUN 1998, p. 675] were accepted as a likely basis for government policy and action by NGOs. With UNHCR's assistance, Bhutan and Nepal jointly assessed the eligibility of 12,000 out of the 110,000 Bhutanese refugees remaining in Nepal, one of the largest refugee groups in the region. Pending the outcome of future bilateral talks, the refugees remained in camps where they had lived for 10 years under temporary asylum. The plight of 22,000 refugees from Myanmar in Bangladesh remained a cause for concern. Although a population survey conducted by UNHCR and Bangladesh revealed that 7,500 of those in refugee camps were willing to return home without delay, fewer than 300 of them actually did so during the year, the lowest number since the resumption of repatriation in 1998. In Northern Rakhine State in Myanmar, UNHCR continued to protect a large number of Muslim returnees, while promoting their sustainable reintegration. To encourage self-reliance, UNHCR, in cooperation with the United Nations Development Programme, organized literacy programmes in the Myanmar language, particularly among women. In India, UNHCR welcomed the Government's September decision to reissue resident permits to a large number of Afghan refugees in the country. It was anticipated that many of them would be able to return home once conditions for their voluntary repatriation were met.

East Asia and the Pacific

In 2001, the protection of asylum-seekers was a dominant issue in East Asia and the Pacific. The matter was brought to a head by the rescue at sea of some 430 asylum-seekers from an Indonesian fishing vessel, seeking to reach Australia, which led to Australia's "Pacific Solution", whereby asylum-seekers would be taken elsewhere in the region to be processed. Following the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States, States of the region felt justified in further tightening procedures. As East Timor prepared for independence, UNHCR played a major role assisting and encouraging the return of Timorese refugees, including through the distribution of shelter units. Opportunities for the local resettlement of the 50,000 Timorese refugees still in Indonesia were being sought. Over 1,000 members of Vietnamese ethnic minorities (Montagnards) seeking asylum in north-eastern Cambodia were declared by UNHCR as persons of concern and provided with basic assistance. Measures were taken to prevent deportations and to monitor conditions for those who returned to Viet Nam.

Communication. On 26 November [A/C.3/56/8], the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) rejected some of the information contained in UNHCR's annual report for 2000 [A/56/12], which suggested there were DPRK refugees in the north-eastern area of China. Many Koreans lived in that part of China and travelled across the border to visit relatives. However, it was preposterous to call such travellers refugees.

Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East

UNHCR's main focus in the region was on Afghanistan, where, following the military intervention, UNHCR and its partners initially prepared for an exodus of up to 1.5 million refugees and vigorously advocated an open-border policy with all neighbouring States. Some 200,000 Afghan refugees fled to Pakistan, which authorized UNHCR to establish a pre-registration camp near the border and to move new arrivals to new camps in Baluchistan. All of UNHCR's international staff members were withdrawn to offices in neighbouring countries, where, with the backing of emergency teams, they stockpiled relief items and identified and prepared campsites. Following the collapse of the Taliban, UNHCR's focus switched to preparing for a mass return into Afghanistan and assistance for internally displaced persons. The major challenge for UNHCR in Central Asia remained the advocacy of refugee issues and the promotion of effective asylum legislation. In Tajikistan, the Government's proposed new refugee law was a serious cause for concern, as were restrictions on Afghan refugees' right to freedom of movement and residence. In Kyrgyzstan, however, efforts to develop close working relations with governmental counterparts were rewarded as several hundred Tajik refugees acquired citizenship.

In North Africa, which did not experience any changes in the refugee situation, UNHCR continued to provide protection and material assistance to urban and camp-based refugees and asylum-seekers, mainly from sub-Saharan African countries. Protection and assistance was assured for the most needy of an estimated 165,000 refugees residing in the Tindouf camps in the Western Sahara region in south-west Algeria. Finding durable solutions for those refugees was hindered by the political impasse in Western Sahara and preparations for voluntary repatriation to enable them to participate in the referendum on independence or integration with Morocco remained at a standstill. In the Middle East, the international offensive against terrorism, combined with the deterioration of the situation over the Palestinian issue, led to mounting tension in countries thought to be harbouring terrorist groups. UNHCR updated contingency plans to ensure optimum emergency preparedness should there be renewed conflict.

Europe

In 2001, UNHCR's expenditure for activities in Europe (excluding South-Eastern Europe) was $59.7 million for a population of concern numbering 4,405,307.

Western, Central and Eastern Europe

Western Europe remained a major destination for asylum-seekers, with almost 420,000 applications made. UNHCR's main challenge in the region continued to be the maintenance of access for new arrivals both to the countries of destination and to their asylum systems. Such access became increasingly difficult due to reinforced legislation against irregular migration, smuggling and trafficking, as well as heightened concerns about the perceived or real misuse of the asylum system. Additional security concerns raised by the events of 11 September triggered more restrictions.

In Central Europe, the gradual improvement of asylum systems resulted in an increase in asylum-seekers, to 42,000 in 2001. UNHCR, together with concerned States, comprehensively addressed the problem of refugees and asylum-seekers who moved in an irregular manner from Central to Western Europe. The key reason for such movements was the absence of real opportunities for economic and social integration in most Central European countries. During the year, UNHCR assisted several States to formulate refugee legislation and asylum procedures and actively pursued a special programme for meeting the protection and assistance needs of separated asylum-seeking and refugee children.

In Eastern Europe, UNHCR's major challenge continued to be the need to find durable solutions to the plight of those displaced by the protracted conflicts in the Caucasus. As it provided humanitarian assistance, UNHCR also sought suitable interim solutions that would provide displaced persons with clearly recognized legal status in the social and economic life of the host societies.

Partnerships with other agencies, including IOM, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe and the Council of Europe, were an important feature of UNHCR's contribution to the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted at the 1996 Regional Conference to Address the Problems of Refugees, Displaced Persons, Other Forms of Involuntary Displacement and Returnees in the Countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and Relevant Neighbouring States [YUN 1996, p. 1117].

The UNHCR Executive Committee, in October [A/56/12/Add.1], welcomed the progress made in a number of CIS countries in implementing the 1996 Programme of Action and called on all CIS countries to strengthen their commitment to carrying out the 2000 recommendations [YUN 2000, p. 1163] of the Steering Group established to monitor the Programme of Action's implementation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/56/578], adopted resolution 56/134 without vote [agenda item 114].

Reaffirming the view of the Conference that the primary responsibility for tackling population displacement problems lies with the affected countries themselves and that these issues are to be regarded as national priorities, while at the same time recognizing the need for enhancing international support for the national efforts of the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States aimed at the effective implementation of such responsibilities within the framework of the Programme of Action adopted by the Conference,

Noting with satisfaction the efforts of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the International Organization for Migration and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in developing strategies and practical tools for more effective capacity-building in countries of origin and enhancing programmes to address the needs of various categories of concern to the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States,

Taking note of positive results emanating from the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Convinced of the necessity of further strengthening practical measures and of continuing to maintain the regional approach for the achievement of effective implementation of the Programme of Action,

Mindful that adherence to the principles and the recommendations contained in the Programme of Action should be facilitated and can be ensured only through cooperation and coordinated activities undertaken in this respect by all interested States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and other actors,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Calls upon the Governments of the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States, in cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the International Organization for Migration and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to strengthen their efforts and mutual cooperation relating to the follow-up to the Regional Conference to Address the Problems of Refugees, Displaced Persons, Other Forms of Involuntary Displacement and Returnees in the Countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and Relevant Neighbouring States, and welcomes the positive results achieved by them in the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the Conference;

8. Invites the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the International Organization for Migration to enhance their mutual relationship with other key international actors, such as the Council of Europe, the European Commission and human rights, development and financial institutions, in order better to address the wide-ranging and complex issues in activities undertaken in follow-up to the Programme of Action;

9. Welcomes the progress made in building civil society, in particular through the development of the non-governmental sector and the development of cooperation between non-governmental organizations and the Governments of a number of countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States, and notes in this regard the relationship between adherence to the principles of the Programme of Action and success in promoting civil society, especially in the field of human rights;

10. Encourages the involvement of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in the follow-up to the Conference, and invites them to demonstrate stronger support for the process of multinational constructive dialogue among a wide range of countries concerned;

11. Emphasizes the necessity of undertaking follow-up activities to the Programme of Action in relation to ensuring respect for human rights as an important factor in the management of migration flows, the consolidation of democracy, the rule of law and stability;

14. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its fifty-eighth session.

South-Eastern Europe

In 2001, conflicts in southern Serbia and in FYROM led to renewed population displacement in South-Eastern Europe. Some 75,000 people became internally displaced in FYROM and another 93,000 crossed the border into FRY, triggering an emergency deployment by UNHCR. By year's end, some 80 per cent of the refugees and internally displaced persons had returned to their homes. Significant progress was recorded on a number of refugee and returnee issues in other parts of the region. In FRY, where the refugee population had decreased to 400,000, new government initiatives favouring durable solutions created an opportunity for changing the status of some 60 per cent of those refugees who expressed a wish to stay in the country. In Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia, there were encouraging signs of minority returns, with some 92,000 returning to Bosnia and Herzegovina alone. The situation in the Kosovo province of FRY was less encouraging. Despite the prospects for stability evidenced by democratic elections in August, minorities remained in a precarious situation, with only 2,500 of the displaced among them returning to their homes. On the other hand, many displaced ethnic Albanians from southern Serbia were able to return from Kosovo, although the process of reconstruction and reconciliation remained fragile. Important UNHCR activities included a Regional Return Initiative, with an Agenda for Action, which was endorsed in June by Governments in the region. Other efforts were aimed at ensuring that bona fide asylum-seekers and refugees received the international protection they needed, which commanded particular importance due to increasing flows of irregular migrants and trafficking across the region towards Western Europe.

Chapter XIII

Health, food and nutrition

In 2001, the United Nations continued to promote human health, coordinate food aid and food security and support research in nutrition.

At the end of the year, some 40 million people were living with HIV/AIDS, about one third of whom were between the ages of 15 and 24. During the year, approximately 5 million people became infected, 800,000 of them children. The General Assembly's special session on HIV/AIDS (New York, 25-27 June) was seen as the first step in the realization of the commitments contained in the Millennium Declaration, adopted in 2000, in which the world's leaders resolved to halt and begin to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015. The Declaration of Commitment, adopted at the special session, represented a watershed in the history of the epidemic, establishing, for the first time, time-bound targets on prevention, care, support and treatment, impact alleviation, and children orphaned and made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS.

In September, the Assembly proclaimed the period 2001-2010 the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa. In July, the Economic and Social Council called for support to the Organization of African Unity plan of action to achieve the goal of the Pan-African Tsetse and Trypanosomiasis Eradication Campaign initiative. Regarding tobacco control, work progressed on the drafting of a framework convention on tobacco control and related protocols.

The World Food Programme—a joint undertaking of the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)—provided food aid to 77 million people, supplying a record level of 4.2 million tons of such aid. FAO continued to implement the plan of action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit and the FAO Council approved a proposal to convene, in June 2002, a review of the 1996 Summit.

mitted themselves to halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015; providing special assistance to children orphaned by HIV/AIDS; and helping Africa build its capacity to tackle the spread of the pandemic and other infectious diseases. The decision by the General Assembly to convene a special session to review the problem as a matter of urgency followed quickly after the Millennium Summit, and was seen as the first step in the realization of the commitments expressed in the Declaration. The special session, which called for an expanded global response, for the first time ever established time-bound targets relating to prevention, care, support and treatment, impact alleviation, and children orphaned and made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS.

General Assembly special session on HIV/AIDS

The twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly to review and address the HIV/AIDS problem in all its aspects and to secure a global commitment to enhance coordination and intensify efforts to combat the epidemic was held in New York from 25 to 27 June, as decided by the Assembly in resolutions 54/283 [YUN 2000, p. 1166] and 55/13 [ibid., p. 1167]. On 27 June, the Assembly adopted a Declaration of Commitment entitled "Global Crisis—Global Action" (see p. 1126), in which Member States committed themselves to addressing the HIV/AIDS crisis at all levels, through strong leadership and effective responses in such areas as: prevention; care, support and treatment; human rights; reducing vulnerability; a supportive environment for orphaned children; alleviating the epidemic's social and economic impact; research and development; developing strategies in conflict and disaster-affected regions; and additional and sustained resources. On the same date, the Assembly approved the report of the Credentials Committee (resolution S-26/1).

In other action, the Assembly, on 25 June, appointed the Credentials Committee members (decision S-26/11), elected its President (decision S-26/12), Vice-Presidents (decision S-26/13) and Chairpersons of the Main Committees (decision S-26/14), and appointed the facilitators (decision S-26/15) and chairpersons of the round tables (decision S-26/16). The Assembly also approved the organizational arrangements for the session (decision S-26/21), adopted its agenda (decision S-26/22) and selected accredited civil society actors to participate in the plenary debate and in the round tables (decision S-26/23).

AIDS prevention and control

In the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], adopted by the Millennium Summit of the United Nations in 2000, the world's leaders com-

In addition to discussions in the Assembly, four interactive round tables, with the participation of Member States, observers, the UN system and accredited civil society actors, were held on: HIV/AIDS prevention and care [A/S-26/RT.1]; HIV/AIDS and human rights [A/S-26/RT.2]; the epidemic's social and economic impact and strengthening national capacities to combat HIV/AIDS [A/S-26/RT.3]; and international funding and cooperation to address the challenges of HIV/AIDS [A/S-26/RT.4]. The round-table chairpersons made oral presentations to the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 27 June [meeting 8], the General Assembly adopted resolution S-26/2 [draft: A/S-26/L.2] without vote [agenda item 8].

Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

The General Assembly

Adopts the Declaration of Commitment on the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) annexed to the present resolution.

ANNEX

Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

"Global Crisis—Global Action"

1. We, heads of State and Government and representatives of States and Governments, assembled at the United Nations, from 25 to 27 June 2001, for the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly, convened in accordance with resolution 55/13 of 3 November 2000, as a matter of urgency, to review and address the problem of HIV/AIDS in all its aspects, as well as to secure a global commitment to enhancing coordination and intensification of national, regional and international efforts to combat it in a comprehensive manner;

2. Deeply concerned that the global HIV/AIDS epidemic, through its devastating scale and impact, constitutes a global emergency and one of the most formidable challenges to human life and dignity, as well as to the effective enjoyment of human rights, which undermines social and economic development throughout the world and affects all levels of society—national, community, family and individual;

3. Noting with profound concern that by the end of 2000 36.1 million people worldwide were living with HIV/AIDS, 90 per cent in developing countries and 75 per cent in sub-Saharan Africa;

4. Noting with grave concern that all people, rich and poor, without distinction as to age, gender or race, are affected by the HIV/AIDS epidemic, further noting that people in developing countries are the most affected and that women, young adults and children, in particular girls, are the most vulnerable;

5. Concerned also that the continuing spread of HIV/AIDS will constitute a serious obstacle to the realization of the global development goals we adopted at the Millennium Summit of the United Nations;

6. Recalling and reaffirming our previous commitments on HIV/AIDS made through:

- The United Nations Millennium Declaration, of 8 September 2000;
- The political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the commitments made at the World Summit for Social Development, of 1 July 2000;
- The political declaration and further action and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, of 10 June 2000;
- Key actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, of 2 July 1999;
- The regional call for action to fight HIV/AIDS in Asia and the Pacific, of 25 April 2001;
- The Abuja Declaration and Framework for Action for the fight against HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and other related infectious diseases in Africa, of 27 April 2001;
- The Declaration of the Tenth Ibero-American Summit of heads of State, of 18 November 2000;
- The Pan-Caribbean Partnership against HIV/AIDS, of 14 February 2001;
- The European Union Programme for Action: Accelerated action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis in the context of poverty reduction, of 14 May 2001;
- The Baltic Sea Declaration on HIV/AIDS Prevention, of 4 May 2000;
- The Central Asian Declaration on HIV/AIDS, of 18 May 2001;

7. Convinced of the need to have an urgent, coordinated and sustained response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic, which will build on the experience and lessons learned over the past 20 years;

8. Noting with grave concern that Africa, in particular sub-Saharan Africa, is currently the worst-affected region, where HIV/AIDS is considered a state of emergency which threatens development, social cohesion, political stability, food security and life expectancy and imposes a devastating economic burden, and that the dramatic situation on the continent needs urgent and exceptional national, regional and international action;

9. Welcoming the commitments of African heads of State or Government at the Abuja special summit in April 2001, particularly their pledge to set a target of allocating at least 15 per cent of their annual national budgets for the improvement of the health sector to help to address the HIV/AIDS epidemic; and recognizing that action to reach this target, by those countries whose resources are limited, will need to be complemented by increased international assistance;

10. Recognizing also that other regions are seriously affected and confront similar threats, particularly the Caribbean region, with the second-highest rate of HIV infection after sub-Saharan Africa, the Asia-Pacific region where 7.5 million people are already living with HIV/AIDS, the Latin American region with 1.5 million people living with HIV/AIDS and the Central and Eastern European region with very rapidly rising infection rates, and that the potential exists for a rapid escalation of the epidemic and its impact throughout the world if no specific measures are taken;

11. Recognizing that poverty, underdevelopment and illiteracy are among the principal contributing factors to the spread of HIV/AIDS, and noting with grave concern that HIV/AIDS is compounding poverty and is now reversing or impeding development in many countries and should therefore be addressed in an integrated manner;

12. Noting that armed conflicts and natural disasters also exacerbate the spread of the epidemic;

13. Noting further that stigma, silence, discrimination and denial, as well as a lack of confidentiality, undermine prevention, care and treatment efforts and increase the impact of the epidemic on individuals, families, communities and nations and must also be addressed;

14. Stressing that gender equality and the empowerment of women are fundamental elements in the reduction of the vulnerability of women and girls to HIV/AIDS;

15. Recognizing that access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS is one of the fundamental elements to achieve progressively the full realization of the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health;

16. Recognizing that the full realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all is an essential element in a global response to the HIV/AIDS pandemic, including in the areas of prevention, care, support and treatment, and that it reduces vulnerability to HIV/AIDS and prevents stigma and related discrimination against people living with or at risk of HIV/AIDS;

17. Acknowledging that prevention of HIV infection must be the mainstay of the national, regional and international response to the epidemic, and that prevention, care, support and treatment for those infected and affected by HIV/AIDS are mutually reinforcing elements of an effective response and must be integrated in a comprehensive approach to combat the epidemic;

18. Recognizing the need to achieve the prevention goals set out in the present Declaration in order to stop the spread of the epidemic, and acknowledging that all countries must continue to emphasize widespread and effective prevention, including awareness-raising campaigns through education, nutrition, information and health-care services;

19. Recognizing that care, support and treatment can contribute to effective prevention through an increased acceptance of voluntary and confidential counselling and testing, and by keeping people living with HIV/AIDS and vulnerable groups in close contact with health-care systems and facilitating their access to information, counselling and preventive supplies;

20. Emphasizing the important role of cultural, family, ethical and religious factors in the prevention of the epidemic and in treatment, care and support, taking into account the particularities of each country as well as the importance of respecting all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

21. Noting with concern that some negative economic, social, cultural, political, financial and legal factors are hampering awareness, education, prevention, care, treatment and support efforts;

22. Noting the importance of establishing and strengthening human resources and national health and social infrastructures as imperatives for the effective delivery of prevention, treatment, care and support services;

23. Recognizing that effective prevention, care and treatment strategies will require behavioural changes and increased availability of and non-discriminatory access to, inter alia, vaccines, condoms, microbicides, lubricants, sterile injecting equipment, drugs, including anti-retroviral therapy, diagnostics and related technologies, as well as increased research and development;

24. Recognizing also that the cost, availability and affordability of drugs and related technology are significant factors to be reviewed and addressed in all aspects and that there is a need to reduce the cost of these drugs and technologies in close collaboration with the private sector and pharmaceutical companies;

25. Acknowledging that the lack of affordable pharmaceuticals and of feasible supply structures and health systems continues to hinder an effective response to HIV/AIDS in many countries, especially for the poorest people, and recalling efforts to make drugs available at low prices for those in need;

26. Welcoming the efforts of countries to promote innovation and the development of domestic industries consistent with international law in order to increase access to medicines to protect the health of their populations, and noting that the impact of international trade agreements on access to or local manufacturing of essential drugs and on the development of new drugs needs to be evaluated further;

27. Welcoming the progress made in some countries to contain the epidemic, particularly through: strong political commitment and leadership at the highest levels, including community leadership; effective use of available resources and traditional medicines; successful prevention, care, support and treatment strategies; education and information initiatives; working in partnership with communities, civil society, people living with HIV/AIDS and vulnerable groups; and the active promotion and protection of human rights; and recognizing the importance of sharing and building on our collective and diverse experiences, through regional and international cooperation including North-South, South-South and triangular cooperation;

28. Acknowledging that resources devoted to combating the epidemic both at the national and international levels are not commensurate with the magnitude of the problem;

29. Recognizing the fundamental importance of strengthening national, regional and subregional capacities to address and effectively combat HIV/AIDS and that this will require increased and sustained human, financial and technical resources through strengthened national action and cooperation and increased regional, subregional and international cooperation;

30. Recognizing that external debt and debt-servicing problems have substantially constrained the capacity of many developing countries, as well as countries with economies in transition, to finance the fight against HIV/AIDS;

31. Affirming the key role played by the family in prevention, care, support and treatment of persons affected and infected by HIV/AIDS, bearing in mind that in different cultural, social and political systems various forms of the family exist;

32. Affirming that beyond the key role played by communities, strong partnerships among Governments, the United Nations system, intergovernmental organizations, people living with HIV/AIDS and vulnerable groups, medical, scientific and educational institutions, non-governmental organizations, the business sector including generic and research-based pharmaceutical companies, trade unions, the media, parliamentarians, foundations, community organizations, faith-based organizations and traditional leaders are important;

33. Acknowledging the particular role and significant contribution of people living with HIV/AIDS, young people and civil society actors in addressing the problem of HIV/AIDS in all its aspects, and recognizing that their full involvement and participation in the design, planning, implementation and evaluation of programmes is crucial to the development of effective responses to the HIV/AIDS epidemic;

34. Further acknowledging the efforts of international humanitarian organizations combating the epidemic, including the volunteers of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in the most affected areas all over the world;

35. Commending the leadership role on HIV/AIDS policy and coordination in the United Nations system of the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS); and noting its endorsement in December 2000 of the Global Strategy Framework on HIV/AIDS, which could assist, as appropriate, Member States and relevant civil society actors in the development of HIV/AIDS strategies, taking into account the particular context of the epidemic in different parts of the world;

36. Solemnly declare our commitment to address the HIV/AIDS crisis by taking action as follows, taking into account the diverse situations and circumstances in different regions and countries throughout the world;

Leadership

Strong leadership at all levels of society is essential for an effective response to the epidemic

Leadership by Governments in combating HIV/AIDS is essential and their efforts should be complemented by the full and active participation of civil society, the business community and the private sector

Leadership involves personal commitment and concrete actions

At the national level

37. By 2003, ensure the development and implementation of multisectoral national strategies and financing plans for combating HIV/AIDS that address the epidemic in forthright terms; confront stigma, silence and denial; address gender and age-based dimensions of the epidemic; eliminate discrimination and marginalization; involve partnerships with civil society and the business sector and the full participation of people living with HIV/AIDS, those in vulnerable groups and people mostly at risk, particularly women and young people; are resourced to the extent possible from national budgets without excluding other sources, inter alia, international cooperation; fully promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health; integrate a gender perspective; address risk, vulnerability, prevention, care, treatment and support and reduction of the impact of the epidemic; and strengthen health, education and legal system capacity;

38. By 2003, integrate HIV/AIDS prevention, care, treatment and support and impact-mitigation priorities into the mainstream of development planning, including in poverty eradication strategies, national budget allocations and sectoral development plans;

At the regional and subregional level

39. Urge and support regional organizations and partners to be actively involved in addressing the crisis; intensify regional, subregional and interregional cooperation and coordination; and develop regional strategies and responses in support of expanded country-level efforts;

40. Support all regional and subregional initiatives on HIV/AIDS including: the International Partnership against AIDS in Africa (IPAA) and the ECA-African Development Forum African Consensus and Plan of Action: Leadership to overcome HIV/AIDS; the Abuja Declaration and Framework for Action for the fight against HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and other related infectious diseases in Africa; the CARICOM Pan-Caribbean Partnership against HIV/AIDS; the ESCAP regional call for action to fight HIV/AIDS in Asia and the Pacific; the Baltic Sea Initiative and Action Plan; the Horizontal Technical Cooperation Group on HIV/AIDS in Latin America and the Caribbean; and the European Union Programme for Action: Accelerated action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis in the context of poverty reduction;

41. Encourage the development of regional approaches and plans to address HIV/AIDS;

42. Encourage and support local and national organizations to expand and strengthen regional partnerships, coalitions and networks;

43. Encourage the United Nations Economic and Social Council to request the regional commissions, within their respective mandates and resources, to support national efforts in their respective regions in combating HIV/AIDS;

At the global level

44. Support greater action and coordination by all relevant organizations of the United Nations system, including their full participation in the development and implementation of a regularly updated United Nations strategic plan for HIV/AIDS, guided by the principles contained in the present Declaration;

45. Support greater cooperation between relevant organizations of the United Nations system and international organizations combating HIV/AIDS;

46. Foster stronger collaboration and the development of innovative partnerships between the public and private sectors, and by 2003 establish and strengthen mechanisms that involve the private sector and civil society partners and people living with HIV/AIDS and vulnerable groups in the fight against HIV/AIDS;

Prevention

Prevention must be the mainstay of our response

47. By 2003, establish time-bound national targets to achieve the internationally agreed global prevention goal to reduce by 2005 HIV prevalence among young men and women aged 15 to 24 in the most affected countries by 25 per cent and by 25 per cent globally by 2010, and intensify efforts to achieve these targets as well as to challenge gender stereotypes and attitudes, and gender inequalities in relation to HIV/AIDS, encouraging the active involvement of men and boys;

48. By 2003, establish national prevention targets, recognizing and addressing factors leading to the spread of the epidemic and increasing people's vulnerability, to reduce HIV incidence for those identifiable groups, within particular local contexts, which currently have high or increasing rates of HIV infection, or which available public health information indicates are at the highest risk of new infection;

49. By 2005, strengthen the response to HIV/AIDS in the world of work by establishing and implementing prevention and care programmes in public, private and informal work sectors, and take measures to provide a supportive workplace environment for people living with HIV/AIDS;

50. By 2005, develop and begin to implement national, regional and international strategies that facilitate access to HIV/AIDS prevention programmes for migrants and mobile workers, including the provision of information on health and social services;

51. By 2003, implement universal precautions in health-care settings to prevent transmission of HIV infection;

52. By 2005, ensure: that a wide range of prevention programmes, which take account of local circumstances, ethics and cultural values, is available in all countries, particularly the most affected countries, including information, education and communication, in languages most understood by communities and respectful of cultures, aimed at reducing risk-taking behaviour and encouraging responsible sexual behaviour, including abstinence and fidelity; expanded access to essential commodities, including male and female condoms and sterile injecting equipment; harm-reduction efforts related to drug use; expanded access to voluntary and confidential counselling and testing; safe blood supplies; and early and effective treatment of sexually transmittable infections;

53. By 2005, ensure that at least 90 per cent, and by 2010 at least 95 per cent, of young men and women aged 15 to 24 have access to the information, education, including peer education and youth-specific HIV education, and services necessary to develop the life skills required to reduce their vulnerability to HIV infection, in full partnership with young persons, parents, families, educators and health-care providers;

54. By 2005, reduce the proportion of infants infected with HIV by 20 per cent, and by 50 per cent by 2010, by ensuring that 80 per cent of pregnant women accessing antenatal care have information, counselling and other HIV-prevention services available to them, increasing the availability of and providing access for HIV-infected women and babies to effective treatment to reduce mother-to-child transmission of HIV, as well as through effective interventions for HIV-infected women, including voluntary and confidential counselling and testing, access to treatment, especially anti-retroviral therapy and, where appropriate, breast-milk substitutes and the provision of a continuum of care;

Care, support and treatment

Care, support and treatment are fundamental elements of an effective response

55. By 2003, ensure that national strategies, supported by regional and international strategies, are developed in close collaboration with the international community, including Governments and relevant intergovernmental organizations, as well as with civil society and the business sector, to strengthen health-care systems and address factors affecting the provision of HIV-related drugs, including anti-retroviral drugs, inter alia, affordability and pricing, including differential pricing, and technical and health-care system capacity. Also, in an urgent manner make every effort to provide progressively and in a sustainable manner, the highest attainable standard of treatment for HIV/AIDS, including the prevention and treatment of opportunistic infections, and effective use of quality-controlled anti-retroviral therapy in a careful and monitored manner to improve adherence and effectiveness and reduce the risk of developing resistance; and to cooperate constructively in strengthening pharmaceutical policies and practices, including those applicable to generic drugs and intellectual property regimes, in order further to promote innovation and the development of domestic industries consistent with international law;

56. By 2005, develop and make significant progress in implementing comprehensive care strategies to: strengthen family and community-based care, including that provided by the informal sector, and health-care systems to provide and monitor treatment to people living with HIV/AIDS, including infected children, and to support individuals, households, families and communities affected by HIV/AIDS; and improve the capacity and working conditions of health-care personnel, and the effectiveness of supply systems, financing plans and referral mechanisms required to provide access to affordable medicines, including anti-retroviral drugs, diagnostics and related technologies, as well as quality medical, palliative and psychosocial care;

57. By 2003, ensure that national strategies are developed in order to provide psychosocial care for individuals, families and communities affected by HIV/AIDS;

HIV/AIDS and human rights

Realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all is essential to reduce vulnerability to HIV/AIDS

Respect for the rights of people living with HIV/AIDS drives an effective response

58. By 2003, enact, strengthen or enforce, as appropriate, legislation, regulations and other measures to eliminate all forms of discrimination against and to ensure the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by people living with HIV/AIDS and members of vulnerable groups, in particular to ensure their access to, inter alia, education, inheritance, employment, health care, social and health services, prevention, support and treatment, information and legal protection, while respecting their privacy and confidentiality; and develop strategies to combat stigma and social exclusion connected with the epidemic;

59. By 2005, bearing in mind the context and character of the epidemic and that, globally, women and girls are disproportionately affected by HIV/AIDS, develop and accelerate the implementation of national strategies that promote the advancement of women and women's full enjoyment of all human rights; promote shared responsibility of men and women to ensure safe sex; and empower women to have control over and decide freely and responsibly on matters related to their sexuality to increase their ability to protect themselves from HIV infection;

60. By 2005, implement measures to increase capacities of women and adolescent girls to protect themselves from the risk of HIV infection, principally through the provision of health care and health services, including for sexual and reproductive health, and through prevention education that promotes gender equality within a culturally and gender-sensitive framework;

61. By 2005, ensure development and accelerated implementation of national strategies for women's empowerment, the promotion and protection of women's full enjoyment of all human rights and reduction of their vulnerability to HIV/AIDS through the elimination of all forms of discrimination, as well as all forms of violence against women and girls, including harmful traditional and customary practices, abuse, rape and other forms of sexual violence, battering and trafficking in women and girls;

Reducing vulnerability

The vulnerable must be given priority in the response

Empowering women is essential for reducing vulnerability

62. By 2003, in order to complement prevention programmes that address activities which place individuals at risk of HIV infection, such as risky and unsafe sexual behaviour and injecting drug use, have in place in all countries strategies, policies and programmes that identify and begin to address those factors that make individuals particularly vulnerable to HIV infection, including underdevelopment, economic insecurity, poverty, lack of empowerment of women, lack of education, social exclusion, illiteracy, discrimination, lack of information and/or commodities for self-protection, and all types of sexual exploitation of women, girls and boys, including for commercial reasons. Such strategies, policies and programmes should address the gender dimension of the epidemic, specify the action that will be taken to address vulnerability and set targets for achievement;

63. By 2003, develop and/or strengthen strategies, policies and programmes which recognize the importance of the family in reducing vulnerability, inter alia, in educating and guiding children and take account of cultural, religious and ethical factors, to reduce the vulnerability of children and young people by ensuring access of both girls and boys to primary and secondary education, including HIV/AIDS in curricula for adolescents; ensuring safe and secure environments, especially for young girls; expanding good-quality, youth-friendly information and sexual health education and counselling services; strengthening reproductive and sexual health programmes; and involving families and young people in planning, implementing and evaluating HIV/AIDS prevention and care programmes, to the extent possible;

64. By 2003, develop and/or strengthen national strategies, policies and programmes, supported by regional and international initiatives, as appropriate, through a participatory approach, to promote and protect the health of those identifiable groups which currently have high or increasing rates of HIV infection or which public health information indicates are at greatest risk of and most vulnerable to new infection as indicated by such factors as the local history of the epidemic, poverty, sexual practices, drug-using behaviour, livelihood, institutional location, disrupted social structures and population movements, forced or otherwise;

Children orphaned and made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS

Children orphaned and affected by HIV/AIDS need special assistance

65. By 2003, develop and by 2005 implement national policies and strategies to build and strengthen governmental, family and community capacities to provide a supportive environment for orphans and girls and boys infected and affected by HIV/AIDS, including by providing appropriate counselling and psychosocial support, ensuring their enrolment in school and access to shelter, good nutrition and health and social services on an equal basis with other children; and protect orphans and vulnerable children from all forms of abuse, violence, exploitation, discrimination, trafficking and loss of inheritance;

66. Ensure non-discrimination and full and equal enjoyment of all human rights through the promotion of an active and visible policy of de-stigmatization of children orphaned and made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS;

67. Urge the international community, particularly donor countries, civil society, as well as the private sector, to complement effectively national programmes to support programmes for children orphaned or made vulnerable by HIV/AIDS in affected regions and in countries at high risk and to direct special assistance to sub-Saharan Africa;

Alleviating social and economic impact

To address HIV/AIDS is to invest in sustainable development

68. By 2003, evaluate the economic and social impact of the HIV/AIDS epidemic and develop multisectoral strategies to address the impact at the individual, family, community and national levels; develop and accelerate the implementation of national poverty eradication strategies to address the impact of HIV/AIDS on household income, livelihoods and access to basic social services, with special focus on individuals, families and communities severely affected by the epidemic; review the social and economic impact of HIV/AIDS at all levels of society, especially on women and the elderly, particularly in their role as caregivers, and in families affected by HIV/AIDS, and address their special needs; and adjust and adapt economic and social development policies, including social protection policies, to address the impact of HIV/AIDS on economic growth, provision of essential economic services, labour productivity, government revenues, and deficit-creating pressures on public resources;

69. By 2003, develop a national legal and policy framework that protects in the workplace the rights and dignity of persons living with and affected by HIV/AIDS and those at the greatest risk of HIV/AIDS, in consultation with representatives of employers and workers, taking account of established international guidelines on HIV/AIDS in the workplace;

Research and development

With no cure for HIV/AIDS yet found, further research and development is crucial

70. Increase investment in and accelerate research on the development of HIV vaccines, while building national research capacity, especially in developing countries, and especially for viral strains prevalent in highly affected regions; in addition, support and encourage increased national and international investment in HIV/AIDS-related research and development, including biomedical, operations, social, cultural and behavioural research and in traditional medicine to improve prevention and therapeutic approaches; accelerate access to prevention, care and treatment and care technologies for HIV/AIDS (and its associated opportunistic infections and malignancies and sexually transmitted diseases), including female-controlled methods and microbicides, and in particular, appropriate, safe and affordable HIV vaccines and their delivery, and to diagnostics, tests and methods to prevent mother-to-child transmission; improve our understanding of factors which influence the epidemic and actions which address it, inter alia, through increased funding and public/private partnerships; and create a conducive environment for research and ensure that it is based on the highest ethical standards;

71. Support and encourage the development of national and international research infrastructures, laboratory capacity, improved surveillance systems, data collection, processing and dissemination, and the training of basic and clinical researchers, social scientists, health-care providers and technicians, with a focus on the countries most affected by HIV/AIDS, particularly developing countries and those countries experiencing or at risk of a rapid expansion of the epidemic;

72. Develop and evaluate suitable approaches for monitoring treatment efficacy, toxicity, side effects, drug interactions and drug resistance, and develop methodologies to monitor the impact of treatment on HIV transmission and risk behaviours;

73. Strengthen international and regional co-operation, in particular North-South, South-South and triangular cooperation, related to the transfer of relevant technologies suitable to the environment in the prevention and care of HIV/AIDS, the exchange of experiences and best practices, researchers and research findings and strengthen the role of UNAIDS in this process. In this context, encourage ownership of the end results of these cooperative research findings and technologies by all parties to the research, reflecting their relevant contribution and dependent upon their providing legal protection to such findings; and affirm that all such research should be free from bias;

74. By 2003, ensure that all research protocols for the investigation of HIV-related treatment, including anti-retroviral therapies and vaccines, based on international guidelines and best practices, are evaluated by independent committees of ethics, in which persons living with HIV/AIDS and caregivers for anti-retroviral therapy participate;

HIV/AIDS in conflict and disaster-affected regions

Conflicts and disasters contribute to the spread of HIV/AIDS

75. By 2003, develop and begin to implement national strategies that incorporate HIV/AIDS awareness, prevention, care and treatment elements into programmes or actions that respond to emergency situations, recognizing that populations destabilized by armed conflict, humanitarian emergencies and natural disasters, including refugees, internally displaced persons, and in particular women and children, are at increased risk of exposure to HIV infection; and, where appropriate, factor HIV/AIDS components into international assistance programmes;

76. Call on all United Nations agencies, regional and international organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations involved with the provision and delivery of international assistance to countries and regions affected by conflicts, humanitarian crises or natural disasters, to incorporate as a matter of urgency HIV/AIDS prevention, care and awareness elements into their plans and programmes and provide HIV/AIDS awareness and training to their personnel;

77. By 2003, have in place national strategies to address the spread of HIV among national uniformed services, where this is required, including armed forces and civil defence forces, and consider ways of using personnel from these services who are educated and trained in HIV/AIDS awareness and prevention to assist with HIV/AIDS awareness and prevention activities, including participation in emergency, humanitarian, disaster relief and rehabilitation assistance;

78. By 2003, ensure the inclusion of HIV/AIDS awareness and training, including a gender component, into guidelines designed for use by defence personnel and other personnel involved in international peacekeeping operations, while also continuing with ongoing education and prevention efforts, including pre-deployment orientation, for these personnel;

Resources

The HIV/AIDS challenge cannot be met without new, additional and sustained resources

79. Ensure that the resources provided for the global response to address HIV/AIDS are substantial, sustained and geared towards achieving results;

80. By 2003, through a series of incremental steps, reach an overall target of annual expenditure on the epidemic of between 7 and 10 billion United States dollars in low- and middle-income countries and those countries experiencing or at risk of experiencing rapid expansion for prevention, care, treatment, support and mitigation of the impact of HIV/AIDS, and take measures to ensure that the resources needed are made available, particularly from donor countries and also from national budgets, bearing in mind that resources of the most affected countries are seriously limited;

81. Call on the international community, where possible, to provide assistance for HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment in developing countries on a grant basis;

82. Increase and prioritize national budgetary allocations for HIV/AIDS programmes as required, and ensure that adequate allocations are made by all ministries and other relevant stakeholders;

83. Urge the developed countries that have not done so to strive to meet the targets of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product for overall official development assistance and the targets of earmarking 0.15 per cent to 0.20 per cent of gross national product as official development assistance for least developed countries as agreed, as soon as possible, taking into account the urgency and gravity of the HIV/AIDS epidemic;

84. Urge the international community to complement and supplement efforts of developing countries that commit increased national funds to fight the HIV/AIDS epidemic through increased international development assistance, particularly those countries most affected by HIV/AIDS, particularly in Africa, especially in sub-Saharan Africa, the Caribbean, countries at high risk of expansion of the HIV/AIDS epidemic and other affected regions whose resources to deal with the epidemic are seriously limited;

85. Integrate HIV/AIDS actions in development assistance programmes and poverty eradication strategies as appropriate, and encourage the most effective and transparent use of all resources allocated;

86. Call on the international community, and invite civil society and the private sector to take appropriate measures to help to alleviate the social and economic impact of HIV/AIDS in the most affected developing countries;

87. Without further delay, implement the enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Country (HIPC) Initiative and agree to cancel all bilateral official debts of HIPC countries as soon as possible, especially those most affected by HIV/AIDS, in return for demonstrable commitments by them to poverty eradication, and urge the use of debt service savings to finance poverty eradication programmes, particularly for prevention, treatment, care and support for HIV/AIDS and other infections;

88. Call for speedy and concerted action to address effectively the debt problems of least developed countries, low-income developing countries, and middle-income developing countries, particularly those affected by HIV/AIDS, in a comprehensive, equitable, development-oriented and durable way through various national and international measures designed to make their debt sustainable in the long term and thereby to improve their capacity to deal with the HIV/AIDS epidemic, including, as appropriate, existing orderly mechanisms for debt reduction, such as debt swaps for projects aimed at the prevention, care and treatment of HIV/AIDS;

89. Encourage increased investment in HIV/AIDS-related research nationally, regionally and internationally, in particular for the development of sustainable and affordable prevention technologies, such as vaccines and microbicides, and encourage the proactive preparation of financial and logistic plans to facilitate rapid access to vaccines when they become available;

90. Support the establishment, on an urgent basis, of a global HIV/AIDS and health fund to finance an urgent and expanded response to the epidemic based on an integrated approach to prevention, care, support and treatment and to assist Governments, inter alia, in their efforts to combat HIV/AIDS with due priority to the most affected countries, notably in sub-Saharan Africa and the Caribbean, and to those countries at high risk, and mobilize contributions to the fund from public and private sources with a special appeal to donor countries, foundations, the business community, including pharmaceutical companies, the private sector, philanthropists and wealthy individuals;

91. By 2002, launch a worldwide fund-raising campaign aimed at the general public as well as the private sector, conducted by UNAIDS with the support and collaboration of interested partners at all levels, to contribute to the global HIV/AIDS and health fund;

92. Direct increased funding to national, regional and subregional commissions and organizations to enable them to assist Governments at the national, regional and subregional level in their efforts to respond to the crisis;

93. Provide the UNAIDS co-sponsoring agencies and the UNAIDS secretariat with the resources needed to work with countries in support of the goals of the present Declaration;

Follow-up

Maintaining the momentum and monitoring progress are essential

At the national level

94. Conduct national periodic reviews with the participation of civil society, particularly people living with HIV/AIDS, vulnerable groups and caregivers, of progress achieved in realizing these commitments, identify problems and obstacles to achieving progress, and ensure wide dissemination of the results of these reviews;

95. Develop appropriate monitoring and evaluation mechanisms to assist with follow-up in measuring and assessing progress, and develop appropriate monitoring and evaluation instruments, with adequate epidemiological data;

96. By 2003, establish or strengthen effective monitoring systems, where appropriate, for the promotion and protection of human rights of people living with HIV/AIDS;

At the regional level

97. Include HIV/AIDS and related public health concerns, as appropriate, on the agenda of regional meetings at the ministerial and head of State and Government level;

98. Support data collection and processing to facilitate periodic reviews by regional commissions and/or regional organizations of progress in implementing regional strategies and addressing regional priorities, and ensure wide dissemination of the results of these reviews;

99. Encourage the exchange between countries of information and experiences in implementing the measures and commitments contained in the present Declaration, and in particular facilitate intensified South-South and triangular cooperation;

At the global level

100. Devote sufficient time and at least one full day of the annual session of the General Assembly to review and debate a report of the Secretary-General on progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the present Declaration, with a view to identifying problems and constraints and making recommendations on action needed to make further progress;

101. Ensure that HIV/AIDS issues are included on the agenda of all appropriate United Nations conferences and meetings;

102. Support initiatives to convene conferences, seminars, workshops, training programmes and courses to follow up issues raised in the present Declaration, and in this regard encourage participation in and wide dissemination of the outcomes of the forthcoming Dakar Conference on access to care for HIV infection; the Sixth International Congress on AIDS in Asia and the Pacific; the Twelfth International Conference on AIDS and Sexually Transmitted Infections in Africa; the Fourteenth International Conference on AIDS, Barcelona, Spain; the Tenth International Conference on People Living with HIV/AIDS, Port-of-Spain; the Second Forum and Third Conference of the Horizontal Technical Cooperation Group on HIV/AIDS and Sexually Transmitted Infections in Latin America and the Caribbean, Havana; the Fifth International Conference on Home and Community Care for Persons Living with HIV/AIDS, Chiang Mai, Thailand;

103. Explore, with a view to improving equity in access to essential drugs, the feasibility of developing and implementing, in collaboration with non-governmental organizations and other concerned partners, systems for the voluntary monitoring and reporting of global drug prices;

We recognize and express our appreciation to those who have led the effort to raise awareness of the HIV/AIDS epidemic and to deal with its complex challenges;

We look forward to strong leadership by Governments and concerted efforts with the full and active participation of the United Nations, the entire multilateral system, civil society, the business community and private sector;

And finally, we call on all countries to take the necessary steps to implement the present Declaration, in strengthened partnership and cooperation with other multilateral and bilateral partners and with civil society.

Preparatory process

The General Assembly, acting as the preparatory committee for the special session, held open-ended informal consultations on the report of the Secretary-General (see below) and on the issues for consideration in the Declaration of Commitment. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) served as the substantive secretariat of the session.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 55/13 [YUN 2000, p. 1167], the Secretary-General, in a report of 16 February [A/55/779], examined the spread of the epidemic and reviewed its impacts—demographic, social, economic and from the standpoint of the security of people and nations. The report outlined key lessons learned and successes achieved, and assessed the response to the epidemic through leadership, coordination and the need for adequate resources. Action by Governments to respond to critical challenges to combat HIV/AIDS were described. Annexed to the report were the goals set by global conferences in 1999 and 2000 and their follow-up processes, and the UN system response to HIV/AIDS.

Other action. Prior to the special session, Member States and various regional organizations held meetings and adopted declarations and calls for action. The second African Development Forum adopted the African Consensus and Plan of Action: Leadership to overcome HIV/AIDS (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 3-7 December 2000) [A/55/774]; the heads of State and Government of the Caribbean, on 14 February in Bridgetown, Barbados, signed the Pan-Caribbean Partnership against HIV/AIDS; on 25 April [E/2001/39], the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific adopted a regional call for action to fight HIV/AIDS; the Organization of African Unity (OAU) (Abuja, Nigeria, 26-27 April) adopted the Abuja Declaration and Framework for Action for the fight against HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and other related infectious diseases; Sweden, on 17 May [A/55/946], drew the Assembly's attention to a communication of 21 February from the Commission of the European Communities to the Council of the European Union (EU) and the European Parliament on the Programme for Action: Accelerated action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis in the context of poverty reduction, and on the same date [A/55/945] to the Programme as published by the EU; the Central Asian Conference on HIV/AIDS (Almaty, Kazakhstan, 16-18 May), attended by the representatives of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, declared commitments to scale up national responses to HIV/AIDS; the Russian Federation, on behalf of members of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), transmitted, on 22 June [A/S-26/4], an appeal of the Council on cooperation in the field of health of CIS members (Baku, Azerbaijan, 19 June); and Bolivia, on behalf of the Andean Community, transmitted the text of a political declaration (Valencia, Venezuela, 24 June) [A/S-26/6], expressing concern over the worldwide consequences of HIV/AIDS.

18. The chairpersons of the four round tables shall be from the four regional groups not represented by the President of the General Assembly. The four chairpersons shall be selected by their respective regional groups. The chairpersons of the round tables will present orally their summaries of the discussions, during the concluding plenary meeting of the special session.

20. The round tables shall be open to Member States, observers, as well as entities of the United Nations system and accredited civil society actors.

21. In order to ensure interactive and substantive discussions of high quality, participation in each round table shall be limited to a maximum of 65 participants, of which at least 48 will be representatives of Member States. In addition, each round table shall include a maximum of 17 participants, representing observers, entities of the United Nations system and accredited civil society actors.

22. Following the selection of the chairpersons of the round tables, each regional group should determine which of its members will participate in each round table, ensuring that equitable geographical distribution will be maintained, allowing for some flexibility, and taking into account the importance of ensuring a mix of countries highly affected by the epidemic as well as countries that are less affected.

23. Thus, in order to allow for some flexibility, for each round table the maximum number of participants from each regional group will be as follows:

(a) African States: 14 Member States;

(b) Asian States: 14 Member States;

(c) Eastern European States: six Member States;

(d) Latin American and Caribbean States: nine Member States;

26. Each representative of a Member State attending the round tables may be accompanied by two advisers.

27. The Holy See and Switzerland, in their capacity as observer States, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer, may also participate in different round tables, to be determined in consultation with the President of the General Assembly.

28. A limited number of observers as defined in paragraph 14 above may also participate in each round table.

29. Entities of the United Nations system with specific expertise in areas related to the themes of the round tables will be invited to participate in the round tables. The UNAIDS secretariat will provide to the President of the General Assembly a list of those entities that will participate in each round table.

30. Accredited civil society actors with specific expertise in areas related to the themes of the round tables will also be invited to participate in the round tables. The President of the General Assembly is requested to conduct appropriate consultations with

Member States, and also with accredited civil society actors, before presenting a list of selected accredited civil society actors that may participate in each round table to Member States, in the last week of May 2001, for consideration on a non-objection basis for final decision by the General Assembly. When selecting civil society actors, due consideration shall be given to the principles of equitable geographical representation and gender, as well as to an adequate mix of national, regional and international civil society actors, and to the need to ensure that a variety of perspectives are represented.

31. The list of participants of each round table will be made available as soon as possible.

32. The round tables shall be closed to the general public. Representatives of Member States, observers, entities of the United Nations system and accredited civil society actors, as well as representatives of accredited media, will be able to follow the proceedings of the round tables via a closed-circuit television in an overflow room.

Outcome document of the special session

33. The General Assembly at its special session shall consider and adopt a declaration of commitment, taking into account the report of the Secretary-General and other relevant documents, as may be deemed necessary.

Preparatory process of the special session

34. During the preparatory process, one week, from 26 February to 2 March 2001, will be devoted to the discussion on the report of the Secretary-General and to open-ended informal consultations of the plenary.

35. A limited number of accredited civil society actors may make statements during the discussion devoted to the report of the Secretary-General, given the availability of time, and ensuring that equitable geographical representation and a wide variety of perspectives are represented.

36. The first draft outline of the declaration of commitment shall be made available by 12 March 2001, and a meeting of the open-ended informal consultations of the plenary shall be held at that time for its introduction.

37. During a second week, from 21 to 25 May 2001, the open-ended informal consultations of the plenary shall focus on the draft declaration of commitment.

38. The provisions outlined above shall in no way create a precedent for other special sessions of the General Assembly.

By resolution 55/256 of 31 May, the Assembly adopted the special session's provisional agenda.

In a series of decisions, the Assembly took action regarding the accreditation of civil society organizations not in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council or not members of the Programme Coordinating Board of UNAIDS (see below) to participate in the special session (decision 55/460 A of 26 February, decision 55/460 B of 18 May, decision 55/460 C of 22 June).

Joint UN programme on HIV/AIDS

UNAIDS, which became fully operational in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1121], continued to coordinate UN activities for AIDS prevention and control. The Programme, which served as the main advocate for global action on HIV/AIDS, had seven co-sponsors: the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), the World Bank and the World Health Organization (WHO). UNAIDS was mandated to lead, strengthen and support an expanded response to the epidemic, mainly through facilitation and coordination, best practice development and advocacy.

According to UNAIDS, at the end of 2001, an estimated 40 million people were living with HIV/AIDS, of whom about one third were between the ages of 15 and 24. During the year, some 5 million people became infected globally, 800,000 of them children. Sub-Saharan Africa remained the worst-affected region, with about 3.4 million new infections occurring in 2001, bringing to 28.1 million the total number of people living with HIV/AIDS; in 2001, AIDS killed 2.3 million people in Africa. In Asia and the Pacific, 1.07 million people were newly infected, bringing to 7.1 million the total number of people living with the disease. HIV incidence was rising faster in Eastern Europe and Central Asia than anywhere else; an estimated 250,000 new infections in 2001 raised to 1 million the number of people afflicted.

Report of UNAIDS Executive Director. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/36 [YUN 1999, p. 1149], the Secretary-General, by a June note [E/2001/82], transmitted a report of the UNAIDS Executive Director, which described the status of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, the UN system support to an expanded response, the country-level response and the efforts of the UNAIDS secretariat, co-sponsors and other partners towards more effective and coordinated action.

The period under review, July 1999 to May 2001, laid the groundwork for a more mature, focused and coordinated response to the epidemic from UN system organizations and from a wider set of national and international partners. Within the United Nations, HIV/AIDS received one of the highest priorities, which was reflected by Security Council deliberations on the epidemic [YUN 2000, p. 1169] (see also p. 77), the commitment of the Secretary-General and the co-sponsors and the General Assembly's special session on HIV/

AIDS in June (see p. 1125). The UNAIDS approach to the epidemic over the biennium was multifaceted, with progress achieved in advancing the prevention and the care agendas. Effective prevention was promoted through the dissemination of information, educational programmes, and drug abuse and HIV/AIDS prevention activities. UNAIDS continued to assist Governments and civil society in developing comprehensive care plans and increasing their capacities to provide anti-retroviral drugs. With the United Nations as facilitator and partner, major research and development pharmaceutical companies and generic competition combined to make HIV drugs available, at a significantly reduced price, to a greater number of people in developing countries.

UN theme groups on HIV/AIDS demonstrated increased effectiveness in supporting national co-ordination mechanisms, broadening their scope to include such areas as advocacy, resource mobilization and facilitating exchanges of experiences within regions. The theme groups also focused on integrating HIV/AIDS into the United Nations Development Assistance Framework and other development frameworks, such as the poverty reduction strategy papers process and the common country assessments. As mainstreaming HIV/AIDS into development frameworks was one of the priorities of the UNAIDS secretariat, the secretariat, UNDCP, UNDP, UNICEF, the World Bank and WHO worked to do so by giving it a prominent place analytically and operationally. UNAIDS strategic planning development funds continued to be channelled to programmes through the UN theme groups.

The United Nations System Strategic Plan [YUN 2000, p. 1166], developed to identify strategies and partnerships necessary for UN support to countries, incorporated the plans and strategies of 29 UN organizations working on HIV/AIDS. Progress was made in developing cooperation frameworks with non-co-sponsoring organizations, including FAO, OAU and the International Labour Organization (ILO).

The report identified some of the challenges that would confront UNAIDS in the next biennium, including promoting a shift from pilot projects and small-scale interventions to more comprehensive prevention programmes; promoting expanded access to existing HIV-related commodities; further strengthening coordination at the country level; promoting the development of comprehensive care strategies; enhancing UNAIDS capacity to support policy development and coordination at all levels; expanding the participation of civil society in the response; and mobilizing the financial resources necessary to counter the epidemic.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2001/23 [draft: E/2001/L.28] without vote [agenda item 7 (c)].

5. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Economic and Social Council, at its substantive session of 2003, a report prepared by the Executive Director of the Programme, in collaboration with other relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, which should include the progress made in developing a coordinated response by the United Nations system to the HIV/AIDS pandemic.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the item "Review of the problem of human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome in all its aspects" should remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Security Council action. In a statement of 28 June (S/PRST/2001/16), the Security Council, welcoming the fact that the Declaration of Commitment contained practical measures to reduce the impact of conflict and disasters on the spread of HIV/AIDS, recognized that further efforts were necessary to do so and to develop the capacity of peacekeepers to become advocates and actors for awareness and prevention of HIV transmission. The Council encouraged continued efforts with regard to relevant training for peacekeeping, pre-deployment orientation and increased international cooperation by Member States (see p. 78).

Tobacco

A report of the Secretary-General [E/2002/44] described the global tobacco epidemic and the activities of the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control.

An estimated 1.3 billion people used tobacco worldwide by 2000, and assuming no change in global prevalence, the global number of smokers was expected to reach 1.7 billion in 2020. Most tobacco users resided in developing countries or in transitional economies. It was predicted that the total number of female smokers would rise from 257.8 million in 2000 to 324 million in 2020; most of the increase would occur in developing countries.

The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1151], at its third session (8 December 2000), organized in a global videoconference format, linked together eight UN organizations, as well as the World Bank and the World Trade Organization. The session provided an update on the work of each agency related to tobacco, focused on developing a work plan for inter-agency cooperation and discussed technical cooperation in support of the framework convention on tobacco control (see below). The fourth session of the Task Force (Kobe, Japan, 5 December), comprising seven UN organizations, the World Bank and the World Customs Organization, updated smoke-free policies in the UN system and discussed the recommendations and follow-up to the International Meeting on Economic, Social and Health Issues in Tobacco Control (Kobe, 3-4 December), hosted by WHO. Experts at the meeting reviewed the ongoing UN work in the area of international tobacco control, and explored the economic transition issues relevant to the technical mandates and ongoing work of the Task Force members, particularly FAO, ILO, WHO and the World Bank. WHO and the World Bank discussed effective collaboration between the health and financial sectors for tobacco control (Malta, 5-7 September).

The report contained tables presenting tobacco use prevalence by WHO regions and levels of development for the year 2000 and the projected number of smokers in 2020 and in 2050.

On 31 May, World No Tobacco Day was observed under the theme "Second-hand smoke kills. Let's clear the air".

Framework convention

During the second session of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body (INB) (Geneva, 30 April-5 May), responsible for negotiating the text of the WHO framework convention on tobacco control and possible related protocols, a first Chair's text was discussed and the Co-Chairs of the three INB working groups developed a compendium of all the textual proposals on the Chair's text, which were submitted by member States. At the third session (22-28 November), significant progress was made in advancing the negotiations.

Inter-agency coordination in health policy

The WHO/UNICEF/UNFPA Coordinating Committee on Health, at its third session (New York, 19-20 April) [E/ICEF/2001/11], reviewed progress made in implementing the recommendations made during its second session [YUN 1999, p. 1151], particularly in the area of advocacy, and noted that work was continuing in the areas of programme development, implementation, monitoring and evaluation. Areas under review were maternal mortality and morbidity, adolescent health and development, HIV/AIDS, immunization and coordination of follow-up to the International Conference on Population and Development [YUN 1994, p. 955]. The Committee considered sector-wide approaches for health and development, and reviewed the resolutions and decisions adopted by the three organizations.

Roll Back Malaria initiative

Communications. On 8 March [A/55/240], Togo, representing OAU, requested the inclusion of an additional item on the General Assembly's agenda in 2001, for the purpose of proclaiming the decade 2001-2010 the "Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Africa". Also in March [A/55/240/Add.1], Togo transmitted the Declaration and

Plan of Action on "Roll Back Malaria in Africa", adopted by the Extraordinary Summit of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (Abuja, Nigeria, 24-25 April 2000), which had called on the United Nations to declare the decade.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 1998/36 [YUN 1998, p. 1129], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [E/2001/80], prepared by WHO and other UN system entities, on progress made over the past two years regarding the Roll Back Malaria Partnership. Roll Back Malaria, launched by WHO in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1384], aimed at establishing sustainable capacity within communities to combat malaria and worked through global partnerships for advocacy and technical and financial assistance and through country-level partnerships to implement the strategic plans of countries.

Since January, 12 African countries had conducted national round-table meetings in order to reach agreement on a shared strategy, obtain buy-in into the strategic plan by health partners active in the country, and determine budgetary gaps and quantify the additional global resources necessary to ensure scaled-up implementation. Ghana, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania had shown that prioritizing Roll Back Malaria could be accomplished through a sector-wide approach to health. Eritrea had decided that rolling back malaria was the Government's primary responsibility, which had allowed the country to move towards its goal of reducing malaria mortality and morbidity by 80 per cent by 2004.

The fourth meeting of Roll Back Malaria partners, hosted by the World Bank (Washington, D.C., 18-19 April), assessed progress and agreed on priorities for malaria control for the next few years.

The report recommended that the Council call on donors that had pledged support to Roll Back Malaria to initiate urgent disbursement procedures in favour of the high-quality country strategic plans that had been developed in many malaria-affected countries. It proposed that the Council might wish to endorse the concept of a global fund for HIV/AIDS and health and urge that the fund be capitalized in order to contribute to the estimated $1.5 billion per year needed for malaria control during the rest of the decade.

On 26 July, the Council took note of the report (decision 2001/303).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 September [meeting III], the General Assembly adopted resolution 55/284 [draft: A/55/L.84/Rev.1 & Rev.1/Add.1] without vote [agenda item 186].

2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/135 of 19 December 1994 and 50/128 of 20 December 1995 concerning the struggle against malaria in the developing countries, particularly in Africa,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council relating to the struggle against malaria and diarrhoeal diseases, in particular its resolution 1998/36 of 30 July 1998,

Acknowledging that it is important and necessary for countries where malaria is endemic to adopt appropriate strategies to combat malaria, one of the most deadly of all tropical diseases, which annually causes approximately one million deaths in Africa, where nine out of every ten cases of malaria occur,

Taking note of the declarations and decisions on health issues adopted by the Organization of African Unity, in particular the declaration and plan of action on the "Roll Back Malaria" initiative adopted at the Extraordinary Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, held in Abuja on 24 and 25 April 2000, as well as decision AHG/Dec.155(XXXVI) concerning the implementation of that declaration and plan of action, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-sixth ordinary session, held in Lomé from 10 to 12 July 2000,

Acknowledging the efforts of the World Health Organization and other partners to fight malaria over the years, including the launching of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership in 1998,

Recognizing that malaria-related ill health and deaths throughout the world can be eliminated with political commitment and commensurate resources if the public is educated and sensitized about malaria and appropriate health services are made available in countries where the disease is endemic,

Emphasizing that the international community has an essential role to play in strengthening the support and assistance provided to developing countries, particularly African countries, in their efforts to reduce the incidence of malaria and mitigate its negative effects,

Emphasizing also the importance of implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and welcoming, in this connection, the commitments of Member States to respond to the specific needs of Africa,

1. Proclaims the period 2001-2010 the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa;

2. Takes note with satisfaction of the continuing efforts of developing countries, particularly those in African countries, to combat malaria through the formulation of plans and strategies at the national, regional and continental levels, despite their limited financial, technical and human resources;

3. Stresses that the proclamation of the Decade will stimulate the efforts of African countries and the international community not only to roll back malaria worldwide, in particular in Africa where the burden is heaviest, but also to prevent its spread to previously malaria-free areas;

4. Appeals to the international community, United Nations bodies, international and regional organizations and non-governmental organizations to allocate substantial new and additional resources, including through the new global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis, launched by the Group of Eight Major Industrialized Countries at its Genoa Summit, held from 20 to 22 July 2001, and by the Secretary-General, for developing countries, particularly in Africa, with a view to enabling them to implement fully the plan of action adopted in Abuja for the "Roll Back Malaria" initiative;

5. Commends the World Health Organization and its partners, and urges them to provide the necessary support for its ongoing measures to combat malaria in developing countries, particularly in Africa, and to provide the assistance necessary for African States to meet their objectives;

6. Calls for joint comprehensive efforts between Africa and the international community to ensure that by 2005 the following targets are achieved:

(a) At least 60 per cent of those at risk for malaria, particularly pregnant women and children under five years of age, shall benefit from the most suitable combination of personal and community protective measures, such as insecticide-treated bednets and other interventions that are accessible and affordable, to prevent infection and suffering;

(b) At least 60 per cent of all pregnant women who are at risk for malaria, especially those in their first pregnancies, shall have access to chemoprophylaxis or presumptive intermittent treatment;

(c) At least 60 per cent of those suffering from malaria shall have prompt access to and shall be able to use correct, affordable and appropriate treatment within twenty-four hours of the onset of symptoms;

7. Reiterates the need to ensure that measures to reduce malaria transmission risks, including environmental management, are included in development planning and activities;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, acting in close collaboration with the Director-General of the World Health Organization, developing countries and regional organizations, including the Organization of African Unity, to conduct in 2005 an evaluation of the measures taken and progress made towards the achievement of the mid-term targets, the means of implementation provided by the international community in this regard and the overall goals of the Decade, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to it at its fifty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Trypanosomiasis

African animal trypanosomiasis, carried by the tsetse fly, remained a major constraint to food security in Africa. The vector, which also transmitted the parasites responsible for human sleeping sickness, killed livestock, depriving farmers of the use of the animals for draft power for ploughing. It was found only in Africa.

Communication. The Sudan, as Chairman of the African Group, transmitted the decisions and declarations adopted by the OAU Assembly of Heads of State and Government at its thirty-seventh ordinary session and fifth ordinary session of the African Economic Community (Lusaka, Zambia, 9-11 July) [A/56/457], among them a decision on the implementation of the plan of action for the eradication of tsetse flies in Africa.

Report of Secretary-General. As part of discussions during the high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council on the role of the UN system in supporting the efforts of African countries to achieve sustainable development, the Council considered a June report of the Secretary-General [E/2001/83]. He observed that the gains made in human development in the 1960s and the 1970s were being reversed by various infectious diseases. The activities of the International Atomic Energy Agency and FAO to create tsetse-free zones in sub-Saharan Africa contributed to increasing agricultural productivity in rural areas. Support to control the vector would contribute to reducing rural poverty. The Secretary-General recommended the urgent mobilization of resources to strengthen health systems in the context of a broad development approach where health sector reforms went hand in hand with poverty reduction and community participation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2001/26 [draft: E/2001/L.34] without vote [agenda item 7 (g)].

Implementation of the plan of action for the eradication of tsetse flies from Africa

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the role of the United Nations system in supporting the efforts of African countries to achieve sustainable development,

Taking note with appreciation of the ongoing efforts to fight sleeping sickness, in particular the programme for the surveillance and control of African trypanosomiasis,

1. Calls attention to the seriousness of the tsetse and trypanosomiasis problem and its increasing significance as a constraint to sustainable development in Africa and the alleviation of rural poverty;

2. Takes note of the decision of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity to free Africa of tsetse flies;

3. Welcomes the Organization of African Unity plan of action for a campaign to achieve the goal of the Pan-African Tsetse and Trypanosomiasis Eradication Campaign initiative;

4. Calls upon all Member States, organizations of the United Nations system and the international community to support fully this initiative.

Food aid

World Food Programme

In July, the Economic and Social Council examined two reports pertaining to the work of the World Food Programme (WFP): the annual report of the Executive Director of WFP for 2000 [E/2001/47] and a report of the WFP Executive Board containing the decisions and recommendations of its 2000 sessions [E/2001/36]. The Council, by decision 2001/226 of 10 July, took note of the two reports.

The WFP Executive Board decided on organizational and programme matters and approved a number of projects at its 2001 sessions, all held in Rome, Italy: first regular session (13-16 February), second regular session (16-18 May), annual session (21-24 May) and third regular session (22-25 October). On 25 October, the Board approved the 2002-2003 provisional work programme.

WFP activities

During 2001 [E/2002/54], WFP assisted 77 million of the world's poorest in 82 countries, of whom 20 million benefited from development programmes in 55 countries, 43 million benefited from emergency operations in 50 countries and 14 million benefited from protracted relief operations in 41 countries. The beneficiaries included 8 million persons internally displaced and 3 million refugees.

Total quantities of food provided by WFP reached a record level of 4.2 million tons, an increase of some 20 per cent over 2000. Of the total food provided, 660,600 tons was for development projects, 2.7 million tons was for emergency operations and 818,700 tons was for protracted relief and recovery operations.

Global food aid deliveries amounted to 11 million tons in 2001, a decrease of nearly 3 per cent from the 11.3 million tons delivered in 2000. Programme food aid provided bilaterally on a government-to-government basis decreased by 15 per cent, from 3.2 million to 2.7 million tons, which accounted for the decrease of global food aid deliveries in 2001. Nearly half of the food aid delivered during the year was emergency food aid provided as relief to people affected by man-made or natural emergency situations. Compared with 2000, the portion of food aid channelled multilaterally increased from 36 per cent to 42 per cent in 2001. The decrease in Programme food aid resulted in an increase of the share of total food provided as targeted food aid. An important aspect of project food aid in 2001 was that some 27 per cent of the deliveries was monetized.

Even though the total number of beneficiaries decreased (83 million in 2000), WFP initiated 59 new operational activities and 16 country programmes worldwide.

Sub-Saharan Africa received the largest share of WFP assistance, with 51.7 per cent of its operational expenditures spent in 39 countries; Asia received 33.5 per cent for 15 countries; Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, 9.4 per cent for nine countries; Latin America and the Caribbean, 3.5 per cent for 13 countries; and the Middle East and North Africa, 1.8 per cent for nine countries.

Administrative and financial matters

Resources and financing

WFP operational expenditure for 2001 amounted to $1.7 billion for development and relief activities in the least developed countries and low-income, food-deficit countries. Contributions reached a record level of $1.9 billion, the highest amount in WFP's history, including a $1.2 billion contribution from the United States, the largest-ever amount from a single donor. Of the total contributed, $1.1 billion went to emergency operations, $270 million to development activities, $510 million to protracted relief and recovery operations and $20 million for other purposes.

Food security

Follow-up to 1996 World Food Summit

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to implement the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129], in which the organization committed itself to assisting developing countries on trade issues, particularly in preparing for multilateral trade negotiations in agriculture through studies, analyses and training. FAO reported in 2001 that progress had been made in reducing the absolute number of hungry people, but that was not happening fast enough to achieve the 1996 Summit goal of halving the number of hungry people by 2015. During the year, the FAO Director-General proposed to postpone the "World Food Summit: five years later", scheduled for November 2001. The FAO Council, at its one hundred and twenty-first session (Rome, 30 October–1 November), approved the proposal to convene the follow-up meeting from 10 to 13 June 2002.

The State of Food and Agriculture 2001, FAO's annual report on current developments and issues in world agriculture, stated that latest estimates suggested that the declining trend in the prevalence of hunger had come to a near standstill, with some 826 million people undernourished. Improvements in some subregions, notably East Asia, had been offset by a deterioration in others, especially sub-Saharan Africa and Central America and the Caribbean. The publication featured a review of the existing evidence on the link between nutrition and productivity and economic growth.

Nutrition

ACC activities

During its twenty-eighth session (Nairobi, Kenya, 2–6 April) [ACC/2001/9], the Administrative Committee on Coordination Subcommittee on Nutrition (ACC/SCN) reviewed the reports of working groups on such issues as the nutrition of school-age children; capacity development in food and nutrition; micronutrients; nutrition, ethics and human rights; breastfeeding; nutrition in emergencies; household food security; and prevention of foetal and infant malnutrition. During the session, a symposium on nutrition and HIV/AIDS took place, which was hosted by the WFP Nairobi office. An ACC/SCN statement on nutrition and HIV/AIDS, approved for wide dissemination, was annexed to the Subcommittee's report.

Projected SCN expenditure, as at 14 March 2001, to the end of the 2000–2001 biennium totalled $780,000, against income of $714,400. The deficit was partly due to UNDP's total suspension of its contributions for the biennium. The UN agencies approved unanimously the core and programme budget presented for the 2002–2003 biennium. The proposed core budget was set at $860,000, while the programme budget was estimated to total $920,000.

UNU activities

The United Nations University (UNU) food and nutrition programme assisted developing regions to enhance individual, organizational and institutional capacity, carried out research activities that required global efforts and served as the academic arm for the UN system in the areas of food and nutrition that were best addressed in a non-regulatory, non-normative environment.

In 2001 [A/57/31], the UNU food and nutrition programme worked with WHO to develop new growth references for infants and young children, and in its review of technical information relevant to international policies related to infant feeding. It partnered with WHO and FAO in developing updates for the evaluation of protein and energy requirements, and discussions were under way to review the harmonization of approaches for developing dietary standards published by individual countries.

Under its capacity development training programme, UNU organized a 12-month training programme on food science and technology at the National Food Research Institute (Tsukuba, Japan), in which five fellows took part. In the degree-oriented studies programme, two fellowships were awarded to students to participate in a two-year postgraduate training programme in nutrition planning at the Department of Food Technology and Nutrition of the University of Nairobi. In cooperation with FAO, work in the area of nutrition data management continued with two 3-week training courses, in the Caribbean and in the Netherlands, on the production and use of food composition data in nutrition. The programme continued its quarterly publication of The Food and Nutrition Bulletin and The Journal of Food Composition and Analysis.

Chapter XIV

International drug control

During 2001, the United Nations, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), renewed its commitment to strengthen international cooperation and increase efforts to counter the world drug problem, in accordance with the obligations of States under the United Nations drug control conventions and on the basis of the outcome of the General Assembly's twentieth special session, held in 1998. Activities focused mainly on implementation of the 1999 Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which served as a guide to Member States in adopting strategies and programmes for reducing illicit drug demand in order to achieve significant results by 2008.

UNDCP stimulated action at the national, regional and international levels through technical cooperation programmes and supported the international community in implementing the strategy agreed upon by the Assembly at its special session. It assisted States in complying with international treaties and supported national efforts and initiatives to reduce or eliminate illicit cultivation of opium poppy, coca bush and cannabis through alternative development, and to strengthen national capacities in demand reduction and institution-building.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main UN policy-making body dealing with drug control—addressed a number of issues and adopted resolutions on the reduction of the demand for illicit drugs, illicit drug trafficking and supply, and implementation of the Global Programme of Action and international treaties. In July, the Economic and Social Council urged Governments to continue contributing to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific needs, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials.

INCB continued to oversee the implementation of the three major international drug control conventions, to analyse the drug situation worldwide and to draw Governments' attention to weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance, making suggestions and recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

Follow-up to the twentieth special session

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/65 [YUN 2000, p. 1175], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/56/157], presented an overview of the implementation of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the Assembly on the world drug problem, held in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1135], and of resolution 54/132 [YUN 1999, p. 1157], by which the Assembly adopted the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction. The report reviewed 2003 and 2008 goals and targets set by the special session; the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs; the Action Plan for implementing the Declaration on the principles; the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development [YUN 1998, p. 1148]; measures to promote judicial cooperation; the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors [ibid., p. 1139]; control of precursors; countering money-laundering; and UNDCP as a catalyst for action by Member States and the UN system.

In March, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered the first biennial report of the UNDCP Executive Director on the implementation of the outcome of the special session [YUN 2000, p. 1174]. The report [E/CN.7/2001/2 & Add.1-3], presented an overview of Governments' efforts to meet the objectives and target dates set out in the action plans and measures adopted at the special session, drawing on information provided by Governments through biennial questionnaires and on other sources.

By a 28 March resolution [E/2001/28/Rev.1 (res. 44/2)], the Commission took note of the first biennial report of the UNDCP Executive Director on the implementation of the outcome of the special session [YUN 2000, p. 1174] and requested him to provide additional information in subsequent reports. Welcoming Governments' efforts to meet the goals and targets set out in the Political Declaration adopted at the special session [YUN 1998, p. 1136], it urged Member States to continue making every effort to meet those targets. Member States were also urged to transmit to the UNDCP Executive Director their replies to the second biennial questionnaire by 30 June 2002.

The Executive Director submitted to the Commission's resumed session (Vienna, 12-14 December) his consolidated first biennial report, which contained replies to the biennial questionnaires received after November 2000. A revised questionnaire was also included in the report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/56/575], adopted resolution 56/124 without vote [agenda item 111].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/92 of 12 December 1997, 53/115 of 9 December 1998, 54/132 of 17 December 1999 and 55/65 of 4 December 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, entitled "United Nations Millennium Declaration", in which the world leaders resolved to redouble efforts to counter the world drug problem,

Reaffirming its commitment to the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, held in New York from 8 to 10 June 1998, and welcoming the continued determination of Governments to overcome the world drug problem by a full and balanced application of national, regional and international strategies to reduce the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs, as reflected in the Political Declaration, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem,

Gravely concerned that, despite continued increased efforts by States, relevant international organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, the drug problem is still a challenge of a global dimension which constitutes a serious threat to the health, safety and well-being of all mankind, in particular young people, in all countries, undermines development, including efforts to reduce poverty, socio-economic and political stability and democratic institutions, entails an increasing economic cost for Governments, also threatens the national security and sovereignty of States, as well as the dignity and hope of millions of people and their families, and causes irreparable loss of human lives,

Concerned that the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs and psychotropic substances continue to threaten seriously the socio-economic and political systems, stability, national security and sovereignty of many States, especially those involved in conflicts and wars, and that trafficking in drugs could make conflict resolution more difficult,

Deeply alarmed by the violence and economic power of criminal organizations and terrorist groups engaged in drug-trafficking activities and other criminal activities, such as money-laundering and illicit traffic in arms, precursors and essential chemicals, and by the increasing transnational links between them, and recognizing the urgent need for enhanced international cooperation and implementation of effective strategies on the basis of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, which are essential to achieving results against all forms of transnational criminal activities,

Welcoming the call on States and appropriate international and regional organizations in a position to do so to provide assistance, upon request, to combat the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons linked to drug trafficking, transnational organized crime and terrorism, as expressed in the outcome document of the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects,

Noting with grave concern the global increase in the use of minors in the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, as well as in the number of children and young people starting to use drugs at an earlier age and in their access to substances not previously used,

Alarmed by the rapid and widespread increase in the illicit manufacture, trafficking and consumption, in particular by young people, of synthetic drugs in many countries and by the high probability that amphetamine-type stimulants, in particular methamphetamine and amphetamine, may become drugs of choice among abusers in the twenty-first century,

Deeply convinced that the special session made a significant contribution to a new comprehensive framework for international cooperation, based on an integrated and balanced approach with strategies, measures, methods, practical activities, goals and specific targets to be met, that all States, the United Nations system and other international organizations must implement them with concrete actions and that the international financial institutions, such as the World Bank, and the regional development banks should be invited to include action against the world drug problem in their programmes, taking into account the priorities of States,

Reaffirming the importance of the commitments of Member States in meeting the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008, as set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, and welcoming the guidelines for reporting on the follow-up to the twentieth special session adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its reconvened forty-second session, as well as the elements recommended to the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme by the Commission at its forty-fourth session for the preparation of subsequent reports,

Welcoming the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the forty-fifth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs of an item on the preparations for the ministerial segment to be held in 2003, in line with Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/30 of 28 July 1999, to focus on the progress made by States in implementing the action plan and measures adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session,

Emphasizing the importance of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which introduces a global approach, recognizing a new balance between illicit supply and demand reduction, under the principle of shared responsibility, aims at preventing the use of drugs and at reducing the adverse consequences of drug abuse, ensuring that special attention is paid to vulnerable groups, in particular children and young people, and constitutes one of the pillars of the new global strategy, and reaffirming the need for demand reduction programmes,

Emphasizing equally the importance of supply reduction as an integral part of a balanced drug control strategy under the principles enshrined in the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, reaffirming the need for alternative development programmes that are sustainable, welcoming the achievements of some States on their way to eradicating illicit drug crops, and urging all other States to make similar efforts,

Underlining the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues and as the governing body of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, the leadership role and commendable work of the Programme as the main focus for concerted multilateral action and the important role of the International Narcotics Control Board as an independent monitoring authority, as set out in the international drug control treaties,

Recognizing the efforts of all countries, in particular those that produce narcotic drugs for scientific and medical purposes, and of the International Narcotics Control Board in preventing the diversion of such substances to illicit markets and in maintaining production at a level consistent with licit demand, in line with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971,

Recognizing also that the problem of the illicit production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances is often related to development problems and that those links and the promotion of the economic development of countries affected by the illicit drug trade require, within the context of shared responsibility, appropriate measures, including strengthened international cooperation in support of alternative and sustainable development activities, in the affected areas of those countries, that have as their objectives the reduction and elimination of illicit drug production,

Stressing that respect for all human rights is and must be an essential component of measures taken to address the drug problem,

Ensuring that women and men benefit equally, and without any discrimination, from strategies directed against the world drug problem, through their involvement in all stages of programmes and policy-making,

Recognizing that the use of the Internet poses new opportunities for and challenges to international cooperation in countering drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking, and recognizing also the need for increased cooperation among States and the exchange of information, including with reference to national experiences, on how to counter the promotion of drug abuse and illicit drug trafficking through this instrument and on ways to use the Internet for information concerning drug demand reduction,

Convinced that civil society, including non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations, play an active role and make an effective contribution to countering the world drug problem, and should be encouraged to continue to do so,

Acknowledging with appreciation the increased efforts and achievements of many States, relevant international organizations and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, in countering drug abuse and illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, and that international cooperation has shown that positive results can be achieved through sustained and collective efforts,

Conventions

In 2001, international efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended in 1972 by a Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] intended to strengthen the role of INCB; the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December 2001, 170 States were parties to the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol. During the year, Albania, Belarus, Belize, the Central African Republic, Iran, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Turkey and Ukraine became parties. The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) succeeded to it, replacing the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

The number of parties to the 1971 Convention stood at 171 as at 31 December 2001. Belize, the Central African Republic, Djibouti and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines became parties during the year. FRY succeeded to the Convention, replacing the Socialist Federal Republic.

At year's end, 162 States were parties to the 1988 Convention. Albania, the Central African Republic, Djibouti and Mauritius became parties in 2001. FRY succeeded to it, replacing the Socialist Federal Republic.

Commission action. At its forty-fourth session in March [E/2001/28/Rev.1], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed implementation of the international drug control treaties. It had before it a January note by the Secretariat on changes in the scope of substance control [E/CN.7/2001/6] and the INCB report covering 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1181]. The Commission took note of the Board's recommendations to Governments to reduce overconsumption of controlled substances and to monitor their supply and consumption. Ensuring the availability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical purposes, on the one hand, and preventing excessive consumption, on the other, were at the core of the Board's mandate. Education of both prescribers and consumers of controlled substances was an important element in achieving a reduction of excessive consumption of psychotropic substances. The Commission welcomed the Board's efforts to promote a balance between the supply of and demand for opiates used for medical and scientific purposes, as required under the 1961 Convention. While recognizing the benefits of modern information technology, it noted that the rapid growth of the Internet posed new challenges to international drug control, in particular the illicit advertisement and sale of controlled substances. With regard to implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention concerning the control of precursors, the Commission noted the continued success of Operation Purple, the international tracking programme for potassium permanganate used in the illicit manufacture of cocaine, and welcomed the actions of the Board to initiate a similar programme, Operation Topaz, for the international tracking of acetic anhydride, used in the manufacture of heroin.

On 20 March [E/2001/28/Rev.1 (dec. 44/1-6)], the Commission decided to include or transfer six narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in various schedules or tables of the 1971 and 1988 Conventions.

The Commission, on 28 March [res. 44/13], recognized the usefulness and importance of benzodiazepines in therapy and believed that the risk-benefit ratio remained favourable, justifying their retention in the therapeutic armoury. It made several recommendations for consideration by health-care professionals when prescribing those drugs, and urged that health professionals receive training and patients receive relevant information on their use. Recommendations were also made to the pharmaceutical industry, national health authorities and others regarding research, appropriate dosage, marketing, withdrawal information, statistics, monitoring of abuse, dependence and control measures.

INCB action. In its report covering 2001 [E/INCB/2001/1], INCB stated that the implementation of the 1988 Convention could not be ensured without adherence to the other international drug control treaties. It welcomed the fact that the number of States that had taken steps to accede to the 1988 Convention and to implement it had increased steadily. The Board reiterated its request to States that had not done so to accede to the Conventions on drug control.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2001/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2001/17 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2000/18 of 27 July 2000 and previous relevant resolutions,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes is central to the international strategy and policy of drug control,

Noting the fundamental need for international cooperation with the traditional supplier countries in drug control to ensure universal application of the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961,

Considering that a balance between consumption and production of opiate raw materials has been achieved as a result of efforts made by the two traditional supplier countries, India and Turkey, together with other producing countries,

Noting the importance of opiates in pain relief therapy as advocated by the World Health Organization,

1. Urges all Governments to continue contributing to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific needs, the achievement of which would be facilitated by maintaining, insofar as their constitutional and legal systems permit, support to the traditional and legal supplier countries, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

2. Urges Governments of all producing countries to adhere strictly to the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and to take effective measures to prevent illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials to illicit channels, especially when increasing licit production;

3. Urges consumer countries to assess their licit needs for opiate raw materials realistically and to communicate those needs to the International Narcotics Control Board, in order to ensure easy supply, and also urges the producing countries concerned and the Board to increase efforts to monitor the available supply and to ensure sufficient stocks of licit opiate raw materials;

4. Requests the Board to continue its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions, in full compliance with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961;

5. Commends the Board for its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Council resolutions and, in particular:

(a) In urging the Governments concerned to adjust global production of opiate raw materials to a level corresponding to actual licit needs and to avoid unforeseen imbalances between licit supply of and demand for opiates caused by the exportation of products manufactured from seized and confiscated drugs;

(b) In inviting the Governments concerned to ensure that opiates imported into their countries for medical and scientific use do not originate from countries that transform seized and confiscated drugs into licit opiates;

(c) In arranging informal meetings, during sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the main States importing and producing opiate raw materials;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation.

On the same day [meeting 40], the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2001/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2001/14 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Prevention of diversion of precursors used in the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming that the control of precursor chemicals is a key component in the prevention of diversion of such chemicals to the illicit manufacture of drugs,

Alarmed by the continued spread of the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs, including amphetamine, methamphetamine and Ecstasy-type drugs, and by the health hazards associated with their abuse,

Noting that the global nature of both the problem of synthetic drugs and the trade in chemicals makes cooperation at all levels, with all relevant agencies and with the chemical industry and trade, essential in preventing diversion,

Recognizing that the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 provides the foundation and framework for such cooperation,

Recalling the provisions of the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors and the measures to control precursors adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, in resolutions S-20/4 A and B of 10 June 1998, including the application of the principle "know your customer",

Recognizing that further information is required about the identity of chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs,

Recognizing also that many of the chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs are also used in the licit industry and trade,

Bearing in mind the use of non-controlled and easily substitutable chemicals in the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs,

Recognizing the importance of drug characterization and impurity profiling and of the results of forensic analysis of drugs in obtaining information on trends in, and on the chemicals used for, the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs,

Recognizing also that large quantities of 3,4-methylenedioxycyclohexyl-2-propanone, also known as PMK (piperonyl methyl ketone), a controlled chemical included in table I of the 1988 Convention and an important precursor used in the illicit manufacture of Ecstasy-type drugs, are being seized, and that there is little legitimate trade in that chemical,

1. Recommends that concerned Governments and international and regional organizations make every effort to establish closer contact to facilitate the exchange of information between countries used as a source of key chemicals and those in which synthetic drugs are illicitly manufactured;

2. Urges Governments and international and regional organizations to make every effort to enhance cooperation at all levels, with all relevant agencies and with the chemical industry and trade, to ensure the rapid exchange of information, in particular relating to stopped shipments, suspicious transactions and new chemicals identified as being used in the illicit manufacture of drugs;

3. Also urges Governments to implement operating procedures for chemical control that would give effect, as a minimum, to the measures to control precursors, in particular those relating to pre-export notification, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, in resolution S-20/4 B, and to articles 12 and 18 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, as well as article 13 thereof, relating to the tracking of essential laboratory equipment used in the illicit manufacture of drugs;

4. Recommends that Governments and international and regional organizations collect and exchange the information needed to identify the chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of synthetic drugs and the sources of such chemicals. That information should be supplied to the International Narcotics Control Board and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for analysis, interpretation and dissemination as necessary;

5. Calls upon Governments and international and regional organizations to use the information thus obtained as the basis for future initiatives to prevent the diversion of such chemicals;

6. Urges Governments and regional organizations to make use of the limited international special surveillance list of substances established by the Board, adapted or supplemented, where appropriate, by lists of chemicals subject to voluntary monitoring, to reflect national and regional situations and changing trends in the illicit manufacture of drugs;

7. Calls upon Governments and regional organizations to consider the establishment of early warning systems for suspicious key nationally non-controlled chemicals found to be used in the illicit manufacture of drugs, in order to allow the rapid dissemination of information to the chemical industry and trade and to the appropriate authorities;

8. Urges Governments to develop cooperation programmes, together with the chemical industry and trade, to ensure the regular exchange of information, thus promoting greater awareness of chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of drugs, and to encourage reporting of suspicious transactions;

9. Recommends that Governments and regional organizations consider drawing up guidelines for their chemical industry and trade, setting out indicators of suspicious transactions and allowing for the regular updating of regulations and procedures;

10. Recommends also that Governments consider facilitating, with the technical support of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, if necessary, the development and distribution of analytical methods for drug characterization and impurity profiling, and the development of chemical tracers, as tools for the identification of manufacturing trends and new chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of drugs;

11. Recommends further that interested Governments and international and regional organizations consider the possibility of establishing a network of collaborating laboratories to serve as a source of primary information leading to a better understanding of illicit manufacturing trends, new drugs and the precursors used in illicit manufacture;

12. Recommends that Governments consider, if necessary, ways of improving the enforcement capacity, including the use of controlled delivery, where appropriate, available for investigation of illicit laboratories, stopped shipments and seized chemicals;

13. Recommends also that, in view of the very limited legitimate trade in PMK, all transactions involving that chemical be regarded with concern and that end-users be thoroughly verified before shipments are allowed to proceed in accordance with national legislation and procedures.

International Narcotics Control Board

The 13-member International Narcotics Control Board held its seventieth (5-9 February), seventy-first (21 May-1 June) and seventy-second (29 October-15 November) sessions, all in Vienna.

In performing the functions assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board maintained ongoing discussions with Governments. The information provided by them was used to evaluate whether Governments had enforced treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. The Board, which was required by the international drug control treaties to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noted weaknesses in treaty compliance and made recommendations for improvements in national control through such means as strengthening legislation and enforcement.

In its 2001 report [Sales No. E.02.XI.1], the Board examined the challenges that globalization and the misuse of new technologies, such as the Internet, posed to drug law enforcement. According to the Board, Internet-based crime was easy to commit as it required few resources and was difficult to fight in a "virtual" environment, where national boundaries were irrelevant and personal risk to the criminals and likelihood of detection were low. The Board examined the impact that globalization and new technology had on drug-related crime, in particular organized crime and money-laundering, and on government structures and capabilities for combating such crime. Drug trafficking groups utilized new technologies to improve the efficiency of product delivery and distribution and to protect themselves from identification and prosecution. The Board analysed how the structural, legal, technical and resource challenges were being addressed in various countries, and urged that law enforcement agencies be given the technical and legislative means to develop an appropriate response capacity; at the same time, it acknowledged that concerns raised by civil liberty groups over the invasion of privacy and the potential to limit freedom of expression were genuine.

Among its recommendations, the Board called on Governments to ensure that appropriate laws were introduced and appropriate funding, resources and infrastructure provided to law enforcement agencies; to introduce specialized inter-agency high-tech drug units, provided with infrastructure to protect their information and intelligence databases from "cyber attack"; to proceed towards ratification of the 2001 Convention on Cybercrime; and to consider the development of a UN convention against cybercrime.

The Board analysed the operation of the international drug control system and the major developments in drug abuse and trafficking worldwide. The international and domestic movement of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances was continuously monitored in order to identify any deficiencies in control mechanisms, particularly those that could facilitate the diversion of such drugs from licit to illicit channels. As in recent years, no cases involving the diversion of narcotic drugs from licit international trade into the illicit traffic were detected during 2001; however, several Governments reported domestic diversion and abuse. The Board invited Governments to monitor and prevent the diversion and abuse of narcotic drugs and to provide law enforcement authorities with adequate information, training and technical means to increase their capacity to detect such products. With controls on international trade in psychotropic substances having been strengthened, diversion of pharmaceutical products containing those substances from domestic distribution channels had become an increasingly important supply source for drug traffickers. The most frequently diverted pharmaceuticals from domestic distribution channels included stimulants, benzodiazepines, phenobarbital and buprenorphine. The Board reiterated its request to Governments to amend their national legislation to allow for the prosecution of the drug traffickers involved. It also recommended that Governments ensure that seized psychotropic substances were either destroyed or protected against diversion attempts.

With regard to chemicals used as precursors in the manufacture of illegal drugs, the Board called on Governments to investigate interceptions of smuggled consignments and seizures at illicit laboratories in order to identify the sources and determine the methods of diversion used by traffickers. Operation Purple, the voluntary international initiative to track individual shipments of potassium permanganate in international trade, continued to achieve success in preventing diversions into illicit traffic. The Board continued to verify the legitimacy of shipments of potassium permanganate to countries not participating in the Operation and noticed an increase in shipments, particularly to Asian countries. Operation Topaz, a comparable initiative for acetic anhydride, was launched in March and, as with Operation Purple, the Board, through its secretariat, served as the international focal point for the exchange of information. The Operation recorded successes through law enforcement activities to intercept smuggled acetic anhydride, with large seizures being reported and new smuggling routes identified. In view of the increasing concern over the diversion of precursors used in the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants, various initiatives resulted in proposals for preventive action, which formed the basis of Economic and Social Council resolution 2001/14 (see p. 1150). In June, the Board organized a round table in Beijing for competent authorities investigating the diversion and smuggling of precursors for methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA), commonly known as Ecstasy.

While the Board welcomed sound scientific research into the possible therapeutic properties and medical uses of cannabis, it reminded the countries of the requirements set by the 1961 Convention to reduce the risk of its diversion and abuse. The Board invited Governments and relevant international bodies, in particular the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the World Health Organization (WHO), to take note of new cannabis policies in a number of countries and to agree on ways to address that development within the framework of international law. The Board also requested Governments to ensure the prevention of trade in opium poppy seeds. It asked countries that did not yet control the import and export of psychotropic substances to introduce systems of import and export authorizations.

As to the supply of and demand for opiates used for medical and scientific purposes, the Board noted that since 1998, when commercial cultivation of the thebaine-rich variety of opium poppy began in Australia, the total area under such cultivation had been on the rise. The trend continued towards a larger proportion of the extraction of alkaloids from concentrate of poppy straw than from opium, mainly as the result of the increasing use of thebaine-rich poppy straw to respond to the growing demand for oxycodone for treating pain and for buprenorphine, used as an analgesic and in heroin substitution treatment. So far, however, the Board had not included any quantities related to thebaine in its analysis of the supply of and demand for opiates. Among its recommendations on methodologies for determining the supply of and demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes, the Board proposed that additional opiates, such as thebaine, oxycodone, buprenorphine and hydrocodone, be included in calculations of supply and demand.

The Board requested Governments to monitor the consumption of stimulants used as anorectics in order to avoid their overprescription and to ensure adequate control of domestic distribution channels to avoid diversion to illicit markets. It reminded Governments of their commitment to give high priority to measures against the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants.

By decision 2001/242 of 24 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the INCB report for 2000 [Sales No. E.01.XI.1].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2001/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2001/15 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

International cooperation for the control of narcotic drugs

*The Economic and Social Council,
Concerned with the health and welfare of human-kind,*

Recognizing that the medical use of narcotic drugs continues to be indispensable for the relief of pain and suffering and that adequate provision must be made to ensure the availability of narcotic drugs for such purposes,

Deeply concerned by the magnitude of and rising trend in the illicit production of, demand for and trafficking in opiates,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes is central to the international strategy and policy of drug control,

Recognizing that the control of narcotic drugs is the collective responsibility of all States and that, to that end, coordinated action within the framework of international cooperation is necessary,

Taking into account the social and cultural aspects of poppy cultivation in the traditional supplier countries, India and Turkey, and the dependence of large segments of populations in rural areas of those countries on the licit production of opium poppy for a living,

Acknowledging the sacrifices and costly efforts made by the traditional supplier countries in order to ensure secure methods of poppy cultivation and to prevent diversion from licit to illicit channels,

Reaffirming the guiding principles of existing treaties in the field of narcotic drugs, in particular the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and the system of control that they embody,

Having considered the Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1999, in which the Board points to the overproduction of opiates,

1. Calls upon all Governments to support the traditional supplier countries in a spirit of international cooperation and solidarity in drug control;

2. Undertakes that international trade in narcotic drugs, without distinction as to source or kind, is subject to the control provided for in the related international conventions, the implementation of which is essential in order to counter the world drug problem;

3. Reconfirms that the new variety of Papaver somniferum (opium poppy) with a high thebaine content comes under the international control regime established by the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and must be controlled in the same way as other varieties of Papaver somniferum containing other alkaloids;

4. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board to monitor the cultivation of this new variety of Papaver somniferum, the production of thebaine from it and the international trade in thebaine accordingly;

5. Commends the Government of the United States of America for the 80/20 rule applied in its import of narcotic raw materials, which has contributed greatly to global efforts to maintain a lasting balance between the supply of and demand for opiates.

World drug situation

In its 2001 report [Sales No. E.02.XI.1], INCB provided a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts, so that Governments would be kept aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties.

Africa

Illicit cultivation and abuse of and trafficking in cannabis continued in several countries throughout Africa. Despite increased seizures and continued eradication efforts, cannabis remained the main drug of abuse. Cannabis cultivated within the region was also smuggled into Europe and North America. The main African source countries for cannabis smuggled into Europe continued to be Morocco (which accounted for 69 to 70 per cent of the cannabis seized in Europe) and South Africa and, to a lesser degree, Ghana, Nigeria and Senegal. According to Interpol, 22 per cent of the cannabis herb seizures worldwide in 2001 were effected in Africa.

The abuse of psychotropic substances continued to be a major problem in many countries in Africa, particularly in major cities in Southern, Eastern and Western Africa. Self-medication, the sale of licit drugs through unregulated channels (street hawkers, drug vendors, unauthorized retailers) and the sale of psychotropic substances without prescription were believed to have contributed to that development. While the abuse of amphetamine, benzodiazepine, ephedrine and pemoline was more pronounced in Western Africa, methaqualone continued to be abused mainly in Southern and Eastern Africa, in particular in South Africa. The abuse of Ecstasy was also on the rise in South Africa.

Opiate abuse remained relatively limited in the region, although it was rising in cities along the Indian Ocean. Cocaine continued to be mainly abused in cities and tourist centres in Southern and Western Africa, particularly in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, Lesotho, South Africa and Swaziland, which were the major transit points for cocaine from South America into Europe.

Africa continued to be a major transit area for heroin trafficking. Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana and Nigeria were used as major transit points for smuggling and packaging heroin from South-East Asia and South-West Asia, which was then smuggled into Europe and North America. While heroin abuse continued to be relatively low in most countries in Africa, South Africa saw an increase of 40 per cent in the number of intravenous heroin abusers over the preceding three years, a development that raised concerns about the increased spread of HIV/AIDS there.

Regional cooperation in drug control improved in 2001. The Organization of African Unity (OAU) strengthened its focal point for drugs for more sustained cooperation with African Governments and enhanced its drug control cooperation and coordination with African sub-regional organizations. In January, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Kenya, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania signed a protocol on combating illicit drug trafficking in the East African Community. Those countries, together with Rwanda, strengthened their cooperation in drug control through biennial meetings of heads of departments of investigation and drug control units.

The Board noted with appreciation the progress made in the judicial system through training in drug-related cases in Southern and Eastern Africa. By October, a total of 92 investigators and prosecutors, 50 magistrates and 38 judges had completed training courses in South Africa and Zimbabwe. The Centre for Judicial Training was established in Maputo, Mozambique, in April to provide training for public prosecutors, drug law enforcement officials and judicial officials.

Many countries in Africa worked to update existing drug control laws and to prepare legislation to combat money-laundering, including the Central African Republic, Egypt, Mauritius, Morocco, Mozambique, Swaziland and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Board noted with concern that the Financial Action Task Force on Money-Laundering had included Egypt and Nigeria in the list of non-cooperative countries and urged them to expedite the drafting of relevant legislation. Kenya, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Nigeria, Rwanda, Seychelles, South Africa, Togo and the United Republic of Tanzania adopted or worked on finalizing national strategies and plans of action on drug control. The Board noted with concern that resources were not always made available to implement plans made by some African countries.

In April, the Board sent a mission to Eritrea. Recognizing that accession to the three international drug control treaties might have been difficult for Eritrea in the early years following its independence, the Board urged the Government to accede to the treaties as peace returned to the country. Another mission was sent to Egypt in May, and the Board invited the Government to share with others its approaches to dealing with the drug problem and its experience in implementing the international drug control treaties. The Board expressed appreciation for Egypt's commitment to international drug control. It also visited Morocco in June to discuss the problems of national and international drug control, particularly cannabis cultivation and illicit trafficking. The Board urged the Government to elaborate a concrete plan for the eradication of cannabis cultivation.

In May, the Board reviewed the progress made by Gabon on recommendations by the Board pursuant to its 1998 mission to that country [YUN 1998, p. 1153]. It was pleased that, after nearly 10 years, Gabon had resumed submitting data related to the licit trade in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean

Cannabis, the only drug crop cultivated in the Caribbean, remained an important source of income in Jamaica and other islands in the sub-region. All countries in Central America reported some cannabis cultivation.

While cannabis trafficking and cocaine transit trafficking were predominant in the subregion, there was also evidence of the smuggling of synthetic drugs from Europe and heroin from South America, through Central America and the Caribbean, into the United States. It was estimated that nearly half of the cocaine that arrived in the United States each year (375 tons) came through Central America and the Mexican land corridor. Drug traffickers took advantage of the unstable political situation in Haiti by routing drugs through that country and the Dominican Republic to the United States. Reporting by countries of the subregion on illicit activities regarding psychotropic substances remained limited, but trafficking in such substances was increasing. Traffickers smuggling cocaine into Europe returned with Ecstasy, most of which was then smuggled into the United States. Amphetamines, Ecstasy and lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) were seized in the Bahamas, the Cayman Islands, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic and the Netherlands Antilles.

The smuggling of drugs, mostly cocaine hydrochloride, coca paste (basuco) and "crack", by land continued unabated. Ports on the Caribbean Sea and on the Pacific Ocean were increasingly used for the trans-shipment of illicit drugs. Costa Rica and Panama were important transit points for shipment, on a small scale, of illicit drug consignments by air to Europe.

There was a noticeable increase in firearms trafficking along drug trafficking routes, together with an increase in other criminal activities associated with the illicit drug trade, such as trafficking in persons and motor vehicle theft.

In March, the Board sent a mission to the Dominican Republic. It noted the recent success achieved in prosecuting money-laundering activities in that country and urged the Government to strengthen its prosecution capability. It also urged the Government formally to adopt the five-year national master plan against drugs, prepared some years earlier, including the modifications necessary to meet its criteria. Also in March, the Board sent a mission to Jamaica, where it noted the efforts made by law enforcement authorities to manually eradicate cannabis, the most widely available drug in the country. It expressed concern over the high cannabis-related crime rate, the smuggling of substantial quantities of cannabis out of the country, mainly into the United States, the increase in the smuggling of cocaine from South America through Jamaica into North America and the related flow of smuggled firearms in the opposite direction.

The Board, in May, reviewed action taken by Belize pursuant to its recommendations after a mission to that country in April 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1154]. It noted the steps taken towards monitoring psychotropic substances, and urged Belize to become party to the 1961 and 1971 Conventions.

At the regional level, the Caribbean Drug Control Coordination Mechanism continued to monitor progress in implementing measures of the 1996 Plan of Action on Drug Control Coordination in the Caribbean. Improved communications technology and the use of electronic transfer of funds by drug traffickers made control efforts more challenging.

North America

In Canada and the United States, the use of cannabis, the most common drug of abuse in North America, remained stable though it was increasingly used in combination with stimulants. Cocaine abuse appeared to be stabilizing, even declining, in many parts of Canada and the United States. The abuse of "crack" continued to diminish as the addict population aged. After a period of stabilization, there seemed to be an increase in heroin abuse among young people in Canada and the United States, possibly due to lower prices and an increase in the level of purity, which made it easier to snort or smoke rather than inject the substance. In British Columbia, Canada, injection of heroin had led to high rates of overdose and HIV/AIDS and hepatitis C infection. In Mexico, data showed that the abuse of cannabis, cocaine and heroin increased, though it remained lower than the level of use in Canada and the United States. The level of drug abuse in Mexico was highest in the districts closest to the border with the United States. The availability and abuse of Ecstasy continued to spread beyond nightclub scenes into other settings, such as the military. In the United States, the abuse of benzodiazepines and other prescription drugs to alleviate Ecstasy's stimulant effects was noted among adolescents. There was also widespread abuse of the "club drugs"—ketamine, gamma-hydroxybutyric acid (GHB), gamma-butyrolactone (GBL) and methamphetamine. In Canada and the United States, the abuse of benzodiazepines continued to be common and the abuse of licit opiates, including hydrocodone, hydromorphone and, above all, oxycodone, also increased.

Mexico continued to be a major gateway for cocaine consignments from Colombia destined for Canada and the United States, and Mexican authorities had seized large consignments of cannabis that were in transit. On the west coast of Canada, much of the illicit heroin was smuggled into the country from South-East Asia. Criminal groups involved in those operations and in cocaine trafficking had become more organized. As law enforcement pressure increased in Mexico and the Caribbean, more cocaine was smuggled from South America into Canada and the United States via the eastern Pacific route, in containers and aboard "go-fast" boats and fishing vessels.

In July, Canada passed a regulation allowing individuals to access cannabis for medical purposes. The Board shared the concerns expressed by the Canadian Medical Association on the burden placed on physicians to approve the use of cannabis in the absence of conclusive research into its safety for medical use.

Mexico and the United States continued to cooperate in drug control policy. The Attorney-General of each of those countries and the National Security Adviser of Mexico led a working group on legal affairs and drug control cooperation. Mexico and the United States signed a memorandum of understanding allowing each Government an equal share of seized drug assets, to be used in the fight against drug trafficking. The law enforcement authorities of Canada and the United States cooperated in intelligence-sharing and conducted joint investigations and operations, which yielded positive results.

The Board expressed concern over legal loopholes in the United States that made it possible for public advertising of prescription drugs; in particular, methylphenidate, widely used for the treatment of attention deficit disorder, was being diverted for abuse by schoolchildren.

South America

Coca bush continued to be cultivated exclusively in South America. The overall levels of coca leaf production remained stable despite fluctuations in individual countries, and the abuse of cocaine increased, particularly in transit countries such as Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador and Venezuela. Bolivia and Peru were the only countries in the region in which the abuse of cocaine appeared to have decreased. Opium poppy cultivation and heroin production increased in some countries in the Andean sub-region. Heroin abuse was low compared with other drugs and other regions, although it increased in Argentina, Colombia and Ecuador. Cannabis cultivation continued to be widespread in South America, mainly for local consumption.

In Colombia, increased interdiction efforts included aerial fumigation to eradicate coca bush and opium poppy where access by land was difficult. By midyear, 50,000 hectares had been sprayed. However, eradication efforts were offset by increased cultivation in other areas of Peru and Colombia.

Almost all countries in South America were used by traffickers as transit points for transporting illicit drug consignments destined for the region, Europe and North America. The precursors smuggled into South America were transported mainly to Colombia, where most drug-processing laboratories were located. Authorities, mainly in Colombia, continued to seize significant amounts of cocaine. Heroin seizures increased significantly in Colombia, and in June 67 kilograms of heroin were seized, the largest single heroin seizure ever made in the country. Colombian drug traffickers diversified their operations, as evidenced by the increased seizures of substances such as Ecstasy. South American cocaine was smuggled into Europe, where it was exchanged for Ecstasy that was then smuggled back into South America.

In March, the Board sent a mission to Venezuela, where it noted the active role played by the Venezuelan authorities in cooperating in drug control with their counterparts in other countries in South America and other regions.

In June, the Board sent a mission to Bolivia, where the production and chewing of coca leaf continued. Illicit production of coca leaf was currently taking place only to a limited extent, as the illicit manufacture of cocaine in Bolivia and in other countries with coca leaf of Bolivian origin had been reduced significantly. Controls over precursor chemicals had been implemented, but controls over narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances were insufficient.

The Board also sent a mission to Chile in June and noted with satisfaction that national policies concerning drug abuse and illicit trafficking provided for a balanced system of measures for the reduction of illicit drug demand and supply. Chile was an important manufacturer and importer of precursor chemicals, some of which were diverted for the illicit manufacture of cocaine, mainly in neighbouring countries. The Board welcomed a new law that dealt more effectively with offences related to precursors.

In May, the Board reviewed action taken by Argentina to implement its recommendations after the mission to that country in September 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1157]; it expressed satisfaction that most recommendations had been implemented.

Asia

East and South-East Asia

A number of countries in East and South-East Asia, including Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Japan and Thailand, reported that the abuse of opiates such as raw opium, codeine and heroin had declined while the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants had increased. In some countries, illicit manufacture of, trafficking in and abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants had become matters of greater concern than illicit activities relating to opiates. Amphetamine-type substances were the most popular drugs abused in several countries, particularly Japan, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and Thailand. The spread of HIV infection was closely linked to drug abuse by injection. The Board expressed concern that Ecstasy, which was virtually unknown in the region a decade earlier, continued to gain popularity among youth.

Eradication efforts by Myanmar and alternative development activities resulted in a decrease in illicit opium poppy cultivation by one third from 1996 to 2000; however, there were indications that such cultivation had increased again in 2001. Myanmar accounted for most of the world's illicit opium poppy cultivation in 2001. In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the total area under illicit opium poppy cultivation declined. Opium poppy cultivation in Thailand remained at negligible levels. In Viet Nam, illicit opium poppy cultivation had been significantly reduced in the preceding decade.

Cannabis was illicitly cultivated mainly in Cambodia, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the Philippines and Thailand. In Indonesia, a marked increase in the illicit cultivation and trafficking in cannabis was reported. Since 1996, significant quantities of Cambodian cannabis had been seized in Australia, Europe and the United States. The level of cannabis abuse was low in most countries in East and South-East Asia.

Regionally, countries continued their multilateral drug control cooperation through the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN), the 1993 memorandum of understanding on drug control between the countries in the Mekong area (Cambodia, China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand and Viet Nam) and UNDCP. East Asian countries, including Japan and the Republic of Korea, participated in drug control efforts throughout the region. In July, Cambodia and Thailand signed a memorandum of understanding and made arrangements for increased bilateral cooperation against a number of illicit activities, including drug trafficking.

The Board took note of the measures adopted by the Republic of Korea to strengthen its ability to deal with money-laundering by establishing a financial intelligence unit. The Board also noted adoption of a bill against money-laundering in the Philippines. Mongolia undertook a rapid situation assessment to ascertain the extent of problems related to drug injection and HIV prevalence. In Thailand, schools were instructed to set up drug control committees in order to curb the abuse of drugs and other illegal acts by youth.

In April, the Board sent a mission to Thailand. It expressed concern over the abuse of certain psychotropic substances, including phentermine and diazepam, and requested the Thai authorities to give further attention to controls over those substances, especially stimulants. It also noted the Government's efforts to establish programmes to strengthen prevention in communities and schools and to develop strategies to address addiction to amphetamine-type stimulants.

The Board sent a mission to Myanmar in September and, following a review of the progress on its recommendations following a 1998 mission to that country [YUN 1998, p. 1158], found that continuous implementation efforts were being made. It noted that Myanmar was committed to the eradication of illicit opium poppy cultivation, but that limited resources and the low level of external assistance had negatively impacted Myanmar's ability to achieve goals set out in its eradication programme and to consolidate gains.

The Board noted the ministerial meeting on drug control cooperation between China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand held in Beijing on 28 August.

South Asia

The region's drug trafficking and abuse problems were largely related to transit traffic, as South Asia was situated between the world's two main opiate-producing areas. Illicit opium poppy cultivation and heroin manufacture had increased over several years and illicit cannabis cultivation and abuse continued unabated. There was an increase in polydrug abuse involving, in addition to illicitly manufactured drugs, a range of pharmaceutical products containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

Cannabis was the most widely abused drug in South Asia. In all countries in the region, except Bhutan and Maldives, there were reports of cannabis growing wild or being illicitly cultivated. Cocaine abuse remained very limited, though seizures of the drug increased, particularly in India. The incidence of heroin injection increased particularly in Bangladesh, India and Nepal, while in Maldives and Sri Lanka smoking and inhalation continued to be the most common methods of heroin abuse. In almost all South Asian countries, there was an increase in the abuse of prescription drugs that were either diverted from domestic distribution channels or smuggled out of neighbouring countries. Psychotropic substances were also abused in Bangladesh, India, Maldives, Nepal and Sri Lanka to varying degrees.

In Bangladesh, opium poppy was illicitly cultivated in the remote areas of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, where the movement of security forces was restricted. In India, cultivation and abuse posed problems in eastern Arunachal Pradesh, where plans for alternative development and income substitution projects were under way. India, a main licit producer of opium, designed an elaborate system to prevent the diversion of licitly produced opium into illicit channels, which involved control of licensing, demanding minimum qualifying yields, a government monopoly on purchasing and meeting strict monitoring requirements. Most of the heroin smuggled out of South-West Asia into South Asia was destined for countries in Western Europe and the United States.

India was an important producer of precursor chemicals, such as acetic anhydride, ephedrine, pseudoephedrine, anthranilic acid and N-acetyl-anthranilic acid. The diversion of precursor chemicals into Central Asia and Afghanistan dropped significantly as a result of India's strict controls and cooperation among manufacturing companies. In Nepal, an interdepartmental co-ordination committee on precursor control was established and regulatory measures and controls were introduced for all substances.

India was an important manufacturer and trader of pharmaceuticals, including a number of widely used psychotropic substances. Despite a control system for international trade in psychotropic substances and measures to control domestic distribution, problems were encountered in monitoring compliance. The growing abuse of psychotropic substances was one of the reasons for the increase in polydrug abuse in combination with other pharmaceuticals (opiates and non-opiates), illicit drugs and alcohol. In Nepal, many abusers of opiates reverted to the abuse of pharmaceutical products containing nitrazepam, diazepam and buprenorphine due to their easy availability and low prices. Benzodiazepines were abused in Maldives, mostly in combination with cannabis or heroin. In Bangladesh, the abuse of tranquillizers such as benzodiazepines was widespread and the availability of illicit buprenorphine caused an increase in the abuse by injection.

Among regional efforts in drug control, the Board noted the relaunching of the precursor control project for member States of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation, including a regional workshop on precursor control, held in Kathmandu, Nepal, at the beginning of 2001. A number of bilateral agreements were signed. For example, Bangladesh and Myanmar signed an agreement to combat illicit trafficking in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors; and India and Tajikistan signed an agreement on the reduction of illicit drug demand and the prevention of trafficking in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors.

In April, the Board visited India and welcomed additional efforts to strengthen measures at the Neemuch Opium and Alkaloid Factory, in line with earlier Board recommendations. The Board remained concerned about leakages from licit opium production, noting that there was still no adequate system for collecting information and that coordination among government agencies responsible for reporting was insufficient.

West and Central Asia

Developments in Afghanistan affected the drug abuse situation in West Asia. As a result of the prolonged drought and the ban on opium poppy cultivation issued in July 2000 by the Taliban, such cultivation was significantly reduced in the areas under Taliban control; however, illicit cultivation increased in other parts of Afghanistan and it appeared that the flow of illicit drugs in Central Asian countries, in particular heroin, from Afghanistan increased in 2001, marking a continuation of the trend in 2000. As in recent years, while a significant portion of the opiates produced in West Asia was destined for illicit markets in Europe and, to a lesser degree, Africa, East Asia and South Asia, a considerable amount remained in West Asia. Opiates originating in Afghanistan continued to be smuggled into and through Iran and Pakistan, where opiate addiction rates continued to be among the highest in the world. The smuggling of opiates in West Asia had become more organized, profitable and violent, and was jeopardizing the economic and social stability of some countries.

Most countries in West Asia were used as transit points for smuggling opiates into Europe and other regions. Precursors and chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of heroin continued to flow from outside the region into countries in West Asia where such manufacture was taking place. Seizure statistics for regional countries showed that opium had been increasingly processed into other opiates in Afghanistan.

The harvest in the crop year 2000/01 in Afghanistan was estimated to be less than one tenth of that in the previous crop year. As a result, opium and morphine were much less available on illicit markets in West Asia; however, in response to post-11 September developments (see p. 259), large quantities of opiates were made available from illicit stocks. The availability of heroin originating in Afghanistan remained high in the region. In Pakistan, only isolated cases involving illicit opium poppy cultivation were identified, and in Turkey, poppy straw from licit cultivation was used for the extraction of alkaloids. No diversion of opiates into illicit markets was reported.

Cannabis remained the most widely abused substance in West Asia. Huge quantities continued to be illicitly cultivated or grew wild in Afghanistan and, to a lesser degree, in Pakistan and Kazakhstan. Cannabis resin was smuggled into other countries in West Asia and Europe. The total amount of cannabis seized in West Asia increased during 2000 and the first half of 2001. In Lebanon, cannabis cultivation, which had been eradicated in the early 1990s, was resumed in 2001.

Data on the extent of drug abuse in Central Asia were limited; however, indications of an increase in drug abusers were reported. The most serious trend was the rapid increase in abuse by injection, which contributed to the spread of HIV infection.

Stimulants continued to be smuggled and abused in West Asia, mainly in the eastern Mediterranean area and on the Arabian peninsula. The abuse of benzodiazepines was widespread, indicating that controls over the licit distribution of such products were weak. In Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan, benzodiazepines were often abused in conjunction with opium and heroin and they were added to heroin as adulterants. The abuse of LSD continued to be reported in Israel.

All of the countries in Central Asia, except Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, had adopted comprehensive national drug control strategies. Initiatives included measures by Kyrgyzstan to prevent drug addiction and halt drug traffickers; the establishment by Iran of an institute to monitor illicit drug demand; the setting-up by Turkmenistan of specialized clinics to treat addicts; Lebanon's adoption of a law on the control of narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursors; and Bahrain's adoption of a law to combat money-laundering. Legislation on precursors was enacted in all Central Asian countries except Turkmenistan, where such legislation was before parliament.

The Board noted the cooperation that took place within the framework of the memorandum of understanding on drug control cooperation in Central Asia, involving Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, as well as UNDCP and the Aga Khan Development Network. It also noted that the European Union had adopted a Central Asian action plan on drugs, which aimed at, among other things, providing assistance in drug law enforcement and gathering drug-related information.

In March, the Board sent a mission to Jordan. It noted with satisfaction that the activities outlined in the 1999-2001 national plan for combating drugs and psychotropic substances were beginning to be implemented and encouraged Jordan to join efforts with neighbouring countries in strengthening the interdiction capacity of national institutions in order to improve border surveillance.

The Board sent a mission to Pakistan in April and noted with appreciation Pakistan's commitment to eradicate illicit opium poppy cultivation, which resulted in the effective clearance of opium-harvesting areas in the Dir district. Concern was expressed that control of licit activities related to narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances was inadequate in Pakistan.

The Board visited the Syrian Arab Republic in June and encouraged the Government to establish an information network to address trafficking in synthetic drugs, large amounts of which were seized annually in the country. The Board welcomed the Government's approval of a bank secrecy law and its efforts to develop mechanisms to prevent use of the financial system for money-laundering.

Europe

Europe remained a major source of illicitly manufactured synthetic drugs, abused widely by young people both within and outside the region. Western Europe remained the source of most of the Ecstasy seized throughout the world. The continent remained the second largest market for cocaine in the world, after North America. In Central and Eastern Europe, a noticeable increase in the illicit manufacture and abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants was reported. Most countries in Central and Eastern Europe, having been used for a long time as transit countries, were facing serious problems of heroin abuse.

Cannabis continued to be the most commonly abused drug in the region and much of it was grown there. Albania continued to be a major source for cannabis herb despite eradication efforts and large seizures by authorities. Indoor cannabis cultivation also continued, facilitated by unrestricted sale of cannabis seeds and growing accessories on the Internet and availability in shops in some countries. The availability of opiates originating in South-West Asia increased as well.

Illicit opium poppy cultivation was discovered for the first time in Albania and small-scale cultivation was reported in several other countries in Central and Eastern Europe. There was an increased flow of Afghan heroin into the Russian Federation. HIV infection and hepatitis C infection were spreading among injecting drug users in many countries in Central and Eastern Europe.

Most of the cocaine in Europe was smuggled through transit countries in South America or the Caribbean, with Spain continuing to be the most significant entry point, followed by the Netherlands and Portugal. Drug trafficking organizations also used countries in Central and Eastern Europe for transporting consignments of cocaine to Western Europe.

Trafficking in stimulants between Asia and Europe was conducted in both directions. In August, Switzerland's national law enforcement agency discovered and dismantled a major methamphetamine trafficking ring, the first of its kind in Europe, which had been smuggling the substance from South-East Asia into Europe. Illicit methamphetamine manufacture continued in the Czech Republic, despite action by the regulatory and law enforcement authorities. A clandestine laboratory manufacturing methamphetamine was also discovered in Bulgaria and the abuse of the substance had become more common, particularly among women and young people. In countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), there was continued concern over the large-scale abuse of home-made ephedrone (a combination of ephedrine and plants of the genus Ephedra).

The Board noted action by a number of countries to reduce drug abuse, in particular Germany's increased control of drugs used in maintenance programmes, Slovakia's legislation on precursor control, and action by Poland and the Russian Federation against money-laundering. The Board welcomed government activities against organized crime and anti-corruption measures in several countries in Central and Eastern Europe.

The Board sent missions to Croatia, Finland, the Holy See, the Netherlands, Norway, Ukraine and Yugoslavia. It encouraged Croatian authorities to establish close cooperation with their counterparts in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Yugoslavia in order to develop a comprehensive regional approach to countering the increasing use of the Balkan route for trafficking in illicit drugs. The Board commended Finland for its comprehensive policy for drug control and a balance between law enforcement, prevention and treatment. In the Holy See, it expressed appreciation for the activities of the Roman Catholic Church in the area of drug demand reduction. The Board was concerned that seeds of cannabis varieties with a high tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) content from the Netherlands continued to be advertised via the Web and that authorities in the country appeared to have no legal instruments to deal with that problem. It was also concerned that the country remained the source of a significant proportion of the world's illicitly manufactured Ecstasy, despite efforts by law enforcement agencies. Norway was congratulated for its implementation of the international drug control conventions, Ukraine was urged to prevent the diversion of poppy straw from licensed farms cultivating poppy for culinary purposes, and Yugoslavia was encouraged to develop a drug control master plan, covering the trafficking and manufacturing of substances under international control.

Oceania

Hydroponically grown cannabis was the most popular form of cannabis abused in Australia, where that type of cannabis cultivation continued to increase and outdoor cultivation decreased. Significant cannabis cultivation also continued in Papua New Guinea for local consumption and for smuggling into other countries, mainly Australia, often in exchange for small arms. Reports were received of cannabis growing wild, being cultivated or seized in a number of smaller Pacific island States, such as Fiji and Tonga.

The availability of and demand for cocaine remained limited in all countries in Oceania except Australia. Seizure data indicated that for the preceding two to three years, New Zealand and many of the smaller Pacific island countries in Oceania were increasingly used as trans-shipment points for smuggling illicit drugs into Australia. Fiji and Vanuatu were used as transit points for large consignments of heroin originating in South-East Asia and destined for Australia, the main heroin abuse area in Oceania. Other countries in the region did not appear to have a significant heroin or cocaine abuse problem. Drug traffickers continued to move cocaine from South America to Australia through the Pacific islands. The quantity of cocaine seized at the border of Australia in 2001 was more than twice the figure for the preceding year.

An increased number of clandestine laboratories manufacturing amphetamine-type stimulants was detected in Australia, where police established chemical diversion units to monitor suspicious purchases of the precursor chemicals. Abusers in Australia increasingly injected methamphetamine with a high purity level, and in New Zealand it was reported that the illicit manufacture of methamphetamine was on the increase. Increased seizures and abuse of Ecstasy were reported in countries throughout Oceania.

In March, Australia launched the National Illicit Drugs Campaign aimed at motivating parents of teenagers to talk with their children about drugs. The Board noted that the Government had developed an international drug strategy to complement its National Drug Strategic Framework.

Regional organizations, including the Pacific Islands Forum and the Asia/Pacific Group on Money-Laundering, as well as the United Nations and the Commonwealth Secretariat, continued to coordinate action to implement the international drug control treaties.

UN action to combat drug abuse

UN International Drug Control Programme

The United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 721] to promote the application of international drug control treaties and the development of drug control strategies, was a catalyst in stimulating action at the national, regional and international levels. The Executive Director described UNDCP's 2001 activities in a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/CN.7/2002/8 & Corr.1]. Through technical cooperation programmes supported by field offices in key regions and countries, it promoted subregional cooperation and furthered bilateral cooperation. In mounting a global response to the drug problem, UNDCP mobilized specialized agencies and other UN entities, international financial institutions, intergovernmental organizations and civil society, particularly non-governmental organizations (NGOs). In addition, UNDCP supported States in their efforts to comply with the international drug control treaties; supported their initiatives to meet the objectives agreed upon at the twentieth special session of the General Assembly [YUN 1998, p. 1135]; assisted in the prosecution of serious drug trafficking offences, including money-laundering; and provided support in improving judicial cooperation against drug-related offences, including by providing training to members of the judiciary, law enforcement personnel, prosecutors and personnel working in demand reduction. UNDCP continued to provide technical assistance for the development of crop-monitoring systems in countries affected by illicit crop cultivation, and, by the end of 2001, the activities covered all the main opium- and coca-producing countries, namely Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Peru.

UNDCP served as the substantive secretariat of INCB and, in close cooperation with the Board and Governments, it monitored the international drug control system and the flow of precursors. It provided legal advisory services, electronic support and laboratory services to the Board and implemented programmes that contributed to the establishment of mechanisms and procedures for precursor control, with emphasis given to law enforcement and operational issues. It also served as the substantive secretariat of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and assisted the Commission in monitoring the implementation of the goals and targets for 2003 and 2008 set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly in resolution S-20/2 [YUN 1998, p. 1136]. In particular, the first consolidated biennial report on the progress achieved by Governments was prepared.

Income to the UNDCP Fund was estimated at $131.2 million for 2000-2001, which was 7.5 per cent less than in 1998-1999. The total estimated expenditure was $117.4 million for programmes, $28.6 million for programme support and $8.9 million for management and administration.

The UNDCP programme on scientific and technical support continued to develop, set and provide scientific and procedural standards in support of international drug control. Training for laboratory staff in the identification and analysis of drugs and precursors was organized at regional training centres in Africa, South-East Asia and Europe. Technical assistance for drug testing was provided to laboratories in Mexico, Pakistan and countries in Central America. Guidelines for testing drugs were prepared and revised. UNDCP continued to distribute field test kits for the rapid detection of drugs and precursors. During the year, 150 laboratories participated in the UNDCP International Collaborative Exercises of the International Quality Assurance Programme. In all regions, training in surveillance and research methods and other basic issues of drug abuse information collection and analysis was undertaken. The Global Assessment Programme on Drug Abuse aimed to disseminate methodological practices and encourage the adoption of harmonized indicators. A second global epidemiology network meeting was convened (Vienna, December) to assess existing data-collection networks and to develop a framework for harmonizing indicators and procedures.

UNDCP continued to work closely with organizations, including the International Monetary Fund, on money-laundering issues. It assisted a number of countries with the development of anti-money-laundering legal frameworks, including revision of legislation in several countries. It cooperated with Interpol and Canada to organize in Ottawa an international seminar on undercover financial investigative techniques; co-sponsored with the Egmont Group of Financial Intelligence Units a workshop for financial intelligence in Vienna; and co-organized in the Russian Federation the International Conference on Illegal Economy and Money-Laundering. UNDCP continued to collaborate with other UN entities on drug control issues and to interact with NGOs and encourage networking among them in order to promote the sharing of experiences in drug demand reduction activities. It organized the fourth interparliamentary conference on drug control (Santa Cruz, Bolivia, February) for officials from more than 25 countries, which focused on reducing illicit crops.

The Global Youth Network for the Prevention of Drug Abuse, initiated by UNDCP, expanded to include 70 groups from more than 40 countries.

Africa

UNDCP continued activities in Africa in demand reduction, suppression of illicit trafficking and drug control policy-making/advocacy involving international advisory functions with either full- or part-time local expertise. Multi-year priority programmes were prepared for Western Africa, Eastern Africa and Nigeria. UNDCP and OAU created the OAU focal unit for drugs, and UNDCP provided support for the establishment of a database on drug control experts and institutions in Africa. Following endorsement by the Economic Community of West African States for creating an Intergovernmental Task Force against Money-Laundering in West Africa, UNDCP supported the establishment of a secretariat in Dakar, Senegal, including establishing a library on money-laundering, setting up terms of reference for training courses and holding an expert meeting on money-laundering in West Africa. UNDCP and the Southern African Development Community (SADC) cooperated in harmonizing legislation at the regional level and conducting assessments and fact-finding events. At the country level, Governments in Southern, Central, Eastern and Western Africa were supported in establishing national drug control coordination bodies and formulating national policies. In North Africa, UNDCP provided expertise and played a catalytic role to effect changes in national drug control policies and programmes, and increased support for drug control activities by Governments, such as setting targets for cannabis elimination in Morocco and integrating licit control and demand reduction in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

UNDCP introduced a new Africa-wide initiative on the development of regional expert networks (LEN) in Eastern Africa and held its first LEN workshop, bringing together 10 demand reduction experts from six countries. It provided LEN members with training and advice on good practice and models. In East Africa, country-level activities in support of prevention and education activities were undertaken in Ethiopia, Madagascar and the United Republic of Tanzania. In Kenya, training was given to more than 2,600 scout leaders in drug abuse awareness and prevention. In West Africa, rapid assessments of the drug abuse situation were conducted in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana and Senegal. UNDCP initiated a joint project to integrate drug abuse prevention into the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) healthy-lifestyle education programme for youth in Cape Verde, the Gambia and Senegal. In Nigeria, prevention activities, to be undertaken by demand reduction experts, were initiated and training provided. In South Africa, work was undertaken to expand community-based treatment centres to the remaining seven centres in other provinces.

Among efforts to suppress illicit drug trafficking, UNDCP supported national policy-making, the adoption of drug control measures and initiatives, the adoption and implementation of money-laundering legislation and training to improve control capacity. It supported the SADC national offices, workshops and assessments on money-laundering and judicial cooperation. Through the programme of legal assistance for 19 Southern and Eastern African countries, more than 180 judges, magistrates, prosecutors and senior investigators were trained in six regional training courses. A network of licit control officials covering all Eastern African countries was established. A new project with the Universal Postal Union was begun, aimed at addressing drug trafficking by post. At the country level, UNDCP provided training and basic detection, search and communications equipment to law enforcement agencies operating at borders and airports. In North Africa, UNDCP organized a two-week-long drugs investigation and surveillance training course in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, for drug enforcement officers from States members of the Gulf Cooperation Council.

Central and Eastern Europe

UNDCP supported Central and Eastern European countries in developing effective drug policies and measures, and in fostering cooperation among them to counter drug trafficking and reduce demand. Best practices in management, administration and operations were emphasized, as well as technical support in, among other things, computerized intelligence analysis, surveillance and computer-based training for law enforcement officers. Representatives of the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Slovakia, Slovenia and UNDCP met in Bratislava, Slovakia, in May to identify new regional activities. UNDCP organized a legal workshop for the Danube Basin and Central European countries in Budapest, Hungary, in June. The Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Drug Control and Activities against Money-Laundering, agreed by Azerbaijan, Georgia, Iran and UNDCP, was adopted in October.

UNDCP and the Pompidou Group of the Council of Europe jointly published materials on developing drug information systems in Central and Eastern Europe. UNDCP supported the initiation of school-based prevention activities in three Baltic States and organized a youth network training course for countries in Central and Eastern Europe in Riga, Latvia. It collaborated with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) on activities to diversify services for drug abusers in Belarus, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation and Ukraine. As part of the UNDCP Global Assessment Programme, activities were initiated to assist in the collection of reliable and internationally comparable drug abuse data and to assess patterns in Belarus, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the Central Asian States.

Among efforts to suppress drug trafficking, UNDCP strengthened cooperation with Interpol and supported drug intelligence units in Bulgaria, Romania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. It also worked with law enforcement authorities in Albania and Bosnia and Herzegovina. In the Russian Federation, an Inter-Agency Drug Control Centre and 15 regional divisions were set up and equipped, and UNDCP supported the strengthening of the capacities of the Russian Federal Border troops at the Tajik-Afghan border. In Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, a modern automated telecommunications data system was established and 600 officers were trained.

South Asia

Efforts in South Asia focused on law enforcement, demand reduction and drug-related HIV/AIDS issues, though funding constraints limited the expansion of UNDCP activities. At the country level, support was provided to develop national strategies, with emphasis on strengthening technical capacity in drug law enforcement and on formulating methodologies for assessing the drug situation, and legal assistance for implementing national legislation. Legal advisory services were provided to the Governments of Bangladesh, Nepal and Sri Lanka for their national drug control strategies, and UNDCP participated in events with civil society to raise awareness of drug issues. In India, the national survey on the extent, patterns and trends in drug abuse was completed and a rapid assessment survey was conducted in 10 cities.

In collaboration with the International Labour Organization (ILO), UNDCP conducted over 50 training courses on community-based prevention and rehabilitation, and drug abuse monitoring. A regional project aimed at reducing drug abuse and drug-related HIV was elaborated for the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation countries in late 2001. Five drop-in centres in Colombo, Sri Lanka, were assisted and staff were provided with the necessary training, in cooperation with WHO. Grants were approved for demand reduction work by NGOs in Bangladesh, India, Nepal and Sri Lanka, with support from Japan.

UNDCP assisted the region with the further development of measures to prevent the diversion of precursor chemicals and organized, in consultation with INCB, national and regional precursor control training programmes. Technical missions were undertaken to Bhutan, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka to assess their precursor control situation and related law enforcement needs. UNDCP designed a survey, undertaken by ILO with United Nations Development Programme support, of four opium poppy-growing areas in Arunachal Pradesh state in India and assisted the Government in developing a comprehensive strategy for alternative development in the region.

East Asia and the Pacific

UNDCP continued its catalytic coordinating role in promoting drug control within the framework of the Subregional Action Plan developed under the 1993 memorandum of understanding between Cambodia, China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand and Viet Nam. At a ministerial-level meeting (Yangon, Myanmar, May), representatives of the six countries reaffirmed their commitment to and satisfaction with the framework and the progress made in implementing the Subregional Action Plan programmes. At a meeting of all countries of ASEAN and China, representatives endorsed an inter-agency programme to implement the plan of action entitled "Association of South-East Asian Nations and China Cooperative Operations in Response to Dangerous Drugs" (ACCORD). UNDCP and the ASEAN secretariat convened the first task force meeting under the ACCORD Action Plan cooperation mechanism (Bali, Indonesia, November), during which the terms of reference and 2002 work plans for each task force were approved. A new programme on precursor control, aimed at halting the diversion and trafficking of precursors in East Asia, was agreed on in May, and UNDCP developed several computer-based training modules for the six countries that had signed the 1993 memorandum of understanding.

UNDCP worked in cooperation with the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in several drug demand reduction activities through regional youth forums and other consultation mechanisms. It developed a comprehensive demand reduction programme for amphetamine-type stimulants for the region, with activities aimed at developing national and regional data-collection and information systems, as well as primary prevention activities related to such substance abuse in the workplace and among youth. In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, a national drug demand reduction centre was under construction in Vientiane, and UNDCP carried out a major study on drug abuse in two cities. In Viet Nam, an initiative aimed at preventing drug abuse among ethnic minorities was started. UNAIDS-funded efforts to incorporate HIV/AIDS issues in drug demand reduction programmes in South-East Asia began in late 2001.

Seven regional law enforcement projects in East Asia were implemented during 2001, including a computer-based training project for law enforcement officers. Five resource centres under the training project were established in Cambodia, China, Thailand and Viet Nam. In an effort to reduce response time in countering drug trafficking across national borders, several cross-border meetings were held, for example, the fifth Myanmar-Thailand Cross-Border Meeting on Drug Law Enforcement (Phuket Province, Thailand, August). UNDCP initiated a process to strengthen synergies with the Pacific Islands Forum and the Asia-Pacific Group on Money-Laundering in their anti-drug/crime policies and activities. In the Lao People's Democratic Republic, UNDCP supported the Government's alternative development programmes under the national strategy for eliminating illicit cultivation of opium poppy. The National Opium Survey 2001, conducted in collaboration with UNDCP, estimated that 17,255 hectares were under cultivation in 2001, representing a 36 per cent reduction since 1998. In Viet Nam, UNDCP assisted with the development of a new master plan for drug control for the years 2001-2010. In Thailand, with the support of UNDCP, a report and book were published highlighting lessons learned in reducing opium poppy cultivation over the period 1970-2000.

West and Central Asia

UNDCP concentrated its efforts on assisting Central Asian Governments in strengthening their capacity in drug control, since the region had emerged as one of the major trafficking routes for illicit drugs from Afghanistan. While continuing to implement its programme on alternative development interventions and drug demand reduction activities, UNDCP was involved in the implementation of the Drug Prevention and Monitoring Project of the Greater Azro Initiative by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. In Pakistan, UNDCP assisted in preparing a comprehensive framework to monitor the implementation of the National Drug Control Master Plan for 1998-2003, and cooperated in new activities in drug demand reduction. The third review meeting (Dushanbe, Tajikistan, 17-18 September) of the parties to the memorandum of understanding on subregional drug control cooperation, signed by five Central Asian countries, the Russian Federation, the Aga Khan Development Network and UNDCP, called for further cooperation in combating illicit trafficking in drugs, precursors and psychotropic substances, as well as drug abuse. The meeting also endorsed the accession of Azerbaijan to the memorandum of understanding. UNDCP continued its assistance to the secretariat of the Economic Cooperation Organization in coordinating the drug control activities of its member States (Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Iran, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan), including a drug control reporting system, training drug control coordinators and a drug control database.

UNDCP provided continued support in assessing the problem of drug abuse in Afghanistan and the Afghan refugee community in Pakistan and published two new studies on those issues. New drug demand reduction activities targeting Afghan refugee women in Pakistan began in August. In Iran, UNDCP supported four studies aimed at revising legislation on money-laundering, alternative punishments, international judicial cooperation, controlled delivery and precursor control. Within the framework of the subregional drug control cooperation programme for the Middle East, programmes in treatment and rehabilitation were initiated in Egypt and Jordan, and a national conference on demand reduction was convened in Cairo in April.

UNDCP released the results of its 2001 opium poppy survey in Afghanistan, which showed a 91 per cent reduction in the total area under cultivation compared to the previous year; however, the existence of large surplus stocks from the two previous harvests had mitigated the effect of the drop in production on the global heroin market. UNDCP organized a field mission to former opium poppy-growing areas in Afghanistan for experts from donor countries and organizations, which confirmed the Taliban's implementation of the ban on opium poppy cultivation but found that it had resulted in additional hardship for many small farmers. In August, UNDCP began supporting agricultural inputs and food-for-work schemes to former opium poppy-cultivating areas in Nangarhar province, but the initiative came to an end following the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States (see p. 60).

UNDCP continued to support Pakistan's strategy for supply reduction, which aimed at maintaining virtually zero opium poppy cultivation and other activities in Central Asia, enhancing the operational effectiveness of drug enforcement bodies, establishing a system for collecting criminal intelligence, implementing systems for effective cross-border cooperation and enhancing capacities for precursor control.

Latin America and the Caribbean

The UNDCP Caribbean Drug Control Coordination Mechanism undertook assessments of the implementation of the 1996 Barbados Plan of Action for Regional Drug Control Coordination and Cooperation. In Central America, UNDCP supported the Permanent Central American Commission for the Eradication of the Illicit Production, Traffic, Consumption and Use of Drugs and Psychotropic Substances and agreed to assist with the development of a regional drug control action plan. UNDCP continued to support national drug control commissions in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru in policy coordination and fund-raising. In Central America, UNDCP organized regional meetings and workshops aimed at improving national planning capacities.

Among prevention activities, UNDCP supported Mexican authorities in launching a drug abuse and HIV/AIDS prevention campaign through the media, reaching some 1 million people. A regional advocacy programme in the Caribbean focused on the theme "Sports against drugs", and local athletes acted as advocates. A teacher training programme was carried out in the context of a multi-agency health and family-life education programme. UNDCP appointed a regional epidemiology adviser for the Caribbean and contributed to the drug abuse surveillance work implemented by the Caribbean Epidemiology Centre. UNDCP helped the Dominican Republic's national drug prevention programme to decentralize its mandate to the provincial level and to set up regional committees. In Haiti, a school and street youth survey was carried out in Port-au-Prince, and support was given to NGOs concerned with drug abuse prevention. UNDCP provided assistance to Cuba in demand reduction training, including toxicology and epidemiological surveillance. A UN inter-agency programme supported community-based demand reduction activities in Guyana, focusing on youth. In Bolivia, UNDCP, in cooperation with UNFPA and the World Bank, promoted the inclusion of drug abuse preventive education and healthy lifestyles in school curricula, reaching 700 schools. It supported the Brazilian national HIV/AIDS prevention programme, targeting specific groups, including drug abusers. UNDCP expanded the subregional drug abuse information system under the memorandum of understanding on drug control cooperation signed with Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Peru and Uruguay.

UNDCP supported alternative development in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru, assisting in the implementation of 14 projects at a total value of $51 million, of which $10 million was implemented during 2001.

UNDCP continued to provide support to police, customs, judiciary and forensic laboratories in Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador and Mexico as well as to regional bodies. In Bolivia, it assisted in upgrading management and information systems and personnel training, and, in Brazil, it supported the modernization of police programmes and facilities. Precursor control assistance was given to Colombia, while the judiciary sector in Ecuador was provided with training and equipment. UNDCP supported the Caribbean Customs Law Enforcement Council in establishing a regional clearance system for control of the movement of vessels. Training in risk profiling and targeting techniques was provided to customs and port authorities from Aruba, the Dominican Republic, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, the Netherlands Antilles and Trinidad and Tobago. In Cuba, expert advice was provided for the planning of law enforcement training. UNDCP assisted 14 Caribbean countries in revising legislation on precursor control and, under the subregional forensic laboratory programmes for Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean, UNDCP provided equipment to analyse seized illicit drugs and their precursors.

Administrative and budgetary matters

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its forty-fourth session in March (see p. 1168), had before it a report [E/CN.7/2001/10 & Corr.1] of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), which considered and issued comments on the UNDCP Executive Director's reports on the proposed revised biennial support and programme budget for 2000-2001 for the UNDCP Fund [E/CN.7/2001/9] and on the proposed budget outline for 2002-2003 for the Fund [E/CN.7/2001/8].

In view of the decrease in income estimates for 2000-2001 ($144.2 million, compared to initial estimates of $156 million), ACABQ noted what appeared to be an overly positive description of income in the former report. Revised total expenditures were projected at $187.6 million for the biennium. It expressed concern that the report did not suggest proposals that could address the problem of a continued low-level general-purpose income and requested that, in future, the budget document should provide information on UNDCP efforts to attract voluntary contributions. It recommended that the adequacy of maintaining the operational reserve at the $12 million level be reviewed should the declining trend in income continue, and requested that future UNDCP budget documents contain background information on the operational reserve. ACABQ shared the view of the Executive Director on the need to concentrate on areas of intervention where UNDCP had the greatest comparative advantage, and welcomed the reduction in the number of projects from 260 in 2000 to 150 in 2001, which were consolidated into 25 national, regional and global programmes. The Committee welcomed the format of the budget outline for 2002-2003, in particular its presentation along the four main thematic areas of activity, together with programme support, management and administration.

By a 27 March resolution [E/2001/28/Rev.1 (res. 44/17)], the Commission approved an appropriation in the amount of $35,239,800 for the revised 2000-2001 biennial support budget funded by the UNDCP Fund. Of that amount, $26,480,600 was allocated for programme support (country offices, $19,698,000; headquarters, $6,782,600); and $8,759,200 for management and administration. The Commission authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between appropriation lines up to 5 per cent of the appropriation to which the resources were redeployed.

On the same date [res. 44/18], the Commission endorsed the programme and budget strategy for the 2000-2001 biennium and the revised resource allocation for programme activities in the amount of $148,298,000. It noted that implementation of the budget and additional priority programmes was subject to the availability of funding. In other action [res. 44/19], the Commission endorsed the programme and budget strategy for the 2002-2003 biennium and took note of the outline for that biennium totalling $198,254,600. It considered that the proposed outline provided a basis for the submission of the 2002-2003 proposed initial budget by the UNDCP Executive Director.

At its reconvened forty-fourth session in December, the Commission considered further reports on administrative and budgetary matters.

In an October report [E/CN.7/2001/14 & Corr.1 & Add.1] containing the proposed final budget for 2000-2001 and the proposed initial budget for 2002-2003 for the UNDCP Fund, the Executive Director stated that the final expenditure budget for 2000-2001 amounted to $154.9 million, compared to the proposed revised budget of $187.6 million. Of that amount, the final programme budget amounted to $117.4 million compared to the revised programme budget of $148.3 million; the final support budget amounted to $33.8 million, compared to the revised support budget of $35.2 million, reflecting a decrease in costing adjustments of $2.5 million (7.1 per cent) and an increase in volume changes of $1.1 million (3 per cent); and the final agency support costs were $3.8 million compared to the revised budget of $4.1 million.

The Executive Director stated that the initial budget proposal for 2002-2003 amounted to $168.4 million, compared to the outline projection of $198.3 million. Total resources budgeted were covered by fund balances and estimated income of $179.8 million for the same period. The initial Fund budget proposals for 2002-2003 were aligned, within the outline framework, with best estimates of income trends and updated projections, as compared to those one year earlier when the outline was prepared. There was a 10.2 per cent reduction in the total budget proposed for 2002-2003, as compared to the revised budget for 2000-2001, which was necessary to control the level of fund balances in order to maintain adequate cash flow. A small increase in total income of $5.1 million, or 3.9 per cent, was projected as compared to 2000-2001, attributable entirely to increased cost-sharing funds mainly for ongoing projects in Latin America. In the addendum to the budget, the Executive Director provided supplemental programme information narratives for 2002-2003, linked to the programme budget priorities and budgetary data, in a results-based budget framework.

In a November report [E/CN.7/2001/18], ACABQ commented on the Executive Director's proposed final budget for the 2000-2001 biennium for the UNDCP Fund and the proposed initial budget for the 2002-2003 biennium.

By a 13 December resolution [res. 44/20], the Commission approved an appropriation in the amount of $33,784,900 for the final budget for the 2000-2001 biennium. It also approved an appropriation of $35,386,400 for the initial budget for the 2002-2003 biennium funded under the UNDCP Fund. Among other action, the Commission also adopted guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, which were annexed to the resolution.

Reviews by OIOS

In May, the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], transmitted the report [E/AC.51/2001/4] of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on its triennial (1998-2000) review of the implementation of the recommendations made by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) on the 1998 in-depth evaluation of UNDCP [YUN 1998, p. 1168]. The report affirmed that UNDCP benefited from the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly in 1998, with the adopted action plans providing a strategic focus for drug control until 2008. Among CPC recommendations that needed further attention was the need for UNDCP to coordinate more with other organizations in developing information networks, to improve substantive dialogue with other organizations on drug abuse control and to promote appropriate methodologies for assessing the drug problem with reliability and comparability.

OIOS reported in June [A/56/83] on its inspection of programme management and administrative practices in the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention (ODCCP), an umbrella entity that included UNDCP and the United Nations Centre for International Crime Prevention (CICP). The report, also prepared in response to Assembly resolution 54/244, reviewed programme management, the outcome of consolidation, funding concerns, technical cooperation issues and overall management. While OIOS recognized the Executive Director's energetic efforts, which had heightened the global visibility of the Office and made it more action-oriented, it found that the overcentralized and arbitrary manner in which ODCCP was run by the Executive Director had concentrated authority and decision-making without institutional mechanisms to ensure that programmes were properly conceived and executed and that results were assessed. Inordinate delays in approving projects, programmes and specific actions were common. The absence of clearly defined delegation of authority from the Executive Director to programme managers clouded accountability and paralysed decision-making during his absence from Vienna. Of particular concern was the view expressed to OIOS by some Member States, including both donors and recipients of services, that the poor management of the Office had affected the fulfilment of its mandates and the proper implementation of some projects.

OIOS recommended that: management should develop comprehensive annual plans for both UNDCP and CICP; ODCCP should not undertake any large-scale, long-term commitments without feasibility research and assurances of donor support; ODCCP should put in place an organizational structure that delineated functions and responsibilities and reduced the lines of authority reporting directly to the top; immediate measures should be taken to strengthen financial and programme oversight at ODCCP; a review mechanism for projects and programmes drawing on best practices should be re-established; UNDCP should make efforts to establish a general-purpose fund margin at a level that would preclude a financial crisis; and ODCCP should ensure that its human resources management practices conformed to UN regulations and rules for fairness, transparency and objectivity.

In December, OIOS reported to the Assembly on its investigation into allegations of misconduct and mismanagement at ODCCP [A/56/689]. The investigation was begun in late 2000 after OIOS received reports alleging that the ODCCP Executive Director had engaged in misconduct by giving Office funds and equipment to a personal friend, who was the captain of a sailboat, in exchange for a favour. Although the investigation determined that the evidence did not support the allegation, OIOS did determine that multiple incidents of mismanagement of project operations and waste of ODCCP funds had occurred in connection with a related project, known as the "boat project". The report detailed the management failures and made recommendations for corrective action. The Secretary-General, in his transmittal note to the General Assembly, took note of the findings and concurred with the recommendations.

National database system

UNDCP, on the basis of the recommendations made by a meeting of the group of users of the national database system on drug control in November 2000, designed a work plan for the system's activities in 2001. The plan focused primarily on expanding the use of the system to as many competent authorities as possible, following a series of missions by the project team which installed the system and provided training in its use. The fourth meeting of the group of users (Vienna, 1 October) concluded that the system fully served the needs of national and international control of licit drugs and set standards for automating national and international drug control.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2001/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2001/18 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Implementation of the computer and telecommunication system for international and national drug control developed by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind that, pursuant to the international drug control treaties, the States parties thereto are obliged to share with other States, the Secretary-General and the International Narcotics Control Board, on a regular basis, large amounts of information and data on narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and precursor chemicals,

Aware of the increased administrative procedures that national drug control administrations must fulfil in implementing the international drug control treaties,

Bearing in mind the Political Declaration, the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, whereby States were requested to use modern technology to improve procedures for, and the timeliness of, the collection and dissemination of information, in order to achieve the highest level of accuracy of the results obtained,

Recalling Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 8(XXXVII) of 20 April 1994, in which the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in cooperation with the relevant bodies and authorities, was requested to establish standards to be used in the electronic transmission of data between the Programme and national authorities responsible for drug control,

Recalling also its resolution 1994/3 of 20 July 1994 and Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 43/1, in which the Programme was requested to integrate all annual reports questionnaires, using modern communication and presentation techniques,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General on the utilization of the development dividend and General Assembly resolution 53/220 of 7 April 1999, in which the Assembly approved the sum of 1.1 million United States dollars for the expansion of the computer and telecommunication system for international and national drug control (hereinafter referred to as the national database system) as an important development in building national capacities, in particular in developing countries,

Cognizant of the findings of the in-depth evaluation of the Programme carried out by the Office of Internal Oversight Services, in which the Programme is requested to strengthen its capacity for gathering information from Governments by expanding the national database system to cover other data-collection activities,

Taking note of the progress made by the Programme through the amendment of the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System of the Customs Cooperation Council, also known as the World Customs Organization, to establish a unique system for identifying narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and precursor chemicals under international control,

1. Notes with satisfaction the report of the third meeting of the group of users of the national database system, held in Vienna from 1 to 3 November 2000, at which 25 Governments concluded unanimously that the national database system is a comprehensive and mature product that is highly user-friendly and ready for detailed testing and possible implementation in many countries;

2. Commends the United Nations International Drug Control Programme on its success to date in developing the national database system and on its responsiveness to the requirements of Member States in developing the system;

3. Notes with satisfaction that the national database system stresses ownership by the users of the system and that it is being implemented with the emphasis on building capacity within, and promoting cooperation between, developing countries;

4. Recommends that States that have not already done so consider implementing the national database system in cooperation with the Programme and the current group of user States or establishing systems compatible with the national database system;

5. Urges States that wish to adopt the national database system to cooperate with the Programme in that endeavour by assessing the implications of implementation of the system by their national drug control authorities and by informing the Programme of their needs with regard to initial implementation and training as well as ongoing support;

6. Also urges Governments to consider making additional resources available to the Programme to enable it to strengthen its capacity to implement, maintain and further develop the national database system in Member States;

7. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fifth session on the national database system.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its forty-fourth session in Vienna from 20 to 29 March, during which it adopted 19 resolutions and six decisions and recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption five draft resolutions and three draft decisions. It held a reconvened forty-fourth session on 12 and 13 December, also in Vienna, at which it adopted a resolution on the 2000-2001 final budget and the initial budget for 2002-2003 for the UNDCP Fund (see p. 1166), and brought it to the attention of the Economic and Social Council.

Following the closure of the forty-fourth session on 13 December, the Commission opened its forty-fifth session to elect the new chairman and other bureau members.

The Commission considered a note by the Secretariat containing the revised part II of the annual reports questionnaire [E/CN.7/2001/3]. Following up on its request to the UNDCP Executive Director to streamline the questionnaire [YUN 2000, p. 1197], the Commission, by a 29 March resolution [E/2001/28/Rev.1 (res. 44/3)], approved the revised part II, entitled "Extent, patterns and trends of drug abuse", for use in the reporting on drug abuse. It called on the Executive Director to make the necessary changes to ensure that parts I and III benefited from the improvements to part II. The Commission requested the Executive Director to provide States with guidance in completing and submitting the revised questionnaire and to report to the Commission in 2002 on measures to improve the submission rate and the data quality of the questionnaire. At its reconvened forty-fourth session, the Commission examined proposals to amend the biennial questionnaire, including an improved layout and supporting notes for guidance [E/CN.7/2001/17].

The Commission also considered a Secretariat note [E/CN.7/2001/11], prepared in response to the Commission's 2000 request to include the question of the duration of its sessions in the 2001 agenda and to identify the daily operational and other budgetary cost implications of convening the Commission.

(Other action taken by the Commission is described in the relevant sections of this chapter.)

By decision 2001/241 of 24 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-fourth session [E/2001/28/Rev.1] and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the forty-fifth (2002) session, on the understanding that intersessional meetings would be held in Vienna, at no additional cost, to finalize the items to be included in the provisional agenda and the documentation requirements for the forty-fifth session. By decision 2001/243 of the same date, the Council outlined some parameters guiding the functioning and duration of the forty-fifth session.

Demand reduction

At its forty-fourth session, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered reduction of illicit demand for drugs. It had before it a note by the Secretariat describing the world situation with regard to drug abuse, in particular among children and youth [E/CN.7/2001/4].

By a 29 March resolution [res. 44/4], the Commission requested UNDCP to urge States that had effective demand reduction strategies to share them with other States and assist them in those strategies, where appropriate, in accordance with the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction [YUN 1998, p. 1137].

On the same date [res. 44/5], the Commission requested UNDCP to provide States with guidance and assistance in developing drug demand reduction strategies and programmes, in accordance with the Declaration, especially among young people in recreational areas. It encouraged UNDCP to gather information on successful experiences in prevention programmes and promote its exchange among States and practitioners. States were encouraged to promote proposals aimed at developing healthy recreational activities in coordination with local governments and civil society and invited to develop appropriate means of communicating and distributing prevention information aimed at young people. The Commission encouraged States to adapt and make compatible their research on drug addiction and treatment, and to develop information systems and prevention programmes aimed at raising public awareness of the risks associated with trends in drug use among young people, particularly in recreational areas. It requested the UNDCP Executive Director to report in 2002 on the implementation of the resolution.

Drug abuse

The Commission, in a 29 March resolution on measures to promote the exchange of information on new patterns of drug use and on substances consumed [res. 44/14], encouraged States to improve their understanding of drug abuse in terms of both the patterns of use and the substances consumed. It invited States and relevant regional organizations to foster the exchange of information among themselves and to pursue their efforts to develop a harmonized procedure for evaluating drug abuse and dependence, following the guidelines used by WHO. It requested INCB and UNDCP to provide technical support to those efforts, within available voluntary contributions.

On the same date [res. 44/15], the Commission considered provisions regarding travellers under treatment with medication containing narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances. Noting that INCB had reviewed problems encountered by travellers carrying medicines, the Commission invited Governments to inform INCB of restrictions involved in such cases and requested INCB to publish such information in its lists of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances under international control. UNDCP was invited, in cooperation with INCB and WHO, to convene a meeting of experts to develop guidelines for national regulations concerning travellers under treatment.

Illicit cultivation and trafficking

In a 28 March resolution on enhancing multi-lateral cooperation in combating illicit traffic by sea [res. 44/6], the Commission took note of the report of the informal open-ended working group on maritime cooperation against illicit trafficking by sea (Vienna, 5-8 December 2000) [UNDCP/2000/MAR.3]. It requested UNDCP to provide technical assistance and training to interested States and to cooperate with States parties to the 1988 Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690]. The UNDCP Executive Director was requested to report in 2003 on progress.

Also on 28 March [res. 44/9], the Commission invited the Secretary-General to inform all Member States, relevant specialized agencies and other UN entities of the resolutions adopted in 2000 by the Subcommittee on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East [UNDCP/SUBCOM/2000/6]. It commended countries that had taken steps to prevent the trafficking and manufacturing of acetic anhydride, and INCB for implementing Operation Topaz, an international programme to monitor trade in acetic anhydride (see p. 1149). It urged States to take appropriate action to control trade in the substance and support Operation Topaz.

By another resolution of the same date [res. 44/7], the Commission requested parties to the 1988 Convention that had not done so to designate their authorities in accordance with article 7. It urged parties to use a designated authority as the mechanism for requests for mutual legal assistance. Parties were also encouraged to consider special measures for receiving urgent requests and urged to provide mutual legal assistance to respond to requests for information and evidentiary items. The Commission urged parties, when they exercised their right to postpone or refuse requests for mutual legal assistance under article 7, to inform the requesting State of their reasons. The Commission requested UNDCP to increase its technical assistance in order to strengthen the capacity for response of parties to the Convention.

On the same date [res. 44/8], the Commission drew the attention of States to the provisions of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2000, p. 1050] and of the protocols thereto, which strengthened the countermeasures against transnational organized crime. It called on all States that had not done so to sign and ratify the Convention and stressed the need to enhance law enforcement cooperation strategies, especially in the exchange of intelligence and information in accordance with international law, in order to fight against criminal organizations involved in illicit drug and other trafficking.

On 29 March [res. 44/11], the Commission called on Member States to continue efforts to reduce illicit crop cultivation with a view to reintegrating the affected population groups into the licit economy. It requested multilateral financial institutions and regional development banks to provide financial assistance for alternative development programmes and encouraged UNDCP to increase its technical assistance to countries that were working to reduce illicit crop cultivation. The Commission urged the international community to undertake a greater financial and technical cooperation effort to promote alternative development projects and encouraged States to open their markets to products that were the object of alternative development programmes. The UNDCP Executive Director was requested to report in 2002 on the implementation of the resolution.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2001/28/Rev.1], adopted resolution 2001/16 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

International assistance to the States most affected by the transit of drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Recalling the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction,

Taking into account the Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2000,

Considering that action against the world drug problem is a shared responsibility calling for coordinated and balanced measures consistent with the relevant multilateral instruments in force at the international level,

Deeply concerned by the continuing illicit traffic in narcotic drugs, psychotropic substances and substances listed in tables I and II of the 1988 Convention,

Aware that, in order to counter drug trafficking effectively, it is necessary to undertake appropriate initiatives against the transit of drugs,

Stressing the unswerving determination and commitment to resolve the world drug problem by means of national and international strategies aimed at reducing both the supply of and demand for illicit drugs,

Recognizing the desirability of providing support to the States that are most affected by the transit of drugs and are willing to implement plans to eliminate such transit,

Emphasizing the need for joint action to ensure that international cooperation and solidarity do not become merely empty notions,

1. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to extend technical assistance, from available voluntary contributions for that purpose, to those States that are most affected by the transit of drugs, and in particular developing countries in need of such assistance and support;

2. Exhorts the international financial institutions, as well as other potential donors, to provide financial assistance to such transit States in order to enable them to intensify their action against illicit drug trafficking;

3. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to prepare a report on the implementation of the present resolution for submission to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fifth session.

Secretariat report. A December report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2002/4 & Corr.1] provided an overview of global trends and patterns in illicit drug production and trafficking and of the action taken by subsidiary bodies of the Commission. The report, which was based primarily on information received from Governments in the annual questionnaires submitted to UNDCP and reports on individual significant seizure cases, also drew on information received from Interpol, the Customs Cooperation Council, INCB and the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission of the Organization of American States. The report stated that the global supply of heroin declined considerably during 2001, mainly because of the substantive reduction of opium production in Afghanistan during the year, with opium production in the country dropping from 3,276 tons in 2000 to 185 tons in 2001—a decrease of 94 per cent. Trafficking trends, which were assessed up to the year 2000 in the report, reflected a huge increase in heroin seizures at the global level, assumed to be the result of the enormous opium production peak in Afghanistan during 1999. Heroin prices continued to decrease in Western Europe and North America. It was estimated that cocaine production followed trends of previous years, with Colombia remaining the major producer country. In 2000, seizures of cocaine declined in both North America and Western Europe, two major consumer markets. Cannabis herb seizures greatly increased in 2000, while interceptions of cannabis resin continued to reflect stabilization. Production and trafficking of amphetamine-type stimulants showed levelling off for the first time in many years and, in some instances, trends in regard to methamphetamine in North America and amphetamine in Western Europe were decreasing. However, methamphetamine seizure trends continued to rise in East/South-East Asia. Trafficking of Ecstasy-type substances showed further increases worldwide, with Western Europe, mainly the Netherlands, remaining the primary supplier. The report also provided an overview of action taken by the Commission's subsidiary bodies (see p. 1172).

Regional cooperation

By a 28 March resolution on enhancing cooperation against the drug problem in Asia and the Pacific [res. 44/1], the Commission commended the convening of the meeting entitled "International Congress: In pursuit of a drug-free ASEAN 2015: Sharing the vision, leading the change" (Bangkok, Thailand, October 2000). It appreciated the strong political consensus to respond to the drug menace, expressed in the Bangkok Political Declaration adopted by 33 States at the International Congress, and welcomed the plan of action known as ACCORD (see p. 1163), endorsed by the Congress. The Commission supported the decision to establish a regional cooperative mechanism to execute and monitor the progress of the ACCORD plan and called on Member States and subregional, regional and international organizations, international financial institutions, the private sector and NGOs to consider making resources available to support its implementation. It requested UNDCP to assist in the implementation process and to report thereon to the Commission at its annual sessions.

By a resolution of the same date [res. 44/10] on enhancing regional cooperation on drug control through training, the Commission welcomed the opening of the Turkish International Academy against Drugs and Organized Crime in Ankara in June by the ODCCP Executive Director. It commended Turkey, the United States and ODCCP for their cooperation in establishing the Academy and urged other Governments, in particular those of the Near and Middle East, to support and contribute to its functioning.

The Commission, on 29 March [res. 44/12], commended ODCCP and the Chairmanship of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe for convening the International Conference on Enhancing Security and Stability in Central Asia: An Integrated Approach to Counter Drugs, Organized Crime and Terrorism, held with the assistance of Uzbekistan in Tashkent on 19 and 20 October 2000. It took note of the endorsement given at the Conference by the States of Central Asia to a declaration and a document on priorities for cooperation and invited regional States to take further initiatives to continue and enhance multilateral cooperation. The Commission welcomed the efforts of donor countries and international and regional organizations to support control projects in Central Asia, and called on the donor community and UNDCP to continue activities in the region. The ODCCP Executive Director was requested to report to the Commission in 2003 on implementation of the resolution.

At its thirty-fifth session [E/CN.7/2001/5/Add.1], the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East recommended a draft resolution on international cooperation for the control of narcotic drugs for adoption by the Economic and Social Council, and another on enhancing regional cooperation on drug control through training for adoption by the Commission. It brought to the Commission's attention a resolution [res. 35/1] in which it urged Governments to take appropriate action to control acetic anhydride and to consider participating in regional and multilateral initiatives.

Four meetings of the subsidiary bodies of the Commission were held in 2001. Following a review of salient drug trafficking trends and regional and subregional cooperation, each meeting addressed drug law enforcement issues of priority concern to its region. The eleventh meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Latin America and the Caribbean (Panama City, 2-5 October) [UNDCP/HONLAC/2001/4] considered combating illicit drugs in the region, challenges for the new millennium, and funding of national drug control strategies and the role of international financial institutions in supporting the costs borne by Governments. The twenty-fifth meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Sydney, Australia, 15-18 October) [UNDCP/HONLAP/2001/5] examined illicit traffic in and abuse of heroin, control of stimulants and their precursors, cooperation in the exchange of criminal intelligence on trafficking, and trafficking by sea. The thirty-sixth session of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Abu Dhabi, 4-7 November) [UNDCP/SUBCOM/2001/5] examined countering money-laundering, controlled delivery, precursor control and emerging trends in illicit trafficking. The eleventh meeting of HONLEA, Africa (Nairobi, Kenya, 26-29 November) [UNDCP/HONLAF/2001/4] considered the use of couriers to traffic illicit drugs, the use of commercial cargo containers for that purpose, national drug investigative capacities and regional cooperation in law enforcement, and control of stimulants and precursor control.

Strengthening UN mechanisms

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in response to UNDCP's 1999 suggestion that it provide guidance on UN action to strengthen UNDCP's role in drug control [YUN 1999, p. 1191], by a 29 March resolution [res. 44/16], encouraged strengthened dialogue between Member States and the Secretariat on UNDCP priorities and management, and requested the UNDCP Executive Director to facilitate that process. It also requested the Executive Director to convene joint meetings of donor and recipient countries on planning operational activities of the Programme. The Commission decided that it should, in cooperation with the Executive Director and donor and recipient countries, identify thematic areas and geographical regions that required UNDCP's special attention to ensure the implementation of the mandates established by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session. It requested the Executive Director to present all reports to Commission members in a timely manner and encouraged UNDCP's efforts to report on the implementation of independent evaluations of operational activities. The Commission welcomed the early implementation of the planned system of financial management to allow UNDCP and Member States to assess the cost, impact and effectiveness of operational activities in an open manner. It called for continued improvement in management and a strengthened dialogue with Member States to enhance programme delivery. It urged all Governments to provide financial support to UNDCP and requested the Executive Director to continue efforts to broaden the donor base. The Commission requested a preliminary report in 2001 on the progress made in implementing the resolution and a final report in 2002.

In response to that request, the Executive Director submitted a preliminary report in October [E/CN.7/2001/15], which outlined action taken in the areas of strengthening dialogue between Member States and UNDCP; improving the effectiveness of the Commission's work; UNDCP operations and management; and funding.

Chapter XV

Statistics

In 2001, the United Nations continued its statistical work programme. In March, the 24-member Statistical Commission endorsed the proposed new approach developed by the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts for a better and more comprehensive assessment of the implementation of the System of National Accounts, 1993; welcomed the publication of a handbook on the measurement of capital stocks and flows; and adopted the draft manual on statistics of international trade in services. The Commission reviewed the work of a number of established bodies and international organizations in various areas of economic, social and environment statistics and made specific recommendations and suggestions.

The Commission agreed with the proposed time frame for updating the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities and the Central Product Classification by 2002 and for planning their revision by 2007.

The Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination met in September.

Work of Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its thirty-second session in New York from 6 to 9 March [E/2001/24]. Action taken included the adoption of the draft manual on statistics of international trade in services; agreement on the work programme proposed by the United Nations Statistics Division to validate development indicators in the context of follow-up to UN conferences and summits; and acceptance of the invitation by the Economic and Social Council to serve as the intergovernmental focal point for the review of conference indicators.

Having considered the work that groups of countries and international organizations were undertaking in the fields of economic, social and environment statistics, the Commission endorsed the human settlements statistics programme presented by the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), including the quinquennial cycle for data collection and dissemination, and encouraged the Centre to convene, in consultation with the Statistics Division, an expert group to evaluate existing methodologies and data-collection and dissemination instruments, as well as concepts and sources of city statistics. It welcomed the Division's initiatives in the measurement of paid and unpaid work, in particular the development of a guide to produce statistics on time use for measuring paid and unpaid work and the web site on time-use surveys; endorsed the outline for the guide; and further endorsed the proposed new approach developed by the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts (ISWGNA) for the assessment of the extent to which the System of National Accounts (SNA), 1993, had been implemented. The Commission welcomed progress made in the areas of household income statistics, capital stock statistics, price statistics, social statistics and the labour statistics supplement to the tourism satellite account, and gave specific directions in several of those areas, in particular regarding presentational aspects of the International Labour Organization (ILO) Manual on Consumer Price Indices, the process and timing of revision of the System of Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting, the long- and short-term goals of the Siena Group for Social Statistics, and the focus of ILO's work on a labour accounting system. It reaffirmed its support for a credible International Comparison Programme, welcomed the efforts of the World Bank in developing its project proposal for a global Programme, and restated its concerns about securing the necessary funding for the Programme's success.

The Commission agreed with the proposed work programme and time frame for updating the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities and the Central Product Classification by 2002 and for planning their revision by 2007, and provided specific directions for the work of the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications. It noted the Statistics Division's progress on three web sites on: the global integrated presentation of the work of the international organizations in statistical methodology; good practices in official statistics; and the United Nations Economic and Social Information System common database for global statistics.

The Commission expressed appreciation for the report of the Friends of the Chair, entitled "An assessment of the statistical criticisms made of the Human Development Report, 1999", and welcomed the response to that report of the Human Development Report Office of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), in which a number of positive developments in relation to statistical aspects of the Report were outlined.

In relation to the planned work of the Statistics Division, the Commission endorsed the draft work programme for the 2002-2003 biennium and the 2001 schedule of expert group meetings and workshops. It noted the activities undertaken and planned under the Development Account and the new initiative in building capacity in household surveys, particularly in Africa.

By decision 2001/230 of 19 July, the Council took note of the Commission's 2001 report, decided that the Commission's thirty-third session should be held in New York from 5 to 8 March 2002 and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

Economic statistics

National accounts

In response to a 2000 Statistical Commission request [YUN 2000, p. 1201], the Secretary-General submitted a January report on assessment of the implementation of the 1993 SNA [E/CN.3/2001/8]. The report provided background information on the ISWGNA proposal for a better and more comprehensive assessment of the implementation of the 1993 SNA (see below); described the implications of the introduction of the new UN national accounts questionnaire on the assessment of the scope of the accounts based on the UN national accounts database; and presented the results of the first assessment of the "minimum requirement data set" as the measurement for a country's scope of 1993 SNA implementation. In addition, the measurement of the minimum requirement data set was compared with the previous milestone assessment.

The Commission also had before it the report of the 2000 meeting of the Task Force on National Accounts (convened by ISWGNA) [YUN 2000, p. 1201].

The Commission welcomed and endorsed ISWGNA's proposed new approach for assessing the extent to which the 1993 SNA had been implemented. It supported the definition of the new scope of the accounts, consisting of three data sets (minimum, recommended, other) for assessing the broad coverage of national accounts in various regions and agreed that those data sets should be referred to by more neutral names. While the Commission did not decide whether the three data sets should be considered as a replacement for or a supplement to the six milestones used before, it recognized that both methods provided sufficient information to identify countries and regions that needed technical assistance in 1993 SNA implementation. It also recognized that, for the time being, only an assessment of the first data set and after 2003 of the second data set could be conducted by the Statistics Division due to the transitional status of the new national accounts database.

Regarding electronic discussion groups, the Commission concluded that there was no simple solution to the problem of improving their effectiveness and noted that the existence of a special interest group and the method used to communicate updates appeared to be key factors in determining effectiveness.

The Commission encouraged ISWGNA to review the treatment of intangible assets and report back in 2002; expressed satisfaction with the proposed clearance of manuals or handbooks developed by "city groups" and containing concepts that diverged from those in the 1993 SNA; and requested ISWGNA to make a decision on the national accounting treatment of mobile phone licences.

Capital stocks

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the Expert Group on Capital Stock Statistics [E/CN.3/2001/9], which indicated the topics considered at the Group's 1997, 1998 and 1999 meetings and described its products, future activities and expected future products. The Commission welcomed the publication of a handbook on the measurement of capital stocks and flows and noted that the Group would continue to function electronically to discuss concepts and practices.

Service statistics

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services [E/CN.3/2001/10], which noted that the final draft of the proposed manual on statistics of international trade in services [PROV/ST/ESA/STAT/SER.M/86] was before the Commission for approval.

The Commission approved the manual as an international manual and commended the Task Force for its work. Noting a proposal by the World Tourism Organization regarding the manual, the Commission responded that the detail requested should be elaborated in satellite accounts but not in that particular manual. It recommended that the Task Force continue its work, focusing on the proposed users' manual on data collection as the next step. The Commission noted that the implementation of the manual would be a long-term process and agreed to the Task Force's proposal for international data collection on trade in services, observing that full coordination between agencies was required and that implementation of the data collection would also require a phased process.

International Comparison Programme

Having considered a background paper by the World Bank on the implementation plan for the International Comparison Programme (ICP), the Commission agreed on the fundamental importance of generating high-quality purchasing power parities through ICP for improved comparisons of living standards and recognized ICP's potential for building national statistical capacity in the areas of prices and national accounts. The Commission reaffirmed its support for a credible ICP programme and welcomed the efforts of the World Bank to develop its project proposal for a global ICP. It restated its concerns about securing the necessary funding for the programme's success and, in that context, requested the World Bank to follow up on its project proposal and reconsider the amount and duration of funding that was necessary. The Commission asked the international agencies to raise the visibility of the programme and stressed the need for secure funding at the highest levels of their agencies.

The Commission indicated the need to develop a comprehensive project plan for implementation of the proposed ICP strategy, and requested the World Bank to develop the plan in consultation with the Friends of the Chair; affirmed the critical importance of strong project management for the programme; requested the existing Friends of the Chair to continue their efforts until the Commission's thirty-third (2002) session; and urged members and specialized agencies to mobilize efforts at the political level to promote support for the project.

Other economic statistics

Ottawa Group and ISWGPS

Having considered the report of the Ottawa Group on Price Indexes [E/CN.3/2001/11] and that of the Intersecretariat Working Group on Price Statistics (ISWGPS) [E/CN.3/2001/12], the Commission welcomed progress made by the groups in their work programmes; supported the future work programme of the Ottawa Group and took note of its joint meeting with ISWGPS, planned for April 2001; and noted that the preparation of the Consumer Price Index manual was in its final stage.

Environmental accounting

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the London Group on Environmental Accounting [E/CN.3/2001/13], which had been requested by the Commission to revise Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting (SEEA), published as an interim handbook in 1993. The Commission acknowledged the progress made in the SEEA revision and emphasized the need for it to be published as soon as possible. The Commission welcomed the announcement that the London Group would meet in May and requested the Group to reach consensus on issues that needed to be resolved and on changes to be made to the draft handbook. The Commission recommended that a group of friends of the Chair, composed of directors or deputy directors of national statistical offices or equivalent, be created to solve any outstanding issues and further steer the process after the final draft was delivered by the Group to the international agencies at the end of July. It agreed that an interim version of the handbook be published by all agencies and recommended that the revised SEEA be submitted to the Commission's 2002 session for approval.

The projected 31 July deadline for the final version of the draft SEEA, which was decided at the London Group's meeting (Voorburg, Netherlands, May), was not met and editing continued throughout 2001. A new deadline was set for January 2002 [E/CN.3/2002/17].

Demographic and social statistics

Human settlements

The Commission had before it a report of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) [E/CN.3/2001/2], which outlined progress made in developing and improving human settlements statistical concepts, definitions and classifications; statistical support for UN global conferences on human settlements and the General Assembly's special session on the review and appraisal of the implementation of the outcome of the 1996 UN Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) (see p. 973); quantitative monitoring of the implementation of the Habitat Agenda, adopted at Habitat II [YUN 1996, p. 994]; and future activities to improve international human settlements statistics and national capacities.

The Commission endorsed the Centre's human settlements statistics programme, including the quinquennial cycle of data collection and dissemination; noted the necessity for and stressed the importance of reviewing and enhancing the quality of human settlements statistics; and pointed out the obstacles to international agreement on standards in housing, housing conditions and human settlements development. It encouraged the Centre to convene, in consultation with the Statistics Division, an expert group meeting to evaluate existing methodologies and data-collection and dissemination instruments, as well as concepts and sources of city statistics. The Commission recognized the work on the development of more dynamic city indicators on such topics as environment, urban poverty and informal sector economic activities.

Labour statistics

As agreed at its 2000 session [YUN 2000, p. 1203], the Statistical Commission considered a report prepared by the ILO Bureau of Statistics entitled "Developing a labour accounting system for tourism: issues and approaches" [E/CN.3/2001/3]. The report described work undertaken by ILO, which built on that carried out by the World Tourism Organization and the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), to develop tourism satellite accounts (TSA) to SNA. ILO and some national statistical agencies had been working to develop a labour accounting system (LAS) and a labour accounting system for tourism (LAS-T).

LAS-T would represent a labour statistics-based extension of TSA, designed to produce TSA-consistent statistics to answer questions about how many and what kind of workers were participating in tourism-related activities; how compensation was being distributed among those workers; and what the impact would be on total employment of a change in tourism-related demand. The report provided an overview of the main concepts and principles of LAS and LAS-T linked to TSA.

The Commission expressed support for ILO's continued work on LAS, took note of the difficulties of applying the general framework of labour accounting to the tourism industry, and suggested that ILO focus first on the further development of the general LAS.

Gender statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on the progress of a project developed by the Statistics Division, UNDP and the International Development Research Centre (Canada) on gender issues in the measurement of paid and unpaid work [E/CN.3/2001/4]. The report described project activities and presented an outline for a technical guide on methods for conducting time-use activities and the conclusions of a 2000 expert group meeting on the guide. The Commission welcomed the Statistics Division's initiatives in the measurement of paid and unpaid work, in particular the development of a guide to produce statistics on time use for measuring paid and unpaid work and the web site on time-use surveys. It noted the value of time-use statistics and endorsed the outline for the guide.

Siena Group

Having considered the report of the Siena Group for Social Statistics [E/CN.3/2001/5], the Commission requested the Group to provide a document stating the priority areas, covering both short- and long-term goals, to ensure that the Group's objectives were both clear and attainable.

The Group's 2001 meeting did not take place. Therefore, an intermediate meeting was held (Geneva, 3-4 December) to outline the Group's strategy for the next few years and set strategic medium-term goals [E/CN.3/2002/6].

Other statistical activities

International economic and social classifications

The Statistical Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on international economic and social classifications [E/CN.3/2001/14], which provided an overview of how the Commission's 2000 recommendations concerning international statistical classifications [YUN 2000, p. 1204] had been addressed and contained proposals for future work.

The Commission agreed with the proposed work programme and time frame for updating the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) and the Central Product Classification (CPC) by 2002 and their revision by 2007, stressing the importance of reaching convergence of major activity classifications by 2007. It also agreed with suggestions regarding the scope of changes to ISIC and CPC.

The Commission suggested that the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications consider the possibility of further synchronizing and coordinating the revision of classifications supporting production and trade statistics so that resulting data could become more comparable; emphasized the need for alternate industry aggregations for analytical purposes; and recommended that the Expert Group further consider the identification of a useful level of detail for an international classification, possibly expanding in the area of services.

The Commission noted the need to keep developing countries involved in the work process; recommended that the high costs of implementing a revised classification be considered in the revision process; noted the need for increased activities relating to implementation assistance and the need for monitoring country implementation of ISIC and CPC; and requested a more detailed work plan for the 2007 revision of ISIC and CPC.

Follow-up to UN conferences and summits

In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2000/27 [YUN 2000, p. 1377], the Secretary-General submitted to the Statistical Commission a report on activities and plans of the Statistics Division and the Commission in support of the harmonization and rationalization of indicators [E/CN.3/2001/16] in the context of follow-up to international conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields (see also p. 1366). Statistics Division activities in support of the implementation of resolution 2000/27 focused on developing an agreed process to rationalize and harmonize the various sets of conference indicators and on strengthening national capacity to produce relevant indicators for policy decision-making. As the Council had invited the Commission to take a lead role in acting as its technical advisory body on indicators, the Secretary-General proposed an action plan for the period 2001-2002, culminating in the submission of a report to the Council in 2002.

The Commission also had before it a report by the European Commission, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), OECD and the World Bank on strengthening cooperation for statistical capacity-building [E/CN.3/2001/24]. The report described the background to the establishment of the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century (PARIS 21) and its organization and work programme.

The Commission accepted the Council's invitation to serve as the intergovernmental focal point for the review of conference indicators and emphasized the importance of the needs for capacity-building, effective user-producer dialogue on indicators and reduction of the overburdening of countries with data requests. It agreed with the Statistics Division's work programme, in particular the formation of a friends of the Chair advisory group. With respect to the limited set of indicators, the Commission expressed doubts that a single set could satisfy the various national, regional and specialized sectoral needs, and emphasized the need for flexibility. It recommended that the Friends of the Chair consider the intersection of existing lists of indicators and explore a layered approach. The Commission took note of the information provided on PARIS 21 and noted the need for further discussions on its work programme, structure, financing and location. In that connection, some delegations suggested that the integration of the tasks of PARIS 21 into the UN system be investigated.

Human Development Report

The Commission had before it a report by its Friends of the Chair, entitled "An assessment of the statistical criticisms made of the Human Development Report, 1999" [E/CN.3/2001/18], which discussed the accuracy of the statistical information in that report, focusing on criticisms raised in a document authored by Ian Castles (Australia). Annexed to the report were Mr. Castles' document and the point-by-point response of the Human Development Report Office of UNDP to that document.

Also before the Commission was a report of that Office [E/CN.3/2001/19], which noted the observations of the Friends of the Chair and outlined steps being taken to improve the Human Development Report.

The Commission took note of a statement by the Chair of the Friends of the Chair, who emphasized the need to apply high statistical professional standards to the Human Development Report, particularly as it was so widely used by a variety of audiences. In that regard, he stressed that purchasing power parities-based comparisons should be used systematically for most of the analyses in the Report and more extensively than was the case in the 1999 edition. The Commission also took note of a statement by a representative of the Human Development Report Office, who noted that the Commission's interest in the Report had generated a variety of positive developments, including closer links between the Office and statistics-producing agencies, the involvement of a statistical advisory panel, the appointment of a senior statistical adviser and the rethinking of the structure of the statistical tables in the Report. The Commission warmly welcomed the response of the Office to the report of the Friends of the Chair and accepted the Office's proposal to submit to its thirty-third (2002) session a paper that would discuss the needs of users of statistics of human development and provide information on the implementation of the report of the Friends of the Chair.

Coordination and integration of international statistical programmes

Having considered the report of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) Subcommittee on Statistical Activities on its 2000 session [YUN 2000, p. 1205], the Commission noted the ongoing and planned work on the methodology and collection of electronic commerce statistics at the national and international levels. The Commission also restated its view that: the international statistical agencies should pay adequate attention to coordination and integration of their work; the integrated programme of the Economic Commission for Europe, OECD and Eurostat and the global integrated presentation of the work of the international organizations in statistical methodology were important tools for coordination and integration; and programme reviews of selected fields of statistics should be carried out.

Inter-agency cooperation

The ACC Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, at its thirty-fifth session (Vienna, 18-20 September) [ACC/2001/2], noted the six major new initiatives planned by organizations and the coordination involved in them—industrial statistics database according to ISIC, Revision 3 on CD-ROM (United Nations, Industrial Development Organization); technical report on surveys in developing and transition countries (Statistics Division); establishing a joint poverty-monitoring project (UNDP/Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific); IMF update: reports on the observance of standards and codes and the data quality assessment framework; strengthening statistical capacity in the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) region (Statistics Division and ESCWA Statistics Division); and progress towards the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129] target on the numbers of undernourished (Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations). The Subcommittee also adopted a set of principles for disseminating statistical information on the Internet and noted that each organization should continue to set its own policies regarding the pricing of such information, including the extent to which data might be provided free of charge. In identifying issues that the Statistical Commission might wish to discuss, the Subcommittee suggested that items on information and communications technology statistics and the definition and measurement of the so-called information society be added to the multi-year programme of work.

Programme questions

Having reviewed major developments in the work programme of the Statistics Division, the Commission took note of and endorsed the draft programme of work for the biennium 2002-2003 [E/CN.3/2001/CRP.1], the list of expert group meetings and workshops in 2001 [E/CN.3/2001/CRP.2] and the priorities proposed by the Division's Director. The Commission also took note of the medium-term plan for 2002-2005 [A/55/6/Rev.1] and the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 1998-1999 biennium [A/55/73]; the activities undertaken and planned under the Development Account; the new initiative in household surveys capacity-building, particularly in Africa; and the discontinuation of the commodity trade statistics microfiche programme.

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 2001, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered three Judgments, made 18 Orders and had 25 contentious cases pending before it.

On 31 October, the ICJ President informed the General Assembly that the Court's docket remained overburdened and that solutions would have to be found to avoid excessive delays in examining cases that were ready to be heard. Noting that administrative and procedural efforts made by the Court to redress the situation would not be sufficient, he appealed to the Assembly to ensure the financial and human resources required for the Court to perform its duties properly. The President stated that ICJ could play an important role in preventing conflicts, particularly territorial ones, and encouraged States to refer their disputes to the Court by way of Special Agreement.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2001, the Court delivered its Judgment on the merits in the case concerning Maritime Delimitation and Territorial Questions between Qatar and Bahrain (Qatar v. Bahrain) and in the LaGrand Case (Germany v. United States). It also delivered its Judgment on the Application of the Philippines for permission to intervene in the case concerning Sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan (Indonesia/Malaysia).

The Court or its President made further Orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Oil Platforms (Iran v. United States); Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia); Land and Maritime Boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria (Cameroon v. Nigeria: Equatorial Guinea intervening); Legality of Use of Force (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany), (Yugoslavia v. Italy), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands), (Yugoslavia v. Portugal) and (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom); Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Burundi), (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) and (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda); Arrest Warrant of 11 April 2000 (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Belgium); and Certain Property (Liechtenstein v. Germany).

ICJ activities in 2001 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2000 to 31 July 2001 [A/56/4] and

1 August 2001 to 31 July 2002 [A/57/4]. On 30 October, the Assembly took note of the 2000/01 report (decision 56/407).

Maritime delimitation and territorial questions (Qatar v. Bahrain)

Qatar instituted proceedings in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 820] against Bahrain in respect of disputes relating to sovereignty over the Hawar Islands, sovereign rights over the shoals of Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah, and the delimitation of the maritime areas of the two States.

In 1992, a Memorial by Qatar and a Counter-Memorial by Bahrain were filed [YUN 1992, p. 982], as were their respective Reply and Rejoinder.

Following hearings, the Court delivered a Judgment on 1 July 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1279].

The Court received a letter from Qatar on 30 November 1994 transmitting an "Act to comply with paragraphs (3) and (4) of the operative paragraph 41 of the Judgment of the Court dated 1 July 1994". On the same day, Bahrain transmitted a "Report of the State of Bahrain to the International Court of Justice on the Attempt by the Parties to Implement the Court's Judgment of 1 July 1994".

In 1995, the Court delivered a Judgment on jurisdiction and admissibility [YUN 1995, p. 1305], by which it found that it had jurisdiction and that the Application of Qatar as formulated on 30 November 1994 was admissible.

In 1996, each Party filed a Memorial on the merits [YUN 1996, p. 1176]. Counter-Memorials of the Parties were filed on 23 December 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1312].

On 17 March 1998, the President held a meeting to ascertain the views of the Parties on a procedure concerning the authenticity of documents produced by Qatar in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1312]. By an Order of 30 March 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1184], the Court fixed 30 September 1998 as the time limit for the filing of an interim report by Qatar on the authenticity of the documents and directed the filing of a Reply by each of the Parties within the time limit of 30 March 1999. In its interim report filed in September 1998, Qatar stated that it would not rely on the disputed documents for the purposes of the case so as to enable the Court to address the merits of the case without further procedural complications. In December 1998, Qatar requested "a two-month extension of the time limit for the filing of a Reply by each of the Parties, to 30 May 1999" [ibid.].

In February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1202], the Court placed on record Qatar's decision to disregard the 82 documents annexed to its written pleadings, which had been challenged by Bahrain, and decided that the Replies yet to be filed by Qatar and by Bahrain would not rely on those documents. After filing their Replies within the extended time limit, Qatar and Bahrain submitted, with the approval of the Court, certain additional expert reports and historical documents.

At the conclusion of sittings held from 29 May to 29 June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1210], Qatar requested the Court to adjudge and declare that it had sovereignty over the Hawar Islands, and Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah shoals; and that Bahrain had no sovereignty over the island of Janan or over Zubarah, and that any claim by it concerning archipelago baselines and areas for fishing for pearls and swimming fish would be irrelevant for the purpose of maritime delimitation. Qatar also requested that the Court draw a single maritime boundary between the areas of seabed, subsoil and superjacent waters appertaining to Qatar and Bahrain on the basis that Zubarah, the Hawar Islands and Janan appertained to it and not to Bahrain, that boundary being based on a delimitation agreement between Bahrain and Iran (1971), a 23 December 1947 decision of the United Kingdom, and a delimitation agreement between Bahrain and Saudi Arabia (1958). Bahrain's final submission asked the Court to adjudge and declare that it was sovereign over Zubarah and the Hawar Islands, including Janan and Hadd Janan, and that the maritime boundary between Bahrain and Qatar was as described in its Memorial.

At a public sitting of 16 March 2001, the Court delivered its Judgment. It unanimously found that Qatar had sovereignty over Zubarah and, by 12 votes to 5, that Bahrain had sovereignty over the Hawar Islands. By 13 votes to 4, the Court found that Qatar had sovereignty over Janan Island, including Hadd Janan and, by 12 votes to 5, that Bahrain had sovereignty over the island of Qit'at Jaradah. The Court unanimously found that the low-tide elevation of Fasht ad Dibal fell under the sovereignty of Qatar and, by 13 votes to 4, decided that the single maritime boundary dividing the various maritime zones of Qatar and Bahrain should be drawn as indicated in paragraph 250 of its Judgment.

Judge Oda appended a separate opinion to the Judgment; Judges Bedjaoui, Ranjeva and Koroma, a joint dissenting opinion; Judges Herczegh, Vereshchetin and Higgins, declarations; and Judges Parra-Aranguren, Kooijmans and Al-Khasawneh, separate opinions. Judge ad hoc Torres Bernárdez appended a dissenting opinion to the Judgment, and Judge ad hoc Fortier, a separate opinion.

Questions of interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the aerial incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom) and (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States)

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya instituted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 982] separate proceedings against the United Kingdom and the United States in respect of a dispute over the interpretation and application of the 1971 Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation [YUN 1971, p. 739], which arose from its alleged involvement in the crash of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on 21 December 1988. In the Applications, Libya referred to the charging and indictment of two of its nationals by the Lord Advocate of Scotland and by a United States Grand Jury for having caused a bomb to be placed aboard Pan Am flight 103, which exploded, caused the aircraft to crash and killed all 270 persons aboard.

The United Kingdom and the United States, on 16 and on 20 June 1995, respectively [YUN 1995, p. 1306], filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain Libya's Applications. Libya presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by the United Kingdom and the United States within the prescribed time limits set by the Court. Public sittings to hear the oral arguments of the Parties on the preliminary objections raised by the United Kingdom and the United States were held in October 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1313].

In February 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1184], the Court delivered the two Judgments on the preliminary objections, by which it rejected the objection to jurisdiction raised by the United Kingdom and the United States on the basis of the alleged absence of a dispute between the Parties concerning the interpretation or application of the Montreal Convention; found that it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article 14, paragraph 1, of the Convention, to hear the disputes between Libya and the United Kingdom and Libya and the United States concerning the interpretation or application of the provisions of the Convention; rejected the objection to admissibility derived by the United Kingdom and the United States from Security Council resolutions 748(1992) [YUN 1992, p. 55] and 883(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 101]; found that the Applications filed by Libya on 3 March 1992 were admissible; and declared that the objection raised by both countries according to which the same Council resolutions had rendered the claims of Libya without object did not, in the circumstances of the case, have an excessively preliminary character.

The time limit of 30 December 1998 fixed by the Court [YUN 1998, p. 1185] for the filing of the Counter-Memorials of the United Kingdom and the United States was extended to 31 March 1999 following a proposal of the United Kingdom and the United States, which referred to diplomatic initiatives [ibid., p. 163], and after the views of Libya had been ascertained. The Counter-Memorials were filed within the time limit.

Taking account of the agreement of the Parties and the special circumstances of the case, the Court, by Orders of 29 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1203], authorized the submission of a Reply by Libya and Rejoinders by the United Kingdom and the United States, which fixed 29 June 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Reply. The Court fixed no date for the filing of the Rejoinders; the representatives of the Respondent States had expressed the desire that no such date be fixed at that stage of the proceedings, "in view of the new circumstances consequent upon the transfer of the two accused to the Netherlands for trial by a Scottish court". Libya's Reply was filed within the prescribed time limit.

By Orders of 6 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1211], the President of the Court, taking account of the Parties' views, fixed 3 August 2001 as the time limit for filing the Rejoinders of the United Kingdom and the United States. The Rejoinders were filed within the prescribed time limit.

Oil platforms (Iran v. United States)

Iran instituted proceedings against the United States in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] regarding a dispute in which Iran alleged that the destruction by United States warships, on 19 October 1987 and 18 April 1988, of three offshore oil production complexes owned and operated by the National Iranian Oil Company constituted a breach of international law and the 1955 Iran/United States Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights. Iran requested the Court to rule on the matter.

Orders of the Court in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 983] and 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1183] fixed time limits for the filing of the Memorial by Iran and for a Counter-Memorial by the United States. Iran filed its Memorial, while the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court. In 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1280], Iran presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the United States objections, in accordance with an Order of the Court.

The Court delivered its Judgment in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], by which it rejected the preliminary objection of the United States and found that it had jurisdiction to entertain the claims made by Iran.

By an Order of 16 December 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1178], the President of the Court fixed 23 June 1997 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of the United States. Within that time limit, the United States filed the Counter-Memorial and a counter-claim [YUN 1997, p. 1313].

In November and December 1997, respectively, Iran and the United States submitted written observations on the question of the admissibility of the United States counter-claim.

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1185], the Court found that the counter-claim presented by the United States in its Counter-Memorial was admissible. It further directed Iran to submit a Reply and the United States to submit a Rejoinder, fixing the time limits for those pleadings at 10 September 1998 and 23 November 1999, respectively.

In May 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1185], the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, extended, at the request of Iran and taking into account the views expressed by the United States, the time limits for Iran's Reply and the United States Rejoinder to 10 December 1998 and 23 May 2000, respectively. In December 1998, the Court further extended those time limits to 10 March 1999 for Iran's Reply and 23 November 2000 for the United States Rejoinder. Iran's Reply was filed within the time limit thus extended.

In September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1211], the President of the Court extended, at the request of the United States and taking into account the agreement between the Parties, the time limit for filing the United States Rejoinder to 23 March 2001. The Rejoinder was filed within the time limit thus extended.

By an Order of 28 August 2001, the Vice-President of the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties, authorized the submission by Iran of an additional pleading relating solely to the counter-claim submitted by the United States and fixed 24 September 2001 as the time limit for the filing of that pleading. The additional pleading was filed by Iran within the prescribed time limit.

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia)

Bosnia and Herzegovina instituted proceedings in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1138] against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) (FRY) for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. The time limits were fixed for the filing of a Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina and a Counter-Memorial by FRY [YUN 1993, p. 1138]. The Memorial by Bosnia and Herzegovina was filed within the prescribed time limit [YUN 1994, p. 1281].

The time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial by FRY was extended in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1307]. Within the time limit, FRY filed certain preliminary objections. The objections related, first, to the admissibility of the Application and, second, to the jurisdiction of the Court to deal with the case. By virtue of the Rules of Court, proceedings on the merits were suspended. Pursuant to an Order of the Court [ibid.], Bosnia and Herzegovina presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by FRY, within the prescribed time limit.

The Court delivered its Judgment on 11 July 1996 on the preliminary objections [YUN 1996, p. 1179], by which it rejected the objections raised by FRY. In accordance with an Order of 23 July 1996 [ibid.], FRY filed a Counter-Memorial that included counter-claims against Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 1997, p. 1315].

Both Parties accepted in 1997 that their respective Governments would submit written observations on the question of the admissibility of the FRY counter-claims and did so. The Court found that the counter-claims submitted by FRY in its Counter-Memorial were admissible and directed Bosnia and Herzegovina to submit a Reply and FRY to submit a Rejoinder, fixing the time limits for those pleadings at 23 January and 23 July 1998, respectively. In January 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1186], those time limits were extended to 23 April 1998 and 22 January 1999, respectively. The Reply of Bosnia and Herzegovina was filed within the prescribed time limit. The Court, in December 1998 [ibid.], extended the time limit for the filing of FRY's Rejoinder to 22 February 1999, which was filed within the time limit [YUN 1999, p. 1204].

By an Order of 10 September 2001, the President of the Court placed on record the withdrawal by FRY of the counter-claims submitted in its Counter-Memorial. The Order was made after FRY had informed the Court that it intended to withdraw its counter-claims and Bosnia and Herzegovina had indicated to the latter that it had no objection to the withdrawal.

Application for Revision of the Judgment of 11 July 1996 concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia), Preliminary Objections (Yugoslavia v. Bosnia and Herzegovina)

On 24 April 2001, FRY filed an Application for revision of the Judgment delivered by the Court on 11 July 1996 in the case concerning the Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Yugoslavia), Preliminary Objections [YUN 1996, p. 1179] (see above). FRY contended that a revision of the Judgment was necessary, since it had become clear that, before 1 November 2000 (the date on which it was admitted as a new Member of the United Nations), FRY did not continue the international legal and political personality of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, was not a UN Member State, was not a State party to the Statute of the Court, and was not a State party to the 1948 Convention on Genocide (which was open only to UN Member States or to non-member States invited by the General Assembly to sign or accede).

FRY based its Application for revision on Article 61 of the Court's Statute, which provided that an "application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence". FRY stated that its admission to the United Nations as a new Member on 1 November 2000 constituted "a new fact", which was "obviously unknown to both the Court and to [Yugoslavia] at the time of the 1996 Judgment". It added that "since membership in the United Nations, combined with the status of a party to the Statute [of the Court] and to the Genocide Convention represent the only basis on which jurisdiction over the FRY was assumed, and could be assumed, the disappearance of this assumption . . . [is] clearly of such a nature [as] to be a decisive factor".

FRY asserted that no alternative basis for the Court's jurisdiction existed or could have existed in the case. It further noted that, while on 8 March 2001 it submitted to the United Nations Secretary-General a notification seeking accession to the Genocide Convention, that instrument included a reservation to article IX. According to FRY, accession had no retroactive effect; even if it had such an effect, it could not encompass the compromissory clause in article IX of the Genocide Convention, because FRY never accepted article IX, and FRY's accession to the Convention did not encompass that article.

FRY requested the Court to declare that there was a "new fact of such a character as to lay the case open to revision under Article 61 of the Statute of the Court". It further asked the Court to suspend proceedings regarding the merits of the case until a decision on the Application was rendered.

Copies of the pleadings were made available to the Government of Croatia, at its request.

On 3 December 2001, within the time limit fixed by the President of the Court at a meeting with representatives of the Parties, Bosnia and Herzegovina filed written observations regarding the admissibility of FRY's Application, in accordance with Article 99, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court.

Land and maritime boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria (Cameroon v. Nigeria: Equatorial Guinea intervening)

Cameroon instituted proceedings against Nigeria in March 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1281] in a dispute concerning the question of sovereignty over the peninsula of Bakassi and requested the Court to determine the course of the maritime frontier between the two States insofar as that frontier had not already been established in 1975. The Application was amended by an Additional Application in June 1994. Cameroon's Memorial was filed in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1308]. In December 1995, within the time limit for the filing of its Counter-Memorial, Nigeria filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court and to the admissibility of the claims of Cameroon.

In 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1180], Cameroon presented a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Nigeria. Following hearings in March 1996, the Court made an Order indicating that neither Party should take any action of any kind, and that both should lend every assistance to a fact-finding mission to be sent by the United Nations Secretary-General [ibid., p. 146].

In June 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1187], the Court delivered its Judgment on the preliminary objections, by which it rejected seven of Nigeria's eight preliminary objections; declared that the eighth did not have, in the circumstances of the case, an exclusively preliminary character; and found that, on the basis of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the ICJ Statute, it had jurisdiction to adjudicate on the dispute and that the Application filed by Cameroon on 29 March 1994, as amended by the Additional Application of 6 June 1994, was admissible. The Court, having been informed of the views of the Parties, fixed 31 March 1999 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of Nigeria.

On 28 October 1998, Nigeria filed a request for an interpretation of the Court's Judgment on the preliminary objections [YUN 1998, p. 1187]. The request for interpretation formed a separate case, in which the Court delivered its Judgment in March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1205].

On 23 February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204], Nigeria requested an extension of the time limit for the deposit of its Counter-Memorial; in March [ibid.], the Court extended to 31 May 1999 the time limit for the filing of Nigeria's Counter-Memorial, which was filed within the time limit. The Counter-Memorial included counter-claims. At the end of each section dealing with a particular sector of the frontier, Nigeria asked the Court to declare that the incidents referred to "engage the international responsibility of Cameroon, with compensation in the form of damages, if not agreed between the parties, then to be awarded by the Court in a subsequent phase of the case". The seventh and final submission set out by Nigeria in its Counter-Memorial read as follows: "as to Nigeria's counter-claims as specified in . . . of this Counter-Memorial, [the Court is asked to] adjudicate and declare that Cameroon bears responsibility to Nigeria in respect of those claims, the amount of reparation due therefor, if not agreed between the parties within six months of the date of judgment, to be determined by the Court in a further judgment". In June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1204], the Court found that Nigeria's counter-claims were admissible and formed part of the proceedings; decided that Cameroon should submit a Reply and Nigeria a Rejoinder, relating to the claims of both Parties; and fixed the time limits for those pleadings at 4 April 2000 and 4 January 2001, respectively.

On 30 June 1999, Equatorial Guinea filed an Application for permission to intervene in the case, stating that the purpose was to protect its legal rights in the Gulf of Guinea and to inform the Court of Equatorial Guinea's legal rights and interests so that they might remain unaffected as the Court proceeded to address the question of the maritime boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria. Equatorial Guinea clarified that it did not seek to intervene in those aspects of the proceedings that related to the land boundary between Cameroon and Nigeria, or to become a Party to the case. It further stated that, although it would be open to a request to the Court from the three countries not only to determine the Cameroon-Nigeria maritime boundary but also to determine Equatorial Guinea's maritime boundary with those two States, Equatorial Guinea had made no such request and wished to continue to determine its maritime boundary with its neighbours by negotiation.

The Court fixed 16 August 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1205] as the time limit for the filing of written observations by Cameroon and Nigeria on Equatorial Guinea's Application, which were filed within the prescribed time limits.

By an Order of 21 October 1999, the Court unanimously decided that Equatorial Guinea could intervene in the case, and fixed the time limits for the filing of the written statement and the written observations at 4 April 2001 for the written statement of Equatorial Guinea and 4 July 2001 for the written observations of Cameroon and Nigeria. Equatorial Guinea's written statement was filed within the prescribed time limit.

By an Order of 20 February 2001, the Court, at the request of Cameroon and taking into account the agreement of the Parties, authorized the submission by Cameroon of an additional pleading, relating solely to the counter-claims submitted by Nigeria, and fixed 4 July 2001 as the time limit for its filing. The various pleadings, which were due to be lodged on 4 July 2001, were filed within the prescribed time limit.

Sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan (Indonesia/Malaysia)

On 2 November 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1189], Indonesia and Malaysia jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement between them, signed at Kuala Lumpur on 31 May 1997, which entered into force on 14 May 1998, in which they requested the Court "to determine on the basis of the treaties, agreements and any other evidence furnished by the Parties, whether sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan belongs to the Republic of Indonesia or to Malaysia". By an Order of 10 November 1998 [ibid.], the Court fixed 2 November 1999 and 2 March 2000, respectively, as the time limits for the filing by each of the Parties of a Memorial and a Counter-Memorial. The time limit for filing the Counter-Memorials was extended to 2 July 2000, by an Order of 14 September 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206].

The Memorials were filed within the time limit of 2 November 1999, as fixed by the Court's Order of 10 November 1998.

The Counter-Memorials were filed within the time limit of 2 August 2000, as extended by an Order of 11 May 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1213]. Replies were filed within the time limit of 2 March 2001, as fixed by the President in October 2000 [ibid.].

On 13 March 2001, the Philippines filed an Application for permission to intervene in the case in order "to preserve and safeguard [its Government's] historical and legal rights . . . arising from its claim to dominion and sovereignty over the territory of North Borneo, to the extent that these rights are affected, or may be affected, by a determination of the Court of the question of sovereignty over Pulau Ligitan and Pulau Sipadan"; "to inform the . . . Court of the nature and extent of [those] rights"; and "to appreciate more fully the indispensable role of the . . . Court in comprehensive conflict prevention". The Philippines made it clear that it did not seek to become a party to the case, and further maintained that "[its] Constitution . . . as well as its legislation, ha[d] laid claim to dominion and sovereignty over North Borneo". According to the Philippines, "[t]his . . . claim . . . ha[d] been the subject of diplomatic negotiations, official international correspondence, and peaceful discussions which ha[d] not been concluded. A decision by the Court, or that incidental part of a decision by the Court, which [would] lay down an appreciation of specific treaties, agreements and other evidence bearing on the legal status of North Borneo [would] inevitably and most assuredly affect the outstanding territorial claim of . . . the Philippines to North Borneo, as well as the direct legal right and interest of the Philippines to settle that claim by peaceful means".

In their written observations, which were filed within the time limit fixed by the Court of 2 May 2001, Indonesia and Malaysia objected to the Application for permission to intervene submitted by the Philippines. Indonesia, among other things, stated that the Application should be rejected as untimely and that the Philippines had not demonstrated that it possessed an interest of a legal nature that might be affected by a decision of the Court. Malaysia stated that the Philippines had no interest of a legal nature in the dispute, and that its request had no proper object.

Pursuant to Article 84, paragraph 2, of its Rules, the Court held public sittings on 25, 26, 28 and 29 June 2001 in order to hear the arguments of the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia before deciding whether the Application for permission to intervene should be granted. Meanwhile, following the resignation of Mohamed Shahabuddeen, Indonesia chose Thomas Franck to sit as judge ad hoc.

At a public sitting on 23 October 2001, the Court delivered its Judgment on the Application of the Philippines to intervene. By 14 votes to 1, the Court found that the Application of the Philippines for permission to intervene in the proceedings could not be granted.

Judge Oda appended a dissenting opinion to the Judgment; Judge Koroma, a separate opinion; and Judges Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans, declarations. Judges ad hoc Weeramantry and Franck appended separate opinions to the Judgment.

Ahmadou Sadio Diallo
(Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo)

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1190], Guinea instituted proceedings against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) by an "Application with a view to diplomatic protection", in which it requested the Court to condemn the DRC for the grave breaches of international law perpetrated upon the person of a Guinean national, Ahmadou Sadio Diallo.

According to Guinea, Mr. Diallo, a businessman who had been a resident of the DRC for 32 years, was "unlawfully imprisoned by the authorities of that State" for two and a half months, "divested from his important investments, companies, bank accounts, movable and immovable properties, then expelled". The expulsion took place on 2 February 1996, as a result of his attempts to recover sums owed to him by the DRC (especially by Gécamines, a State enterprise and mining monopoly) and by oil companies operating in that country (Zaire Shell, Zaire Mobil and Zaire Fina), by virtue of contracts concluded with businesses owned by him, namely Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire.

As a basis of the Court's jurisdiction, Guinea invoked its own declaration of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court of 11 November 1998 and the declaration of the DRC of 8 February 1989.

In November 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206], the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, fixed 11 September 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Guinea and 11 September 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the DRC.

By an Order of 8 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1213], the President of the Court, at Guinea's request and after the views of the other Party had been ascertained, extended to 23 March 2001 and 4 October 2002 the respective time limits for the Memorial and Counter-Memorial. The Memorial was filed within the extended time limit.

Vienna Convention on Consular Relations
(Germany v. United States)

On 2 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1206], Germany instituted proceedings against the United States in a dispute concerning alleged violations of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510].

In its Application, Germany based the jurisdiction of the Court on Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute and on article I of the Optional Protocol concerning the Compulsory Settlement of Disputes [ibid., p. 512] to the Vienna Convention. Germany stated that in 1982 the authorities of Arizona (United States) detained two German nationals, Karl and Walter LaGrand; that the individuals were tried and sentenced to death without having been informed, as was required under article 36, subparagraph 1 (b), of the Vienna Convention, of their rights under that provision (which required the competent authorities of a State party to advise, without delay, a national of another State party whom such authorities arrested or detained of the national's right to consular assistance). Germany also alleged that the failure to provide the required notification precluded it from protecting its nationals' interests in the United States, as provided for by the 1963 Convention, at both the trial and the appeal levels in United States courts.

The State Attorney admitted during proceedings before the Arizona Mercy Committee on 23 February 1999 that, contrary to a previous contention, the authorities of the State of Arizona had been aware since 1982 that the two detainees were German nationals. Germany further stated that the LaGrands, finally with the assistance of German consular officers, did claim violations of the Vienna Convention before the Federal District Court (the federal court of first instance). In addition, it claimed that the Court, applying the municipal law doctrine of "procedural default", decided that, because the individuals in question had not asserted their rights under the Vienna Convention in the previous legal proceedings at the state level, they could not assert them in the federal habeas corpus proceedings; and the intermediate federal appellate court, the last means of legal recourse in the United States available to them, had affirmed that decision.

Germany asked ICJ to adjudge and declare that: the United States, in arresting, detaining, trying, convicting and sentencing the LaGrands, had violated its international legal obligations to Germany, as provided by articles 5 and 36 of the Vienna Convention; Germany was therefore entitled to reparation; the United States was under an international legal obligation not to apply the doctrine of "procedural default", or any other doctrine of its internal law, so as to preclude the exercise of the rights accorded under the Vienna Convention; and the United States was under an international obligation to carry out in conformity with the foregoing international legal obligations any future detention of or criminal proceedings against the LaGrands or any other

German national in its territory. The foregoing international legal obligations held that: any criminal liability imposed on the LaGrands in violation of international legal obligations was void, and should be recognized as void by the United States legal authorities; the United States should provide reparation, in the form of compensation and satisfaction, for the execution of Karl LaGrand on 24 February 1999; the United States should restore the status quo ante in the case of Walter LaGrand, which meant re-establishing the situation that existed before the detention of, proceedings against and conviction and sentencing of Walter LaGrand, whose execution had been set for 3 March; and the United States should provide Germany a guarantee of the non-repetition of the illegal acts.

On 2 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207], Germany also submitted an urgent request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to indicate that "the United States should take all measures at its disposal to ensure that Walter LaGrand is not executed pending the final decision in these proceedings, and should inform the Court of all the measures which it has taken in implementation of that Order"; it asked the Court, moreover, to consider its request as a matter of the greatest urgency "in view of the extreme gravity and immediacy of the threat of execution of a German citizen".

By a letter of the same date, the Vice-President of the Court drew the attention of the United States Government "to the need to act in such a way as to enable any Order the Court will make on the request for provisional measures to have its appropriate effects".

At a public sitting on 3 March 1999, the Court rendered its Order on the request for the indication of provisional measures by which it indicated that: the United States should take all measures at its disposal to ensure that Walter LaGrand was not executed pending the final decision in the proceedings, and should inform the Court of all the measures that it had taken in implementation of the Order; and the United States should transmit the Order to the Governor of the State of Arizona. It decided that, until the Court had given its final decision, it would remain seized of the matters which formed the subject of the Order. Walter LaGrand was executed later that day.

Judge Oda appended a declaration to the Order and President Schwebel a separate opinion.

By an Order of 5 March 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207], the Court, taking into account the views of the Parties, fixed 16 September 1999 and 27 March 2000 as the time limits for the filing of the Memorial of Germany and the Counter-Memorial of the United States, respectively. The Memorial was filed within the prescribed time limit.

Following oral proceedings held in November 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1215], Germany requested the Court, in four submissions, to adjudge and declare that the United States had violated its international legal obligations to Germany (submissions 1 and 2); that the United States had violated its international legal obligations to comply with the Court's Order of 3 March 1999 (submission 3); and that the United States should assure Germany that it would not repeat the unlawful acts (submission 4). The United States asked the Court to adjudge and declare that there was a breach of the United States obligation to Germany under the Vienna Convention; that it had apologized to Germany for the breach and was taking substantial measures to prevent any recurrence; and that all other claims and submissions of Germany were dismissed. The Court held deliberations on its Judgment in 2000.

At a public sitting on 27 June 2001, the Court delivered its Judgment. By 14 votes to 1, the Court found that it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article I of the 1963 Optional Protocol concerning the Compulsory Settlement of Disputes, to entertain the Application filed by Germany on 2 March 1999. The Court found all four of Germany's submissions admissible: the first submission by 13 votes to 2; the second by 14 to 1; the third by 12 to 3; and the fourth by 14 to 1. By 14 votes to 1, the Court found that, by not informing the LaGrands without delay, following their arrest, of their rights under the 1963 Convention, and thereby depriving Germany of the possibility to render assistance to them, the United States breached its obligations to Germany and to the LaGrand brothers under the Convention's article 36, paragraph 1. The Court, by 14 votes to 1, found that, by not permitting the review and reconsideration, in the light of the rights set forth in the 1963 Convention, of the convictions and sentences of the LaGrand brothers after the violations referred to above had been established, the United States breached its obligation to Germany and to the LaGrand brothers under article 36, paragraph 2, of the Convention. Furthermore, by 13 votes to 2, the Court found that, by failing to take all measures at its disposal to ensure that Walter LaGrand was not executed pending ICJ's final decision in the case, the United States breached the obligation incumbent upon it under the Order indicating provisional measures issued by the Court on 3 March 1999. Unanimously, the Court took note of the United States commitment to ensure implementation of the specific measures adopted in performance of its obligations under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention; and found that the commitment must be regarded as meeting Germany's request for a general assurance of non-repetition. By 14 votes to 1, the Court found that should German nationals nonetheless be sentenced to severe penalties, without their rights under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention having been respected, the United States, by means of its own choosing, should allow the review and reconsideration of the conviction and sentence by taking account of the violation of the rights set forth in that Convention.

President Guillaume appended a declaration to the Judgment; Vice-President Shi, a separate opinion; Judge Oda, a dissenting opinion; Judges Koroma and Parra-Aranguren, separate opinions; and Judge Buergethal, a dissenting opinion.

Use of force (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany), (Yugoslavia v. Italy), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands), (Yugoslavia v. Portugal), (Yugoslavia v. Spain), (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom) and (Yugoslavia v. United States)

FRY instituted proceedings on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207] against Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States for alleged violation of the obligation not to use force. In the cases against Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom, FRY invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute and on article IX of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], and, in the cases against France, Germany, Italy and the United States, on article IX of the Convention and Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court.

In its Applications, FRY stated that the disputes involved "acts of the [respondent State concerned] by which it has violated the international obligation banning the use of force against another State, the obligation not to intervene in the internal affairs of another State, the obligation not to violate the sovereignty of another State, the obligation to protect the civilian population and civilian objects in wartime, the obligation to protect the environment, the obligation relating to free navigation on international rivers, the obligation regarding fundamental human rights and freedoms, the obligation not to use prohibited weapons, the obligation not to deliberately inflict conditions of life calculated to cause the physical destruction of a national group".

FRY requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the respondent State concerned had acted against it by taking part in the bombing of the territory of FRY, breaching its obligation not to use force against another State; by taking part in the training, arming, financing, equipping and supplying of terrorist groups, i.e., the Kosovo Liberation Army, breaching its obligation not to intervene in the affairs of another State; by taking part in attacks on civilian targets, breaching its obligation to spare the civilian population and civilian objects; by taking part in destroying or damaging monasteries and cultural monuments, breaching its obligation not to commit any act of hostility directed against historical monuments, works of art or places of worship that constituted people's cultural or spiritual heritage; by taking part in the use of cluster bombs, breaching its obligation not to use prohibited weapons, i.e., weapons calculated to cause unnecessary suffering; by taking part in the bombing of oil refineries and chemical plants, breaching its obligation not to cause considerable environmental damage; by taking part in the use of weapons containing depleted uranium, breaching its obligation not to use prohibited weapons and not to cause far-reaching health and environmental damage; by taking part in killing civilians, destroying enterprises, communications, health and cultural institutions, breaching its obligation to respect the rights to life, to work, to information and to health care, as well as other basic human rights; by taking part in destroying bridges on international rivers, breaching its obligation to respect freedom of navigation on international rivers; and by taking part in activities listed above, and in particular by causing enormous environmental damage and by using depleted uranium, breaching its obligation not to deliberately inflict on a national group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction, in whole or in part. In addition, the respondent State concerned was responsible for the violation of the above international obligations; was obliged to stop immediately the violation of the above obligations vis-à-vis FRY; and was obliged to provide compensation for the damage to FRY and to its citizens and juridical persons.

Also on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1208], FRY submitted, in each of the cases, a request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to indicate that "the [respondent State concerned] shall cease immediately its acts of use of force and shall refrain from any act of threat or use of force" against FRY. Hearings on the requests for the indication of provisional measures were held between 10 and 12 May 1999.

At a public sitting on 2 June 1999, the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, read the Orders, by which, in the cases (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany), (Yugoslavia v. Italy), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands), (Yugoslavia v. Portugal) and (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom), the Court rejected the requests for the indication of provisional measures and reserved the subsequent procedure for further decision. In the cases of (Yugoslavia v. Spain) and (Yugoslavia v. United States of America), the Court—having found that it manifestly lacked jurisdiction to entertain FRY's Application; that it could not therefore indicate any provisional measure whatsoever in order to protect the rights invoked therein; and that, within a system of consensual jurisdiction, to maintain on the General List a case upon which it appeared certain that the Court would not be able to adjudicate on the merits would most assuredly not contribute to the sound administration of justice—rejected FRY's requests for the indication of provisional measures and ordered that those cases be removed from the List.

In each of the cases (Yugoslavia v. Belgium), (Yugoslavia v. Canada), (Yugoslavia v. Netherlands) and (Yugoslavia v. Portugal), Judge Koroma appended a declaration to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans appended separate opinions; and Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, Judges Shi and Vereshchetin and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended dissenting opinions.

In each of the cases (Yugoslavia v. France), (Yugoslavia v. Germany) and (Yugoslavia v. Italy), Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, and Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda and Parra-Aranguren appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. Spain), Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; and Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended separate opinions.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. United Kingdom), Vice-President Weeramantry, Acting President, and Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda, Higgins, Parra-Aranguren and Kooijmans appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

In the case (Yugoslavia v. United States of America), Judges Shi, Koroma and Vereshchetin appended declarations to the Order of the Court; Judges Oda and Parra-Aranguren appended separate opinions; and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended a dissenting opinion.

By Orders of 30 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1209], the Court, having ascertained the views of the Parties, fixed the time limits for the filing of the written pleadings in each of the eight cases maintained on the List as at 5 January 2000 for the Memorial of FRY and 5 July 2000 for the Counter-Memorial of the respondent State concerned.

On 5 July 2000 [YUN 2000, 1217], within the time limit for filing its Counter-Memorial, each of the respondent States in the eight cases maintained on the Court's List raised preliminary objections of lack of jurisdiction and admissibility. By virtue of Article 79, paragraph 3, of the Rules of Court, the proceedings on the merits were suspended; proceedings then had to be organized for the consideration of the preliminary objections in accordance with the Article's provisions.

By Orders of 8 September 2000 [ibid.], the Vice-President of the Court, Acting President, fixed 5 April 2001 as the time for filing, in each of the cases, of a written statement by FRY on the preliminary objections raised by the respondent State concerned. By an order of 21 February 2001, the Court, in each of the cases, taking into account the agreement of the Parties and the circumstances of the case, extended the time limit to 5 April 2002.

Armed activities on the territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Burundi), (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) and (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda)

The DRC instituted proceedings against Burundi, Uganda and Rwanda on 23 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1209] for acts of armed aggression perpetrated in flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations and the Charter of the Organization of African Unity.

In its Applications, the DRC contended that "such armed aggression . . . involved inter alia violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the [DRC], violations of international humanitarian law and massive human rights violations". The DRC sought the cessation of the aggression against it; reparation for acts of intentional destruction and looting; and restitution of national property and resources appropriated for the benefit of the respective respondent States.

In the cases against Burundi and Rwanda, the DRC invoked as bases for the jurisdiction of the Court Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute, which provided that the jurisdiction of the Court comprised all cases which the parties referred to it and all matters specially provided for in the UN Charter or in treaties and conventions in force; the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]; the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation [YUN 1971, p. 739]; and Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court, which contemplated the situation where a State filed an application against another State that had not accepted the jurisdiction of the Court. In the case against Uganda, the DRC based the jurisdiction on Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute.

The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: the respondent State concerned was guilty of an act of aggression as defined by article 1 of Assembly resolution 3314(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 847] and by the jurisprudence of the Court, contrary to Article 2, paragraph 4, of the UN Charter; the respondent State concerned committed repeated violations of the Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims of 1949 and the two Additional Protocols of 1977 [YUN 1977, p. 706], in flagrant disregard of the elementary rules of international humanitarian law in conflict zones, and also was guilty of massive human rights violations in defiance of the most basic customary law; the respondent State concerned, by taking forcible possession of the Inga hydroelectric dam and deliberately and regularly causing massive electrical power cuts, in violation of the provisions of article 56 of Additional Protocol I of 1977, was responsible for very heavy loss of life in the city of Kinshasa (5 million inhabitants) and the surrounding area; and the respondent State concerned had violated the Convention on International Civil Aviation signed in Chicago on 7 December 1944, the 1970 Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft and the 1971 Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation by shooting down, on 9 October 1998 at Kindu, a Boeing 727, the property of Congo Airlines, thereby killing 40 civilians.

The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: all armed forces of the respondent State concerned participating in acts of aggression should forthwith vacate its territory; the respondent State concerned should secure the immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Congolese territory of its nationals, both natural and legal persons; and the DRC was entitled to compensation from the respondent State concerned in respect of all acts of looting, destruction, removal of property and persons and other unlawful acts attributable to the respondent State concerned, in respect of which the DRC reserved the right to determine at a later date the precise amount of the damage suffered, in addition to its claim for the restitution of all property removed.

In each of the cases against Burundi and Rwanda, the Court, by an Order of 21 October 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], taking into account the agreement of the Parties, decided that the written proceedings should first address the questions of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application and of its admissibility, and fixed 21 April 2000 as the time limit for filing Memorials on those questions by Burundi and Rwanda, and 23 October 2000 for filing a Counter-Memorial by the DRC.

The DRC, by letters dated 15 January 2001, notified the Court that it wished to discontinue the proceedings against Burundi and Rwanda and stated that it "reserve[d] the right to invoke subsequently new grounds of jurisdiction of the Court". In each of the two cases, the respondent Party informed the Court that it concurred in the DRC's discontinuance. The President of the Court, in Orders of 30 January 2001, placed the discontinuance by the DRC on record and ordered the removal of the case from the List.

In the case against Uganda, the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties in 1999 [ibid.], fixed, by an Order of 21 October, 21 July 2000 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by the DRC and 21 April 2001 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Uganda. The Memorial of the DRC was filed within the prescribed time limit.

On 19 June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1218], the DRC requested the Court to indicate provisional measures requiring, among other things, the withdrawal of Uganda's army from Kisangani and the cessation of military and other activities by Uganda within the territory of the DRC. Public sittings to hear the oral observations of the Parties on the request for the indication of provisional measures were held on 26 and 28 June 2000.

On 1 July 2000 [ibid.], the Court rendered its Order on the DRC's request for provisional measures, which stated that both Parties must, forthwith, prevent and refrain from any action, particularly armed action, which might prejudice the rights of the other Party in respect of whatever judgment the Court might render, or which might aggravate or extend the dispute before the Court or make it more difficult to resolve; both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to comply with all their obligations under international law; and both Parties must, forthwith, take measures to ensure full respect within the zone of conflict for fundamental human rights and for the applicable provisions of humanitarian law. Judges Oda and Koroma appended declarations to the Order.

The DRC chose Joe Verhoeven and Uganda selected James L. Kateka to sit as judges ad hoc.

Uganda filed its Counter-Memorial, which contained counter-claims, within the time limit set by the Court's Order of 21 October 1999 (see p. 1191).

By an Order of 29 November 2001, the Court found that two of the counter-claims submitted by Uganda against the DRC were "admissible as such and [formed] part of the current proceedings", but that the third was not. In view of those conclusions, the Court considered it necessary for the DRC to file a Reply and Uganda a Rejoinder, addressing the claims of both Parties, and fixed 29 May 2002 as the time limit for the filing of the Reply and 29 November 2002 for the Rejoinder. Further, in order to ensure strict equality between the Parties, the Court reserved the right of the DRC to present its views in writing a second time on the Uganda counter-claims, in an additional pleading to be the subject of a subsequent Order. Judge ad hoc Verhoeven appended a declaration to the Order.

Application of the genocide convention (Croatia v. Yugoslavia)

Croatia instituted proceedings against FRY on 2 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210] for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], said to have been committed between 1991 and 1995.

In its Application, Croatia contended that by "directly controlling the activity of its armed forces, intelligence agents, and various paramilitary detachments, on the territory of . . . Croatia, in the Knin region, eastern and western Slovenia, and Dalmatia, [Yugoslavia] is liable [for] the 'ethnic cleansing' of Croatian citizens from these areas . . . and is required to provide reparation for the resulting damage". It further alleged that, "by directing, encouraging, and urging Croatian citizens of Serb ethnicity in the Knin region to evacuate the area in 1995, as . . . Croatia reasserted its legitimate governmental authority . . . [Yugoslavia] engaged in conduct amounting to a second round of 'ethnic cleansing'". Croatia invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute and on article IX of the Convention.

Croatia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that FRY breached its legal obligations towards Croatia under articles I, II (a, b, c, d), III (a, b, c, d, e), IV and V of the 1948 Convention; and that FRY had an obligation to pay to Croatia, in its own right and as parens patriae for its citizens, reparations for damages to persons and property, as well as to the Croatian economy and environment caused by the foregoing violations of international law, in a sum to be determined by the Court. Croatia reserved the right to introduce to the Court at a future date a precise evaluation of the damages.

By an Order of 14 September 1999, the Court took account of an agreement of the Parties expressed on 13 September and fixed 14 March 2000 as the time limit for the filing of the Memorial of Croatia and 14 September 2000 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of FRY.

In 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219], at Croatia's request, the President of the Court extended the time limits twice: in March, to 14 September 2000 for the Memorial of Croatia and 14 September 2001 for the Counter-Memorial of FRY, and again in June, to 14 March 2001 for the Memorial and to 16 September 2002 for the Counter-Memorial. The Memorial of Croatia was filed within the time limit thus extended. Croatia chose Budislav Vukas to sit as judge ad hoc.

Maritime delimitation (Nicaragua v. Honduras)

On 8 December 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Honduras in respect of a dispute concerning the delimitation of the maritime zones appertaining to each of those States in the Caribbean Sea. In its Application, Nicaragua stated that it had maintained for decades the position that its maritime Caribbean border with Honduras had not been determined, while the position of Honduras allegedly was that a delimitation line was fixed by the King of Spain in an Arbitral Award of 23 December 1906, which was found valid and binding by ICJ on 18 November 1960 [YUN 1960, p. 536]. According to Nicaragua, the position adopted by Honduras had brought repeated confrontations and mutual capture of vessels of both nations in and around the general border area, and diplomatic negotiations had failed. Nicaragua founded jurisdiction of the Court on declarations under Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Court's Statute, by which both States accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, and also article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (officially known as the "Pact of Bogotá"), signed on 30 April 1948, to which both Nicaragua and Honduras were parties.

Nicaragua requested the Court to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between areas of territorial sea, continental shelf and exclusive economic zone appertaining to Nicaragua and Honduras.

By an Order of 21 March 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219], the Court, taking into account the agreement of the Parties, fixed 21 March 2001 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and 21 March 2002 for the filing of the Counter-Memorial by Honduras. The Memorial was filed within the prescribed time limit.

Copies of the pleadings and annexed documents were made available to Colombia, at its request.

Arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Belgium)

In October 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219], the DRC instituted proceedings against Belgium concerning an international arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000 by a Belgian examining judge against the DRC's Acting Minister for Foreign Affairs, seeking his detention and subsequent extradition to Belgium for alleged crimes constituting grave violations of international humanitarian law. The warrant was transmitted to all States.

In its Application [ibid.], the DRC noted that the warrant characterized the alleged facts as crimes of international law committed by action or omission against persons or property protected by the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and Additional Protocols I and II to those Conventions [YUN 1977, p. 706], and as crimes against humanity, and cited the allegedly applicable Belgian Law of 16 June 1993 as amended by the Law of 10 February 1999 pertaining to the punishment of grave violations of international humanitarian law. The DRC maintained that certain articles of the Belgian Law and the warrant itself constituted "a violation of the principle whereby a State may not exercise its authority on territory of another State and the principle of sovereign equality among all members of the United Nations", as declared in Article 2, paragraph 1, of the UN Charter, and that they contravened international law, insofar as they claimed to derogate from the diplomatic immunity of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of a sovereign State, "deriving from article 41, paragraph 2, of the Vienna Convention of 18 April 1961 on Diplomatic Relations" [YUN 1961, p. 512]. Accordingly, the DRC asked the Court to declare that Belgium should annul the warrant, and filed a request for the indication of a provisional measure seeking to have the warrant withdrawn forthwith.

Following hearings on the request for an indication of provisional measures in November 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1220], the DRC asked the Court to order Belgium to comply with international law; to cease and desist from any conduct that might exacerbate the dispute with the DRC; and to discharge the warrant issued against its acting Foreign Minister. Belgium asked the Court to refuse the DRC's request for an indication of provisional measures and to remove the case from its List.

By an Order of 8 December 2000 [ibid.], the Court unanimously rejected Belgium's request to remove the case from the List and found that the circumstances did not require it to exercise its power to indicate provisional measures. Judges Oda and Ranjeva appended declarations to the Order; Judges Koroma and Parra-Aranguren, separate opinions; Judge Rezek and Judge ad hoc Bula-Bula, dissenting opinions; and Judge ad hoc Van den Wijngaert, a declaration.

By an Order of 13 December 2000 [ibid.], the President of the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties, fixed 15 March 2001 and 31 May as the time limits for the filing of the Memorial of the DRC and the Counter-Memorial of Belgium, respectively. Subsequently, the Court extended those time limits to 17 April 2001 and 31 July 2001, respectively, and further extended them to 17 May 2001 and 17 September 2001, respectively. The DRC's Memorial was filed within the time limit thus extended.

By an Order of 27 June 2001, the Court rejected a request by Belgium seeking to derogate from the agreed procedure in the case and extended to 28 September 2001 the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Belgium, addressing both questions of jurisdiction and admissibility and the merits of the dispute. It further fixed 15 October 2001 as the date for the opening of the hearings. The Counter-Memorial was filed within the prescribed time limit.

At the conclusion of public sittings to hear the oral arguments, held from 15 to 19 October 2001, the DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that by issuing and internationally circulating the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000, Belgium violated, in regard to the DRC, the rule of customary international law concerning the absolute inviolability and immunity from criminal process of incumbent foreign ministers and, in doing so, violated the principle of sovereign equality among States; a formal finding by the Court of the unlawfulness of that act constituted an appropriate form of satisfaction; the violations of international law underlying the issue and international circulation of the arrest warrant precluded any State, including Belgium, from executing it; and Belgium should be required to recall and cancel the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and to inform the foreign authorities to whom the warrant was circulated that Belgium renounced its request for cooperation in the warrant's execution. Belgium requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court lacked jurisdiction in the case and/or that the Application by the DRC against Belgium was inadmissible. If the Court concluded that it did have jurisdiction and the DRC's Application was admissible, Belgium requested the Court to reject the DRC's submissions on the merits of the case and to dismiss the Application.

The Court deliberated on a Judgment.

Certain property (Liechtenstein v. Germany)

On 1 June 2001, Liechtenstein filed an Application instituting proceedings against Germany concerning Germany's decisions to treat certain property of Liechtenstein nationals as German assets, seized for the purposes of reparation or restitution as a consequence of the Second World War, without ensuring any compensation.

In the Application, Liechtenstein alleged that in 1945, during the Second World War, Czechoslovakia—an allied country and a belligerent against Germany—through a series of decrees (the Beneš decrees) seized German and Hungarian property located on its territory. Czechoslovakia applied those decrees not only to German and Hungarian nationals but also to other persons allegedly of German or Hungarian origin or ethnicity. For that purpose, it treated the nationals of Liechtenstein as German nationals. The property of the Liechtenstein nationals seized under the decrees (the "Liechtenstein property") was never returned to its owners, nor had compensation been offered or paid. The application of the Beneš decrees to the Liechtenstein property remained unresolved between Liechtenstein and Czechoslovakia until the dissolution of the latter, and it continued to be an unresolved issue between Liechtenstein and the Czech Republic.

Liechtenstein further referred to the Convention on the Settlement of Matters arising out of the War and the Occupation, signed in Bonn on 26 May 1952 ("the Settlement Convention"), which stated that Germany agreed, among other things, that it would "in the future raise no objections against the measures which have been, or will be, carried out with regard to German external assets or other property, seized for the purpose of reparation or restitution, or as a result of the state of war". The Application alleged that the Settlement Convention was only concerned with German property, i.e., property of the German State or of its nationals, and that under international law, having regard to Liechtenstein's neutrality and the absence of any links between Liechtenstein and the conduct of the war by Germany, any Liechtenstein property that might have been affected by measures of an Allied Power could not be considered as "seized for the purpose of reparation or restitution, or as a result of the state of war". Liechtenstein maintained that subsequent to the conclusion of the Settlement Convention, it was accordingly understood between Germany and itself that the Liechtenstein property did not fall within the scope of the Convention. As a corollary, Germany maintained the position that property falling outside the scope of the Convention was unlawfully seized, and that the German courts were not barred from considering claims affecting such property.

Following a Federal Constitutional Court ruling of Germany, pronounced in 1998, the property was treated as German external assets and could be used for payment of Germany's war-reparation debts. The Application of Liechtenstein claimed that the decision of the Federal Constitutional Court was unappealable, was attributable to Germany as a matter of international law, and was binding upon Germany.

Liechtenstein stated that it protested to Germany that the latter was treating as German assets that which belonged to Liechtenstein nationals. It further stated that Germany rejected the protest and that in subsequent consultations it became clear that Germany adhered to the position that Liechtenstein assets as a whole were "seized for the purpose of reparation or restitution, or as a result of the state of war" within the meaning of the Settlement Convention, even though the decision of the Federal Constitutional Court only concerned a single item. According to the Application of Liechtenstein, in taking that position, Germany remained faithful to the decision of its highest court in the matter; at the same time, it ignored and undermined the rights of Liechtenstein and its nationals in respect of the Liechtenstein property. Liechtenstein claimed that by its conduct with respect to the Liechtenstein property, in and since 1998, Germany failed to respect the rights of Liechtenstein with respect to that property; and by its failure to make compensation for losses suffered by Liechtenstein and/or its nationals, Germany was in breach of international law. Liechtenstein requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Germany had incurred international legal responsibility and was bound to make appropriate reparation to Liechtenstein for the damage and prejudice suffered. Liechtenstein further requested that the nature and amount of such reparation should, in the absence of agreement between the Parties, be assessed and determined by the Court, if necessary, in a separate phase of the proceedings.

As a basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Liechtenstein invoked article 1 of the European Convention for the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes, signed at Strasbourg, France, on 29 April 1957.

By an Order of 28 June 2001, the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties, fixed 28 March 2002 and 27 December 2002, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Liechtenstein and of a Counter-Memorial by Germany.

Territorial and maritime dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

On 6 December 2001, Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia in respect of a dispute concerning "a group of related legal issues subsisting" between the two States "concerning title to territory and maritime delimitation".

In its Application, Nicaragua claimed that "the islands and keys of San Andres and Providencia pertain to those groups of islands and keys that in 1821 [date of independence from Spain] became part of the newly formed Federation of Central American States and, after the dissolution of the Federation in 1838, . . . came to be part of the sovereign territory of Nicaragua". It considered in this connection that the Barcenas-Esguerra Treaty of 24 March 1928 "lacks legal validity and consequently cannot provide a basis of Colombian title with respect to the Archipelago of San Andres". Nicaragua added that, in any case, the treaty was "not . . . a treaty of delimitation".

Nicaragua recalled that as early as 1948 its Constitution affirmed that the national territory included the continental platforms on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and, by decrees of 1958, it had made clear that the resources of the continental shelf belonged to it. Moreover, in 1965 it declared a national fishing zone of 200 nautical miles. Nicaragua went on to state that, by claiming sovereignty over the islands of Providencia and San Andres and keys, which, according to it, had a total "land area of 44 square kilometers and an overall coastal length that is under 20 kilometers, Colombia claims dominion over more than 50,000 square kilometers of maritime space that appertain to Nicaragua", representing "more than half" the maritime spaces of Nicaragua in the Caribbean Sea. It contended that the current situation was "seriously imperiling the livelihood of the Nicaraguan people, particularly those of the Caribbean coast that traditionally have had a great dependence on natural resources of the sea", and claimed that the Colombian navy had been intercepting and capturing a number of fishing vessels "in areas as close as 70 miles off the Nicaraguan coast", east of the 82 meridian. Nicaragua maintained that diplomatic negotiations had failed.

Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare, first, that Nicaragua had sovereignty over the islands of Providencia, San Andres and Santa Catalina and all the appurtenant islands and keys, and also over the Roncador, Serrana, Serranilla and Quitasueño keys (insofar as they were capable of appropriation); and, second, in the light of the determinations concerning title requested above, the Court was asked further to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between the areas of continental shelf and exclusive economic zone appertaining to Nicaragua and Colombia, in accordance with equitable principles and relevant circumstances recognized by general international law as applicable to such a delimitation of a single maritime boundary.

Nicaragua reserved the right to claim compensation for elements of unjust enrichment consequent upon Colombian possession of the islands of San Andres and Providencia, as well as the keys and maritime spaces up to the 82 meridian, in the absence of lawful title. It also reserved the right to claim compensation for interference with fishing vessels of Nicaraguan nationality or vessels licensed by Nicaragua.

As a basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Nicaragua invoked article XXXI of the American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (officially known as the "Pact of Bogotá"), signed on 30 April 1948, to which both Colombia and Nicaragua were parties. Nicaragua also referred to the declarations under Article 36 of the Statute of the Court, by which Nicaragua and Colombia accepted the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court, in 1929 and 1937, respectively.

Other questions

Composition of the Court

On 21 June [S/2001/615], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that Judge Mohammed Bedjaoui (Algeria), a member and former President of the Court, whose term was due to expire on 5 February 2006, intended to resign effective 30 September 2001. The Secretary-General drew the Council's attention to Article 14 of the Statute of the Court regarding fixing a date for the election to fill the vacancy. He noted that the date of the election was to be fixed by the Council and suggested that it might wish to consider the question at an early meeting.

Also in June [A/56/42], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the vacancy.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 5 July [meeting 4345], the Security Council adopted resolution 1361 (2001) without vote. The draft [S/2001/663] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the resignation of Judge Mohammed Bedjaoui, taking effect on 30 September 2001,

Noting further that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Mohammed Bedjaoui will thus occur and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council,

Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 12 October 2001 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session.

By notes of 17 September [A/56/373-S/2001/882], the Secretary-General submitted a list of three candidates nominated by national groups of States parties to the ICJ Statute to fill the vacancy left by Judge Bedjaoui and their curricula vitae [A/56/374-S/2001/883]. A 19 September memorandum by the Secretary-General [A/56/372-S/2001/881] provided information on the vacancy left by Judge Bedjaoui and ICJ's composition, and described the procedure in the General Assembly and the Security Council for the election of a new Member of the Court. On 6 October [A/56/373/Add.1-S/2001/882/Add.1], one of the candidates withdrew his candidature, and on 9 October [A/56/374/Corr.2-S/2001/883/Corr.2], the Secretary-General issued a corrigendum to the curricula vitae.

On 12 October, the Security Council [S/PV.4389] and the General Assembly [A/56/PV.24] elected, by secret ballot, Nabil Elaraby (Egypt) as a Member of the Court for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Bedjaoui (see p. 1463).

Rules of Court

Practice Directions

As from October 2001, the Court adopted certain Practice Directions for use by the States appearing before it. The Practice Directions, the result of an ongoing review of the Court's working methods to ensure that cases were adjudicated as expeditiously as possible, involved no alteration to the Rules of Court, but were additional thereto.

Amendments

Amendments to Article 79 of the Rules of Court, relating to preliminary objections, and Article 80 of the Rules, relating to counterclaims, entered into force on 1 February 2001. The amendments aimed to shorten the duration of proceedings. The Rules, which were adopted on 14 April 1978 [YUN 1978, p. 944], would continue to apply to all cases submitted to the Court prior to 1 February 2001, and to all phases of those cases.

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In October [A/56/456], the Secretary-General updated the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ since the submission of his previous report in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 986]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to ICJ by way of a Special Agreement or the execution of a judgment resulting from such an Agreement.

In 1997, an award was made to two developing countries that had applied for assistance in 1996 and 1997 in connection with their submission to the Court of a boundary dispute with a neighbouring State. In both cases, the Secretary-General only approved limited financial assistance in order to strike a balance between encouraging recourse to the Court and the need to accommodate future applications.

During the period under review (1992-2001), 18 States had contributed to the Fund. As at 30 June, the total balance of the Fund, excluding awards already paid, amounted to $1,602,734.

JIU report

On 13 March [A/55/834], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on its review of management and administration in the ICJ Registry. JIU concluded that, in addition to a shortage of staff and funds, the Court was experiencing institutional and administrative problems in the Registry, which needed attention. The Registry's personnel practices and procedures also needed to be examined.

JIU made a series of recommendations to the Court, among them, including in its 2002-2003 budget three posts for research assistants; reducing the Registrar's term of office to three years, with renewal subject to performance approved by the Court; amending its Rules regarding the appointment and term of office of the Deputy Registrar; increasing staff resources for translation; establishing more consistent, fair and transparent personnel management by aligning its practices and procedures with the staff rules and regulations of the UN Secretariat; and increasing cooperation and coordination with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (see p. 1198) and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 495).

ICJ's comments on the JIU report were annexed to a 14 March note of the Secretary-General [A/55/834/Add.1]. The Court accepted the greater part of JIU's analysis concerning the increase in the Court's workload and the inadequacy of the resources available to it, and stated that it would make proposals on those matters to the General Assembly in connection with the 2002-2003 budget. The Court did not see fit to adopt the recommendations related to shortening the terms of office of the Registrar and the Deputy Registrar. With regard to administrative practices, the Court stated that it was unable to accept all of the report's recommendations, but it was involved in a determined, ongoing effort to improve, rationalize and update the practices and procedures in question.

Also annexed to the note were the Secretary-General's comments on issues related to budgetary matters, including the establishment of posts to provide research assistance for the judges, increased staff resources for translation and the establishment of a Senior Administrative/Personnel Officer.

The comments and observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the report were contained in its August report on the 2002-2003 programme budget [A/56/7].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 June [meeting 103], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/56/982], adopted resolution 55/257 without vote [agenda items 116 & 117].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on the review of management and administration in the Registry of the International Court of Justice

The General Assembly,

Recalling section V of its resolution 55/238 of 23 December 2000,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Review of management and administration in the Registry of the International Court of Justice" and the comments of the International Court of Justice and those of the Secretary-General thereon,

1. Notes that the problems in the management of the Registry of the International Court of Justice referred to in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit have been, to a large extent, resolved;

2. Takes note of recommendations 1 and 7 of the Unit concerning, respectively, research assistants and the post of a senior Administrative/Personnel Officer, and requests the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to consider the matter and make such recommendations as it deems appropriate in the context of its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, for decision by the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

3. Emphasizes the importance of consistent, fair and transparent management of personnel and the need for the introduction of an effective performance appraisal system for the staff of the Court, referred to in paragraph 85 of the report of the Unit;

4. Invites the Court to review the need to amend its own staff rules to enable the introduction and implementation of the performance appraisal system;

5. Decides to keep the matter under review at its fifty-sixth session.

Chapter II

International tribunals

In 2001, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) increased its judicial activity and, for the first time, entered a conviction for genocide. The Tribunal implemented reforms to fulfil its mandate more expeditiously and, in that regard, the General Assembly, in June, elected 27 ad litem judges, who would serve with the permanent judges on a case-by-case basis. Permanent judges were elected for a four-year term commencing on 17 November.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) was actively engaged in conducting trials. It also adopted measures either to remedy perceived problems or to increase its efficiency. The Trial Chambers delivered one judgement and the Appeals Chamber gave final judgement in three cases.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In an effort to increase trial capacity to expedite the Tribunal's cases, the General Assembly, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1329 (2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1228], elected 27 ad litem judges in June (see p. 1203). The ad litem judges would serve with the permanent judges on a case-by-case basis; several of them were assigned to specific cases during the year. Further reforms were initiated to improve the organization, management methods and proceedings of the Appeals Chamber.

In November [meeting 4429], the ICTY President and the Chief Prosecutor proposed to the Security Council that the Tribunal should focus on prosecuting crimes that constituted the most serious breaches of international public law and order, and, under certain conditions, refer cases of lesser importance to the courts of the States created out of the former Yugoslavia.

In other action, the Tribunal authorized Senior Legal Officers to manage certain aspects of the pre-trial phase to enable judges to devote more time to the merits of the cases. Several rules of procedure and evidence were amended to allow judges to set the number of witnesses the parties called to testify, determine the length of the cases and take measures required to preclude interlocutory appeals from interrupting the trials. In the same vein, a Coordination Council and a Management Committee ensured that the three organs of ICTY—the Chambers, the Office of the Prosecutor and the Registry—coordinated more closely in setting judicial priorities.

In 2001, the activities of ICTY, established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2000 to 31 July 2001 [A/56/352-S/2001/865] and 1 August 2001 to 31 July 2002 [A/57/379-S/2002/985]. On 26 November, the Assembly took note of the 2000/01 report (decision 56/408). On 24 December, it decided that the item on the report would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

The Chambers

The judicial activity of the three Trial Chambers and the Appeals Chamber of the Tribunal included trial and appeals proceedings, proceedings pertaining to the primacy of the Tribunal and cases of contempt of the Tribunal.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1329(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1228], two ICTR judges were assigned to the Appeals Chamber.

New trials and cases

Biljana Plavsic surrendered voluntarily to the Tribunal in January. On 23 February, the Trial Chamber joined her case with that of Momcilo Krajisnik, who pleaded not guilty in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1221]; on 9 March, the prosecution filed a consolidated indictment against the two co-accused. They were charged with genocide, crimes against humanity, violations of the laws and customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions for the protection of war victims of 12 August 1949 (Geneva Conventions). Both were alleged to have been high-ranking members of the Serbian Democratic Party and, along with Radovan Karadzic—indicted in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1314] and not yet arrested—and others, were accused of committing those crimes in order to secure control of areas of Bosnia and Herzegovina that had been proclaimed as belonging to the Serb part of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Ms. Plavsic filed a motion for provisional release, which was withdrawn in March following a change of counsel. On 5 September, the Trial Chamber ordered her provisional release from detention under strict conditions.

Blagoje Simic, who surrendered voluntarily to the Tribunal on 12 March, entered a plea of not guilty on 15 March. He was the last of the five accused in the case of Simic and Others [YUN 2000, p. 1223] to come before the Tribunal. The trial began on 10 September.

Dr. Milomir Stakic, whose initial indictment in 1997 had been kept confidential until it was unsealed on 23 March, was transferred to the Tribunal's Detention Unit on the same day. At his initial appearance on 28 March, he pleaded not guilty to the charge of genocide committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the only count in the initial indictment. The Prosecutor filed an amended indictment twice during the year. On 5 October, Dr. Stakic pleaded not guilty to 14 counts in the second amended indictment. Following objections by the defence to the form of that indictment, it was reorganized and filed on 27 November; it included the charges of genocide or complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity (extermination, murder, persecution, torture, inhumane acts and deportation) and violations of the laws or customs of war (murder, torture, cruel treatment, plunder, wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages, or devastation not justified by military necessity, and destruction or wilful damage done to institutions dedicated to religion). The trial was scheduled for 2002.

On 6 September, the prosecution filed a motion seeking leave to join the cases of Dragan Obrenovic, Vidoje Blagojevic and Dragan Jokic for their alleged involvement in the events in and around Srebrenica in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 529]. Mr. Obrenovic, arrested by the multinational Stabilization Force (SFOR) and transferred to the Detention Unit on 15 April, pleaded not guilty at his initial appearance on 18 April to charges of complicity in genocide, extermination, murder and persecution. Mr. Blagojevic, who was arrested by SFOR and transferred to the Detention Unit on 10

August, was charged with complicity in genocide, extermination, murder, persecution and other inhumane acts. Mr. Jokic, who surrendered to the jurisdiction of the Tribunal on 15 August, was charged with extermination, murder and persecution.

General Rahim Ademi voluntarily surrendered to the Tribunal on 25 July. At his initial appearance on 26 July, he pleaded not guilty to charges of persecutions, murder, plunder and wanton destruction.

On 26 July, an 8 June indictment against Ante Gotovina, a former high-ranking Croatian military official, was unsealed. He was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, allegedly committed during and after a Croatian offensive in the Krajina region of Croatia in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 580].

General Enver Hadzihasanovic, General Mehmed Alagic and Colonel Amir Kubura came into the custody of the Tribunal on 4 August and pleaded not guilty at their initial appearance on 9 August. On the basis of their command responsibility, they were charged with violations of the laws or customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions for alleged crimes committed in central Bosnia between January 1993 and January 1994. The crimes alleged included executions and massacres following attacks on towns and villages; crimes allegedly committed in detention facilities involving killings, beatings, physical and psychological abuse, the use of detainees to dig trenches in combat conditions, and the use of detainees as hostages and human shields; and systematic plunder and destruction. On 15 and 16 November, the defendants applied for provisional release, which was ordered on 13 December, under strict terms and conditions. The Chamber considered that the accused had voluntarily surrendered to the Tribunal and that satisfactory guarantees had been provided by Bosnia and Herzegovina and by the accused to uphold the conditions of release. Bosnia and Herzegovina reported regularly on the compliance of the accused with the conditions of release.

On 25 September, following his voluntary surrender, Sefer Halilovic was transferred to the Detention Unit. At his initial appearance on 27 September, he pleaded not guilty to one charge of murder, a violation of the laws or customs of war. The indictment addressed the 1993 killing by Bosnian Muslim forces of 33 Bosnian Croat civilians in Grabovica and of 29 Bosnian Croat civilians and one Croatian prisoner of war in Uzdol. On 28 November, the accused filed a request for provisional release, to which the prosecution agreed on 6 December, provided that the accused supplied certain guarantees and undertakings. The Trial Chamber granted the request on 13 December.

On 2 October, the names of four persons (Miodrag Jokic, Vladimir Kovacevic, Pavle Strugar, Milan Zec) charged with crimes in connection with operations to secure control of areas of Croatia that were intended for inclusion in a so-called Dubrovnik Republic were made public. General Strugar surrendered voluntarily on 21 October and Admiral Jokic did so on 12 November; both filed a motion for provisional release, which General Strugar was granted on 30 November.

The initial indictment of Pasko Ljubicic on 27 September 2000 was kept confidential until it was unsealed on 30 October 2001. On 30 November, he pleaded not guilty to the charges against him relating to crimes against humanity, including persecution, and violations of the laws or customs of war in connection with events that occurred in the Lasva Valley in central Bosnia between June 1992 and July 1993.

The case against Nenad and Predrag Banovic, who were transferred to the Tribunal's Detention Unit on 9 November following their arrest by Belgrade authorities, arose from the same indictment (relating to the Keraterm camp in the municipality of Prijedor) as the case of Dusko Sikić, Damir Dosen and Dragan Kolundžija [YUN 1999, p. 1215] (see p. 1201). The accused came into the Tribunal's custody after the close of those proceedings. On 16 November, Nenad Banovic pleaded not guilty to the 10 counts against him in the second amended indictment of 3 January, and Predrag Banovic pleaded not guilty to all 25 counts. The indictment charged each of them with crimes against humanity and with violations of the laws or customs of war.

During the year, a number of other indictments became public. In July, at the request of the Prosecutor, the Chambers ordered the unsealing of an indictment and the arrest warrant of Stojan Zupljanin, a co-accused of Radoslav Brdanin and Momir Talic (see p. 1201). An indictment against Savo Todovic and Mitar Rasevic was made public in November; the accused, who remained at large, were indicted with Milorad Krnojelac (see p. 1201). An indictment against Vinko Pandurevic was made public in December. Mr. Pandurevic, who remained at large, was accused jointly with General Radislav Krstic (see p. 1201).

Two additional indictments involving the accused Slobodan Milosevic (see p. 1201) were confirmed on 8 October and 22 November. The first concerned his alleged responsibility for crimes committed in Croatia from August 1991 to June 1992; and the second related to crimes allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina, including genocide, from March 1992 to December 1995.

Ongoing trials

On 22 February, the Trial Chamber pronounced its judgement against the accused in the case of Kunarac and Others (Dragoljub Kunarac, Radomir Kovac, Zoran Vukovic) [YUN 1999, p. 1215]. Mr. Kunarac, who was found guilty on five counts of crimes against humanity (torture, rape and enslavement) and six counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (torture and rape), was sentenced to 28 years' imprisonment. Mr. Kovac, found guilty on two counts of crimes against humanity (rape and enslavement) and two counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (rape and outrages upon personal dignity), was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment. Mr. Vukovic, who was found guilty on two counts of crimes against humanity (torture and rape) and two counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (torture and rape), was sentenced to 12 years' imprisonment. In March, the three defendants filed notices of appeal against their conviction and sentence. The filing of briefs in the appeal was completed in September and oral hearings took place in December.

On 26 February, the Trial Chamber issued its judgement in the case of Dario Kordic and Mario Cerkez, whose case began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223]. Mr. Kordic was found guilty by virtue of his individual responsibility for four counts of crimes against humanity (persecutions on political, racial or religious grounds, murder, inhumane acts and imprisonment), five counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (unlawful attack on civilians and on civilian objects, wanton destruction, plunder, and destruction or wilful damage to institutions dedicated to religion or education) and three counts of grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (wilful killing, inhumane treatment and unlawful confinement of civilians). Mr. Cerkez was found guilty by virtue of his individual responsibility for four counts of crimes against humanity (persecutions on political, racial or religious grounds, murder, inhumane acts and imprisonment), five counts of violations of the laws or customs of war (unlawful attacks on civilians and on civilian objects, wanton destruction, plunder, and destruction or wilful damage to institutions dedicated to religion or education), and six counts of grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (wilful killing, inhuman treatment, unlawful confinement of civilians, cruel treatment, and taking civilians as hostages). Furthermore, the Trial Chamber found Mr. Cerkez liable under article 7 (3) of the ICTY statute on the basis that, as a commander who exercised de jure and de facto control over his brigade, he failed to take the necessary measures to prevent a number of attacks and to punish those responsible for the attacks. Messrs. Kordic and Cerkez were sentenced to 25 and 15 years' imprisonment, respectively. Notices of appeal against the judgement and sentence were filed both by the defendants and by the prosecution. The filing of briefs in the appeal was completed on 20 October. However, the appellants had filed requests for access to additional evidence.

On 31 July, the Trial Chamber pronounced a sentence of 10 years' imprisonment against Stevan Todorovic, who had pleaded guilty to the count of persecution in the indictment in the case of Simic and Others in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1224]. During the course of events, the proceedings of Mr. Todorovic were separated from those against the other accused.

On 2 August, the Trial Chamber, for the first time in the Tribunal's history, entered a conviction for genocide. Radislav Krstic, whose trial began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1222], was sentenced to 46 years' imprisonment in connection with events surrounding the attack on, and the fall of, Srebrenica [YUN 1995, p. 529]. General Krstic filed a notice of appeal on 14 August and the prosecution filed its notice of appeal on 16 August.

Simultaneously with the Krstic case, the Trial Chamber conducted the trial of the case of Kvocka and Others, which began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1222]. In a 2 November judgement, Miroslav Kvocka was sentenced to a term of seven years' imprisonment, Dragoljub Prcac to five years and Milojica Kos to six years. Mlado Radic, who alone had been charged with rape, was sentenced to 20 years and Zoran Zigic to 25 years. Notices of appeal were filed by all of the convicted.

On 13 November, the Trial Chamber sentenced Dusko Sikirica to 15 years' imprisonment, Dragan Kolundzija to three years and Damir Dosen to five years; the Tribunal decided to try the three accused jointly in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223]. As the sentences fell within the ranges agreed by the parties, no appeals were made.

Slobodan Milosevic, the former President of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY), charged with crimes against humanity with respect to criminal conduct in Kosovo [YUN 1999, p. 1214], was transferred from FRY into the Tribunal's custody on 29 June and appeared before the Trial Chamber for the first time on 3 July. He was subsequently also indicted for crimes committed in Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina; his initial appearances on those indictments took place on 29 October and 11 December, respectively. Mr. Milosevic was charged alternatively as a commander and participant in a joint criminal enterprise for the commission of offences that included crimes against humanity, violations of the laws or customs of war and genocide. Following his refusal to plead to the charges, the Trial Chamber entered pleas of not guilty in respect of all charges against him. In December, the Trial Chamber denied a prosecution application to join the three indictments (Kosovo, Croatia, and Bosnia and Herzegovina) and to hear the cases in one trial, and ordered that the trial on the Kosovo indictment would proceed separately.

In other action, the case was opened against General Stanislav Galic, who had pleaded not guilty to charges against him in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1215] and had received new defence counsel in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223]; the pre-trial phase continued in the case of Radoslav Brdanin and Momir Talic, both of whom had been charged with genocide and crimes against humanity in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1215] and had pleaded not guilty in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1222]; hearings were completed in the case of Milorad Krnojelac, who had pleaded not guilty to charges against him in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216] and whose trial began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223]; the trial against Vinko Martinovic and Mladen Naletilic, who had pleaded not guilty in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223], began on 10 September, as did the trial of Mitar Vasiljevic, who pleaded not guilty to charges against him in 2000 [ibid., p. 1221]. Regarding the case of Dragan Nikolic, who was arrested by SFOR in 2000 and pleaded guilty to all charges against him [ibid.], agreement was reached to narrow the issues in dispute surrounding the defence counsel allegation of the illegality of his arrest.

During the year, the Appeals Chamber rendered a number of judgements on appeals against final trial judgements. In February, in the Celebici case, the Appeals Chamber remitted to a Trial Chamber the issue of what adjustment, if any, should be made to the original sentences imposed on Zdravko Mucic, Esad Landzo and Hazim Delic [YUN 1998, p. 1193]. The process had started in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1223]. Following hearings, the Trial Chamber rendered its sentencing judgement on 9 October. Mr. Mucic was sentenced to a single sentence of nine years' imprisonment, revised from three terms of seven years to run concurrently; Mr. Delic to 18 years' imprisonment, revised from 20 years; and Mr. Landzo's sentence of 15 years' imprisonment was left unchanged. The convicted persons filed notices of appeal in October. On 5 July, in the case against Goran Jelusic [YUN 2000, p. 1223], convicted and sentenced in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1216], the Appeals Chamber found that cumulative convictions under articles 3 and 5 of the statute were permissible and his sentence of 40 years' imprisonment was therefore upheld. In the case of Kupreskic and Others [YUN 1998, p. 1194], the Appeals Chamber rendered its judgement on an appeal filed in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1222]. On 23 October, the convictions of Zoran and Mirjan Kupreskic on count 1 for persecution were reversed. The Chamber found that the Trial Chamber had erred in relying on the identification evidence given by a single witness, an error that had caused a miscarriage of justice. The two were acquitted on all counts and released. Similarly, with the addition of new evidence, the circumstantial evidence on which the conviction of Vlatko Kupreskic was based could not be accepted; he was acquitted and released. The sentences of Drago Josipovic and Vladimir Santic were reduced from 15 to 12 years' imprisonment and from 25 to 18 years, respectively.

Composition of the Chambers

By an 11 January letter [S/2001/47], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that Judge Mohamed Bennouna (Morocco) had resigned effective 28 February. He considered that the appointment of Mohamed Al Habib Fassi Fihri (Morocco), whose curriculum vitae was annexed to the letter, would ensure adequate representation on the Tribunal of the world's principal legal systems. The Council supported the Secretary-General's proposal on 16 January [S/2001/48]. On 25 January [S/2001/88], the Secretary-General informed the Council President that he had received a letter from the General Assembly President in which he had also concurred. He had therefore appointed Mr. Fassi Fihri, effective 1 March, for the remainder of Mr. Bennouna's term, due to expire on 16 November. Also on 25 January [A/55/754], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly President that he had received a corresponding letter from the Council President.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2001, the Prosecutor continued efforts to prosecute high-level leaders and notorious offenders responsible for the most serious crimes, with lower- and mid-level perpetrators being subject to local/domestic prosecutions.

Cooperation with Croatia continued to improve, although problems persisted in gaining access to specific documents and witnesses. Cooperation with FRY, where significant numbers of high-level accused were still at large, was complicated and varied, and was affected by the political instability within the coalition Government. Although Republika Srpska (Bosnia and Herzegovina) passed a law on cooperation with the Tribunal on 2 October, major obstacles remained, particularly regarding the surrender of indicted accused. In the light of allegations that war crimes were committed by both sides to an internal armed conflict in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) between FYROM security forces and organized Albanian rebel groups in 2001 (see p. 368), the Prosecutor opened two investigations in November.

The Prosecutor's Office undertook an exhumation of four sites in a graveyard in Knin, Croatia. It also monitored exhumations in Bosnia and Herzegovina, which were relevant to ongoing ICTY prosecutions.

An advocacy training course covering the history of the conflict, the warring factions, violations covered by the Tribunal's statute, individual criminal responsibility and practice before the Tribunal was held in The Hague in January for ICTY and ICTR prosecutors.

The Office continued to maintain six field offices in the territory of the former Yugoslavia (Banja Luka, Belgrade, Pristina, Sarajevo, Skopje, Zagreb).

The Registry

The Registry of the Tribunal continued to exercise court management functions and provide administrative services to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor. It also channelled information to the media and the public, administered the legal aid system and supervised the Detention Unit.

Legal support was provided in negotiations with individual States on enforcement of sentences and relocation of witnesses. In December, Stevan Todorovic (see p. 1201) was transferred to Spain to serve his imprisonment sentence under a 2000 agreement with the United Nations [YUN 2000, p. 1225]. Other States that had signed agreements were Austria, Finland, France, Italy, Norway and Sweden.

The ICTY Outreach Programme informed people in the former Yugoslavia about the work of the Tribunal and sought to ensure that the Tribunal's activities were transparent and accessible through publications, broadcasts, symposiums, workshops and round tables. The Outreach Programme opened new offices in Belgrade and Pristina, in addition to those in Sarajevo and Zagreb.

Temporal jurisdiction of ICTY

In response to Security Council resolution 1329(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1228], the Secretary-General reported, in February [S/2001/154], on the terminal date of the temporal jurisdiction of ICTY. He noted that the Tribunal's statute did not specify any such terminal date, nor did it contain any provision as a result of which that date might be determined or otherwise become definite. In accordance with Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440], the date was left for subsequent determination by the Council "upon the restoration of peace". In view of the Council's repeated determinations that the situation in the region constituted a threat to international peace and security, most recently in resolution 1305(2000) regarding Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 2000, p. 342] and resolution 1244(1999) regarding Kosovo [YUN 1999, p. 353], the Secretary-General was not able to state that peace had been restored. He could not, therefore, recommend a date that the Council might, pursuant to resolution 827(1993), determine to be the terminal date of the Tribunal's temporal jurisdiction.

Financing

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (April)

Following consideration of reports submitted in 2000 on the financing of ICTY [YUN 2000, p. 1234], the General Assembly, on 12 April [meeting 98], on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/55/691/Add.1], adopted resolution 55/225 B without vote [agenda item 127].

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2001, ICTR continued to identify areas for improvement, particularly in efficiency and judicial economy, and to adopt measures either to remedy perceived problems or to increase the Tribunal's output.

The lengthy period of pre-trial detention, in some cases as long as three years, was a matter of grave concern. Thus, the President proposed the creation of a pool of ad litem judges, similar to the solution adopted for ICTY (see p. 1203), to move the trials forward. In addition, the Prosecutor provided a revised investigation programme, which projected that the Tribunal would be able to complete its mandate by 2007-2008, contingent upon a number of variables.

On 31 May, the ICTR judges re-elected Judge Navanethem Pillay (South Africa) for a second and final two-year term as President of the Tribunal. They also re-elected Judge Erik Møse (Norway) as Vice-President.

In 2001, the activities of ICTR, established by Security Council resolution 955(1994) (YUN 1994,

p. 299], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001 [A/56/351-S/2001/863 & Corr.1,2] and 1 July 2001 to 30 June 2002 [A/57/163-S/2002/733]. On 26 November, the Assembly took note of the 2000/01 report (decision 56/409) and, on 24 December, decided that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

The Chambers

Ongoing trials

In 2001, the Trial Chamber delivered one judgement involving the acquittal of Ignace Bagilishema, former Bourgmestre of Mabanza commune, Kibuye prefecture, whose trial concluded in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226]. On 7 June, the Chamber acquitted Mr. Bagilishema of all charges (genocide, complicity in genocide, serious violations of the Geneva Conventions and crimes against humanity). The Prosecutor, on 9 July, filed a notice of appeal, seeking a warrant of arrest for further detention of the accused. Alternatively, the Prosecutor submitted that the accused could be provisionally released subject to certain conditions, such as compelling the accused to report his presence to the police authorities in the host country and to surrender his passport. The Chamber decided that Mr. Bagilishema should be released subject to certain conditions.

The trial of Juvénal Kajelijeli, former Bourgmestre of Mukingo commune, Ruhengeri prefecture, who pleaded guilty to charges against him in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1223], began on 13 March. Mr. Kajelijeli was charged with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and crimes against humanity (rape and extermination). After two days of hearings and following the death of Judge Laïty Kama on 6 May, the trial was suspended and reopened before a reconstituted Trial Chamber on 4 July. The trial was conducted in two phases (4-25 July and 26 November-13 December), with the third phase scheduled for 2002.

On 17 April, the trial of Jean de Dieu Kamuhanda, former Minister of Higher Education, Research and Culture who pleaded not guilty to charges in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1225], opened before the Trial Chamber. After a one-day hearing and following the death of Judge Kama, the trial was suspended until 3 September, when it was reopened before a reconstituted Trial Chamber.

In the Butare case [YUN 1999, p. 1222], which comprised six persons charged with genocide, crimes against humanity and serious violations of the Geneva Conventions, the joint trial began on 12 June and would continue in 2002. The accused were Pauline Nyiramasuhuko, former Rwandan Minister for Family and Women's Affairs [YUN 1997, p. 1328; YUN 1999, p. 1223]; her son and former leader of the Interahamwe militia, Arsène Shalom Ntahobali [YUN 1997, p. 1328]; Sylvain Nsabimana, former Prefect of Butare [ibid.]; Alphonse Nteziryayo, former Commanding Officer of the Military Police and former Prefect of Butare; Joseph Kanyabashi, former Bourgmestre of Ngoma [YUN 1999, p. 1222]; and Elie Ndayambaje, former Bourgmestre of Muganza.

The joint trial of Elizaphan Ntakirutimana, former clergyman who was transferred to the Tribunal in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1225], and his son, Gérard Ntakirutimana, began on 18 September. The accused jointly faced charges of genocide or complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the Geneva Conventions. The trial would continue in 2002.

Other ongoing trials included the "Media" case (the joint trial of Ferdinand Nahimana, former Director of Radio Télévision Libre des Mille Collines, Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza, a former Director of Political Affairs in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Hassan Ngeze, a former editor of Kangura newspaper), which began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226]; the joint trial of Lieutenant Samuel Imanishimwe, former Commander of the Cyangugu Barracks, Emmanuel Bagambiki, former Prefect of Cyangugu, and André Ntagerura, former Minister of Transport and Communication (the Cyangugu case), which began in 2000 [ibid.] and in which the prosecution closed its case on 21 November 2001; and the trial of Laurent Semanza, former Bourgmestre of Bicumbi commune, which also began in 2000 [ibid.] and in which the prosecution closed its case in April and the defence commenced the presentation of its case in October.

On 9 December, the Tribunal marked a milestone in its history when six individuals it had convicted were transferred from the UN Detention Facility in Arusha to Bamako, Mali, to begin serving their sentences. The Tribunal had agreements for the execution of its sentences with Benin, Mali and Swaziland. The six included Jean Kambanda, former Prime Minister of Rwanda, who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1998

During the year, the Appeals Chamber continued to alleviate the outstanding roll of appeals. Several interlocutory appeals were lodged raising issues of the Tribunal's lack of jurisdiction, wrongful arrests and defects in indictments. Of those, several were disposed of: nine in the Ignace Bagilishema case (see p. 1208); two in the Jean-Bosco Barayagwiza case (see p. 1208); one in a joint case, consolidated as the "Military" case in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1222], of Théoneste Bagosora, Gratien Kabiligi, Anatole Nsengiyumva and Aloys Ntabakuze; four in the Laurent Semanza case (see p. 1208); and one in the case of Joseph Nzirorera [YUN 1999, p. 1222].

During the year, the Appeals Chamber delivered its final judgement in three cases. On 1 June, the Chamber dismissed an appeal by the defence and affirmed a decision of a Trial Chamber in the case of Jean-Paul Akayesu, former Bourgmestre of Taba, who had appealed against his conviction and sentence of life imprisonment rendered in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1201]. On the same date, the Chamber dismissed an appeal by the defence and affirmed a decision of a Trial Chamber in the joint trial of Clément Kayishema and Obed Ruzindana, who had lodged appeals against sentences of life imprisonment and 25 years in jail, respectively, in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1221]. On 16 November, the Chamber confirmed the conviction, in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226], of Alfred Musema for genocide and for extermination as a crime against humanity and upheld the sentence of imprisonment for life for those crimes. On the basis of new evidence, the Chamber quashed his conviction for rape as a crime against humanity.

Election of judges

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1329(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1228], the General Assembly elected two new judges to ICTR and two Trial Chamber judges were assigned to the Appeals Chamber.

In a 22 March letter to the Security Council President [S/2001/262], the Secretary-General, recalling that the Council, in resolution 1329 (2000), had decided that two additional judges should be elected to ICTR and that the terms of all ICTR judges should expire on 24 May 2003, forwarded the names of four candidates for the two additional judges. Member States and non-member States maintaining permanent observer missions in New York had been invited in January to submit nominations.

On the same date, the Legal Counsel forwarded an additional nomination to the Council President.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 March [meeting 4307], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1347(2001). The draft [S/2001/294] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998 and 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000,

Having considered the nominations for judges of the International Tribunal for Rwanda received by the Secretary-General,

Forwards the following nominations to the General Assembly in accordance with paragraph 2 (d) of article 12 of the statute of the International Tribunal for Rwanda:

Mr. Mouinou Aminou (Benin)
Mr. Frederick Mwela Chomba (Zambia)
Mr. Winston Churchill Matanzima Maqutu (Lesotho)
Mr. Harris Michael Mtegha (Malawi)
Ms. Arlette Ramaroson (Madagascar)

On the same date [A/55/871], the Council President transmitted the Council's resolution to the President of the General Assembly.

Memorandum and note of Secretary-General.

By a 3 April memorandum [A/55/872], the Secretary-General presented to the General Assembly the list of candidates and described the procedure for electing additional judges. On the same date [A/55/873], he transmitted the curricula vitae of the candidates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 April [meeting 99], the General Assembly adopted decision 55/321 without vote [agenda item 185].

By that decision, the Assembly, in accordance with article 12 of the ICTR statute, elected the following two judges to serve in the Tribunal until the date of expiry of the terms of office of the judges currently serving in the Tribunal, that is, until 24 May 2003:

Mr. Winston Churchill Matanzima Maqutu (Lesotho)
Ms. Arlette Ramaroson (Madagascar).

The General Assembly was informed that the terms of office of the two judges would commence as soon as possible; the terms of office commenced on 29 May.

Composition of the Chambers

On 23 May [S/2001/550], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of the death of Judge Laity Kama (Senegal) and indicated that the Government of Senegal had proposed the candidacy of Andréia Vaz to replace him. He stated that Ms. Vaz met the qualifications that were prescribed in the ICTR statute. Annexed to the letter was her curriculum vitae. On 30 May [S/2001/551], the Council supported the Secretary-General's intention to appoint Ms. Vaz. On 31 May [S/2001/552], the Secretary-General informed the Council President that he had received a letter from the General Assembly President supporting his intention to appoint Ms. Vaz. She had therefore been appointed, effective 31 May, for the remainder of the term of Judge Kama, which was due to expire on 24 May 2003.

In identical letters of 14 September to the Council and the General Assembly [A/56/265-S/2001/764 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General transmitted a 9 July letter from the ICTR President containing a proposal to amend the Tribunal's statute to allow for the creation of a pool of 18 ad litem judges in order to complete current and future trials.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2001, investigations carried out by the Office of the Prosecutor continued to target persons who occupied positions of authority at the time of the genocide, especially those who conspired to commit genocide. It also continued to combine cases under one indictment to reflect the various areas where such joinder applied at the national and prefecture levels. Following the judgement rendered in the case of Jean-Paul Akayesu (see p. 1209), investigations of sexual violence were expanded. The team in charge of sexual assault had been decentralized, but a central core of investigators continued to ensure coordination and the supervision of operations. The Office strengthened its cooperation with the authorities of other countries in the conduct of investigations and the prosecution of offences. The team in charge of tracking suspects still at large was divided into sub-teams along geographical lines, one covering Europe and North America, the other, Africa.

In February, the Prosecutor prepared an estimate of the investigative workload for the coming years, involving a total of 136 new accused persons. She projected that the Investigations Section should have finished most, or all, of its work on new cases by the end of 2004. The completion of the trials of the new 136 accused would depend on the arrest rate.

The Registry

The Registry continued to administer and service the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor in the performance of their functions. In addition to court management, the Registry's Judicial and Legal Services Division managed a legal aid system of assigning defence counsel to indigent accused. The Registry's Division of Administration was responsible for personnel, finance, language services, security and general services and for managing and running the Detention Facility in Arusha.

The Information and Documentation Centre, Umuzanzu mu Bwiyunge, in Kigali, which was the focal point of the Registry's Outreach Programme to Rwanda, attracted more than 21,000 visitors during the year. Facilities included a law library, a collection of videos of trial proceedings, ICTR public documents, Internet access and a public meeting room.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General. In October [A/56/497 & Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted the proposed ICTR resources requirements for 2002-2003, amounting to $198,523,800 gross ($179,015,300 net) after recosting. The total included an amount of $19,516,500 required for staff assessment, to be offset by income from staff assessment of the same amount.

In response to General Assembly resolution 49/251 [YUN 1995, p. 1324], the Secretary-General, in October [A/56/500], submitted the sixth annual financial performance report of ICTR for the year ended 31 December 2000, including actual performance indicators. Expenditures for 2000 amounted to $83,144,800 gross ($75,817,300 net), resulting in an unencumbered balance of $3,010,100 gross ($2,352,900 net).

In a December report to the Fifth Committee [A/C.5/56/30], an additional appropriation of $219,850 to the 2002-2003 budget was proposed to expand internal oversight coverage of ICTR, initially for a six-month period from 1 January to 30 June 2002.

ACABQ action. In November [A/56/666], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve an appropriation of $196,444,800 gross ($177,151,400 net) for the operation of ICTR in 2002-2003, representing a reduction of $2,079,000 gross ($1,863,900 net) from the estimate in the Secretary-General's proposal. The Committee also recommended 24 post reductions for the biennium.

In December [A/56/717], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the proposed appropriation of $219,850 to the 2002-2003 budget to strengthen the role of internal oversight services.

Chapter III

Legal aspects of international political relations

During 2001, the Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court, created by the 1998 United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court to make arrangements for the coming into operation of the Court, made significant progress in drafting the instruments essential for the Court's functioning. Its report for the year contained the draft texts of the Relationship Agreement between the Court and the United Nations, the Financial Regulations, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Court, and the Rules of Procedure of the Assembly of States Parties. The Netherlands, host country of the Court, had chosen a site for the Court's future headquarters and was making temporary premises ready for its use in the interim. The General Assembly welcomed the progress made and called on all States that had signed the 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court to consider ratifying or acceding to it without delay.

The Assembly expressed appreciation to the International Law Commission (ILC) for the work it had accomplished during its 2001 session in the codification and progressive development of international law, in particular for its completion of the final draft articles on "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts", which it commended to the attention of Governments. The Assembly further expressed appreciation for ILC's valuable work on the prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities (a sub-topic of international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law), the draft texts of the preamble and 19 articles, which ILC had also completed and adopted.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism continued, within the framework of a working group of the Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee, to elaborate a comprehensive convention on international terrorism, to resolve outstanding issues relating to the preparation of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, and to keep on its agenda the possible convening of a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint international response to terrorism.

The Security Council and the Assembly strongly condemned the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States, and called for international cooperation to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of those outrages. Subsequently, the Council specified a number of measures addressed to States to help eliminate international terrorism. Disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts worldwide, the Assembly also urged all States that had not done so, to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming parties to relevant conventions and protocols relating to the prevention, suppression and financing of terrorism.

Concerned by the increasing dangers and security risks faced by UN and associated personnel in the field, the Assembly also called on all States to consider becoming parties to the relevant international instruments, in particular the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel.

Establishment of the International Criminal Court

The 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], which established the Court as a permanent institution with the power to exercise jurisdiction over persons for the most serious crimes of international concern—genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression—had closed for signature on 31 December 2000.

As at 31 December 2001, the Statute had 139 signatories and 48 States parties. It would enter into force after 60 States had become parties to it.

Preparatory Commission

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/155 [YUN 2000, p. 1239], the Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court, established by the 1998 United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], held two sessions in New York in 2001: its seventh (26 February–9 March) and eighth (24 September–5 October), at which it continued drafting the instruments essential for the Court's functioning.

At the February/March session, the Preparatory Commission considered five items: the Relationship Agreement between the Court and the United Nations, the Financial Regulations, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Court, the Rules of Procedure of the Assembly of States Parties, and the crime of aggression. At the closing meeting, the Chairman indicated that, given the rapid pace of ratifications and the considerable workload still to be accomplished, the Bureau would draw up a road map to assist in the timely completion of the Commission's work.

At the September/October session, the Commission considered, in addition to the five items above, the basic principles governing a headquarters agreement to be negotiated between the Court and the host country (Netherlands), and the budget for the first financial year, for which two working groups were established.

The road map presented at the session [PCNICC/2001/L.2 & Corr.1] outlined the documents and activities needed for the smooth operation of the Assembly of States Parties and for the most efficient establishment of the Court. Activities would begin with the deposit of the sixtieth instrument of ratification of the Statute. The first session of the Assembly of States Parties would be held between 60 and 90 days thereafter, at which it would set up its Bureau, elect its President and adopt nomination and election procedures for the judges and the Prosecutor, as well as documents recommended by the Preparatory Commission. The Court's inaugural meeting would swear in the judges and the Prosecutor, elect its Presidency, establish the Chambers, and draw up a list of candidates for the position of Registrar for transmission to the Assembly so as to expedite the Court's election of the Registrar.

The road map listed the documents to be prepared for the Assembly's adoption, including those relating to the Court's provisional internal rules and regulations, grouped under three categories: human resources and administration; budget and finance; and operational issues. It pointed to the need for an interlocutor mechanism between the Preparatory Commission and the host country, which a subcommittee of the Commission's Bureau could fill, for the management of practical issues related to the permanent and interim premises and infrastructure that had to be addressed before the Court was established.

The Netherlands, as future host State, informed the session that a site for the Court's headquarters had been chosen and preparations were under way for an international architectural competition for its design [PCNICC/2001/INF/3]. It would cover some 30,000 square metres of office space, courtrooms, service areas, areas for the public and detention facilities; construction should be finished by 2007. In the interim, temporary premises were being readied for the Court's use from the day of its inception.

The Preparatory Commission adopted a report on its work from the sixth (2000) session [YUN 2000, p. 1238] to the eighth [PCNICC/2001/1 & Add.1-4], which contained the draft texts of the Relationship Agreement between the Court and the United Nations, the Financial Regulations, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Court, the Rules of Procedure of the Assembly of States Parties and two draft resolutions of the Assembly of States Parties, one on the establishment of the Committee on Budget and Finance, and the other on relevant criteria for voluntary contributions to the International Criminal Court.

Communications. Among the documents before the Commission's seventh session was the final report and recommendations of a sub-regional seminar on information and awareness-raising with regard to the International Criminal Court (Yaoundé, 13-15 February) [PCNICC/2001/INF/1], submitted by Cameroon.

On 24 July [A/55/1020], Belgium transmitted to the Secretary-General the English, French and Spanish texts of the Common Position concerning the Court adopted by the Council of the European Union in Luxembourg on 11 June.

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/56/591], adopted resolution 56/85 without vote [agenda item 164].

International Law Commission

The International Law Commission (ILC) held its fifty-third session in Geneva in two parts: from 23 April to 1 June and from 2 July to 10 August [A/56/10 & Corr.1]. During the second part, the thirty-seventh session of the International Law Seminar was held. It was attended by 24 participants, mostly from developing countries, who observed Commission meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics.

ILC, assisted by working groups and a Drafting Committee, continued to consider the Special Rapporteurs' proposals related to draft articles or draft guidelines for the formulation of instruments on State responsibility, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law (prevention of transboundary damage from hazardous activities), unilateral acts of States, diplomatic protection and reservations to treaties (see below for details under those topics). Draft articles proposed by the Special Rapporteurs assigned to report on those topics were reproduced in ILC's report on the work of its 2001 session [A/56/10 & Corr.1].

In furtherance of cooperation with other bodies concerned with international law, ILC continued its traditional information exchanges with the Inter-American Juridical Committee, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization—formerly the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee—the European Committee on Legal Cooperation, the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law of the Council of Europe, the International Court of Justice and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/152 [YUN 2000, p. 1240], ILC decided to hold its fifty-fourth session, the first of its next five-year mandate (2002-2006), in Geneva in two parts: from 6 May to 7 June and from 8 July to 9 August 2002. To continue to enhance its efficiency and productivity, ILC, on the recommendation of its Planning Group, decided to give priority during the first part of that session to the appointment of Special Rapporteurs on two of the five topics considered suitable for codification, which included its long-term programme of work adopted in 2000 [ibid.]. ILC also indicated specific issues relating to reservations to treaties, diplomatic protection and unilateral acts of States on which the views of Governments or the Sixth Committee could provide guidance for its further work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/589 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/82 without vote [agenda item 162].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-third session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-third session,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to further enhance their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Wishing to enhance further the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the International Law Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two organs,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Stressing the usefulness of structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-third session;

State responsibility

ILC, at its fifty-third session [A/56/10 & Corr.1], considered comments received from Governments on the draft articles on State responsibility as provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1245]. It also considered the fourth report of the Special Rapporteur, James Crawford (Australia), which addressed the main issues relating to the draft articles and recommended specific amendments in the light of comments received [A/CN.4/517 & Add.1]. Two working groups were established: an open-ended one to deal with outstanding issues and another to consider commentaries to the draft articles.

ILC, which began studying the issue of State responsibility in 1955 and had completed the first reading of the draft articles in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1207], finalized the second reading at the 2001 session. Its deliberations were preceded by a debate on four main outstanding issues: serious breaches of obligations to the international community as a whole (part two, chapter III); countermeasures (part two bis, chapter II); dispute settlement provisions (part three); and the form of the draft articles. On the recommendation of its open-ended working group, ILC reached understanding on each of those issues and agreed, as an exception to its long-standing practice of adopting draft articles on second reading, to include a brief summary of the debate in the light of the topic's importance and complexity.

Concerned that the title "State responsibility" was not sufficiently clear to distinguish it from the responsibility of a State under internal law, ILC, after considering different connotations, decided on "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts".

The amended draft texts were again referred to the Drafting Committee. Following its consideration of the Committee's final report, ILC adopted the entire draft articles with the commentaries thereto. It recommended to the Assembly that it take note of the draft articles in a resolution and annex them to it, and consider at a later stage, in the light of the importance of the topic, the possibility of convening an international conference of plenipotentiaries to examine the draft articles, with a view to concluding a convention.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/589 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/83 without vote [agenda item 162].

Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter IV of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-third session, which contains the draft articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts,

Noting that the International Law Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly that it should take note of the draft articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts in a resolution and annex the draft articles to that resolution, and that it should consider at a later stage, in the light of the importance of the topic, the possibility of convening an international conference of plenipotentiaries to examine the draft articles with a view to concluding a convention on the topic,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 a, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts is of major importance in the relations of States,

1. Welcomes the conclusion of the work of the International Law Commission on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts and its adoption of the draft articles and a detailed commentary on the subject;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its continuing contribution to the codification and progressive development of international law;

3. Takes note of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, presented by the International Law Commission, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution, and commends them to the attention of Governments without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session an item entitled "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts".

- (b) Constitutes a breach of an international obligation of the State.

Article 3

Characterization of an act of a State as internationally wrongful

The characterization of an act of a State as internationally wrongful is governed by international law. Such characterization is not affected by the characterization of the same act as lawful by internal law.

Chapter II*Attribution of conduct to a State*Article 4Conduct of organs of a State*

1. The conduct of any State organ shall be considered an act of that State under international law, whether the organ exercises legislative, executive, judicial or any other functions, whatever position it holds in the organization of the State, and whatever its character as an organ of the central Government or of a territorial unit of the State.

2. An organ includes any person or entity which has that status in accordance with the internal law of the State.

Article 5Conduct of persons or entities exercising elements of governmental authority*

The conduct of a person or entity which is not an organ of the State under article 4 but which is empowered by the law of that State to exercise elements of the governmental authority shall be considered an act of the State under international law, provided the person or entity is acting in that capacity in the particular instance.

Article 6Conduct of organs placed at the disposal of a State by another State*

The conduct of an organ placed at the disposal of a State by another State shall be considered an act of the former State under international law if the organ is acting in the exercise of elements of the governmental authority of the State at whose disposal it is placed.

Article 7Excess of authority or contravention of instructions*

The conduct of an organ of a State or of a person or entity empowered to exercise elements of the governmental authority shall be considered an act of the State under international law if the organ, person or entity acts in that capacity, even if it exceeds its authority or contravenes instructions.

Article 8Conduct directed or controlled by a State*

The conduct of a person or group of persons shall be considered an act of a State under international law if the person or group of persons is in fact acting on the instructions of, or under the direction or control of, that State in carrying out the conduct.

Article 9Conduct carried out in the absence or default of the official authorities*

The conduct of a person or group of persons shall be considered an act of a State under international law if the person or group of persons is in fact exercising elements of the governmental authority in the absence or default of the official authorities and in circumstances such as to call for the exercise of those elements of authority.

Article 10Conduct of an insurrectional or other movement*

1. The conduct of an insurrectional movement which becomes the new Government of a State shall be considered an act of that State under international law.

2. The conduct of a movement, insurrectional or other, which succeeds in establishing a new State in part of the territory of a pre-existing State or in a territory under its administration shall be considered an act of the new State under international law.

3. This article is without prejudice to the attribution to a State of any conduct, however related to that of the movement concerned, which is to be considered an act of that State by virtue of articles 4 to 9.

Article 11Conduct acknowledged and adopted by a State as its own*

Conduct which is not attributable to a State under the preceding articles shall nevertheless be considered an act of that State under international law if and to the extent that the State acknowledges and adopts the conduct in question as its own.

Chapter III*Breach of an international obligation*Article 12Existence of a breach of an international obligation*

There is a breach of an international obligation by a State when an act of that State is not in conformity with what is required of it by that obligation, regardless of its origin or character.

Article 13International obligation in force for a State*

An act of a State does not constitute a breach of an international obligation unless the State is bound by the obligation in question at the time the act occurs.

Article 14Extension in time of the breach of an international obligation*

1. The breach of an international obligation by an act of a State not having a continuing character occurs at the moment when the act is performed, even if its effects continue.

2. The breach of an international obligation by an act of a State having a continuing character extends over the entire period during which the act continues and remains not in conformity with the international obligation.

3. The breach of an international obligation requiring a State to prevent a given event occurs when the event occurs and extends over the entire period during which the event continues and remains not in conformity with that obligation.

Article 15Breach consisting of a composite act*

1. The breach of an international obligation by a State through a series of actions or omissions defined in aggregate as wrongful occurs when the action or omission occurs which, taken with the other actions or omissions, is sufficient to constitute the wrongful act.

2. In such a case, the breach extends over the entire period starting with the first of the actions or omissions of the series and lasts for as long as these actions or omissions are repeated and remain not in conformity with the international obligation.

Chapter IV*Responsibility of a State in connection with the act of another StateArticle 16Aid or assistance in the commission of an internationally wrongful act*

A State which aids or assists another State in the commission of an internationally wrongful act by the latter is internationally responsible for doing so if:

- (a) That State does so with knowledge of the circumstances of the internationally wrongful act; and
- (b) The act would be internationally wrongful if committed by that State.

Article 17Direction and control exercised over the commission of an internationally wrongful act

A State which directs and controls another State in the commission of an internationally wrongful act by the latter is internationally responsible for that act if:

Article 18Coercion of another State

A State which coerces another State to commit an act is internationally responsible for that act if:

- (a) The act would, but for the coercion, be an internationally wrongful act of the coerced State; and
- (b) The coercing State does so with knowledge of the circumstances of the act.

Article 19Effect of this chapter

This chapter is without prejudice to the international responsibility, under other provisions of these articles, of the State which commits the act in question, or of any other State.

Chapter V*Circumstances precluding wrongfulnessArticle 20Consent*

Valid consent by a State to the commission of a given act by another State precludes the wrongfulness of that act in relation to the former State to the extent that the act remains within the limits of that consent.

Article 21Self-defence

The wrongfulness of an act of a State is precluded if the act constitutes a lawful measure of self-defence taken in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations.

Article 22Countermeasures in respect of an internationally wrongful act

The wrongfulness of an act of a State not in conformity with an international obligation towards another State is precluded if and to the extent that the act constitutes a countermeasure taken against the latter State in accordance with chapter II of part three.

Article 23Force majeure

1. The wrongfulness of an act of a State not in conformity with an international obligation of that State is precluded if the act is due to force majeure, that is the occurrence of an irresistible force or of an unforeseen event, beyond the control of the State, making it materially impossible in the circumstances to perform the obligation.

2. Paragraph 1 does not apply if:

- (a) The situation of force majeure is due, either alone or in combination with other factors, to the conduct of the State invoking it; or
- (b) The State has assumed the risk of that situation occurring.

Article 24Distress

1. The wrongfulness of an act of a State not in conformity with an international obligation of that State is precluded if the author of the act in question has no other reasonable way, in a situation of distress, of saving the author's life or the lives of other persons entrusted to the author's care.

2. Paragraph 1 does not apply if:

- (a) The situation of distress is due, either alone or in combination with other factors, to the conduct of the State invoking it; or
- (b) The act in question is likely to create a comparable or greater peril.

Article 25Necessity

1. Necessity may not be invoked by a State as a ground for precluding the wrongfulness of an act not in conformity with an international obligation of that State unless the act:

- (a) Is the only way for the State to safeguard an essential interest against a grave and imminent peril; and
- (b) Does not seriously impair an essential interest of the State or States towards which the obligation exists, or of the international community as a whole.

2. In any case, necessity may not be invoked by a State as a ground for precluding wrongfulness if:

- (a) The international obligation in question excludes the possibility of invoking necessity; or
- (b) The State has contributed to the situation of necessity.

Article 26Compliance with peremptory norms

Nothing in this chapter precludes the wrongfulness of any act of a State which is not in conformity with an obligation arising under a peremptory norm of general international law.

Article 27Consequences of invoking a circumstance precluding wrongfulness

The invocation of a circumstance precluding wrongfulness in accordance with this chapter is without prejudice to:

- (a) Compliance with the obligation in question, if and to the extent that the circumstance precluding wrongfulness no longer exists;
- (b) The question of compensation for any material loss caused by the act in question.

Part two*Content of the international responsibility of a State*Chapter I*General principles*Article 28Legal consequences of an internationally wrongful act*

The international responsibility of a State which is entailed by an internationally wrongful act in accordance with the provisions of part one involves legal consequences as set out in this part.

2. Injury includes any damage, whether material or moral, caused by the internationally wrongful act of a State.

Article 32Irrelevance of internal law*

The responsible State may not rely on the provisions of its internal law as justification for failure to comply with its obligations under this part.

Article 33Scope of international obligations set out in this part*

1. The obligations of the responsible State set out in this part may be owed to another State, to several States, or to the international community as a whole, depending in particular on the character and content of the international obligation and on the circumstances of the breach.

2. This part is without prejudice to any right, arising from the international responsibility of a State, which may accrue directly to any person or entity other than a State.

Full reparation for the injury caused by the internationally wrongful act shall take the form of restitution, compensation and satisfaction, either singly or in combination, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter.

Article 35Restitution*

A State responsible for an internationally wrongful act is under an obligation to make restitution, that is, to re-establish the situation which existed before the wrongful act was committed, provided and to the extent that restitution:

- (a) Is not materially impossible;
- (b) Does not involve a burden out of all proportion to the benefit deriving from restitution instead of compensation.

Article 36Compensation*

1. The State responsible for an internationally wrongful act is under an obligation to compensate for the damage caused thereby, insofar as such damage is not made good by restitution.

2. The compensation shall cover any financially assessable damage including loss of profits insofar as it is established.

Article 37Satisfaction*

1. The State responsible for an internationally wrongful act is under an obligation to give satisfaction for the injury caused by that act insofar as it cannot be made good by restitution or compensation.

3. Satisfaction shall not be out of proportion to the injury and may not take a form humiliating to the responsible State.

Article 38Interest*

1. Interest on any principal sum due under this chapter shall be payable when necessary in order to ensure full reparation. The interest rate and mode of calculation shall be set so as to achieve that result.

2. Interest runs from the date when the principal sum should have been paid until the date the obligation to pay is fulfilled.

Article 39Contribution to the injury*

In the determination of reparation, account shall be taken of the contribution to the injury by wilful or negligent action or omission of the injured State or any person or entity in relation to whom reparation is sought.

1. This chapter applies to the international responsibility which is entailed by a serious breach by a State of an obligation arising under a peremptory norm of general international law.

2. A breach of such an obligation is serious if it involves a gross or systematic failure by the responsible State to fulfil the obligation.

1. States shall cooperate to bring to an end through lawful means any serious breach within the meaning of article 40.

International liability

ILC, in accordance with its 1997 decision [YUN 1997, p. 1336] to deal separately with the issues of prevention and international liability under the main topic of international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts prohibited by international law, continued at its 2001 session [A/56/10 & Corr.1] to consider the sub-topic on prevention. It examined the report of the Drafting Committee containing the final version of the draft texts of a preamble and a set of 19 articles on prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities referred to it at the 2000 session [YUN 2000, p. 1246]. ILC adopted the final draft texts and recommended to the General Assembly the elaboration of a convention on the subject on the basis of those texts.

Unilateral acts of States

ILC, at its 2001 session [A/56/10 & Corr.1], considered the fourth report on unilateral acts of States [A/CN.4/519] by Special Rapporteur Victor Rodríguez Cedeño (Venezuela). The Special Rapporteur noted that his report was prepared on the basis of a wide range of literature and comments by ILC and Governments, as well as jurisprudence and some State practice referred to therein. He sought ILC guidance on issues relating to the causes of invalidity of unilateral acts, the determination of the moment when the legal effects of a unilateral act came into being, in turn leading to determining the moment when it was opposable or enforceable. He addressed the issues of silence regarding unilateral acts, interpretative declarations, countermeasures, the classification of unilateral acts and the rules for their interpretation. He proposed two draft articles on a general rule of interpretation and on supplementary means of interpretation, which were based on the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 730], but modified to the specificity of the unilateral act.

ILC established an open-ended working group chaired by the Special Rapporteur, who orally reported on the group's work. On the recommendation of the group, ILC requested the Secretariat to circulate a questionnaire to Governments inviting further information regarding their practice of formulating and interpreting unilateral acts.

International State relations and international law

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

ILC [A/56/10 & Corr.1], in continuation of its work on the future form of the draft articles it had adopted in 1991 on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property [YUN 1991, p. 829], considered a 14 August report of the Secretary-General, with later addenda [A/56/291 & Add.1,2], which reproduced comments received from four States in response to General Assembly resolution 55/150 [YUN 2000, p. 1246]. The comments related to reports on the subject by the open-ended working group of ILC and of the Sixth Committee, established under resolution 53/98 [YUN 1998, p. 1215].

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 55/150, the agenda item entitled "Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property" was included in the agenda of the Assembly's fifty-sixth (2001) session, in order to decide on the session dates of the Ad Hoc Committee established by the same resolution to consolidate areas of agreement and resolve outstanding issues, with a view to elaborating a generally acceptable instrument based on the 1991 draft articles on the topic.

consolidate areas of agreement and resolve outstanding issues with a view to elaborating a generally acceptable instrument based on the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property adopted by the International Law Commission at its forty-third session, and also on the discussions of the open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee and their results,

International terrorism

Convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism

Ad Hoc Committee

The Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism, established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208], convened its fifth session (New York, 12-23 February) [A/56/37]. It continued, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, to elaborate a comprehensive convention on international terrorism, to resolve outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, and to address the question of the convening of a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint international response to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

The Ad Hoc Committee, in a working group of the whole, first discussed the revised texts of a number of articles, following which its Bureau prepared a discussion paper containing the texts of articles 3, 8 and 11, annexed to the Committee's report to provide a basis for consideration in the Sixth Committee's working group. India also prepared a reference paper containing the texts of articles 4, 5, 9, 10, 12 and 13, reproduced in annex II. The working group then discussed the revised texts of articles 1 and 2, contained in annexes IA and B to the report of the Sixth Committee working group [A/C.6/56/L.9], as well as the definition of terrorism, the relationship of the draft convention to existing and future instruments on international terrorism, and differentiating between terrorism and the right of peoples to self-determination and to combat foreign occupation.

The report contained written amendments and proposals submitted by delegations at the current session (annex III), a list of written amendments and proposals submitted by delegations to the Sixth Committee working group at the Assembly's fifty-fifth (2000) session (annex IV), an informal summary of the general exchange of views prepared by the Ad Hoc Committee Chairman (annex V) and the coordinator's report on the results of the informal consultations (annex VI).

Sixth Committee working group

During the General Assembly's fifty-sixth (2001) session, the Sixth Committee, on 8 October, established an open-ended working group, which held five meetings (New York, 15-26 October) [A/C.6/56/L.9] to continue the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism, with appropriate time allocated to the continued consideration of outstanding issues related to the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism. Before the working group were the reports of the Ad Hoc Committee on the work of its fifth session (see p. 1224) and the 1998 report of the Sixth Committee working group [YUN 1998, p. 1216], which contained a revised text of the draft convention on the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism.

Informal consultations on the draft articles, based on the texts submitted by the Ad Hoc Committee, led to the preparation of a discussion paper on articles 3-17, 17 bis, 20 and 22, which were further reviewed, together with article 23. The working group heard oral reports on the consultations by the coordinators of those consultations and received oral and written proposals by delegations, following which the Friends of the Chairman prepared revised texts of articles 3-17, 17 bis and 20-27, while the consultations coordinator prepared informal texts for articles 2 and 2 bis, reproduced in annexes IA and B to the working group's report.

At its last meeting, the working group decided to refer its report to the Sixth Committee, recommending that work continue as a matter of urgency on the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and that the coordinator for the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism should continue consultations on that draft.

Measures to eliminate terrorism

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General, in July, issued his annual report with a later addendum [A/56/160 & Corr.1 & Add.1], containing information on measures taken at the national and international levels by 26 States and six international organizations and UN agencies and bodies to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1294], and Security Council resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240]. It listed 19 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorist crimes. It also listed the States that had submitted texts of their laws and regulations to prevent and suppress terrorism for inclusion in the Secretariat's compendium of such laws. The report noted in that regard the publication in February of the International Instruments related to the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism [Sales No. E.01.V.3], containing the texts of global and regional instruments.

Communications. A number of communications were addressed to the General Assembly and the Security Council by individual Member States or groups, condemning the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States (see pp. 61 and 63).

Other communications concerned a United Arab Emirates law against terrorist activities and related money-laundering [A/56/468]; a decision by Saudi Arabia to sever diplomatic relations with the Taliban Government of Afghanistan for, among other reasons, its alleged harbouring of suspected terrorists [A/56/424]; the Moscow Declaration between the Russian Federation and India on international terrorism [A/56/631]; and a number of other communications circulated under various Assembly agenda items, including measures to eliminate international terrorism [A/56/118, A/56/446-S/2001/944, A/56/634-S/2001/1087].

Further measures to eliminate terrorism

On 12 September, the Security Council, by resolution 1368(2001), and the General Assembly, by resolution 56/1, condemned the previous day's terrorist attacks in the United States (see p. 60). In that connection, the Council, in resolutions 1373(2001) and 1377(2001), specified a number of measures to be taken by States to eliminate international terrorism. In addition, in conjunction with the Assembly's 1-5 October debate in plenary on that subject (see p. 63), the United Nations held a treaty event—Multilateral Treaties on Terrorism (New York, 10-16 November) (see p. 69)—which resulted in 180 treaty actions by 79 countries.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December 2001, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations were: 180 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 49 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 62 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 165 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 38 and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 45.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775], numbered 113.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 55/149 [YUN 2000, p. 1252], the Secretary-General, in a June report [A/INF/56/6], reproduced reports received from six States (four from one of them) detailing instances of serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. The Secretary-General also reproduced the comments received from one State on measures taken to enhance security at foreign diplomatic and consular offices, in response to Assembly resolution 42/154 [YUN 1987, p. 1068], and updated the status of State participation in the conventions named above.

ILC consideration. ILC, at its fifty-third session [A/56/10 & Corr.1], had before it an addendum to the first report of Special Rapporteur John R.

Dugard (South Africa) on diplomatic protection, consideration of which was deferred in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1252], as well as his second report on the subject. The addendum dealt with draft article 9 on continuous nationality and transferability of claims, which was debated in an open-ended informal consultation chaired by the Special Rapporteur, as were draft articles 10 and 11 on the rule of exhaustion of local remedies covered in the second report. Following various suggestions relating to drafting and further issues to be considered, ILC referred those articles to the Drafting Committee. It deferred consideration of draft articles 12 and 13 on other aspects of the local remedies rule to the 2002 session.

Treaties and agreements

Reservations to treaties

ILC, at its 2001 session [A/56/10 & Corr.1], considered the second part of the fifth report of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France) relating to questions of procedure regarding reservations to treaties and interpretative declarations. Following deliberations on draft guidelines 2.2.1 to 2.2.4 and 2.3.1 to 2.3.4 on the formulation of reservations and 2.4.3 to 2.4.8 on interpretative declarations, ILC referred them to the Drafting Committee. The resulting revised draft guidelines were provisionally adopted by ILC and reproduced in its report.

ILC also considered the sixth report of the Special Rapporteur on the modalities of formulating reservations and interpretative declarations, particularly their form and notification, and the publicity of reservations and interpretative declarations, including their communication, recipients and obligations of the depositary. The Special Rapporteur introduced draft guidelines 2.1.1 to 2.1.4, 2.4.1 and 2.4.2 (including 2.1.3 bis and 2.4.1 bis, and two alternatives for guideline 2.1.3) on the form and notification of reservations; 2.1.5 to 2.1.8 on procedures for the communication and publicity of reservations; and 2.4.2 (third paragraph) and 2.4.9 (second paragraph) on interpretative declarations. Having considered those draft guidelines, ILC also referred them to the Drafting Committee.

Chapter IV

Law of the sea

During 2001, the United Nations continued to promote the universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and the two related Agreements. The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

Two Agreements dealing with aspects of the Convention entered into force in 2001, one on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the other on privileges and immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

In 2001, Bangladesh and Madagascar ratified the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), bringing the number of parties to 137. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties. The eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 14–18 May) [SPLOS/73 & Corr.1] discussed the 2000 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2000, p. 1257] and its draft budget for 2002 and other financial matters. Also discussed were the 2000 International Seabed Authority activities [ibid.]; the 2000 activities of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf [ibid.] and other Commission-related matters, including its possible observer status in the Meetings of States Parties; the responsibility of the Secretary-General under article 319 of the Convention to report on matters of a general nature relevant to the Convention; the rules of procedure for Meetings of States Parties; and the proposal to establish an open-ended working group to review budgetary and financial matters. That proposal was adopted by consensus [SPLOS/71] as a new rule (53 bis) of the rules of procedure.

With respect to article 4 of annex II to the Convention on the Law of the Sea, which dealt with the 10-year limit for coastal States to submit to the Commission data supporting claims to establish the outer limit of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, the Meeting considered a background paper by the Secretariat [SPLOS/64]; a position paper on the time frame for submissions put forward by some members of the Pacific Islands Forum (Australia, Fiji, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Vanuatu) [SPLOS/67]; and a Secretariat note [SPLOS/66], transmitting two notes verbales from Seychelles (6 October 1998 and 29 December 2000) on its position. The Meeting, on 29 May [SPLOS/72], decided that in the case of a State party for which the Convention entered into force before 13 May 1999, the 10-year time limit would have begun from that date. The issue of the ability of States, particularly developing States, to fulfil the requirements of the article would be kept under review.

On 16 May, the Meeting elected Xu Guangjian (China) to fill the vacancy in the Tribunal for the remainder of the term (until 30 September 2002) of Judge Lihai Zhao (China), who had passed away on 10 October 2000. On 11 September, Judge Edward A. Laing (Belize) passed away; the election to fill the vacancy would take place during the twelfth (2002) Meeting of States Parties.

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2001, the number of States parties to the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), which was adopted by the General Assembly in 1994 by resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 103. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement as well. States that were parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit an instrument of ratification or accession to the Agreement separately.

Agreement on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 54/32 [YUN 1999, p. 1243], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/56/357] on the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (the Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 1334].

As requested in resolution 54/32, the Secretary-General brought that resolution to the attention of all States, relevant intergovernmental organizations, members of the UN system, regional and subregional fisheries organizations and non-governmental organizations. He provided summaries of information received and observed that a review of those responses indicated that genuine efforts were being made to implement the Agreement, in particular its key provisions, even before its entry into force. He further noted that the entry into force of the Agreement, which was expected to take place in the very near future (see below), would create a new situation with important implications for all States. While non-States parties would continue to submit information to the Secretary-General on a voluntary basis, States parties might wish to decide whether the existing report of the Secretary-General should evolve into one that monitored compliance with the Agreement and whether a meeting of the States parties to the Agreement would be necessary to consider that and other issues.

On 11 December, 30 days after the deposit of the thirtieth instrument of ratification by Malta, the Agreement entered into force.

Reykjavik Declaration. On 6 November [E/CN.17/2002/PC.2/3], Iceland transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem, adopted by the Reykjavik Conference on the subject (1-4 October).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 28 November [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 56/13 [draft: A/56/L.18 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 30 (b)].

Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

The General Assembly,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"), including Part VII, section 2,

Recognizing that, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Agreement") sets forth provisions concerning the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, including provisions on subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, binding dispute settlement and the rights and obligations of States in authorizing the use of vessels flying their flags for fishing on the high seas,

Recognizing also the duty provided in the Agreement and reiterated as a principle in the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas ("the Compliance Agreement") and the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag and vessels flying their flag which provide support to such vessels, and to ensure that the activities of such vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Noting with satisfaction the imminent entry into force of the Agreement due to the fact that thirty States have ratified or acceded to it, and noting also that the entry into force of the Agreement entails responsibilities for States parties and other important considerations as outlined in the Agreement,

Noting the obligation of all States, pursuant to the provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks,

Conscious of the need to promote and facilitate international cooperation, in particular at the regional and subregional levels, in order to ensure the conservation, management and long-term sustainability of the living marine resources of the world's oceans and seas, consistent with the present resolution, and deploring the fact that the straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to heavy and sparsely regulated fishing efforts, mainly as a result of, inter alia, unauthorized fishing, inadequate regulatory measures and excess fishing capacity,

Conscious also that the Agreement requires States and entities to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, taking into account the specific characteristics of the subregion or region, to ensure the effective conservation, management and long-term sustainability of such stocks, and to establish such organizations or arrangements where none exist,

Recognizing the importance of the Agreement for the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the need for the regular consideration by the General Assembly and review by the parties to the Agreement pursuant to the provisions of the Agreement, once in force, of developments relating thereto,

Welcoming the conclusion of negotiations, and the commencement of preparatory work, to establish new regional instruments, arrangements and organizations in several heretofore unmanaged fisheries, and noting the role of the Convention and the Agreement in the elaboration of these instruments, arrangements and organizations,

Welcoming also the fact that a growing number of States and other entities, as well as regional and sub-regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have enacted legislation, established regulations, adopted conventions or taken other measures as steps towards implementation of the provisions of the Agreement, even before its entry into force,

Taking into account that, in accordance with the Convention, the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries and the Agreement, States fishing for straddling fish stocks or highly migratory fish stocks on the high seas, and relevant coastal States, shall give effect to their duty to cooperate by becoming members of the subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or participants in arrangements of that nature, or by agreeing to apply the conservation and management measures established by such organizations or arrangements, and that States having a real interest in the fisheries concerned may become members of such organizations or participants in such arrangements,

Recognizing the obligation of States to cooperate, either directly or through subregional, regional or global organizations, to enhance the ability of developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to conserve and manage straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and to develop their own fisheries for such stocks,

Recognizing also the importance of the Compliance Agreement, which builds upon the legal framework established by the Convention, and noting that while twenty-two States have accepted it, the Compliance Agreement has not yet entered into force,

Concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, including that noted in the report of the Secretary-General, threatens seriously to deplete populations of certain fish species, and in that regard urging States and entities to collaborate in efforts to address these types of fishing activities,

Welcoming the adoption by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of an International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, which focuses on the primary responsibility of the flag State and the use of all available jurisdiction in accordance with international law, including port State measures, coastal State measures, market-related measures and measures to ensure that nationals do not support or engage in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing,

Noting that the objective of the International Plan of Action is to prevent, deter and eliminate illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing by providing all States with comprehensive, effective and transparent measures by which to act, including through appropriate regional fisheries management organizations established in accordance with international law,

Recalling that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 1999 adopted international plans of action for the management of fishing capacity, for reducing the incidental catch of seabirds in longline fisheries and for the conservation and management of sharks,

Noting the importance of the wide application of the precautionary approach to the conservation, management and exploitation of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in accordance with the Agreement,

Noting also the importance of implementing the principles elaborated in article 5 of the Agreement, including ecosystem considerations, in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks,

Noting further the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem, adopted on 4 October 2001,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on recent developments and the current status of the Agreement,

1. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement that have not done so to ratify or accede to it and to consider applying it provisionally;

2. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

3. Emphasizes the importance of the entry into force and effective implementation of the provisions of the Agreement, including those provisions relating to bilateral, regional and subregional cooperation in enforcement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

4. Urges all States and other entities referred to in the Agreement to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to ensure the effective conservation, management and long-term sustainability of such stocks, to agree upon measures necessary to coordinate and, where there are no subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in respect of particular straddling or highly migratory fish stocks, to cooperate to establish such organizations or enter into other appropriate arrangements;

5. Welcomes the initiation of negotiations to establish regional and subregional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in several fisheries, and urges participants in those negotiations to apply provisions of the Convention and the Agreement to their work;

6. Anticipates the entry into force of the Agreement, and requests the Secretary-General, once the Agreement enters into force, to consult with States that have either ratified or acceded to the Agreement, for the purposes and objectives of, inter alia, considering the regional, subregional and global implementation of the Agreement; making any appropriate recommendation to the General Assembly on the scope and content of the annual report of the Secretary-General relating to the Agreement; and preparing for the review conference to be convened by the Secretary-General pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement;

7. Calls upon States to provide assistance to developing States as outlined in the Agreement, notes the importance of participation by representatives of developing States in forums in which fisheries issues are discussed, and once the Agreement enters into force, agrees to review the implementation of the provisions calling for assistance to developing States and to facilitate the establishment of a programme of assistance within the Agreement;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his next report on the status and implementation of the Agreement a background study on the provisions of Part VII of the Agreement concerning requirements of developing States, taking into account existing arrangements and assistance to developing States that may be relevant under the Agreement, as well as suggesting possible forms of assistance;

9. Invites States and international financial institutions and organizations of the United Nations system to provide assistance according to Part VII of the Agreement, including, if appropriate, the development of special financial mechanisms or instruments to assist developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, including developing their domestically flagged fishing fleet, value-added processing and expansion of their economic base in the fishing industry, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of those fisheries resources;

10. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have not done so to accept that instrument and afterwards to implement it effectively;

11. Calls upon all States to ensure that their vessels comply with the conservation and management measures in accordance with the Agreement that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

12. Calls upon States not to permit vessels flying their flag to engage in fishing on the high seas without having effective control over their activities and to take specific measures, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Agreement and the Compliance Agreement, to control fishing operations by vessels flying their flag;

13. Takes note of the outcome of the first meeting of the Joint Ad Hoc Working Group on Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing and Related Matters of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization, held in Rome from 9 to 11 October 2000, which contained a number of recommendations aimed at enhancing flag State and port State control over fishing vessels, with a view to eliminating the roots of illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

14. Calls upon the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and its members, in cooperation with States and entities, with regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other competent international organizations, such as the International Maritime Organization, to address possible key issues constituting effective fishery-related flag State control of a fishing vessel;

15. Urges States, as a matter of priority, to coordinate their activities and cooperate directly and, as appropriate, through relevant regional fisheries management organizations, in the implementation of the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing recently adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to develop national plans of action on illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and management of fishing capacity, to promote information-sharing, to encourage the full participation of all stakeholders, and in all efforts to coordinate all the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations with other international organizations, including the International Maritime Organization;

16. Encourages States and other entities to integrate in an appropriate manner, including through subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements to which they are party or in which they are participants, the requirements for the protection of the environment, in particular those resulting from multilateral environmental agreements, in the management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks;

17. Encourages States to give effect to the principles elaborated in article 5 of the Agreement, including ecosystem considerations, in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and to incorporate those principles in fisheries management at the national level and in subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements to which they are party or in which they are participants, or as appropriate at the global level;

18. Urges all States to apply the precautionary approach widely to the conservation, management and exploitation of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session a report on the status and implementation of the Agreement and on the impact of the entry into force of the Agreement on related or proposed instruments and programmes throughout the United Nations system relating to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, taking into account information provided by States, relevant specialized agencies, in particular the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and other appropriate organs, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, regional and subregional organizations and arrangements for the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, as well as other relevant intergovernmental bodies and non-governmental organizations, and including further developments relating to the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and other aspects of the present resolution;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session, under the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea", the sub-item entitled "Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks".

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by UNCLOS and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration and exploitation of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2001, the Authority, which had 137 members as at 31 December, held its seventh session (Kingston, Jamaica, 2-13 July) [ISBA/8/A/5].

On 29 March, the Authority entered into the first 15-year contracts for exploration for polymetallic nodules in the deep seabed, in accordance with the 2000 Regulations on Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Nodules in the Area [YUN 2000, p. 1257], signing contracts with a State enterprise of the Russian Federation and with a consortium formed by Bulgaria, Cuba, the Czech Republic, Poland, the Russian Federation and Slovakia. Further exploration contracts were signed in 2001 with governmental agencies or companies of China, France, Japan and the Republic of Korea.

No notable progress was made between the Authority and its host country, the Government of Jamaica, in securing a supplementary agreement for the Authority's continued use of its headquarters.

As at 31 December, the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority, adopted in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1226], had 28 signatories and six ratifications/accessions. The Protocol would enter into force 30 days after the date of deposit of the tenth instrument of ratification or accession.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its eleventh (5-16 March) and twelfth (17-28 September) sessions, both in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/74].

Regarding its judicial work, the Tribunal, on 20 April, delivered its judgement in the Grand Prince case (Belize v. France) and its Order in the MOX Plant case (Ireland v. United Kingdom). Following a provisional arrangement between Chile and the European Community in the case concerning the conservation and sustainable exploitation of swordfish stocks in the south-eastern Pacific Ocean, the Chamber suspended the proceedings by a 15 March Order. On 3 July, Panama filed against Yemen for the prompt release of the Chaisiri Reefer 2, a vessel flying the Panamanian flag, its cargo and crew. Following an agreement between the parties, the Tribunal, by a 13 July Order, discontinued the proceedings. Regarding the M/V Saiga (No. 2) case between Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and Guinea, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines informed the Tribunal on 12 April that the parties to the case had reached an amicable agreement on outstanding issues in respect of the Tribunal's judgement of 1 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1246]. In the Monte Confurco case between Seychelles and France, Seychelles informed the Tribunal on 12 January of developments concerning judicial proceedings with respect to the vessel and the Master before French courts [YUN 2000, p. 1257].

The Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, adopted by the seventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention on 23 May 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1361], entered into force on 30 December 2001, 30 days after the deposit of the tenth instrument of ratification or accession.

The eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, in May, approved the Tribunal's budget for 2002, in the amount of $7,807,500.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2001, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its ninth session (New York, 21-25 May) [CLCS/29]. The 21-member Commission reviewed existing training projects, the outline of a five-day training course for delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, and the basic flow chart for preparation of submissions by coastal States to the Commission. It also discussed the decision of the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the date of commencement of the 10-year period for making submissions to the Commission (see p. 1231), and examined the Secretariat's technical and logistical preparedness to provide the Commission with assistance in respect to submissions of coastal States. The Commission reiterated its request to the Secretariat to issue a training manual on the preparation of a submission to assist the States concerned, particularly developing States.

Other developments related to the Convention

Report of Secretary-General. In response to resolution 55/7 [YUN 2000, p. 1258], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in March his annual report on oceans and the law of the sea [A/56/58 & Add.1], in which he described developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and its related Agreements. The Secretary-General drew attention to the continuing deterioration in the seas, citing such problems as the explosive growth of coastal cities, pollution, the exhaustion of fishing stocks, the destruction of marine habitats, the increase in shipping and crimes committed at sea, the registration of ships under a foreign flag and the ageing of the world's shipping fleet.

In addition to describing the issue of maritime space, including national claims to maritime zones and delimitation of maritime boundaries, the Secretary-General discussed shipping and navigation, and crimes at sea; marine resources, marine environment and sustainable development; the settlement of disputes; marine science and technology; capacity-building; international cooperation and coordination; and the Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (see below).

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

The second meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 7-11 May) [A/56/121] considered the annual report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and, as recommended by General Assembly resolution 55/7 [YUN 2000, p. 1258], discussed two topics: marine science and the development and transfer of marine technology as mutually agreed, including capacity-building in that regard; and coordination and cooperation in combating piracy and armed robbery at sea. The Consultative Process, which was established by Assembly resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994], made a number of proposals on those topics for the Assembly's consideration. With regard to the third (2002) meeting of the Consultative Process, there was broad support for including capacity-building and the regional approach in oceans management and development, among other topics, as the focus of discussions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 28 November [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 56/12 [draft: A/56/L.17 & Add.1] by recorded vote (121-1-4) [agenda item 30 (a)].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997, 54/33 of 24 November 1999, 55/7 of 30 October 2000 and other relevant resolutions adopted subsequent to the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention") on 16 November 1994,

Recalling also its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, and considering that the Convention, together with the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Agreement"), provides the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources as defined in the Convention,

Emphasizing the universal and unified character of the Convention and its fundamental importance for the maintenance and strengthening of international peace and security, as well as for the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Conscious of the importance of increasing the number of States parties to the Convention and the Agreement in order to achieve the goal of universal participation,

Conscious also that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole through an integrated, interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach,

Convinced of the need, building on arrangements established in accordance with the Convention, to improve coordination at the national level and cooperation and coordination at both intergovernmental and inter-agency levels, in order to address all aspects of oceans and seas in an integrated manner,

Recognizing the important role that the competent international organizations have in relation to ocean affairs, in implementing the Convention and in promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Recalling that the role of international cooperation and coordination on a bilateral basis and, where applicable, within a subregional, interregional, regional or global framework is to support and supplement the national efforts of all States, including coastal States, to promote the integrated management and sustainable development of coastal and marine areas,

Mindful of the importance of the oceans and seas for the earth's ecosystem and for providing the vital resources for food security and for sustaining economic prosperity and the well-being of present and future generations,

Bearing in mind the contribution that major groups, as identified in Agenda 21, can make to raising awareness of the goal of the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Underlining once again the essential need for capacity-building to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, and reaffirming the importance of the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review,

Taking note also of the report on the work of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process ("the Consultative Process") established by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/33 in order to facilitate the annual review by the Assembly of developments in ocean affairs at its second meeting,

Bearing in mind that marine science, by improving knowledge, through sustained research efforts and the evaluation of monitoring results, and applying such knowledge to management and decision-making, is important for eradicating poverty, contributing to food security, conserving the world's marine environment and resources, helping to understand, predict, mitigate the effects of and respond to natural events, and promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reaffirming the need to achieve the effective application of marine scientific knowledge and technology, through cooperation at the regional and global levels, by ensuring access of decision makers to relevant advice and information, as well as to the transfer of technology and support for the production and diffusion of factual data and knowledge for end-users, as appropriate, taking fully into account socio-economic factors and traditional ecological knowledge,

Emphasizing the urgent need for cooperation at the international level to address the issue of the acquisition, generation and transfer of marine scientific data to assist coastal developing States,

Convinced of the need to develop, where appropriate, a strong regional focus in marine scientific research and technology, through existing regional organizations, arrangements and programmes, so as to ensure the most effective use of the available resources and the protection and preservation of the marine environment, particularly by avoiding duplication and by achieving a holistic approach to the scientific study of the oceans and their resources,

Expressing deep concern once again at the continued increase in the number of incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea, the harm they cause to seafarers, and the threats they pose to the safety of shipping and to the other uses of the sea, including marine scientific research and, consequently, to the marine and coastal environment, which are exacerbated further by the involvement of transnational organized crime,

Emphasizing, in this context, the need for the capacity-building and cooperation of all States and relevant international bodies at both the regional and global levels, as well as the business sectors, to prevent and combat piracy and armed robbery at sea,

Recognizing the importance of enhancing the safety of navigation, the need to provide accurate and up-to-date charts of world oceans in order to promote maritime safety, and the need to build hydrographic capacity, in particular for those States that do not yet have adequate hydrographic services,

Reiterating its serious concern at the increase in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and recognizing the importance of combating such activities, particularly by strengthening bilateral cooperation, as well as through the relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, and through the implementation of appropriate enforcement measures,

Expressing its deep concern once again at the degradation of the marine environment, particularly from land-based activities, and emphasizing the need for international cooperation and for a coordinated approach at the national and regional levels to this problem, bringing together the many different economic sectors involved in protecting the ecosystems, and in this context reaffirming the importance of ensuring the full implementation of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities,

Reiterating its concern also at the adverse impacts on the marine environment from ships, including pollution, in particular through the illegal release of oil and other harmful substances and by the dumping of hazardous waste, including radioactive materials, nuclear waste and dangerous chemicals, as well as the physical impacts on coral,

Welcoming resolution GC(45)/RES/10 adopted on 21 September 2001 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-fifth regular session, concerning measures to strengthen international cooperation in nuclear, radiation, transport and waste safety, including those aspects relating to maritime transport safety,

Bearing in mind the World Summit on Sustainable Development, to be held in Johannesburg, South Africa, in 2002, and emphasizing the importance, in the preparations for the Summit, of addressing the sustainable development of oceans and seas,

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2001, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of the Convention and related General Assembly resolutions.

The Division provided input for two training courses under its TRAIN-SEA-COAST (TSC) programme [YUN 1998, p. 1232], designed to build up in-country capacity to improve skills in integrated ocean and coastal management. Environmental officers, government officials and environmental specialists attended the courses on pollution control in the Benguela current ecosystem and on the management of marine protected areas in the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden region.

The sixteenth Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 139], was presented to Kamran Hashemi of Iran, and the fourth Special Fellowship award, funded by a grant from the United Kingdom, was presented to Boris Danailov of Bulgaria.

Chapter V

Other legal questions

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued in 2001 to consider, among its other standing agenda items, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security in order to strengthen the Organization and, as a priority, the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII. In that connection, the Security Council, in October, discussed general issues relating to sanctions aimed at, not only improving the effectiveness of UN sanctions, but also reducing their negative effects on civilian populations and on third States.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to address complaints raised by permanent missions to the United Nations relating to the maintenance of conditions for the proper functioning of those missions. The General Assembly requested the host country (the United States) to consider, among other measures, removing travel controls on permanent mission and Secretariat staff of certain nationalities, issuing entry visas in a timely manner to representatives of Member States for the purpose of attending UN official meetings and taking steps to resolve the problem relating to the parking of diplomatic vehicles.

During the year, two instruments emanated from the continuing work of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) aimed at the global unification and harmonization of international trade law: the draft Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade; and the UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Signatures, together with the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law. On 12 December, the Assembly took note of UNCITRAL's completion and adoption of those instruments, recommended that all States give favourable consideration to the Model Law and Guide to Enactment when enacting or revising their laws, and adopted and opened the Convention for signature or accession.

In other action, the Assembly, concerned at the recently disclosed information on ongoing research into the reproductive cloning of human beings, established an ad hoc committee to consider the elaboration of an international convention against such cloning.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on UN Charter

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/156 [YUN 2000, p. 1268], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, during its meetings in New York from 2 to 12 April 2001 [A/56/33], continued to consider proposals relating to: the maintenance of international peace and security, according priority to the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; the future of the Trusteeship Council; the improvement of the Committee's working methods; and the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

Under the first item, the working group of the whole, established by the Committee, completed the first paragraph-by-paragraph reading of the proposed revised basic conditions and standard criteria for the imposition of sanctions and other coercive measures submitted by the Russian Federation (2000), requested a recasting of five paragraphs and indicated that the text might require further readings. A paper on strengthening principles concerning the impact and application of sanctions was presented by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (2001), which addressed sanctions as a last resort, the financial or economic burdens sustained by the target State beyond those resulting from direct sanctions application, and that State's right to claim for damages resulting from sanctions imposed or applied illegally. The sponsor raised specific problems with regard to current sanctions regimes, which it said were not immutable, and was interested in answers to those problems.

Debate continued on the Russian Federation's working paper (1998), aimed at the elaboration of legal parameters for peacekeeping operations in the context of Chapter VI (peaceful settlement of disputes) of the Charter. It was pointed out that the issues raised in the proposal, for years on the Committee's agenda, could be addressed by other more competent bodies that had already covered those issues thoroughly. The sponsor could therefore withdraw the proposal and submit it to another body; or, if it had acquired the status of a Committee document, the Committee could request the Assembly, through the Sixth (Legal) Committee, to submit it to another body.

Cuba reiterated the viability of its proposal for strengthening the role and effectiveness of the United Nations (1998), which was concerned with the revitalization of the Assembly's role in terms not only of efficiency but also of democratization, stating that the Assembly was the only body with universal membership and no veto power. While that proposal and a Libyan revised proposal (2001) were aimed at enhancing coordination between the Assembly and the Security Council and focused on issues on which both bodies had a common responsibility, the Libyan proposal was more concerned with improving the Council's working methods to ensure objectivity, effectiveness and transparency. The view was expressed that double standards in the application of the Charter provisions in Chapter VII (action with respect to threats to the peace, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression), particularly with regard to sanctions imposition and implementation, undermined the Council's credibility. The need to restore balance between the Council and the Assembly, which could be achieved only through structural reforms of the Council, was pointed out, as was the fact that some of the proposal's aspects had been subsumed in the work of the body currently considering the Council's reform (see p. 1287).

Discussion of the joint Belarus and Russian Federation working paper requesting an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice (ICJ) (1999) on the legal consequences of the resort to the use of force by States, either without prior Council authorization or outside the context of self-defence, resulted in a revised draft text by the sponsors reiterating the importance of an ICJ advisory opinion. The point was made that, if consensus could not be reached in the Committee, the request could be submitted directly to the Assembly, which would, however, require explicit Council authorization. On the other hand, the Assembly was empowered by Article 96 of the Charter to request an advisory opinion from ICJ on any legal question.

As to the item on the peaceful settlement of disputes, a working paper, jointly submitted by Sierra Leone and the United Kingdom (2000) containing a revised draft resolution on dispute prevention and settlement, was further revised and submitted (2001) by the sponsors. The working group undertook a paragraph-by-paragraph reading of the preambular section; the operative paragraphs were not taken up, however, due to lack of time.

On the future of the Trusteeship Council, Malta reiterated its proposal (1995) that a revised Trusteeship Council would act in trust to safeguard the environment, protect the global commons and monitor the governance of the oceans, providing impetus for international environmental governance and coordination. Such a change, it was pointed out, would entail an amendment to the Charter, which should be considered in the context of the Charter's revision and reform of the Organization. One view held that serious consideration should be given to removing the Trusteeship Council from the UN books.

The Special Committee's working methods were debated on the basis of a revised working paper submitted by Japan (2000), which included proposals for making the best use of the Committee's conference resources; the advance submission of action-oriented proposals; avoiding duplication of discussions that were ongoing in other forums; a preliminary evaluation of new proposals; a mechanism to enable the Committee to decide whether to continue discussion of proposals already debated; and the duration of the Committee's meetings, the periodic review of its working methods, including the consideration of proposals on a biennial basis, and procedural improvements for the adoption of its reports. Following an exchange of views on the paper, Japan said it would consult with the Bureau and interested delegations on the working paper's future, taking account of the suggestions made.

With respect to the identification of new subjects for the Committee's consideration, the following topics were proposed for inclusion in a possible middle-term work programme: basic conditions of "provisional measures" employed by the Council under Article 40 of the Charter; clarification of the term "threat to international peace and security"; ways to overcome the negative consequences of globalization and ensure the supremacy of law in international relations; and applicability of the Charter provisions to the concept of "humanitarian intervention".

As to the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, the Secretary-General's ongoing efforts to reduce the backlog in their publication were commended. According to one view, the Assembly should consider further ways of providing financial and other assistance to the Secretariat to enable the speedy updating of those publications.

Report of Secretary-General. As called for by General Assembly resolution 55/156 [YUN 2000, p. 1268], the Secretary-General reported in September [A/56/330] on steps taken by the Secretariat to expedite the preparation of the Supplements to the Repertory and Repertoire, on the up-to-date status of those publications and on ongoing action to eliminate the existing production backlogs. The report indicated that a pilot project, begun in 2000, to place the Repertory on the Internet continued and a web site for it would be established during the 2002-2003 biennium; the Repertoire was available on the Internet on the UN Department of Political Affairs web site. In addition, contributions in the amount of $364,181 to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire were received from six Member States and one Permanent Observer.

Charter provisions relating to sanctions

Special Committee consideration. At the Special Committee's discussion on the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions [A/56/33], it was noted that little headway had been made on the item despite its having been on the agenda for several years. In view of the great hardship endured by those States, it was emphasized that an urgent and permanent solution had to be found. In that regard, support was voiced for the proposals to establish a trust fund and a permanent consultation mechanism.

Attention was again drawn to the 1998 ad hoc expert group proposals [YUN 1998, p. 1235] on developing a methodology for assessing the impact on third States of preventive or enforcement measures and on exploring innovative and practical measures of international assistance to those States. It was suggested that in 2002 the Committee should establish which of those recommendations had overall support, which ones required additional clarification and which ones drew divergent views, thereby allowing the Committee to endorse some of the recommendations and submit them for the General Assembly's consideration.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly, at its 2001 session, should continue to consider the results of the ad hoc expert group meeting, taking account of, among other information, the Committee's current debate; the related views presented by the Secretary-General in his 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1252] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1270] reports; his views on the expert group's deliberations and main findings to be submitted pursuant to Assembly resolutions 54/107 [YUN 1999, p. 1252] and 55/157 [YUN 2000, p. 1271]; and information he was also to submit on the follow-up to the 1999 Security Council note [YUN 1999, p. 1252], proposing improvements to the work of the sanctions committees related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions. The Committee encouraged the Secretary-General to expedite his report as requested by the resolutions named above for consideration by the Sixth Committee at the 2001 Assembly session.

Reports of Secretary-General (August and September). The Secretary-General, in his August report [A/56/303], prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 55/157 [YUN 2000, p. 1271], noted that the informal working group established by the Security Council in 2000 to examine issues from which to develop general recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of UN sanctions [ibid., p. 1270] had yet to reach consensus on all of the recommendations put forward. Those issues, which related to the development of adequate capacity and appropriate modalities by the competent units of the Secretariat to coordinate information about international assistance available to third States affected by sanctions, to develop a methodology for assessing adverse consequences actually incurred by those States and to explore practical measures of assistance to them, were being reviewed by several intergovernmental bodies. The Secretary-General would continue to support that review process to ensure the timely and efficient implementation of relevant intergovernmental mandates.

The Secretary-General also reported on action taken by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination to assist third States affected by sanctions imposition and enforcement.

In his September report [A/56/326] on the road map towards the implementation of the UN Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Secretary-General addressed each of the Declaration's goals and commitments, including the goal to minimize the adverse effects of UN economic sanctions on innocent populations, to subject such sanctions regimes to regular reviews and to eliminate the adverse effects of sanctions on third parties. He noted that, although sanctions were an important tool in maintaining or restoring international peace and security, further progress had to be made in developing targeted sanctions and improving their effectiveness, while seeking to minimize their humanitarian impact on civilian populations and on affected third States. Moreover, such sanctions had to be integrated into a comprehensive conflict resolution or prevention strategy and complemented by inducement measures. A permanent sanctions-monitoring mechanism needed to be developed to ensure better targeting and enforcement of smart sanctions and to draw to the Council's attention information on non-cooperation and non-compliance.

Security Council consideration (October). The Security Council met on 22 and 25 October [meeting 4394] to discuss general issues relating to sanctions. At their request, Germany, Sweden and the Permanent Observer of Switzerland were invited to participate; the Secretariat's Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs was also invited.

The Permanent Observer stated that, in cooperation with the United Nations, Switzerland had organized a series of international expert meetings (Interlaken, Switzerland; and New York, 1998-1999) to examine the feasibility of targeted financial sanctions. Referred to as the Interlaken process, the key recommendations called for a better understanding of the specific technical requirements of targeted financial sanctions and the preconditions necessary for them to be effective; standardized language for Council resolutions on sanctions; identification of the basic legal and administrative requirements for national implementation of financial sanctions; and development of greater UN capabilities for administering and monitoring financial sanctions. The Permanent Observer said the Interlaken process showed that the conceptual, technical and practical elements to make targeted financial sanctions effective were available, but required political will to translate them into reality. He presented to the Council a handbook on the results of the process, which would also be distributed to all permanent missions to the United Nations.

Germany also presented a handbook containing the results of the Bonn-Berlin process, a series of conferences, seminars and workshops (Bonn and Berlin, 1999-2000) organized by the Bonn International Center for Conversion, an organization with considerable sanctions expertise, which addressed two types of sanctions: arms embargoes and travel restrictions. The handbook, which would be sent to all UN Member States, set out model resolutions on arms embargoes and travel-related sanctions, with extensive commentary. It also reflected national implementation of those types of sanctions and offered suggestions for monitoring and enforcement.

Sweden announced that it was ready to continue the work accomplished by Switzerland and Germany through what it called the Stockholm process, to take place in 2002 and to which would be invited a broad range of government representatives, NGOs, regional organizations, academics and UN actors. It would focus on the implementation and monitoring of targeted sanctions and on finding a clearer understanding of their scope and limitations.

The UN Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Ibrahima Fall, stated that efforts to develop the concept of smart sanctions, pressuring regimes rather than peoples and thereby reducing their humanitarian costs, were to be welcomed in view of concerns over the negative effects that comprehensive sanctions regimes could have on civilian populations and on neighbouring and other affected States. Sanctions needed continual refining to strengthen their effectiveness and to ease their negative impact, thus consolidating support by the international community. He noted that some of the Interlaken recommendations were being put into practice and hoped the knowledge gained there could be successfully put to use within the Counter-Terrorism Committee established by Security Council resolution 1373(2001) (see p. 61). Many of the suggestions of the Bonn-Berlin process, also discussed in the Council's working group on general issues on sanctions [YUN 2000, p. 1371], had contributed to the improvement of sanctions resolutions.

Mr. Fall advanced a number of suggestions for effective sanctions implementation and monitoring so that sanctions might continue to be a useful tool in the maintenance of international peace and security. Pointing out that monitoring was the primary responsibility of Member States, he suggested that assistance could be provided to help them carry out that responsibility by a duly augmented sanctions secretariat and competent regional organizations. State compliance could be encouraged by greater Council attention to mitigating the negative effects of sanctions on civilian populations and third States, as well as providing support and inducements for neighbouring States. The Council could also consider assisting Member States to develop greater legal authority and administrative capacity for implementing sanctions. Model legislation could be provided to enable interested Member States to make adjustments in their domestic laws and regulations to permit compliance with sanctions.

As to the suggested establishment of a permanent sanctions-monitoring mechanism to ensure better targeting and implementation of smart sanctions, such a framework, in addition to allowing a systematic follow-up of violations or non-cooperation, would provide a point of contact between the Council and relevant regional and international organizations. The Council could make more frequent use of humanitarian assessments before imposing sanctions and, once they had been imposed, continue to monitor their humanitarian impact.

Mr. Fall said that targeted sanctions could have important deterrent and preventive roles and urged the Council to consider using sanctions in that context. Stating that making sanctions smarter was not enough, he reiterated that it was imperative to provide the sanctions committees and the Secretariat with the means necessary for the effective administration of sanctions regimes and of a credible monitoring system: technical expertise, enhanced analytical capacity and commitment of adequate resources.

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/102 [YUN 1999, p. 1258], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/56/484] on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law during 2000 and 2001. The report gave an account of UN activities and described contributions made by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). The Advisory Committee on the Programme held its thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth sessions on 22 November 2000 and 17 October 2001, respectively.

During the biennium, the UN Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) continued to perform various functions connected with the Programme's goals. The United Nations Audio-Visual Library in International Law established a web site on the UN home page. OLA's Codification Division continued to catalogue the tapes received for the Library and to assist in disseminating information regarding UN work on the codification and progressive development of international law, as well as on some aspects regarding its application.

UN fellowship programmes for the study of international law included the Fellowship Programme in International Law, provided by OLA in cooperation with UNITAR. Under the Programme, lectures and courses on private and public international law were given at The Hague Academy of International Law. Special lectures and seminars were also organized by OLA and UNITAR. Twenty-one international law fellowships were awarded in 2000 and 18 in 2001. Other programmes included the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea (see p. 1241), awarded annually by OLA, and the Fellowship Programme on the International Civil Service, organized by UNITAR in cooperation with other organizations.

The International Law Seminar, designed for advanced students specializing in international law and young professors or government officials dealing with that subject, held its thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh sessions (Geneva, 10-28 July 2000 and 2-20 July 2001). Funded by voluntary contributions from Member States and through national fellowships, the Seminars were organized by OLA through the United Nations Office at Geneva in conjunction with the annual sessions of the International Law Commission to allow seminar participants to observe its plenary meetings, attend specially arranged lectures and participate in working groups on specific topics.

UNESCO continued to disseminate international standards on human rights through its publications and partners. The network of UNESCO Chairs on Human Rights, Democracy, Peace and Tolerance was further expanded in 2001 with the establishment of new Chairs in Germany and the United States.

The report also provided guidelines and recommendations for the execution of the Programme in the 2002-2003 biennium, formulated to take account of the fact that the Assembly provided no new budgetary resources for it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/586], adopted resolution 56/77 without vote [agenda item 159].

Host country relations

At four meetings held in New York between 22 February and 26 October, the Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: exemption from taxation; housing for diplomatic personnel; host country travel regulations; acceleration of immigration and customs procedures; transportation issues; and a letter from the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations concerning an order to seize the Mission's bank accounts and the United States response. The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its 26 October meeting, were incorporated in its report [A/56/26].

The working group established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1376] on the use of diplomatic motor vehicles, parking and related matters and the working group on indebtedness did not meet in 2001.

Exemption from taxation

On 22 February, the United States clarified the regime governing the payment of property tax by permanent missions in New York. It said permanent missions that owned their buildings and rented, leased or otherwise made available additional space therein to other entities were engaging in commercial transactions and were therefore responsible for the property tax on that portion of the building so used even if the tenant was another diplomatic mission. Buildings occupied by permanent missions that were owned by their Governments and used by various organizations affiliated with those Governments were considered mixed-use buildings. The Governments of such properties were advised to discuss their tax status through normal bilateral channels. The United States also clarified that water, sewage and frontage taxes were not in fact taxes but charges for public utility services provided by the local government; therefore, permanent missions were obligated to pay for those services. The United States would communicate the foregoing information to all diplomatic missions.

Housing for diplomatic personnel

On 22 February, Iraq drew attention to the difficulty facing its Mission staff in obtaining housing due to the refusal of many landlords to rent to diplomats. It requested the United States Mission's assistance in resolving that problem. Acknowledging the host country's position that it could not interfere with personal and commercial transactions in a free market, Iraq nonetheless maintained that the problem had to be considered in the light of the host country's obligations vis-à-vis the permanent missions and their staff, including their housing. Cuba expressed support for Iraq's concerns and suggested that the New York City Commissioner for the United Nations might consider measures to improve the housing situation for diplomats accredited to the United Nations.

Host country travel regulations

On 22 February, the Committee heard complaints from Cuba, Iraq and the Russian Federation regarding the host country's policy of restricting the movement and travel of mission personnel and Secretariat officials of certain nationalities. They said that policy, in addition to hampering the work of the affected missions, was unfair, arbitrary, discriminatory and politically motivated. It violated not only human rights, the Charter and international law, but also the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations, contained in General Assembly resolution 169(II) [YUN 1947-48, p. 199]. Referring to the denial of its travel authorization requests beyond the 25-mile zone on behalf of its Mission officials, Cuba called on the host country to put an end to such unjustified practice.

The United States responded that such politically motivated allegations, which had not been legally supported, were undermining the Committee's effectiveness. It said the host country had continuously acted within its treaty obligations to the United Nations and challenged Member States to provide evidence to substantiate their allegations in writing to facilitate an appropriate response. As to Cuba's travel-related complaints, the United States recalled its position set out in a letter (that it had no obligation to permit unrestricted travel outside the UN Headquarters district for personal reasons or for travel not related to the sending State at the United Nations). It questioned Cuba's definition of what constituted official UN business and doubted that a personal recreational tourist trip could be defined as UN official business.

The Committee continued to urge the host country to remove the remaining travel restrictions as soon as possible.

Acceleration of immigration and customs procedures

On 1 June, Iraq raised the issue of the host country's three-week requirement for processing visa applications of accredited Iraqi diplomats, which caused official and personal difficulties for them. It drew attention to the inability of the Permanent Representative of Iraq to obtain a re-entry visa in connection with his departure to his country to visit his ailing mother. Cuba said its Mission also had suffered under the same visa regime, complaining that, often, entry visas would be issued to its delegates after the UN meetings they had to attend had ended or were about to end. It claimed that, despite its cooperative approach, it continued to suffer from the host country's selective and discriminatory treatment.

The United States reiterated that the host country's obligations under the Headquarters Agreement related to access to official meetings; it had always constructively responded to cases involving specific problems. Regarding Iraq's complaint, the Permanent Representative's passport had been returned to him to allow his immediate departure, which could not have been prevented by United States policy dealing with re-entry visas. As for delays in the issuance of visas to Cuban representatives, the host country recalled that UN meetings and conferences were scheduled months, sometimes years, in advance and questioned Cuba's tendency to wait for the last minute to apply for visas for those purposes.

Cuba commented that if submitting a visa application 21 days in advance constituted "waiting for the last minute", there was clearly a problem of definition. Iraq acknowledged that, while the host country did not prevent its Permanent Representative's departure, it was not advisable for him to leave without ensuring his ability to return. Since the accreditation of permanent mission representatives had been formally accepted by the United States, there appeared no compelling reason to restrict and/or delay issuance of their return visas.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would continue to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States pursuant to article IV, section 11, of the Headquarters Agreement, including to attend official UN meetings.

Transportation

On 1 June, Cuba raised the subject of diplomatic parking and stated that the number of reserved parking spaces had been reduced in the area of the Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations. The diplomatic parking sign had been removed without prior notification and fines had been imposed on the Mission's personnel who had parked where they had always parked. The United States replied that Cuba should have brought the matter to its attention so that remedial action, if warranted, could have been taken.

The Committee requested the host country to continue to take steps, in conjunction with the City of New York, to resolve that problem in order to maintain appropriate conditions for the functioning of the delegations and missions accredited to the United Nations in a manner that was fair, non-discriminatory, efficient and consistent with international law.

Bank accounts

On 17 August, Cuba reported that notice of a restraining order had been served on Chase Manhattan Bank on 7 August in respect to two accounts maintained by its Permanent Mission to the United Nations. That was a serious violation of Cuba's diplomatic immunity and hence of its bank accounts, which were immune from attachment and execution under international law; the notice was therefore in and of itself illegal. Following an exchange of letters between Cuba's lawyers and Chase Manhattan Bank, the bank decided on 8 August not to implement the restraining notice and to continue the operation of the accounts. On 9 August, Cuba notified the United States about the matter and, on 10 August, Cuban and United States representatives met in Washington, D.C. On 14 August, the United States, acknowledging that the situation was clearly a violation of diplomatic immunity, said it wished to remove any misunderstanding on Cuba's part. Cuba said that a restraining order by a private plaintiff had the same practical and legal effect as a court ruling and, although the bank had not given effect to the notice, the notice itself was a violation of Cuba's immunity. Cuba was satisfied with the United States recognition that diplomatic accounts were immune from attachment and execution; it was not pleased that the host country would intervene only if the operation of such accounts were interfered with. It did not address the heart of Cuba's position: that the restraining notice was illegal and should not be enforced.

Cuba said it had requested the meeting of the Committee to elicit a more detailed statement of the host country's position; to clarify the misunderstanding to which it had referred; to conduct a debate in the proper exercise of the Committee's competence; and to seek guarantees against the recurrence of such violations. Cuba also sought clarification regarding measures to be taken in the event the restraining notice was not rescinded and compensation for its legal expenses and interruption of its Mission's normal functioning.

The United States explained that the restraining notice was issued by an individual lawyer on behalf of a private plaintiff. Chase Manhattan Bank, realizing it was not a court order, never honoured the notice. Such notices were issued all the time, and while the United States could not prevent private individuals from taking such actions, it had done and would continue to do whatever was necessary to protect permanent mission assets and accounts.

On 26 October, Cuba said it had informed the United States on 23 August that the restraining notice was still in place. On 15 October, it set out its legal position in response to the arguments advanced by the United States at the Committee's 17 August meeting. The only acceptable solution, Cuba asserted, was for the restraining notice to be withdrawn; it would not deem the matter settled until its accounts were under full and normal operation.

Although the host country said it was not obliged to respond to the questions of the law firm representing the Permanent Mission of Cuba, it gave the following clarifications. With regard to a court action to vacate the restraining notice, efforts under United States law were not relevant as long as the host country had fulfilled its obligations under international law. To the assertion that the restraining notice was a form of legal process, it emphasized that it was for the host country authorities to uphold the immunity and to determine the manner in which they did so. It recalled that the notice had been issued to Chase Manhattan Bank, not to the Permanent Mission of Cuba. The bank had been advised, and was well aware, of the invalidity of the notice. Cuba might of course raise its legal concerns in the Sixth Committee; in the meantime, the host country maintained that the Cuban accounts had been fully protected.

As to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya's reference to unwarranted ceilings and restrictions imposed on its Mission's bank accounts, the host country explained that the licence permitting the Libyan Mission to maintain a United States-based account was an exception to the United States law precluding Libyan accounts in the country. The exception had been granted in recognition of the host country's obligations under the Headquarters Agreement. It invited the Libyan representative to discuss bilaterally the question of the ceiling imposed on such accounts.

International bioethics law

Convention against cloning of human beings

In view of the latest technological advances regarding the human genome, the Commission on Human Rights adopted a resolution in April on human rights and bioethics (see p. 674). In November, the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), as a follow-up to its resolutions calling on UNESCO to promote a programme of bioethics based on respect for human rights, adopted a resolution on bioethics, by which it invited the UNESCO Director-General to submit to it in 2002 the technical and legal studies undertaken regarding the possibility of elaborating universal norms on bioethics.

International economic law

In 2001, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

At its thirty-fourth session (Vienna, 25 June-13 July), UNCITRAL considered and adopted a draft Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade and a draft UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Signatures, together with a draft Guide to Enactment of the Model Law. In addition, it considered its future work in electronic commerce, several aspects of international commercial arbitration, insolvency law, security interests, training and technical assistance, the enlargement of UNCITRAL's membership and its working methods, and coordination and cooperation with other legal bodies. The report on the session [A/56/17 & Corr.3] described action taken on those topics and annexed a list of related documents.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/588 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/79 without vote [agenda item 161].

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Emphasizing the need for higher priority to be given to the work of the Commission in view of the increasing value of the modernization of international trade law for global economic development and thus for the maintenance of friendly relations among States,

Stressing the value of the participation by States at all levels of economic development and from different legal systems in the process of harmonizing and unifying international trade law,

Having considered the report of the Commission on the work of its thirty-fourth session,

Concerned that activities undertaken by other bodies of the United Nations system in the field of international trade law without coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law, as stated in its resolution 37/106 of 16 December 1982,

Stressing the importance of the further development of case law on United Nations Commission on International Trade Law texts in promoting the uniform application of the legal texts of the Commission and its value for government officials, practitioners and academics,

4. Expresses its appreciation to the secretariat of the Commission for the publication and distribution of the Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects, calls upon the secretariat to ensure, in a joint effort with intergovernmental organizations such as the regional commissions of the United Nations, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, organizations of the World Bank Group and regional development banks, wide dissemination of the Legislative Guide, and invites States to give favourable consideration to its provisions when revising or adopting legislation in that area;

5. Appeals to Governments that have not yet done so to reply to the questionnaire circulated by the Secretariat in relation to the legal regime governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards and, in particular, to the legislative implementation of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, done at New York on 10 June 1958;

6. Invites States to nominate persons to work with the private foundation established to encourage assistance to the Commission from the private sector;

7. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field and, in this connection:

(a) Calls upon all bodies of the United Nations system and invites other international organizations to bear in mind the mandate of the Commission and the need to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law;

(b) Recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, continue to maintain close cooperation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

10. Appeals to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the training and technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission;

11. Appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

13. Reiterates, in view of the increased work programme of the Commission, its request to the Secretary-General to strengthen the secretariat of the Commission within the bounds of the resources available in the Organization so as to ensure and enhance the effective implementation of the programme of the Commission;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to adjust the terms of reference of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia so as to make it possible for the resources in the Trust Fund to be used also for the financing of training and technical assistance activities undertaken by the Secretariat;

15. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions.

Electronic commerce

Model law on electronic signatures and draft guide

UNCITRAL, at its June/July session, had for its consideration the draft model law on electronic signatures, which the Working Group on Electronic Commerce had completed at its thirty-seventh session (18-19 September 2000); the comments received from Governments and international organizations on that draft; and the revised draft guide to the enactment of the UNCITRAL model law, prepared by the Secretariat based on the Working Group's deliberations and decisions during its thirty-eighth session (12-23 March 2001).

Having debated the proposals for amending draft articles 2, 5 and 7-12 of the draft model law in the light of the comments submitted by Governments and international organizations, UNCITRAL conducted a systematic review of the entire set of draft model law articles, as well as of the draft guide to enactment, which, it found, adequately implemented its intent to assist States in enacting and applying the model law. UNCITRAL requested the Secretariat to prepare the definitive version of the guide and to publish it, together with the text of the draft model law.

On 5 July, having completed consideration of the revised text of the draft model law and the definitive draft guide to enactment, UNCITRAL adopted the UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Signatures as it appeared in annex II to its report [A/56/17], together with the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law; requested the Secretary-General to transmit the texts to Governments and other interested bodies; and recommended that all States give favourable consideration to them, as well as to the 1996 Model Law on Electronic Commerce [YUN 1996, p. 1236], when enacting or revising their relevant laws.

Future work

For its discussion of possible future work on electronic commerce, UNCITRAL considered its Working Group's recommendations arrived at following the Group's 2001 review of proposals based on notes dealing with a possible convention to remove obstacles to electronic commerce in existing international conventions, dematerialization of documents of title and electronic contracting.

Those recommendations called for the preparation, on a priority basis, of an international instrument dealing with selected issues on electronics contracting and for the Secretariat to prepare studies on three other topics: a comprehensive survey of possible legal barriers to the development of electronic commerce in international instruments; a further study of the issues related to transfer of rights, in particular rights in tangible goods, by electronic means and mechanisms for publicizing and keeping a record of acts of transfer or the creation of security interests in such goods; and a study of the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration (1985) [YUN 1985, p. 1192] and the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules [YUN 1976, p. 823], to assess their appropriateness for meeting the specific needs of online arbitration.

Taking note of the exchange of views on those recommendations, UNCITRAL decided that they should be reconsidered during deliberations on its overall work programme by the Working Group in 2002.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/588 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/80 without vote [agenda item 161].

Model Law on Electronic Signatures of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, particularly those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Noting that an increasing number of transactions in international trade are carried out by means of communication commonly referred to as electronic commerce, which involves the use of alternatives to paper-based forms of communication, storage and authentication of information,

Recalling the recommendation on the legal value of computer records adopted by the Commission at its eighteenth session, in 1985, and paragraph 5 (b) of General Assembly resolution 40/71 of 11 December 1985, in which the Assembly called upon Governments and international organizations to take action, where appropriate, in conformity with the recommendation of the Commission, so as to ensure legal security in the context of the widest possible use of automated data processing in international trade,

Recalling also that the Model Law on Electronic Commerce was adopted by the Commission at its twenty-ninth session, in 1996, and complemented by an additional article, 5 bis, adopted by the Commission at its thirty-first session, in 1998, and recalling paragraph 2 of General Assembly resolution 51/162 of 16 December 1996, in which the Assembly recommended that all States should give favourable consideration to the Model Law when enacting or revising their laws, in view of the need for uniformity of the law applicable to alternatives to paper-based methods of communication and storage of information,

Convinced that the Model Law on Electronic Commerce is of significant assistance to States in enabling or facilitating the use of electronic commerce, as demonstrated by the enactment of the Model Law in a number of countries and its universal recognition as an essential reference in the field of electronic commerce legislation,

Mindful of the great utility of new technologies used for personal identification in electronic commerce and commonly referred to as electronic signatures,

Desiring to build on the fundamental principles underlying article 7 of the Model Law on Electronic Commerce with respect to the fulfilment of the signature function in an electronic environment, with a view to promoting reliance on electronic signatures for producing legal effect where such electronic signatures are functionally equivalent to handwritten signatures,

Convinced that legal certainty in electronic commerce will be enhanced by the harmonization of certain rules on the legal recognition of electronic signatures on a technologically neutral basis and by the establishment of a method to assess in a technologically neutral manner the practical reliability and the commercial adequacy of electronic signature techniques,

Believing that the Model Law on Electronic Signatures will constitute a useful addition to the Model Law on Electronic Commerce and significantly assist States in enhancing their legislation governing the use of modern authentication techniques and in formulating such legislation where none currently exists,

Being of the opinion that the establishment of model legislation to facilitate the use of electronic signatures in a manner acceptable to States with different legal, social and economic systems could contribute to the development of harmonious international economic relations,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for completing and adopting the Model Law on Electronic Signatures contained in the annex to the present resolution, and for preparing the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law;

2. Recommends that all States give favourable consideration to the Model Law on Electronic Signatures, together with the Model Law on Electronic Commerce adopted in 1996 and complemented in 1998, when they enact or revise their laws, in view of the need for uniformity of the law applicable to alternatives to paper-based forms of communication, storage and authentication of information;

3. Recommends also that all efforts be made to ensure that the Model Law on Electronic Commerce and the Model Law on Electronic Signatures, together with their respective Guides to Enactment, become generally known and available.

(b) To the geographic location of the place of business of the issuer or signatory.

2. A certificate issued outside [the enacting State] shall have the same legal effect in [the enacting State] as a certificate issued in [the enacting State] if it offers a substantially equivalent level of reliability.

3. An electronic signature created or used outside [the enacting State] shall have the same legal effect in [the enacting State] as an electronic signature created or used in [the enacting State] if it offers a substantially equivalent level of reliability.

4. In determining whether a certificate or an electronic signature offers a substantially equivalent level of reliability for the purposes of paragraph 2 or 3, regard shall be had to recognized international standards and to any other relevant factors.

5. Where, notwithstanding paragraphs 2, 3 and 4, parties agree, as between themselves, to the use of certain types of electronic signatures or certificates, that agreement shall be recognized as sufficient for the purposes of cross-border recognition, unless that agreement would not be valid or effective under applicable law.

Convention on assignment of receivables

In continuation of its work on uniform legislation on assignment in receivables financing, UNCITRAL had before it the consolidated version of the draft convention on assignment of receivables in international trade [A/CN.9/486], a revised version of the analytical commentary on the draft convention prepared by the Secretariat, comments by Governments and international organizations, and a Secretariat report on pending and other issues.

UNCITRAL reviewed the draft convention texts of articles 18-47, the annex to the draft convention comprising articles 1-9, the title and preamble; and reconsidered articles 1-17, which had been adopted in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1278], as well as articles 37 and 38. UNCITRAL subsequently referred the revised draft texts to a Secretariat drafting group for review so as to ensure consistency among the various language versions and requested the Secretariat to prepare a revised version of the commentary.

On 2 July, following its adoption of the draft Convention and annex as a whole, as contained in the drafting group's report, UNCITRAL adopted a decision, submitting to the General Assembly the draft Convention, as set forth in annex I to its report [A/56/17], with a recommendation that the Assembly consider it with a view to concluding a UN Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/588 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/81 without vote [agenda item 161].

United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Considering that problems created by uncertainties as to the content and the choice of the legal regime applicable to the assignment of receivables constitute an obstacle to international trade,

Convinced that the adoption of a convention on the assignment of receivables in international trade will enhance transparency, contribute to overcoming the problems of uncertainties in this field and promote the availability of capital and credit at more affordable rates, while protecting existing assignment practices and facilitating the development of new practices, as well as ensuring adequate protection of the interests of debtors in assignments of receivables,

Recalling that, at its twenty-eighth session in 1995, the Commission decided to prepare uniform legislation on assignment in receivables financing and entrusted the Working Group on International Contract Practices with the preparation of a draft,

Noting that the Working Group on International Contract Practices devoted nine sessions, from 1995 to 2000, to the preparation of the draft Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade, and that the Commission considered the draft Convention at its thirty-third session in 2000 and at its thirty-fourth session in 2001,

Being aware that all States and interested international organizations were invited to participate in the preparation of the draft Convention at all the sessions of the Working Group and at the thirty-third and thirty-fourth sessions of the Commission, either as members or as observers, with a full opportunity to speak and make proposals,

Noting with satisfaction that the text of the draft Convention was circulated for comments once before the thirty-third session of the Commission and a second time in its revised version before the thirty-fourth session of the Commission to all Governments and international organizations invited to attend the meetings of the Commission and the Working Group as observers, and that the comments received were before the Commission at its thirty-third and thirty-fourth sessions,

Taking note with satisfaction of the decision of the Commission at its thirty-fourth session to submit the draft Convention to the General Assembly for its consideration,

Taking note of the draft Convention adopted by the Commission,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for preparing the draft Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade;

2. Adopts and opens for signature or accession the United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade, contained in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Calls upon all Governments to consider becoming party to the Convention.

ANNEX

United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade

Preamble

The Contracting States,

Reaffirming their conviction that international trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit is an important element in the promotion of friendly relations among States,

Considering that problems created by uncertainties as to the content and the choice of legal regime applicable to the assignment of receivables constitute an obstacle to international trade,

Desiring to establish principles and to adopt rules relating to the assignment of receivables that would create certainty and transparency and promote the modernization of the law relating to assignments of receivables, while protecting existing assignment practices and facilitating the development of new practices,

Desiring also to ensure adequate protection of the interests of debtors in assignments of receivables,

Being of the opinion that the adoption of uniform rules governing the assignment of receivables would promote the availability of capital and credit at more affordable rates and thus facilitate the development of international trade,

Have agreed as follows:

Chapter I

Scope of application

Article 1

Scope of application

1. This Convention applies to:

(a) Assignments of international receivables and to international assignments of receivables as defined in this chapter, if, at the time of conclusion of the contract of assignment, the assignor is located in a Contracting State; and

(b) Subsequent assignments, provided that any prior assignment is governed by this Convention.

2. This Convention applies to subsequent assignments that satisfy the criteria set forth in paragraph 1 (a) of this article, even if it did not apply to any prior assignment of the same receivable.

3. This Convention does not affect the rights and obligations of the debtor unless, at the time of conclusion of the original contract, the debtor is located in a Contracting State or the law governing the original contract is the law of a Contracting State.

4. The provisions of chapter V apply to assignments of international receivables and to international assignments of receivables as defined in this chapter independently of paragraphs 1 to 3 of this article. However, those provisions do not apply if a State makes a declaration under article 39.

5. The provisions of the annex to this Convention apply as provided in article 42.

Article 2

Assignment of receivables

For the purposes of this Convention:

(a) "Assignment" means the transfer by agreement from one person ("assignor") to another person ("assignee") of all or part of or an undivided interest in the assignor's contractual right to payment of a monetary sum ("receivable") from a third person ("the debtor"). The creation of rights in receivables as security for indebtedness or other obligation is deemed to be a transfer;

(b) In the case of an assignment by the initial or any other assignee ("subsequent assignment"), the person who makes that assignment is the assignor and the person to whom that assignment is made is the assignee.

Internationality

A receivable is international if, at the time of conclusion of the original contract, the assignor and the debtor are located in different States. An assignment is international if, at the time of conclusion of the contract of assignment, the assignor and the assignee are located in different States.

Article 4

Exclusions and other limitations

1. This Convention does not apply to assignments made:

(a) To an individual for his or her personal, family or household purposes;

(b) As part of the sale or change in the ownership or legal status of the business out of which the assigned receivables arose.

2. This Convention does not apply to assignments of receivables arising under or from:

(a) Transactions on a regulated exchange;

(b) Financial contracts governed by netting agreements, except a receivable owed on the termination of all outstanding transactions;

(c) Foreign exchange transactions;

(d) Inter-bank payment systems, inter-bank payment agreements or clearance and settlement systems relating to securities or other financial assets or instruments;

(e) The transfer of security rights in, sale, loan or holding of or agreement to repurchase securities or other financial assets or instruments held with an intermediary;

(f) Bank deposits;

(g) A letter of credit or independent guarantee.

3. Nothing in this Convention affects the rights and obligations of any person under the law governing negotiable instruments.

4. Nothing in this Convention affects the rights and obligations of the assignor and the debtor under special laws governing the protection of parties to transactions made for personal, family or household purposes.

5. Nothing in this Convention:

(a) Affects the application of the law of a State in which real property is situated to either:

(i) An interest in that real property to the extent that under that law the assignment of a receivable confers such an interest; or

(ii) The priority of a right in a receivable to the extent that under that law an interest in the real property confers such a right; or

(b) Makes lawful the acquisition of an interest in real property not permitted under the law of the State in which the real property is situated.

Chapter II

General provisions

Article 5

Definitions and rules of interpretation

For the purposes of this Convention:

(a) "Original contract" means the contract between the assignor and the debtor from which the assigned receivable arises;

(b) "Existing receivable" means a receivable that arises upon or before conclusion of the contract of assignment and "future receivable" means a receivable that arises after conclusion of the contract of assignment;

(c) "Writing" means any form of information that is accessible so as to be usable for subsequent reference. Where this Convention requires a writing to be signed, that requirement is met if, by generally accepted means or a procedure agreed to by the person whose signature is required, the writing identifies that person and indicates that person's approval of the information contained in the writing;

(d) "Notification of the assignment" means a communication in writing that reasonably identifies the assigned receivables and the assignee;

(e) "Insolvency administrator" means a person or body, including one appointed on an interim basis, authorized in an insolvency proceeding to administer the reorganization or liquidation of the assignor's assets or affairs;

(g) "Priority" means the right of a person in preference to the right of another person and, to the extent relevant for such purpose, includes the determination whether the right is a personal or a property right, whether or not it is a security right for indebtedness or other obligation and whether any requirements necessary to render the right effective against a competing claimant have been satisfied;

(h) A person is located in the State in which it has its place of business. If the assignor or the assignee has a place of business in more than one State, the place of business is that place where the central administration of the assignor or the assignee is exercised. If the debtor has a place of business in more than one State, the place of business is that which has the closest relationship to the original contract. If a person does not have a place of business, reference is to be made to the habitual residence of that person;

(i) "Law" means the law in force in a State other than its rules of private international law;

(j) "Proceeds" means whatever is received in respect of an assigned receivable, whether in total or partial payment or other satisfaction of the receivable. The term includes whatever is received in respect of proceeds. The term does not include returned goods;

(k) "Financial contract" means any spot, forward, future, option or swap transaction involving interest rates, commodities, currencies, equities, bonds, indices or any other financial instrument, any repurchase or securities lending transaction, and any other transaction similar to any transaction referred to above entered into in financial markets and any combination of the transactions mentioned above;

(l) "Netting agreement" means an agreement between two or more parties that provides for one or more of the following:

- (i) The net settlement of payments due in the same currency on the same date whether by notation or otherwise;
- (ii) Upon the insolvency or other default by a party, the termination of all outstanding transactions at their replacement or fair market values, conversion of such sums into a single currency and netting into a single payment by one party to the other; or
- (iii) The set-off of amounts calculated as set forth in subparagraph (l) (ii) of this article under two or more netting agreements;
- (m) "Competing claimant" means:
  - (i) Another assignee of the same receivable from the same assignor, including a person who, by operation of law, claims a right in the assigned receivable as a result of its right in other property of the assignor, even if that receivable is not an international receivable and the assignment to that assignee is not an international assignment;
  - (ii) A creditor of the assignor; or
  - (iii) The insolvency administrator.

Article 6

Party autonomy

Subject to article 19, the assignor, the assignee and the debtor may derogate from or vary by agreement provisions of this Convention relating to their respective rights and obligations. Such an agreement does not affect the rights of any person who is not a party to the agreement.

Article 7

Principles of interpretation

1. In the interpretation of this Convention, regard is to be had to its object and purpose as set forth in the preamble, to its international character and to the need to promote uniformity in its application and the observance of good faith in international trade.

2. Questions concerning matters governed by this Convention that are not expressly settled in it are to be settled in conformity with the general principles on which it is based or, in the absence of such principles, in conformity with the law applicable by virtue of the rules of private international law.

Chapter III

Effects of assignment

Article 8

Effectiveness of assignments

1. An assignment is not ineffective as between the assignor and the assignee or as against the debtor or as against a competing claimant, and the right of an assignee may not be denied priority, on the ground that it is an assignment of more than one receivable, future receivables or parts of or undivided interests in receivables, provided that the receivables are described:

(a) Individually as receivables to which the assignment relates; or

(b) In any other manner, provided that they can, at the time of the assignment or, in the case of future receivables, at the time of conclusion of the original contract, be identified as receivables to which the assignment relates.

2. Unless otherwise agreed, an assignment of one or more future receivables is effective without a new act of transfer being required to assign each receivable.

3. Except as provided in paragraph 1 of this article, article 9 and article 10, paragraphs 2 and 3, this Convention does not affect any limitations on assignments arising from law.

Article 9

Contractual limitations on assignments

1. An assignment of a receivable is effective notwithstanding any agreement between the initial or any subsequent assignor and the debtor or any subsequent assignee limiting in any way the assignor's right to assign its receivables.

2. Nothing in this article affects any obligation or liability of the assignor for breach of such an agreement, but the other party to such agreement may not avoid the original contract or the assignment contract on the sole ground of that breach. A person who is not party to such an agreement is not liable on the sole ground that it had knowledge of the agreement.

3. This article applies only to assignments of receivables:

(a) Arising from an original contract that is a contract for the supply or lease of goods or services other than financial services, a construction contract or a contract for the sale or lease of real property;

(b) Arising from an original contract for the sale, lease or licence of industrial or other intellectual property or of proprietary information;

(c) Representing the payment obligation for a credit card transaction; or

(d) Owed to the assignor upon net settlement of payments due pursuant to a netting agreement involving more than two parties.

Article 10Transfer of security rights*

1. A personal or property right securing payment of the assigned receivable is transferred to the assignee without a new act of transfer. If such a right, under the law governing it, is transferable only with a new act of transfer, the assignor is obliged to transfer such right and any proceeds to the assignee.

2. A right securing payment of the assigned receivable is transferred under paragraph 1 of this article notwithstanding any agreement between the assignor and the debtor or other person granting that right, limiting in any way the assignor's right to assign the receivable or the right securing payment of the assigned receivable.

3. Nothing in this article affects any obligation or liability of the assignor for breach of any agreement under paragraph 2 of this article, but the other party to that agreement may not avoid the original contract or the assignment contract on the sole ground of that breach. A person who is not a party to such an agreement is not liable on the sole ground that it had knowledge of the agreement.

4. Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article apply only to assignments of receivables:

(a) Arising from an original contract that is a contract for the supply or lease of goods or services other than financial services, a construction contract or a contract for the sale or lease of real property;

(b) Arising from an original contract for the sale, lease or licence of industrial or other intellectual property or of proprietary information;

(c) Representing the payment obligation for a credit card transaction; or

(d) Owed to the assignor upon net settlement of payments due pursuant to a netting agreement involving more than two parties.

5. The transfer of a possessory property right under paragraph 1 of this article does not affect any obligations of the assignor to the debtor or the person granting the property right with respect to the property transferred existing under the law governing that property right.

6. Paragraph 1 of this article does not affect any requirement under rules of law other than this Convention relating to the form or registration of the transfer of any rights securing payment of the assigned receivable.

Chapter IV*Rights, obligations and defences*Section I*Assignor and assignee*Article 11Rights and obligations of the assignor and the assignee*

1. The mutual rights and obligations of the assignor and the assignee arising from their agreement are determined by the terms and conditions set forth in that agreement, including any rules or general conditions referred to therein.

2. The assignor and the assignee are bound by any usage to which they have agreed and, unless otherwise agreed, by any practices they have established between themselves.

3. In an international assignment, the assignor and the assignee are considered, unless otherwise agreed, implicitly to have made applicable to the assignment a usage that in international trade is widely known to, and regularly observed by, parties to the particular type of assignment or to the assignment of the particular category of receivables.

Article 12Representations of the assignor*

1. Unless otherwise agreed between the assignor and the assignee, the assignor represents at the time of conclusion of the contract of assignment that:

(a) The assignor has the right to assign the receivable;

(b) The assignor has not previously assigned the receivable to another assignee; and

(c) The debtor does not and will not have any defences or rights of set-off.

2. Unless otherwise agreed between the assignor and the assignee, the assignor does not represent that the debtor has, or will have, the ability to pay.

Article 13Right to notify the debtor*

1. Unless otherwise agreed between the assignor and the assignee, the assignor or the assignee or both may send the debtor notification of the assignment and a payment instruction, but after notification has been sent only the assignee may send such an instruction.

2. Notification of the assignment or a payment instruction sent in breach of any agreement referred to in paragraph 1 of this article is not ineffective for the purposes of article 17 by reason of such breach. However, nothing in this article affects any obligation or liability of the party in breach of such an agreement for any damages arising as a result of the breach.

Article 14Right to payment*

1. As between the assignor and the assignee, unless otherwise agreed and whether or not notification of the assignment has been sent:

(a) If payment in respect of the assigned receivable is made to the assignee, the assignee is entitled to retain the proceeds and goods returned in respect of the assigned receivable;

(b) If payment in respect of the assigned receivable is made to the assignor, the assignee is entitled to payment of the proceeds and also to goods returned to the assignor in respect of the assigned receivable; and

(c) If payment in respect of the assigned receivable is made to another person over whom the assignee has priority, the assignee is entitled to payment of the proceeds and also to goods returned to such person in respect of the assigned receivable.

2. The assignee may not retain more than the value of its right in the receivable.

Section II*Debtor*Article 15Principle of debtor protection*

1. Except as otherwise provided in this Convention, an assignment does not, without the consent of the debtor, affect the rights and obligations of the debtor, including the payment terms contained in the original contract.

2. A payment instruction may change the person, address or account to which the debtor is required to make payment, but may not change:

- (a) The currency of payment specified in the original contract; or
- (b) The State specified in the original contract in which payment is to be made to a State other than that in which the debtor is located.

Article 16

Notification of the debtor

1. Notification of the assignment or a payment instruction is effective when received by the debtor if it is in a language that is reasonably expected to inform the debtor about its contents. It is sufficient if notification of the assignment or a payment instruction is in the language of the original contract.

2. Notification of the assignment or a payment instruction may relate to receivables arising after notification.

3. Notification of a subsequent assignment constitutes notification of all prior assignments.

Article 17

Debtor's discharge by payment

1. Until the debtor receives notification of the assignment, the debtor is entitled to be discharged by paying in accordance with the original contract.

2. After the debtor receives notification of the assignment, subject to paragraphs 3 to 8 of this article, the debtor is discharged only by paying the assignee or, if otherwise instructed in the notification of the assignment or subsequently by the assignee in a writing received by the debtor, in accordance with such payment instruction.

3. If the debtor receives more than one payment instruction relating to a single assignment of the same receivable by the same assignor, the debtor is discharged by paying in accordance with the last payment instruction received from the assignee before payment.

4. If the debtor receives notification of more than one assignment of the same receivable made by the same assignor, the debtor is discharged by paying in accordance with the first notification received.

5. If the debtor receives notification of one or more subsequent assignments, the debtor is discharged by paying in accordance with the notification of the last of such subsequent assignments.

6. If the debtor receives notification of the assignment of a part of or an undivided interest in one or more receivables, the debtor is discharged by paying in accordance with the notification or in accordance with this article as if the debtor had not received the notification. If the debtor pays in accordance with the notification, the debtor is discharged only to the extent of the part or undivided interest paid.

7. If the debtor receives notification of the assignment from the assignee, the debtor is entitled to request the assignee to provide within a reasonable period of time adequate proof that the assignment from the initial assignor to the initial assignee and any intermediate assignment have been made and, unless the assignee does so, the debtor is discharged by paying in accordance with this article as if the notification from the assignee had not been received. Adequate proof of an assignment includes but is not limited to any writing emanating from the assignor and indicating that the assignment has taken place.

8. This article does not affect any other ground on which payment by the debtor to the person entitled to payment, to a competent judicial or other authority, or to a public deposit fund discharges the debtor.

Article 18

Defences and rights of set-off of the debtor

1. In a claim by the assignee against the debtor for payment of the assigned receivable, the debtor may raise against the assignee all defences and rights of set-off arising from the original contract, or any other contract that was part of the same transaction, of which the debtor could avail itself as if the assignment had not been made and such claim were made by the assignor.

2. The debtor may raise against the assignee any other right of set-off, provided that it was available to the debtor at the time notification of the assignment was received by the debtor.

3. Notwithstanding paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article, defences and rights of set-off that the debtor may raise pursuant to article 9 or 10 against the assignor for breach of an agreement limiting in any way the assignor's right to make the assignment are not available to the debtor against the assignee.

Article 19

Agreement not to raise defences or rights of set-off

1. The debtor may agree with the assignor in a writing signed by the debtor not to raise against the assignee the defences and rights of set-off that it could raise pursuant to article 18. Such an agreement precludes the debtor from raising against the assignee those defences and rights of set-off.

2. The debtor may not waive defences:

(a) Arising from fraudulent acts on the part of the assignee; or

(b) Based on the debtor's incapacity.

3. Such an agreement may be modified only by an agreement in a writing signed by the debtor. The effect of such a modification as against the assignee is determined by article 20, paragraph 2.

Article 20

Modification of the original contract

1. An agreement concluded before notification of the assignment between the assignor and the debtor that affects the assignee's rights is effective as against the assignee, and the assignee acquires corresponding rights.

2. An agreement concluded after notification of the assignment between the assignor and the debtor that affects the assignee's rights is ineffective as against the assignee unless:

(a) The assignee consents to it; or

(b) The receivable is not fully earned by performance and either the modification is provided for in the original contract or, in the context of the original contract, a reasonable assignee would consent to the modification.

3. Paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article do not affect any right of the assignor or the assignee arising from breach of an agreement between them.

Article 21Recovery of payments

Failure of the assignor to perform the original contract does not entitle the debtor to recover from the assignee a sum paid by the debtor to the assignor or the assignee.

Section III*Third partiesArticle 22Law applicable to competing rights*

With the exception of matters that are settled elsewhere in this Convention and subject to articles 23 and 24, the law of the State in which the assignor is located governs the priority of the right of an assignee in the assigned receivable over the right of a competing claimant.

Article 23Public policy and mandatory rules

1. The application of a provision of the law of the State in which the assignor is located may be refused only if the application of that provision is manifestly contrary to the public policy of the forum State.

2. The rules of the law of either the forum State or any other State that are mandatory irrespective of the law otherwise applicable may not prevent the application of a provision of the law of the State in which the assignor is located.

3. Notwithstanding paragraph 2 of this article, in an insolvency proceeding commenced in a State other than the State in which the assignor is located, any preferential right that arises, by operation of law, under the law of the forum State and is given priority over the rights of an assignee in insolvency proceedings under the law of that State may be given priority notwithstanding article 22. A State may deposit at any time a declaration identifying any such preferential right.

Article 24Special rules on proceeds

1. If proceeds are received by the assignee, the assignee is entitled to retain those proceeds to the extent that the assignee's right in the assigned receivable had priority over the right of a competing claimant in the assigned receivable.

2. If proceeds are received by the assignor, the right of the assignee in those proceeds has priority over the right of a competing claimant in those proceeds to the same extent as the assignee's right had priority over the right in the assigned receivable of that claimant if:

(a) The assignor has received the proceeds under instructions from the assignee to hold the proceeds for the benefit of the assignee; and

(b) The proceeds are held by the assignor for the benefit of the assignee separately and are reasonably identifiable from the assets of the assignor, such as in the case of a separate deposit or securities account containing only proceeds consisting of cash or securities.

3. Nothing in paragraph 2 of this article affects the priority of a person having against the proceeds a right of set-off or a right created by agreement and not derived from a right in the receivable.

Article 25Subordination

An assignee entitled to priority may at any time subordinate its priority unilaterally or by agreement in favour of any existing or future assignees.

Chapter V*Autonomous conflict-of-laws rulesArticle 26Application of chapter V*

The provisions of this chapter apply to matters that are:

(a) Within the scope of this Convention as provided in article 1, paragraph 4; and

(b) Otherwise within the scope of this Convention but not settled elsewhere in it.

Article 27Form of a contract of assignment

1. A contract of assignment concluded between persons who are located in the same State is formally valid as between them if it satisfies the requirements of either the law which governs it or the law of the State in which it is concluded.

2. A contract of assignment concluded between persons who are located in different States is formally valid as between them if it satisfies the requirements of either the law which governs it or the law of one of those States.

Article 28Law applicable to the mutual rights and obligations of the assignor and the assignee

1. The mutual rights and obligations of the assignor and the assignee arising from their agreement are governed by the law chosen by them.

2. In the absence of a choice of law by the assignor and the assignee, their mutual rights and obligations arising from their agreement are governed by the law of the State with which the contract of assignment is most closely connected.

Article 29Law applicable to the rights and obligations of the assignee and the debtor

The law governing the original contract determines the effectiveness of contractual limitations on assignment as between the assignee and the debtor, the relationship between the assignee and the debtor, the conditions under which the assignment can be invoked against the debtor and whether the debtor's obligations have been discharged.

Article 30Law applicable to priority

1. The law of the State in which the assignor is located governs the priority of the right of an assignee in the assigned receivable over the right of a competing claimant.

2. The rules of the law of either the forum State or any other State that are mandatory irrespective of the law otherwise applicable may not prevent the application of a provision of the law of the State in which the assignor is located.

3. Notwithstanding paragraph 2 of this article, in an insolvency proceeding commenced in a State other than the State in which the assignor is located, any preferential right that arises, by operation of law, under the law of the forum State and is given priority over the rights of an assignee in insolvency proceedings under the law of that State may be given priority notwithstanding paragraph 1 of this article.

Article 31

Mandatory rules

1. Nothing in articles 27 to 29 restricts the application of the rules of the law of the forum State in a situation where they are mandatory irrespective of the law otherwise applicable.

2. Nothing in articles 27 to 29 restricts the application of the mandatory rules of the law of another State with which the matters settled in those articles have a close connection if and insofar as, under the law of that other State, those rules must be applied irrespective of the law otherwise applicable.

Article 32

Public policy

With regard to matters settled in this chapter, the application of a provision of the law specified in this chapter may be refused only if the application of that provision is manifestly contrary to the public policy of the forum State.

Chapter VI

Final provisions

Article 33

Depositary

The Secretary-General of the United Nations is the depositary of this Convention.

Article 34

Signature, ratification, acceptance, approval, accession

1. This Convention is open for signature by all States at the Headquarters of the United Nations in New York until 31 December 2003.

2. This Convention is subject to ratification, acceptance or approval by the signatory States.

3. This Convention is open to accession by all States that are not signatory States as from the date it is open for signature.

4. Instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval and accession are to be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 35

Application to territorial units

1. If a State has two or more territorial units in which different systems of law are applicable in relation to the matters dealt with in this Convention, it may at any time declare that this Convention is to extend to all its territorial units or only one or more of them, and may at any time substitute another declaration for its earlier declaration.

2. Such declarations are to state expressly the territorial units to which this Convention extends.

3. If, by virtue of a declaration under this article, this Convention does not extend to all territorial units of a State and the assignor or the debtor is located in a territorial unit to which this Convention does not extend, this location is considered not to be in a Contracting State.

4. If, by virtue of a declaration under this article, this Convention does not extend to all territorial units of a State and the law governing the original contract is the law in force in a territorial unit to which this Convention does not extend, the law governing the original contract is considered not to be the law of a Contracting State.

5. If a State makes no declaration under paragraph 1 of this article, the Convention is to extend to all territorial units of that State.

Article 36

Location in a territorial unit

If a person is located in a State which has two or more territorial units, that person is located in the territorial unit in which it has its place of business. If the assignor or the assignee has a place of business in more than one territorial unit, the place of business is that place where the central administration of the assignor or the assignee is exercised. If the debtor has a place of business in more than one territorial unit, the place of business is that which has the closest relationship to the original contract. If a person does not have a place of business, reference is to be made to the habitual residence of that person. A State with two or more territorial units may specify by declaration at any time other rules for determining the location of a person within that State.

Applicable law in territorial units

Any reference in this Convention to the law of a State means, in the case of a State which has two or more territorial units, the law in force in the territorial unit. Such a State may specify by declaration at any time other rules for determining the applicable law, including rules that render applicable the law of another territorial unit of that State.

Conflicts with other international agreements

1. This Convention does not prevail over any international agreement that has already been or may be entered into and that specifically governs a transaction otherwise governed by this Convention.

2. Notwithstanding paragraph 1 of this article, this Convention prevails over the Unidroit Convention on International Factoring ("the Ottawa Convention"). To the extent that this Convention does not apply to the rights and obligations of a debtor, it does not preclude the application of the Ottawa Convention with respect to the rights and obligations of that debtor.

Article 39

Declaration on application of chapter V

A State may declare at any time that it will not be bound by chapter V.

Limitations relating to Governments and other public entities

A State may declare at any time that it will not be bound or the extent to which it will not be bound by articles 9 and 10 if the debtor or any person granting a personal or property right securing payment of the assigned receivable is located in that State at the time of conclusion of the original contract and is a Government, central or local, any subdivision thereof, or an entity constituted for a public purpose. If a State has made such a declaration, articles 9 and 10 do not affect the rights and obligations of that debtor or person. A State may list in a declaration the types of entity that are the subject of a declaration.

Article 41Other exclusions

1. A State may declare at any time that it will not apply this Convention to specific types of assignment or to the assignment of specific categories of receivables clearly described in a declaration.

2. After a declaration under paragraph 1 of this article takes effect:

(a) This Convention does not apply to such types of assignment or to the assignment of such categories of receivables if the assignor is located at the time of conclusion of the contract of assignment in such a State; and

(b) The provisions of this Convention that affect the rights and obligations of the debtor do not apply if, at the time of conclusion of the original contract, the debtor is located in such a State or the law governing the original contract is the law of such a State.

3. This article does not apply to assignments of receivables listed in article 9, paragraph 3.

Article 42Application of the annex

1. A State may at any time declare that it will be bound by:

(a) The priority rules set forth in section I of the annex and will participate in the international registration system established pursuant to section II of the annex;

(b) The priority rules set forth in section I of the annex and will effectuate such rules by use of a registration system that fulfils the purposes of such rules, in which case, for the purposes of section I of the annex, registration pursuant to such a system has the same effect as registration pursuant to section II of the annex;

(c) The priority rules set forth in section III of the annex;

(d) The priority rules set forth in section IV of the annex; or

(e) The priority rules set forth in articles 7 and 9 of the annex.

2. For the purposes of article 22:

(a) The law of a State that has made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 (a) or (b) of this article is the set of rules set forth in section I of the annex, as affected by any declaration made pursuant to paragraph 5 of this article;

(b) The law of a State that has made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 (c) of this article is the set of rules set forth in section III of the annex, as affected by any declaration made pursuant to paragraph 5 of this article;

(c) The law of a State that has made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 (d) of this article is the set of rules set forth in section IV of the annex, as affected by any declaration made pursuant to paragraph 5 of this article; and

(d) The law of a State that has made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 (e) of this article is the set of rules set forth in articles 7 and 9 of the annex, as affected by any declaration made pursuant to paragraph 5 of this article.

3. A State that has made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article may establish rules pursuant to which contracts of assignment concluded before the declaration takes effect become subject to those rules within a reasonable time.

4. A State that has not made a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article may, in accordance with priority rules in force in that State, utilize the registration system established pursuant to section II of the annex.

5. At the time a State makes a declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article or thereafter, it may declare that:

(a) It will not apply the priority rules chosen under paragraph 1 of this article to certain types of assignment or to the assignment of certain categories of receivables; or

(b) It will apply those priority rules with modifications specified in that declaration.

6. At the request of Contracting or Signatory States to this Convention comprising not less than one third of the Contracting and Signatory States, the depositary shall convene a conference of the Contracting and Signatory States to designate the supervising authority and the first registrar and to prepare or revise the regulations referred to in section II of the annex.

Article 43Effect of declaration

1. Declarations made under articles 35, paragraph 1, 36, 37 or 39 to 42 at the time of signature are subject to confirmation upon ratification, acceptance or approval.

2. Declarations and confirmations of declarations are to be in writing and to be formally notified to the depositary.

3. A declaration takes effect simultaneously with the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the State concerned. However, a declaration of which the depositary receives formal notification after such entry into force takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months after the date of its receipt by the depositary.

4. A State that makes a declaration under articles 35, paragraph 1, 36, 37 or 39 to 42 may withdraw it at any time by a formal notification in writing addressed to the depositary. Such withdrawal takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months after the date of the receipt of the notification by the depositary.

5. In the case of a declaration under articles 35, paragraph 1, 36, 37 or 39 to 42 that takes effect after the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the State concerned or in the case of a withdrawal of any such declaration, the effect of which in either case is to cause a rule in this Convention, including any annex, to become applicable:

(a) Except as provided in paragraph 5 (b) of this article, that rule is applicable only to assignments for which the contract of assignment is concluded on or after the date when the declaration or withdrawal takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a);

(b) A rule that deals with the rights and obligations of the debtor applies only in respect of original contracts concluded on or after the date when the declaration or withdrawal takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 3.

6. In the case of a declaration under articles 35, paragraph 1, 36, 37 or 39 to 42 that takes effect after the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the State concerned or in the case of a withdrawal of any such declaration, the effect of which in either case is to cause a rule in this Convention, including any annex, to become inapplicable:

(a) Except as provided in paragraph 6 (b) of this article, that rule is inapplicable to assignments for which the contract of assignment is concluded on or after the date when the declaration or withdrawal takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a);

(b) A rule that deals with the rights and obligations of the debtor is inapplicable in respect of original contracts concluded on or after the date when the declaration or withdrawal takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 3.

7. If a rule rendered applicable or inapplicable as a result of a declaration or withdrawal referred to in paragraph 5 or 6 of this article is relevant to the determination of priority with respect to a receivable for which the contract of assignment is concluded before such declaration or withdrawal takes effect or with respect to its proceeds, the right of the assignee has priority over the right of a competing claimant to the extent that, under the law that would determine priority before such declaration or withdrawal takes effect, the right of the assignee would have priority.

Article 44

Reservations

No reservations are permitted except those expressly authorized in this Convention.

Article 45

Entry into force

1. This Convention enters into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months from the date of deposit of the fifth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession with the depositary.

2. For each State that becomes a Contracting State to this Convention after the date of deposit of the fifth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, this Convention enters into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months after the date of deposit of the appropriate instrument on behalf of that State.

3. This Convention applies only to assignments if the contract of assignment is concluded on or after the date when this Convention enters into force in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a), provided that the provisions of this Convention that deal with the rights and obligations of the debtor apply only to assignments of receivables arising from original contracts concluded on or after the date when this Convention enters into force in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 3.

4. If a receivable is assigned pursuant to a contract of assignment concluded before the date when this Convention enters into force in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a), the right of the assignee has priority over the right of a competing claimant with respect to the receivable to the extent that, under the law that would determine priority in the absence of this Convention, the right of the assignee would have priority.

Article 46

Denunciation

1. A Contracting State may denounce this Convention at any time by written notification addressed to the depositary.

2. The denunciation takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of one year after the notification is received by the depositary. Where a longer period is specified in the notification, the denunciation takes effect upon the expiration of such longer period after the notification is received by the depositary.

3. This Convention remains applicable to assignments if the contract of assignment is concluded before the date when the denunciation takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a), provided that the provisions of this Convention that deal with the rights and obligations of the debtor remain applicable only to assignments of receivables arising from original contracts concluded before the date when the denunciation takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 3.

4. If a receivable is assigned pursuant to a contract of assignment concluded before the date when the denunciation takes effect in respect of the Contracting State referred to in article 1, paragraph 1 (a), the right of the assignee has priority over the right of a competing claimant with respect to the receivable to the extent that, under the law that would determine priority under this Convention, the right of the assignee would have priority.

Article 47

Revision and amendment

1. At the request of not less than one third of the Contracting States to this Convention, the depositary shall convene a conference of the Contracting States to revise or amend it.

2. Any instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession deposited after the entry into force of an amendment to this Convention is deemed to apply to the Convention as amended.

Annex to the Convention

Section I

Priority rules based on registration

Article 1

Priority among several assignees

As between assignees of the same receivable from the same assignor, the priority of the right of an assignee in the assigned receivable is determined by the order in which data about the assignment are registered under section II of this annex, regardless of the time of transfer of the receivable. If no such data are registered, priority is determined by the order of conclusion of the respective contracts of assignment.

Article 2

Priority between the assignee and the insolvency administrator or creditors of the assignor

The right of an assignee in an assigned receivable has priority over the right of an insolvency administrator and creditors who obtain a right in the assigned receivable by attachment, judicial act or similar act of a competent authority that gives rise to such right, if the receivable was assigned, and data about the assignment were registered under section II of this annex, before the commencement of such insolvency proceeding, attachment, judicial act or similar act.

Section II

Registration

Establishment of a registration system

A registration system will be established for the registration of data about assignments, even if the relevant assignment or receivable is not international, pursuant to the regulations to be promulgated by the registrar and the supervising authority. Regulations promulgated by the registrar and the supervising authority under this annex shall be consistent with this annex. The regulations will prescribe in detail the manner in which the registration system will operate, as well as the procedure for resolving disputes relating to that operation.

Registration

1. Any person may register data with regard to an assignment at the registry in accordance with this annex and the regulations. As provided in the regulations, the data registered shall be the identification of the assignor and the assignee and a brief description of the assigned receivables.

2. A single registration may cover one or more assignments by the assignor to the assignee of one or more existing or future receivables, irrespective of whether the receivables exist at the time of registration.

3. A registration may be made in advance of the assignment to which it relates. The regulations will establish the procedure for the cancellation of a registration in the event that the assignment is not made.

4. Registration or its amendment is effective from the time when the data set forth in paragraph 1 of this article are available to searchers. The registering party may specify, from options set forth in the regulations, a period of effectiveness for the registration. In the absence of such a specification, a registration is effective for a period of five years.

5. Regulations will specify the manner in which registration may be renewed, amended or cancelled and regulate such other matters as are necessary for the operation of the registration system.

6. Any defect, irregularity, omission or error with regard to the identification of the assignor that would result in data registered not being found upon a search based on a proper identification of the assignor renders the registration ineffective.

Article 5

Registry searches

1. Any person may search the records of the registry according to identification of the assignor, as set forth in the regulations, and obtain a search result in writing.

2. A search result in writing that purports to be issued by the registry is admissible as evidence and is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof of the registration of the data to which the search relates, including the date and hour of registration.

Section III

Priority rules based on the time of the contract of assignment

Article 6

Priority among several assignees

As between assignees of the same receivable from the same assignor, the priority of the right of an assignee in the assigned receivable is determined by the order of conclusion of the respective contracts of assignment.

Priority between the assignee and the insolvency administrator or creditors of the assignor

The right of an assignee in an assigned receivable has priority over the right of an insolvency administrator and creditors who obtain a right in the assigned receivable by attachment, judicial act or similar act of a competent authority that gives rise to such right, if the receivable was assigned before the commencement of such insolvency proceeding, attachment, judicial act or similar act.

Article 8

Proof of time of contract of assignment

The time of conclusion of a contract of assignment in respect of articles 6 and 7 of this annex may be proved by any means, including witnesses.

Section IV

Priority rules based on the time of notification of assignment

Article 9

Priority among several assignees

As between assignees of the same receivable from the same assignor, the priority of the right of an assignee in the assigned receivable is determined by the order in which notification of the respective assignments is received by the debtor. However, an assignee may not obtain priority over a prior assignment of which the assignee had knowledge at the time of conclusion of the contract of assignment to that assignee by notifying the debtor.

Priority between the assignee and the insolvency administrator or creditors of the assignor

The right of an assignee in an assigned receivable has priority over the right of an insolvency administrator and creditors who obtain a right in the assigned receivable by attachment, judicial act or similar act of a competent authority that gives rise to such right, if the receivable was assigned and notification was received by the debtor before the commencement of such insolvency proceeding, attachment, judicial act or similar act.

DONE at . . . , this . . . day of . . . two thousand one, in a single original, of which the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed the present Convention.

International commercial arbitration

Privately financed infrastructure projects

UNCITRAL took note of the results of the Colloquium on Privately Financed Infrastructure: Legal Framework and Technical Assistance (Vienna, 2-4 July), organized by the Secretariat with the co-sponsorship of the Public-Private Infrastructure Advisory Facility, a multi-donor technical assistance facility aimed at helping developing countries improve the quality of their infrastructure through private sector involvement. UNCITRAL agreed that the Colloquium's proceedings should be published by the United Nations and endorsed its recommendation that the Secretariat, in coordination with other organizations, should undertake joint initiatives to ensure widespread awareness of the 2000 UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Privately Financed Infrastructure Projects [YUN 2000, p. 1278].

In the light of the views expressed as to the desirability and feasibility of further work in privately financed infrastructure projects, UNCITRAL agreed that a working group should be entrusted with the task of drafting core model legislative provisions in that field.

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

UNCITRAL noted that, at the beginning of its June/July session, the Secretariat had received replies from 59 States parties (out of the current 125) to its questionnaire relating to the legal regime governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign awards in States parties to the 1958 Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390]. The Commission repeated its appeal to States parties to the Convention that had not replied to the questionnaire to do so as soon as possible, and requested the Secretariat to prepare, for a future UNCITRAL session, a note presenting the findings based on the analysis of the information gathered.

Commercial dispute settlement

UNCITRAL considered the report of the Working Group on Arbitration on its thirty-third (Vienna, 20 November-1 December 2000) and thirty-fourth (New York, 21 May-1 June 2001) sessions. It commended the Working Group for the progress accomplished regarding the three main issues under discussion, namely, the requirement of the written form for the arbitration agreement, interim measures of protection and the preparation of a model law on conciliation.

Regarding the first issue, it was pointed out that, while the Working Group should not lose sight of the importance of providing certainty as to the intent of the parties to arbitrate, it was equally important to work towards facilitating a more flexible interpretation of the strict form requirement contained in the 1958 New York Convention so as not to frustrate the parties' expectations when they agreed to arbitrate. In that respect, UNCITRAL took note of the possibility that the Working Group could examine further the meaning and effect of the more-favourable-right provision of article VII of the New York Convention. As to the second issue, the Working Group was requested to continue its work on the basis of revised draft provisions of the 1985 UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration to be prepared by the Secretariat. On the third issue, it was requested to complete the examination of articles 1-16 of the draft model legislative provisions on conciliation as a matter of priority, with a view to presenting a draft model law on conciliation for review and adoption by UNCITRAL at its 2002 session.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

UNCITRAL noted the ongoing work under the established system for the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT). It was noted that CLOUT was an important means of promoting the uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL texts by enabling interested persons, such as judges, arbitrators, lawyers or parties to commercial transactions, to take into account decisions and awards of other jurisdictions when rendering their own judgements or opinions or adjusting their actions to the prevailing interpretation of those texts. The Commission expressed appreciation to national correspondents for their work in the collection of relevant decisions and arbitral awards and the preparation of case abstracts, as well as to the Secretariat for compiling, editing, issuing and distributing abstracts.

Transport law

As requested by UNCITRAL, the Secretary-General submitted a report on possible future work in transport law, describing in particular the scope of and issues to be dealt with in a future legislative instrument on the carriage of goods by sea. Those issues included the scope of application of the instrument, the period of responsibility of the carrier, its obligations and liability, obligations of the shipper, transport documents, freight, delivery to the consignee, right of control of parties interested in the cargo during carriage, transfer of rights in goods, the party that had the right to bring an action against the carrier and the time bar for action against the carrier.

To consider the issues outlined in the report, UNCITRAL established a working group for which the Secretariat would prepare a preliminary working document containing drafts on possible solutions for a future instrument, and the International Maritime Committee would prepare alternatives and comments. UNCITRAL decided that the work should include issues of liability and that the working group should initially cover port-to-port transport operations, although it would be free to study the desirability and feasibility of dealing with door-to-door transport operations.

Model law on corporate insolvency

UNCITRAL considered the report on the UNCITRAL-INSOL-IBA Global Insolvency Colloquium (Vienna, 4-6 December 2000), which provided a forum for dialogue among insolvency practitioners and experts, international organizations and government representatives on the work carried out by other organizations—the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Asian Development Bank (ADB), the International Federation of Insolvency Professionals (INSOL) and the International Bar Association (IBA)—in the area of insolvency law reform. The report noted the key elements that an insolvency regime should address: eligibility and access criteria; bankruptcy estate; application of automatic stay; role of management; role of creditors/creditor committees; treatment of contractual obligations; avoidance actions; distribution priorities; and additional issues specific to reorganization (relationship between liquidation and reorganization; business operations and financing; and provisions specific to the reorganization plan).

UNCITRAL discussed the Colloquium's recommendations, in particular the form that future work might take and the interpretation of the mandate given to the Working Group in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1280]. The recommendations outlined three key areas for organizing the material for future work: the first would reflect the key component of the reports from the World Bank, IMF and ADB, setting out the core elements of an effective insolvency regime and considering alternative policy options and approaches to the different issues identified, including the impact of social and economic factors; the second would be a comparative analysis of some of the provisions and precedents already in existence in national legislation and international instruments; and the third would set forth recommendations or outlines of legislative provisions. UNCITRAL confirmed that the Working Group's mandate should be broadly interpreted to ensure an appropriately flexible work product in the form of a legislative guide.

Security interests

UNCITRAL considered a Secretariat note containing a study on the issue of security interests, requested by UNCITRAL to facilitate its consideration of future work in the area of secured transaction law. The study discussed the relationship between insolvency law and the law on security rights. It addressed issues pertaining to the development of model legislative solutions on security rights in general; the drafting of asset-specific model legislation, in particular securities and intellectual property rights; and private international law.

Following discussion of the foregoing study, UNCITRAL established a Working Group on Security Interests to develop an efficient legal regime for security rights in goods involved in a commercial activity, including inventory; and to identify the issues to be addressed, such as the form of the instrument, the exact scope of the assets that could serve as collateral, the perfection of security, the degree of formalities to be complied with, the need for an efficient and well-balanced enforcement regime, the scope of the debt that might be secured, the means of publicizing the existence of security rights, the limitations, if any, on the creditors entitled to the security right, the effects of bankruptcy on the enforcement of that right and the certainty and predictability of the creditor's priority over competing interests.

Emphasizing the importance of the subject matter and the need to consult with practitioners and organizations with the relevant expertise, UNCITRAL recommended that a two- or three-day colloquium be held before the first session of the Working Group in 2002.

Training and technical assistance

UNCITRAL had before it a Secretariat note indicating training and technical assistance activities undertaken since its 2000 session and the direction of future activities. It reported that five seminars/briefing missions and a symposium were held, and that for the remainder of 2001 only some requests from Africa, Asia, Latin America and Eastern Europe could be met due to insufficient resources.

UNCITRAL recommended that the General Assembly should request the Secretary-General to increase substantially the human and financial resources of its secretariat to enable it to implement fully its training and technical assistance programme. It reiterated its appeal to all States, international organizations and other interested entities for contributions to the UNCITRAL trust funds so as to enable its secretariat to meet the increasing demands in developing countries for training and assistance.

UNCITRAL membership

UNCITRAL consideration. On the question of the enlargement of its membership, UNCITRAL took note of the relevant background information prepared by the Secretariat to enable States to formulate a recommendation to the General Assembly. In that connection, it was observed that an enlarged UNCITRAL would, among other advantages, ensure representation of all legal traditions and economic systems, assist in better implementing its mandate by drawing on a correspondingly larger pool of experts, reflect the increased importance of international trade law for economic development and foster participation of those States that could not justify the resources for the preparation and attendance of UNCITRAL meetings unless they were members. In addition, no impact was foreseen on conference servicing by an increased membership.

A common theme in the debate on the size of the increase was the need to make UNCITRAL more representative of the Organization's membership without affecting its efficiency or working methods.

On 11 July, UNCITRAL recommended that the Assembly approve an increase in its membership from the current 36 States to 72, with the following distribution among the regional groups of the additional seats: 18 from the Group of African States, 14 from the Group of Asian States, 10 from the Group of Eastern European States, 12 from the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States and 18 from the Group of Western European and Other States; and elect the new members as soon as possible.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 55/151 (YUN 2000, p. 1276), the Secretary-General submitted a report in August [A/56/315] on the implications of increasing UNCITRAL's membership. The report contained comments from 22 States in reply to his request for their views on the question. All supported an enlarged UNCITRAL, citing the need to align it with the increased UN membership so as to preserve its representative character, to make possible the participation of States in its work, the cost of which they could not justify unless they were members, and to promote the acceptability of UNCITRAL's work by broadening the spectrum of representation. The suggested increase ranged from 50 to at least 60 seats, which took into account the need to preserve UNCITRAL's efficiency.

By decision 56/422 of 12 December, the Assembly deferred further consideration of and a decision on the enlargement of UNCITRAL's membership until its fifty-seventh (2002) session, under the item entitled "Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its thirty-fifth session".

Chapter 1

Strengthening and restructuring of the United Nations system

In 2001, further progress was made in implementing the Secretary-General's programme of reform of the Organization, as Member States endorsed proposals in the priority areas of human resources reform, information technology policy and the capital master plan for refurbishing the UN Headquarters complex. Procurement reform had been completed successfully, the streamlining of the Organization's rules and procedures progressed, efforts continued to shift to a more results-based mode of operation and performance indicators were being introduced at all levels.

As follow-up to the outcome of the 2000 Millennium Summit, the Secretary-General presented a "road map" towards the implementation of the goals and commitments made by Member States in the Millennium Declaration, which the General Assembly recommended should be considered as a useful guide when formulating plans for implementing those goals. The Assembly also took up the issue of revitalizing its work through improvement of its procedures and working methods and adopted a text addressing relevant issues concerning its agenda, consideration of reports, organization of work, role of the Assembly President and the use of modern technology.

The Secretary-General reported on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, describing progress in the implementation of relevant resolutions of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and recommending measures for further progress. He also reviewed the work of UN oversight bodies—the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the Joint Inspection Unit—and reported continuing progress in ongoing discussions on increasing the membership of the Security Council within the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council. A review of the outcome of the consolidation of the three former economic and social departments into the Department of Economic and Social Affairs confirmed that the emergent Department had made notable progress in implementing the goals for which it was established.

Programme of reform

General aspects

The Secretary-General continued to implement his programme for UN reform, first introduced in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1389]. In his annual report on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), he said Member States had endorsed proposals in three priority areas for management reform: human resources reform, information technology policy and the capital master plan. The comprehensive human resources reform introduced would change the Organization's management culture, modernize its management standards and strengthen its capacity to recruit, develop and manage its staff. The information technology strategy, designed to promote access to and sharing of information, and to support field operations, strengthen technical infrastructure, build human resources capacity and launch an electronic administration, would ensure a coordinated approach to technical challenges. In that regard, the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS), an electronic administration system for human resources, finance, accounts and procurement, was being installed throughout the Secretariat, and there were plans to further develop and extend its use, including to all major duty stations and peacekeeping missions (see p. 1390). A comprehensive design plan and a detailed cost analysis were being prepared for the capital master plan for refurbishing the Headquarters complex (see p. 1394).

Other initiatives included the successful completion of procurement reform, the progressive simplification and streamlining of the Organization's rules and procedures, the shifting to a more results-based mode of operation, leading to the introduction of performance indicators at all levels, the introduction and refinement of performance measurements, through the performance appraisal system, and the introduction of results-based budgeting (see p. 1317) designed to ensure the delivery of high-priority services. The Secretariat would continue to implement comprehensive management reform, introducing best management practices and technologies to ensure that the limited resources were made available for priorities. It would complete and implement a Key Item Management Reporting System and make productivity a managerial responsibility. Innovations would continue to be introduced in the overall information technology strategy, and human resources management reform would also go on.

By decision 56/464 of 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the item entitled "United Nations reform: measures and proposals" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session.

Road map for implementing the Millennium Declaration

The Secretary-General, as requested in General Assembly resolution 55/162 [YUN 2000, p. 62], submitted a September report [A/56/326], in which he outlined his road map for the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49]. The report set out in detail how the commitments made by Member States in the Declaration could be fulfilled. It examined the interaction of the different goals with each other, highlighting cross-cutting issues, and outlined potential strategies for action, with suggested paths to follow for meeting each goal, and shared information on best practices. The report examined the Millennium Declaration goals related to peace, security and disarmament (see p. 47); development and poverty eradication (see p. 753); protecting the environment (see p. 961); human rights, democracy and good governance (see p. 640); protecting the vulnerable; meeting the special needs of Africa (see p. 848); and strengthening the United Nations.

In terms of strengthening the United Nations, the Secretary-General argued that, for the Organization to continue being a catalyst for change and a forum for dialogue and effective action, it would have to be renewed and modernized to cope with the challenges of the millennium. Strategies for strengthening the Organization would be directed towards continuing efforts to revitalize and streamline the Assembly's work and strengthen the office of its President (see p. 1287); consideration in the Assembly of expanding the size and composition of the Security Council, the reform of its methods of work and enhancing its ability to anticipate, prevent and react to events on short notice; and consideration of how best the Economic and Social Council could fulfil its mandate and streamline its work. States would be encouraged to use the International Court of Justice more frequently for the resolution of their disputes and the number of organizations entitled to request advisory opinions of the Court increased. Other strategies included ensuring that all States paid their dues in full, on time and without preconditions and reform of the budget methodology and practice progressed; information technologies were allocated sufficient resources and were strategically developed throughout the Secretariat; and the modernization of human resources policies and procedures and the streamlining of administrative procedures continued. Greater attention would be paid to the safety of UN and associated personnel, building a stronger relationship among the United Nations, the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and the World Trade Organization, deepening the relationship with the Inter-Parliamentary Union, and engaging the private sector, non-governmental organizations and the rest of civil society through the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (see p. 810) and the Global Compact [YUN 2000, p. 989]. The Secretary-General concluded that the road map attempted to carry forward the vision of world leaders at the Millennium Summit and offered suggestions for the future. He would submit a yearly report charting progress made in fulfilling the millennium commitments and highlighting specific themes of special significance for each year, and a comprehensive progress report every five years. He proposed that the Assembly consider as themes, for 2002, preventing armed conflict and the treatment and prevention of diseases, including HIV/AIDS and malaria; for 2003, financing for development and strategies for sustainable development; and for 2004, bridging the digital divide and curbing transnational crime. Annexed to the report was a comprehensive set of indicators to assess progress in achieving development goals.

ACC consideration. The High-level Committee on Programmes of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC), at its second regular session of 2001 (Geneva, 25-26 September) [ACC/2001/II], considered the Secretary-General's road map and ways to enhance coordination and coherence in the UN system to assist Member States to realize the goals of the Millennium Declaration. In that context, it discussed an inventory exercise to help it devise a potential action plan, identify gaps, overlaps and areas of inter-agency cooperation, and monitor progress in the implementation of UN system actions and initiatives. The Committee recommended to ACC that consideration be given to identifying a limited set of initiatives in the areas relating to the themes proposed in the Secretary-General's report for the years 2002 to 2004 (see above), elaborating action plans and aiming for concrete results within a five-year time-span, taking into account the principles of joint accountability and continuous learning. Special efforts should continue to help countries implement programmes and monitor goals and targets.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 56/95 [draft: A/56/L.48] without vote [agenda item 29].

Follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Millennium Declaration as the outcome of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, held at Headquarters from 6 to 8 September 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 55/162 of 14 December 2000, in which it, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to prepare a long-term "road map" towards the implementation of the Millennium Declaration within the United Nations system and to submit it to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session,

Reaffirming the need to maintain the will and momentum of the Millennium Summit, as well as the importance of a comprehensive and balanced approach in the implementation of and follow-up to the Millennium Declaration,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Road map towards the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration";

2. Recommends that the "road map" be considered as a useful guide in the implementation of the Millennium Declaration by the United Nations system, and invites Member States, as well as the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization and other interested parties to consider the "road map" when formulating plans for implementing goals related to the Declaration;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare an annual report and a comprehensive report every five years on progress achieved by the United Nations system and Member States towards implementing the Millennium Declaration, drawing upon the "road map" and in accordance with resolution 55/162, and requests that the annual reports focus on cross-cutting and cross-sectoral issues, as well as on the major areas set forth in the "road map", while the quinquennial comprehensive reports examine progress achieved towards implementing all the commitments made in the Declaration;

4. Invites the United Nations system, in cooperation with Member States, to adopt specific measures to give widespread publicity to the Millennium Declaration and to increase the dissemination of information on the Declaration;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session the item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit".

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fifth session, continued consideration of the Secretary-General's reports on procurement reform [YUN 2000, p. 1286], measures taken to improve procurement activities in the field [ibid., p. 111], procurement-related arbitration [YUN 1999, p. 1315] and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [YUN 2000, p. 1286] (see p. 1280), and the March report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the follow-up audit of the implementation of procurement reform (see below).

OIOS report. The OIOS report [A/55/746], transmitted by the Secretary-General pursuant to Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], aimed to verify that the recommendations of the High-level Group of Experts on Procurement [YUN 1996, p. 1381] and of various oversight bodies had been satisfactorily implemented, and to identify areas requiring further improvement, as well as any new issues. The follow-up audit, carried out at UN Headquarters from November 1999 to May 2000, included a review of 51 procurement cases valued at $116 million.

The OIOS audit found that its 1998 recommendations on procurement reform [YUN 1998, p. 1253] had been satisfactorily implemented, and overall there had been a significant improvement in the systems and procedures used by the Procurement Division. However, the UN procurement system needed further improvement and a number of issues had to be resolved, including that of the application of financial rule 110.17 (a) relating to contract requisitions exceeding $200,000, and decisions concerning the procurement of air transport services through letters of assist. It also found that the Procurement Division did not adequately monitor low-value procurement cases assigned to procurement assistants and that the procurement processing time for those cases appeared excessive.

To improve the procurement process, OIOS recommended, among other actions, that the Assistant Secretary-General for Central Support Services should re-examine the current interpretation of financial rule 110.17 (a) to ensure that all cases requiring verification by the Headquarters Committee on Contracts were submitted for review, and that the Procurement Division should review the implications of changing the period of reference under that rule. The Under-Secretary-General for Management should review and approve all formal interpretations of the procurement-related financial regulations and rules, and the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations should ensure that decisions to contract with Governments were made only after determining that the conditions for using letters of assist had been met and the basis for those decisions fully documented. The Assistant Secretary-General for Central Support Services should ensure that recommendations of the Office of Legal Affairs and the Headquarters Committee on Contracts concerning procurement were fully implemented. The Procurement Division should conduct a market survey of air transportation services contractors by region and encourage them to register as prospective vendors, and ensure that the assignments given to procurement assistants included target completion dates and that major departures from those dates were approved and remaining cases were followed up in a timely manner.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in a March report [A/55/829], considered the Secretary-General's 1999 report on procurement arbitration [YUN 1999, p. 1315] and a report on the examination of practices and procedures in the handling of arbitration/claim cases conducted by the UN Board of Auditors at ACABQ's request. ACABQ noted the lack of coordination between the Office of Legal Affairs and the Office of Central Support Services, which exposed the Organization to claims because of the lack of sufficient rigour in negotiating, reviewing and managing contracts. ACABQ endorsed the Board's recommendations, which it believed would, if fully implemented, eliminate the shortcomings identified and strengthen the Secretariat's capacity, thereby minimizing the Organization's exposure to claims and litigation. It requested a comprehensive report on the results of the implementation of the Board's recommendations by February 2002, in the context of the review of the 2002/03 budgets for peacekeeping operations, indicating actions taken and the changes, effects and results of those actions.

ACABQ also recommended that all claims, names of claimants and amounts claimed be fully disclosed in peacekeeping performance reports and that information on the circumstances of those claims be submitted to it. It emphasized that all procedures designed to prevent a conflict of interest, or the appearance of such, should be rigorously applied. The administration needed to make greater efforts to monitor more effectively the cost to the United Nations of fees to outside counsel, and contracts awarded should contain provisions to ensure strict adherence to fee caps.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 April [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/55/532/Add.2], adopted resolution 55/247 without vote [agenda item 116].

Procurement reform

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/214 B and 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 52/212 B of 31 March 1998, 52/252 of 8 September 1998, 53/204 and 53/208 B of 18 December 1998 and 54/14 of 29 October 1999,

6. Takes note of the experiences of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees referred to in the report of the Secretary-General on procurement reform, and reaffirms the need for the Secretary-General to continue to explore ways to increase procurement opportunities for vendors from developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General for the expeditious dissemination of information relating to procurement in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and requests the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts to sensitize the business community and United Nations offices in the developing countries and countries with economies in transition to procurement opportunities with the United Nations;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to encourage the use of procurement from developing countries within the region for the requirements of missions when this is more efficient and cost-effective;

9. Welcomes the initiative taken by the Procurement Division to make procurement officials directly accountable to substantive departments that they support;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to determine if similar tracking mechanisms can be introduced in other areas of the Secretariat;

11. Looks forward to the issuance of a revised version of the Procurement Manual before the end of 2001;

12. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to improve annual procurement planning for all offices and departments and to make such plans publicly available, including to all permanent missions to the United Nations;

13. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive system to measure the efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the procurement function, by taking into account the best practices of other organizations of the United Nations system, reaffirms the need for the completion of the exercise, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly the results when completed;

14. Expresses its concern about delays in payments to vendors, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that terms of contracts are respected;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to monitor the discussions of the World Trade Organization on rules of origin and to keep the General Assembly informed of the progress achieved;

16. Notes that the detailed information requested in paragraph 20 of its resolution 54/14 was not included in the current report of the Secretary-General on procurement reform, and requests the Secretary-General to submit in future reports, as an annex, detailed information on the awarding of contracts for procurement at Headquarters and in the field to all countries, in particular to developing, least developed and African countries and countries with economies in transition;

17. Also notes the increase in the delegation of authority to the field in procurement activities, as mentioned in paragraph 6 of the report of the Advisory Committee concerning procurement reform, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that there is capacity in field missions to perform the procurement functions properly as well as effective and efficient mechanisms at Headquarters for monitoring procurement in the field, including:

(a) Remedial measures taken to address problems identified with regard to the United Nations peace-keeping missions;

(b) Standardization of the corrective measures taken for existing and future peacekeeping operations;

(c) A description of how accountability was pursued in the cases of individuals found to have engaged in fraud, mismanagement or abuse and how accountability measures would be applied in the future;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to assess the workload and functions of all relevant units involved in the procurement process in order to guarantee that each is planning and performing with optimum efficiency and to ensure proper training for improving the skills of personnel involved in the procurement process;

19. Reiterates that the criteria for an exigency, as outlined in its decision 54/468 of 7 April 2000, must be met before making emergency procurements as an exigency provision, so that all procurements follow set procedures;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, through the Advisory Committee, proposals for revision of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, which may facilitate the implementation of procurement reform;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to recommendation 4 made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in its report, to ensure that the criteria contained in the Procurement Manual for the use of letters of assist are strictly adhered to, and in this connection requests that a report on the subject be submitted to the General Assembly;

22. Reiterates the need for executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to improve their procurement practices by simplifying the registration process for vendors who have already registered with another organization of the United Nations system, with a view to a more streamlined and transparent process, utilizing, among other things, the Internet;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a report on all aspects of procurement reform at Headquarters and in the field, including improvements to the procurement process within the United Nations funds and programmes, as well as on the implementation of the present resolution.

Oversight

Internal oversight

The Secretary-General, in transmitting a report on the activities of OIOS (see p. 1282), noted the accomplishments of the Office, as well as its continuing efforts to improve its relationships with management and all governing bodies, and to coordinate its programme with other oversight bodies, including the Board of External Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU).

The General Assembly, by decision 55/476 of 12 April, deferred until the second part of its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on OIOS activities. By decision 55/461 A of the same date, it took note of the OIOS reports on the follow-up to the 1997 review of the programme and administrative practices of the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) [YUN 2000, p. 994]; the follow-up to the 1996 review of the programme and administrative practices of the United Nations Environment Programme [ibid., p. 971]; the audit of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights Field Operation in Rwanda [ibid., p. 600]; and the inspection of the outcome of the consolidation of the three former economic and social departments into the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) [A/55/750] (see p. 1291).

The Assembly considered reports of the Secretary-General on enhancing the internal oversight mechanisms in operational funds and programmes [YUN 1997, p. 855] and the updated version thereof [A/55/826 & Corr.1] (see p. 790); and rules and procedures to be applied for the investigation functions performed by OIOS [YUN 2000, p. 1289]. The Assembly also considered OIOS annual reports covering its activities from 1 July 1995 to 30 June 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1268], 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1398], 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1258], 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1275] and 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1288]. Also considered were JIU comments on OIOS reports [YUN 1996, p. 1269; YUN 1997, p. 1400] and the Secretary-General's note on enhancing the internal oversight mechanisms in operational funds and programmes [A/C.5/55/23] (see p. 790).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 June [meeting 103], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/888/Add.1], adopted resolution 55/259 without vote [agenda item 126].

Report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

(b) Note by the Secretary-General transmitting the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit on the final reports produced by the Office of Internal Oversight Services,

(c) Annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period from 1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997,

(d) Note by the Secretary-General transmitting the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit on the final reports produced by the Office of Internal Oversight Services,

(e) Annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period from 1 July 1997 to 30 June 1998,

(f) Annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period from 1 July 1998 to 30 June 1999,

(g) Report of the Secretary-General on the rules and procedures to be applied for the investigation functions performed by the Office of Internal Oversight Services,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services would be in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999 and the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Decides to defer until its fifty-sixth session consideration of the updated version of the report of the Secretary-General on enhancing the internal oversight mechanisms in operational funds, and requests the Secretary-General to seek updated views from the funds and programmes on this report and to transmit them to the General Assembly during the main part of its fifty-sixth session;

3. Also decides to defer until its fifty-sixth session consideration of the sixth annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, covering activities for the period from 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000.

On the same date, the Assembly noted the OIOS report on the inspection of the consolidation of technical support services in the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services [A/55/803] (see p. 1383) (decision 55/461 B).

OIOS report. In September, the Secretary-General transmitted the seventh annual report of OIOS covering its activities from 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001 [A/56/381].

During the reporting period, OIOS issued 12 reports to the General Assembly. Those transmitted in 2001 were on: experiences learned from the use of resident auditors at peacekeeping missions [A/55/735]; follow-up audit of the implementation of procurement reform [A/55/746]; inspection of the outcome of the consolidation of the three former economic and social departments into DESA [A/55/750]; investigation into possible fee-splitting arrangements between defence counsel and indigent detainees at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia [A/55/759]; inspection of the consolidation of technical support services in the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services [A/55/803]; management audit of UN civilian police operations [A/55/812]; enhancing the internal oversight mechanisms in operational funds and programmes, updated version [A/55/826 & Corr.1]; and inspection of programme management and administrative practices in the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention [A/56/83].

Reporting on the status of its recommendations, OIOS stated that it had modified its reporting format to include qualitative assessments of clients' implementation of recommendations defined as critical. It had also established a client profile database that integrated all client information and provided assessments of their efforts to implement oversight recommendations. During the reporting period, OIOS issued 2,105 recommendations, of which 577 (27 per cent) were classified as critical. The significantly higher number of recommendations, compared to previous years, was due to the decision to include recommendations issued through observations made at the operating level in the field. The overall implementation rate for all recommendations was 53 per cent, compared with 50 per cent during the previous reporting period [YUN 2000, p. 1288]. Comparatively, the implementation rate for critical recommendations was 46 per cent, reflecting their more complex nature and the longer time required to implement them. The critical recommendations addressed areas that had the most far-reaching consequences for the Organization's performance. As such, 43 per cent of them were meant to improve operational efficiency and effectiveness, 30 per cent to improve management controls, 19 per cent to improve accuracy and reliability of reports, and the remaining 8 per cent related to administrative improvements.

OIOS recommended savings and recoveries of approximately $58 million resulting from audits, inspections and investigations, which was substantially higher than the $17 million reported in 2000. It recommended $50.8 million in reduced expenditures, $4.8 million for recovery and $2.9 million as either additional income to the Organization or loss/waste of resources. As a result of implementing OIOS recommendations issued during the current and prior reporting periods, the Organization reduced expenditures by $8 million and recovered $2.5 million.

The report gave an overview of activities of oversight priority areas for the reporting period: human rights and humanitarian affairs, political affairs, international justice and law, international cooperation for development, regional cooperation for development, and UN Headquarters activities and those of offices away from Headquarters. Regarding human rights and humanitarian affairs, OIOS audited the operations of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in 30 countries in Africa, Asia and the Pacific and Europe.

In reviewing international cooperation for development, OIOS conducted an inspection of DESA and reported satisfactory progress in the implementation of its recommendations. OIOS also audited many related offices and programmes and made recommendations for addressing irregularities found. Regarding regional cooperation for development, it reviewed the activities of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC). A comprehensive audit of ECA's payroll services revealed weaknesses in the arrangements for verifying, processing and recording payments and allowances. The Commission was already implementing recommendations to improve the situation. OIOS found that ECLAC had yet to develop guidelines to ensure the proper and efficient conduct of self-evaluations by substantive divisions, and it needed to ensure that budgeted resources for planned activities were not used to finance unplanned programmes. OIOS also investigated telephone usage and book publishing at the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, which resulted in corrective action against fraudulent practices.

At UN Headquarters, the audit of selected activities of the Public Affairs and News and Media Divisions of the Department of Public Information (DPI) indicated the absence of an effective system for tracking and monitoring audit recommendations, and although DPI had accepted OIOS recommendations, it had yet to implement them. The OIOS review of the Department of Management showed that, although further attention needed to be paid to cost-sharing between offices and although the Office of Human Resources Management had yet to undertake a customer satisfaction survey, most of its previous recommendations relating to the Department's services had been implemented in New York, Geneva and Vienna. Other OIOS activities relating to the Department of Management included follow-up audits of the implementation of procurement reform and of the recruitment process, and audits of the contributions management system, processing of inter-office vouchers through IMIS and education grants.

The Investigations Section received 433 cases, 51 per cent more than the 287 it dealt with in the previous reporting period. As at 30 June, the Section had 274 open cases, 15 per cent of which were located at UN Headquarters, 29 per cent in Africa, 29 per cent in Europe, 23 per cent in the Middle East and Asia and 4 per cent in North America outside UN Headquarters and in South America. Overall, the cases located at duty stations away from Headquarters rose to 85 per cent in 2001, compared to 75 per cent since the inception of the Section.

In-depth evaluations were undertaken of sustainable development [E/AC.51/2001/2] and the population programme [E/AC.51/2001/3]. Triennial reviews were conducted of the implementation of the recommendations made by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) at its thirty-eighth session [YUN 1998, p. 1336] on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme [E/AC.51/2001/4] and on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme [E/AC.51/2001/5]. The OIOS report on enhancing the internal oversight mechanisms in operational funds and programmes [A/C.5/55/23] was also submitted to CPC.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/739], adopted resolution 56/246 without vote [agenda item 130].

10. Recalls section III, paragraph 7, of its resolution 55/222 of 23 December 2000, by which it reiterated that all documents submitted to legislative organs by the Secretariat and expert bodies for consideration and action should have conclusions and recommendations in bold print.

Strengthening the investigations function

By an August note [A/56/282], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report on strengthening the investigations function in UN system organizations. JIU stated that, although that function had become an increasingly important component of internal oversight for most UN organizations, because it was relatively new in the system, some major issues needed to be resolved. JIU found that the investigations function, intended to deter wrongdoing, assure proper accountability and maintain the confidence of Member States and stakeholders in the integrity of the organizations they supported, was subject to fragmentation within UN system organizations, and significant differences existed among them regarding the location and lines of reporting for those units specifically mandated to conduct investigations. Among the major issues to be addressed were: the lack of recognized standards and procedures for conducting investigations; the need to train programme and administrative support managers in the recognized standards and procedures to minimize the risk to the investigative process that could result from their involvement in it; meeting the need for access to a professional investigations capability; options for small organizations regarding the financing of such access; the need for preventive measures to reduce vulnerability to wrongdoing by use of proactive investigations and lessons learned from completed investigations; and inter-agency cooperation.

To enhance the capability of UN system organizations to meet the need for investigations, JIU recommended that the forthcoming Third Conference of Investigators of United Nations Organizations and Multilateral Financial Institutions should develop and adopt standards and procedures for conducting investigations in UN system organizations. It should also continue to develop opportunities for fostering inter-agency cooperation regarding the investigations function. Executive heads of organizations should ensure that managers involved in investigations had sufficient training in the use of established standards and procedures for conducting investigations; conduct a risk profile of their respective organizations as a basis for reporting to their legislative organs on the need for access to professionally trained and experienced investigators, including recommendations to meet that need; present to their respective legislative organs options for financing that access; and ensure that work programmes of units responsible for investigations included the development of preventive measures based on proactive investigations and lessons learned from completed investigations.

Annexed to the JIU report was a brief description of the investigation capabilities in UN system organizations.

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

In its thirty-third report to the General Assembly [A/57/34], JIU gave an overview of its activities in 2001, during which it issued reports on: the management of buildings: practices of selected UN system organizations relevant to the renovation of United Nations Headquarters [A/56/274]; UN system support for science and technology in Latin America and the Caribbean [A/56/370]; review of management and administration in the International Telecommunication Union [JIU/REP/2001/3]; enhancing governance oversight role: structure, working methods and practices on handling oversight reports [A/57/58]; review of management and administration in the World Health Organization [JIU/REP/2001/5]; and reforming the Field Service category of personnel in UN peace operations [JIU/REP/2001/6].

JIU continued to enhance its functioning and impact. It maintained comprehensive reviews of the administration and management of its participating organizations and issued reports, which were useful in comparing the policies and practices of the management and administration of organizations confronted with similar problems, thereby encouraging best practices. It noted that the relatively small number of reports it had issued in the current reporting period was due, in part, to high staff turnover. Also, several reports could not be finalized because of the delays of some of its participating organizations in providing it with the requisite information and/or comments. However, the 2002-2003 programme budget provided for the reallocation of staff resources and increased resources for individual contractors, which should reinforce its research and related capacity.

The Secretary-General, in a June report [A/56/84], transmitted to the Assembly JIU's 2001 work programme and preliminary list of potential reports for 2002 and beyond.

The Secretary-General, in a July report [A/56/135], transmitted information on the status of implementation of the recommendations contained in JIU reports on: common services at UN Headquarters; the challenge of outsourcing for the UN system; enhancing the relevance and effectiveness of the United Nations University; a review of ACC and its subsidiary machinery; an evaluation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women; and the experience of UN system organizations with results-based budgeting.

In a September note [A/56/356], the Secretary-General transmitted the JIU report on experience with the follow-up system on JIU reports and recommendations, prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 54/16 [YUN 1999, p. 1277]. JIU found that the major obstacle to the implementation of the follow-up system [YUN 1997, p. 1401], approved by Assembly resolution 54/16, was the lack of specific legislative action on its recommendations. Legislative organs usually contented themselves with "taking note" of JIU's conclusions and recommendations, without a clear indication as to their approval or otherwise. That prevented effective follow-up action, since article 12 of the JIU statute relating to the implementation of JIU recommendations was usually interpreted as referring only to those recommendations approved through legislative action, and the action of "take note" did not legally bind the secretariats to ensuring effective implementation or follow-up. Moreover, participating organizations were divided as to whether the term "recommendations . . . approved by . . . competent organs" legally included those addressed to and accepted by the executive heads and whether "competent organs" included the secretariats.

In response to a JIU request, several participating organizations indicated that there were no approved recommendations that had not been implemented, while others declared their inability to report in the absence of a clearly agreed follow-up system. The system had so far been formally acted upon only by the United Nations and the legislative organs of four specialized agencies. Eight others were in discussion with JIU on the adoption of a similar follow-up system, which would have to be tailored to take account of the specific character of each organization.

JIU concluded that legislative bodies should avoid vague expressions such as "take note". To that end, secretariats should indicate clearly, when submitting JIU reports to legislative organs, those recommendations that needed specific legislative action and those that could be implemented directly by the executive heads, without prejudice to the authority of the legislative body to review all recommendations. It was also important to reach a common understanding that recommendations addressed to and accepted by the executive heads should be implemented and were subject to follow-up. It was expected that the term "recommendations... approved by... competent organs" would be clarified and the term "take note" eliminated. That should allow JIU to report with greater ease and accuracy on the implementation of its reports and recommendations or the lack thereof.

The Assembly, by decision 55/488 of 7 September (see p. 1362), clarified that "takes note of" and "notes" were neutral terms and did not constitute approval or disapproval.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/635], adopted resolution 56/245 without vote [agenda item 128].

12. Welcomes the initial steps taken by the Unit with other external and internal oversight bodies of the United Nations system to develop interaction and intensify relations with a view to achieving better coordination among them with respect, in particular, to the oversight coverage and sharing of best practices, thus enhancing the impact of oversight activities as a whole and endeavouring to avoid duplication, and requests the Unit to report thereon, in the context of its report for 2001, to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

13. Requests the executive heads of those participating organizations that have not yet done so to take the necessary steps to facilitate the consideration of and action on the system of follow-up to the reports of the Unit, and invites the legislative organs concerned to consider and act upon it;

14. Requests the Unit to submit, as part of its annual report, additional comments and recommendations on its experience with the system of follow-up to the reports of the Unit, focusing in particular on legislative actions and implementation of the approved recommendations, to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, including measures the Unit has taken to achieve a punctual and systematic follow-up of its recommendations as approved by the legislative organs of participating organizations;

17. Underlines the fact that the evaluation function is envisaged in the statute of the Unit, and stresses the need for the Unit to pay special attention to the preparation of reports that are more evaluation-oriented;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the executive heads of the other participating organizations for their attention.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Joint Inspection Unit" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

(b) Wiring of the main conference rooms at Headquarters to provide members of delegations and the Secretariat with access to the Official Document System and other databases of the Organization, as well as to the Internet, together with electronic access to texts of statements and reports and, in the case of reports, simultaneous access to texts in all official languages;

(c) Other areas of the work of the Assembly in which the use of modern technology and information technology would contribute to enhancing efficiency in its working methods.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council submitted a report on its work during five substantive sessions held between 5 February and 20 July [A/55/47]. Discussions continued on the items under cluster I: decision-making, including the veto, the Council's expansion and periodic review of the enlarged Council; and on those under cluster II: the Council's working methods and the transparency of its work. The Working Group had before it conference room papers prepared by its Bureau.

At its first session (5 February), the Working Group adopted its work programme. At its second session (12-16 March), it began its consideration of clusters I and II issues, which it continued at the third (7-11 May), fourth (11 and 13-14 June) and fifth (16-20 July) sessions, on the basis of related conference room papers before it. In addition, the then President of the Council (Bangladesh), Colombia and the United Kingdom, at the invitation of the Group, spoke at the fourth session on steps taken by the Council to ensure greater openness and transparency in its procedures. Many members of the Group found such interactive exchange with Council members useful and asked that it continue in future. Grenada and Pakistan submitted proposals on cluster I issues at the fifth session, during which the Secretariat circulated a note concerning record-keeping practices in the Council. The Director of the Security Council Affairs Division of the Department of Political Affairs, at the Group's request, answered questions raised on the Secretariat's note and on services provided to the informal consultations of the whole, meetings of subsidiary organs and working groups, and the Council's fact-finding missions. The Group also considered and adopted its report to the Assembly.

The Assembly, by decision 55/503 of 10 September, took note of the Working Group's report, welcomed progress made so far, as provisional agreement had been recorded on a large number of issues, and urged the Group to continue efforts during its fifty-sixth session to achieve progress in all aspects of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and other related matters. The Assembly decided to continue consideration of the item during its fifty-sixth session and that the Working Group should continue its work, taking into account progress achieved during the Assembly's forty-eighth (1993) to fifty-fifth (2000) sessions, as well as the views to be expressed at the fifty-sixth session, and report before the end of that session, including any agreed recommendations.

By decision 56/464 of 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session.

Revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

In an April note [E/2001/INF/3], the Secretary-General updated information provided in 1996

[YUN 1996, p. 1258] and 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1408] on the establishment, terms of reference, membership and composition, term of office of members, reporting procedure, frequency of meetings and working methods of subsidiary bodies of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly in the economic, social and related fields.

On 3 May (decision 2001/212), the Economic and Social Council, having considered the Secretary-General's 2000 report on restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields and cooperation between the United Nations and the Bretton Woods institutions [YUN 2000, p. 1292] and his consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions of the Council [ibid., p. 1373], decided to examine the subject at its 2001 substantive session. It requested the Secretary-General to report during that session on the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392] and Council resolutions 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262] and 1999/51 [YUN 1999, p. 1281], and to submit a consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions.

Reports of Secretary-General. As requested by the Council, the Secretary-General, in May [A/56/77-E/2001/69], reported on progress in the implementation of relevant resolutions of the Assembly and the Council, aimed at assisting the Council in exploring ways to streamline its efforts in restructuring and revitalizing the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields. The report summarized how the implementation of those resolutions was monitored and discussed by the Assembly and the Council, with suggestions for streamlining the review of their implementation. The Secretary-General noted that most of their provisions had been implemented and incorporated into practices over the last few years. For further progress in that regard, he recommended that the Council could streamline its consideration of the restructuring and revitalization process by focusing on its management responsibilities in relation to its subsidiary bodies. To that end, the consolidated report on the outcomes of the functional commissions (see below) should be examined more closely, with a view to giving guidance to those commissions.

The Secretary-General, responding to Council resolution 1998/46 [YUN 1998, p. 1262], submitted in June [E/2001/95] the consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions. He analysed the commissions' follow-up action to policy guidance provided by the Council and identified the common themes, issues and approaches that emerged during the reporting period, designed to provide the Council with a holistic view of matters of common interest to the commissions in 2001 and to facilitate its overall policy guidance. He also reviewed the methods of work of the commissions, including multi-year work programmes, in relation to the guidance provided in relevant Council resolutions and made recommendations regarding key issues on which the Council should consider taking action.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2001/27 [draft: E/2001/L. 40] without vote [agenda item 8].

19. Agrees to take steps to integrate the outcome of the special session of the General Assembly on human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) into its own work, based on the decision taken by the Assembly at that special session, and requests the functional commissions to do the same for effective implementation and follow-up;

20. Welcomes the attention given by several of its functional commissions to cross-cutting dimensions in relation to all aspects of human settlements, and invites relevant commissions to seek greater interaction on those issues;

21. Invites its functional commissions to provide further inputs into the Council's own work on means of implementation, including the role of resource mobilization, capacity-building, research and data collection, and information- and knowledge-sharing in their respective areas, with a particular focus on impact, gaps, good practices and lessons learned, and the types of capacity-building most commonly sought in the implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the Millennium Summit;

22. Also invites its functional commissions to continue to explore opportunities for effective and productive contributions to their work by relevant stakeholders;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its substantive session of 2002 a consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 55/490 of 7 September, the General Assembly decided to include in the draft agenda of its fifty-sixth (2001) session the item entitled "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields". By decision 56/464 of 24 December, it decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session.

Department of Economic and Social Affairs

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274], the Secretary-General, in January [A/55/750], transmitted an OIOS report on the inspection of the outcome of the consolidation of the three former economic and social departments into the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA). The review assessed whether the reform had achieved its strategic goals of enhancing the Department's coherence of normative, analytical and operational functions; providing more effective policy support to inter-governmental bodies; and achieving greater effectiveness in coordinating UN activities in the socio-economic field.

OIOS confirmed that DESA had made significant progress in implementing those goals. However, more needed to be done, as the commitment to excellence, coherence and innovation was not always well replicated at the Department's divisional and working levels. In some instances, the strategies for change had lost their momentum or were distorted into pro forma exercises, and, in some other areas, compartmentalization still existed, with interdisciplinary teamwork remaining an exception rather than the norm.

OIOS recommended that DESA should draw up a long-term comprehensive plan of action to strengthen its substantive support to the work of the Economic and Social Council's functional commissions, ensure that the commissions' work was mutually reinforcing in advancing cross-cutting goals of UN conferences and summits on socio-economic issues, and establish a viable mechanism for promoting mutually supportive policies among UN agencies and organizations in the pursuit of those goals. Measures should be introduced to secure sufficient resources for the evaluation of UN operational activities for development, including extrabudgetary funding, and in-house research and evaluation capacity developed through training, streamlining work processes and applying more effective research methodologies. DESA should develop modalities to monitor the implementation of the decisions of the Executive Committee for Economic and Social Affairs and report to it on the status of that implementation. The Department should provide leadership in fostering innovative, timely and cost-effective inter-agency collaboration for problem-specific tasks and projects in other sub-programmes. It should also review monitoring, evaluation and reporting arrangements on the Development Account projects (see p. 809) and ensure that those functions were carried out comprehensively and effectively. DESA should ensure that interdisciplinary interaction was a permanent feature of its work culture and discourage managerial obstruction to horizontal professional interaction. It should also develop the Information Support Unit into an effective, forward-looking centre for the solution of information and communication technology problems, skills promotion and the exchange of experience and as a facilitator for creating access to technological information. It should take urgent action to mobilize resources to restore the UN Population Information Network to full capacity and to ensure the network's long-term sustainability. The Secretary-General concurred with those recommendations.

Chapter II

United Nations financing and programming

The overall financial situation of the United Nations during 2001 was significantly more positive than for a number of years, reflecting higher aggregate cash, lower unpaid assessments and reduced debt owed by the Organization to Member States. Unpaid assessments were 7 per cent lower than in 2000, at $2,106 million, and amounts due to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment, at $748 million, were down 18 per cent from 2000.

The General Assembly, in December, adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2000-2001 biennium of $2,561,578,000, an increase of $28,452,600 over the initial approved appropriations of $2,533,125,400. It approved appropriations of $2,625,178,700 for the 2002-2003 biennium.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the UN budget, including a methodology for assessing contributions of non-member States, as well as measures to encourage the timely payment of assessed contributions. It also continued to examine proposals relating to the procedural aspects for considering requests for exemptions under Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations. In December, the Secretary-General brought to the Assembly's attention the question of the payment of the arrears of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, following the admission in 2000 of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to UN membership.

The Assembly accepted the audited financial statements of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations. It also accepted the financial reports and audited financial statements and audit opinions of the Board on the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme. The Assembly changed the term of office of the members of the Board of Auditors from the current three years to a non-consecutive term of six years' duration starting on 1 July 2002.

Financial situation

The overall financial situation of the United Nations in 2001 was better than in 2000. The Secretary-General's October report [A/56/464] attributed the improvement mainly to the expected payments by the United States of $1,459 million in the last quarter of 2001, which, together with current payments and credits of $207 million, would bring its total 2001 payments and credits to $1,666 million. Those payments and payments by other Member States were expected to reach a total of $4,716 million, exceeding projected assessments of $4,246 million in 2001. That would allow the United Nations, for the first time in many years, to have a more solid financial base on which to do business and to tackle issues long held in abeyance, including delayed reimbursements for peacekeeping troops and equipment, cash deficits and cross-borrowing from peacekeeping accounts.

As at 30 September, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the international tribunals totalled $3.9 billion (an increase over the figure a year earlier of just over $3 billion). That total included $541 million for the regular budget, $3,281 million for peacekeeping (compared with $2,507 million in 2000), and $71 million for the tribunals (compared to $54 million in 2000). Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full for 2001 and prior years numbered 122 at the end of September, down from 131 at the same date in 2000.

In his end-of-year review of the financial situation [A/56/464/Add.1], the Secretary-General confirmed the more positive financial picture than in 2000: aggregate cash was higher, unpaid assessments were lower and debt owed by the Organization to Member States had been reduced. Aggregate cash, including in the regular budget, and that for peacekeeping and the tribunals, was up 32 per cent at $1,326 million; unpaid assessments were 7 per cent lower at $2,106 million; and amounts due to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment were down 18 per cent at $748 million. However, the number of Member States paying in full and on time as at 31

December 2001 had decreased to 135, as against 141 by the end of 2000.

By decision 55/493 of 7 September, the General Assembly included in the draft agenda of its fifty-sixth (2001) session the item entitled "Improving the financial situation of the United Nations". On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee should continue to consider the item at that session (decision 56/458).

UN budget

Budget for 2000-2001

Final appropriations

In 2001, the General Assembly adopted final budget appropriations for the 2000-2001 biennium, increasing the amount of $2,533.1 million approved in 2000 by resolution 55/239 A [YUN 2000, p. 1298] by $28.5 million, to $2,561.6 million, and reducing approved income estimates of $380.8 million approved by resolution 55/239 B [ibid., p. 1299] by $1.1 million, to $379.7 million.

Report of Secretary-General. In his second performance report on the 2000-2001 programme budget [A/56/674 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General provided estimates of the anticipated final levels of expenditure and income for the biennium based on actual expenditures for the first 20 months and projections for the last four months, as well as changes in inflation and exchange rates and cost-of-living adjustments.

The proposed revised estimates represented a net increase in requirements of $28.9 million, reflecting increases of $10.4 million for changes in exchange rates, $9.1 million for changes in inflation and $14.5 million for commitments entered into under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 54/252 [YUN 1999, p. 1309]; a reduction of $6.2 million attributable to variations in post costs and adjustments to other objects of expenditure, based on actual anticipated requirements; and a decrease in income of $1.1 million.

Taking account of the revised budget appropriations of $2,533.1 million approved in 2000, together with the increases ($34 million) and reductions ($6.2 million) noted above, the resultant revised expenditure amounted to $2,560.9 million, an increase of $27.8 million over the 2000 figure. Income was revised to an estimated $379.7 million.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in its related December report [A/56/694], said it had requested the data annexed to its report showing a breakdown of savings under travel, which indicated variances in travel expenses relating to staff and to representatives appointed by the Secretary-General. ACABQ advised that such information should be included in future performance reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/735], adopted resolutions 56/240 A and B without vote [agenda item 122].

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item "Programme budget for the biennium 2000-2001" would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth Committee should continue to consider the item at that session (decision 56/458).

Budget for 2002-2003

In introducing the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/6 & Corr.1 & Add.1] before the Fifth Committee on 15 October, the Secretary-General said that the proposed budget of $2,519 million represented a 0.5 per cent real resource reduction compared with the 2000-2001 biennium. It called for small but important increases in priority areas, such as international peace and security; the promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development; the development of Africa; the promotion of human rights; the coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts; the promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; and drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism. A modest increase for internal oversight and a provision for expenditure for special political missions that would be extended or approved in the next biennium were also included. Resources had been allocated also for events to be held in 2002, notably the International Conference on Financing for Development. The budget also reflected the ongoing reform effort, including, for the first time, indicators of expected achievements.

The Secretary-General noted that in the past six years, the United Nations had had absolutely no budgetary growth. Even in dollar terms, its total budget was currently lower than it had been in 1994-1995. The Organization had been able, thus far, to absorb the effects of inflation and a large number of unfunded mandates through careful management of resources and prioritization, various reforms, and efficiency measures and new technologies. Further budgetary constraints would seriously compromise its ability to deliver the services expected of it, particularly if Member States imposed new mandates without adding new resources. It was time to review carefully the UN programme of work and to ask whether all the meetings being held were really indispensable; whether some of the reports re-requested duplicated others; and whether resources were allocated in the most productive way or could be applied more usefully to priorities in keeping with the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49]. Member States should ask themselves if all the mandates entrusted to the United Nations were really important and, above all, should ensure the availability of resources for what they considered to be high-priority areas. Noting that the General Assembly had not yet accepted his proposal for time limits or sunset provisions for new initiatives involving organizational structures or major commitments of funds, the Secretary-General urged the Fifth Committee to give that proposal serious thought.

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) considered the proposed programme budget at its 2001 session (New York, 11 June–6 July) [A/56/16] and recommended that the Assembly approve the narratives of the majority of the budget sections. It requested the Secretary-General to realign the expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement of section 8, Legal affairs, in conformity with the medium-term plan for submission to the Assembly's fifty-sixth (2001) session. CPC took note of the preliminary estimate for section 11B, International Trade Centre (ITC) United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD)/World Trade Organization (WTO), and of the fact that the detailed proposed ITC programme budget for 2002–2003 would be submitted directly to the Assembly. It recommended that the Assembly review section 22, Human rights, as well as the location and level of the Ombudsman post under section 27, Management and central support services. The activities of section 27 should be presented in terms of objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement, where possible; the Secretary-General should reformulate the programme narrative of section 27C, Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM), and submit it for the Assembly's consideration at its fifty-sixth session. CPC noted the narrative of section 29, Jointly financed administrative activities, and recommended that those activities be presented in terms of objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement.

As requested, the Secretary-General submitted the reformulated narratives of section 27C, OHRM [A/C.5/56/10/Rev.1], and of section 8, Legal affairs [A/C.5/56/11/Rev.2]. Section 11B, ITC [A/56/6/Add.1], was submitted to the Assembly on 3 December.

III

38. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee contained in its reports on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

39. Reaffirms paragraph 6 of its resolution 55/233, whereby the General Assembly decided, inter alia, that additional requirements in the amount of 93.7 million United States dollars (before recosting) included in the proposed programme budget for the financing of special political missions should be financed in conformity with the provisions of resolution 41/213;

40. Reaffirms its support for maintaining the international character of the Organization and for the principles of efficiency, competence and integrity enshrined in Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations;

41. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly with regard to the structure of the Secretariat, including the creation, conversion, suppression and redeployment of posts, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the General Assembly with comprehensive information on all decisions involving established and temporary high-level posts, including equivalent positions financed from the regular budget and from extrabudgetary resources;

42. Emphasizes that there shall be no arbitrary ceiling on the budget of the United Nations, and that resources proposed by the Secretary-General, in the context of the proposed programme budget, should be commensurate with all mandated programmes and activities, in order to ensure their full, effective and efficient implementation;

43. Requests the Secretary-General, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, to submit estimates of the total amount of resources, from all sources of financing, that he should have at his disposal to be able to implement fully the mandated programmes and activities efficiently and effectively;

47. Reiterates the need for the Secretary-General to ensure that resources are utilized strictly for the purposes approved by the General Assembly;

48. Notes the substantial reliance on extrabudgetary resources in some sections of the proposed programme budget, in view of the mandated programmes and activities, of some programmes, and reiterates that core functions of the United Nations, as a principle, should be financed through apportionment among Member States;

49. Notes with concern the current and projected potential decreasing trend in extrabudgetary resources and that this decrease in some sections of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 could have an adverse impact on the effective implementation of programmes and activities, especially those programmes that are still heavily funded primarily through such resources;

50. Notes that the bulk of extrabudgetary funds are tied to specific operations and utilized on the basis of donor wishes, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that this does not affect the nature of the programme or the orientation of its mandates;

51. Requests the Secretary-General to select consultants and experts, as well as staff charged against general temporary assistance, on as wide a geographical basis as possible, in accordance with the principles of the Charter and the provisions of General Assembly resolution 53/221 of 7 April 1999;

52. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, in future programme budget proposals, requests for consultants and experts groups are clearly and separately identified in the programme narratives;

53. Reaffirms that the vacancy rate is a tool for budgetary calculations and should not be used to achieve budgetary savings;

54. Also reaffirms that deliberate management decisions should not be taken to keep a certain number of posts vacant, as this action makes the budget process less transparent and management of human and financial resources less efficient;

55. Decides that a vacancy rate of 6.5 per cent for Professional staff and 3.1 per cent for General Service staff shall be used as a basis for the calculation of the budget for the biennium 2002-2003;

56. Notes that, should the realized vacancy rates be lower than those budgeted, the General Assembly would provide additional resources, if required, in the first and/or second performance report, so as to preclude the need for any constraint on recruitment of staff;

57. Requests the Secretary-General to recruit staff expeditiously through proper planning and by streamlining personnel practices and procedures, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 55/238 of 23 December 2000, in order to avoid any adverse impact of a high vacancy rate on the effective and efficient implementation and delivery of mandated programmes and activities;

58. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that posts are not deliberately left vacant to provide a cushion for absorbing the costs of special missions and other activities authorized "within available resources";

59. Reaffirms paragraphs 62 and 63 of the annex to its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997;

60. Regrets that the Secretary-General did not undertake a comprehensive review of the post structure of the Secretariat and did not make proposals in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 to address the top-heavy nature of the Organization;

61. Decides not to approve the upward reclassifications of the posts requested by the Secretary-General in the proposed budget for the biennium 2002-2003;

62. Notes with concern that the comprehensive review of the post structure of the Secretariat requested in its resolution 54/249 to address the top-heavy post structure of the Organization was not submitted, and reiterates that the comprehensive review be submitted to it at its fifty-seventh session;

63. Also notes with concern the number of reclassifications and new posts at senior levels proposed by the Secretary-General, which could lead to a further distortion in the pyramid staff structure of an Organization that is already top-heavy;

64. Further notes with concern the inadequacies of existing mechanisms for proposing and filling the reclassified posts, and requests the Secretary-General to establish a new mechanism centralizing within the auspices of the Office of Human Resources Management all proposals for reclassification, provided that all such proposals meet the following criteria:

(a) Proposals are of an exceptional nature;

(b) There is justification in terms of a change in the nature or scope of the work;

(c) There are full details outlining the increase in the responsibility;

(d) Such proposals are accompanied by justifiable and verifiable workload statistics;

(e) Any request involving the grading of a post must be justified solely in relation to the post itself and without reference to the incumbent or potential incumbent;

(f) The potential incumbent of the post being proposed for reclassification has encumbered that post for at least three years;

65. Emphasizes that the reclassification of posts should not be used as a promotion tool and that reclassified posts, as approved by the General Assembly, should be filled only in full conformity with the established procedures for recruitment and placement;

66. Notes with concern cases in which incumbents of posts are being paid at a level other than the one provided for in the budget, and requests the Secretary-General to provide a comprehensive report on this matter to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

67. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to comply strictly with the approved travel policies, standards, and regulations and rules, particularly with respect to ensuring that travel is undertaken by the most direct and economical route;

68. Notes the current use of videoconferencing as a means of communication within the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General to study comprehensively this issue and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

69. Requests the Secretary-General to further enhance cooperation between relevant headquarters departments and regional commissions in order to ensure the quality of output and services to Member States and address the duplication and overlap of services, where they exist, and to improve the efficiency of programme support activities, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

70. Decides to reduce the resources proposed by the Secretary-General for allocation for specific operational requirements, as follows:

- (a) Travel of staff, by 2.8 million dollars;
- (b) Contractual services, by 6.4 million dollars;
- (c) General operating expenses, by 19.7 million dollars;
- (d) Supplies and materials, by 1.4 million dollars;
- (e) Furniture and equipment, by 7.2 million dollars;
- (f) Consultants and experts, with exception of resources allocated under section 9 for the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, and under sections 1 to 20 for the regional commissions, by 2 million dollars;
- (g) Information technology, with exception of resources for the Economic Commission for Africa allocated under section 16, by 10 million dollars;

IV

71. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure a more balanced proportion of staff costs devoted to programme support in comparison with those devoted to the programme of work itself in all the regional commissions, in particular in the Economic Commission for Africa;

72. Notes with concern the high proportion of General Service posts compared to Professional posts in the regional commissions, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on efforts undertaken, as appropriate;

73. Notes paragraph VI.14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General, as a general principle, to keep under review the ratio between General Service staff and Professional staff, taking into account the impact on the Organization of the investments in new technologies and bearing in mind the differentiated mandates and programmes of work of the various duty stations;

74. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, to review the publications and information materials of the United Nations to ensure that:

- (a) They do not duplicate other United Nations publications;
- (b) They have an identified target group;
- (c) They are targeted to the appropriate audience;
- (d) They have a significant impact on that audience;
- (e) Recommendations are made on methods to strengthen the publication activities;
- (f) The direct and indirect costs of producing, translating and disseminating the materials are identified;

and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

75. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure equal treatment for the six official languages in the Dag Hammarskjöld Library in both the traditional means of publication and in the electronic media, including the Internet;

76. Further requests the Secretary-General to consider the importance of specialists available at the Dag Hammarskjöld Library to provide services in cataloguing and collection maintenance in all six official languages, to facilitate the use of reference works and documents by delegations and to upgrade the Library's holdings of reference works and books in all relevant categories in all six official languages;

77. Requests the Secretary-General to accelerate his efforts to fill all posts currently vacant in the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and to ensure the prompt and efficient processing of materials in all six official languages;

Part I

Overall policy-making, direction and coordination

Section 1

Overall policy-making, direction and coordination

78. Notes with concern the potential for duplication in some functions between sections of the Office of External Relations and the Department of Public Information, both of which have functions that include outreach, promotion and maintenance of the relations of the United Nations with important actors in civil society and non-governmental organizations;

79. Decides to establish the position of Ombudsman at the level of Assistant Secretary-General in the Office of the Secretary-General, to be supported by a legal officer at the P-4 level, in place of the D-2 and the P-4 posts originally proposed under section 27A, Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the adequate level of the post in the future;

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth Committee should continue to consider it at that session (decision 56/458).

Appropriations

In his proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/6 & Corr.1 & Add.1], the Secretary-General proposed expenditures amounting to $2,648.7 million and income totaling $51.8 million, as well as staff assessment income of $348.4 million, an increase of $15.3 million, resulting in a net estimate of $2,248.5 million. The proposed budget represented a 4.5 per cent real growth from the 2000-2001 budget.

Extrabudgetary resources for the 2002-2003 biennium were estimated at $3,834.4 million, comprising $286.8 million for support activities, $238.4 million for substantive activities and $3,309.2 million for operational activities.

ACABQ, in its first report on the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget [A/56/7], noted that the difference (before recosting) between the 2002-2003 estimates and the revised 2001-2002 estimates amounted to a nominal decrease of $13.7 million. As such, it had, except for proposals relating to new posts and reclassifications, refrained in most cases from making specific recommendations for reductions or additions, although there were a number of areas where one or the other was possible. It regarded the introduction in the 2002-2003 programme budget of results-based budgeting [YUN 1999, p. 1284] as the first fundamental change to the budget presentation since the introduction of programme budgeting in 1973 and recommended that its development be managed with care. In that connection, ACABQ recalled Assembly resolution 53/205 [YUN 1998, p. 1273], which stressed that results-based budgeting should not be a budget- and staff-reduction exercise, and its own 2000 report on such budgeting [YUN 2000, p. 1295]. ACABQ reiterated its comments on the 2000-2001 programme budget [YUN 1999, p. 1302] relating to continued budget stringency and restraint and recalled the Secretary-General's 7 May statement to ACABQ that, for a number of years, the Secretariat had been expected to do more with less; adhering to such a course was becoming increasingly untenable and greatly strained the ability of the Organization to fulfil its mandates.

In November [A/56/659], the Secretary-General recommended revised estimates to reflect the latest data on actual inflation experience, the outcome of salary surveys, the movement of post adjustment indices in 2001, salary expenditure experience and the effect of the evolution of operational rates of exchange on the proposed programme budget for 2002-2003. The recosted level of expenditures amounted to $2,681 million and total income was revised to $408.3 million.

ACABQ, in its fifth report on the 2002-2003 programme budget [A/56/7/Add.4], found no technical basis for objecting to the Secretary-General's revised estimates and transmitted them to the Fifth Committee.

The consolidated amount of $16,707,900 was within the available balance of the fund.

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council was seized

As a result of certain actions taken by the Security Council in 2001, the Secretary-General submitted in December estimated resource requirements of: $29,519,400 for 15 political missions [A/C.5/56/25]; $6,925,800 for the United Nations Office in Burundi (UNOB) [A/C.5/56/25/Add.1]; and $1,413,400 for the Special Adviser of the Secretary-General on Cyprus for one year [A/C.5/56/25/Add.2]. Those amounts were to be charged against the $93.7 million (before costing) proposed for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget.

Pending its detailed review of those requests in 2002, ACABQ recommended approval of charges against the proposed provision above of: $8 million for the 15 political missions [A/56/7/Add.5] and $1,700,000 for UNOB [A/56/7/Add.6] during the period 1 January to 31 March 2002; and $1,413,400 for the Special Adviser on Cyprus [A/56/7/Add.7] for the period 1 January to 31 December 2002.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

By an October report [A/C.5/56/4], the Secretary-General submitted estimates of requirements totalling $1,964,000 additional to the resources proposed in the programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium, resulting from Economic and Social Council decisions 2001/293 (see p. 964) and 2001/316 (see p. 693), and from a decision of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to revert, during a two-year experimental period, to holding only two sessions a year [E/2001/L.8]. Those requirements related to section 9, Economic and social affairs ($1,572,800); section 22, Human rights (a net reduction of $286,000); section 27D, Office of Central Support Services ($519,800); and section 32, Staff assessment ($157,400). The provision would be charged against the contingency fund, requiring increases or decreases in appropriations for that biennium.

ACABQ, in its related report [A/56/518], was of the opinion that the requirements of $519,800 under section 27D should continue to be met in the 2002-2003 biennium in the same manner as in the 2000-2001 biennium. Accordingly, it recommended that the Fifth Committee take note of the estimate of $1,444,200, on the understanding that any required appropriations would be requested by the Secretary-General in the context of the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates to be submitted to the General Assembly.

Subvention to UNIDIR

The Secretary-General, in September [A/56/359], transmitted for the General Assembly's approval a request for a subvention of $213,000 from the UN regular budget to UNIDIR for 2002. The request was based on a recommendation by the UNIDIR Board of Trustees, following its review of the Director's report on UNIDIR's activities from July 2000 to July 2001 and proposed work programme and budget for the 2001-2002 biennium.

Working Capital Fund

In December, the General Assembly established the Working Capital Fund for the 2002-2003 biennium at $100 million, the same level as during 2000-2001. As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations pending the receipt of assessed contributions, pay for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, as well as for miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and advance insurance premiums, and to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/736], adopted resolution 56/257 without vote [agenda item 123].

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 2002-2003

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 2002-2003 in the amount of 100 million United States dollars;
2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 2002;
3. There shall be set off against this allocation of advances:
  - (a) Credits to Member States resulting from transfers made in 1959 and 1960 from the surplus account to the Working Capital Fund in an adjusted amount of 1,025,092 dollars;
  - (b) Cash advances paid by Member States to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 2000-2001 in accordance with General Assembly resolution 54/253 of 23 December 1999;
4. Should the credits and advances paid by any Member State to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 2000-2001 exceed the amount of that Member State's advance under the provisions of paragraph 2 above, the excess shall be set off against the amount of the contributions payable by the Member State in respect of the biennium 2002-2003;
5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:

(a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for that purpose;

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments that may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 56/256 of 24 December 2001 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as may be necessary to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities, which, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed 200,000 dollars; advances in excess of the total of 200,000 dollars may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund;

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 above prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 2002-2003, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 1341(XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under very specific circumstances, the Secretary-General was authorized by the General Assembly to enter into commitments for activities of an urgent nature, without reverting to it for approval under the terms of resolution 54/252 [YUN 1999, p. 1309].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/736], adopted resolution 56/256 without vote [agenda item 123].

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the biennium 2002-2003

The General Assembly

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and subject to the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and the provisions of paragraph 3 below, to enter into commitments in the biennium 2002-2003 to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to the biennium, provided that the concurrence of the Advisory Committee shall not be necessary for:

(a) Such commitments, not exceeding a total of 8 million United States dollars in any one year of the biennium 2002-2003, as the Secretary-General certifies relate to the maintenance of peace and security;

(b) Such commitments as the President of the International Court of Justice certifies relate to expenses occasioned by:

(i) The designation of ad hoc judges (Statute of the International Court of Justice, Article 31), not exceeding a total of 330,000 dollars;

(ii) The calling of witnesses and the appointment of experts (Statute, Article 50) and the appointment of assessors (Statute, Article 30), not exceeding a total of 50,000 dollars;

(iii) The maintenance in office for the completion of cases of judges who have not been re-elected (Statute, Article 13, paragraph 3), not exceeding a total of 40,000 dollars;

(iv) The payment of pensions and travel and removal expenses of retiring judges, and travel and removal expenses and installation grant of members of the Court (Statute, Article 32, paragraph 7), not exceeding a total of 410,000 dollars;

(v) The work of the Court or its Chambers away from The Hague (Statute, Article 22), not exceeding a total of 25,000 dollars;

(c) Such commitments, not exceeding a total of 500,000 dollars in the biennium 2002-2003, as the Secretary-General certifies are required for inter-organizational security measures pursuant to section IV of General Assembly resolution 36/235 of 18 December 1981;

2. Resolves that the Secretary-General shall report to the Advisory Committee and to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth sessions all commitments made under the provisions of the present resolution, together with the circumstances relating thereto, and shall submit supplementary estimates to the Assembly in respect of such commitments;

3. Decides that for the biennium 2002-2003, if a decision of the Security Council results in the need for the Secretary-General to enter into commitments relating to the maintenance of peace and security in an amount exceeding 10 million dollars in respect of the decision, that matter shall be brought to the General Assembly, or, if the General Assembly is suspended or not in session, a resumed or special session of the Assembly shall be convened by the Secretary-General to consider the matter.

Contributions

Unpaid assessed contributions from Member States to the UN budget at the end of 2001 totalled $2.1 billion (slightly lower than the 2000 figure of $2.2 billion); unpaid regular budget assessments totalled $240 million (compared to $222 million in 2000); outstanding peacekeeping arrears aggregated $1,823 million ($166 million less than in 2000); and unpaid assessments for the international tribunals aggregated $44 million ($3 million less than in 2000).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessment in full decreased from a high of 141 in 2000 to 135 at 31 December 2001.

Assessments

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 55/5 A (YUN 2000, p. 1310), the Secretary-General submitted a February report [A/55/789] reviewing the implications of the calculation of assessed contributions in arrears for the purpose of the application of Article 19 of the Charter, whereby a Member State would lose its vote in the Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years.

The report examined current procedures for applying Article 19, including interpretations of the terms "arrears", "contributions due for the preceding two full years", and the use of "net" and "gross" assessments in the calculation of "arrears" and "contributions due". It also examined the implications of annual and biannual calculations (at the beginning of each calendar year and at the beginning of the peacekeeping financial period on 1 July) for the application of Article 19. Annexes I and II to the report contained tables illustrating the practical implications of changes in the current approach, using data on gross and net assessments, payments, credits and outstanding assessed contributions from 1 January 1998 to 31 December 2000 to show the results of the current and various alternative approaches on 1 January, 1 July and 31 December 2000.

The illustrative information indicated that calculations for and application of Article 19 on a bi-annual basis would tend to bring some Member States under its provisions sooner than the current annual exercise. Calculations based on a "net to net" comparison would tend to produce the same result or by a larger margin than the current "gross to net" comparison. Pending further consideration of issues relating to that Article's application by the Committee on Contributions at its sixty-first session (see below), the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of the foregoing information and either take final decisions on the procedures for applying Article 19 or provide guidance to the Committee in its consideration of the matter. In the case of a revision to those procedures, the Assembly might also consider a corresponding revision of the UN financial regulations.

On 9 April [A/55/521/Add.2], the Fifth Committee took note of the view of a large majority of delegations that it should defer a decision on the subject, pending consideration of the report by the Committee on Contributions.

By decision 55/473 A of 12 April, the Assembly took note of the Fifth Committee's report.

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions, at its sixty-first session (New York, 11-28 June) [A/56/11], considered the application of Article 19, measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions, the methodology for preparing future scales of assessments, the assessment of non-member States and appeals by Member States for a change in rate of assessment.

The Committee noted that the information provided in the Secretary-General's February report supported its earlier conclusions. Should the General Assembly move to biannual calculations of arrears for the application of Article 19, some Member States might be prompted to pay their contributions earlier in the year, while more of them might be subject to the application of that Article should the pattern of payments in 2000 continue. The two changes proposed—biannual calculations and net to net comparisons—would potentially affect a significant number of Members, and could lead to an increase in the number and frequency of requests for Article 19 exemptions, affect the Committee's timetable and programme of work, and have consequences for decisions under Article 108 concerning amendments to the Charter.

The Committee recommended that, should the Assembly decide to proceed with those changes in the current practices for the application of Article 19, it should do so gradually. It might begin with the net to net comparison and later implement biannual calculations of arrears, taking into account the results of the first change. It might provide a grace period before implementation to give Members time to make adjustments.

Following its examination of requests from four Member States for exemptions under Article 19, the Committee took no action on Burundi's request since it was not submitted within the required two-week period prior to the Committee's session. It determined that the failure by the Comoros, Georgia and the Republic of Moldova to pay the full minimum amount of their arrears necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 was due to conditions beyond their control, as explained in their letters to the Chairman [A/C.5/55/44], and therefore recommended that they be permitted to vote in the Assembly until 30 June 2002. The Comoros' intention to consider a payment schedule was noted, as were the payment schedules proposed by Georgia and the Republic of Moldova.

At the conclusion of the Committee's session, nine Member States (Central African Republic, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Iraq, Liberia, Niger, Seychelles, Somalia, Uzbekistan) were in arrears in the payment of their assessed contributions under the terms of Article 19. Seven others (Burundi, Comoros, Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Tajikistan), similarly in arrears, had been permitted to vote until 30 June 2001, pursuant to Assembly resolution 55/5 A [YUN 2000, p. 1310].

The Committee noted that, in 2000, Cyprus and Pakistan had availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by Assembly resolution 52/215 A [YUN 1997, p. 1442] of paying the equivalent of $976,276.02 in currencies other than United States dollars.

In its consideration of measures to encourage the timely, full and unconditional payment of assessed contributions, including applying indexation or interest to arrears, the Committee concluded that indexation would pose more complex technical issues than would charging interest. Should the Assembly decide on the latter, the Committee recommended that it be applied only to arrears arising after adoption of that decision, that the interest rate be low and that the measure be delayed to allow Member States to make appropriate adjustments. The Committee would consider the question further in 2002, including the date from which indexation or interest charges should accrue; the rates to be applied; the periodicity; the basis for calculating the charges; whether charges should be compounded for continued non-payment; and the appropriate use for the resulting income.

The Committee also considered the question of multi-year payment plans as useful tools for reducing unpaid assessed contributions. It recommended that the Assembly should decide on the matter, on the basis of proposed guidelines for such plans to be put forward by the Secretary-General. An addendum to the Committee's report [A/56/11/Add.1 & Corr.1] provided information on some multi-year payment plans and incentives and disincentives applied by UN system organizations and other multilateral and regional organizations.

Regarding other possible measures, the Committee agreed to continue to consider at a future session, on the basis of further Assembly guidance, the positive impact that early UN reimbursement of amounts owed to troop-contributing Member States could have on the payment of their assessed contributions; crediting budgetary surpluses to Members current with their financial obligations; and incentive payments keyed to payments status.

The Committee decided not to consider further: the proposals for the establishment of a new assessed fund to which each Member State's contribution would depend on its payment record, as it was overly complicated; redeemable peace-keeping certificates; the ineligibility of Members in arrears for election to committees and other bodies, as it was not in keeping with Article 19; and restricting access of such Members to opportunities for recruitment and procurement, as being outside the Committee's competence.

On the methodology for preparing future scales of assessments, the Committee focused on technical issues not addressed by Assembly resolution 55/5 B [YUN 2000, p. 1311] but of importance for its review of the next scale of assessments. As requested by resolution 54/237 D [ibid., p. 1306], the Committee examined a report on the consequences of sharply depressed levels of primary commodity prices on commodity-dependent economies, but felt it was not clear how that factor could fit into the scale methodology; it thus decided against considering it further unless asked to do so by the Assembly. The Committee would again review the problem of the socio-economic impact of refugee flows on host countries when specific and detailed data were made available and would continue to take that factor into account in its review of requests for exemption under Article 19. It decided to keep the matter of the implementation of the 1993 System of National Accounts [YUN 1993, p. 1112] under review and encouraged Members to adopt it and to respond promptly to the National Accounts Questionnaire to ensure the availability of accurate information for the preparation of the next scale of assessments. After reviewing the revised method of price-adjusted rates of exchange, the Committee decided to continue to consider the matter in 2002, based on a further report on the subject by the Statistics Division, in order to agree on an approach to the issue of identifying excessive income fluctuations or distortions due to the use of market exchange rates and to choose the most appropriate alternative conversion rate.

The Committee deferred to its 2003 session the question of the assessment of non-member States and requested the Secretariat to consult with those States on a possible simplified assessment methodology. It noted that four Member States (Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Kiribati, Tonga, Viet Nam) still had outstanding non-member State contributions assessed prior to their membership in the Organization, and requested the Chairman to seek the Legal Counsel's opinion about the possibility of adding those arrears to their current arrears as Member States.

The Committee took note of the information provided by the United Arab Emirates in support of its request for a change in its rate of assessment. The Committee recommended no change, but encouraged that Member State to make available full and accurate data to the Statistics Division before the next consideration of the assessment scale in 2003. The Committee took no action on Afghanistan's request for a reduction in its rate of assessment as the time available did not allow a complete review of that request.

During the Fifth Committee's consideration of the agenda item on the scale of assessments on 20 July, Burundi reported that, despite its ongoing civil war, it had paid $136,565 on 12 June. That amount had been reduced, however, due to the rapid depreciation of the national currency during the delayed release of the funds so that the final payment was not enough to prevent the loss of Burundi's voting rights. Burundi therefore requested an exemption under Article 19, while it sought to meet its obligation in full.

By decision 55/473 B of 14 June, the Assembly deferred consideration of the proposal for the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Intergovernmental Working Group on the Implementation of the Principle of Capacity to Pay until the main part of its fifty-sixth session.

By decision 55/473 C of 25 July, the Assembly endorsed the Committee on Contributions' recommendation in respect of the Comoros, Georgia and the Republic of Moldova. In welcoming Burundi's undertaking and assurances, the Assembly also decided to permit Burundi to vote in the Assembly until 30 June 2002.

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on payments made by certain Member States to reduce their level of arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 24 January [A/55/745], 38 Member States remained below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (1999-2000). By 22 June [A/S-26/3], that number had been reduced to 16 and to 15 by 10 September [A/56/345].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/728], adopted resolution 56/243 without vote [agenda item 125].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions,

1. Recalls its resolution 55/5 A of 26 October 2000;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to update the information contained in the annexes to his report on the application of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations;
3. Recognizes that multi-year payment plans, subject to careful formulation, could be helpful in allowing Member States to demonstrate their commitment under Article 19 of the Charter to pay their arrears, thereby facilitating consideration of applications for exemption by the Committee on Contributions, and requests the Secretary-General to propose guidelines for such multi-year payment plans through the Committee on Contributions;
4. Recognizes also that it would be helpful for the Secretariat to be equipped with input from Member States on a schedule of payments or other information about their intentions to clear their accumulated arrears, and encourages Member States in a position to do so to provide such information;
5. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full, on time and without imposing conditions, in order to avoid the difficulties being experienced by the United Nations;
6. Requests the Secretary-General to propose or consider further measures to encourage Member States in arrears to reduce and eventually pay their arrears, and to report thereon to the General Assembly during the main part of its fifty-seventh session for subsequent consideration at its resumed fifty-seventh session.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Communication. In a 27 December letter [A/56/767] to the Assembly President, to which a Secretariat note was annexed, the Secretary-General drew attention to the admission of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) to membership in the United Nations on 1 November 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1365], which automatically terminated the membership of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (SFRY) and raised the consequential issue of the payment of its outstanding assessed contributions of $16,218,555, as at 31 October 2000, adjusted for credits in 2001. The Secretary-General concluded that, since the arrears were not collectable from SFRY and consistent with the position of the five successor States (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Slovenia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, FRY), as set out in their letters appended to the Secretariat note, the Assembly might wish to approve the write-off of the amounts in question, or seek payment from the five successor States of all or part of those arrears. The Secretary-General outlined a number of payment methods if the Assembly took the latter course of action.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period 1 July 1999 to 30 June 2000 [A/55/5, vol. II], together with the Secretary-General's March report on implementation of the Board's recommendations thereon [A/55/380/Add.2] and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [A/55/878].

On 14 June, the Assembly, in resolution 55/220 C, endorsed the Board's report (see p. 98).

Board of Auditors report. The Assembly had before it a March note by the Secretary-General [A/55/820], submitted pursuant to resolution 55/220 A [YUN 2000, p. 1317], transmitting the comments of the Board of Auditors concerning action taken by the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme towards removing the reasons that led to the qualified audit opinion on their financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 [ibid., p. 1316].

ACABQ, in March [A/55/836], welcomed the measures taken to address the reasons for the qualified audit opinions, as well as the three organizations' progress in obtaining additional audit reports. It recommended their careful review of those reports with a view to taking any required remedial action. ACABQ noted the Board's satisfaction that the plans developed by the three organizations provided an adequate basis for improving the extent to which national execution expenditure was covered by audit reports, which, if achieved, should result in steady progress towards removing the reasons for the qualified audit. It would follow up on such progress and inform the Assembly accordingly. In the meantime, ACABQ would not object to the Assembly's approval of the financial statements of the three organizations for the biennium ended 31 December 1999.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 April [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/689/Add.1], adopted resolution 55/220 B without vote [agenda item 115].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/220 A of 23 December 2000,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the comments of the Board of Auditors concerning action taken by the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme towards removing the reasons that led to the qualified audit opinion on their financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 1999,

Having also considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the comments of the Board of Auditors contained in the note by the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and qualified audit opinions of the Board of Auditors regarding the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for the biennium ended 31 December 1999;

4. Requests the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund and the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to adhere to the plans they submitted to the Board of Auditors to correct the deficiencies which led to the qualified audit opinions of the financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 and to take all the necessary steps to prevent such shortcomings from occurring again.

The Assembly, at its fifty-sixth (2001) session, had before it the Board of Auditors' report on the audited financial statements of the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for the year ended 31 December 2000 [A/56/5/Add.5]; the Secretary-General's second report [A/56/66] on the implementation of the Board's recommendations on UN accounts for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 [YUN 2000, p. 1316], as well as replies from the executive heads of organizations and programmes relating to the implementation of its recommendations on UN funds and programmes for the same biennium [A/56/66/Add.1]; and the Board's report [A/56/132] on implementation of its recommendations relating to the 1998-1999 biennium, submitted in response to Assembly resolution 52/212 B [YUN 1998, p. 1288].

ACABQ, in its comments on those reports [A/56/436], noted with concern that the Board had qualified its audit opinion on UNHCR's financial statements (see p. 1111).

ACABQ requested that the Board of Auditors, in its reports on the implementation of its recommendations, should indicate the extent to which such recommendations had been implemented and on their impact, and that similar reports by the Secretary-General should focus less on describing how the administration intended to implement the Board's recommendations, and instead indicate briefly the actions taken and results achieved.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/651], adopted resolution 56/233 without vote [agenda item 120].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the audited financial statements and the report of the Board of Auditors on voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the year ended 31 December 2000, the report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of its recommendations relating to the biennium 1998-1999, the second report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations and on the United Nations funds and programmes for the biennium ended 31 December 1999, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial report and audited financial statements and the report and audit opinion of the Board of Auditors regarding the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2000;

2. Endorses the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its report and the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Welcomes the second report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations and on the United Nations funds and programmes for the biennium ended 31 December 1999 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of its recommendations;

4. Requests the audited organizations to take all necessary steps to implement expeditiously the outstanding audit recommendations;

5. Notes with concern the qualified audit opinion on the financial statements of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and requests the audited organizations to cooperate fully with the Board of Auditors and to submit the requested information and documentation in a comprehensive and timely manner so that this does not lead in future to similar qualified opinions.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors, would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth Committee should continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 56/458).

Term of office of Board of Auditors

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/220 A [YUN 2000, p. 1317], the Secretary-General submitted in February [A/55/796] his review of the question of extending the current three-year term of office of members of the Board of Auditors to six years. As the Board had noted in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1370], the UN move to a biennial accounting period meant one member had to step down in the middle of each biennial audit cycle, thus disrupting the Board's work when that member was not reappointed. A six-year term of office would ensure a smooth pattern of rotation by synchronizing the Board's appointment with the two-year financial reporting cycle, and still maintain the rule that members be appointed for three (two-year) financial periods. It was further proposed that appointments be effective from 1 July, by which time all financial reports would have been submitted.

To facilitate a smooth transition from the current annual appointments to the Board to a two-year appointment cycle, starting on 1 July 2002, the Secretary-General proposed two approaches. One would achieve the six-year cycle with immediate effect by extending South Africa's term of office, due to expire in 2003, to 2006, as the terms of office of the two other members were due to expire in 2002 and 2004. The alternative approach would require that, in 2002, 2003 and 2004, Board members be appointed for four, five and six years, respectively. The Board preferred the first approach, since it would affect only one member, South Africa. Accordingly, each member would cover three full financial cycles; at the end of each audit cycle of the biennium, the term of office of one member would expire, and the term of the new member would commence on 1 July and expire on 30 June six years later.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 April [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/532/Add.2], adopted resolution 55/248 without vote [agenda item 116].

Review of the question of the term of office of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/216 D of 23 December 1993 and 55/220 A of 23 December 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 74(I) of 7 December 1946,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the review of the question of the term of office of the Board of Auditors,

1. Decides that the term of office of the Board of Auditors shall be a non-consecutive term of office of six years' duration starting on 1 July 2002;

2. Decides also, for the transitional arrangements, to approve alternative 1 in the report of the Secretary-General, whereby only the appointment of the Auditor-General of South Africa will be extended until 30 June 2006 and the other members elected under the current procedure shall be eligible for re-election;

3. Decides further to amend the first sentence of regulation 12.2 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations as follows:

"The members of the Board of Auditors shall be elected for a non-consecutive term of office of six years' duration."

The Secretary-General, in October [A/C.5/56/7], following his notification in June [A/56/103] of the expiration on 30 June 2002 of the term of a member of the Board of Auditors, transmitted the nomination by the Philippines of the Chairman of its Commission on Audit for reappointment.

The Assembly, by decision 56/315 of 26 November 2001, approved that appointment for a six-year term of office beginning on 1 July 2002.

Administrative and budgetary coordination

By decision 55/472 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of the 2000 statistical report of the Administrative Committee on Coordination on the budgetary and financial situation of the UN system organizations [YUN 2000, p. 1319].

In June [A/56/82], the Secretary-General, in response to Assembly resolution 54/236 [YUN 1999, p. 1317], submitted a progress report on the review of the efficiency and the administrative functioning of the United Nations, including human resources management reforms, budget-related issues, and simplification of procurement, finance and human resources processing work, among others.

CPC, in June [A/56/16], took note of the Secretary-General's report and recommended that the Assembly strengthen the role of the Joint Inspection Unit in programme evaluation, and review the state of coordination and cooperation among oversight bodies with a view to ensuring greater mutual complementarity in their efforts to improve the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth Committee should continue to consider the item at that session (decision 56/458).

Evaluation and programme planning

The Secretary-General transmitted to CPC a number of evaluation reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services: in-depth evaluation of sustainable development [E/AC.51/2001/2]; in-depth evaluation of the population programme [E/AC.51/2001/3]; triennial review of the implementation of CPC recommendations made at its thirty-eighth (1998) session on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme [E/AC.51/2001/4]; and the triennial review of the implementation of CPC recommendations made at its thirty-eighth session on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme [E/AC.51/2001/5].

CPC's comments and recommendations on those reports were contained in the report on its 2001 session [A/56/16].

Chapter III

United Nations staff

In 2001, United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan (Ghana) was appointed for a second five-year term, effective 1 January 2002. In October, the Secretary-General and the United Nations were awarded the 2001 Nobel Peace Prize (see p. 46), which, according to the Security Council President, reflected the high esteem shared by people throughout the world for the Secretary-General and honoured his exceptional achievements and those of the United Nations itself.

The General Assembly, through the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), reviewed the conditions of service of the staff of the UN common system. It adopted ICSC recommendations relating to the draft standards of conduct for the international civil service, the implications for the UN system of the introduction in 2002 of the euro as the national currency in the 12 euro-zone countries of the European Union and the base/floor salary scale. The Assembly also took action on the conditions of service for ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY), and continued to consider the proposed review and strengthening of ICSC as part of ongoing initiatives for UN reform.

The Secretary-General reported on the comprehensive review of the conditions of service of judges of the International Court of Justice, ICTY and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, staff composition, gratis personnel, consultants and individual contractors, the status of women in the Secretariat, multilingualism, regulations governing the status, rights and duties of non-Secretariat officials and experts on mission, staff rules and regulations, staff safety and security, young professionals, mandatory age of separation, the United Nations System Staff College and adherence to regulations governing standards of accommodation for air travel of UN officials.

The Joint Inspection Unit examined policies and practices regarding the recruitment and management of entry-level professionals in selected organizations of the common system.

In continuing efforts to enhance the security and safety of UN staff and associated humanitarian personnel, the Assembly underlined the need to allocate adequate and predictable resources towards that end and requested the Secretary-General to ensure the human rights, privileges and immunities of UN and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a UN operation. In other action, the Assembly adopted the statute of the United Nations System Staff College.

Appointment of Secretary-General

On 29 June, Kofi Annan (Ghana), first appointed Secretary-General of the United Nations on 17 December 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1312], was appointed for a second five-year term, effective 1 January 2002.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 June [meeting 4337], the Security Council, at a private meeting, unanimously adopted resolution 1358(2001). The draft [S/2001/635] was co-sponsored by all Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the question of the recommendation for the appointment of the Secretary-General of the United Nations,

Recommends to the General Assembly that Mr. Kofi Annan be appointed Secretary-General of the United Nations for a second term of office from 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2006.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 55/402 B of 22 June, the General Assembly, following a request by Nigeria [A/55/242], as chairman of the African Group, included in the agenda of its fifty-fifth session an additional item entitled "Appointment of the Secretary-General of the United Nations".

On 29 June [meeting 105], the Assembly adopted resolution 55/277 [draft: A/55/L.87] without vote [agenda item 187].

Appointment of the Secretary-General of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the recommendation contained in Security Council resolution 1358(2001) of 27 June 2001,

Expressing its appreciation for the effective and dedicated service rendered to the United Nations by Mr. Kofi Annan during his first term of office,

Appoints Mr. Kofi Annan Secretary-General of the United Nations for a second term of office beginning on 1 January 2002 and ending on 31 December 2006.

Assembly President Harri Holkeri (Finland), in a statement congratulating the Secretary-General, noted that the Member States' decision to reappoint him demonstrated their strong support and trust for his second term of office and testified to their continued support for his ideas and actions.

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body established in 1974 by General Assembly resolution 3357(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 875], continued in 2001 to regulate and coordinate the conditions of service of the UN common system of salaries and allowances. The ICSC statute had been accepted by the United Nations and 12 related organizations: the International Labour Organization (ILO); the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations; the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization; the World Health Organization; the International Civil Aviation Organization; the Universal Postal Union; the International Telecommunication Union; the World Meteorological Organization; the International Maritime Organization; the World Intellectual Property Organization; the United Nations Industrial Development Organization; and the International Atomic Energy Agency. One other organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, had not formally accepted the statute but participated fully in ICSC work.

ICSC held its fifty-third session (Montreal, Canada, 11-29 June), at which it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to both Professional and General Service categories of staff, and those relating specifically to the Professional and higher categories and to the General Service and other locally recruited categories.

The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its twenty-seventh annual report to the Assembly [A/56/30] (see sections below).

In an October statement on the administrative and financial implications of ICSC decisions and recommendations for the 2000-2001 programme budget and for the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget [A/56/485], the Secretary-General estimated the resultant requirements at $1,779,200 and $7,817,700, respectively, net of staff assessment.

The General Assembly, in resolution 56/255, section III (see p. 1319), approved the amount of $12,813,400 for ICSC for the 2002-2003 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/56/729], adopted resolution 56/244 without vote [agenda item 127].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2001 and the statement submitted by the Secretary-General on the administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the Commission,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single, unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Convinced that the common system constitutes the best instrument to secure staff of the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity for the international civil service, as stipulated under the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the statute of the Commission and the central role of the Commission in the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Takes note of the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2001;

I

Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

A. Standards of conduct for the international civil service

Recalling its resolutions 52/252 of 8 September 1998, 54/238 of 23 December 1999 and 55/223 of 23 December 2000,

Welcomes the standards of conduct as set out in annex II to the report of the Commission;

B. Introduction of the euro

1. Approves the recommendation of the Commission that:

(a) Effective 1 January 2002, the euro should be used as the official currency for those emoluments which are currently set in the national currencies of the twelve euro-zone countries, and that the national currency amounts would be converted by applying the respective fixed conversion rates and then rounded up or down to the nearest euro;

(b) The converted values of the education grant for nine currency areas, and of the children's and secondary dependant's allowances for nine locations, will change over to the euro effective 1 January 2002, as reflected in annexes I and II to the present resolution;

2. Invites organizations to convert officially into euros, where applicable, their respective General Service salary scales and allowances effective 1 January 2002, on the basis of the approach referred to in paragraph 1 (a) above;

II

Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

A. Evolution of the margin

Recalling section I.B of its resolution 52/216 of 22 December 1997 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of the United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service) employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as "the margin"),

Recalling also section IX, paragraph 3, of its resolution 46/191 A of 20 December 1991, in which it requested the Commission to include in its work programme a review of the differences between the United Nations and the United States net remuneration at individual grade levels,

1. Notes that the margin between the net remuneration of United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service for 2001 is 111.0, as reflected in annex III to the present resolution;

2. Also notes that the United Nations/United States net remuneration ratios range from 117.1 at the P-2 level to 104.4 at the D-2 level, and considers that this imbalance should be addressed in the context of the overall margin considerations established by the General Assembly;

B. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling section I.H of its resolution 44/198 of 21 December 1989, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service),

1. Notes the increasing number of duty stations where the post adjustment classification is equal or close to zero, and requests the Commission to review the methodology to ensure that purchasing power equivalence is appropriately reflected;

2. Approves, with effect from 1 March 2002, as recommended by the Commission, the revised base scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories, as contained in annex IV to the present resolution;

III

Strengthening of the international civil service

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the review of the International Civil Service Commission and the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening the international civil service,

Requests the Secretary-General, in close consultation with the Chairman of the International Civil Service Commission, to submit a timetable for the implementation of the review of the strengthening of the international civil service to the General Assembly at the main part of its fifty-seventh session.

Functioning of ICSC

Strengthening of ICSC

On 12 April, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's reports on the composition and terms of reference of the group established to examine the mandate, membership and functioning of ICSC [YUN 1999, p. 1319] and on the review of ICSC [YUN 2000, p. 1334], with a view to taking a decision at its fifty-sixth (2001) session (decision 55/475).

Remuneration issues

Pursuant to the standing mandate in General Assembly resolution 52/216 [YUN 1992, p. 1055] and to resolution 55/223 [YUN 2000, p. 1331], ICSC continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories (grades P-1 to D-2) in New York and that of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as the margin). ICSC, in its 2001 report to the Assembly [A/56/30], noted that a net remuneration margin of 112.2 was forecast for 2001, based on current grade equivalencies between United Nations and United States officials in comparable positions, as shown in annex VII to its report. ICSC acknowledged that the United States Administration, in a bid to close a 32 per cent pay gap between its public and non-public sectors, had increased salaries in 2001 as an alternative to pre-existing recommended pay reforms. The Commission noted that the level of the margin reported to it did not reflect recent retroactive tax changes introduced by the United States

Administration. Once full details of those changes were known and taken into account, it was expected that a revised margin would be reported to the Assembly.

In view of the rise in the comparator's civil service salaries as at 1 January 2001, ICSC recommended that, with effect from 1 March 2002, the current base/floor salary scale for Professional and higher categories in the UN common system be increased by 3.87 per cent, through standard consolidation procedures, on a no-loss/no-gain basis. The proposed revised salary scale and staff assessment rates were set out in annexes V and VI to the ICSC report.

Based on the 1997 revised methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at headquarters and non-headquarters duty stations [YUN 1997, p. 1453], ICSC conducted a survey of best prevailing conditions of service for General Service and other locally recruited categories of staff in Rome, with a reference date of November 2000. It recommended a new salary scale for Rome-based staff, as reproduced in annex VIII to its report, which was, on average, 4.25 per cent higher than the current scale. It also recommended revised rates for dependency allowances, determined on the basis of tax abatements provided by the Italian Government and supplementary payments provided by surveyed employers. The financial implications of the recommendations were estimated at $1.9 million yearly.

S = Rate applicable to staff members with no dependent spouse or child.

<sup>a</sup>This scale will be implemented in conjunction with a consolidation of 3.87 per cent of post adjustment. There will be consequential adjustments in post adjustment indices and multipliers at all duty stations effective 1 March 2002. Thereafter, changes in post adjustment classifications will be implemented on the basis of the movement of the consolidated post adjustment indices.

ICSC also conducted surveys of employment conditions for staff in the Trades and Crafts and Language Teachers categories in New York, which resulted in increases of 3.78 per cent for those in the Trades and Crafts category, as outlined in annex IX, and of 5.8 per cent for the Language Teachers category, as reflected in the recommended salary scale contained in annex X.

Introduction of the euro

ICSC considered the effect on the UN common system of the introduction of the euro as the official currency of participating member States of the European Union, with effect from 1 January 2002. To facilitate the transition, common system organizations had introduced, or were to introduce, changes in budgeting, accounting, payroll and procurement. However, to ensure a consistent approach in dealing with those changes, some issues required ICSC's attention, including some common system emoluments set in the national currencies of the euro-zone countries, such as education grant levels, children's and secondary dependant's allowances for the Professional and higher categories, General Service salary scales for Vienna, Rome and Paris, and daily subsistence allowance rates. The Commission therefore considered a uniform procedure for expressing those emoluments in euros.

ICSC recommended to the Assembly and/or organizations that, as at 1 January 2002, the euro be used as the official currency for emoluments currently set in the national currencies of the 12 euro-zone countries. The national currency amounts would be converted by applying the respective rates, and then rounded up or down to the nearest euro. It also recommended converted values of education grant for nine currency areas, as set out in annex III to its report, and proposed that organizations convert into euros, where applicable, their General Service salary scales and allowances, as at 1 January 2002.

Post adjustment

ICSC continued its periodic surveys of the operation of the post adjustment system, designed to measure cost-of-living differences. The results of those cost-of-living (place to place) surveys conducted in 2000 were examined by ICSC's Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions at its March 2001 session. ICSC, in considering the Committee's recommendations, concluded that increases in post adjustment at all headquarters duty stations were attributable to a combination of factors. It approved the survey results, to the effect that the Geneva post adjustment index should continue to be applied to Berne, and that the survey results for London, Montreal, Paris, Rome, Vienna and Washington, D.C., should be taken into account in determining their post adjustment classifications from 1 July 2001. The estimated financial implications of the implementation of the survey results were $15 million.

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials serving the General Assembly

Ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

Report of Secretary-General. In February [A/55/756], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the conditions of service of the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) (see p. 1198), approved by Security Council resolution 1329(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1228]. He recommended that the conditions of service and travel and subsistence regulations he had proposed in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1452], which were approved by the General Assembly in resolution 53/214 [YUN 1998, p. 1301], for the judges of ICTY and of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) should be applied to the ad litem judges. They included an annual salary of $160,000 prorated for the length of service, travel costs and subsistence benefits, education allowance, disability payments, survivors' lump-sum benefit and medical insurance. All entitlements and allowances would be conditional on residence at The Hague and ad litem judges would not be entitled to pension benefits or relocation allowance owing to the limitation on the length of their appointment. However, in the light of the Assembly's decision in resolution 53/214 to review in 2001 the emoluments, pensions and other conditions of service of members of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) and of ICTY and ICTR judges, the Secretary-General proposed that any adjustments to those conditions of service and compensation should also be applied, as appropriate, to ad litem judges.

ACABQ report. In February [A/55/806], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) noted that the Secretary-General's suggestion that the same conditions of service for judges of the tribunals be applied to ad litem judges was not entirely consistent with the provision in article 13 quater of ICTY's statute that the terms and conditions of service be applied mutatis mutandis. Nonetheless, it did not object to his proposals concerning salary, travel and subsistence regulations, relocation allowance and pension benefits. It was of the opinion, however, that the requirement for actual residence of the judges at The Hague might be onerous, pointing out that the ICJ Statute required only the President and Registrar to reside at the seat of the Court. Therefore, ad litem judges should be required to hold themselves at the disposal of the Court only during the period of their appointment. Also, ACABQ saw no need to apply to ad litem judges the education allowance and lump-sum survivor benefit, given the uncertainty as to the length of their service and the probability of breaks in service. It recommended that their disability benefit entitlement be limited to injury or illness attributable to service with ICTY.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 April [meeting 98], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/55/691/Add.1], adopted resolution 55/249 without vote [agenda item 127].

Conditions of service and compensation for the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/214 of 18 December 1998, in particular paragraphs 4 to 6 of section VIII entitled "Conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of the International Court of Justice, judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994", and paragraph 8 of its resolution 55/225 of 23 December 2000 on the financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the conditions of service of the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the emoluments, travel and subsistence regulations and disability payments for the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991;

2. Decides to review, in conjunction with the comprehensive review of the emoluments, pensions and other conditions of service for the members of the International Court of Justice, the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, to be undertaken at its fifty-sixth session, in accordance with its resolution 53/214, the emoluments and other conditions of service for the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.

Judges of ICJ and international tribunals

Report of Secretary-General. In November [A/C.5/56/14], the Secretary-General submitted his comprehensive review of the emoluments, pensions and other conditions of service of members of ICJ and judges of ICTR and ICTY, including the ad litem judges. He recommended that the annual emoluments of ICJ, ICTR and ICTY judges and the ad litem judges should be maintained at their current level of $160,000. Noting the introduction of the euro as the national currency of the Netherlands as at 1 January 2002, he proposed that the floor/ceiling mechanism used for protecting the value of the level of salary of the judges against the weakening/strengthening of the United States dollar against the Dutch guilder should continue to be applied to the emoluments of the judges based on the euro. The Secretary-General also proposed increasing the special allowance of the Presidents of ICJ, ICTR and ICTY from $15,000 to $20,000, with a commensurate increase in the daily special allowance of their respective Vice-Presidents when acting as President from $94 per day to $125, subject to a maximum of $12,500 per year. The increase in the level of education grant, including that for disabled children, approved by General Assembly resolution 55/223 [YUN 2000, p. 1331], should be extended to ICJ members and ICTY and ICTR judges as from 1 January 2001. The reference to "installation grant" in the travel and subsistence regulations applicable to members of the Court and the tribunals, respectively, should be revised to make reference to the "assignment grant" provisions applicable to senior officials of the United Nations Secretariat. Concerning health insurance, the Secretary-General noted that, for the duration of their appointment, arrangements would be made for the ICJ, ICTR and ICTY judges and eligible dependants to participate in the official UN health plan on the same conditions as those of other non-staff members. He recommended that the issues of increasing pension payments to remove the disparity in payments to former members of ICJ, and of the existing disparity between the pension benefits of ICTY and ICJ judges, should be brought to the Assembly's attention, in the light of arguments put forward by the Registrar and the President of ICTY.

Concerning the benefits of ad litem judges, which were addressed in his February report (see p. 1334), the Secretary-General stated that the issue of providing them educational assistance should be also brought to the Assembly's attention. Acknowledging that guidance had been requested on the question of disability benefits for ad litem judges and the interpretation of service-related injuries and illnesses, he stated that entitlements in that regard would be determined in accordance with the guidelines set out in his bulletin ST/SGB/103/Rev.1.

ACABQ report. In December [A/56/7/ Add.2], ACABQ stated that it had no objections to the proposals contained in the Secretary-General's November report (see p. 1335) regarding annual emoluments, education grant, travel and subsistence regulations, and entitlements relating to the hardship classification of duty stations and related home leave travel of ICJ members and judges of the international tribunals. It did not, however, recommend the proposed increases in the special allowance for their Presidents and Vice-Presidents. Noting the Secretary-General's comments concerning health insurance, ACABQ reiterated its view that ICJ members should cover the total cost of their participation in the Organization's health insurance plans. It also did not recommend any changes to pension benefits for ICJ members, recalling that its previous recommendations, approved in Assembly resolution 53/214 [YUN 1998, p. 1301], continued to provide protection for pensions against a cost-of-living increase. ACABQ did not recommend any change in the current arrangements with regard to pension benefits of judges of the tribunals. Regarding educational assistance to ad litem judges, it found no justification for changing its February recommendations (see p. 1334).

Payment of honorariums

In August [A/56/311], the Secretary-General recalled that, although his 1998 report on the payment of honorariums to members of subsidiary organs of the United Nations and the practice followed by other UN system organizations [YUN 1998, p. 1304] was before the General Assembly at its fifty-fourth (1999) session, it had been neither formally introduced nor debated. However, ACABQ's comments and recommendations on that report were contained in its reports to the Assembly on the 2000-2001 programme budget. While the Assembly, in resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289], did endorse in general ACABQ's conclusions and recommendations on the proposed 2000-2001 programme budget, it made no specific reference to the question of honorariums. The Secretariat was, therefore, not in a position to provide a precise indication as to whether the Assembly had endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendations on the subject.

The Secretary-General was therefore requesting the Assembly to provide a clear indication of its intentions, including an effective date for the application of the proposals, either retroactive to January 2000, or prospectively to January 2002. In either case, a budgetary provision would be required to meet the additional expenses.

Personnel policies and practices

Human resources management

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session, considered the agenda item "Human resources management", which it had deferred by decision 55/474 of 12 April. The Assembly had before it reports of the Secretary-General on developments in the UN Secretariat post structure [YUN 1999, p. 1330] and staff composition [ibid., p. 1331], notes on the delegation of authority in human resources management and the related ACABQ report [ibid., p. 1338], on personnel practices [ibid.] and on the competitive examinations for promotion to the Professional category of staff and the related ACABQ report [ibid.]. It also considered reports on a comprehensive human resources management implementation programme [YUN 2000, p. 1337] and on delineating the continuum between responsibility, authority and accountability [ibid.] and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [ibid., p. 1338]; a report by the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the UN recruitment process [ibid., p. 1351]; a report of the Secretary-General reviewing the status of women in the Secretariat [ibid., p. 1341]; Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) reports on the implementation of policy directives on the use of consultants [ibid., p. 1340] and the Secretary-General's comments thereon [ibid., p. 1341], and on senior-level appointments [ibid., p. 1352] together with the Secretary-General's comments thereon [A/55/423/Add.1]; reports of the Secretary-General on staff composition [YUN 2000, p. 1338] and on the use of retirees [ibid., p. 1352]; a JIU report on the administration of justice in the Secretariat and related comments of the Secretary-General [ibid., p. 1359] and ACABQ [ibid., p. 1360]; a report of the Secretary-General on management irregularities causing financial loss to the Organization [ibid., p. 1318]; and lists of the Secretariat's staff.

Having considered the proposals of the Secretary-General concerning changes to the system of recruitment, placement and promotion,

1. Endorses the views and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraphs 8 to 11 and annex VIII of its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity serve as the paramount consideration in the employment of staff, with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Reiterates that all external vacancy announcements should be submitted to the permanent missions of Member States and be displayed on the notice boards in United Nations premises, as well as posted on the United Nations home page, decides that they should be effectively circulated on the date of issue and that the deadline for the submission of applications should be at least two months from the date of issue and, for unplanned vacancies, such as, inter alia, death or sudden departure of staff, the Secretary-General may reduce the deadline for applications for external vacancies to 30 days if he deems it to be in the best interests of the Organization, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly thereon;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate internal vacancy announcements to permanent missions when issued;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to offer probationary appointments to all staff members who have passed a competitive recruitment examination and to consider such staff members for conversion to permanent appointment after successful completion of the probationary service;

13. Urges the Secretary-General to strictly comply with the principle that appointment to P-2 posts and to posts requiring special language competence for conference services be made exclusively through competitive examinations, and requests, in this context, that he include in his future reports the information justifying non-compliance with that principle;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that candidates selected through national competitive examinations are placed in a timely fashion and that special efforts are made to recruit candidates from the national competitive examinations roster against existing vacancies until these rosters are cleared;

16. Regrets that the provisions of section V, paragraph 22, of its resolution 53/221 were not fully complied with, which led to candidates from over-represented countries taking the General Service to Professional category examination in February 2000, and decides, as a one-time exception, to allow the movement of successful candidates from the G to P examination of 2000 from the General Service to the Professional category;

17. Notes the efforts made by the Secretary-General to align the General Service to the Professional category examinations with the national competitive examinations, as required under section V, paragraph 22, of resolution 53/221, and decides that henceforth recruitment of qualified staff from the General Service to the Professional category should be limited to the P-1 and P-2 levels and be permitted up to 10 per cent of the appointments at those levels;

18. Emphasizes the need for a systematic rejuvenation of the Secretariat and for retaining younger Professional staff, particularly in the light of the age profile of the staff in the Organization;

19. Reaffirms that secondment from government service is consistent with Articles 100 and 101 of the Charter and is beneficial to both the Organization and Member States, and urges the Secretary-General to pursue this practice on a wider scale;

V Mobility

Recognizing the value of staff mobility in the Organization,

Recognizing also that the requirement for mobility is one of the essential elements of contractual status of staff,

Having considered the recommendations of the Secretary-General and the related views of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to develop further criteria for mobility to maximize its benefits for the Organization and to ensure the fair and equitable treatment of all staff and to avoid its possible abuse as an instrument of coercion against staff, taking into account job security in the Organization and other relevant factors, such as an appropriate incentive scheme and assurances of onward assignment;

2. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to conduct a comprehensive review of the question of mobility and its implications on career development of staff members in the United Nations system and report to the General Assembly during the course of its fifty-seventh session;

3. Notes the difference between mobility within a duty station and mobility across duty stations, and considers that the latter should be a more important factor in career development;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to develop further appropriate mechanisms for promotion with a view to introducing adequate incentives for mobility between duty stations, including the possibility of promotion for staff subject to such mobility;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that lateral mobility does not negatively affect the continuity and quality of the services required for the implementation of mandated programmes and activities;

6. Stresses that mobility of staff should not lead to the transfer or abolition of posts as a result of vacancy;

7. Requests the Secretary-General for proposals to solve problems resulting from increasing staff mobility;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to encourage and recognize outstanding job performance of United Nations staff, especially in exceptional circumstances;

VII

(b) The three staff representatives and the alternates shall be selected by the appropriate staff representative body;

(c) One additional member of the Central Review Boards shall be selected jointly by the representatives of the Secretary-General and the staff members appointed to the Boards;

(e) Delete the last phrase in the proposed amendment to staff rule 104.14 in paragraph (i) (ii) "in accordance with procedures established by the Secretary-General", dealing with the review function of the Central Review Boards/bodies;

VII

Delegation of authority and accountability

Reiterating section IV of its resolution 53/221, by which the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General, inter alia, to ensure, before delegating authority to programme managers, that well-designed mechanisms of accountability, including the necessary internal monitoring and control procedures, as well as training, are put in place,

4. Emphasizes that any delegation of authority should be in accordance with the Charter and the regulations and rules of the Organization and should entail clear lines of authority and accountability as well as improvements in the administration of justice, taking into account the central role played by the Office of Human Resources Management in setting the policies and guidelines in respect of the human resources management of the Organization and monitoring their observance and implementation;

5. Stresses that rules and regulations governing separation from service shall be followed strictly;

6. Recalls its request to the Secretary-General in section II, paragraph 2, of its resolution 51/226, as reiterated in section IV, paragraph 10, of its resolution 53/221, to enhance managerial accountability with respect to human resources management decisions, including imposing sanctions in cases of demonstrated mismanagement of staff and wilful neglect of, or disregard for, established rules and procedures, while safeguarding the right of due process of all staff members, including managers, and urges the Secretary-General to continue to seek improvements in this area;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve accountability and responsibility in the reform of human resources management as well as the monitoring and control mechanisms and procedures and to report on the implementation of his proposals to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session on the progress achieved, including with regard to management irregularities;

9. Reaffirms that, in accordance with staff regulation 1.2, staff members shall not be actively associated with the management of, or hold a financial interest in, any profit-making, business or other concern, if it were possible for the staff member or the profit-making, business or other concern to benefit from such association or financial interest by reason of his or her position with the United Nations;

10. Decides to further consider the issue of a robust monitoring capacity in the Office for Human Resources Management for the monitoring of all relevant activities in the Secretariat, regardless of the source of their funding, and requests the Secretary-General to provide an analytical and thorough report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session;

VIII

Streamlined rules and procedures

Notes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General mentioned in paragraphs 27 to 32 of his report regarding the elimination of documentation relating to obsolete and redundant rules and procedures, and requests that the General Assembly be informed at its fifty-sixth session on the details of the documentation being eliminated;

IX

Consultants

Decides to consider the question of the use of consultants and individual contractors at its fifty-sixth session, and requests the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to present its reports to the General Assembly at the main part of its fifty-sixth session on the relevant reports of the Secretary-General and the Joint Inspection Unit;

X

Composition of the Secretariat

Noting that the relative weight of the population factor in the calculation of desirable ranges for the implementation of posts was reduced to 5 per cent from 7.2 per cent in section III of General Assembly resolution 42/220 A of 21 December 1987,

Also noting that posts subject to geographical distribution have witnessed a decrease, from 3,350 to 2,700 to the current 2,600,

Further noting the increase in the number of Member States and the gradual decrease in the number of non-represented and under-represented Member States in the United Nations Secretariat,

Bearing in mind that the new scales of assessment, which will have a direct bearing on the desirable ranges currently being followed, have been adopted by the General Assembly on 23 December 2000,

1. Reaffirms that, in accordance with its resolutions 41/206 A of 11 December 1986 and 53/221 of 7 April 1999, no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group of States, including at the highest levels, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as a general rule, no national of a Member State succeeds a national of that State in a senior post and that there is no monopoly on senior posts by nationals of any State or group of States;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all the necessary measures to ensure, at the senior and policy-making levels of the Secretariat, equitable representation of Member States, especially those with inadequate representation at those levels, unrepresented and under-represented, in particular developing countries, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and to continue to include relevant information thereon in all future reports on the composition of the Secretariat;

XVI

Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly for consideration at its fifty-seventh session a detailed report on the results of the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution.

The General Assembly, on 24 December, decided that the agenda item entitled "Human resources management" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464), and that the Fifth Committee would continue to consider it at that session (decision 56/458).

Pay and benefits system

ICSC, at its fifty-third session, reviewed the pay and benefits system, one of the principal elements of the integrated framework for human resources management [YUN 2000, p. 1337], adopted by ICSC in 2000 and approved by the General Assembly in resolution 55/223, section I [ibid., p. 1331]. The objective of the review was to design a competitive system that would enable organizations to attract, develop and retain high-quality staff, reward them on the basis of merit and competence, recognize team as well as individual performance and simplify the system with a view to ease of administration and greater cost-effectiveness. That would be achieved through improved organizational performance: linking remuneration to performance; strengthened management capacity; increased flexibility; greater competitiveness; improved work/life policies; and streamlining, simplification, greater transparency and accountability.

ICSC, functioning as an open-ended working group of the whole, discussed the challenges faced by the organizations of the common system, especially the need for competitiveness and improved organizational performance. It examined possible new approaches to the pay and benefits system, including updating and streamlining job classification standards and procedures, a remuneration system that included tools to recognize and reward contribution, and mechanisms to strengthen management's capacity to meet organizational goals and enhance performance and effectiveness. Also examined were the treatment of allowances and related issues, diversity among organizations, the pension scheme and the need for a strategic approach.

ICSC, pending submission of its report to the General Assembly in 2002, requested the Assembly to take note of progress made and the ideas and approaches explored, which it would further consider and develop. It decided to continue in 2002 the biennial review of the level of the education grant; the amount of children's and secondary dependant's allowance for the Professional and higher categories; and the common scale of staff assessment.

Contractual arrangements

ICSC considered the issue of contractual arrangements, one of the core elements identified in the integrated framework for human resources management [YUN 2000, p. 1337]. It had before it an analysis of recent employment trends, by type of contractual arrangement, in common system organizations, as well as information on recent developments in employment in the national civil services of a selected number of countries.

ICSC decided that future work on the subject should be integrated into the review of the pay and benefits system (see above). In that context, it requested the Secretariat to: update available statistics; take further inventory of the various types of contracts in use and the numbers of staff against each type of contract, together with descriptions of the types of appointment; collect information on the administrative policies of common system organizations and of selected national civil services on career versus time-limited appointments; and propose a compendium of contracts from which organizations could select and adapt, according to their specific needs.

Draft standards of conduct for the international civil service

At its fifty-third session [A/56/30], ICSC, after considering the views of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) and of the common system's organizations and staff representatives, finalized and adopted the draft standards of conduct for the international civil service and recommended them to the General Assembly and other organizations of the system. The draft, which was updated by a working group and further revised by ICSC in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1338], was set out in annex II to its report.

The General Assembly, in section I of resolution 56/244 (see p. 1330), welcomed the standards of conduct for the international civil service.

Staff composition

In his October annual report on the Secretariat's staff composition [A/56/512 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General updated information on changes in the desirable range of posts for Member States and described measures taken to ensure equitable representation at the senior and policy-making levels. As at 30 June 2001, Secretariat staff numbered 14,874, higher by 1,710 than at 30 June 2000. Of that number, 5,508 were in the Professional and higher categories, 8,530 were in the General Service and related categories and 836 were project personnel; 7,485 were paid from the regular budget and 7,389 from extrabudgetary sources. Staff in posts subject to geographical distribution numbered 2,445, of whom 983 were female (an increase of 1 per cent compared to 2000). Eighteen Member States remained unrepresented in all staff categories, while 10 were underrepresented, compared to 21 and 8, respectively, in 2000. Appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution between 1 July 2000 and 30 June 2001 totalled 159. Of those, 5 (3.1 per cent) were nationals of unrepresented Member States, 38 (33.9 per cent) of underrepresented Member States, 109 (68.6 per cent) of within-range Member States and 6 (3.8 per cent) of overrepresented Member States. Changes in representation status resulted from appointments or separation from service, adjustments to desirable ranges owing to an increase or decrease in the number of posts subject to geographical distribution and changes in the number of Member States, the scale of assessments, the population of Member States and the status of individual staff members.

The report also detailed information on the demographic profile of Secretariat staff, Secretariat staff movement between 1 July 2000 and 30 June 2001 and forecasts of anticipated retirements between 2001 and 2005.

Gratis personnel

By decision 55/462 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's 2000 reports on the situation of gratis personnel provided by Governments and other entities

[YUN 2000, p. 1339] and the related oral report of the ACABQ Chairman, and decided that future reports on that item should be submitted annually.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his annual report [A/56/839] on the status of types I and II gratis personnel for the period 1 January to 31 December 2001, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 51/243 [YUN 1997, p. 1469], provided information on, among other things, their nationality, duration of service and functions. Type I gratis personnel serving under an established regime included interns, associate experts and technical cooperation experts obtained on non-reimbursable loans. Type II gratis personnel included a hydrology expert, a health economist and an indigenous people's rights lawyer. The Secretary-General stated that, between 31 December 2000 and 31 December 2001, the total number of type I gratis personnel decreased from 265 to 187 (29.4 per cent), owing mainly to a 51.8 per cent decrease in the number of associate experts (from 218 to 105). On the other hand, the number of interns and technical cooperation experts increased from 39 to 68 (74 per cent) and from 8 to 14 (75 per cent), respectively. During the same period, the number of type II gratis personnel decreased from 43 to 3 (93 per cent), as the engagement of 40 forensic investigators by ICTY was discontinued in 2001. Among the remaining three, one was engaged by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, one by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and one by the Economic Commission for Africa.

Consultants and individual contractors

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to section VIII of General Assembly resolution 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1328] and section IX of resolution 55/258 (see p. 1340), the Secretary-General submitted his annual report on the hiring and use of consultants and individual contractors in 2000 [A/56/834]. He noted that, while the necessary data were available for Headquarters through the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS), comparable information regarding the type and nature of their contracts on a worldwide basis would not be available until the full deployment in 2001 of IMIS (Release III) at all duty stations. Therefore, the data were collated from both the legacy systems and from IMIS, resulting in their delayed issuance.

The report included statistical tables giving the number of persons engaged and the number and types of contracts, their status as retired or not retired, gender, levels of education and performance, nationality, purpose of engagement, occupational groups, duration of contracts, number of days worked, hiring departments, fees, source of funding and total expenditure. In 2000, 3,054 consultants and 1,314 individual contractors were engaged, accounting for 4,173 and 2,471 contracts, respectively. Fees for both totalled $41.9 million, an increase of $13 million over the total reported for 1999 [YUN 2000, p. 1340].

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/7], considered a JIU report on the use of consultants and the related report of the Secretary-General on the hiring and use of consultants and individual contractors in 1999 [YUN 2000, p. 1340]. In its comments on JIU's recommendations concerning geographical balance for consultancy, ACABQ, while acknowledging the importance of the geographical mix of consultants, noted the Secretary-General's observations on the increased costs and delays in project execution such restrictions would cause, and questioned the utility of using desirable ranges in procuring that type of expertise. As to the Secretary-General's related report, ACABQ pointed out that the weaknesses in record keeping, data collection and processing it had earlier identified [YUN 1998, p. 1311] persisted, as a system for accurate data collection had yet to be established. It noted that, while information could be obtained relatively easily from Headquarters through IMIS, data from offices away from Headquarters were less reliable. The installation of IMIS in those offices would facilitate data collection and analysis. Moreover, at the beginning of a financial period, areas where consultancy would be required should be identified. Thus, the estimates in the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium should have contained more precise information on requirements and full justification for the use of outside expertise. To facilitate that process, ACABQ urged the speedy establishment in the Secretariat of a viable inventory of skills, taking into account the expertise of agencies, funds and programmes of the UN system.

CPC consideration. The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), at its forty-first session (11 June-6 July) [A/56/16], also considered the JIU report on the use of consultants as well as the Secretary-General's related comments [YUN 2000, p. 1341]. CPC expressed disappointment over the lack of progress in establishing mechanisms to avoid duplication of activities and in developing norms to attract consultants on a wider geographical base, and the lack of a gender perspective in the JIU report. It requested the Secretary-General to study different methodologies for correcting the geographical imbalance in hiring consultants and to report on workable options to enable Member States to make an informed choice among alternative systems.

The General Assembly, by decision 56/460 of 24 December, endorsed CPC's conclusions and recommendations on the use of consultants and ACABQ's observations contained in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium. It requested the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the decision at its fifty-seventh (2002) session.

Status of women in the Secretariat

In a January report [E/CN.6/2001/5] to the Commission on the Status of Women, the Secretary-General provided a statistical update, as at 30 November 2000, of the gender distribution of staff at the Professional and higher levels in the UN Secretariat and in the organizations of the UN common system. He also outlined the 2001 work programme, highlighting his strategy for achieving gender equality in the Secretariat. Priority would be assigned to evaluating progress made in improving women's representation, based on the implementation of action plans for achieving gender balance in individual departments and offices, and to developing strategies for improving women's representation in peacekeeping and other special missions.

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/69 [YUN 2000, p. 1342], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/56/472] reviewing the status of women in the UN system. The number of appointments of Professional and higher-level staff for one year or more increased from 1,601 (36.5 per cent) in 2000 to 1,906 (34.6 per cent) in 2001; the higher figure was attributable to the significant increase in the number of appointments to peacekeeping missions. The largest increase was at the D-1 level, rising from 81 (29.3 per cent) in 2000 to 97 (30.1 per cent) in 2001. The highest concentration of women remained at the P-3 and P-4 levels, despite the decline from 40.2 per cent in 2000 to 36.9 per cent in 2001 at the P-3 level, and from 33.5 per cent to 31.4 per cent at the P-4 level during the same period. The percentage of women at the P-5 level also declined (from 32.6 per cent in June 2000 to 29.5 per cent in June 2001). Only at the P-2 level was the goal of 50/50 gender distribution met (48 per cent). While the percentage of women at the D-1 level had reached a critical mass, the overall increase in the percentage of women at the senior and policy-making levels (D-1 and above) had been negligible, from 24.7 per cent to 24.8 per cent.

The proportion of women appointed in the Professional and higher categories between 1 July 2000 and 30 June 2001 remained steady at 40.7 per cent, despite a considerable increase in the overall number of appointments to 378, compared to 279 in the previous year. The proportion of women promoted during the same period increased from 43.1 per cent to 47.1 per cent but still fell short of the goal of 50 per cent.

The Secretary-General, while acknowledging that the General Assembly's goal of gender balance in the appointment and promotion of Professional and higher-level staff had not yet been met, stated that there were signs of progress, as 14 departments and offices had met that goal in the preceding year. Heads of departments and offices had set targets for the selection of women candidates under the 2001-2002 Human Resources Action Plans, and their performance would be monitored and evaluated. The endorsement by the Assembly in resolution 55/258 (see p. 1337) of the Secretary-General's human resources management reform programme would require the introduction of a new recruitment, promotion and placement system. Priority would be given to developing strategies to expand the supply of women candidates for vacancies to be filled under the new system, particularly in terms of identifying sources of such candidates in Member States that were unrepresented or underrepresented in the Secretariat. The special measures for women would be reviewed to determine how they might be enhanced and made more effective under the new selection system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 88], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/56/576], adopted resolution 56/127 without vote [agenda item 112].

Multilingualism

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/64 [YUN 1999, p. 1335], the Secretary-General submitted a November report on efforts to promote multilingualism in the Secretariat [A/56/656]. The Secretary-General had appointed the Assistant Secretary-General of the UN Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services as Coordinator for Multilingualism. The Coordinator would propose strategies for addressing weaknesses in the pattern of language use in the Organization, as identified in Assembly resolution 50/11 [YUN 1995, p. 1416], and serve as the focal point for multilingualism in the Secretariat. Recognizing that efforts to promote multilingualism should be Secretariat-wide, the Coordinator involved all Secretariat departments and/or offices, conferring regularly with departmental focal points on how to reinforce multilingualism.

The Secretary-General said that the key issues identified during the consultations related to: the working languages of the Secretariat and efforts made to improve their use by staff, through vacancy announcements and recruitment, incentives and training; the use of official languages in documents and meetings and actions required to improve related activities; and public information, through the efforts of the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) to promote the work of the Organization. The Secretary-General concluded that effective actions to promote multilingualism would require policy guidance from the General Assembly, concerted efforts from Member States and the Secretariat, as well as adequate resources, particularly regarding public information activities.

Communications. On 11 April [A/56/93], the 20 Spanish-speaking Member States at the United Nations drew the attention of the Secretary-General to the growing tendency throughout the UN system to favour the use of only one language in the secretariats and governing bodies of its organizations, and expressed their concern over the failure to accord equal treatment to the Spanish language in the area of public information. They cited, in particular, the content of the Organization's website, noting that the gulf between public information available in Spanish and in English was widening. They urged that measures be taken to correct the imbalance, that the Organization's language policy be rigorously applied to public information, and that Spanish sections be established in DPI's information and news services, as well as in all departments publishing official information on the Internet.

In an 18 June reply [A/56/176], the Secretary-General assured those States of his commitment to a multilingual approach to information dissemination. However, he noted that the creation of public information and other materials in the six official languages, when resources had been provided for their production in only one or two languages, was problematic, requiring an infusion of substantial additional resources and/or a reduction in mandates. Initiatives to improve linguistic balance in the Organization's published output within existing resources included broadening the cadre of creators of web sites in official languages, notably in Spanish, through its training programmes. Also, UN information centres were active in creating web sites in local official and non-official languages, especially in Spanish-speaking countries, where a wide range of information material was produced in Spanish. Certain Member States had offered substantive assistance to the Organization in that regard through the Associate Expert Programme, and the Secretary-General invited other interested Member States to do likewise.

On 31 July [A/56/261], Qatar, on behalf of the League of Arab States, informed the Secretary-General that the Arab Group was deeply concerned by declining standards in Arabic language services, both in the conference services context and in UN information activities. The deterioration confirmed that there was, within the UN system, discrimination in the treatment accorded the Organization's official languages on the one hand, and the working languages on the other hand, particularly English. (For General Assembly action on multilingualism, see section III of resolution 56/64 B (p. 561)).

Proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of non-Secretariat officials and experts on mission

As requested in General Assembly resolution 55/221 [YUN 2000, p. 1344], the Secretary-General, in May [A/55/928], reported on consultations he had held with the Chairmen of ACABQ, ICSC, JIU and the International Law Commission, as well as the Executive Chairman of the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission (UNMOVIC), on proposed draft regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and of experts on mission. He also expected to receive comments from the group of special rapporteurs of the Commission on Human Rights on the application of the proposed draft regulations to human rights experts on mission. Based on the comments received, the Secretary-General proposed adjustments to the proposed draft regulations and explanatory commentary, set out in annexes I and II to the report, which he intended to recommend to the Assembly for consideration.

By decision 55/482 of 14 June, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its fifty-sixth session.

In an October report [A/56/437], the Secretary-General submitted the comments received from the eighth meeting of special rapporteurs, special representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission on Human Rights on the proposed draft regulations. He recommended the consolidated draft regulations, annexed to the report, to the Assembly for consideration.

Staff rules and regulations

In accordance with staff regulation 12.3 stipulating that the full text of provisional staff rules and amendments should be reported annually to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/56/227], outlined amendments to the 100, 200 and 300 series of Staff Rules, together with the rationale for the changes.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of the amendments in the annex to the report, which he proposed to implement as from 1 January 2002.

Note by Secretariat. As requested in section VIII of Assembly resolution 55/258 (see p. 1340), the Secretariat, in October [A/C.5/56/3], provided details on the Secretary-General's elimination of documentation on obsolete or redundant rules and procedures, as part of ongoing efforts at human resources management reform. Altogether, 460 documents, dating from 1 June 1997 to 31 August 2001, had been abolished or had lapsed or expired.

Safety and security

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/175 [YUN 2000, p. 1348], the Secretary-General issued an interim report in September [A/56/384 & Corr.1] on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and the protection of UN personnel, which provided information on threats against

UN personnel and measures taken to enhance staff security. The Secretary-General stated that continued incidents of violence against UN and humanitarian personnel had resulted in the death of three more UN civilian staff members, bringing the total number lost since 1992 to 201, and four cases of hostage-taking involving 10 UN system personnel, bringing that number to 255 since 1994. They, together with staff from non-governmental organizations (NGOs), also continued to be targets of rape and sexual assault, ambushes, armed robbery and other attacks, including carjackings, harassment and arrest and detention. The alarming increase in the danger to humanitarian personnel over the past decade was largely attributable to the proliferation and enlargement of irregular armed groups that often did not respect the neutrality and impartiality of such personnel and/or rejected the international agreements providing for them. The majority of perpetrators of attacks upon humanitarian workers had gone unpunished, while the few that had been apprehended received only light penalties.

The Secretary-General drew attention to the measures he was proposing to enhance staff security, including the appointment of a full-time UN Security Coordinator at the Assistant Secretary-General level to provide the leadership required for increasing the efficacy of UN security management. The Office of the Security Coordinator was being strengthened by the recruitment of additional staff to enable it to respond more effectively to new crises, develop and undertake more security training, initiate inspection and compliance missions, ensure better coordination and exercise greater authority in the security management system. UN agencies, programmes and funds had also shown greater commitment to security management and training, enabling staff serving at 29 high-risk duty stations to benefit from such training provided by the Office during 2001. The rigorous training had reinforced significantly the overall competence of the UN security management system as an inter-agency and integrated initiative. At the field level, the primary aim was to strengthen the security management system through improved coordination and collaboration on security between the United Nations and its partners.

Other measures taken to enhance security arrangements included increased stress management training, stress counselling, the development of minimum operating security and minimum telecommunications standards. UN/NGO security collaboration was also enhanced.

The Secretary-General recommended that greater efforts be made to prevent violence against humanitarian personnel and to bring perpetrators to justice. It should be made clear that violence towards humanitarian workers undermined the legitimacy of any group seeking political recognition or entitlements. In addition, UN and humanitarian personnel had to be provided with the tools and ability to minimize their exposure to risks. Member States should ensure, when establishing mandates, that proper and adequate means were placed at the disposal of UN system organizations to safely fulfil those mandates, and should insist on a universally accepted and respected system of security coordination, with appropriate funding for personnel, training and equipment. Inter-agency collaboration should be improved and strengthened through the harmonization of security management. Personnel, on their part, should ensure that they were well informed about the security conditions in their areas of assignment. The Secretary-General was therefore instructing senior officials to provide security training and awareness to every staff member. He would also pursue the implementation of preventive risk management. The Secretary-General called on Member States to contribute generously to the security proposals contained in UN consolidated appeals and to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System.

The Secretary-General, in a 15 October report [A/56/469 & Corr.1,2], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 55/238, section II [YUN 2000, p. 1300], outlined the evolution of the current security management system, presented comprehensive proposals for strengthening the Office of the Security Coordinator at Headquarters and for improving the safety of UN personnel in the field, and outlined the agreed modalities for cost-sharing of the total resource requirements for safety and security among UN agencies, funds and programmes. His proposals included maintaining the Office of the Security Coordinator as a separate organizational structure, the appointment of a full-time Security Coordinator at the Assistant Secretary-General level, and the establishment of 92 additional field security offices in the most critical locations to replace the existing organizational field structure. In that regard, the Secretary-General further proposed the recruitment of 98 Professional and 10 General Service staff, 184 local-level staff and 92 field security officers. Estimated resource requirements for the new security management system for the 2002-2003 biennium totalled $53,366,400, to be apportioned among the participating organizations on the basis of the cost-sharing formula outlined by the Secretary-General. The UN share of that cost amounted to $11,987,100, resulting in revised budget estimates of $10,421,200, an increase of $7,996,400 over the original estimates of $2,424,000 proposed for inter-organizational security measures under section 30, Special expenses, of the proposed 2002-2003 programme budget.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in November [A/56/619], recommended acceptance of the Secretary-General's staffing proposals. Noting that some of the posts established in Assembly resolution 55/238 [YUN 2000, p. 1300], effective 1 January 2001, had not been filled, ACABQ asked that the recruitment process be expedited. ACABQ stated that it did not see the need for a P-4 post in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) to serve as liaison with the Office of the Security Coordinator, and asked that further efforts be made to clarify the relationship and interaction between the two offices. Regarding the Office's proposed new organizational structure and the disposition of the field security offices, ACABQ said it expected that the arrangement would not compromise the role of the Security Coordinator in performing security functions on behalf of the United Nations and its specialized agencies, funds and programmes. ACABQ stressed the need to define expeditiously clear lines of responsibility and accountability in ensuring staff safety and security, and asked the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly in 2002 on progress made in that regard.

On the question of the cost-sharing arrangement, ACABQ stressed that participating entities should share fully in all costs and adhere to the shared financial responsibilities in the coordinated management of the safety and security of UN personnel. It requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the funds of participating organizations were transferred for that purpose as at 1 January of each year, and that the UN share was not exceeded without the Assembly's prior approval. He should also report on the implementation of the cost-sharing agreement to facilitate a better assessment of the security-related funds involved and the benefits of the proposed arrangement. (For General Assembly action on the Secretary-General's human resource and financing proposals for the UN security management system and ACABQ's recommendations thereon, see section VIII of resolution 56/255 (p. 1320).)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 91], the General Assembly adopted resolution 56/217 [draft: A/56/L.64 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 20].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and of Security Council resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 and the recommendations made therein, as well as the statements by the President of 30 November 1999, on the role of the Security Council in the prevention of armed conflicts, 13 January 2000, on humanitarian assistance to refugees in Africa, 9 February 2000, on protection of United Nations personnel, associated personnel and humanitarian personnel in conflict zones, and 9 March 2000, on humanitarian aspects of issues before the Security Council, and in this context also noting the range of views expressed during all open debates of the Security Council on these issues,

Taking note also of the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, as well as the report of the Special Committee on the report of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the report of the Panel,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Deeply concerned by the growing number of complex humanitarian emergencies in the past few years, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, which have dramatically increased the loss of human lives, in particular of civilians, the suffering of victims, flows of refugees and internally displaced persons, as well as material destruction, which disrupt the development efforts of the countries affected, in particular those of developing countries,

Concerned by the increasingly difficult context in which humanitarian assistance takes place in some areas, in particular the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international humanitarian law,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel at the field level, and mindful of the need to improve the current security management system in order to improve their safety and security,

Strongly deploring the rising toll of casualties among national and international humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Strongly condemning the acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault, intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of their property,

Strongly condemning also all incidents in many parts of the world in which humanitarian personnel have been deliberately targeted, and expressing profound regret at the deaths of all United Nations and other personnel involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Reaffirming that ensuring the safety and security of United Nations personnel constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, which must be based on a necessary cost-sharing arrangement with the relevant agencies, funds and programmes within the United Nations system,

Urging all other parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto, of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Expressing concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the ability of the Organization to provide assistance and protection to civilians in fulfilment of its mandate and Charter,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted on 17 July 1998, and noting the role that the Court could play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Noting that the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has been ratified by fifty-five Member States as at the present date,

5. Strongly condemns any act or failure to act, contrary to international law, which obstructs or prevents humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel from discharging their humanitarian functions, or which entails being subjected to threats, the use of force or physical attack, frequently resulting in injury or death, and affirms the need to hold accountable those who commit such acts and, for that purpose, the need to enact national legislation, as appropriate;

6. Urges all States to ensure that any threat or act of violence committed against humanitarian personnel on their territory is fully investigated and to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law and national law, to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are duly prosecuted;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation and to continue to consider ways and means in which to strengthen the protection of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, notably by seeking the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarter and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

29. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to it at its fifty-seventh session a comprehensive, updated report on the safety and security situation of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution, including the progress made by the Secretary-General in pursuing accountability and assessing responsibility for all individual security incidents that involve United Nations and associated personnel at all levels throughout the United Nations system, as well as an account of the measures taken by Governments and the United Nations to prevent and respond to such incidents.

In other action, the Assembly, in section VIII of resolution 56/255 of 24 December (see p. 1320), endorsed ACABQ's recommendations and requested that the apportionment of expenses be updated in 2003. It requested the Secretary-General to submit in 2002 a report on the establishment of a clear mechanism of accountability and responsibility. He should evaluate the UN security system and report his findings and recommendations to the Assembly at its fifty-eighth (2003) session.

In related action, the Assembly, by resolution 56/89 (see p. 1227), established an Ad Hoc Committee to consider the Secretary-General's recommendations on measures to strengthen and enhance the protective legal regime for UN and associated personnel.

Delegation of authority

The General Assembly, by decision 55/481 of 14 June, welcomed the 2000 JIU report [YUN 2000, p. 1350] on the delegation of authority for the management of human and financial resources in the UN Secretariat and endorsed its recommendations. It also took note of the comments of the Secretary-General thereon. The Assembly decided to consider the relevant ACABQ report during the main part of its fifty-sixth (2001) session.

ACABQ report. In its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/7], ACABQ expressed concern that the delegation of authority to programme managers and their accountability for the recruitment and placement of staff, performance management and career development were not among the areas in which the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) expected to progress in furthering reforms during the coming biennium. Pointing out that delegation of authority was not synonymous with abdication of responsibility, ACABQ emphasized that, for orderly and efficient functioning and for managers to be held accountable for actions under delegated authority, what was being delegated should be clearly spelled out in writing. Monitoring of its implementation needed to be streamlined to avoid excessive reporting and other costly bureaucratic processes. ACABQ requested that the issue be addressed immediately, and information on the proposed course of action be provided to the General Assembly at its fifty-sixth session. Noting the dual delegation to the same programme manager at different levels for regular budget and extrabudgetary posts, ACABQ recommended that the implementation of delegation of authority in personnel action be reviewed and steps taken to ensure that it did not contribute to undue delays in personnel action, especially at the main duty stations.

By decision 56/461 of 24 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General, in the implementation of JIU recommendations on the delegation of authority for the management of human and financial resources in the UN Secretariat, to take fully into account ACABQ's observations (above).

Young professionals

JIU report. The Secretary-General, in February [A/55/798], transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report comparing and analysing policies and practices on the recruitment and management of entry-level professionals in selected UN system organizations, with a view to recommending ways to retain dedicated and competent professionals.

JIU observed that, in most organizations of the system, up to half of the staff were scheduled to retire during the decade, which called for the revitalization of human resources and careful succession planning. The large numbers of scheduled retirements should be seen as an opportunity not only to reduce workforces and budgets, but also to recruit younger staff with expert knowledge in such emerging fields as information management and technology, governance, sustainable development and capacity-building. Factors hampering such recruitment included the growing tendency to hire a significant proportion of the workforce at the P-4 and higher levels, insufficient competitiveness of salaries at the lowest levels of the Professional scale, the steady increase in the entry-level age as people stayed in school longer and requisite qualifications became stricter, and a steady outflow of young professionals through resignation, as the UN system appeared to be losing part of its appeal as an employer. Of particular concern was the situation at the UN Secretariat, where, between July 1998 and June 1999, more staff resigned (298) than retired (176), including 113 in the Professional category, of whom a third were staff at the P-2 level. Other factors hampering the recruitment and career prospects of young professionals included delays in placing candidates successful at the National Competitive Recruitment Examination (NCRE) and the protracted bureaucratic processes involved in other recruitment systems; insufficient structures for staff integration, orientation and development; limited opportunities for lateral or upward mobility; failure of management to provide enough support and attention to staff concerns; and conditions of service, including salaries, benefits and family-related matters.

JIU recommended that efforts be made to reduce the entry-level age for recruitment to all Professional-level posts, particularly for P-1 to P-3 posts. In that context, the UN Secretariat might wish to review the age-limit imposed on NCRE candidates. The separation of Professional staff should be more carefully monitored through the annual publication of data on grade and type of separation and from exit questionnaires to better identify the causes. Recruitment processes in all organizations of the common system, including under NCRE, should be speeded up. Member States should cooperate more effectively in organizing and publicizing NCRE examinations and the Secretary-General could include in regular reports on human resources management examples of good practices in that regard. Other recommendations related to measures to facilitate the successful integration of young professionals and their career development, through assistance with practical problems and appropriate orientation courses, as well as through such incentives as mentoring programmes, study schemes and opportunities for upward or lateral mobility, and, in addition to job satisfaction, support on family-related issues, such as spouse employment.

Report of Secretary-General. In March [A/55/798/Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his comments and those of ACC on the JIU report on young professionals (above). Underlining that significant differences existed between organizations' mandates, structures and size of workforce, among other features, the Secretary-General noted that there was no single "best practice" in human resources management to which UN agencies could look as a universal model. Best practice was what worked best in the context and interest of each organization. Similarly, human resources requirements and strategies, which should be matched to the programme needs of an organization, had to be determined by each organization rather than subjected to any form of common prescription across the UN system, as recognized by ICSC in its framework for human resources management [YUN 2000, p. 1337]. Instead of organizations appointing mostly young persons who would rise through the ranks, as had been the practice, organizations were inclined to seek high-level specialists with global experience, owing to demands for immediate advice on such highly complex issues as nuclear safety, the spread of HIV/AIDS or industrial restructuring. Consequently, "entry level" for many specialized agencies might often refer to someone in midcareer, recruited for senior specialist responsibilities at the P-4 or P-5 level. At the same time, organizations had to compete with other global employers for a talented workforce. To recruit and retain good performers, reduce turnover and promote institutional loyalty, competitive employment conditions were of paramount importance.

There was overall agreement with most of JIU's recommendations (see above). However, on the question of recruitment, including through NCRE, it was clarified that each organization had to meet its own requirements and procedures, and opportunities for attracting and retaining a quality workforce should be managed within budgetary constraints and in the light of an organization's projected skill/competence requirements.

The General Assembly, by decision 55/480 of 14 June, deferred until its fifty-sixth (2001) session consideration of the JIU report on young professionals, as well as the Secretary-General's comments and those of ACC thereon (above).

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/7], considered the JIU report on young professionals (see p. 1352) as a valuable contribution to the debate on the best means of adopting a realistic personnel management and planning strategy for the rejuvenation of the Secretariat. It noted, however, that in the Secretary-General's comments no mention was made of the issue of rejuvenation among the outputs to be delivered by OHRM during the 2002-2003 biennium, which was surprising in view of the growing importance of information technology and of the obvious expertise of young professionals in that field.

By decision 56/462 of 24 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to submit in 2002 a progress report on the question of young professionals in the context of his report on human resources management, taking into account ACABQ's observations.

Mandatory age of separation

As requested in General Assembly resolution 55/258 (see p. 1337), the Secretary-General, in December [A/56/701], reported on his study of the implications of changing the mandatory age of separation for staff members appointed prior to 1 January 1990 from 60 years to 62 years, as was currently applicable to staff appointed on or after that date. He examined the potential number of staff members affected and the possible implications for the age profile of the Organization, geographical distribution, gender balance, career development opportunities, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) and related matters. He noted that, as at 30 June 2001, of the 11,244 staff members with appointments of one year or more serving under the 100 series, 5,944 would potentially be affected by a change in the mandatory age of separation (4,061, or two thirds, in the General Service and related categories and Field Service category; 1,883, or one third, in the Professional and higher categories). To examine the implications of a change in the mandatory age of separation, the Secretary-General studied four scenarios for projected separations during the period 2002-2006 when some 1,571 (26 per cent) of the 5,944 staff members appointed prior to 1 January 1990 would reach the current mandatory age of separation of 60. The most likely scenario projected that two thirds of them would separate at 60 as scheduled, with the remaining one third opting for 62 years, which would result in the separation of a total of 1,339 staff members between 2002 and 2006, as against 1,571 retirements under the current policy. Those numbers could be considerably lower because of separations due to early retirement, resignation, expiration of contract, disability and death in service.

The Secretary-General concluded that, in view of the numbers involved, fixing the mandatory age of separation at 62 years for those appointed prior to 1 January 1990 would have a minimal impact on such critical characteristics as the age profile of the Organization, geographical distribution, gender balance and career development opportunities. He projected some positive impact on the actuarial situation of UNJSPF (see p. 1357), especially if other common system organizations adopted the same policy, and on staff morale, considering that all staff members would be treated equally regardless of their date of entrance on duty.

Staff college

ACC action. ACC, at its first regular session of 2001 (Nairobi, Kenya, 2-3 April) [ACC/2001/4], considered arrangements for the institutionalization of the United Nations System Staff College, established by General Assembly resolution 55/207 [YUN 2000, p. 1354]. ACC endorsed the functioning of the College as a system-wide and demand-driven institution dedicated to innovation and reform across the UN system, endorsed the governance structure and funding arrangements for the College, and approved the convening of an inter-agency consultation to finalize a business plan and a draft statute.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 55/207 [YUN 2000, p. 1354], the Secretary-General, in June [A/55/989], presented the final draft of the statute of the United Nations System Staff College, which was annexed to his report.

A key feature of the draft were principles intended to establish true ownership of the Staff College by specialized agencies and other organizations of the UN system. The College would carry out its activities on the basis of the needs of the agencies. Its Board of Governors would be composed of ACC member organizations and would report to ACC. The draft statute also envisaged regular reporting to the Assembly on the activities of the College so that Member States could assess progress and provide overall policy guidance. The principle of system-wide ownership also guided the financing arrangements set out in the draft statute, under which the main part of the College's budget would be met on a cost-sharing basis by the organizations of the system, with further support obtained from fees for courses and voluntary contributions.

While Turin, Italy, would remain the base of the College, it would continue to carry out its activities in different UN system headquarters and field locations through distance learning, in order to reach out to the largest possible number of UN system staff. As part of the United Nations, the College would enjoy the status, privileges and immunities pertaining to the Organization, and the relevant parts of the draft statute would be reflected in the host country agreement to be entered into by the United Nations and the Italian authorities following the adoption of the statute by the Assembly.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly, in adopting the draft statute, reaffirm the objectives of the institution as set out in relevant Assembly resolutions, invite ACC to identify innovative ways of enhancing cooperation and coherence throughout the UN system and express the expectation that the College would contribute to the system's capacity to meet those objectives in a cost-effective way.

Amendments

Amendments to the present statute may be made by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Administrative Committee on Coordination.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

During the biennium ended 31 December 2001, the number of participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) increased from 68,935 to 80,082 (16.2 per cent); the number of periodic benefits in award increased from 46,199 to 49,416 (7 per cent). On 31 December, the breakdown of the periodic benefits in award was: 15,558 retirement benefits; 10,726 early retirement benefits; 6,509 deferred retirement benefits; 7,687 widows' and widowers' benefits; 8,049 children's benefits; 845 disability benefits; and 42 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the biennium, 8,630 lump-sum withdrawal and other settlements were paid.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, which did not meet in 2001 owing to the biennialization of the work of the Fifth Committee. Instead, the Board's Standing Committee met on its behalf (New York, 9-13 July) [A/56/289] and discussed, among other subjects, matters relating to the administration and operation of the Fund, revised budget estimates for the 2000-2001 biennium, budget estimates for the 2002-2003 biennium and the authorization for contributions to the Emergency Fund for 2002-2003.

ACABQ, commenting in October [A/56/7/Add.1] on the Standing Committee's report, concurred with its recommendation for revised appropriations for administrative expenses amounting to $59,202,200 for the 2000-2001 biennium and $74,322,400 for the 2002-2003 biennium. It also agreed with the Committee's proposal to supplement voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund by an amount not exceeding $200,000 for 2002-2003.

Those recommendations were approved by the General Assembly in resolution 56/255, section V, of 24 December (see p. 1319).

Pension Fund investments

The market value of UNJSPF assets as at 31 December 2001 was $21.8 billion, a decrease of $2.3 billion from the previous year. The total investment return for the year was -8.4 per cent, which, after adjusting for inflation, represented a "real" rate of return of -9.8 per cent. Investment income from interest and dividends amounted to $614 million. New funds that became available for investment (contributions plus investment income, less benefit payment and administrative expenses) totalled $1.9 billion. The Fund's investment income during the 2000-2001 biennium amounted to $2.2 billion, comprising $1.4 billion in interest and dividends and $810 million in net profit on sales of investments. Investment management costs amounted to $38 million.

The Fund remained one of the most diversified pension funds in the world, with 45.2 per cent of its assets exposed to currencies other than the United States dollar, which was the Fund's unit of account.

Travel-related matters

In October, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report on standards of accommodation for air travel [A/56/426], listing exceptions to those standards from 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001.

During the period under review, the Secretary-General authorized 37 cases of first-class and 30 of business-class air travel, as exceptions to the standards of accommodation, compared with 78 in the previous reporting period. Included in the first-class group were the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly's fifty-fourth session and the Secretary-General's personal aide/security officer. The Secretary-General noted that, while continuous administrative oversight had kept exceptions at a minimum, they were unavoidable in certain cases.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in November [A/56/630], welcomed the reduction in the overall number of exceptions to the standards of accommodation for air travel and their related costs. Regarding exceptions on medical grounds, it recommended that they should continue to be made on the merits of each case. ACABQ reiterated the need for clear criteria to determine the level of "eminency" of travellers and that such criteria should be applied to individuals rather than groups.

Administration of justice

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-fifth (2001) session, considered certain aspects of the administration of justice in the Secretariat, on which it took a number of decisions, in section XI of resolution 55/258 of 14 June (see p. 1340), including the establishment of an ombudsman function, the role of the Joint Appeals Board, and the difference between the statutes of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and the ILO Administrative Tribunal. It also decided to include the item "Administration of justice" in the provisional agenda of its fifty-sixth session.

The General Assembly, on 24 December, decided that the agenda item entitled "Administration of justice at the United Nations" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464), and that the Fifth Committee would consider the item at that session (decision 56/458).

Communication. Guinea-Bissau, in a 22 January note verbale [A/55/751], referred to its previous communication [YUN 2000, p. 1360] concerning the treatment of its national on the Secretariat staff and to the response from the Under-Secretary-General for Management, stating that the staff member had been treated fairly and in full conformity with the applicable rules and policies of the Organization. If that were the case, in the interest of justice, the Department of Management should express support for the detailed investigation being sought. The investigation requested concerned the manner in which the case had been handled by the Departments of Public Information and Management and by the Joint Appeals Board. Guinea-Bissau requested an immediate public trial of the case or, if that was not possible, the staff member in question should be placed on special leave with pay until the matter was resolved.

UN Administrative Tribunal

In its annual note to the General Assembly [A/INF/56/5], the United Nations Administrative Tribunal reported in December, through the Secretary-General, that it had delivered 51 judgments during 2001, relating to cases brought by staff against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other UN bodies to resolve disputes involving terms of appointment and related issues and regulations. The Tribunal met in plenary in New York on 22 October and held two panel sessions (Geneva, 25 June-27 July; New York, 22 October-30 November).

Chapter IV

Institutional and administrative matters

In 2001, the United Nations addressed a number of institutional and administrative matters to ensure its efficient functioning. The General Assembly commenced its fifty-sixth session on 12 September. Earlier in the year, the Assembly resumed its fifty-fifth session, convened its twenty-fifth (6-9 June) and twenty-sixth (25-27 June) special sessions and resumed its tenth emergency special session. The Assembly granted observer status to the International Development Law Institute, the International Hydrographic Organization and the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States. It also adopted a number of measures to improve its efficiency.

During the year, the Security Council held 192 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and a wide variety of other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security. The Assembly again examined the question of expanding the Council's membership.

The Economic and Social Council held its 2001 organizational session in New York in January and a resumed organizational session in March, May and June. It also held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions in May, its substantive session in Geneva in July and a resumed substantive session in New York in October and December. The Council agreed to change the name of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) to the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB).

The work of UN bodies concerned with administrative and coordination matters, including ACC, the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Joint Inspection Unit, was also reviewed. ACC continued to give high priority to security issues, adopting a new cost-sharing formula for security-related matters at Headquarters and in the field.

The Committee on Conferences examined requests for changes to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2001, and again recommended measures to improve the use of conference-servicing resources. The Committee welcomed the establishment of permanent interpretation services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and was pleased that its conference-servicing facility was becoming organizationally, functionally and budgetarily an integral part of the UN

Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services. The Committee commended the re-engineering of the Official Document System that was made available to UN staff and the permanent missions to the United Nations, but expressed serious concern about the growing disparities on the UN web site between English and the other official languages of the Organization.

Other issues addressed included the promotion of information technology, the further development and streamlining of common services, especially at the United Nations Office at Geneva, the use of private management consulting firms, measures to enhance the profitability of UN commercial activities and questions relating to the construction, management and maintenance of UN buildings and facilities.

General Assembly

The General Assembly met throughout 2001; it resumed and concluded its fifty-fifth session and held the major part of its fifty-sixth session. The fifty-fifth session was resumed in plenary meetings on 26 January, 14, 22 and 26 February, 9, 14, 16 and 21 March, 12 and 24 April, 18 and 31 May, 12, 14, 22 and 29 June, 12, 13 and 25 July, 1 August and 7 and 10 September. The fifty-sixth session opened on 12 September and continued until its suspension on 24 December.

The Assembly also held its twenty-fifth special session on "Implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II)" from 6 to 9 June (see p. 973) and the twenty-sixth special session on the problem of HIV/AIDS in all its aspects from 25 to 27 June (see p. 1125). It resumed the tenth emergency special session on 20 December to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory" (see p. 414).

The Assembly, by decision 56/401 of 12 September, postponed its special session on children, scheduled to be held from 19 to 21 September, until a date to be decided by the Assembly at its fifty-sixth session (see p. 1093).

Organization of Assembly sessions

Fifty-sixth session

On 12 September, by decision 56/400, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/56/250], adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of its fifty-sixth session. By the same decision, the Assembly postponed the two-day high-level dialogue on strengthening international economic cooperation for development through partnership from 17 and 18 September to 20 and 21 September.

The Assembly authorized the following bodies to meet during its fifty-sixth session: the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), and the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (decision 56/403 A of 13 September); and the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Commission for Social Development (decision 56/403 B of 19 September).

Credentials

The Credentials Committee, at its first meeting on 18 December [A/56/724], had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General indicating that, as at 14 December, 119 Member States had submitted the formal credentials of their representatives. Information concerning the representatives of 70 Member States had been communicated also.

The Assistant Secretary-General for Legal Affairs reported that the Secretary-General had received an informal communication from the Interim Authority of Afghanistan indicating that the formal credentials of its representatives would be submitted after it took office on 22 December.

The Committee adopted a resolution accepting the credentials received and recommended a draft resolution to the Assembly for adoption. On 24 December, the Assembly, by resolution 56/221, approved the report of the Credentials Committee.

Agenda

During its resumed fifty-fifth session, the General Assembly took a number of actions relating to its agenda, which were listed in decision 55/402 B: it decided to consider, in plenary, an additional item on the election of judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda; to reopen the item "High-level international inter-governmental consideration of financing for development" in plenary, so as to consider the recommendation of the Preparatory Committee for the High-level International Intergovernmental Event on Financing for Development [A/55/L.77]; to consider in plenary a sub-item on the implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), so as to consider the recommendation of the Commission on Human Settlements acting as the preparatory committee for the special session of the General Assembly for an overall review and appraisal of the implementation of the outcome of Habitat II [A/55/L.78]; to reopen the item "Report of the Economic and Social Council" so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.80]; to consider in plenary an additional item entitled "2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Africa"; to reopen the item on the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.81 & Add.1]; to consider, in plenary, the sub-item on the high-level dialogue on strengthening international economic cooperation for development through partnership, so as to consider a letter from the Chairman of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/55/955]; to include the item on the appointment of the Secretary-General for consideration in plenary; to consider, in plenary, the item on training and research, so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.89]; to consider, in plenary, the item on the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.88 & Add.1]; to reopen the item on support by the UN system of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies, so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.90 & Add.1]; to include an additional item on observer status for Partners in Population and Development in the Assembly; and to reopen the item on the culture of peace, so as to consider a draft resolution [A/55/L.95 & Add.1].

On 12 April, the Assembly deferred until the second part of its resumed fifty-fifth session the items on human resources management (decision 55/474) and the Secretary-General's report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) (decision 55/476). It also deferred to its fifty-sixth session consideration of the Secretary-General's reports on strengthening the international civil service (decision 55/475), and decided to revert to the question of measures to improve the profitability of the commercial activities of the United Nations at that session (decision 55/466).

On 14 June, the Assembly deferred until the main part of its fifty-sixth session consideration of the proposal for the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Intergovernmental Working Group on the Implementation of the Principle of Capacity to Pay (decision 55/473 B); the document entitled "Progress in the implementation of the field assets control system: a module of the field mission logistics system", the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) report on "Young professionals in selected organizations of the United Nations system: recruitment, management and retention" and the comments of the Secretary-General and of the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon, and the Secretary-General's report on the participation of United Nations Volunteers in peacekeeping operations (decision 55/480); and the Secretary-General's report on the proposed regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of officials other than Secretariat officials and experts on mission and regulations governing the status, basic rights and duties of the Secretary-General (decision 55/482).

On 7 September, the Assembly decided to include in the draft agenda of its fifty-sixth session the following items: the situation of democracy and human rights in Haiti (decision 55/489), restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields (decision 55/490), question of Cyprus (decision 55/491), comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects (decision 55/492), improving the financial situation of the United Nations (decision 55/493), financing of the United Nations Mission in East Timor (decision 55/494), financing and liquidation of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (decision 55/495), financing of the United Nations Operation in Somalia II (decision 55/496), financing of the United Nations Operation in Mozambique (decision 55/497), financing of the United Nations Mission in Haiti (decision 55/498), financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Liberia (decision 55/499), financing of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (decision 55/500), financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration for Eastern Slavonia, Baranja and Western Sirmium and the Civilian Police Support Group (decision 55/501) and armed aggression against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (decision 55/502).

On 10 September, the Assembly decided that the item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters should be considered during the fifty-sixth session (decision 55/503).

On 19 September, by decision 56/402, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/56/250], adopted the agenda [A/56/251 & Add.1] and the allocation of agenda items [A/56/252 & Add.1-3] for the fifty-sixth session.

On 30 October, by the same decision, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/56/250/Add.1], included in the agenda of the fifty-sixth session an additional item entitled "United Nations Year for Cultural Heritage, 2002" and decided to consider it in plenary.

On 9 November, by the same decision, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/56/250/Add.2], allocated the item on the administration of justice at the United Nations to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, on the understanding that any decision requiring amendment to the statute of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal or relating to the establishment of a higher-level jurisdiction would be subject to the advice of the Sixth (Legal) Committee; and decided to consider the report of the Economic and Social Council in plenary, on the understanding that the Second, Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) and Fifth Committees would remain seized of the chapters of the report already referred to them.

On 16 November, by the same decision, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/56/250/Add.3], decided to allocate to the Sixth Committee the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union".

On 19 September and 26 November, respectively, the Assembly decided to defer consideration of and include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh (2002) session the question of the Malagasy islands of Glorieuses, Juan de Nova, Europa and Bassas da India (decision 56/402) and the item "Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)" (decision 56/410).

On 21 December, it took the same action in respect of the following items: "Declaration of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity on the aerial and naval attack against the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya by the present United States Administration in April 1986" (decision 56/449); armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security (decision 56/450); consequences of the Iraqi occupation of and aggression against Kuwait (decision 56/451); implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations (decision 56/452); launching of global negotiations on international economic cooperation for development (decision 56/453); and the question of the Comorian island of Mayotte (decision 56/454).

On 29 November, the Assembly decided, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, to include the following items in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh session: towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: the need for a new agenda (decision 56/411); establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia (decision 56/412); United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament (decision 56/413); Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction (decision 56/414); Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (decision 56/415); and review of the implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security (decision 56/417).

On 21 December, the Assembly took the same action in respect of the sub-item on cooperation between the United Nations and the Southern African Development Community (decision 56/443), and the item on the elimination of unilateral extraterritorial coercive economic measures as a means of political and economic compulsion, and decided to consider it at odd-numbered sessions, thereby correcting paragraph 11 of the annex to resolution 55/285 (see p. 1287) (decision 56/455).

On 24 December, the Assembly decided to retain 81 items for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Second, Third and Fifth Committees

The General Assembly, by decision 56/433 of 19 December, approved the organization of work of the Third Committee and its 2002-2003 biennial programme of work. By decision 56/432 of the same date, the Assembly decided that the Committee should meet during the Assembly's resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session to consider the item on the elimination of racism and racial discrimination, following the issuance of the report of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (see p. 615).

The Assembly, by decision 56/448 of 21 December, approved the biennial programme of work of the Second Committee for 2002-2003. By decision 56/457 of 24 December, it approved the biennial programme of work of the Fifth Committee for 2002-2003.

Resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly

On 7 September, by decision 55/488, the General Assembly adopted the following text: "The General Assembly, while reaffirming paragraph 28 of annex VI to the rules of procedure of the Assembly, reiterates that the terms 'takes note of' and 'notes' are neutral terms that constitute neither approval nor disapproval."

By decision 56/452 of 21 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item "Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations" and included it in the provisional agenda of its fifty-seventh (2002) session.

Revitalization of the General Assembly

The General Assembly, in resolution 55/285 of 7 September (see p. 1287), adopted a number of measures to improve its efficiency relating to its agenda, consideration of reports, organization of work, the General Committee, the role of the Assembly President and enhancing the use of modern technology.

Security Council

The Security Council held 192 formal meetings in 2001, adopted 52 resolutions and issued 39 presidential statements. It considered 52 agenda items (see APPENDIX IV). In a September note [A/56/366], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations and with the consent of the Council, notified the General Assembly of 48 matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security that the Council had discussed since his previous annual notification [YUN 2000, p. 1371]. The Secretary-General also listed 63 matters that the Council had not discussed since then. On 15 October, the Assembly, by decision 56/405, took note of the Secretary-General's note.

By decision 56/406 of 16 October, the Assembly took note of the Council's report for the period 16 June 2000 to 15 June 2001 [A/56/2].

By decision 56/464 of 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the report of the Council would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session.

Documentation

Working methods and procedures

The Security Council President, in a June note [S/2001/640], indicated that Council members had agreed to continue and strengthen the current practice for disseminating Council resolutions and presidential statements. They had also agreed to disseminate press statements made by the President on behalf of its members as follows: the President should, as requested, draw the attention of the representative(s) of the Member State(s) as well as regional organizations and arrangements concerned to relevant statements made by the President on the Council's behalf or to Council decisions; the Secretariat should continue to inform those concerned, including non-State actors, of Council resolutions, presidential statements and press statements by the President to ensure their promptest communication and widest possible dissemination; and it should also issue, as UN press releases, all press statements made by the President on the Council's behalf, once cleared by the President.

The Council, by presidential statement S/PRST/2001/3 of 31 January (see p. 79), established a Working Group of the whole on UN peacekeeping operations to address generic peacekeeping issues relevant to the Council's responsibilities.

Membership

The General Assembly continued to examine the question of expanding the Security Council's membership. It considered the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council [A/55/47] (see p. 1289), established by Assembly resolution 48/26 [YUN 1993, p. 212].

In February [A/55/791], Brazil proposed that the Group's working methods be reviewed to ensure that it was not paralysed into inaction by the lack of absolute unanimity on issues of such complexity. It should serve as a catalyst in helping to identify those elements of a reform package that met the broad expectations of the international community for effective and expeditious action in a matter that was central to international peace and security.

The Assembly, by decision 55/503 of 10 September, took note of the Working Group's report and decided that it should continue its work and report before the end of the Assembly's fifty-sixth session. On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Council and related matters would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464).

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council held its organizational session for 2001 on 29 and 31 January, a resumed organizational session on 8, 13 and 22

March, 3 May and 4 June, and a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) on 1 May, all in New York. The Council held its substantive session from 2 to 26 July in Geneva, and a resumed substantive session on 10 and 24 October and 26 December in New York.

On 29 January, the Council elected five members of its Bureau for 2001—the President and four Vice-Presidents (see APPENDIX III). The Council also adopted the agenda of its organizational session [E/2001/2 & Add.1].

On 31 January, the Council adopted the provisional agenda of its substantive session [E/2001/1] (decision 2001/202) and decided on the working arrangements for that session (decision 2001/204). On 2 July, the Council adopted the agenda of its 2001 substantive session [E/2001/100 & E/2001/51 & Add.1], and approved the organization of work of that session [E/2001/L.10 & Corr.1] and requests by non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to be heard [E/2001/81] (decision 2001/223).

Sessions and segments

During 2001, the Economic and Social Council adopted 48 resolutions and 129 decisions. By decision 2001/204 of 31 January, the Council decided that the coordination segment of its substantive session should be held from 2 to 4 July; the operational activities segment from 5 to 10 July; the humanitarian affairs segment from 11 to 13 July; the high-level segment from 16 to 18 July; and the general segment from 19 to 25 July. By decision 2001/207 of the same date, the Council decided that the high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions should be held on 1 May.

The work of the Council in 2001 was summarized in its report to the General Assembly [A/56/3/Rev.1]. On 19 (decision 56/434) and 24 (decision 56/463) December, the Assembly took note of various chapters of the report and, by decision 56/464 of 24 December, decided that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session.

2001 and 2002 sessions

On 31 January, the Council decided that the theme of the operational activities segment of its 2001 substantive session should be "Triennial policy review of operational activities for development" (decision 2001/205); and for the humanitarian affairs segment the theme would be "Strengthening the coordination of the emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations". The Council also decided to hold panel discussions during the segment, details on the organization of which would be worked out at the intersessional informal consultations, on the understanding that various challenges, including gender perspective, would be considered in the panel discussions (decision 2001/206). The Council adopted the working arrangements for that segment on 2 July (decision 2001/225).

The Council decided on 3 May that the theme for the agenda item on regional cooperation would be "Regional perspective on globalization: an opportunity for catching up or a risk of falling behind in the development process" (decision 2001/211).

On 26 July, the Council, by decision 2001/299, decided that the theme for the high-level segment of the 2002 substantive session would be "The contribution of human resources development, including in the areas of health and education, to the process of development", and that the theme for the coordination segment would be "Strengthening further the Economic and Social Council, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations as contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration".

On 24 July, the Council, by decision 2001/234, approved the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2002 and 2003 in the economic, social and related fields [E/2001/L.9 & Add.1].

On 20 December, the Council, by decision 2001/322, decided that its organizational session for 2002, which had been scheduled from 29 January to 1 February 2002, would instead be held from 12 to 15 February.

Work programme

On 31 January, the Economic and Social Council considered its basic programme of work for 2001 and 2002 [E/2001/1]. By decision 2001/203, the Council took note of the list of questions for inclusion in the programme of work for the 2002 substantive session.

Restructuring issues

The Economic and Social Council, on 3 May (decision 2001/212), decided to continue consideration of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249] and 52/12 B [YUN 1997, p. 1392] on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields (see p. 1289). It had before it the Secretary-General's report on the subject [A/56/77-E/2001/69], the Secretary-General's note on the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions [E/2001/72], the Secretary-General's report on the work of the functional commissions of the Council in 2001 [E/2001/95] and the Secretary-General's note on the subsidiary bodies of the Council and the Assembly in the economic, social and related fields [E/2001/INF/3].

On 26 July, the Council adopted resolution 2001/27 on improving the working methods of its functional commissions (see p. 1290); decision 2001/304 on confidentiality of the 1503 (confidential communications) procedure (see p. 579); and decision 2001/305, in which it noted the Secretary-General's note on the special high-level meeting of the Council with the Bretton Woods institutions.

Office of the President

On 24 October, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/319, submitted a draft decision entitled "Office of the President of the Economic and Social Council" for adoption by the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/56/571], adopted decision 56/456 without vote [agenda item 12].

Office of the President of the Economic and Social Council

At its 92nd plenary meeting, on 24 December 2001, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, recognizing the important functions entrusted to the Economic and Social Council in the Charter of the United Nations and reaffirming the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which the General Assembly called, inter alia, for the further strengthening of the Council, building on its recent achievements, to help in fulfilling the role ascribed to it in the Charter, decided that the Office of the President of the Economic and Social Council should be provided with the means to carry out its important functions, taking into account the different arrangements made for the principal organs of the United Nations listed in Article 7, paragraph 1, of the Charter.

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

Change of name

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/321 of 24 October, agreed to the proposal to rename the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), without any change in its mandate, and requested

ACC to submit a comprehensive report on the reform of its machinery to the Council's next session, bearing in mind the relevant reports of the Committee for Programme and Coordination.

ACC (CEB) activities

During 2001, ACC focused its attention on orchestrating closer inter-agency cooperation towards the attainment of the millennium development goals [YUN 2000, p. 49]. In its annual overview report for 2001 [E/2002/55], ACC stated that to ensure a systematic and effective follow-up to the United Nations Millennium Declaration and, in particular, a concerted system-wide response to the achievement of the millennium development goals, it had addressed the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit (see p. 1278) through a two-pronged strategy: resource mobilization to attain the millennium development goals at the national and international levels, and its review and monitoring process. To enhance the coordination effort in the implementation of the Declaration, the High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP), along with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, undertook the preparation of an inventory of ongoing actions and initiatives intended to provide quantitative and qualitative data on UN system activities and to serve as a management tool for helping to locate gaps, overlaps and areas for inter-agency cooperation.

ACC also devoted attention to strengthening system-wide support for the sustainable development of Africa, particularly through the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 899). In line with NEPAD's priorities, ACC identified areas where urgent action was required. It agreed that the Economic Commission for Africa should continue to act as the system's key interlocutor with African countries at the regional level on NEPAD, and UNDP at the national level, and that the UN system should pursue a deliberate strategy to engender support for NEPAD.

ACC continued to study globalization and its interrelated dimensions, noting the need to remedy the negative aspects in such areas as poverty, hunger, health, education, employment, the environment and the links between migration and problems posed by refugees and internally displaced persons.

ACC continued to give high priority to staff security and safety, endorsing a new cost-sharing formula for security-related costs both at Headquarters and in the field (see p. 1347). It considered arrangements for the institutionalization of the United Nations Staff College, endorsing HLCP's recommendations. ACC also considered assistance to countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions.

Concerning the continuing reform of its own functioning, ACC considered that the networking among agency specialists in different sectors had reached a sufficient level of maturity and that the two new High-level Committees on Programmes and on Management, established in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1373], had sufficiently consolidated their work to make it possible to replace the rest of the inter-agency machinery—a rigid hierarchical system of inter-agency committees and subcommittees—by a more flexible system of “networks” of specialists in different areas and by ad hoc inter-agency groups. The secretariats of the former subsidiary bodies were invited to consult on how best the ACC decisions could be implemented.

ACC held two regular sessions during the year (Nairobi, Kenya, 2-3 April; New York, 19-20 October). Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows:

High-level Committee on Management, second session (Geneva, 10-11 September); High-level Committee on Programmes, first (Vienna, 26-27 February) and second (Geneva, 25-26 September) sessions.

Bodies on specific subjects met as follows:

Subcommittee on Oceans and Coastal Areas, tenth session (Paris, 9-11 January); Subcommittee on Nutrition, twenty-eighth session (Nairobi, Kenya, 2-6 April); Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, thirty-fifth session (Vienna, 18-20 September); Inter-Agency Committee on Women and Gender Equality, sixth session (New York, 27 February-2 March); Inter-Agency Committee on Sustainable Development, seventeenth meeting (New York, 22-23 March); Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Security (Paris, 14-18 May); Joint United Nations Information Committee, twenty-seventh session (Geneva, 10-12 July).

Report for 2000

ACC's annual report for 2000 [E/2001/55] was considered on 25 June by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/56/16], which took note of the report. CPC recommended that ACC continue to coordinate the implementation of intergovernmental mandates and report on progress in its annual overview reports, which should place more emphasis on ACC's role in ensuring effective coordination among the organizations of the UN system. CPC noted the reform measures adopted by ACC during 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1373] and requested that it report on the practical outcomes of those measures in its next annual overview report.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/302 of 26 July, took note of ACC's report. It invited ACC to ensure that the reform of its subsidiary machinery strengthened inter-agency bodies and processes with specific mandates from intergovernmental bodies, particularly those related to the coordinated implementation of outcomes of UN conferences and summits, as well as those adopted by the Council and the General Assembly. ACC should keep the Council informed on its reform process. The Council deferred consideration of the ACC report to its resumed substantive session.

By decision 2001/321 of 24 October, the Council requested a comprehensive report on the reform of ACC's subsidiary machinery at its next (2002) session, bearing in mind the relevant CPC reports.

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination held an organizational meeting in New York on 2 May and its forty-first session from 11 June to 6 July [A/56/16].

The Committee reviewed the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations. It considered the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium, in-depth evaluations of sustainable development and the population programme undertaken by OIOS, and triennial reviews of the implementation of CPC recommendations on the drug control and crime prevention and criminal justice programmes, and suggested themes for future evaluation reports. On coordination questions, the Committee considered ACC's annual report for 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1373], implementation of the special initiative for the implementation of the United Nations New Agenda for the Development of Africa in the 1990s (see p. 849) and the draft system-wide medium-term plan for the advancement of women (2002-2005) (see p. 1073). It examined JIU's report on the use of consultants in the United Nations [A/55/59] and the Secretary-General's comments thereon [A/55/59/Add.1] and discussed the improvement of its working methods and procedures and its provisional agenda for the forty-second session.

By decision 2001/303 of 26 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of CPC's report on its forty-first session.

Joint Inspection Unit

The Joint Inspection Unit (JIU), in its thirty-second report to the General Assembly, covering the period 1 January to 31 December 2000 [A/56/34 & Corr.1], examined relations and cooperation with participating organizations and other oversight bodies and follow-up on its reports and recommendations. JIU continued to enhance its functioning and impact, undertaking reviews of the administration and management of the United Nations and that of its participating organizations.

The Unit noted that the goal of having its reports issued in advance of meetings of legislative organs of participating organizations to facilitate their thorough and effective consideration had been hindered by, among other reasons, the tardiness of some secretariats in providing the Unit with timely information and/or comments requested by it. JIU had enhanced interaction with Member States and legislative organs, especially on the question of the handling of its reports. It held informal meetings with Member States represented in Geneva on a number of issues, including its programme of work, and developed and coordinated interaction with other UN oversight bodies and those of participating organizations. Although the majority of executive heads of participating organizations submitted JIU reports to their legislative organs, there were not many instances of specific action being taken on the recommendations contained therein. To improve the situation, the Unit had been enhancing dialogue with a number of participating organizations, which had so far resulted in agreement with the World Health Organization secretariat on follow-up procedures.

(For General Assembly action on the JIU report, see resolution 56/245, p. 1286.)

Other coordination matters

Follow-up to international conferences

The Secretary-General submitted, in May [E/2001/73], his report on the implementation of agreed conclusions 2000/2 of the Economic and Social Council's coordination segment [YUN 2000, p. 1376] on the integrated and coordinated conference follow-up, in particular the views of the functional commissions. The report reviewed follow-up to those conclusions, addressing specifically the recommendations on options for ensuring an effective and comprehensive review, at the intergovernmental level, of major UN conferences and summits, and on the functional commissions' capacity to conduct their follow-up.

The Secretary-General said that follow-up to the implementation of agreed conclusions 2000/2 required the commitment of the Council, its functional commissions and UN system entities to adhere to the guidance provided. The Council's monitoring of the various elements of those conclusions should therefore be a regular part of its reporting under the related agenda item. While the Council's focus on integrated follow-up to conferences was part of its ongoing work, further concrete action was required, such as the Council's role in addressing cross-cutting themes common to major UN conferences and summits, promoting integrated and coordinated follow-up, progress towards quantified goals and targets agreed at conferences and those underlined in the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], including the urgency of charting a course for their achievement and regular monitoring, and the Council's ongoing work on basic indicators for the integrated and coordinated follow-up to conferences at all levels.

In terms of ensuring an effective and comprehensive review at the intergovernmental level of major UN conferences and summits, since the five-year reviews of the conferences of the 1990s had been completed, the challenge was to achieve a balance between continuing implementation and follow-up as part of regular work programmes and the periodic reviews through intergovernmental preparatory processes. Moreover, there was no clear preference for any of the options recommended by the Secretary-General in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1375] for conducting the conference reviews.

The Secretary-General recommended that regular assessments by the Council of the Millennium Declaration's goals and targets should include progress in implementing decisions of major UN conferences and summits of the 1990s and their quinquennial reviews, as well as progress in implementing the outcome of the International Conference on Financing for Development (see p. 886), to be held in 2002, in support of those goals. The Council and its functional commissions should specify their role in monitoring those goals and in advising the Assembly on obstacles, constraints and new challenges to progress.

As to the periodic conference reviews, the Council could examine the options proposed by the Secretary-General in 2000 and assume a greater role in the 10-year reviews with the focus on an integrated or multisectoral approach to assessing progress. The commissions should use the agenda item on new trends and emerging issues to elaborate input into the Council's high-level and/or coordination segment, especially when they related to conference follow-up. In the light of the proposed 10-year comprehensive reviews by some commissions, the Council could develop its own forward-looking multi-year programme of work for its coordination segment to reinforce the commissions' work. The Assembly should focus on overall policy issues and consider new and emerging issues and trends that might require in-depth attention.

Also before the Council were the Secretary-General's progress report on the implementation of the ministerial declaration of its 2000 high-level segment (see p. 763) and the report of the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board on the work of its first regular session of 2001 (see p. 793). Those reports were noted by the Council in decision 2001/301 of 26 July.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2001/21 [draft: E/2001/L.41] without vote [agenda item 6].

Integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the resolve, expressed by heads of State and Government in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to strengthen further the Economic and Social Council, building on its recent achievements, to help it fulfil the role ascribed to it in the Charter of the United Nations,

Inter-Parliamentary Union

The Secretary-General, in June [A/55/996], reviewed efforts to strengthen cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU). He said that IPU had consistently contributed to major governmental commitments of the preceding decade through its world conferences. However, its current classification as an NGO in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council no longer corresponded to its status as the world organization of parliaments and limited its ability to give full meaning to the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] and that of the Conference of Presiding

Officers of National Parliaments [ibid., p. 67]. In April, the IPU Council made suggestions for strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments, including identifying elements of a programme of work for IPU to promote parliamentary debate and action in specific areas of jointly identified priorities. The Secretary-General said that he agreed with the IPU suggestions, and, in view of the General Assembly's desire to establish a strengthened and formalized relationship with IPU, recommended that the Assembly grant IPU a standing invitation to participate in its sessions and work and in international conferences convened under UN auspices, decide on the circulation of IPU documents in the Assembly, and invite UN specialized agencies to adopt similar modalities for cooperation with IPU. Depending on the Assembly's decision, the Secretary-General would initiate a joint review of the 1996 Cooperation Agreement between the two organizations.

In October [A/56/449], responding to Assembly resolution 55/19 [YUN 2000, p. 1382], the Secretary-General described actions taken by the United Nations and IPU to secure parliamentary input to recent major UN events, as well as IPU action to support or complement the work of the United Nations in peace and security, economic and social development, international law and human rights, democracy, governance and gender issues. He was pleased with efforts currently under way to act on his suggestions concerning a new relationship between IPU and the Assembly (see above) and looked forward to the strengthening of the parliamentary dimension of UN work. (For more information on UN/IPU relations, see p. 1375.)

Observer status

International Development Law Institute

In June [A/56/141], Austria requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-sixth session of an item entitled "Observer status for the International Development Law Institute in the General Assembly". In an explanatory memorandum, Austria said that the Institute, founded in 1987, promoted and assisted in the use of legal resources in the development process. Its activities included legal development training, technical assistance, research, publications and the operation of a legal documentation centre. Its membership as at 31 March stood at 15 States. A closer link with the Institute would provide the United Nations with a further resource in its work in development and international law and allow the Institute closer interaction with all relevant UN system organs in the furtherance of the common aims of both organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/596], adopted resolution 56/90 without vote [agenda item 170].

Observer status for the International Development Law Institute in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the International Development Law Institute,

1. Decides to invite the International Development Law Institute to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

International Hydrographic Organization

In July [A/56/145], Monaco requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-sixth session of the item entitled "Observer status for the International Hydrographic Organization in the General Assembly". In an explanatory memorandum, Monaco indicated that the objective of the organization, established in 1967 and comprising 69 members, was to coordinate the activities of national hydrographic offices, achieve uniformity of nautical charts and documents, adopt reliable hydrographic survey methods and develop hydrography and oceanography techniques. It had been associated on a regular basis with the work of the States parties to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea [YUN 1982, p. 181] and the Assembly's review of ocean affairs. Observer status would enable it to increase cooperation and coordination with UN system programmes and institutions in marine science activities and develop training and capacity-building in those areas.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/597 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/91 without vote [agenda item 172].

Observer status for the International Hydrographic Organization in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the International Hydrographic Organization,

1. Decides to invite the International Hydrographic Organization to participate in its sessions and its work in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Community of Sahelo-Saharan States

In July [A/56/191], the Sudan requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-sixth session of the item "Observer status for the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States". The Community, an intergovernmental organization with 16 members (Burkina Faso, Central African Republic, Chad, Djibouti, Egypt, Eritrea, Gambia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mali, Morocco, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Somalia, Sudan, Tunisia), established in 1998, was concerned with the economic, cultural, political and social integration of its member States. It had concluded a partnership and cooperation agreement with the UN Economic Commission for Africa. Observer status in the Assembly would greatly enhance future cooperation and ensure more effective results, as well as strengthen the efforts of both organizations in economic development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 85], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/56/598 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 56/92 without vote [agenda item 173].

Observer status for the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Considering the importance of the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States, an intergovernmental organization that addresses the common interests of its members and takes account of the diverse links that unite their peoples, and given the determination of the organization to confront the factors that have caused economic backwardness and instability in its member States, its conviction that joint action in a framework of complementarity is the best way to integrate its countries and peoples, its commitment to the maintenance of international peace and security in the Sahelo-Saharan region and its determination to satisfy the wish for economic, cultural, political and social integration in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Charter of the Organization of African Unity, the Charter of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the Treaty Establishing the African Economic Community of 3 June 1991 (the Abuja Treaty) and the constitutive documents of the regional organizations to which its member States belong,

Considering also the need, frequently noted by the United Nations, to promote and support every effort towards the development of bilateral and multilateral cooperation on the basis of international law,

Noting that the treaty establishing the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States stresses regional cooperation as part of the process of achieving African unity on the basis of human rights and fundamental freedoms and the promotion of social justice and stability,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States,

1. Decides to invite the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance

The General Assembly, by decision 56/423 of 12 December, deferred further consideration of and a decision on the 2000 request [YUN 2000, p. 1383] for observer status for the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance in the General Assembly until its fifty-seventh (2002) session.

Partners in Population and Development

In April [A/55/241], the States members of Partners in Population and Development requested inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-fifth session of the item on observer status for that organization in the Assembly. The organization, established in 1994, comprised 16 members (Bangladesh, China, Colombia, Egypt, Gambia, India, Indonesia, Kenya, Mali, Mexico, Morocco, Pakistan, Thailand, Tunisia, Uganda, Zimbabwe). It promoted South-South cooperation in population and development, and had made much progress in the transfer of knowledge, expertise and skills in population and reproductive health. It wished to share its experience with other countries, and believed that its involvement with the United Nations would enable it to enrich the Organization's work in that area.

On 7 September, by decision 55/402 B, the Assembly included the item in the agenda of its fifty-sixth session. On 12 December, by decision 56/424, the Assembly deferred consideration of and a decision on the request until its fifty-seventh (2002) session.

Inter-Parliamentary Union

In a 7 November letter to the General Assembly President [A/56/614], India recalled the Secretary-General's reports on cooperation between the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and the United Nations and on a new relationship between the two organizations (see p. 1371). India, in its capacity as current President of IPU, was proposing that IPU be granted observer status on a par with other international bodies that had similar status in the Assembly. However, since the Assembly's procedural requirements would delay action on the request, it was asking that the agenda item on cooperation between the United Nations and IPU be referred immediately to the Sixth Committee and that the Committee's recommendation be sent to the Assembly's plenary session before 6 December. On 16 November [A/C.6/56/2], the Assembly President informed the Sixth Committee Chairman that the Assembly had agreed to allocate the item to the Sixth Committee solely to consider the question of granting observer status to IPU in the Assembly.

The Assembly, by decision 56/425 of 12 December, deferred to its fifty-seventh (2002) session consideration of and a decision on observer status for IPU.

Participation of organizations in UN work

Intergovernmental organizations

On 10 October, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2001/318, having considered the application of the International Association of Economic and Social Councils and Similar Institutions, decided that the organization might participate on a continuing basis, without the right to vote, in the deliberations of the Council on questions within the scope of its activities.

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations, at its resumed 2000 session (New York, 15-26 January 2001) [E/2000/8], considered 147 applications for consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, including those deferred from its 1998, 1999 and 2000 sessions, as well as seven requests for reclassification. It recommended 52 organizations for consultative status, two for reclassification and one to maintain its current status. Due to time constraints, the Committee deferred consideration of the quadrennial reports. It recommended two draft decisions for action by the Council.

The Committee also considered implementation of Council decision 1996/302 [YUN 1996, p. 1368] on NGOs on the Roster, reviewed its working methods as they related to implementation of Council resolution 1996/31 [ibid., p. 1360], including the process of accreditation of NGO representatives, and Council decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445] on arrangements for consultation with NGOs.

On 3 May (decision 2001/215), the Council noted the Committee's report on its resumed 2000 session. On the same date (decision 2001/214), the Council granted special consultative status to 44 NGOs; placed eight on the Roster; and reclassified two organizations from special to general consultative status. The Council noted that the Committee did not recommend granting consultative status to six organizations; had closed consideration of the applications of two; and had also closed three cases of complaints from Member States.

At its 2001 session (New York, 7-25 May) [E/2001/86], the Committee recommended 44 organizations for consultative status, deferred consideration of 101 applications, closed consideration of one, reviewed four requests for reclassification and deferred consideration of three. The Committee also considered 172 quadrennial reports and deferred consideration of another 56, pending responses from those organizations to Committee questions. It adopted four draft decisions for action by the Council.

The Committee resumed consideration of the items it had discussed at its 2000 resumed session (above). Concerning its working methods, the Committee continued consideration of its accreditation procedures and proposals on additional coordination mechanisms with the secretariat of the Commission on Human Rights. It also exchanged views on two complementary draft proposals by India and Germany on a new application questionnaire for consultative status to better meet the Committee's information criteria. The Committee agreed that the contents of the questionnaire should be better focused to bring more clarity to the Committee's review of new applications.

On the issue of strengthening the NGO Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the UN Secretariat, the Committee was informed about the Section's achievements in improving its methods of work; however, it expressed concern about the increased workload of the Section, as the increase in new applications for consultative status had outpaced its capacity to deal with them.

On the implementation of Council decision 1996/302 relating to NGOs on the Roster, the Committee was of the view that the procedure for applying for Roster consultative status should be reviewed and streamlined to correct the discrepancy between applications from NGOs on the Roster for the purpose of the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development and those from other organizations. Following consultation with the Office of Legal Affairs, the Committee expressed the view that NGOs on the Roster of the Commission should go through the same channels of application for consultative status with the Council as any other organization.

On 25 July, by decision 2001/294, the Council granted special consultative status to 38 NGOs and placed six on the Roster. The Council noted that the Committee had closed consideration of the application of one organization, the complaint submitted against one organization, and one request for reclassification.

On the same date, by decision 2001/295, the Council decided that requests by NGOs referred to in its decision 1993/220 [YUN 1993, p. 668] to expand their participation in other fields of the Council's work would be considered expeditiously by the Committee on NGOs.

Also on the same date (decision 2001/296), the Council authorized the Committee to hold a resumed session from 14 to 25 January 2002 to complete the work of its 2001 session. It took note of the Committee's report on its 2001 session [E/2001/86] and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its 2002 session (decision 2001/297).

Requests for hearing

On 15 May, the Committee on NGOs approved requests from NGOs in consultative status to address the Economic and Social Council in connection with items on its agenda. It approved the requests of the Organization for Industrial, Spiritual and Cultural Advancement International, the Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations in Consultative Relationship with the United Nations and the Centro de Ricerca e Documentazione Febbraio 74 to be heard by the Council at the high-level segment of its substantive session. In addition, the Committee approved the request of the Asia Crime Prevention Foundation to present a written statement to the general segment of the Council on the agenda item "Social and human rights questions: crime prevention and criminal justice".

Participation of NGOs not in consultative status

By decisions 55/460 A-C of 26 February, 18 May and 22 June, the General Assembly approved the list of civil society organizations not in consultative status with the Council and not members of the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome for accreditation to the Assembly's special session on HIV/AIDS (see p. 1125), including its preparatory process.

Conferences and meetings

The Committee on Conferences held organizational meetings on 19 April and 22 June and its substantive session from 27 to 29 August [A/56/32]. The Committee examined requests for additions and changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 2001 [A/AC.172/2001/2] and the draft revised calendar for 2002-2003. It considered the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities, requests for exceptions to General Assembly resolution 40/243 [YUN 1985, p. 1256] concerning the holding of meetings of subsidiary bodies, documentation- and publication-related matters, translation- and interpretation-related matters, information technology and the proposed programme budget for 2002-2003 for the UN Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services. (The deliberations and recommendations of the Committee on those matters are detailed in the sections below.)

The Committee approved requests from the International Civil Service Commission to convene its fifty-third session (11-29 June) in Montreal, Canada, rather than New York; the Intergovernmental Preparatory Committee for the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries to convene its second session for five days in February, in New York instead of Geneva; the Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Cooperation in Tax Matters to convene its tenth meeting in Geneva from 10 to 14 September rather than from 23 to 27 April in New York; the Commission for Social Development acting as the preparatory committee for the Second World Assembly on Ageing to convene a resumed session (30 April-1 May); the Commission on the Status of Women to convene a resumed session (9-11 May) to complete the work of its forty-fifth session; the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters to convene its thirty-seventh session (25-27 July) in Geneva rather than New York; the Meeting of Government Experts of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Representatives of Donor Countries and Financial and Development Institutions to convene its fifth session (30 July- 3 August) in New York rather than Geneva; the Commission on Human Rights acting as preparatory committee for the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance to convene a third session in Geneva (30 July-10 August) to continue drafting of the declaration and programme of action of the Conference; and the Committee on Information to convene a resumed session (5-7 September) to take a final decision on the mandate and allocation of the necessary resources for the establishment of a permanent international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations during the main part of the General Assembly's fifty-sixth session.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly adopt the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for 2002-2003 and authorize the Committee to make adjustments to the calendar as a result of Assembly action. The Committee noted that the Secretariat had taken into account the arrangements in resolutions 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368] and 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387] regarding Orthodox Good Friday observed on 3 May 2002 and 25 April 2003. It recommended that, when planning the calendar of conferences and meetings, every effort should be made to avoid simultaneous peak periods at the various duty stations and welcomed efforts at effective coordination in achieving that objective.

6. Reiterates its concern at the high rate of self-revision in the translation services, which exceeded the benchmark, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to accord high priority to the post of reviser and to reduce reliance on self-revision to the maximum extent, and to take these considerations into account when filling vacancies in the translation services;

7. Notes with deep concern that some official documents are not translated into all the official languages of the Organization;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that efforts continue to be made to improve the quality control of language services at all duty stations;

15. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that translation, in principle, reflects the specificity of each language;

16. Also reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in order to improve further the quality of translation of documents issued in the six official languages, to ensure continuous dialogue between translation staff and interpretation staff, among United Nations headquarters at New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi, and between translation divisions and Member States with regard to the standardization of the terminology used;

17. Further reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to hold informational meetings in order to brief Member States periodically on the terminology used;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to conduct consultations, with Member States concerned, on the improvement of translation services;

V

Information technology

1. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a progress report on the use of information technology in the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services, including voice recognition, remote translation, computer-assisted translation, the Electronic Documents Registration, Information and Tracking System, the new stock control system for documents and publications, digitization of meeting recording systems, electronic planning and servicing of meetings, and computerized terminology data banks, specifying in particular the impact of these technologies on the working methods and productivity of the personnel of the Department;

2. Notes with concern the content of paragraph 7 of the report of the Secretary-General, which stresses that progress in the development of the United Nations web site on the Internet in the six official languages has been slower than expected, and that the realization of a truly equal multilingual web site will remain elusive.

ANNEX

Guidelines on limiting meeting duration

1. Meetings normally should be held during regular meeting hours, namely, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., on working days;

2. The Secretariat should intensify coordination between its relevant units with a view to planning for the provision of conference services;

3. Intergovernmental bodies should undertake a review of their meeting patterns and, in coordination with the Department of General Assembly Affairs and

Conference Services of the Secretariat, adjust their meeting requests for subsequent sessions accordingly;

4. Requests for the extension of sessions beyond the originally scheduled dates, resumed sessions and other intersessional departures would continue to be submitted to the Committee on Conferences and handled in accordance with General Assembly resolution 43/222 B and with past practice as agreed by the Committee.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Pattern of conferences" would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-sixth (2002) session (decision 56/464) and that the Fifth Committee would continue consideration of the item at that session (decision 56/458).

Intergovernmental meetings

At the request of host Governments, the main documents of intergovernmental conferences held in 2001 were transmitted to the Secretary-General for circulation to the General Assembly, the Security Council or both, as follows:

Seventy-fourth ordinary session of the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and ninth ordinary session of the African Economic Community (Lusaka, Zambia, 5-8 July) and thirty-seventh ordinary session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU and fifth ordinary session of the African Economic Community (Lusaka, 9-11 July) [A/56/457]; Summit of Heads of State and Government of the G-8 (Genoa, Italy, 20-22 July) [A/56/222-S/2001/736]; thirty-second Pacific Islands Forum (Nauru, 16-18 August) [A/56/388]; ninth extraordinary session of Foreign Ministers of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) (Doha, Qatar, 10 October) [A/56/462-S/2001/962]; twenty-fifth annual meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Group of 77 (New York, 16 November) [A/56/647]; tenth extraordinary session of Foreign Ministers of OIC (Doha, 10 December) [A/56/703-S/2001/1192]; twenty-fifth session of the Authority of Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of West African States (Dakar, Senegal, 20-21 December) [A/56/849-S/2002/219]; twenty-second Summit of the Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council (Muscat, Oman, 30-31 December) [A/56/797-S/2002/125].

Use of conference services

The Committee on Conferences considered a July report of the Secretary-General on improved utilization of conference-servicing resources, including meeting statistics of UN organs for 2000 [A/AC.172/2001/3] and a conference room paper containing statistical information on and analysis of extended meetings and sessions, with proposals for limiting meeting duration.

The Committee noted that the 2000 utilization factor exceeded the benchmark of 80 per cent. In Vienna, it decreased by 5 percentage points, while it increased by 3 percentage points in Geneva and 16 percentage points in Nairobi. The Committee recommended that chairpersons institute time limits for the presentation of standard documents by the Secretariat. It expressed concern at the increased number of extended meetings and sessions, and suggested that the secretariats of the bodies concerned be informed, in advance, of the overtime costs involved. It endorsed the guidelines on limiting meetings and recommended them to the General Assembly for adoption.

The Committee requested the Chairman to consult with bodies that consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure of their allocated resources over the preceding three sessions with a view to making recommendations on achieving the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources. It noted the concerns of intergovernmental bodies on the methodology for calculating the utilization factor and looked forward to receiving a further analysis and review of the indices, including possible benchmark figures for the planning accuracy factor and the meeting ratio, among others, and a measurement of the degree to which unutilized services were reallocated.

Use of regional conference facilities

Bangkok and Addis Ababa

In August, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], the Committee on Conferences considered the Secretary-General's report on the utilization of the UN conference centres in Bangkok, Thailand, and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia [A/56/293].

The report indicated that, as a result of the measures introduced in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1393], the utilization of the conference centre in Bangkok had increased steadily. In 2000, a total of 499 events were organized, compared to 423 in 1999, and, for the first five months of 2001, the centre was the venue for 219 events. The constraints to the use of the centre remained, in particular the fixed meeting-style configuration of meeting rooms that did not satisfy the requirements of events not held by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP). To maximize the commercial use of the centre, one of the large conference rooms would therefore have to be converted into a multi-purpose room with a flexible seating arrangement at an estimated cost of $273,000. Attempts were continuing to cooperate with professional conference organizers in bringing business to the centre, and Member States, specialized agencies and related UN entities, regional and other organizations and the private sector were being encouraged to hold events there.

At the Addis Ababa conference centre, utilization of the facilities increased significantly, from 356 events in 1999 to 491 in 2000. The utilization rate increased from 29.92 per cent in 1999 to 41.26 per cent in 2000, attributable to marketing and advertising strategies, both locally and internationally, as well as an increase in events held by the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA). Additional measures were being taken to improve the centre's functioning, including the loan of staff from the Nairobi conference centre to Addis Ababa, recruitment of a Chief of the Conference Coordination Unit and the redeployment of additional staff. A favourable catering service contract was negotiated to provide quality catering at all events. Efforts also continued to encourage all UN and other bodies to use the centre.

The Committee on Conferences [A/56/32] encouraged ESCAP and ECA to continue their efforts to improve the utilization of their conference centres and to keep the Committee informed of developments. Conference services managers of the Secretariat and regional commissions were also encouraged to share their experience and expertise.

Nairobi

In July, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the improved utilization of conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON) [A/56/133 & Corr.1]. The report examined meeting activity, including statistical information, in Nairobi in 2000 and January-June 2001, and projections for the remainder of 2001.

The number of meetings with interpretation held in Nairobi in 2000 was 242, a slight decrease from the 254 in 1999. Non-calendar meetings increased to 72, surpassing the 65 planned for the biennium. From January to June 2001, 43 non-calendar meetings were held. During 2000, 560 meetings were held without interpretation, an increase of more than 200 over 1999; and 122 multilingual meetings with remote translation were held outside Nairobi. During 2000, 13 major meetings were serviced by UNON but held at locations outside Nairobi, and five meetings between January and June 2001.

The establishment of a permanent interpretation service in Nairobi in January had already had a positive effect on the work of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), and the committees of permanent representatives, which, since May, had had access to multilingual interpretation.

The Committee on Conferences [A/56/32] expressed satisfaction that the conference-servicing facility of Nairobi was becoming organizationally, functionally and budgetarily an integral part of the UN Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services (DGAACS). It noted the increase in the number of multilingual meetings held and the cost-saving effect of the establishment of the Nairobi interpretation service for the regular budget in terms of the reduced need for temporary assistance. The Committee recommended that the Assembly request UNEP and Habitat to comply with the headquarters rule and hold all their meetings at UNON to further increase conference facilities utilization.

Conference services for regional and other major groupings

In July, pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368] and 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], the Secretary-General reported on the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States from 1 July 2000 to 30 June 2001 [A/56/213 & Corr.1]. During that period, 100 per cent of requests for services by such States were met in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. Ninety-one per cent of requests for interpretation services were met in New York and 100 per cent in Geneva.

The Committee on Conferences [A/56/32] recommended that duty stations should continue to keep statistics of requests for servicing of meetings. It urged intergovernmental bodies, at the planning stage, to take into account meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States; to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work; and to notify DGAACS of cancellations, so that conference-servicing resources could be reassigned.

Coordination of conference services

The Committee on Conferences [A/56/32] considered an oral report on improved coordination of conference services. Concerning meetings held away from established headquarters, the Committee was told that the responsibility for conferences services coordination was assigned to the headquarters location of the substantive secretariat. Discussions had taken place on broad policy aspects, such as coordinating clearance procedures for the headquarters agreement, establishing teams of staff from all locations, financial arrangements and the inclusion of smaller duty stations. Trials of coordinated workload-sharing pointed to potential efficiency gains. As to the coordination of technology advances, to avoid duplication and make the most efficient use of limited resources, a working group was established to formulate specific projects of the ongoing programme and elements of an information technology strategy. A working group was also established to develop guidelines for the preparation of financial reports and to analyse procedures for their clearance. The DGAACS Executive Office at Headquarters would analyse the experience gained in the common examinations for written language functions so as to address further the lack of functional mobility of language staff, to move staff to meet peak workloads and to improve career prospects.

The Committee noted the oral report and encouraged further steps by the Secretariat to coordinate conference services globally. It concluded that the Inter-Agency Meeting on Language Arrangements, Documentation and Publications should promote cooperation between the United Nations and other international organizations on the use of conference services and make proposals for sharing translation, interpretation, editorial and printing services. It recommended that the General Assembly study the possibility of strengthening the Committee's oversight and supervisory functions to, among other objectives, increase the effectiveness of its work and strengthen its role as one of the Assembly's subsidiary bodies.

OIOS report. The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly in February [A/55/803] the report of the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the inspection of the consolidation of technical support services in DGAACS. Established in 1997 as part of the Secretary-General's programme of reform [YUN 1997, p. 1390], DGAACS integrated the major technical support services for the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary bodies. The inspection assessed how DGAACS's establishment and the consolidation of the technical support services contributed to the Secretary-General's overall reform objectives.

The inspection found that DGAACS had enhanced the efficiency of the services provided to Member States. Meetings scheduling and document processing were currently part of a coordinated process under the guidance of a single Department head, and the time-consuming interdepartmental consultations of previous years had been reduced. That had allowed for improved planning in the allocation of services and facilities, resulting in a more rational use of resources. However, continuous high-level collaboration between DGAACS and other departments was needed to further clarify technical and substantive functions.

OIOS recommended that the Under-Secretaries-General for General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services and for Disarmament Affairs should ensure that decisions taken to enhance the provision of technical and substantive services to the Assembly and its subsidiary committees were fully complied with and monitored, and any necessary corrective action taken.

The Under-Secretary-General of DGAACS should discuss with the senior management group the enforcing of compliance with document submission requirements and issue a directive on electronic submission standards, including the non-acceptance of documents in hard-copy form only. He should collaborate with Geneva and Vienna, as well as the Department of Management, in the budget preparation process to ensure that conference resources were optimally utilized. The Advisory Panel on Information Technology should prioritize DGAACS information technology needs and present a clear and coordinated strategy in 2001.

All section/unit chiefs should establish performance criteria and prepare operational guidelines to safeguard institutional memory and for efficient management. DGAACS should work towards ensuring client satisfaction, including the conduct of customer surveys. Lessons learned should be reviewed after each major conference and best practices exchanged among the technical secretariats on a regular basis.

The Under-Secretary-General should, with the Committee on Conferences, identify meeting demands in order to adjust servicing capacity and limit meeting duration. Mechanisms or guidelines for meetings or conferences should be established to ensure that extended meetings were an exception and not the rule, bearing in mind their budgetary implications, as well as the toll on the well-being of staff.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in its first report on the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget [A/56/7], commented on various issues raised in the OIOS report.

Documents control

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], the Secretary-General submitted an interim report on the availability of documentation for the proper functioning of intergovernmental bodies [A/56/299], which compiled information from those bodies on the availability of their pre-session documentation and the review process with author departments. A comprehensive picture of the situation would be obtained, upon the completion of the biennial cycle of meetings, when more responses from intergovernmental bodies were expected. However, at the current stage, distinctions could be made between the various organs and the degree to which their work was affected by the availability of pre-session documentation. It was clear that the level of coordination between intergovernmental bodies and the Secretariat and conference services could have a significant impact on the availability of documentation. Reducing the number of reports requested could also contribute to timely issuance of pre-session documentation.

The Committee on Conferences took note of the report and looked forward to obtaining a comprehensive review. It recommended that the Assembly ask the Secretary-General to provide a detailed report on the Secretariat's capacity for efficient and effective delivery of conference services and ways of enhancing the timely availability of documentation to Member States.

The Committee on Conferences also considered the Secretary-General's report on the submission of documentation consistent with the six-week rule [A/56/300], in response to Assembly resolutions 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387] and 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368]. The report described measures taken by the Secretariat to strengthen responsibility and accountability in that regard and proposed measures that could lead to the timely issuance of documentation. The Committee took note of those measures and recommended that the Assembly invite the Secretary-General to develop an effective accountability and responsibility system to ensure the timely submission of documents for processing. The Committee encouraged the Secretariat to continue making concerted efforts to remedy the situation of late issuance of documentation and to analyse more extensively the reasons for it and the resulting additional costs.

ACABQ report. In October [A/56/475], ACABQ said that, given the close relationship of the issues and in the interest of streamlining documentation, those two reports should have been consolidated into one. The availability of documentation for intergovernmental bodies could not be properly considered without also considering compliance with the six-week rule. It welcomed the replacement of the traditional paper-based management system for the coordination of the submission of documentation with a computerized database application and encouraged its further development.

Official Document System

The Committee on Conferences considered the Secretary-General's June report on the re-engineering of the optical disk system (ODS) [A/56/120], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387]. The system was renamed the Official Document System, retaining the old acronym. The report stated that the re-engineered ODS, replacing the old optical disk system, developed in 1991, with faster, more reliable and inexpensive magnetic media (disks), would be delivered in two phases: phase 1 (one-to-one migration) in which the old system would be migrated to the new system, and phase 2 (non-Roman language support function), which would facilitate search and retrieval in the six official languages. In February, developmental work of phase 1 was completed and the new software and converted database were installed and tested.

The Committee welcomed the efforts to update the ODS and the introduction of the new system. It encouraged the Secretary-General to continue those efforts and requested that a report on progress achieved, as well as on the impact of the re-engineering on ODS access at all duty stations, be submitted for consideration at the Assembly's fifty-sixth (2001) session.

In an October revised report [A/56/120/Rev.1], the Secretary-General said that phase 1 was concluded in September and the new system was running smoothly. It was web technology-based, and could be accessed from anywhere in the world using a standard web browser. It was available to all UN staff and permanent missions in New York and at all offices away from Headquarters, with the exception of ECA. Efforts were being made to establish a connectivity for ECA and for all peace-keeping missions. Implementation of phase 2 was expected to start in December and would provide for a full multilingual support function. Because of the high maintenance required for the new system, the restriction on the number of users by each Member State remained, but was raised from 10 to 20 in August. The Secretariat hoped to gradually remove that restriction.

ACABQ reports. In October [A/56/475], ACABQ welcomed the progress made and encouraged the Secretariat to continue to work towards unrestricted and free access to the system for all accredited NGOs. The availability of the system should be advertised as widely as possible. In its first report on the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget [A/56/7], ACABQ requested a review of the cost-effectiveness of the level of fees currently being charged for access by public users to the ODS.

Availability of electronic documents

In November [A/C.5/56/12], the Secretary-General reported on the simultaneous availability of parliamentary documentation in electronic form in the six official languages on the UN web site. He said that currently only limited parliamentary documents were made available on the UN web site. To ensure simultaneous availability of all parliamentary documents, it would be most practical to make the ODS free to the public and modify the UN web site to provide direct hyperlink access to documents on the ODS, instead of the current practice of copying them to the web site.

However, the degree to which the performance of the ODS would be impacted by the implementation of the full multilingual support function, expected to be fully operational in January 2002, was unknown. Therefore, after carefully monitoring the impact during 2002, the Secretariat would address the feasibility of free access to the ODS and submit proposals for revising the current ODS subscription policy guided by General Assembly resolution 51/211 F [YUN 1997, p. 1503], including its financial implications.

Cost-effectiveness of UN publications

In September, responding to General Assembly resolution 54/259 [YUN 2000, p. 1392], the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of recommendations contained in resolution 52/220 [YUN 1997, p. 1421] regarding the publication of the UN Chronicle in all official languages [A/56/339]. Since the adoption of that resolution, the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) had been exploring several options to resume publication of the UN Chronicle in Arabic, Chinese, Russian and Spanish, suspended in 1996 due to the Organization's financial crisis. DPI conducted a pilot project in each of the four languages to assess the costs and feasibility of resuming regular production of those language editions. The pilot project showed that the lengthy period of time required to carry out, through an external contractor, the entire publication process in those languages could result in the publication losing its value. Moreover, it reflected the necessity to base the production of those editions on a secure financial basis so as to ensure the greatest possible parity in quality and timeliness among all editions. Bearing in mind the difficulties experienced by DPI in producing the publication in the manner and frequency requested by the Assembly, $1.3 million was included in the proposed programme budget of the Department for the 2002-2003 biennium for producing the UN Chronicle four times a year in all six official languages.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in October [A/56/475], recommended that a critical assessment be undertaken by the relevant intergovernmental bodies of the utility of the UN Chronicle in general, including an analysis of its demand in the various languages, the merits of its distribution online and the method of its publication and printing.

UN web sites

The Committee on Conferences, having heard a presentation by a DPI representative on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of the UN web site and received a report of the Secretary-General on the subject [A/AC.198/2001/8] (see p. 557), expressed serious concern about the growing disparities on the web site between English and the other official languages. It requested the Secretariat to include Nairobi and Vienna, together with New York and Geneva, on the web site entitled "About the United Nations".

Interpretation and translation matters

Remote interpretation

In July [A/56/188], the Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolutions 54/248 [YUN 1999, p. 1368] and 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], reported on the second remote interpretation experiment conducted at UN Headquarters from 16 to 27 April during the ninth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, the first having been held in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1367]. The experiment tested the suitability of satellite links for remote interpretation purposes; designed and tested the best possible configuration of video technology; assessed the impact of remote interpretation on interpreters' working conditions; and gathered information on the costs of remote interpretation systems.

The Secretary-General concluded that bringing remote interpretation as close as possible to normal on-site conditions was only partially successful. Deficient synchronization between sound and image and the inability to obtain the visual information available on-site were two problems for which technological solutions had not yet been found. Satellite links proved reliable and could make service between Nairobi and New York financially viable, but it would be costly in Geneva and Vienna, which were not covered by the UN satellite communications system. As to the comparative cost-effectiveness of each servicing modality, comparing the likely costs of daily subsistence allowance for interpreters with the cost for integrated services digital network (ISDN) communications showed that the ratio between the two varied widely depending on the meeting location. In addition, the combination of available technical and human resources was not conducive to effective simultaneous interpretation.

There were also uncertainties and trade-offs between the volume of data transmitted via ISDN lines and the stability of the transmissions, and interpreters did not perform with the same efficiency when working remotely.

Future advances in videoconferencing and communications should be continually assessed to determine whether they could offer solutions to the outstanding technical problems of remote interpretation. Potential financial advantages of remote interpretation in certain cases, together with the additional flexibility in the use of interpretation services that it could offer, justified further work along those lines.

Committee consideration. The Committee on Conferences [A/56/32] noted the report and supported the Secretariat's intention to foster the accumulation of experience among interpreters working on-site at meetings with a videoconferencing component so as to facilitate their adaptation to the new working environment. It asked the Secretariat to assess future advances in videoconferencing and communications to determine whether they could solve the outstanding technical problems of remote interpretation. It noted that the Secretariat did not foresee conducting further experiments. The Committee also asked that a report on developments in those areas, as well as on activities in remote interpretation carried out by other international organizations, be submitted to the Assembly's fifty-seventh (2002) session through the Committee on Conferences.

ACABQ report. In October [A/56/475], ACABQ reiterated its encouragement of the continued exploration of the feasibility of large-scale remote interpretation. It urged the Secretariat to intensify its efforts to find solutions to the technical problems involved, as well as to issues pertaining to the working conditions of interpreters, and requested that a progress report be submitted to the Assembly's fifty-seventh session.

Recruitment in language services

In August [A/56/277], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 55/222 [YUN 2000, p. 1387], submitted a report on excessive vacancy rates in language services at some duty stations and issues relating to the recruitment of language staff.

A review of the vacancy rates at the four main UN conference-servicing centres (Headquarters, the UN Office at Geneva (UNOG), the UN Office at Nairobi (UNON) and the UN Office at Vienna (UNOV)), as well as at the regional commissions, showed, as at 30 June 2001, a decrease in the total number of vacancies for all language services, with the aggregate vacancy rate falling from 10.3 per cent to 9 per cent. However, decreasing but still fairly high aggregate vacancy rates at duty stations with large language services could only be explained by recruitment difficulties and the non-availability of suitable candidates. There were language-specific difficulties in matching the "yield" of recruitment exercises with high depletion rates resulting from early or normal retirement, and the system of mobility incentives proposed in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1367] for reducing excessive vacancy rates was limited, given the need to ensure uniform treatment of language and non-language staff.

In terms of recruitment, there was a downward trend in the yield of language examinations for some languages or language combinations. However, increasing the frequency of those examinations was too costly and likely to produce diminishing returns. In addition, the nature of the training received by language specialists in educational institutions seemed to be ill-suited to the special and stringent requirements of the United Nations and other international organizations. As for interpretation, the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly approve the reinstatement of the training programme to address recruitment difficulties for one year, subject to the submission of a report in 2002 on its results, the continuing need for the programme and related financial arrangements. In the case of translators, on-the-job training was an option that was often resorted to. The abolition of the common examinations for recruiting editors, translators and verbatim reporters from a common roster in favour of jointly held examinations for the three functions producing three different rosters would save costs, help alleviate recruitment difficulties in some editorial units and attract more candidates.

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Language Arrangements, Documentation and Publications (Geneva, 3-6 July) examined the option of dealing with the problem of recruitment at its root rather than through remedial action. It established a working group to promote cooperation between international organizations and major educational institutions engaged in the training of language specialists, to better inform them about language professions in international organizations and to launch pilot projects aimed at adjusting curricula or establishing special training paths.

The Committee on Conferences remained concerned about the persistence of excessive vacancy rates at most duty stations with small or medium-sized language services, and at the lack of success in filling vacant interpreter posts in some languages at UNON. It recommended that priority be given to filling such posts, as well as those at UNOV, from the 2001 competitive examinations for Arabic and English interpreters, and at UNON and UNOV from the January 2002 competitive examinations for French and Spanish interpreters. The Secretariat should continue to monitor the vacancy situation at duty stations with chronic vacancy problems.

The Committee also expressed concern about the low yield of some competitive language examinations and that successful candidates often refused offers of employment by the Organization. It recommended that the Secretariat advertise competitive language examinations more effectively by focusing on language schools, other educational institutions and professional associations, and that the in-house training programme for interpreters be reinstated. It welcomed the inter-agency initiative to address training issues at their source and asked the General Assembly to initiate a comprehensive review of the norms and standards of productivity in the language services in the light of ongoing technological innovations.

ACABQ report. In October [A/56/475], ACABQ, in its comments on the Secretary-General's report, noted that it had not been possible to implement the non-monetary mobility incentives for language staff that had been envisaged in Assembly resolution 53/208 A [YUN 1998, p. 1348].

ACABQ expressed concern at the downward trend in the yield of language examinations in the past few years. It recommended approval of the training initiative for interpreters for an initial period of one year, subject to the submission of information on its results to the Assembly in 2002. It welcomed the on-the-job training for translators.

In a related matter, ACABQ called attention to the need to ensure cost-effectiveness in arrangements for contractual translation, and requested that information be provided to the Fifth Committee on comparative costs of commercial translation, current arrangements for contractual translation at the United Nations and the experience of Member States in that field. It suggested that the question of assuring quality control should also be addressed.

UN information systems

Information technology

In response to General Assembly resolution 54/249 [YUN 1999, p. 1289], the Secretary-General submitted a February report on a plan of action for information technology in the Secretariat

[A/55/780]. The report, which also responded to his programme of reform of the United Nations in information and communication technology (ICT) [YUN 1997, p. 1389], reviewed the status of technology in the Secretariat, described the objectives that had been established and outlined a strategy to achieve them. It also presented a description of planned action in each area and those already undertaken, and expected results. According to the report, a survey undertaken by the Information Technology Services Division in 2000 revealed that, while all duty stations had or were in the process of setting up modern and reliable ICT infrastructure, it was adequate to meet current needs but major upgrades would be needed to meet the increasing demand. There was also duplication of systems in certain areas and no standard methodology had been followed throughout the Secretariat in the development of those systems. The Secretariat needed to build its ability to take advantage of new technologies and keep up to date with rapid developments in the field.

Based on that review and at the directive of the Secretary-General, specific objectives were established to ensure the integration of the ICT dimension into the strategic component of programme delivery. Those included access to and sharing of information, ICT field support, technical infrastructure, capacity-building and the achievement of electronic administration. To achieve those objectives, the Secretariat adopted a strategy of parallel and coordinated activities in five areas: sharing internally and externally the knowledge of the Secretariat; management of ICT activities in the Secretariat; methodologies for the development and integration of systems; ICT human resources policies; and technical administrative aspects. Implementation of the strategy would include a detailed inventory of ICT infrastructure, systems and organizational structures within the Secretariat; a high-level ICT governance structure, defined by the Steering Committee on Reform and Management Policy; and the establishment of an ICT coordination body at Headquarters and the creation of similar ancillary bodies at offices away from Headquarters.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/7], was in broad agreement with the approach to the management of ICT activities, but stressed that successful implementation of the proposals would require effective central leadership for policy, strategic guidance and standard setting, as well as the commitment of departmental heads to implement decisions at the operational level. It pointed out that the experience of past technological boards and committees had not been very encouraging, and trusted that the Steering Committee on Reform and Management Policy and the Information and Communication Technology Board would develop into effective policy-setting instruments that could establish and monitor clear, unambiguous guidelines.

Since the 2002-2003 budget was prepared before the ICT strategy was defined, ACABQ noted the lack of information on long-term requirements to implement the strategy and requested that a comprehensive progress report that encompassed peacekeeping information systems be prepared for the Assembly's fifty-seventh (2002) session, in conjunction with the proposed programme budget. Recognizing that more attention needed to be devoted to system-wide coherence and coordination, the Committee requested that the possibility of linking the various stand-alone systems be reviewed and the results included in the comprehensive progress report. Efforts should also be enhanced to adapt the Integrated Management Information System (see p. 1390) to the needs of field and country offices and peacekeeping operations wherever possible.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/653], adopted resolution 56/239 without vote [agenda item 122].

Information technology

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/249 of 23 December 1999, by which it requested the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive strategy for the development and implementation of information technology,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Information technology in the Secretariat: a plan of action", and endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to resubmit the plan of action, taking into account the provisions of paragraph 1 above and:

(a) Developing a specific plan to improve efficiency through the application of information technology in the Secretariat and the action required to implement it;

(b) Defining clearly the responsibilities of the different bodies in the application and integration of information technology within the United Nations;

(c) Addressing the objective of improving decision-making with respect to information technology in the Secretariat by improving coordination and reducing duplication;

(d) Developing a cost-benefit analysis for use in identifying information technology priorities;

(e) Developing an implementation plan for those priorities;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit for the consideration of the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a single report containing the information requested in the present resolution.

International cooperation in informatics

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/58 [YUN 1999, p. 1372], the Secretary-General submitted a June report on international cooperation in the field of informatics [E/2001/96], summarizing activities undertaken by the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics and the UN Secretariat. The Working Group and the Association for Information Technology co-sponsored meetings in January, April and June at the permanent missions of Australia, Denmark and Germany to engage the UN diplomatic community in investigating the impact of ICT on various economic and social agendas, and organized a conference on information security (New York, 30 March). The Working Group continued to establish relationships with UN agencies and, in cooperation with the Secretariat, worked on stabilizing and improving the Internet service offered to Member States. The report also contained information on activities carried out by Secretariat departments.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2001/24 [draft: E/2001/L.39] without vote [agenda item 7 (e)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the interest of Member States in taking full advantage of information and communications technologies for the acceleration of economic and social development,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all official languages,

Stressing the need to ensure complementarities between the mandates of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics and of the Information and Communication Technologies Task Force,

Welcoming the report presented by the Chairman of the Working Group on the progress achieved so far in fulfilling its mandate,

1. Reiterates the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members of the United Nations and observers, as well as non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations, to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations, provided that the unhindered access of non-governmental organizations shall not prejudice the access of Member States and that it shall not impose an additional financial burden for the use of databases and other systems;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, its work of facilitating the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and of continuing the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives. In this regard, the Working Group is requested to continue:

(a) To improve electronic connectivity via the Internet for all Member States in their capitals and at major United Nations locations, inter alia, through the enhanced connectivity of permanent missions to the Internet and United Nations databases;

(b) To improve the access of Member States to a wider database of United Nations information on economic and social, development and political issues and other substantive programming areas, and to have all official documents available via the Internet;

(c) To improve electronic links among Member States, the United Nations and the specialized agencies;

(d) To provide training for the staff of permanent missions to enable them to take full advantage of the facilities being developed for Member States;

(e) To enhance the capacity of Member States to access United Nations data online, using low-cost telecommunications links or providing other modalities, such as CD-ROM, whereby Member States can have access to specialized databases not available on the Internet;

(f) To make arrangements, as appropriate, to provide permanent missions of developing countries with hardware platforms to utilize Internet technology;

(g) To use videoconferencing on a more frequent basis, as appropriate, to further communication and interaction within the United Nations system and between the United Nations, permanent missions and academic institutions;

(h) To intensify contacts with the private sector so as to bring its wealth of experience to contribute positively to the work of the Working Group;

(i) To make greater use of projector/screen units for negotiations;

(j) To establish a password-protected system of mailing lists and bulletin boards on the United Nations web site to facilitate the dissemination of information among the United Nations missions;

(k) To explore ways to fully use the potential of information and communication technologies in order to speed up translation processes;

3. Supports the efforts of the Working Group to keep intact the network of national focal points that was established in connection with the year 2000 problem, as a vehicle for the diffusion of best practices and lessons learned, in particular for the exchange of information on locally and regionally appropriate solutions, and in this regard appeals once again to countries and other sources to provide the extrabudgetary resources necessary to maintain the mailing list of the national focal points;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full cooperation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2002 on the action taken in follow-up to the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group.

Integrated Management Information System

The General Assembly, by decision 55/463 of 12 April, took note of the Secretary-General's twelfth progress report on the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS) and endorsed ACABQ's observations and recommendations thereon [YUN 2000, p. 1399].

In his thirteenth progress report on IMIS [A/56/602], the Secretary-General said that the system was currently installed at eight major duty stations and was also being used by UNDP, UNFPA and the United Nations Office for Project Services and, as far as human resources were concerned, by the secretariat of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the International Labour Organization, the International Trade Centre and UNICEF. Implementation of the finance functionality had been completed in all major duty stations and usage of the system continued to increase. Payroll processing was extended to all Secretariat staff payrolled from Headquarters in January, including staff in field missions, and in July at the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, as well as in Vienna.

Major enhancements to the system included the consolidation of data with the full implementation of the consolidated extracts reporting database used in the preparation of financial reports; a technical and business study of options for full system consolidation in 2002; work on the processes for accounts' closing and opening balances, completion of which would allow for the finalization of archiving requirements; upgrading of the technical platform of the IMIS application to the latest version, making it possible for the entire application to be designed in web format; implementation of the use of electronic forms; and research into "personal accounts" in order to make some IMIS personal data available online. Other enhancements included re-engineering of the user-interface with the upgrade of application software; research into replacing the current reporting tool; and discussion with the Department of Management on integration of IMIS with other programme budgeting and reporting systems.

The long-term strategy for IMIS functioning addressed the need for a technological upgrade of the system to ensure that it met the needs of the Organization. That would require a significant enhancement effort, involving its re-engineering, finance and human resources transactions requiring more than one IMIS site with the required software component, the creation of global security, auditing and administrative controls and the streamlining of UN administrative procedures. The scope of those enhancements to IMIS would require additional budgetary resources in the amount of $5,634,700.

ACABQ, in a December report [A/56/684], said that it had no objection to the detailed work programme for the proposed technological updates, which was annexed to its report, and recommended approval of the amount requested for those enhancements, to be provided from investment income of $5,956,000 reported under the IMIS Fund as at 30 June. It requested that, after the submission of the Secretary-General's final report on lessons learned (see below), information on maintenance and future enhancements to the system should be provided in the context of the proposed programme budget, including information on integrating IMIS with other programme budgeting and reporting systems being developed by the Secretariat.

ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General report in 2002 on the strategy for deploying IMIS to peacekeeping operations and the international tribunals, and on the enhancements required to make it viable for possible programme applications by UN funds and programmes.

In a December addendum [A/56/602/Add.1], the Secretary-General focused on lessons learned from the development and implementation of IMIS. He said that the project's scope and its impact on the Organization were underestimated. Insufficient resources assigned to the design stages resulted in delays, flaws and omissions that made costly changes necessary. Initially, no budgetary provision was made for training or to cover other implementation activities, and insufficient provision had been made for implementing the system at offices away from Headquarters. The Secretary-General concluded that major lessons learned from the IMIS project included establishing a realistic scope for a project; comprehensive planning; commitment and support of the Organization; and a staged implementation of the system, a realistic approach that allowed for corrective steps. The implementation of IMIS accelerated the upgrade and enhancement of information technologies at all duty stations, and changed the Secretariat's management culture and working habits of staff members.

Communication for UN development programmes

In a July note, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report prepared by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) [A/56/221], in response to Assembly resolution 51/172 [YUN 1996, p. 1352]. The report included the recommendations of the seventh Inter-Agency Round Table on Communication and Development, organized by UNICEF (Salvador de Bahia, Brazil, 1998), and reviewed the communication and development activities of UNESCO, UNICEF, UNFPA, UNEP, the World Health Organization, the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the World Bank. UNFPA organized the eighth Round Table (Managua, Nicaragua, 26-29 November) on evaluating the information programmes designed to halt the HIV/AIDS pandemic, development of methodologies to evaluate current communication programmes and using community radio to reach disadvantaged persons.

By decision 56/437 of 21 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting UNESCO's report.

Common services at Geneva

By decision 55/469 of 12 April, the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's 2000 report on common services [YUN 2000, p. 1399], endorsed ACABQ's recommendations thereon [ibid., p. 1400] and requested that the Secretary-General report at its fifty-seventh (2002) session on progress made and decisions taken on the future of the Task Force on Common Services.

JIU report. In March [A/55/856], the Secretary-General transmitted a JIU report on the UN system common services at Geneva, part II, on case studies of the International Computing Centre (ICC), the Joint Medical Service (JMS), the Training and Examination Section (TES), the Diplomatic Pouch Service (DPS) and the Joint Purchase Service (JPS). The report identified key strengths and constraints of some existing common services, in accordance with the plan of action for Geneva common services 2000-2010, recommended in part I of its report [YUN 1999, p. 1376].

JIU stated that the facilities and potential of some of the services at the UN Office at Geneva (UNOG) were not being harnessed fully to trim costs, and the fact that some agencies had pulled out of the common services suggested inadequate understanding in some secretariats of the legislative and legal architecture of the UN common system.

JIU recommended the development of a closer association between ICC and the Information Systems Coordination Committee, and that information on the reasons why organizations opted not to use ICC services should be regularly provided and compiled so as to enable the Centre to adjust its operations accordingly. Independent technical auditors should be commissioned to conduct comparisons of quality, efficiency and unit costs of the Centre's services with those of similar services. Those ICC members that intended to reduce their recourse to its services should review their decisions.

JMS should be reorganized into four units, with a more structured management committee, and take measures to enhance its independence and ensure its effective oversight. Staff insurance policies and rules of member organizations should be harmonized and a single staff insurance programme created. The UN system at Geneva should have its own Advisory Board on Compensation Claims and develop a long-term vision for JMS.

The TES mandate should be revised to make it a fully fledged common service, its service rates reviewed to reflect real direct and indirect costs and its budget consolidated.

A review should be conducted of JPS statutes, including its staffing and structure. The Management Board should ensure that its budget reflected all costs and establish annually combined purchase value objectives or targets, including annual quotas of information technology items and contractual services.

UNOG should play an enhanced role in promoting and facilitating increased administrative cooperation and coordination in Geneva. Accordingly, the Secretary-General should change the names of the Divisions of Administration and Conference Services, respectively, to the Division of Common Administrative Services and the Division of Common Conference Services to underline their potential for wider inter-organizational coverage and the need for efficiency improvements.

The Secretary-General, in May [A/55/856/Add.1], transmitting his comments and those of ACC on the JIU report (part II), reiterated that an expansion of common services might be difficult to reconcile with the policy of further decentralization in the context of management reform. Nevertheless, some steps had been taken to underline UNOG's capacity to take the lead in common services, particularly through the establishment of the Management Ownership Committee (below) and the implementation of separate memorandums of understanding between UNOG and all the entities it serviced.

ACABQ, in its first report on the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget [A/56/7], took note of the Secretary-General's comment. It pointed out that printing operations in Geneva was a particular case where economies of scale should be possible, and requested that a comprehensive analysis of the comparative costing for internal and external printing in Geneva be provided to the Fifth Committee during consideration of the 2002-2003 proposed programme budget. ACABQ welcomed the ongoing discussions on cooperation in the further development of Internet services to link major organizations in Geneva and permanent missions there and to establish greater transmission capacity. UN system organizations in Geneva should cooperate fully in the planning, design, development, implementation and maintenance of infrastructure for a variety of information technology services from vendors.

Report of Secretary-General. Responding to Assembly resolution 54/255 [YUN 2000, p. 1375], the Secretary-General, in October [A/56/417/Rev.1], provided information on cooperation among UN specialized agencies based in Geneva in budget and finance, telecommunications, information technology, travel and transportation, medical services and insurance, security services, procurement and contracting, library and archiving services, management of human resources and facilities, mail and diplomatic pouch services and conference facilities.

In terms of the common services structure, the Secretary-General reported the establishment of a Geneva Management Ownership Committee, under the chairmanship of UNOG's Director-General. The Committee, with its three-tier structure (the Committee, a Task Force on Common Services and technical working groups), would establish and maintain high-level support for and commitment to common services initiatives among UN system organizations based in Geneva, provide executive direction to its Task Force on Common Services and take decisions on related recommendations.

The Task Force on Common Services, composed of heads of administration of participating organizations and agencies, would make recommendations for the establishment of a common service or reinforcement of existing ones; review proposals and recommendations by the working groups on common services; and define the commitment, participation and human and financial resources required from participating organizations.

The working groups would assess critical central, shared or common services to identify areas for improving quality and cost-effectiveness; review the potential for expanding common services; and recommend action, with the timetable, resource estimate and definition of accountability for implementation, including the lead agency.

The Management Ownership Committee had identified JPS, the banking, travel and cleaning services, as well as the provision of electricity, as priority areas for strengthening common services tools or developing new approaches.

Use of private management consulting firms

In June [A/55/979], the Secretary-General transmitted his comments, as well as those of ACC, on a JIU report entitled "Policies and practices in the use of the services of private management consulting firms in the organizations of the United Nations system" [YUN 2000, p. 1401]. Many organizations believed that the report lacked rigorous analysis and a clear methodology. Statements in the report were either too general or could not be substantiated, thus eroding the validity of some of the report's conclusions and recommendations. Some organizations felt that the basic objective of the report's findings was to reduce cost without due regard to "quality", which in their view was a simplistic approach. JIU proposed regulating the use of management consulting firms but without any substantial argument or evidence to support such a proposal. There was general agreement on the recommendations relating to policy framework, and agreement on monitoring and control, follow-up actions, inter-organization cooperation and coordination, and conflicts of interest. Recommendations on using regionally based consulting firms, a policy of rotating consulting firms and utilizing as many of official languages and countries in the bidding process were not fully accepted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/652], adopted resolution 56/235 without vote [agenda items 121 & 128].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on policies and practices in the use of the services of private management consulting firms in the organizations of the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/232 of 23 December 2000 and 55/247 of 12 April 2001,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on policies and practices in the use of the services of private management consulting firms in the organizations of the United Nations system and the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments as well as those of the Administrative Committee on Coordination thereon,

1. Endorses the elements contained in paragraphs (b) and (d) of recommendation 1, and recommendations 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the Joint Inspection Unit;

2. Invites the Secretary-General and participating organizations of the United Nations system, when addressing the issues raised in paragraphs (a) and (c) of recommendation 1, and in recommendations 6, 7 and 8 of the Unit and using the services of private management consulting firms, to take fully into account the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions 55/232 and 55/247.

Internal and external printing

By decision 55/470 of 12 April, the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report on internal and external printing practices of the Organization [YUN 2000, p. 1402], endorsed ACABQ's comments and observations on the report [ibid.] and requested the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to improve the Organization's printing practices and expand the use of the UN printing facilities as a common service for the needs of the UN funds and programmes based at Headquarters and the specialized agencies based in Geneva.

Measures to increase profitability of UN commercial activities

By decision 55/466 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of ACABQ's intention to review the Secretary-General's report on the proposed measures to improve the profitability of UN commercial activities [YUN 2000, p. 1402] and decided to revert to that question during the main part of its fifty-sixth session on the basis of the ACABQ report.

ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the 2002-2003 biennium [A/56/7], said that the Secretariat proposals were too general and should be followed by a blueprint with specific commercial goals and an implementation plan. With respect to the United Nations Postal Administration, ACABQ said that, in view of the continuing decline in income from the sale of stamps, the possibility of outsourcing that activity should be explored, as well as negotiating more favourable reimbursement rates paid to the United States Postal Service.

In connection with the United Nations Bookshop, ACABQ agreed with the recommendation that the United Nations use a contractor with book and/or retail experience. The pricing of United Nations publications should take into account the target audience's ability to pay and every effort should be made to minimize cost and maximize offsetting revenue, and perhaps even to make a profit. To ascertain the true cost of the preparation, production and dissemination of publications, the Committee recommended that a pilot project be undertaken, using one or more publications of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs. Consideration should also be given to greater use of joint arrangements for production and distribution with publishers of scholarly and institutional materials.

The operation and cost of the catering services and their actual cost to the United Nations should be re-examined. Contractual arrangements should be financially attractive to both the contractor and the United Nations. ACABQ requested that it be consulted before the conclusion of any new contract arrangement. It also recommended that contractual arrangements include a provision for annual independent auditing at the contractor's expense, and be based on a fair market return to the United Nations for space occupied by the contractors.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/653], adopted resolution 56/238 without vote [agenda item 122].

Proposed measures to improve the profitability of the commercial activities of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/232 of 23 December 2000,

Recalling also the international and non-commercial character of the Organization,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed measures to improve the profitability of the commercial activities of the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Notes with satisfaction the report of the Secretary-General, and endorses the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions thereon;

2. Notes the proposal to separate the management of the commercial activities from the other activities of the Organization, and requests the Secretary-General to submit detailed information on this proposal and its administrative and financial implications;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to elaborate on this proposal by means of a blueprint concerning the specific commercial goals of the Organization and the steps that should be taken to achieve them, in particular the use of outsourcing, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 55/232 and its resolution 55/247 of 12 April 2001, and the optimum use of space within the United Nations buildings;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to make proposals to streamline and simplify the administration and management structure underpinning those activities;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit for the consideration of the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session a single report containing the information requested in the present resolution.

Enhancing the UN experience for visitors

In March, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a proposal for enhancing the UN experience for visitors [A/55/835], which aimed at modernizing and improving the experience of visitors to Headquarters and envisaged the construction of new visitors' facilities and the introduction of an interactive, multimedia programme of exhibits. The capital cost of the proposed new facilities was estimated at $50 million to $60 million to be funded entirely from private sources and in-kind contributions. The associated improvements to the General Assembly building would be part of the Secretary-General's proposed capital master plan [YUN 2000, p. 1405]. It was expected that the proposed new visitors' facilities would enhance the financial viability of the guided tour programme and improve the profitability of commercial activities.

Projected revenue was estimated at $15.8 million in the first biennium, compared to almost $5 million realized in the 1998-1999 biennium. Budgetary implications during construction were estimated at $1.6 million. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly endorse the proposal and authorize him, in close coordination with prospective donors, to proceed with it.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2002-2003 [A/56/7], stressed the need for close coordination of the new visitors' experience project and the capital master plan [YUN 2000, p. 1405]. Noting that the capital cost was to be entirely funded from private sources, ACABQ trusted that the dignity and image of the United Nations would not be compromised through commercialization. While welcoming the interest of the United Nations Association of the United States of America (UNA/USA), the Committee said that the number of potential contributors should be expanded to include UNAs of other countries. It requested the Secretary-General to report on that issue in his next report on that matter.

While ACABQ had no objection in principle to the establishment of a visitors' experience capital improvement fund to be financed from 20 per cent of gross revenues, it was concerned that deficits might become a potential burden to the Organization and requested that consideration be given to the management of the fund and that the rules governing its replenishment, operation and management should be submitted to it for review, in conjunction with the final proposals for the project.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/653], adopted resolution 56/236 without vote [agenda item 122].

Enhancing the United Nations experience for visitors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General containing his proposal for enhancing the United Nations experience for visitors,

Having also considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Welcomes the initiatives of the United Nations Association of the United States of America, the prospective donor, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, to mobilize resources in order to provide new facilities for the visitors' experience in the form of a donation in kind to the United Nations;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the development of the proposed visitors' experience project is fully integrated with the capital master plan, including necessary security measures;

4. Decides that a decision on this question should be taken in the light of any further decision on the capital master plan;

5. Authorizes the Secretary-General to invite the United Nations Association of the United States of America to proceed with the preparation of a schematic design for the new visitors' experience, taking into account the four conditions set out in the report of the Secretary-General, which are highlighted in the report of the Advisory Committee, on the understanding that it will be for the General Assembly to declare itself satisfied with the fulfilment of these conditions;

6. Notes the desirability of expanding the number of potential contributors to the project by including the United Nations Associations of other countries;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to evaluate the proposed financial and fiscal aspects of the donation, in view of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and in the light of the capital master plan, taking into account the eventual financial implications for the Organization, and to report thereon to the General Assembly;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit, when practicable, for the consideration of the General Assembly, a comprehensive report on the outcome of the schematic design; options for deciding on the final scale of the project; projected revenues and the cost of operating and maintaining the new visitors' experience; proposals for expanded commercial activities; options for operating methodologies; means of adjusting to changing situations; procedures for the operation of the proposed capital improvement fund; and a time-line for implementation.

UN premises and property

Facilities management

By decision 55/465 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on facilities management [YUN 1999, p. 1379] and endorsed ACABQ's observations thereon [YUN 2000, p. 1403]. The Assembly also took note of the Secretary-General's report entitled "Overseas Properties Management and Information Exchange Network (OPMIEN): a globally coordinated collaborative approach to facilities management" [ibid.] and endorsed the related observations and recommendations of ACABQ [ibid., p. 1404].

JIU report. In August [A/56/274], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report entitled "Management of buildings: practices of selected United Nations system organizations relevant to the renovation of the United Nations Headquarters". JIU reviewed the operational and financial issues of buildings management at the UN Headquarters building to assist Member States and the Secretariat in considering measures for the timely and systematic maintenance and capital improvements at UN Headquarters.

JIU concluded that ensuring adequate provision for systematic building maintenance and capital expenditure was a problem that most UN system organizations faced. The United Nations needed to review its budgeting policy on building maintenance costs and capital expenditure against its prolonged budget stringency and competing demands for its scarce resources. The Organization also needed an institutionalized financial framework to handle substantive capital expenditure, which the biennial regular programme budget could not handle.

JIU recommended that, in the context of the capital master plan [YUN 2000, p. 1405], the Assembly should establish a policy on management and maintenance of UN buildings. The Secretariat should fully comply with local building codes and seek financial and other support from the host Government and local authorities towards the UN renovation project. The Secretary-General should prepare a feasibility study for establishing a building/real estate fund to cover the costs of major repairs, renovation, upgrading and replacement of equipment.

In September [A/56/274/Add.1], the Secretary-General, in his comments on the JIU report, stated that JIU's observations and recommendations were pertinent and important for the efficient, safe and reliable management of the extensive real estate owned or managed by the United Nations. However, certain JIU findings required further assessment, especially those regarding the need for a large expenditure for the capital master plan, the observation that programme managers were not fully aware of the financial implications of building maintenance and use of office space, and that financial considerations were not taken into account in the decision-making process in the allocation of office space.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 92], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/56/652], adopted resolution 56/234 without vote [agenda items 121 & 128].

Management of buildings: practices of selected United Nations system organizations relevant to the renovation of the United Nations Headquarters

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Management of buildings: practices of selected United Nations system organizations relevant to the renovation of the United Nations Headquarters" and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon,

1. Welcomes the comprehensive and timely preparation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit;
2. Endorses the report of the Unit, and requests the Secretary-General to take full account of its recommendations and findings when elaborating the capital master plan, without prejudice to the future consideration by the General Assembly of the report of the Secretary-General on the capital master plan;
3. Decides to revert to the consideration of the report of the Unit and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon within the context of its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the capital master plan, requested by the General Assembly in section IV of its resolution 55/238 of 23 December 2000.

Asbestos problem

The General Assembly, by decision 55/464 of 12 April, took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the review and assessment of the asbestos problem at UN Headquarters and the management of asbestos-containing materials at UN buildings in Geneva, Vienna, Nairobi and the locations of the regional commissions; and ACABQ's observations [YUN 2000, p. 1404]. The Assembly welcomed the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to solve the problem.

Addis Ababa conference and office facilities

By decision 55/467 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on the construction of additional conference facilities in Addis Ababa and the related ACABQ report [YUN 2000, p. 1405]. The Assembly decided to retain the remaining balance in the construction-in-progress account pending its consideration of all related matters.

In December [A/56/672], the Secretary-General submitted proposals for the construction of additional office facilities at ECA in Addis Ababa. That had become necessary due to the serious shortage of office space resulting from the relocation of regional, subregional and country offices of UN specialized agencies, funds and programmes to the UN compound for security reasons and in the context of the UN common house concept, as well as the considerable expansion of UN humanitarian and development activities in the region. The Secretary-General's proposal entailed the construction of a new four-storey office building with an area of 6,770 square metres at a total cost of $7,711,800, to be financed from the balance in the construction-in-progress account following the completion of the ECA conference facilities ($8,253,000 as at 30 June 2001), which the Assembly by decision 55/467 (see above) had decided to retain.

ACABQ, in its report on the Secretary-General's proposals [A/56/711], recommended that the Assembly authorize the construction and approve an appropriation of $7,711,800, to be funded from the construction-in-progress account. It recommended that ECA consider leasing any unoccupied office space. It trusted that an agreement with the host Government for tax exemption with regard to materials for the project would be concluded soon. ACABQ also requested that a progress report be submitted annually until the completion of the project in 2005.

UN Office at Nairobi*Office facilities

The Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), at its twenty-first session (5-9 February) [A/56/25 (dec. 21/33)], having considered a conference room paper submitted by the Executive Director containing proposals for the construction of additional office accommodation at the UN complex in Nairobi, authorized the Executive Director to approve an advance of up to $8 million from the Environment Fund financial reserve to the UN Secretariat on a loan basis towards the construction, subject to ACABQ's approval and that of other competent authorities according to UN rules and procedures. The Executive Director should ensure that the agreement between the UN Secretariat and UNEP on the loan included a provision that there should be an immediate repayment, upon request.

Administrative and management practices

In November [A/56/620], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on its inspection of the administrative and management practices of the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON), which assessed the level of satisfaction with the services provided by UNON to its clients in administration, financial management, human resources, security and safety, support and information technologies services.

The review found that, although the authority delegated to UNEP and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat) had been clarified by the Department of Management, the relationship of the two entities with UNON remained unclear, especially UNON's functional responsibilities and reporting lines, in particular, accountability for the delivery of services in the absence from Nairobi of the Director-General and the reporting lines and level of accountability of the Division of Administrative Services. Diplomatic missions were not adequately informed of UNON's responsibilities and their relationship with it. There was no effective system in place for UNEP or Habitat to monitor the quality and effective delivery of services by UNON.

OIOS recommended that UNON's Division of Administrative Services should assess the areas in which UNON had delegated authority and compile a manual outlining the authority delegated to UNON and that retained by UNEP and Habitat for each service, including the responsible agency official. It should assess problem areas and explain to UNEP and Habitat officials the reporting lines and functional responsibilities as outlined in the Secretary-General's bulletin [ST/SGB/2000/13]. The Director-General should explain that, during his absence, representational duties would be carried out by the next highest-ranking UN official in Nairobi, and confirm that the Chief of the Division of Administrative Services was accountable for the operational activities of UNON and was also the Chief Administrator for Habitat. The Director-General should establish mechanisms to ensure the quality and timeliness of UNON's services, consult Headquarters regarding the request of the permanent representatives in Nairobi to be accredited to UNON as a separate entity from UNEP and Habitat, and institutionalize regular consultative meetings with the Committee of Permanent Representatives.

UNEP and Habitat should establish a system for monitoring the delivery of services provided by UNON and, with UNON, finalize the basis, formula and performance indicators for those services. They should also clarify remaining questions regarding the costing of those services. The Division of Administrative Services should review its staffing requirements and develop a plan to achieve it, as well as a training programme.

The Secretary-General concurred with the OIOS recommendations and noted that measures were being taken to correct the issues addressed.

Security

The Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Security (Paris, 14-18 May) [ACC/2001/10] made recommendations to ACC on security training, Field Security Officers, Minimum Operating Safety Standards, collaboration with NGOs, evacuation entitlements and accountability. The Meeting recommended that resources be pooled to facilitate joint training in security and stress management. It endorsed the Minimum Operating Safety Standards and the Minimum Telecommunications Standards and recommended that a full implementation plan with time frame and costing be made available before the ACC High-level Committee on Management meeting (Geneva, 10-11 September). Common inter-agency standards/procedures should be developed also for stress counsellors and be forwarded to the High-level Committee on Management. The Meeting agreed in principle to the 16 recommendations put forward by the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Working Group Staff Security Task Force on UN-NGO field collaboration on security for "humanitarian actors" and decided that they should be reviewed by the UN Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) prior to implementation.

The Meeting supported UNDP's proposal to simplify evacuation entitlements and called on all agencies to adhere to them. It recommended that organizations take urgent action to implement the Secretary-General's decision [A/55/494] that security responsibilities be included in the job descriptions of all staff in the field, taking into account the duties and responsibilities already contained in the revised Field Security Handbook, and that UNICEF continue to discuss with interested organizations the further development of the Field Reporting System. The Meeting revised the Field Security Handbook, subject to review by OLA.

Security arrangements in Geneva

In March [A/C.5/55/SR.44], the ACABQ Chairman, commenting on the Secretary-General's report on security arrangements at the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG) [YUN 2000, p. 1406], noted that the preliminary estimated cost of those arrangements was some $2 million higher than the amounts allocated for 1998-1999 and 2000-2001. ACABQ decided to revert to the matter in the context of the Secretary-General's 2002-2003 budget proposals.

By decision 55/468 of 12 April, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and the related ACABQ observations, and requested the Secretary-General to keep the security arrangements at UNOG under review to ensure full protection of delegates, staff and visitors in the UN premises and the safety of UN property.

In its first report on the proposed programme budget for 2002-2003 [A/56/7], ACABQ said it had no objection to the provision of $2,439,100 requested for upgrading security arrangements at UNOG, which the Assembly approved in resolution 56/253.

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 2001, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to focus on bringing about the development and transfer of peaceful nuclear technologies; building and maintaining a global nuclear safety regime; and guarding against the proliferation of nuclear weapons and strengthening the security of nuclear material and facilities. After the terrorist attacks of 11 September in the United States, IAEA intensified its action to upgrade nuclear safety and security.

The forty-fifth session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, 17-21 September) adopted resolutions on improving the security of nuclear and other radioactive materials; strengthening international cooperation in nuclear, radiation, transport and waste safety; improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the safeguards system; strengthening IAEA technical cooperation activities; applying safeguards in the Middle East; implementing the safeguards agreement between IAEA and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea; and implementing UN Security Council resolutions relating to Iraq.

In 2001, IAEA membership rose to 133 with the admission of Botswana and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Activities

Nuclear safety

IAEA continued to provide nuclear safety services and assistance worldwide. A safety guide, Safety Assessment and Verification for Nuclear Power Plants, was published in 2001, while another, Instrumentation and Control Systems Important to Safety in Nuclear Power Plants, was in the process of being published. The Agency also drafted safety requirements for fuel cycle and isotope production facilities and two safety guides covering mixed oxide and uranium fuel production facilities. Design safety review missions were carried out in the Czech Republic, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Iran. An international action plan was developed to improve the safety of research reactors. In September, the Agency convened a conference on the safety of nuclear power, which focused on risk-informed decision-making, influence of external factors on safety, safety of fuel cycle facilities, safety of research reactors and safety performance indicators.

Radiation safety

In 2001, the safety and security of radioactive sources emerged as an increasingly important issue. The Agency took account of the recommendations of the 2000 Buenos Aires conference of national regulators [YUN 2000, p. 1409] and updated the action plan on the safety of radiation sources and the security of radioactive materials. In March, IAEA held a conference in Málaga, Spain, on the radiological protection of patients in diagnostic and interventional radiology and nuclear medicine. It was agreed to convene a group of experts to develop an international action plan in that area in 2002. A panel meeting on the safe transport of radioactive material held in November recommended the publication in 2003 of the Agency's revised Transport Regulations, which would take effect in 2005.

In May, the Agency participated in an international nuclear emergency exercise, JINEX 1, involving 55 States, which aimed to test existing national and international procedures and arrangements for responding to a nuclear emergency. A new occupational radiation protection appraisal service was launched and the first review was conducted. A key objective of the appraisal was to provide member States with an objective assessment of the provisions for occupational radiation protection.

Nuclear power

In 2001, the Agency continued to assist member States in planning and implementing programmes for the utilization of nuclear power, as well as to support them in achieving improved safety, reliability and economic cost-effectiveness of their nuclear power plants. Publications were issued on quality assurance standards, risk management, managing change in nuclear utilities, economic performance indicators, personnel training and evaluating outside contractors. Updated versions of Agency databases and the Power Reactor Information System were released to member States, and a third module on steam generators was added to the Agency's database on nuclear power plant life management. In May, a major international seminar was convened in Cairo, Egypt, to review innovative small to medium-sized reactor designs. In the area of metal cooled reactors, the Agency completed a coordinated research project on the verification of analysis methods for predicting seismically isolated nuclear structures, and harmonization and validation of analysis methods for fast reactor thermal-hydraulic codes and relations using experimental data. In response to requests from member States, the Agency conducted information exchange activities with regard to heavy liquid metal coolants for fast reactors.

Nuclear fuel cycle

In 2001, IAEA and the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD/NEA) published Country Nuclear Fuel Cycle Profiles in response to changes in nuclear fuel markets, and Uranium 2001: Resources, Production and Demand, the foremost world reference on uranium supplies. A complementary study, Analysis of Uranium Supply to 2050, was also published. Key milestones were achieved by the Agency in the areas of mixed oxide fuel technology, water chemistry and corrosion control in nuclear power plants and zirconium alloy degradation by hydrogen. IAEA also focused on issues connected with long-term dry storage, the implications for fuel fabrication and burn-up credit. Initiatives to address the issue of geological repositories and the lack of infrastructure and resources to implement available technologies in many developing member States included the creation of an International Network of Centres of Excellence for Demonstration and Training in Geological Disposal, and an international conference on the management of radioactive waste from non-power applications (Malta, November).

Radioactive waste management

An important new development in 2001 was the entry into force of the Joint Convention on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management and on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management. The Convention was one of several safety-related agreements under the Agency's auspices. A specialists' meeting in June addressed a number of topics, including a common framework for radioactive waste disposal. The meeting helped to clarify and document the areas of agreement that could be reflected in safety standards. The Agency finalized a report assessing the implications of the recommendations from a 2000 conference on the safety of radioactive waste management on its work programme. The report highlighted seven actions, including the development of a common framework for the disposal of different types of radioactive waste and the development of a programme to ensure adequate application of the Agency's waste safety standards. Together with OECD/NEA, the Agency organized a peer review of the performance assessment being developed for a proposed waste disposal site at Yucca Mountain, Nevada, United States.

Marine environment and water resources

In 2001, IAEA developed several new techniques and facilities that provided significantly improved methods for the detection and study of both nuclear and non-nuclear marine pollutants in the laboratory and in the field. In water resources management, IAEA assessed the current status and future directions for isotope applications in water-cycle modelling, groundwater sustainability and the impacts of climate change on water resources. Efforts were made to link the Agency's research and development and technical cooperation activities to water sector programmes of the United Nations and bilateral agencies. IAEA was invited to be the UN system's lead organization to mark World Water Day in March 2002, in recognition of the impact of its work in water resources. An international conference organized by the Agency (Vienna, April) discussed how isotopes could be used in environmental change studies. IAEA also played a major role in building a cadre of trained isotope hydrologists worldwide, a profession in short supply in many developing countries.

Food and agriculture

Significant achievements were made by the Agency in applying radiation and isotope techniques in research, leading to the optimum use of water and nutrients by plants, and ultimately ensuring sustainable crop and livestock productivity and environmental preservation. The 1964 arrangements between the Directors General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and IAEA for the joint FAO/IAEA Division of Nuclear Techniques in Food and Agriculture (which planned and implemented the food and agriculture programme at the Agency) were revised to include redefinition of responsibilities and the establishment of a steering committee to oversee the programme. IAEA also developed standard operating and good laboratory procedures, manuals and guidelines for scientists and technicians of its member States.

Human health

A priority during 2001 was the development of diagnostic methods and treatment procedures for coronary artery disease, liver cancer, thyroid cancer, bacterial infection, and infectious and childhood diseases. A critical part of the Agency's human health programme was the application of nuclear and related techniques in the treatment of cancer and infectious diseases. Several analyses and projects were directed at the evaluation of the economics of radiation therapy for cancer. Models to derive the cost of cancer treatment using brachytherapy and cobalt and Linac teletherapy in different countries were developed and implemented. IAEA provided developing member States with a link to international standards for measuring radiation and the quality assurance techniques necessary for the calibration of radiation therapy machines and industrial radiation facilities.

Technical cooperation

IAEA's secretariat delivered a record $71 million worth of training, expert services, equipment and other assistance to member States under its technical cooperation programme in 2001—up by $3.1 million from 2000. Extrabudgetary resources reached $7.1 million, the highest amount in more than 10 years, including government cost-sharing of $2.6 million. In June, the Agency's Board recommended increasing the regular budget allocation for the management of technical cooperation activities. The Agency began "upstream" work for the 2003-2004 technical cooperation programme, emphasizing projects that enjoyed government support and commitment. The preparation of thematic plans, one of the three major instruments of the Agency's technical cooperation strategy, was under way. Two thematic plans were completed in 2001, one on coastal zone management and the other on area-wide tsetse control. Technology transfer was the focus of the scientific forum at the 2001 regular session of the General Conference. The forum looked at several technical cooperation projects as case studies and discussed factors that contributed to the projects' success.

Safeguards responsibilities

All information available to IAEA in 2001 led to the conclusion that nuclear material and related items placed under safeguards remained in peaceful nuclear activities or were otherwise adequately accounted for. As at 31 December, 225 safeguards agreements with 141 States (and with Taiwan Province of China) were in force. During 2001, 2,487 inspections were carried out at 592 facilities and other locations. The number of States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], that had not fulfilled their legal obligation to bring into force the required Treaty safeguards agreements stood at 52, compared to 54 at the end of 2000. Protocols additional to safeguards agreements [YUN, 1997, p. 1519] for 61 States had been approved by the IAEA Board of Governors; 24 such protocols were in force. An additional protocol with Ghana was being implemented provisionally pending entry into force.

Nuclear information

Interest in nuclear matters at the global level was particularly strong after the 11 September attacks in the United States, when issues such as the physical protection of nuclear material, illicit trafficking and the possible use by subnational groups of unconventional weapons came to the fore. IAEA launched a press campaign on combating nuclear terrorism. IAEA's WorldAtom web site was further enhanced and expanded, resulting in a significant increase in the number of visits to the site. A notable event in April was multimedia coverage of the fifteenth anniversary of the Chernobyl accident.

The International Nuclear Information System, with 122 participating members, continued to collect and distribute scientific information in all areas of nuclear science and technology.

Secretariat

At the end of 2001, IAEA secretariat staff totalled 2,205, including 950 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,255 in the General Service category.

Budget

The 2001 regular budget amounted to $197.2 million, of which $189.1 million was financed from assessed contributions by member States, $4.1 million from income from reimbursable work and $4 million from miscellaneous income. Actual budget expenditure amounted to $196.8 million. A total of $51.7 million in extrabudgetary funds was provided by member States, the United Nations, international organizations and other sources.

Chapter II

International Labour Organization (ILO)

In 2001, the International Labour Organization (ILO) continued to promote social justice and economic stability and improve labour conditions. ILO's strategic objectives were to promote and realize fundamental principles and rights at work; create greater opportunities for women and men to secure decent employment and income; enhance the coverage and effectiveness of social protection; and strengthen tripartism and social dialogue.

In 2001, ILO membership remained at 175.

Meetings

The eighty-ninth session of the International Labour Conference (ILC) (Geneva, 5-21 June) adopted the first international standard on safety in agriculture, in an effort to ensure that member States established an adequate system of inspection for agricultural workplaces. The Conference also recognized the importance of social security and broadly endorsed established social security principles. It was acknowledged, however, that within the framework of those principles each country would need to determine its own social security system coverage.

ILO's International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour launched a new initiative at the Conference, aimed at accelerating the removal of millions of children from the most abusive forms of child labour in participating countries in 10 years or less.

The Director-General submitted to the Conference a global report on forced labour, as a follow-up to the 1998 ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work [YUN 1998, p. 1375]. He also submitted a report on ILO programme implementation in 2000-2001, which identified the achievements, difficulties and constraints faced by the organization during the biennium.

An ILO informal meeting (Geneva, 25-26 October) discussed the global and social impacts of the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States (see p. 60) on the tourist sector. On 30 October, ILO called for a series of operational measures to rebuild the devastated aviation sector.

Sectoral and other meetings convened in Geneva during 2001 included: meeting of ILO declaration expert-advisers (29 January-2 February); tripartite meeting on the employment impact of mergers and acquisitions in the banking and financial services sector (5-9 February); meeting of experts on ILO guidelines on occupational safety and health management systems (19-27 April); international symposium to strengthen workers' participation in the UN system and impact on Bretton Woods institutions (24-28 September); tripartite meeting of experts on the management of disability at the workplace (3-12 October); tripartite meeting on the construction industry in the twenty-first century: its image, employment prospects and skill requirements (10-14 December); and high-level tripartite working group on maritime labour standards (first meeting) (17-21 December).

International standards

During 2001, ILO activities with regard to Conventions and Recommendations included standard-setting and the supervision and promotion of the application of standards. Supervisory bodies reviewed existing procedures and standard-setting policy.

In June, ILC adopted the Safety and Health in Agriculture Convention (No. 184) and Recommendation (No. 192). During 2000-2001, the follow-up of ILO's Declaration of Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work [YUN 1998, p. 1375] became operational, and action programmes on freedom of association and the promotion of the right to collective bargaining were launched.

Employment and development

ILO continued in 2001 to help constituents combat unemployment and poverty through the creation of employment opportunities and improvement of existing jobs. It provided advice and guidance on employment and labour market policies, as well as on their labour market information and statistical systems. Activities to promote employment included support to constituents to develop entrepreneurship through the creation of cooperatives and small and micro-enterprises.

On 3 November, a Global Employment Forum, held in Geneva, launched a 10-point plan (Global Agenda for Employment), aimed at reversing mounting unemployment and poverty due to the dual impact of global recession and the September terrorist attacks in the United States.

Regarding human resources development, ILO emphasized the adaptation of training policy and delivery to the rapidly changing skill requirements and the special needs of vulnerable groups. It also responded to the needs of countries affected by conflict.

Field activities

In 2001, expenditure on technical cooperation programmes totalled $121.7 million compared to $91 million in 2000. The leading field of activity was the employment sector with 38 per cent ($47.2 million), followed by international labour standards (30 per cent), and social dialogue- and social protection-related activities (15 and 11 per cent respectively).

In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 26.9 per cent of total expenditure ($32.8 million), Asia and the Pacific for 22 per cent ($26.8 million), Latin America and the Caribbean 16.5 per cent ($20 million), Europe 4.9 per cent ($5.9 million) and the Arab States 1.9 per cent ($2.2 million). Interregional and global activities accounted for the greatest share (27.8 per cent), an increase of some 5 per cent over 2000.

Educational activities

The Turin Centre and the International Institute for Labour Studies, both autonomous institutions within ILO, reported to the ILO Governing Body. The Centre continued to carry out training and related activities in a wide range of technical areas as an integral part of ILO technical cooperation activities. The Institute continued to carry out research and encouraged networking related to emerging labour policy issues, and acted as catalyst for future ILO programme development.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, ILO employed a total of 2,273 full-time staff. Of those, 988 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,285 were in the General Service category.

Budget

ILC had adopted a budget of $467 million for the 2000-2001 biennium in June 1999. At its 2001 session, ILC adopted a budget of $434 million for the 2002-2003 biennium.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to work towards achieving sustainable global food security by raising nutrition levels and living standards, improving agricultural productivity and advancing the condition of rural populations.

The FAO Conference, the agency's governing body, held its thirty-first session (Rome, Italy, 2-13 November). It approved a budget of $651.8 million for 2002-2003—an increase of $1.8 million over the previous biennium. The Conference approved an International Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture intended to ensure access to plant genetic diversity while considering the needs of farmers and plant breeders. It adopted a new FAO Plan of Action on Gender and Development (2002-2007) with four priorities: food and nutrition, natural resources, agricultural support systems, and agricultural and rural development policy and planning.

The FAO Council, in November, decided that the World Food Summit: five years later, originally planned as part of the Conference, would instead take place in Rome in June 2002.

In March, FAO announced that more than 110 countries had adopted a new plan of action against illegal, unregulated and unreported fishing. The voluntary agreement was aimed at eliminating those practices, which were blamed for overfishing of several high-value fish stocks.

In 2001, FAO membership rose to 183 countries, plus the European Community.

World food situation

World cereal output in 2001 was estimated at 1,880 million tonnes (including rice in milled equivalent), 22 million tonnes, or 1.2 per cent, above the previous year's level, representing the first increase since 1996. World coarse grain production rose by around 3 per cent compared to 2000, despite declines in North America. World wheat production reached 582 million tonnes, about the same as in 2000. World rice output was estimated at 591 million tonnes (395 million tonnes in milled equivalent), 7 million tonnes less than in 2000. Much of that contraction concentrated in China. With overall cereal utilization exceeding world production for the second year in a row, world cereal reserves by the close of the 2001/02 season were expected to decline sharply. World cereal stocks were forecast to reach 587 million tonnes by the end of 2002, down 8 per cent from the previous season's level.

FAO's Global Information and Early Warning System (GIEWS), in cooperation with the World Food Programme (WFP), fielded crop and food-supply assessment missions to affected countries. The GIEWS Workstation, an integrated information system, maintained a reference database for global crop monitoring and early warning.

Activities

FAO's Emergency Operations and Rehabilitation Division responded to requests for emergency assistance in the agricultural, livestock, fisheries and forestry sectors submitted by developing countries affected by natural or human-induced calamities. The value of FAO's emergency assistance reached $335 million in 2000-2001, including emergency relief and early rehabilitation programmes around the globe and the agricultural component of the oil-for-food programme in Iraq, FAO's largest emergency and rehabilitation programme.

Through its field programmes, FAO provided technical advice and support in all areas of food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. In 2001, $201 million was spent on 1,428 field projects. FAO's Investment Centre assisted developing and transition countries to identify and assess investment opportunities, and formulated 90 agricultural and rural development projects for some $3.7 billion. The Special Programme for Food Security continued to assist developing countries, particularly through its South-South Cooperation initiative, to improve national and household food security on an economically and environmentally sustainable basis.

In 2001, FAO participated in activities related to the conservation and use of plant biological diversity, crop management and diversification, seed production and improvement, crop protection, agricultural engineering, prevention of food losses, and food and agricultural industries. It developed programmes and strategies for livestock production and health, and supported improved smallholder, specialized and mixed livestock farming through better resource utilization, improved processing and commercialization, and better control of animal diseases. Through its Emergency Prevention System for Transboundary Animal and Plant Pests and Diseases, FAO promoted cooperation among countries on early warning, control of and research on the desert locust, the prevention and control of significant transboundary diseases, and the global eradication of rinderpest by 2010.

The FAO Forestry Department continued its work in forest resource management, forest policy and planning, and forest products. At its fifteenth session in March, the FAO Committee on Forestry (COFO) was informed about the main findings of the Forest Resources Assessment (FRA) 2000, according to which the total estimated global forest area in 2000 was nearly 3.9 billion hectares (95 per cent natural forest and 5 per cent plantations). COFO made a number of recommendations, in particular that the global FRA programme continue to be a priority for the Forestry Department.

FAO promoted long-term sustainable development and utilization of the world's fisheries and aquaculture. Its priorities included the implementation of the FAO Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries, with particular attention to the problem of excess fishing capacity, strengthening of regional fisheries bodies, and the promotion of an increased contribution of responsible fisheries and aquaculture to world food supplies and food security.

In 2001, the Codex Alimentarius Commission, responsible for implementing the joint FAO/World Health Organization Food Standards Programme, agreed on the first global principles for the safety assessment of genetically modified foods, on maximum levels of certain food toxins and on guidelines for organic livestock production. FAO continued to provide member countries with information and technical assistance in the formulation and implementation of national food policies and nutrition programmes.

FAO continued to implement the Plan of Action of the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996,

p. 1129]. In addition, it engaged in activities to enhance the capacity of developing countries to analyse the implications of the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade agreements [YUN 1994, p. 1474] in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, and to take advantage of new trading opportunities.

FAO activities to achieve more productive and efficient use of the Earth's natural resources to meet current and future food and agricultural needs in a sustainable manner concentrated on six areas: natural resources assessment and planning; farming systems development; plant nutrition development and management; water development, management and conservation; soil management, conservation and reclamation; and sustaining the potential of natural resources.

FAO continued to provide technical assistance in plant breeding and the safe movement of germ plasm and associated systems. Its Global Strategy for the Management of Farm Animal Genetic Resources supported projects in Asia, sub-Saharan Africa and Europe. FAO assisted members to comply with the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights as it related to plant varieties, animal breeds, related technology and germ plasm.

FAO continued to function as an information centre, collecting, analysing, interpreting and disseminating information through various media. The World Agricultural Information Centre provided immediate access to FAO's bibliographical information documents and multimedia resources through the Internet and on CD-ROM.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, FAO staff numbered 3,542, of whom 1,499 were in the Professional or higher categories and 2,043 in the General Service category.

Budget

The regular programme budget for the 2000-2001 biennium was $650 million.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued in 2001 to promote cooperation in education, science, culture and communication among its member States.

The General Conference convened its thirty-first session (Paris, 15 October–3 November), at which it adopted the organization's 2002-2003 programme budget and 2002-2007 medium-term strategy. The 58-member Executive Board held its one hundred and sixty-first (28 May–13 June), one hundred and sixty-second (2-12 October) and one hundred and sixty-third (5-6 November) sessions, all in Paris.

The Bureau of Field Coordination launched the first phase of a streamlining exercise to enhance programme delivery and cost-effectiveness of the organization's network of field offices. It created 27 cluster offices to serve groups of member States and closed 18 national offices.

UNESCO membership remained at 188 in 2001.

Activities

Education

As follow-up to the 2000 World Education Forum [YUN 2000, p. 1416], UNESCO initiated steps to develop and publish generic criteria for assessing the credibility of national education for all (EFA) plans. The first EFA monitoring report was circulated at UNESCO's first high-level group meeting on EFA (Paris, 29-30 October), which adopted a communiqué requesting all partners to redouble their efforts to meet EFA goals. In addition, the development of an inter-agency cooperative programme on "Teachers and Quality" was approved, and, as part of the World Teachers' Day campaign, focus was placed on the issue of teacher shortages.

UNESCO continued to play a major convening role with regard to Chapter 36 of Agenda 21 [YUN 1992, p. 672], which addressed education for sustainable development. It participated in the preparations for the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development (see p. 749), worked with teachers and students worldwide, and developed partnerships that linked those concerned with sustainable development to the EFA movement. It also implemented national and subregional projects in Africa, Latin America and South-East Europe, with a view to mainstreaming education for human rights, peace and democracy within education systems.

Sciences

Under its programme of sciences in the service of development, UNESCO continued to promote the advancement, sharing and transfer of knowledge. It emphasized the fostering of synergies between the exact and natural sciences and the social and human sciences.

Natural sciences

In 2001, UNESCO's activities continued to focus on the advancement, sharing and transfer of scientific and technological knowledge, the training of scientists and the provision of advisory services and training programmes on science and technology policy-making and planning.

In conjunction with partners, UNESCO inaugurated the Arab Academy of Sciences (Beirut, Lebanon) and the Euro-Arab Research Network centre at Ajman University of Science and Technology (United Arab Emirates), and launched the Arab Open University and the Virtual University of Science and Technology (Jakarta, Indonesia).

In other activities, UNESCO designated 10 November as World Science Day for Peace and Development, in an effort to strengthen public support for science; awarded the first Great Man-Made River International Prize for Water Resources in Arid and Semi-Arid Areas, sponsored by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya; and signed an agreement with the Latin American Centre of Physics in Havana, Cuba, to create a regional laboratory.

UNESCO also organized and/or supported major conferences in Africa, including the African Conference on Scientific Education for Girls (Lusaka, Zambia, 18-22 June), which resulted in a 2001-2005 action plan on education for girls, and the African Forum on the Promotion of Renewable Energy in Africa (Niamey, Niger, 22-25 January).

UNESCO implemented the Urban Pollution of Superficial and Groundwater Aquifers programme in seven African cities within the framework of hydrology and water resources development in vulnerable environments. It approved the creation of the UNESCO/International Institute for Infrastructural, Hydraulic and Environmental Engineering Institute for Water Education in Delft, Netherlands; the Regional Centre for Urban Water Management in Tehran, Iran; and the Regional Centre on Water Resources Management in Arid Zones in Cairo, Egypt.

Social and human sciences

UNESCO continued to promote foresight and future-oriented studies, in particular through its publications Keys to the 21st Century, a first anthology of the 21st Century Talks series, and The World Ahead: Our Future in the Making, a forward-looking report on 20 major world issues. In 2001, the General Conference listed science and technology ethics among the five principal priorities of UNESCO's programme. UNESCO also participated in the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance (Durban, South Africa) (see p. 615), and drew attention to its 1993 Slave Route Project, which aimed to break the silence and tackle the denial of the plight of millions of victims of the slave trade.

In promoting women's human rights, UNESCO translated and distributed its "Passport to Equality" in several national languages. The Passport illustrated all 30 articles of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 889]. In that connection, a conference on women and human rights was organized (Mali), the aim of which was to introduce women to legislative instruments on human rights. UNESCO also launched the publication Education for a Culture of Peace by Betty Reardon, which received honourable mention in the UNESCO Prize for Peace Education in 2001, and organized a preview of the film "Kandahar" in an effort to raise awareness of women's condition in Afghanistan.

Youth-related activities included the General Conference Youth Forum (October) and the promotion of the International Year of Volunteers 2001 (see p. 814), an innovative approach to youth voluntary service.

Culture

At its 2001 session, the General Conference adopted the UNESCO Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity and its Action Plan, which emphasized respect for and revitalization of cultural diversity. It also adopted the UNESCO Convention on the Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage, as UNESCO continued to assert its role as coordinator of complex operations to safeguard heritage damaged by conflicts.

The General Conference launched the "Global Alliance for Cultural Diversity", a partnership initiative between public, private and civil society sectors that would build local capacity in creative industries to increase competitive participation in domestic and international markets and develop effective mechanisms to prevent piracy.

Communication

UNESCO promoted activities in favour of press freedom, notably the worldwide celebration of World Press Freedom Day on 3 May. It continued to implement some 180 operational communication projects. UNESCO also held regional workshops on its Programme for Creative Television, providing training, distribution and production opportunities.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, UNESCO had 2,140 full-time staff, of whom 1,005 were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,135 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The UNESCO General Conference, in 1999, had approved a budget of $544,367,250 for the 2000-2001 biennium. In 2001, it approved the same amount for the 2002-2003 biennium.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

In 2001 the World Health Organization (WHO) continued to implement its corporate strategy by addressing the burden of ill-health among poor populations; tracking and assessing risks to health and helping societies take action to reduce them; improving the performance of health systems and encouraging national policies that promoted health. The strategy also included WHO's core functions of eradicating epidemics and other diseases, research, the establishment of international conventions and regulations, partnership-building, innovation and the development and monitoring of norms and standards.

The World Health Assembly, WHO's governing body, at its fifty-fourth session (Geneva, 14-22 May), adopted resolutions on, among other issues, the global response to HIV/AIDS, infant and young child nutrition, a WHO medicines strategy, and epidemic alert and response. The one hundred and seventh session of the WHO Executive Board (Geneva, 15-23 January) discussed infant and child feeding, assessment of health systems performance, new international health regulations, nursing and midwifery, and schistosomiasis. The Board adopted a resolution calling for protection, promotion and support of breastfeeding and complementary feeding practices. The year 2001 marked the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the International Code of Marketing of Breast-milk Substitutes, and the Board called for the strengthening of national mechanisms to ensure global compliance with the Code. At the one hundred and eighth session (23-24 May), Board members discussed the need for transparency and participation in governing body meetings, in addition to other management matters.

The World Health Report 2001–Mental Health: New Understanding, New Hope focused on mental disorders, and was intended to help dismantle many of the barriers that prevented millions of people worldwide from receiving the necessary treatment. WHO also launched the mental health global action programme, a five-year initiative to close the gap between the resources needed to reduce the burden of mental disorders and those currently available.

In 2001, WHO membership remained at 191, with two associate members and four observers.

Health and development

In 2001, WHO continued to work with national health authorities around the world to achieve progress in health care policies, establish better health systems and provide improved health care, especially to those in greatest need. It emphasized health problems and diseases on the global level, especially in developing countries, offering strong support to the Stop Tuberculosis (TB) Partnership and the Global Plan to Stop TB. The Global TB Drug Facility was launched in 2001 and operated as a unique mechanism to ensure the uninterrupted provision of quality-assured anti-TB drugs for implementing DOTS (Directly Observed Treatment Short Course). In pursuing access to essential medicines and health care technologies for all countries, WHO worked in strong cooperation with the World Trade Organization, which discussed the question at its Fourth Ministerial Conference in November in Doha, Qatar.

The Commission on Macroeconomics and Health submitted a ground-breaking report in December, showing that a few health conditions were responsible for a high proportion of the avoidable deaths in poor countries and that well-targeted measures, using existing technologies, could save the lives of about 8 million people per year and generate yearly economic benefits of more than $360 billion by 2015-2020. The Commission was made up of 18 leading economic and health experts. WHO reached agreement with publishing houses to make many medical and scientific journals available on the Internet at no or low cost to developing countries.

Disease trends and control efforts

A record number of 168 member States participated in November in the third session of negotiations on the framework convention on tobacco control. The convention, which would provide a set of rules and regulations to govern the spread of tobacco and tobacco products, was scheduled to be ready for adoption by August 2003.

WHO continued to support countries in fighting malaria, offering technical guidance and helping local institutions undertake the applied research necessary to assess the national malaria situation. With WHO support, the Roll Back Ma-alaria Partnership had enabled over 30 countries to draw up strategies for increasing their investment in support of halting the spread of the disease. WHO also provided a range of technical and administrative services to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria.

Secretariat

At the end of 2001, WHO had a staff of 3,436, including 1,351 in the Professional and higher categories and 2,085 in the General Service category.

Budget

The World Health Assembly adopted a budget of $842.6 million for the 2002-2003 biennium, the same as the previous biennium. Extra budgetary resources for 2002-2003 were expected to grow by 25 per cent.

NOTE: For further details of WHO activities, see the World Health Report 2001 and 2002, published by the organization.

Chapter VI

World Bank (IBRD and IDA)

The World Bank consisted of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA) (see below). Collectively, the following five institutions were known as the World Bank Group: IBRD, IDA, the International Finance Corporation, the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) and the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

In fiscal 2001 (1 July 2000–30 June 2001), the World Bank continued to promote sustainable economic development by providing loans, guarantees and related technical assistance for projects and programmes in developing nations. Within the context of the Bank's central objective of poverty reduction, key focal points of its assistance were human development, infrastructure, finance and private sector development, agriculture and environment, and public sector management.

In collaboration with partners, the Bank launched the multi-country HIV/AIDS programme (MAP) for Africa, the first of its kind. Under MAP, flexible and rapid funding would be committed, on IDA terms, to individual HIV/AIDS projects developed by countries. The Bank also developed and presented to the Board of Executive Directors in 2001 a new Strategic Framework Paper and a Strategic Directions Paper that set out two inter-related objectives: building the climate for investment, jobs and sustainable growth; and empowering poor people to participate in development.

By the end of fiscal 2001, IBRD membership had increased to 183 countries.

Lending operations

In 2001, IBRD continued to promote sustainable development through loans, guarantees and non-lending, including analytical and advisory services. As at 30 June 2001, its cumulative lending totalled $360 billion.

Gross IBRD disbursement in fiscal 2001 totalled $11.8 billion, a decrease of nearly 12 per cent from fiscal 2000. The Bank's loan commitment decreased to $10.5 billion in 2001 for 91 new operations compared to $10.9 billion in 2000 for 97 new operations. The share of adjustment lending declined to 38 per cent in fiscal 2001, down from 41 per cent in 2000 and 63 per cent in 1999, approaching pre-East Asia crisis levels. However, the quality of IBRD operations continued to improve, with fewer ongoing projects at risk of not achieving their development objectives.

IBRD lending commitments in fiscal 2001 were highest in Latin America and the Caribbean ($4.8 billion), followed by Europe and Central Asia ($2.2 billion). The share of education, health/nutrition/population and social protection lending increased to 21 per cent ($2.2 billion) from 16 per cent ($1.7 billion) in fiscal 2000. Lending also helped to strengthen the financial sector ($1.7 billion), improve public sector management ($1.4 billion), meet infrastructure needs ($2.7 billion, including $2.4 billion in the transport sector) and support the environment and rural development ($1.3 billion).

The five largest borrowers were China ($19.1 billion), Mexico ($14.7 billion), Indonesia ($13.4 billion), India ($11.3 billion) and Argentina ($11.1 billion).

International Development Association

Established in 1960 as the Bank's concessional lending arm, IDA provided interest-free loans and other services to low-income countries to reduce poverty and improve the quality of life. In 2001, 78 countries were eligible for IDA assistance; IDA credits totalled $6.8 billion for 134 new operations in 57 countries compared with $4.4 billion in 2000. Contributing to that rise was $1.4 billion in new commitments to three countries (Ethiopia, Kenya, Pakistan) that had not received new IDA financing in fiscal 2000. In 2001, adjustment lending increased to 27 per cent from 16 per cent in 2000 as a result of large adjustment loans, including the first two poverty reduction support credits (PRSCs) approved for Uganda and Viet Nam. The Bank introduced PRSCs to help low-income countries implement policy and institutional reforms drawn from their poverty reduction strategy papers (PRSPs).

At the end of fiscal 2001, IDA membership had increased to 162 countries.

Fiscal 2001, was the second of the three years of the twelfth replenishment of IDA, which provided resources for new financing commitments during fiscal 2000-2002 [YUN 2000, p. 1421].

In fiscal 2001, lending increased in all regions except the Middle East and North Africa. Of the total new commitments of $6.8 billion, the African region received 50 per cent ($3.4 billion), as a result of several new programmes that included a concerted response to HIV/AIDS and post-conflict reconstruction support. Ethiopia was the largest IDA borrower ($667 million), followed by Viet Nam ($629 million) and India ($520 million). IDA support for human development, including education, health/nutrition/population and social protection, reached $2.2 billion, representing a $600 million increase compared to fiscal 2000. Other priorities were economic reform and public sector management ($1.3 billion), infrastructure development ($0.9 billion), finance and private sector development ($1 billion) and rural development and the environment ($1 billion).

International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes

ICSID, established in 1966, continued to encourage foreign investment by providing international facilities for conciliation and arbitration of investment disputes. In 2001, 12 new cases were registered with the Centre. ICSID also undertook research and publishing activities in arbitration and foreign investment law.

In 2001, ICSID membership totalled 134.

Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency

MIGA, established in 1988, continued to encourage the flow of foreign direct investment to its developing member countries by providing investment guarantees against non-commercial risks. The Agency also provided technical assistance to help developing countries disseminate information on investment opportunities.

In fiscal 2001, MIGA had 154 members and issued $2 billion in guarantee coverage, for a cumulative total of $9.1 billion.

World Bank Institute

In 2001, the World Bank Institute reached some 48,000 participants in nearly 150 countries through some 600 training activities in its efforts to empower people through knowledge- and capacity-building. It scaled up its programmes through distance learning, global knowledge networks and extended partnerships, and by harnessing the newest learning technologies. A new initiative, the Attacking Poverty Programme, supported the building of national capacity to prepare and implement PRSPs.

Scholarships

The joint Japan/World Bank Graduate Scholarship Programme awarded 130 scholarships to individuals applying for advanced studies in fields related to public policy-making.

In 2001, the Robert S. McNamara Fellowship Programme awarded 25 postgraduate fellowships for study in such areas as collaborative approaches to forest management in Indonesia and options for developing educational opportunities for the disabled in urban communities in Bangladesh.

Co-financing

In fiscal 2001, co-financing amounted to $5.47 billion, a decrease of $3.83 billion compared to the previous year. Bilateral and multilateral partners continued to be the largest source of co-financing, accounting for 85 per cent of the total share. Major co-financing partners included the Inter-American Development Bank ($1.9 billion), the Japan Bank for International Cooperation ($0.53 billion) and Kreditanstalt für Wiederaufbau ($0.3 billion). By region, the majority of co-financing went to Latin America and the Caribbean ($3.4 billion), followed by Africa ($1.12 billion) and Europe and Central Asia ($0.46 billion). The major sectors that attracted co-financing were public sector management ($1.2 billion), finance ($1 billion) and oil and gas ($0.9 billion).

In addition to co-financing of $5.47 billion, $2 billion was committed under the Strategic Partnership with Africa Framework.

Financing activities

During fiscal 2001, IBRD raised $17 billion in medium- and long-term debt, compared to $15.8 billion the previous year. It issued debt in nine currencies and in a wide range of maturities and structures. Diversification helped lower borrowers' funding costs and expanded IBRD's investor base.

As at 30 June 2001, outstanding borrowings totalled $111.5 billion, after swaps.

Capitalization

As at 30 June 2001, the total subscribed capital of IBRD was $189.5 billion, or 99 per cent of its authorized capital of $190.8 billion. Outstanding loans and callable guarantees totalled $118.9 billion, or 62 per cent of IBRD's statutory lending limit.

Income, expenditures and reserves

IBRD's gross revenues totalled $10 billion in fiscal 2001, equalling fiscal 2000. Net income amounted to $1.49 billion, down from $1.99 billion in fiscal 2000. Expenses increased to $8.9 billion, compared to $8.1 billion a year earlier. Administrative costs fell to $859 million, from $935 million in 2000. At the end of fiscal 2001, the Bank's liquid asset portfolio was $24.2 billion, equalling fiscal year 2000.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 2001, IBRD's regular, fixed-term and long-term consultants, and long-term temporary staff in Washington, D.C., and local offices numbered 8,507.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), part of the World Bank Group, continued in fiscal 2001 (1 July 2000–30 June 2001) to promote growth in developing countries, by financing private sector investments, helping to mobilize capital in the international financial markets and providing technical assistance and advice to Governments and businesses.

IFC pursued investment in fiscal 2001 under challenging circumstances—private capital flows to emerging markets continued to be depressed, private debt flows declined and lenders tended to be short-term oriented while concentrating on large, well-established businesses. Since demand for IFC services remained high under those conditions, IFC focused its resources where it could promote the strongest development impact. Over 40 per cent of its investments for its own account were in low-income or high-risk countries and over 70 per cent in its priority sectors.

During fiscal 2001, IFC membership increased to 175.

Financial and advisory services

In fiscal 2001, IFC's Board of Directors approved $5.4 billion in financing for 240 new projects in 75 countries, compared with $5.8 billion for 259 projects in 81 countries in fiscal 2000. Total project cost of the enterprises supported by IFC amounted to more than $16.4 billion, down from $21.1 billion the previous year.

Direct investment in small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) was de-emphasized in favour of mobilization and intermediary investment that could create models to leverage resources more effectively. IFC committed or approved support for SMEs through corporate-linked transactions, credit lines and other loans to banks in all regions. As part of its financial focus on SMEs, IFC launched a global initiative in e-finance.

In fiscal 2001, 117 advisory assignments, in more than 50 countries and regions received some $17 million. IFC continued to provide advisory services towards building institutional capacity, establishing commercial microfinance institutions, developing secondary mortgage markets and leasing, legal and regulatory market assessments.

The Private Sector Advisory Services, established in 2000 when IFC and World Bank advisory services were integrated, advised Government and State-owned enterprises on privatization transactions and projects that were commercially viable and environmentally and socially responsible. In fiscal 2001, focus was placed on developing activities in Eastern Europe and Southern Africa.

Cumulative contributions to the IFC-managed technical assistance trust fund (TATF) programme totalled $582 million in fiscal 2001, compared to $525 million in fiscal 2000. Projects supported by TATF in 2001 included advice on privatization, environmental policy, capacity-building and corporate governance practices.

Regional projects

IFC approved 240 new projects in 75 countries in fiscal 2001.

In sub-Saharan Africa, IFC focused on the financial sector, infrastructure, SMEs, and tourism. It approved 45 projects in 17 countries in fiscal 2001, compared to 80 projects in 25 countries in fiscal 2000. As at 30 June 2001, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $1.8 billion, up from $1.5 billion in fiscal 2000.

In Asia and the Pacific in fiscal 2001, IFC provided credit enhancement, completed restructuring transactions, and supported financial institutions in crisis-affected countries. It approved 65 projects in 15 countries compared to 54 projects in 12 countries in fiscal 2000. As at 30 June 2001, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $6.5 billion, down from $6.8 billion in fiscal 2000.

In Europe and Central Asia, IFC increased its emphasis on sectors and countries with the most acute need, providing assistance in legal and regulatory reform and in the improvement of management capabilities and governance practices. IFC established a regional hub in Istanbul, Turkey, to enhance operations in Southern Europe and Central Asia. The particularly difficult constraints on private sector development in the former Soviet Union countries were addressed through a technical assistance unit, the Private Enterprise Partnership. IFC established a regional programme in Central Asia to assist borrowers in developing management information and automated accounting systems, and invested in the Central Asian Early Stage Investment Fund, a venture capital fund. As European Union accession neared for many Central European countries, IFC modified its regional strategy; it withdrew from sectors and lines of business where the private sector was ready to take over, focused on socially and environmentally sensitive sectors and stressed its catalytic role in attracting foreign direct investments (FDI) into the region. It approved 58 projects in 23 countries in fiscal 2001, compared to 47 projects in 19 countries in fiscal 2000. As at 30 June 2001, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $3.3 billion, down from $3.7 billion in fiscal 2000.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, with the demand for services far exceeding financial resources, IFC financed businesses where private sector participation could provide a visible impact on living standards, SMEs and firms with high growth and employment impact. Project areas included education, health and housing. IFC also provided credit lines and loans to banking institutions to build their capacity to serve small and mid-size companies. An IFC regional office was opened in Bogotá, Colombia. IFC approved 54 projects in 14 countries in fiscal 2001, compared to 58 projects in 15 countries in fiscal 2000. As at 30 June 2001, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $8.5 billion, down from $8.9 billion in fiscal 2000.

In the Middle East and North Africa, IFC promoted broader private sector participation, particularly in infrastructure and financial markets. In fiscal 2001, it participated in large infrastructure projects, small information technology companies, large capital market investments and institution-building investments in the financial sector. It approved 15 projects in 6 countries in fiscal 2001, compared to 16 projects in 10 countries in fiscal 2000. As at 30 June 2001, IFC's committed portfolio, including loans and investments, totalled $1.6 billion, up from $997 million in fiscal 2000.

Foreign Investment Advisory Service

The Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS), jointly operated by IFC and the World

Bank, continued to assist Governments in policy design and institution development, in order to attract FDI.

In fiscal 2001, FIAS completed 48 advisory projects, of which 10 dealt with reviewing the legal framework for FDI, nine with reducing the administrative barriers to FDI, and five with diagnosing and identifying a country's main policy impediments to attracting productive FDI. FIAS also conducted six regional projects for groups of countries to coordinate their FDI strategies and investment promotion activities.

Financial performance

In fiscal 2001, IFC's net income was $345 million, compared to $380 million in fiscal 2000. The loan portfolio recorded a net loss of $11 million. The equity and quasi-equity portfolios also recorded a net operating loss of $10 million, compared to net operating income of $191 million in fiscal 2000. Net operating income from IFC's invested net worth and treasury activities totalled $280 million.

IFC's committed portfolio at the end of the fiscal year was $14.3 billion, up from $13.5 billion in fiscal 2000. The portfolio consisted of loans, equity investments, guarantees and risk management products in 1,378 companies in 117 countries.

Capital and retained earnings

As at 30 June 2001, IFC's net worth reached $6.1 billion, compared to $5.8 billion at the end of fiscal 2000.

As at 31 December 2001, IFC employed almost 2,000 staff, of whom about 70 per cent worked at its headquarters and about 30 per cent were stationed in over 80 IFC field offices.

Chapter VIII

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

During 2001, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) engaged in a process of reform, while advancing its operational work, by establishing an Independent Evaluation Office to enhance transparency and accountability of its activities; strengthening its surveillance work, notably in the area of financial sector assessments through the joint IMF-World Bank Financial Sector Assessment Programme; disseminating international standards and codes of good practice; and updating its lending policies. IMF focused on financial crisis prevention among its members, and established a new International Capital Markets Department to improve its understanding of financial markets and financial flows. It also made some progress towards a framework agreement on the involvement of the private sector in crisis prevention and management. IMF continued to implement the strategy for poverty reduction and growth facility (PRGF) for its low-income member countries, and to assist the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) through debt relief. In addition, it assessed offshore financial centres and enhanced its contribution to international efforts to combat money-laundering.

During fiscal 2001 (1 May 2000–30 April 2001), IMF membership increased to 183.

IMF facilities and policies

In fiscal 2001, IMF updated its lending policies and policy conditionality to ensure that they met member country needs. Regular lending facilities were restructured to allow more effective support in crisis resolution, prevent crises arising from contagion and ensure a more efficient use of IMF financial resources; policy conditionality was streamlined to increase effectiveness and promote strong country ownership of IMF-supported programmes. IMF also reaffirmed its role in promoting good governance in member countries.

The IMF Executive Board agreed on several measures to sharpen the focus of IMF lending on crisis resolution and prevention by making the contingent credit line facility more attractive to potential users; encouraging early repayment and discouraging excessive use of IMF loans; and by strengthening the monitoring of countries' economic policies after conclusion of IMF-supported programmes.

IMF provided concessional financing to help low-income countries to boost their economic growth through PRGF and the HIPC Initiative.

Financial assistance

New IMF lending commitments in fiscal 2001 totalled 14.5 billion special drawing rights (SDR) compared with SDR 23.5 billion in fiscal 2000, reflecting favourable global economic and financial conditions. Members' drawings of IMF general resources amounted to SDR 9.5 billion compared with SDR 6.3 billion in fiscal 2000.

IMF approved nine new standby arrangements totalling SDR 2.1 billion and one new extended fund facility arrangement for the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia for SDR 24 million. Drawings under PRGF for poor countries increased to SDR 0.6 billion, compared with SDR 0.5 billion in fiscal 2000. Emergency post-conflict assistance was provided to the Congo, Sierra Leone and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY) in the amount of SDR 138 million.

As at 30 April 2001, 25 standby arrangements, 12 extended arrangements and 43 PRGF arrangements were in effect with members, while outstanding IMF credit amounted to SDR 48.7 billion, compared with SDR 50.4 billion a year earlier.

Liquidity

The Fund's liquidity position continued to improve due to the 1999 increases in members' quotas under the Eleventh General Review [YUN 1999, p. 1404].

As at 30 April, IMF's usable resources totalled SDR 112.1 billion, an increase of SDR 3.9 billion over 2000. Net uncommitted usable resources totalled SDR 78.7 billion at the end of fiscal 2001, compared with SDR 74.8 billion in fiscal 2000.

The Fund's liquid liabilities totalled SDR 46.7 billion, compared with SDR 48.8 billion a year earlier, while the ratio of the Fund's net uncommitted resources to its liabilities increased to 168.4 per cent at the end of April 2001, from 153 per cent a year earlier.

SDR activity

In fiscal 2001, total transfers of SDRs declined to SDR 18.7 billion from SDR 22.9 billion in fiscal 2000. Transfers of SDRs among participants and prescribed holders fell to SDR 6.8 billion in 2001, from SDR 7.8 billion a year earlier.

Transfers from participants to the general resources account (GRA) declined to SDR 5.8 billion from SDR 7.1 billion in 2000, reflecting a fall in quota payments, lower use of SDRs in repayments of IMF credit and a decline in charges. Drawings from IMF in SDRs decreased to SDR 3.2 billion from SDR 3.6 billion in fiscal 2000, representing the largest category of transfers from the GRA, followed by remuneration payments of SDR 1.8 billion to members with creditor positions.

IMF holdings of SDRs in the GRA declined to SDR 2.4 billion at the end of fiscal 2001, from SDR 2.7 billion a year earlier. SDRs held by prescribed holders decreased by SDR 0.2 billion. SDR holdings by participants increased slightly to SDR 18.6 billion, from SDR 18.1 billion in fiscal 2000. SDR holdings of industrial countries and net creditor countries relative to their net cumulative allocation increased from a year earlier, mainly due to large interest (remuneration) payments made to those members. SDR holdings of non-industrial members decreased to 54.6 per cent of their net cumulative allocations from 62.5 per cent a year earlier, mainly as a result of repayments and payments of interest charges on loans from the GRA.

Policy on arrears

As at 30 April 2001, obligations to IMF declined slightly to SDR 2.24 billion from SDR 2.32 billion a year earlier. Afghanistan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Iraq, Liberia, Somalia and the Sudan remained ineligible to use IMF's general resources. Declarations of non-cooperation were still in effect for the DRC and Liberia. IMF reinstated the Sudan's voting rights upon its compliance with payment commitments, while FRY cleared its arrears in December, prior to succeeding to the membership in IMF of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Technical assistance and training

In fiscal 2001, technical assistance and training accounted for some 18.5 per cent of IMF's total administrative expenses. Demand for such assistance remained strong and continued to focus on fiscal, monetary, statistical and legal aspects. New guidelines on planning and monitoring technical assistance were issued during fiscal 2001 to ensure adherence to management's priorities for allocating and delivering technical assistance. As part of its information dissemination programme, IMF also published comprehensive annual reports on technical assistance activities.

The IMF Institute continued to expand its training in different parts of the world, delivering 108 courses and seminars to some 3,464 officials. In May, it established a regional training centre for Latin American countries and Portuguese-speaking African countries in Brasilia, Brazil, in collaboration with the Brazilian Government. The Institute also increased the number of distance learning courses on financial programming and policies, and courses on financial sector issues, introduced in fiscal 2000, had become part of the regular curriculum.

Secretariat

As at December 2001, IMF employed 2,633 staff members, of whom 1,846 were Professional staff and 787 assistant staff.

Budget

The Fund's administrative budget for fiscal 2001 was approved at $689.9 million ($650.9 million net of estimated reimbursements). The approved capital budget of $50.6 million included $23.5 million for building facility projects and $27.1 million for information technology projects. Actual administrative expenses during the fiscal year totalled $638 million and capital project disbursements totalled $34.6 million.

Chapter IX

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) continued in 2001 to promote the safety and efficiency of civil air transport by prescribing standards and recommending practices and procedures for facilitating civil aviation operations. Its objectives were set forth in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation, adopted in Chicago, Illinois, United States, in 1944, known as the Chicago Convention.

In 2001, domestic and international scheduled traffic of the world's airlines decreased to some 385.4 billion tonne-kilometres, the first decrease since 1991. The airlines carried about 1.62 billion passengers and some 28.7 million tonnes of freight. The passenger load factor on scheduled services in 2001 decreased to 69 per cent. Air-freight decreased by 6 per cent to 110.7 billion tonne-kilometres, and airmail traffic decreased by 13 per cent to 5.3 billion tonne-kilometres. Reported monthly figures suggested that, up to September 2001, there had been little change in overall passenger/freight/mail tonne-kilometres over the same period in 2000; however, following the 11 September terrorist attacks in the United States (see p. 60), data for 2001 showed a total traffic decrease.

The thirty-third ICAO Assembly (Montreal, Canada, 25 September–5 October) elected a new Council and adopted 31 resolutions dealing with safety and security and other issues of international civil aviation. In the light of the 11 September terrorist attacks, the Assembly adopted a resolution strongly condemning the misuse of civil aircraft as weapons of destruction and calling for strengthened programmes of aviation security measures by States and ICAO.

The Council of ICAO held three regular sessions in 2001. In September, it made preparations for the ICAO Assembly's review of the organization's current policy regarding aviation security. On 22 October, the Council established a Special Group on Aviation War Risk Insurance, which held its first meeting in Montreal on 6 and 7 December. At the Assembly's request, the Council decided in November to convene a ministerial conference on aviation security in February 2002.

ICAO celebrated International Civil Aviation Day (7 December) under the theme "Flight Between Nations—Dialogue Between Peoples".

In 2001, ICAO membership increased to 187 countries.

Activities

Air navigation

ICAO continued to update and implement international specifications and regional plans, with particular emphasis on the introduction of communications, navigation and surveillance/air traffic management (CNS/ATM) systems. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices (SARPs) contained in 18 technical annexes to the 1944 Chicago Convention and Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS). Following the 11 September attacks in the United States, further efforts were made to better integrate safety and security aspects of civil aviation in the specifications.

The fifth meeting of the Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (8–17 January) and the eighteenth meeting of the Dangerous Goods Panel (15–25 October) made recommendations to amend ICAO standards. ICAO introduced new requirements for certification of aerodromes by States, which placed greater emphasis on compliance with the applicable SARPs to ensure safety of aircraft operations at aerodromes. The certification requirement would facilitate expansion of ICAO's Universal Safety Oversight Audit Programme to aerodromes, as authorized by the ICAO Assembly's thirty-third session.

Other projects that were given special attention in 2001 included accident investigation; accident and incident data reporting; accident prevention; aerodrome rescue and fire fighting; the aeronautical electromagnetic spectrum, with particular regard to the development of ICAO's position for the International Telecommunication Union's World Radiocommunication Conference (2003); aeronautical information services; aeronautical meteorology; assistance to aircraft accident victims and their families; aviation environmental matters; certification of aerodromes; satellite navigation; and flight safety and human factors.

Air transport

ICAO's air transport programmes were directed towards economic analysis, policy, forecasting and planning; collection and publication of air transport statistics; airport and route facility management; economic and organizational aspects of CNS/ATM systems coordination; economic aspects of environmental protection; the promotion of greater facilitation in international air transport; and aviation security.

The Council, and subsequently the Assembly, endorsed the establishment of an International Financial Facility for Aviation Safety with the objective of financing safety-related projects for which States could not otherwise provide or obtain the financial resources. It also adopted an amendment to annex 17 (security) to the Chicago Convention, which would become effective and applicable in 2002. The amendment included the introduction of various definitions and new provisions in relation to, among others, international cooperation relating to threat information, passengers and their cabin baggage, and in-flight security personnel and protection of the cockpit.

ICAO continued to provide secretariat services to three regional aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

Legal matters

On 24 December, ICAO deposited an act with the United Nations, formally confirming the 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006].

The Secretariat Study Group on Unruly Passengers, at its fifth meeting (Montreal, 19-20 April), finalized its work on the draft Model Legislation on Certain Offences Committed on Board Civil Aircraft and the guidance material accompanying the legislation. The model legislation was adopted at the thirty-third session of the ICAO Assembly.

The Diplomatic Conference to Adopt a Mobile Equipment Convention and an Aircraft Protocol (Cape Town, South Africa, 29 October– 16 November), adopted the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment and the Protocol to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment on Matters Specific to Aircraft Equipment.

Technical cooperation

In 2001, the ICAO technical cooperation programme undertook 125 projects in 88 developing countries. The programme, financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), trust funds, management service agreements and the Civil Aviation Purchasing Service, had total expenditures of $100.7 million. Some 51 per cent of that amount was provided by Governments to fund their own projects on the basis of cost sharing with UNDP.

A total of 583 fellowships were awarded in 2001, of which 548 were implemented. Under a joint programme with Singapore, 100 training awards were provided for 2001-2003 in the area of safety. In addition, 41 scholarships in air navigation services were provided by the Czech Republic.

ICAO employed 414 experts from 35 countries, of whom 94 were on assignment under UNDP and 320 on trust fund projects. There were 89 Governments and organizations registered with ICAO in 2001 under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Service. Equipment purchases in 2001 totalled $89.3 million, compared to $20.5 million in 2000. ICAO had resident missions in 34 countries.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, ICAO employed 778 staff members, including 336 in the Professional and higher categories and 442 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

Appropriations for the ICAO budget in 2001 were $55,174,000.

Chapter X

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

In 2001, the Universal Postal Union (UPU) continued to promote a fast and reliable universal postal service at affordable prices through international collaboration among its member countries. Activities focused on postal reform and the future development of the Union, with special attention to the needs of developing countries.

UPU's 189 member countries remained the largest physical distribution network in the world, with more than 5 million postal employees working in some 600,000 post offices worldwide.

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, UPU's supreme legislative authority, met every five years. It last convened in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1408]. In 2001, the High Level Group on the Future Development of UPU (HLG) presented a two-year study on the reform of UPU's structure and on its mission, decision-making process and financing. HLG concluded that a consultative committee should be created for private-sector postal stakeholders—private express couriers, international mailers, equipment manufacturers and suppliers, trade unions and non-governmental organizations—and that committee members should be permitted to participate in UPU's major governing bodies.

Council of Administration

The Council of Administration, which ensured the continuity of UPU's work between Congresses and studied regulatory, administrative and legal issues, held its annual session in Berne, Switzerland (18-26 October). It took action on HLG recommendations and on combating terrorism.

Postal Operations Council

The Postal Operations Council (POC) dealt with the operational, economic and commercial aspects of international postal services, assisting them to modernize and upgrade their products, including letter post, express mail service, postal parcels and postal financial services. At its annual session (Berne, 18-27 April), POC adopted decisions concerning amendments to the Letter Post and Parcel Post Regulations, the election of the new Quality of Service Fund Board of Trustees and the Fund's management and secretariat functions.

International Bureau

The International Bureau provided support, liaison, information and consultation to the postal administrations of member countries. It continued to act as a clearing house for the settlement of various inter-administration charges related to the exchange of postal items and international reply coupons and studied developments in the postal environment, monitored the global quality of postal service and published information and statistics on international postal services. Its Postal Technology Centre managed the postal application of electronic data interchange.

As at 31 December 2001, the permanent staff members of the Bureau numbered 170, of whom 78 were in the Professional and higher categories and 92 were in the General Service category.

Budget

Under UPU's self-financing system, contributions were payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. The Council of Administration approved a budget of 71.4 million Swiss francs for the 2001-2002 biennium.

Chapter XI

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) continued in 2001 to promote development and efficient operation of telecommunication systems and to provide technical assistance.

At its annual session (Geneva, 18-29 June), the ITU Council discussed, among other things, ITU reform, the 2003-2007 ITU strategic plan and satellite network filings. It also adopted a resolution endorsing the proposal by the ITU Secretary-General to hold the World Summit on the Information Society in two phases, with the first phase to be held in Geneva in 2003 and the second in Tunis, Tunisia, in 2005. The General Assembly, in resolution 56/183 of 21 December, welcomed the Council's resolution (see p. 764).

During the year, the Union staged the third World Telecommunication Policy Forum (Geneva, 7-9 March) on the topic of voice-over internet protocol (IP) and ITU TELECOM AFRICA 2001 (Johannesburg, South Africa, 12-16 November), the fifth regional telecommunication exhibition and forum for Africa. The exhibition attracted over 15,000 professionals from more than 100 countries, and more than 200 exhibitors from the telecommunication, information technology and audio-visual entertainment fields. Other conferences included the fourth meeting of the Working Group on ITU Reform (Salvador de Bahia, Brazil, 2-6 April); the second annual Global Symposium for Regulators (Geneva, 3-5 December); and the Joint ITU/World Intellectual Property Organization Multilingual Domain Names Symposium (Geneva, 6-7 December).

The Internet Training Centres Initiative for Developing Countries was launched; by the end of the year, 20 of the 50 planned centres were operational, providing training to engineers.

ITU membership remained at 189 in 2001.

Radiocommunication Sector

ITU's Radiocommunication Sector (ITU-R) continued in 2001 to develop operational procedures and technical characteristics for terrestrial and space-based wireless services and systems. ITU-R study groups prepared new and revised recommendations for many services, including spectrum management, fixed-satellite and broadcasting, and held preparatory meetings for the 2003 World Radiocommunication Conference (WRC) and Radiocommunication Assembly.

An ITU-R study group was chosen to focus on revising the 1961 Stockholm Agreement [YUN 1961, p. 651] to enable the introduction of digital sound and television broadcasting. ITU-R finalized the contents of the 2001 edition of the Radio Regulations, including all 2000 WRC [YUN 2000, p. 1433] amendments and decisions. A major achievement for ITU-R was the completion of a two-year (2002-2003) operational plan for improved linkages between strategic, financial and operational planning. The plan would result in a more effective management of the Radiocommunication Bureau's limited resources.

Telecommunication Standardization Sector

During 2001, the Telecommunication Standardization Sector (ITU-T) continued to ensure an efficient and on-time production of high-quality standards covering all fields of telecommunications. It streamlined its work in data networks, open system communications and telecommunication software; organized an informal forum summit (Geneva, 3-4 December) to improve cooperation with forums and consortia; and organized workshops, seminars and study group meetings worldwide.

ITU-T launched the Alternative Approval Process, a fast-track approval procedure for technical standards. Of 244 recommendations received in 2001, 69 per cent were approved in less than six weeks, compared with previous approval times of nine months to four years. Other initiatives included an IP project aimed at addressing the provision of voice, video and data, and a quality-of-service project, designed to establish best practices for service providers.

Telecommunication Development Sector

The Telecommunication Development Sector (ITU-D) continued in 2001 to promote investment and foster expansion of telecommunication infrastructure in developing countries. The Telecommunication Development Advisory Group met twice in 2001, in February and October. At its first meeting, it discussed ITU-D reform, the 2002 World Telecommunication Development Conference (WTDC), digital divide initiatives, and gender issues, among other topics. At its second meeting, it discussed various issues, including the analysis of the implementation of the Valetta Action Plan [YUN 1998, p. 1400] and priority objectives of the 2002 operational plan.

The Telecommunication Development Bureau (BDT), the administrative arm of ITU-D, continued to provide assistance to countries in reforming and restructuring of their telecommunication sectors by introducing new technologies, developing the human resources necessary to ensure sustainability in management and operations, and promoting financing and partnerships as a strategy to attract investment into the sectors. BDT also organized a global symposium for regulators (Geneva, 3-5 December), which resulted in a four-point action plan to assist regulators in developing the tools needed for effective regulation: a focus on skills training, developing benchmarks and models, bolstering regional and subregional initiatives, and broadening input beyond the community of regulators. To engage the global regulatory community in sharing best practices and learning, ITU, through BDT, launched the Global Regulators Exchange.

In preparation for the 2002 WTDC, BDT also held regional preparatory meetings in Asia and the Pacific, Africa and Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, ITU had 783 staff members, comprising 5 elected officials, 314 in the Professional and higher categories and 464 in the General Service category.

Budget

The budget for ITU in 2000-2001 amounted to 332,621,000 Swiss francs (SwF). The ITU Council set the 2002-2003 budget at 341,947,736 SwF.

Chapter XII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

In 2001, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) continued to facilitate worldwide co-operation in the generation and exchange of meteorological and hydrological information and the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems and agriculture. It also promoted operational hydrology and encouraged research and training in meteorology.

The WMO Executive Council, at its fifty-third session (Geneva, 5-15 June), reviewed the organization's programmes and activities, including co-ordination in the UN system of geosciences and their applications for the benefit of humankind; free and unrestricted exchange of international meteorological and hydrological data and products; climate-related matters; hydrology and water resources; and the role and operation of national meteorological and hydrological services.

WMO's membership remained at 179 States and six Territories in 2001.

World Weather Watch Programme

The World Weather Watch (WWW) Programme, the backbone of WMO scientific and technical programmes, provided meteorological data and products to member States. WWW offered up-to-the-minute worldwide weather information, analyses and forecasts through its Global Observing System (GOS), Global Telecommunications System (GTS), Global Data-processing System and data management and system support activities, collectively known as the basic systems. It also included the Tropical Cyclone Programme, the Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme and WMO satellite and environmental emergency response activities.

WMO's main objectives in implementing WWW continued to be the redesign of GOS and the strengthening of the system's infrastructure in developing countries, particularly in Africa. The implementation of GTS components continued, and efforts were made to consolidate the Regional Meteorological Data Communication Strategy in Africa and improve Asia's meteorological telecommunication network. A similar effort was under way in the Americas.

An expert meeting on rainfall intensity measurements (Bratislava, Slovakia, 23-25 April) developed proposals on the standardization of such measurements. In May/June, the WMO Inter-comparison of Global Positioning System Radiosondes was held at the Brazilian Air Force Satellite/Rocket Launch Centre in Alcantara. A working group on surface measurements (Geneva, 27-31 August) addressed the increasing automation of observations. To strengthen collaboration between instrument manufacturers and WMO, the Association of Hydrometeorological Equipment Industry was being established.

During 2001, the Tropical Cyclone Programme helped to restructure or update the technical plans of the five tropical cyclone regional centres—Miami, Florida (United States), Nadi (Fiji), New Delhi (India), Réunion and Tokyo (Japan). The Typhoon Committee, in close coordination with WMO, organized a workshop on typhoon forecasting research (Cheju Island, Republic of Korea, 25-28 September) and awarded three research fellowships. A workshop on hurricane forecasting and warning and public weather services was held (Miami, 23 April-5 May).

World Climate Programme

The Executive Council's Advisory Group on Climate and Environment (Tehran, Iran, March) recognized, among other things, the need for country-focused approaches when seeking funds for climate and environmental activities.

The Commission for Climatology (Geneva, 21-30 November) agreed to focus its activities for the next four years on climate data and data management, analysis of climate variability and change, and climate applications, information and prediction services.

The World Climate Research Programme, undertaken jointly by WMO, the International Council of Scientific Unions and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, continued studies to provide the scientific basis for predictions of global and regional climate variations and made projections of the magnitude and rate of human-induced climate change. A principal project was an appraisal of the concentration, distribution and variability of water vapour in the upper troposphere and lower stratosphere. Work began on large-format atlases of the physical and chemical properties of the global ocean.

Progress continued in the climate variability and predictability study, which included an investigation of the variability of the American monsoon system, among others. Two regional workshops were organized (Kingston, Jamaica, January; Casablanca, Morocco, February) to prepare climate-change indices for the Caribbean and North Africa, respectively.

Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme

The Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme coordinated and encouraged research in atmospheric and related sciences. The tenth session of the Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS) Advisory Working Group met (Guilin, China, May) to prepare for the thirteenth session of CAS in February 2002. The World Weather Research Programme organized a workshop on verification of quantitative precipitation forecasts (Prague, Czech Republic, 14-16 May) to review existing verification methodologies for high-impact weather events associated with flooding, and to develop recommendations for use by the expert community. The Science Steering Committee (Geneva, October) reviewed research and development projects and made recommendations on those in the planning stage. Several workshops organized by the Tropical Meteorology Research Programme provided forums for interaction between researchers and forecasters from developed and developing countries.

Applications of meteorology

The Applications of Meteorology Programme continued to support member States in a wide range of socio-economic activities, including the protection of life and property and safeguarding the environment. Commission for Agricultural Meteorology meetings included that of its Advisory Working Group (Florence, Italy 2-5 April), which discussed a proposed new structure of the Commission.

The Aeronautical Meteorology Programme held training events on, among other things, the application of numerical weather prediction products to aviation and to pilots' coordination. The final phase of the World Area Forecast System was being implemented with the execution of transition plans for the transfer of responsibility of the remaining regional area forecast centres to the London and Washington centres.

The first session of the Joint WMO/IOC Technical Commission for Oceanography and Marine Meteorology (Akureyri, Iceland, 19-29 June) agreed that a major priority for the intersessional period would be the implementation and maintenance of an operational ocean observing system to provide data for global climate studies. The Automated Shipboard Aerological Programme continued to provide WWW with high-quality upper-air profile data.

Hydrology and water resources

The Hydrology and Water Resources Programme focused on worldwide cooperation in the evaluation of water resources and the development of hydrological networks and services. An Associated Programme on Flood Management was launched in collaboration with the Global Water Partnership.

Technical cooperation

In 2001, WMO technical assistance, valued at $25.31 million, was financed by trust funds ($10.99 million), the WMO Voluntary Cooperation Programme ($8.37 million), the United Nations Development Programme ($5.01 million) and the WMO regular budget ($1 million).

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, the number of full-time staff employed by WMO totalled 267. Of those, 118 were in the Professional and higher categories, 146 were in the General Service category, and 3 were unclassified members of the Secretariat.

Budget

A regular budget of 126,150,000 Swiss francs (SwF) for the 2000-2001 biennium was approved by the WMO Executive Council in 1999. The Thirteenth World Meteorological Congress, also in 1999, approved a maximum expenditure of SwF 252,300,000 for the thirteenth financial period (2000-2003).

Chapter XIII

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 2001, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) continued to improve the safety and security of international shipping and prevent marine pollution from ships.

The IMO Assembly, the organization's governing body, at its twenty-second session (London, 19-30 November), adopted 34 resolutions on measures and procedures to strengthen maritime security. It also elected a new Council for the 2002-2003 biennium.

In 2001, IMO membership increased to 160 with the admission of Comoros, Saint Kitts and Nevis and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Activities in 2001

The IMO Council awarded the International Maritime Prize for 2000 to Heikki Juhani Valkonen, Director of the Maritime Safety Department of the Finnish Maritime Administration.

On 27 September, IMO observed World Maritime Day under the theme "Globalization and the role of the seafarer" and, at its London headquarters, unveiled an international memorial to the world's seafarers.

Prevention of pollution

At its forty-sixth session (London, 23-27 April), IMO's Marine Environment Protection Committee agreed to a timetable for the elimination of single-hull oil tankers by 2015 or earlier. The new phase-out timetable would enter into force in September 2002 and would be enshrined in a revised regulation of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto (MARPOL 73/78). New draft guidelines for designating environmentally important areas as Particularly Sensitive Sea Areas were also adopted.

A diplomatic conference (London, 19-23 March) adopted the International Convention on Civil Liability for Bunker Oil Pollution Damage, which would establish a liability and compensation regime for spills of oil carried as fuel in ships' bunkers. The Convention applied to ships over 1,000 gross tonnage.

The International Convention on the Control of Harmful Anti-fouling Systems on Ships was adopted in October. The Convention would prohibit the use of harmful organotins in anti-fouling paints used on ships and would establish a mechanism to prevent the potential future use of other harmful substances in anti-fouling systems.

Ship security and safety at sea

The IMO Assembly agreed to hold a conference on maritime security in December 2002 to adopt new regulations to enhance ship and port security and to reduce the possibility of shipping becoming a target for international terrorism. The Assembly also agreed to a significant boost to the organization's technical cooperation programme of 1.5 million pounds sterling to help developing countries address maritime security issues, adopted a resolution dealing with the plight of asylum-seekers shipwrecked at sea, and recommended a comprehensive review of safety measures and procedures for the treatment of rescued persons. IMO began work on guidelines for cases where damaged or disabled ships required a place of refuge.

As at December 2001, parties to the revised Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watch-keeping for Seafarers had risen to 102 States and one IMO associate member.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, IMO had 272 staff members, of whom 114 were in the Professional and higher categories and 158 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The IMO Assembly, in 2001, approved budgetary appropriations of 39,531,100 pounds sterling for the 2002-2003 biennium.

Chapter XIV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued development cooperation, norm-setting and registration activities to promote respect for the protection and use of intellectual properties. WIPO focused on strengthening the intellectual property systems of developing countries; promoting new or revised norms for the protection of intellectual property at the national, regional and multilateral levels; and facilitating the acquisition of intellectual property protection through international registration systems.

The governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by the organization held their thirty-sixth series of meetings (Geneva, 24 September–3 October).

During 2001, WIPO membership increased to 177 States, with the accession of Myanmar and Tonga to the 1967 Convention establishing WIPO, amended in 1979. The number of States adhering to treaties administered by WIPO also increased: as at 31 December 2001, 162 States were parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, 148 to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, and 115 to the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT).

On 26 April, World Intellectual Property Day was observed for the first time, under the theme "Creating the Future Today".

Activities in 2001

Development cooperation

In 2001, WIPO continued to assist developing countries in building infrastructures, developing human resources and implementing laws that enabled them to utilize effectively the intellectual property system for their economic, social and cultural development. To help bring developing countries into compliance with international standards, in particular the Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) administered by the World Trade Organization, WIPO prepared 28 draft laws for 14 developing countries. Efforts to strengthen administrative infrastructures, training and the preparation and implementation of laws reached a new level of efficiency with the introduction of the Cooperation for Development web site in 2001. The site provided up-to-date access to information about intellectual property developments, training and regional events. During the year, six new nationally focused action plans (NFAPs) were launched in order to help developing countries to improve their management and use of the national intellectual property system.

WIPO continued to focus on the intellectual property needs of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). In cooperation with the Ministry of Industry and Foreign Trade of Italy, it organized the International Forum on Intellectual Property and SMEs (Milan, 9-10 February). The Plan of Action adopted at the Forum served as a blueprint for helping SMEs to benefit fully from the intellectual property system.

In 2001, the WIPO Worldwide Academy trained 4,344 men and women, an increase of 86 per cent over 2000. It also awarded 15 fellowships, enrolled 3,842 students in the Distance Learning (DL) programme delivered via the Internet, and launched a joint diploma course with the University of South Africa on intellectual property law via DL. The Chinese version of DL was also launched, joining the English, French and Spanish versions.

Intellectual property law

WIPO continued to promote the progressive development and harmonization of intellectual property laws, standards and practices among its member States.

In 2001, the Standing Committee on the Law of Patents began discussions on harmonization of substantive patent law, with the aim of reaching common worldwide standards for examining patent applications and granting patents. At the end of the year, the Patent Law Treaty on the harmonization of patent formalities, adopted in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1440], had been signed by 53 States and the European Patent Organization.

For the third year in a row, WIPO member States adopted a set of treaty provisions aimed at providing a clear, harmonized and simplified legal framework for the trademark community. After two years of intensive discussions within the Standing Committee on the Law of Trademarks, Industrial Designs and Geographical Indications, WIPO Assemblies adopted, as a Joint Recommendation, provisions concerning the protection of marks and other industrial property rights on the Internet, which would provide a legal framework for those who wished to use their marks on the Internet and to participate in electronic commerce.

The Standing Committee on Copyright and Related Rights continued to consider the enhancement of protection for broadcasting organizations and of non-original databases.

The Advisory Committee on Enforcement of Industrial Property Rights and the Advisory Committee on Management and Enforcement of Copyright and Related Rights in Global Information Networks held a joint meeting and discussed issues such as training needs and techniques, information exchange on national experiences and the development of enforcement guidelines.

Arbitration and Mediation Centre

In 2001, the Arbitration and Mediation Centre expanded its position as the pre-eminent provider of services for domain name and other intellectual property disputes. Throughout the year, the Centre received 3,192 domain name cases. The Uniform Domain Name Dispute Resolution Policy continued to provide trademark owners with an administrative remedy against bad-faith registration and use of domain names corresponding to those trademark rights. Arbitration and mediation workshops contributed to the increased prominence of WIPO dispute procedures tailored to the needs of intellectual property owners and users worldwide.

International registration activities

PCT. During the year, 103,947 international patent applications were filed, representing an increase of 14.3 per cent over 2000.

Madrid Agreement. In the trademark system under the Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Trademarks and its 1989 Protocol, the number of international registrations reached almost 24,000 in 2001, a 4.4 per cent increase over 2000.

Hague Agreement. The international deposits recorded under the Hague Agreement concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs totalled 4,183, representing a decrease of 3.5 per cent from the 2000 figure.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, WIPO employed 858 staff members representing 86 countries; 367 were in the Professional or higher categories and 491 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The approved programme and budget for 2002-2003 amounted to 678.4 million Swiss francs (SwF), an increase of 19.9 per cent over the revised budget for 2000-2001 of SwF 565.9 million. The portion of the budget funded by member States' contributions represented less than 6 per cent of the overall budget. WIPO remained largely a self-funding agency, financing its activities from revenues acquired through the provision of services to the private sector.

Chapter XV

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued in 2001 to promote the economic advancement of the rural poor by improving the productivity of on- and off-farm activities and by designing and implementing innovative, cost-effective and replicable programmes.

The twenty-fourth session of the Governing Council (Rome, 20-22 February) approved a document entitled "Partnerships for eradicating rural poverty: report of the Consultation to Review the Adequacy of the Resources Available to IFAD 2000-2002". The document contained a plan of action for improvement of the Fund's operations with respect to project portfolio performance and impact assessment, knowledge management, policy and institutional environment and strategic partnerships. The Executive Board held three regular sessions (April, September, December); it approved loans for 25 projects and programmes, 15 grants and 13 contributions to debt reduction within the framework of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative.

IFAD membership increased to 162 during 2001, with the admission of Iceland. Of its member countries, 23 were in List A (developed countries), 12 in List B (oil-exporting developing countries) and 127 in List C (other developing countries); 49 were in Sub-List C1 (Africa), 47 were in Sub-List C2 (Europe, Asia and the Pacific) and 31 in Sub-List C3 (Latin America and the Caribbean).

Resources

The fifth replenishment of IFAD's resources, totalling about $470 million, became effective on 7 September 2001. That amount was expected to cover almost one third of IFAD's lending programme for the fifth replenishment period, 2002-2003. Other resources used for lending, the grant programme and operating expenses came from lending reflows and investment income. The 2001 programme of work was approved for about $440 million, and the administrative budget at about $50 million.

Activities in 2001

Loans approved in 2001 and financed through IFAD totalled $403.1 million; another $30.8 million was in grants. The total cost of the 25 projects was estimated at $996.8 million, of which $270.3 million would be provided by other external financiers and $323.1 million by financiers in the recipient countries—primarily Governments.

Regular Programme lending was distributed as follows: Asia and the Pacific, $107.1 million for six projects (26.6 per cent); Western and Central Africa, $73.5 million for five projects (18.2 per cent); Eastern and Southern Africa, $100.5 million for six projects (24.9 per cent); Latin America and the Caribbean, $69.2 million for four projects (17.2 per cent); and the Near East and North Africa, $52.9 million for four projects (13.1 per cent).

During 2001, 25 projects were completed; 206 projects remained effective at the end of the year.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, the IFAD secretariat had 315 staff members, comprising 134 staff in the Professional and higher categories and 181 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

At the end of 2001, IFAD's net income on loans was $42.3 million and on investments was minus $42.8 million, representing an annual income of minus $0.5 million. Operating expenses for the year totalled $148.9 million.

NOTE: For further details on IFAD activities in 2001, see Annual Report 2001, published by the Fund.

Chapter XVI

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

The United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued to promote the sustainable industrial development of developing countries and countries with economies in transition. As a global forum on industrialization, UNIDO facilitated the spread of industrial information, knowledge, technology and investment.

The Industrial Development Board, at its twenty-fourth session (Vienna, 19-22 June), considered, among other things, UNIDO's programme and budget for the 2002-2003 biennium, new initiatives for funds mobilization, field representation and its contribution to technical cooperation delivery, and environment-related activities.

The ninth session of the General Conference (Vienna, 3-7 December) adopted the programme and budget for 2002-2003 and reappointed the incumbent Director-General, Carlos Magariños, for a second term. The adoption of a resolution on the medium-term programme framework (MTPF) 2002-2005 placed emphasis on technical cooperation and confirmed UNIDO's global forum function. MTPF represented the response of UNIDO's 1997 Business Plan [YUN 1997, p. 1564] to the lessons learned from the process of transformation within UNIDO, in the UN system and in the development community at large. The Conference also agreed to deposit with the United Nations Secretary-General UNIDO's instrument of accession to the 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1007]. The Convention offered a specific legal framework governing formal treaties between international organizations and States and would thus provide stability and predictability in the best interest of UNIDO treaty relations.

UNIDO membership remained at 169 in 2001.

Global forum activities

In 2001, UNIDO, through its global forum activities, continued to promote industrial development and cooperation between countries, partnerships, knowledge-sharing, technology and investment. It also assisted developing countries and countries in transition in the implementation of multilateral environmental agreements.

Within the framework of its General Conference, UNIDO organized a forum on the theme "Fighting marginalization through sustainable industrial development: challenges and opportunities in a globalized world" (Geneva, 5 December). Two groups of issues were addressed: one on technology, investment and trade, and the other on the environment.

In other activities, UNIDO launched a portfolio of special initiatives focusing on energy and market access, formulated renewable energy projects promoting solar, wind and biomass energy in rural areas and, in cooperation with Hungary, extended its technology foresight initiative and convened a regional conference on that issue for Eastern European countries and newly independent States (Vienna, 4-5 April). It also continued to cooperate with the Bretton Woods institutions and UN organizations in a concerted response to the development goals of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 49].

Integrated programmes

UNIDO continued to provide technical cooperation through its integrated programmes, the major components of which were training, investment promotion, quality and standardization, and activities promoting cleaner industrial production and waste management. As at 31 December, 44 integrated programmes had been approved. Africa accounted for 39.5 per cent of the countries covered by integrated programmes, of which 75 per cent were in sub-Saharan Africa.

Investment promotion and institutional capacity-building

In 2001, the Investment Promotion and Institutional Capacity-building Division focused its activities on poverty reduction by strengthening the capacity of industries in developing countries and countries in transition to benefit from globalization. Technical cooperation and research activities aimed to strengthen the capabilities of and cooperation among public and private stakeholders in industrial development for formulating and implementing industrial strategies. Operational support continued to strengthen the role of the private sector in economic and industrial development, while investment promotion activities were enhanced with the development and launching of sustainable sub-regional investment and technology promotion networks.

Activities in Africa concentrated on strengthening public-private consultative mechanisms and, in the Arab region, on the formulation of a long-term industrial vision and policy response to new challenges and opportunities. In Asia, activities included the preparation of a long-term industrial development perspective plan for Nepal, and the tracking of manufacturing performance in Thailand. In Latin America, industrial policy advisory services were, in some cases, channelled directly to the private sector. That marked a new departure for UNIDO, which had traditionally worked mainly with Governments.

Environmental sustainability

In 2001, UNIDO's Sectoral Support and Environmental Sustainability Division focused on the formulation and implementation of integrated programmes and country service frameworks, and on increased cooperation with other UN organizations, as well as with international protocols, conventions and funds, particularly within the framework of environmental protection.

As at 31 December, UNIDO had implemented 778 projects in 66 countries, at a net value of $251 million, under the 1987 Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer [YUN 1987, p. 686]. Those activities corresponded to a phase-out of over 32,000 tons of ozone-depleting pollutants, of which 20,000 had already been eliminated. The National Cleaner Production Centres continued to promote cleaner production capacities and the transfer and development of ecologically sound technologies.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2001, UNIDO employed a total of 643 staff members: 239 were in the Professional or higher categories, 393 were in the General Service category and 11 were national officers.

Budget

The eighth (1999) session of the UNIDO General Conference approved the organization's 2000-2001 regular budget in the amount of $167.7 million. In 2001, new project approvals totalled $85.6 million, compared to $76.9 million in 2000. In December 2001, the ninth session of the General Conference approved UNIDO's 2002-2003 regular budget in the amount of 133,689,800 euros. The estimated volume of UNIDO operations for the biennium was 349,239,400 euros.

Chapter XVII

World Trade Organization (WTO)

In 2001, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system, continued to oversee the rules of international trade, settle trade disputes and organize trade negotiations.

The Fourth WTO Ministerial Conference, WTO's highest authority, which comprised all of its members, was held in Doha, Qatar, from 9 to 14 November. It adopted the Doha Development Agenda, which set out WTO's work programme for the coming years. Specifically, it incorporated expanded negotiations and other activities and decisions designed to address the challenges facing the trading system and the needs and interests of WTO's diverse membership. The Conference also adopted a declaration on the WTO Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) and public health, which clarified specific segments of the TRIPS Agreement, thereby allaying concerns about the possible implications of the Agreement for access to drugs.

WTO's General Council, the body entrusted with overseeing the organization's work in the interval between Conferences, continued to monitor the implementation and operation of the multilateral trading system embodied in the WTO Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 1515]. It oversaw progress in electronic commerce and examined, among other things, the internal transparency and effective participation of member States.

During the year, WTO membership increased to 143 with the admission of China, Lithuania and the Republic of Moldova.

General activities

The three working groups set up by the 1996 Ministerial Conference [YUN 1996, p. 1441] met during 2001. The Working Group on the Relationship between Trade and Investment continued to examine the implications of the relationship between trade and investment for development and economic growth, and for stocktaking and analysis of related international instruments and activities. The Working Group on Transparency in Government Procurement discussed the definition and scope of government procurement; procurement methods; publication of information on national legislation and procedures; information on procurement qualifications; contract awards; domestic review procedures; maintenance of records; information technology; language; bribery and corruption; notifications to other Governments; dispute settlement procedures; and technical cooperation and special and differential treatment for developing countries. The Working Group on the Interaction between Trade and Competition Policy continued to discuss the relevance of fundamental WTO principles of national treatment, transparency and most-favoured-nation treatment to competition policy and vice versa; approaches to promoting technical cooperation; and the contribution of competition policy in achieving WTO objectives, including the promotion of international trade.

During the year, the Trade Policy Review Body carried out reviews of Brunei Darussalam, Cameroon, Costa Rica, the Czech Republic, Gabon, Ghana, Macao (China), Madagascar, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Slovakia, Uganda, the United States and WTO members of the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States.

WTO provided technical cooperation and training to developing countries and economies in transition through courses, seminars and symposiums to widen understanding of trade policy, the multilateral trading system, international law and other trade and development issues.

Trade in goods

During 2001, the Council for Trade in Goods continued to monitor implementation of agreements and examined and approved requests for waivers and waiver extensions from members in connection with the transposition of their schedules into the Harmonized System. It reviewed the operation of the Trade-related Investment Measures Agreement; adopted terms of reference under which 18 regional agreements were to be examined in the Committee on Regional Trade Agreements; and continued work on trade facilitation. It extended the transition period for application of the Trade-related Investments Measures Agreement for Argentina, Colombia, Malaysia, Mexico, Pakistan, the Philippines and Romania.

The Committee on Agriculture carried out negotiations under article 20 of the Agreement on Agriculture on the continuation of the reform process, as agreed in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1445]. During the first phase (March 2000–March 2001), 121 members submitted 45 negotiating proposals. A programme for the second phase of the negotiations up to early 2002 was also adopted. The Committee continued to review progress in the implementation of commitments under the Uruguay Round agricultural reform programme, or resulting from WTO accession negotiations.

The Committee on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures monitored implementation of the Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, which set out the rights and obligations of members to ensure food safety, protect humans from plant- or animal-spread diseases, or protect plants and animals from pests and diseases. In 2001, the Committee discussed trade concerns of members and considered the difficulties faced by developing countries regarding the need for technical assistance.

The Committee on Safeguards continued its review of national safeguard legislation.

Trade in services

In 2001, the Council for Trade in Services held five formal meetings and, among other things, held a stocktaking exercise to consider progress made in negotiations to progressively liberalize trade in services. It also held one special meeting to review the Annex on Air Transport Services.

Intellectual property

The TRIPS Agreement provided for minimum international standards of protection in copyright, trademarks, geographic indications, industrial designs, patents, layout designs of integrated circuits and undisclosed information. In 2001, the Council for TRIPS continued to review the national implementing legislation of developing countries and WTO members with economies in transition.

Regional trade agreements

As at December 2001, the Committee on Regional Trade Agreements had completed factual examination of 82 of the more than 100 regional trade agreements under its purview.

Trade and development

In 2001, the Committee on Trade and Development continued to examine, among other things, special and differential treatment in favour of developing countries and their participation in world trade; technical cooperation and training; market access for least developed countries; the development dimension of electronic commerce; and implementation of WTO agreements.

Plurilateral agreements

The Committee on Government Procurement continued to carry out work relating to negotiations on expanding the coverage of the Agreement on Government Procurement; its simplification and improvement, especially with regard to advances in information technology; and the elimination of discriminatory measures and practices that distorted open procurement.

The Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft eliminated customs duties and other charges on imports of civil aircraft products and repairs, bound them at zero level, and required the adoption of end-use customs administration. Although part of the WTO Agreement, it remained outside the organization's framework. The Committee on Trade in Civil Aircraft adopted the Protocol (2001) Amending the Annex to the Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft and a decision on interim application of duty-free treatment to aircraft ground maintenance simulators.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre (ITC), operated jointly by WTO and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (see p. 876), played a crucial role in trade-related technical cooperation and trade-related capacity-building. It was also responsible for the day-to-day management of the Integrated Technical Assistance Programme in Selected Least Developed Countries and Other African Countries.

Budget

The WTO budget for 2001 totalled 143 million Swiss francs.

Secretariat

At the end of 2001, WTO staff numbered 550. NOTE: For further information on WTO activities, see the organization's Annual Report 2001.

<sup>1</sup>Czechoslovakia, which was an original Member of the United Nations from 24 October 1945, split up on 1 January 1993 and was succeeded by the Czech Republic and Slovakia

<sup>2</sup>Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations, it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

<sup>3</sup>Through accession of the German Democratic Republic to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, the two German States (both of which became United Nations Members on 18 September 1973) united to form one sovereign State. As from that date, the Federal Republic of Germany has acted in the United Nations under the designation Germany.

<sup>4</sup>On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. By a telegram of 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

<sup>5</sup>On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

<sup>7</sup>Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar, on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar, it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

<sup>8</sup>Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947 and Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and have since been represented as one Member.

Appendix II

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations

Article 7

1. The Secretary General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

2 If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7

3 If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council

4 In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1 The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected, provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years

2 The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary General immediately after the first election has been completed

3 The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun

4 In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term

2 The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary

2 The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court

Article 23

1 The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court

3 Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court

Article 24

2 If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3 If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4 The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5 Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6 Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 35

1 The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2 The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3 When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1 The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2 The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- a the interpretation of a treaty,
- b any question of international law,
- c the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation,
- d the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3 The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4 Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5 Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6 In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party

Article 61

- 1 An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence
- 2 The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground
- 3 The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision
- 4 The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact
- 5 No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment

Indexes

USING THE SUBJECT INDEX

To assist the researcher in reading and searching the Yearbook index, three typefaces have been employed.

ALL BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for major subject entries, including chapter topics (e.g., DEVELOPMENT, DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g., TAJIKISTAN), region names (e.g., AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g., GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major sub-topics (e.g., POVERTY), territories (e.g., MONTSERRAT), subregions (e.g., CENTRAL AMERICA) and official names of specialized agencies (e.g., UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION) and regional commissions (e.g., ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE).

Regular body text is used for single entries and cross-reference entries, e.g., armed conflict, juvenile detention, social development.

1—An asterisk (*) next to a page number indicates the presence of a text (reproduced in full) of General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions, or Security Council presidential statements.

2—Entries, which are heavily cross-referenced, appear under key substantive words, as well as under the first word of official titles.

3—United Nations bodies are listed under major subject entries and alphabetically.
